Mountioy. Thus fayes my King: Say thou to Harry of England, Though we beem'd dead, we did but sleepe: Advantage is a better Souldier then raftneff. Tell him, wee could haue rebu'd him at Harflewe, but that wee thought not good to bruife an injurie, till it were full ripe. Now wee speake upon our Q, and our voyce is imperially: England shall repent his folly, fee his weakenfie, and admire our fuffrance. Bid him therefore con-fider of his ranfome, which much proportion the loffes we have borne, the subiects we have loft, the difgrace we have digeftet; which in weight to re-anfwer, his pettineffe would bow vnder. For our loffes, his Exchequer is too poore: for th'effution of our blood, the Mafter of his Kingdom too faint a number; and for our difgrace, his owne perfon kneeling at our feet, but a weake and worth-lesse fatisfacon. To this adde defiance: and tell him for conclufion, he hath betrayed his followers, whose con-demnation is pronounc'd: So farre my King and Mafter; fo much my Office.

King. What is thy name? I know thy qualite.
Mount. Mountioy.
King. Thou don't thy Office fairely. Turne thee back, And tell thy King, I do not feake him now, But could be willing to march on to Callicor, Without impeachement: for to say the footh, Though 'tis no widome to confefte fo much Vnto an enemie of Craft and Vantage, My people are with fickneffe much enfeene'd, My numbers leffen'd: and thofe few I hauue, Almoft no better then fo many French; Who when they were in Health, I tell thee Herald, I thought, vpon one payre of English Legges Did march three Frenchmen. Yet forgive me God, That I doe brage thus; this your ayr of France Hath blowne that vice in me. I muft repent:
Goe therefore tell thy Mafter, here I am; My Ranfome, is this fraye and worthifelfe Trunke; My Army, but a weake and fickly Guard: Yet God before, tell him we will come on, Though France himfelfe, and fuch another Neighbor Stand in our way. There's for thy labour Mountioy. Goe bid thy Mafter well aduife himfelfe. If we may paife, we will: if we be hindred, We shall your tawnie ground with your red blood Difcolour: and fo Mountioy, fare you well. The fumme of all our Anfwers is but this: We would not feke a Battale as we are, Nor as we are, we fay we will not fhu it: So tell your Mafter.
Mount. I shall deliver fo: Thanke's to your High-ffe.
Glcuc. I hope they will not come vpon vs now.
King. We are in Gods hand, Brother, not in theirs: March to the Bridge, it now draws toward night, Beyond the Riuier wee'le encampe our felues, And on to morrow bid them march away. Exeunt.

Enter the Confable of France, the Lord Ramburs, Orlance, Dolphin, with others.

Conf. Tut, I haue the beft Armour of the World: would it were day.
Orlanic. You have an excellent Armour: but let my Horfe haue his due.
Conf. It is the beft Horfe of Europe.
Orlanic. Will it neuer be Morning?
Dolph. My Lord of Orlande, and my Lord High Con-fable, you take of Horfe and Armour? Orlance. You are as well prouided of both, as any Prince in the World.
Dolph. What a long Night is this? I will not change my Horfe with any that treades but on foure poftures: ch'ha: he bounds from the Earth, as if his entrailles were hayres: le Cheval volante, the Pegalus, ches les marines de feu. When I beftryde him, I foles, I am a Hawke: he trots the ayre: the Earth fings, when he touches it: the baffe horn of his hoife, is more Mufcall then the Pipe of Hermes.

Orlanic. Hee's of the colour of the Nutmeg.
Dolph. And of the heat of the Ginger. It is a Beast for Perjeus: hee is pure Ayre and Fire; and the dull Elements of Earth and Water never appeare in him, but only in patient Illineffe while his Rider mounts him: hee is indeede a Horfe, and all other Iades you may calle Beasts.

i Conf. In-
Conf. Indeed my Lord, it is a moost absoute and excellente Horfe.
Dolph. It is the Prince of Palfrayes, his Neigh is like the bidding of a Monarch, and his countenance enforces Homage.

Orleanc. No more Cousin.
Dolph. Nay, the man hath no wit, that cannot from the rising of the Larke to the lodging of the Lambe, who devere praye on my Palfray : it is a Theame as fuent as the Sea: Turne the Sands into eloquent tongues, and my Horfe is argument for them all: 'tis a subleæ to a Soueraine to reason on, and for a Soueraines Soueraigne to ride on: And for the World, familiar to vs,
and vnknowne, to lay apart their particular Functions,
and wonder at him, I once wite a Sonnet in his praye, and began thus, Wonder of Nature.

Orleanc. I have heard a Sonnet begin fo to ones Mi-fterfere.
Dolph. Then did they imitate that which I compos'd to my Courier, for my Horfe is my Mifterfere.

Orleanc. Your Mifterfere beares well.
Dolph. Me well, which is the preface praye and perfection of a good and particular Mifterfere.

Conf. Nay, for me thought yesterday your Mifterfere frewely thooke your back.
Dolph. So perhaps did yours.
Conf. Mine was not bridled.
Dolph. O then belike he was old and gentle, and you rode like a Kerne of Ireland, your French Howe off, and in your frall Stridders.

Conf. You have good judgement in Horfemanship.
Dolph. Be war'd by me then: they that ride fo, and ride not warily, fall into foule Boggs: I had rather haue
my Horfe to my Mifterfere.

Conf. I had as liue haue my Mifterfere a Jade.
Dolph. I tell thee Constable, my Mifterfere weares his owne hayere.

Conf. I could make as true a boast as that, if I had a
Sow to my Mifterfere.

Dolph. Le cben est retourne a fon propre vemissement est la longue issue au bordier lequel maekt't vie of any thing.

Dolph. Yet doe I not wite my Horfe for my Mifterfere, or any such Prouerbe, fo little kin to the purpofe.

Ramb. My Lord Constable, the Armour that I saw in your Tent to night, are those Starres or Sunnes upon it?

Conf. Starres my Lord.

Dolph. Some of them will fall to morrow, I hope.

Conf. And yet my Sky shall not want.

Dolph. That may be, for you beare a many superfuolously, and 'twerne more honor fome were away.

Conf. Ev'n as your Horfe beares your prayeys, who would trot as well, were fome of your bragges difmoun-ted.

Dolph. Would I were able to load him with his defert. Will it never be day? I will trot to morrow a mile, and my way shall be paufe with Englishe Faces.

Conf. I will not lay fo, for feare I SHOULD be fact' out of my way: but I would it were morning, fo I would faine be about the cares of the English.

Ramb. Who will goe to Hazard with me for twentie Prifoners?

Conf. You must first goe your selfe to hazard, ere you have them.

Dolph. 'Tis Mid-night, Ile goe arme my felfe. Exit.

Orleanc. The Dolphin longs for morning.

Ramb. He longs to eate the English.

Conf. I thinke he will eate all he kills.

Orleanc. By the white Hand of my Lady, hec's a gallant Prince.

Conf. Swere by her Foot, that she may tread out the Oath.

Orleanc. He is simply the moft actiue Gentleman of France.

Conf. Doins is actiulite, and he will fill be doing.

Orleanc. He neuer did harme, that I heard of.

Conf. Nor will doe none to morrow: hee will keepe that good name fill.

Orleanc. I know him to be valiant.

Conf. I was told that, by one that knowes him better then you.

Orleanc. What's hee?

Conf. Marry hee told me so himselfe, and hee sayd hee card not who knew it.

Orleanc. Hee needes not, it is no hidden vertue in him.

Conf. By my faith Sir, but it is: neuer any body saw it, but his Lacquey: 'tis a hooded valour, and when it appeares, it will bate.

Orleanc. Ill will neuer sayd well.

Conf. I will cap that Prouerbe with, There is flatterie in friendship.

Orleanc. And I will take vp that with, Glue the Deuill his due.

Conf. Well plaç't : there stands your friend for the Deuill: haue at the very eye of that Prouerbe with, A Pox of the Deuill.

Orleanc. You are the better at Prouerbs, by how much a Fooles Bolt is foone shot.

Conf. You haue shot ouer.

Orleanc. 'Tis not the firt time you were ouer-shot.

Enter a Meflenger.

Meff. My Lord high Confable, the English lye within fifteene hundred paces of your Tents.

Conf. Who hath meafur'd the ground?

Meff. The Lord Grandpre.

Conf. A valiant and moft expert Gentleman. Would it were day? Als poor Harry of England: hee longs not for the Dawning, as wee doe.

Orleanc. What a wretched and peecuill fellow is this King of England, to mope with his fat-brain'd followers fo farre out of his knowledge.

Conf. If the English had any apprehension, they would runne away.

Orleanc. That they lack: for if their heads had any intellectual Armour, they could neuer weare fuch hauei
Head-pieces.

Ramb. That Ifland of England breeds very valiant Creatures: their Maffifes are of vnmatchable courage.

Orleanc. Foolifh Curres, that runne winking into the mouth of a Russian Bear, and have their heads cruft like rotten Apples: you may as well lay, that's a valiant Flea, that dare eate his brekkeaift on the Lippe of a Lyon.

Conf. Iuif, iuif: and the men doe sympathize with the Maffifes, in robustious and rough comming on, leauing their Win with their Wines: and then give them great Meales of Beefe, and Iron and Steele: they will eate like Wolaes, and fight like Deuils.

Orleanc.
The Life of Henry the Fifth.

Actus Tertius.

Chorus.
Now entertaine coniecture of a time,
When creeping Murmure and the poring Darke
Fills the wide Veffel of the Vnuerfe.
From Camp to Camp, through the foule Womb of Night
The Humme of eyther Army fully sounds ;
That the fift Centinels almoft receiue
The secret Whispers of eath other Watch,
Fire anfwers fire, and through their paly flames
Each Batallie fees the others vmbre'd face.
Steed threatens Steed, in high and boaftfull Neighs
Piercing the Nights dull Eare : and from the Tents,
The Armourers accomplishing the Knights,
With bufie Hammers closing Rietus vp,
Glue dreadfull note of preparation.
The Countrey Cocks doe crow, the Clockes doe towle:
And the third howre of drowsie Morning nam'd,
Proud of their Numbers, and secure in Soule,
The confident and ouer-lufite French,
Doe the low-rated English play at Dice;
And childe the creeple-tardy-gated Night,
Who like a foule and ouguly Witch doth limpe
So tediously away.
The poore condemned English,
Like Sacrifices, by their watchfull Fires
Sit patiently, and inly ruminate.
The Mornings danger : and their gforture sad,
Inuefting lanke-leane Cheekeks, and Warre-worne Coats,
Prefent them vnto the gazing Moone
So many horride Ghosts. O now, who will behold
The Royall Captaine of this ruind Band
Walking from Watch to Watch, from Tent to Tent ;
Let him cry, Prayle and Glory on his head :
For forth he goes, and visits all his Hoafe,
Bids them good morrow with a modeft Smyle,
And calls them Brothers, Friends, and Countreymen.
Upon his Royall Face there is no note,
How dread an Army hath enrounded him ;
Nor doth he dedicate one lot of Colour
Vnto the wearable and all-watched Night :
But frefly lookes, and ouer-beares Attaint,
With chearfull semblance, and sweet Maietie :
That evry Wretch, pining and pale before,
Beholding him, plucks comfort from his Lookes.
A Largeffe vnuerfall, like the Sunne,
His liberall Eye doth glue to everyone,
Thawing cold feare, that meane and gentle all
Behold, as may vnworthineffe define.
A little touch of Harry in the Night,
And to our Scene must to the Batallie flye :
Where, O for pitty, we fhall much difgrace,
With foure or foue most vile and ragged foyleys,
(Right ill disposed, in brawe ridiculous)

The Name of Agincourt : Yet fit and fee,
Minding true things, by what their Mock'ries bee.

Exit.

Enter the King, Bedford, and Gloucefter.

King. Glofter, 'tis true that we are in great danger,
The greater therefore shoul our Courage be.
God morrow Brother Bedford : God Almighty,
There is some foule of goodneffe in things euill,
Would men obfervingly difflit it out,
For our bad Neighbour makes vs early flirren,
Which is both healthfull, and good husbandry.
Befides, they are our outward Conferences,
And Preachers to vs all ; admonishing,
That we should drefs vs fairly for our end.
Thus may we gather Honey from the Weed,
And make a Morall of the Diuell himselfe.

Enter Erpingham.

Good morrow old Sir Thomas Erpingham : A good soft Pillow for that good white Head,
Were better then a churilfe turfe of France.

Erpingham. Not fo my Liege, this Lodging likes me better,
Since I may fay, now lyce I like a King.

King. "Tis good for men to love their present paines,
Upon example, fo the Spirit is eafe ;
And when the Mind is quickned, out of doubt
The Organs, though defunct and dead before,
Break vp thos drowzie Graue, and newly move
With called floth, and fresh legeritie.
Lend me thy Cloake Sir Thomas : Brothers both,
Commend me to the Princes in our Campe;
Doe my good morrow to them, and anon
Defire them all to my Paullion.

Glofter. We fhall, my Liege.

Erpingham. Shall I attend your Grace ?

King. No, my good Knight ;
Goe with my Brothers to my Lords of England :
I and my Bofome muft debate a while,
And then I would no other company.

Erpingham. The Lord in Heauen bleffe thee, Noble Harry.

Exit.

King. God a mercy old Heart, thou speakeft chearfully.

Enter Piffall.

Piff. Che vous la ?

King. A friend.

Piff. Difcuffe vnto me, art thou Officer, or art thou base,common, and popular ?

King. I am a Gentleman of a Company.

Piff. Tray't thou the puiffant Pyke ?

King. Euen fo : what are you?

Piff. As good a Gentleman as the Emperor.

King. Then you are a better then the King.

Piff. The King's a Bawcock, and a Heart of Gold, a Lad of Life, an Impe of Fame, of Parents good, of Fitf moft valiant : I kiffe his durtie shooe, and from heart-tring I love the louely Bully. What is thy Name ?

King. Harry le Roy.

Piff. Le Roy ! a Cornish Name : art thou of Cornish Crew ?

King. No, I am a Welchman.

Piff. Know'ft thou Fluellen ?

King. Yes.

Piff. Tell him Ile knock his Lecke about his Pate vpon
S. Davius day.

King. Doe not you weare your Dagger in your Cappe that day,leafe he knock that about yours.

Piff. Art
Enter Fluellen and Gower.

Gower. Captain Fluellen.
Fluellen. So, in the Name of Iefu Christ, speake fwer: it is the greateft admiration in the vniuerfal World, when the true and aftentient Prerogatives and Lawes of the Warres is out kept: if you would take the paines but to examine the Warres of Pompey the Great, you fhall finde, I warrant you, that there is no tiddle tadle nor pibble bab- ble in Pompeyes Campe: I warrant you, you fhall finde the Ceremonies of the Warres, and the Cares of it, and the Formes of it, and the Sobrieie of it, and the Modeifie of it, to be otherwife.

Gower. Why the Enemy is lowd, you heare him all Night.
Fluellen. If the Enemy is an Asse and a Foodle, and a prat- ting Coxcombe; is it meet, thinke you, that wee fhould alfo, looke you, be an Asse and a Foodle, and a pratting Cox-combe, in your owne confience now?

Gower. I will speake lower.
Fluellen. I pray you, and befeech you, that you will. Exit.

Gower. Though it appeare a little out of fashion, There is much care and valour in this Welchman.

Enter three Souldiers, John Bates, Alexander Court, and Michael Williams.

Court. Brother John Bates, is not that the Morning which breaikes yonder?
Bates. I thinke it be: but wee haue no great caufe to defire the approach of day.
Williams. Wee ftey yonder the begining of the day, but I thinke wee fhall neuer fee the end of it. Who goes there?

King. A Friend.
Williams. Who is he, that Captaine ferve you?
King. Vnder Sir Iohn Ergingebam.
Williams. A good old Commander, and a moft kinde Gentleman: I pray you, what thinke he of our efate?

King. Euen as men wrack vpon a Sand, that looke to be waft off the next Tyde.
Bates. He hath not told his thought to the King?

King. No: nor it is not meet he fhoule: for though I speake it to you, I thinke the King is but a man, as I am: the Violet fmmles to him, as it doth to me; the Element fhowes to him, as it doth to me; all his Sences haue but humane Conditions: his Ceremonies layd by, in his Na- kedneffe he appeares but a man; and though his affections are higher mounted then ours, yet when they flyoue, they flyoue with the like wing: therefore, when he sees reaon of feares, as we doe; his feares, out of doubt, be of the fame rellifh as ours are: yet in reafon, no man fhoule poffe fe him with any appearance of feare; leaft he, by fweating it, fhould dis-hearten his Army.

Bates. He may fhe what outward courage he will: but I beleue, as cold a Night as 'tis, hee could with him- felfe in Thames wp to the Neck; and fo I would he were, and I by him, at all aduentures, fo we were quit here.

King. By my troth, I will Speake my confience of the King: I thynke hee would not with himfelfe any where, but where hee is.

Bates. Then I would he were here alone:fo fhould he be sure to be ranfomed, and a many poore mens flues faued.

King. I dare fay, you loose him not fo ill, to with him here alone: howfoever you Speake this to feele other mens minds, me thinke I could not dye any where fo contented, as in the Kings company; his Caufe being luft, and his Quarrel honorable.

Williams. Thats more then we know now.
Bates. I, or more then wee fhould feake after; for wee know enough, if wee know wee are the Kings Subiefts: if his Caufe be wrong, our obedience to the King wipes the Cryme of it out of vs.

Williams. But if the Caufe be not good, the King himfelf hath a heauel Reckoning to make, when all thofe Legges, and Armes, and Heads, choppt off in a Battaile, fhall lyone together at the latter day, and cry all, Wee dyed at fuch a place, fome weeping, fome crying for a Sur-gen; fome vpon their Wines, left poore behind them; fome vpon the Debts they owe, fome vpon their Children rawly left: I am afear'd, there are fewe dye well, that dye in a Battaile: for how can they charitably dispofe of any thing, when Blood is their argument? Now, if thofe men doe not dye well, it will be a black matter for the King, that led them to it; who to difobe, were againft all proportion of subiection.

King. So, if a Sonne that is by his Father fent about Merchandize, doe finfully misfarry vpon the Sea; the imputation of his wickedneffe, by your rule, fhould be impoft vpon his Father that fent him: a Servant, under his Maffers command, transporting a summe of Money, be affayled by Robbers, and dye in many irreconcil'd Iniquities; you may call the bufeffe of the Mafter the author of the Servants damnation: but this is not fo: The King is not bound to anfwer the particular endings of his Souldiers, the Father of his Sonne, nor the Mafter of his Servant; for they poore not their death, when they poore their fericues. Befides, there is no King, be his Caufe neuer fo spotiffe, if it come to the arbitrement of Swords, can trye it out with all vnfpotted Souldiers: fome (peraduenture) have on them the guilt of premeditated and continued Murther; fome, of beguing Virgins with the broken Seales of Peription; fome, making the Warres their Bulwarke, that have before goged the gentle Bofome of Peace with Pillage and Robbe-rie. Now, if thofe men haue defeated the Law, and outrunne Natuie punishment; though they can out-frip men, they haue no wings to flye from God. Warre is his Beadle, Warre is his Vengeance: fo that here men are punifht, for before breach of the Kings Lawes, in now the Kings Quarrel: where they feared the death, they haue borne life away; and where they would bee late, they perih. Then if they dye unprouided, no more is the King guilte of their damnation, then hee was before guilte of thofe Impieties, for the which they are now visitated. Every Subieft Dutie is the Kings, but every Subieft Soule is his owne. Therefore fhould every Souldier in the Warres doe as every fick man in his Bed, wash euery Moth out of his Confience; and dying fo, Death is to him advantage; or not dying, the time was bleffedly loft, wherein fuch preparation was gayne: and in him that efcape, it were not finne to thinke, that making God fo free an offer, he let him outlue that day, to fee his Greatneffe, and to teach others how they fhould prepare.

Will. 'Tis
The Life of Henry the Fift.

Will. 'Tis certain, every man that dyes ill, the ill upon his owne head, the King is not to anwer it.

Bates. I do not depre hee should anwer for me, and yet I determine to fight lufily for him.

King. I my felle heard the King fay he would not be random.'

Will. I, hee fay fo, to make vs fight carefulliy: but when our throats are cut, hee may be random'd, and wee ne're the wifer.

King. If I liue to fee it, I will never trufl his word af-ter.

Will. You pay him then: that's a perillous shot out of an Elder Gunne, that a poore and a priuate displeafe can doe againft a Monarch: you may as well goe about to turne the Sunne to yce, with fanning in his face with a Peacocks feather: You'll never trufl his word after; come, 'tis a foolifh faying.

King. Your reprofe is something too round, I should be angry with you, if the time were convenient.

Will. Let it bee a Quarrell between vs, if you liue.

King. I embrace it.

Will. How shall I know thee againe?

King. Give me any Gage of thine, and I will ware it in my Bonnet: Then if ever thou dar'nt acknowledge it, I will make it my Quarrell.

Will. Here's my Gloue: Give mee another of thine.

King. There.

Will. This will I also ware in my Cap: if ever thou come to me, and fay, after to morrow, This is my Gloue, by this Hand I will take thee a box on the ear.

King. If ever I liue to fee it, I will challenge it.

Will. Thou dar'nt as well be hang'd.

King. Well, I will doe it, though I take thee in the Kings compaine.

Will. Keep thee word: fare thee well.

Bates. Be friends you English foolees, be friends, wee have French Quarrells enow, if you could tell how to reckon.

Exit Souliers.

King. Indeed the French may lay twentie French Crownes to one, they will beat vs, for they bear them on their shoulders: but it is no English Trefon to cut French Crownes, and to morrow the King himfelfe will be a Clipper.

Vpon the King, let vs our Liues, our Soules, Our Debts, our carefull Wifes, Our Children, and our Sinnes, lay on the King: We muft beare all.

O hard Condition, Twin-borne with Greatneffe, Sublefe to the breath of euerie foole, whole fenece No more can feele, but his owne wringing.

What infinite hearts-eafe muft Kings neglefe, That priuate men enjoy?

And what have Kings, that Priuates have not too, Saue Ceremonie, faue generall Ceremonie?

And what art thou, thou Idol Ceremonie?

What kind of God art thou? that suffuer'st more Of mortal griefes, then doe thy worhippers.

What are thy Rents? what are thy Comminges in?

O Ceremonie, shew me but thy worth.

What? is thy Soule of Odoration?

Art thou ought elfe but Place, Degree, and Forme, Creating awe and feare in other men?

Wherein thou art leffe happy, being feard',

Then they in fearing.

What drunk't thou oft, in head of Homage sweet,

But poyfon'd flatterie? O, be fick, great Greatneffe,

And bid thy Ceremonie glue thee cure.

Thinks thou the ferior Feuer will goe out

With Titles blouwe from Adulation?

Will it glue place to flexure and low bending?

Canft thou, when thou command'st the beggers knee,

Command the health of it? No, thou proud Dreame,

That play'ft so futilely with a Kings Repofe.

I am a King that find thee: and I know,

'Tis not the Balme, the Scepter, and the Ball,

The Sword, the Mafe, the crowne Imperial,

The enter-tiffed Robe of Gold and Pearle,

The farfed Title running 'fore the King,

The Throne he fitts on: nor the Tyde of Pompe,

That beate upon the high thore of this World:

No, not all thefe, thrice-glorious Ceremonie;

Not all thefe, lay'd in Bed Majefciall,

Can sleepe so soundly, as the wretched Slave:

Who with a body fill'd, and vacant mind,

Gets him to ref, cram'd with diftreffefull bread,

Neuer fees horrible Night, the Child of Hell:

But like a Lacquey, from the Rife to Set,

Sweates in the eye of Phebus; and all Night

Sleepes in Eternitie: next day after dawnne,

Doth rife and helpe Hiperio to his Horfe,

And follows fo the euer-running yeere

With profitable labour to his Graue:

And but for Ceremonie, fuch a Wretch,

Winning vp Days with toyle, and Nights with sleepe,

Had the fore-hand and vantage of a King.

The Slave, a Member of the Countrieyes peace,

Enjoyes it; but in groffe braine little wots,

What watch the King keeps, to maintaine the peace;

Whoeft howres, the Pefant beft advantages.

Enter Erpingham.

Erp. My Lord, your Nobles jealous of your abfence, Seeke through your Campe to find you.

King. Good old Knight, collecte them all together

At my Tent: It be before the.

Erp. I fhall doe't, my Lord. Exit.

King. O God of Batailles, fellie my Souliers hearts,

Poffeffe them not with feare: Take from them now

The fenfe of reckoning of th'opposed numbers:

Pluck their hearts from them. Not to day, O Lord,

O not to day, thinke not vpon the fault

My Father made, in compassing the Crowne.

I Richards body have interred now,

And on it have beftowed more contrite teares,

Then from it flipt forced drops of blood.

Fue hundred poore I have in yeerely pay,

Who twice a day their wither'd hands hold vp

Toward Heauen, to pardon blood:

And I have built two Chaunties,

Where the sad and folemn Priefes fing ftil:

For Richards Soule. More will I doe:

Though all that I can doe, is nothing worth;

Since that my Penitence comes after all,

Imploring pardon.

Enter Gloucefter.

Glouc. My Liege.

King. My Brother Gloucefter voyce? I:

I know thy errand, I will goe with thee:

The day, my friend, and all things flay for me.

Exeunt.
Enter the Dolphin, Orleans, Ramburs, and Beaumont.

Orlance. The Sunne doth gild our Armour vp, my Lords.

Dolph. Monte Cenal: My Horse, Uerlot Lacquay: Ha.

Orlance. Oh braue Spirit.

Dolph. Via les enes & terme.

Orlance. Bien qui se air & feu.

Dolph. Coin, Cousin Orlance. Enter Constable.

Now my Lord Constable?

Const. Hearke how our Steedes, for present Service

Dolph. Mount them, and make incision in their Hides,
That their hot blood may spin in English eyes,
And doubt them with superfluous courage: {ha.

Ram. What, will you have them weep our Horse blood?
How shall we then behold their natural tears?

Enter Messinger. The English are embattail'd, you French Peers.

Const. To Horfe you gallant Princes, straight to Horfe.

Doe but behold yond poor and starved Band,
And your faire shew shall fack away their Souls,
Leaving them but the flaes and huskes of men.
There is not worke enough for all our hands,
Scarce blood enough in all their flicky Veines,
To glue each naked Curtlex a flayne,
That our French Gallants shall to day draw out,
And theath for lack of sport. Let vs but blow on them,
The vapour of our Valour will o're-turne them.
'Tis pufiitie against all exceptions, Lords,
That our superfluous Lacies, and our Pelants,
Who in vneeceffarie action dware
About our Squares of Batalla, were enow
To purge this field of fuch a hilding Poe;
Though we vpon this Mountains Bais by,
Tooke fand for idle speculation:
But that our Honours muft not. What's to fay?
A very little little let vs doe,
And all is done; then let the Trumpets found
The Tucket Soniance, and the Note to mount:
For, our approach fhall fo much dare the field,
That England fhall cough downe in feare, and yeeld.

Enter Grandpre.

Grandpre. Why do you fay fo long, my Lords of France?
Yond Iland Carions, deferpect of their bones,
Ill-favourdly become the Morning field:
Their ragged Curtaines poorly are let loose,
And our Ayre shakes them paffing scornfully.
Bigge "Mars" feemes bang'rous in their begger'd Hoaf,
And faintly through a ruffle Beuer peepes,
The Horfemen fit like fixed Candelficks,
With Torch-flaues in their hand; and their poore Iades
Lob downe their heads, dropping the hides and hips:
The gumme downe roping from their pale-dead eyes,
And in their pale dull mouthes the Iymold Blt
Lyes foule with chaw'd-graffe, filth and motionleffe.
And their executors, the knauifh Crowes,
Flye o're them all impatient for their howre.
Descripion cannot fone it felte in words,
To demonstrate the Life of such a Batalla,
In life fo liuelffe, as it fhesws it felte.

Const. They have faid their prayers,
And they fay for death.

Dolph. Shall we goe fend them Dinners, and fresh Sutes,
Harry the King, Bedford and Exeter,
Warwick and Talbot, Salisbury and Gloucester,
Be in their flowing Caps freely remembered.
This thy shall the good man teach his sonne:
And Cuffine Cuffian shall we're goe by,
From this day to the ending of the World,
But we in it shall be remembered;
We few, we happy few, we band of brothers:
For he to day that sheds his blood with me,
Shall be my brother: be he ne're so vile,
This day shall gentle his Condition.
And Gentlemen in England, now a bed,
Shall thinken themselves accur decayed they were not here;
And hold their Manhoods cheape,whiles any speakes,
That fought with vs vpon Saint Cuffines day.

Enter Salisbury.

SOL. My Soueraigne Lord, bestow your selfe with speed,
The French are bruelye in their batailles set,
And will with all expediency charge on vs.

KING. All things are ready, if our minds be so.

W. Perieth the man, whose mind is backward now.

KING. Thou dost not with more helpe from England, Couze?

W. Gods will, my Liege, would you and I alone,
Without more helpe, could fight this Royall bataille.

KING. Why now thou hast vnwhist fiue thousand men:
Which makes me better, then to wifh vs one.
You know your places: God be with you all.

Tucket. Enter Montjoy.

MONT. Once more I come to knowe of thee King Harry,
If for thy Ranfome thou wilt now compound,
Before thy most affured Ouerthrow:
For certainly, thou art so neere the Gulfe,
Thou needs must be englutterd. Befides, in mercy
The Contable defires thee, thou wilt mind
Thy followers of Repentance; that their Soules
May make a peacefull and a sweete retyre
From off these fields; where(whetles) their poor bodies
Muft lye and falter.

KING. Who hath sent thee now?

MONT. The Contable of France.

KING. I pray thee beare my former Anwer back:
Bid them attieue mee, and then fell my bones.
Good God, why should they mocke poore fellowes thus?
The man that once did fell the Lyons skin
While the beaff liu'd, was kill'd with hunting him.
A many of our bodyes shall no doubt
Find Natue Graues: vpon the which, I trust
Shall witnessse liue in Brassi of these dayes worke.
And those that leave their valiant bones in France,
Dying like men, though buryed in your Dunghills,
They shall be fam'd: for there the Sun shall greet them,
And draw their honours recking vp to Heauen,
Leaving their earthly parts tochoke your Clyme,
The smell whereof shall breed a Plague in France.
Marke then abounding valour in our English:
That being dead,like to the bullets crafing,
Break out into a seconde course of michiefe,
Killing in relapse of Mortalitie.
Let me speake proudly: Tell the Contable,
We are but Warriors for the working day:
Our Gaynelle and our Gilt are all befmyrcht
With raynie Marching in the painefull field.
There's not a piece of feather in our Hoafe:
Good argument(I hope) we will not fye:

And time hath worne vs into flouenie.
But by the Maffe, our hearts are in the trim:
And my poore Souldiers tell me, yet ere Night,
They'll be in frether Robes, or they will pluck
The gay new Coats o're the French Souldiers heads,
And turne them out of seruice. If they doe this,
As if God please, they shall; my Ranfome then
Will fone be leuyed.
Herald, faue thou thy laboure:
Come thou no more for Ranfome, gentle Herald,
They shall have none, I fware, but thefe my loyants:
Which if they have, as I will leve vm them,
Shall yeeld them little, tell the Confable.

MONT. I shall, King Harry. And fo fare thee well;
Thou neuer shalt hear Herald any more.

Exit. KING. I fare thou wilt once more come againe for a Ranfome.

Enter Yorke.

YORKE. My Lord, most humbly on my knee I begge
The leading of the Vaward.

KING. Take it, braue Yorke.
Now Souldiers march away,
And how thou pleafef God, dilpofe the day.
Exeunt.

Alarum: Excursions.

Enter Pifhol, French Souldier, Boy.

PIF. Yeeld Curre.

French. Le penfe que vous efl es le Gentilhomme de bon qualite.

PIF. Qualitide calmie culture me. Art thou a Gentleman? What is thy Name? discusse.

French. O Seigneur Dieu.

PIF. O Signeur Dewe should be a Gentleman: pend my words O Signeur Dewe, and marke: O Signeur Dewe, thou dyest on point of Fox, except O Signeur thou doe gue to me egregious Ranfome.

French. O prennes mijerecordie aye pites de moy.

PIF. Moy shall not faire, I will haue fortie Moyes for I will fetch thy rymme out at thy Throat, in drops of Crimson blood.

French. Est il impossible d'escapper le force de ton bras.

PIF. Brasle, Curre? thou damned and luxurious Mountain Goat, offer'ft me Brasle?

French. O perdone moy.

PIF. Sayf't thou me so? is that a Tonne of Moyes? Come hithe boy, ask me this flau in French what is his Name.

BOY. Escoute comment offes vous appellez?

French. Monseur le Fer.

BOY. He fayes his Name is M. Fer.

PIF. M. fer: Il est fer, and firke him, and ferret him: discusse the same in French vnto him.

BOY. I doe not know the French for fer, and ferret, and firke.

PIF. Bid him prepare, for I will cut his throat.

French. Que dit il Monseur?

BOY. Il me commande a vous dire que vous faite vouf pres, car ce Coldat icy est delipose tout affure de coupees voliere gorce.

PIF. Ow, take uppe gorse permayor pechant, vnlefe thou gue me Crownes, braise Crownes or mangled thau be by this my Sword.

French. O je vouf fapetue pour l'amour de Dieu: ma par donner, le fut le Gentilhomme de bon maistre, garde ma vie, et je vouf donneray deux cent escus.

PIF. What are his words? BOY. He
Boy. He prays you to saue his life, he is a Gentleman of a good house, and for his ranom he will give you two hundred Crownes.

Pijf. Tell him my fury shall abate, and I the Crownes will take.

Fren. Petit Monfieur que dit il? Boy. Encore qu'il et contre fon jurement, de pardonner aucune prijoner: neant-mons pour les euyes que vous layt a promets, il est content a vous donnez le libertee et franchement.

Fren. Sur mes genoues je vous donnez milles remerciez, et je me effume beureux que le intombe, entre les main. d'om Chevaller Le peuje le plus braue vaillant et tres diffiite signeur d'Angleterre.

Pijf. Expound unto me boy. Boy. He gives you upon his knees a thousand thanks, and he estemes himselfe happy, that he hath faine into the hands of one (as he thinkes) the most braue, valorous and thrice-worthy signeur of England.

Pijf. As I sucke blood, I will some mercy thow. Follow mee.

Boy. Sauue vous le grand Capitaine? I did neuer know fo foci a voyce issue from so emptie a heart: but the laying is true. The empty voffel makes the greaest sound. Bardolf? and Nym had tenne times more valour, then this roaring diuell him odle play, that euerie one may payre his naules with a woodden dagger, and they are both hang'd, and fo would this be, if hee durft steal any thing adventurously. I must flye with the Lackles with the luggage of our camp, the French might have a good pray of vs, if he knew of it, for there is none to guard it but boyes.

\[ Exit. \]

Enter Constable, Orleans, Burbun, Dolphin, and Ramburs.

O mejiante Fortune, do not runne away.

Con. Why our rankes are broke.

Dol. O perdurable shame, let's flab our felues: Be thefe the wretches that we plaid at dice for?

Orl. Is this the King we fent too, for his ranfone?

Bur. Shame, and eternall shame, nothing but shame; Let vs dye in once more backe againe,

And he that will not follow Burbun now,

Let him go hence, and with his cap in hand

Like a base Pander hold the Chamber doore,

Whilft a base flau, no gentler then my dogge,

His faireft daughter is contaminated.

Con. Disorder that hath spoyled vs, friend vs now,

Let vs on heapes go offer vp our libes.

Orl. We are now ever stiling in the Field,

To another vp the English in our throne,

If any order might be thought vpon.

Bur. The diuell take Order now, Ile to the throne;

Let life be short, else shame will be too long.

\[ Exit. \]

Alarum. Enter the King and his trayne, with Prijoners.

King. Live thee good Vnkle: thrice within this houre I saw him downe; thrice vp againe, and fighting, From Helmet to the foprene, all blood he was.

Exe. In which array (braue Soldier) doth he lyse, Larding the plaine: and by his bloody side, (Yoake-fellow to his honour-owing-wounds)

The Noble Earle of Suffolke alfo lyes. Suffolke firt dyed, and Yorke all hagled ouer

Comes to him, where in gore he lay infteeped,

And takes him by the Beard, kiffes the gaffes

That bloodily dyd yawne vpon his face,

He cries aloud; Tarry my Coyn Suffolke,

My foule shall thine keep company to heauen:

Tarry (sweetes foute) for mine, then flye a-brefet:

As in this glorious and well-foughten field

We kept together in our Chivalrie.

Vpon these words I came, and cheerd him vp,

He finil'd me in the face, raught me his hand,

And with a fewele gripe, fayes: Deere my Lord, Commend my seruice to my Soueraigne,

So did he turne, and ouer Suffolkes necke

He threw his wounded arme, and kiff his lipes,

And fo empoud to death, with blood he feald

A Teftament of Noble-ending-loue:

The prettie and fweet manner of it fore'd

Thofe waters from me, which I would have stop'd,

But I had not fo much of man in mee,

And all my mother came into mine eyes,

And gave me vp to treses.

King. I blame you not,

For hearing this, I muft perforce compound

With mixtfull eyes, or they will fuffe to.

But heare, what new alarum is this fame?

The French haue re-enforc'd their flatter'd men:

Then euery foulard kill his Prijoners,

Glue the word through.

\[ Exit. \]

\[ Actus Quartus. \]

Enter Fluellen and Gower.

Flu. Kill the payes and the luggage, 'Tis expresely against the Law of Armes, tis as arrant a piece of knauey marke you now, as can bee offert in your Confiencenow, is it not?

Gow. 'Tis certaine, there's not a boy left alive, and the Cowardly Rafcallz that ranne from the battaille ha' done this slaughter: besides they haue burned and carried away all that was in the Kings Tent, wherefore the King moft-worlhy hath caus'd euery foldiour to cut his Prijoners throat. O 'tis a gallant King.

Flu. I, hee was porne at Monmouth Captaine Gower:

What call you the Townes name where Alexander the pig was borne?

Gow. Alexander the Great.

Flu. Why I pray you, is not pig, great? The pig, or the great, or the mighty, or the huge, or the magnanimousand, are all one reckonings,faue the phare is a little variations.

Gow. I thinke Alexander the Great was borne in Macedonia, his Father was called Philip of Macedon, as I take it.

Flu. I thinke it is in Macedonia where Alexander is borne.
pore: I tell you Captaine, if you looke in the Maps of the Orld, I warrant you fall finde in the comparisions betwene Macedon & Moumouth, that the situations looke you, is both alike. There is a River in Macedon, & there is also moreover a River at Moumouth, it is call’d Wye at Moumouth: but it is out of my praines, what is the name of the other River: but tis all one, tis alike as my fingers is to my fingers, and there is Salmons in both. If you marke Alexander’s life well, Harry of Moumouth’s life is come after it indifferent well, for there is figures in all things. Alexander God knowes, and you know, in his rages, and his furies, and his wrathes, and his chollers, and his moodes, and his dispealeurs, and his indignations, and alfo being a little intoxicated in his praines, did in his Ales and his angeres (looke you) kill his beft friend Clytus.

Gow. Our King is not like him in that, he never kill’d any of his friends.

Flu. It is not well done (marke you now) to take the tales out of my mouth, ere it is made and finifhed. I speake but in the figures, and comparitions of it: as Alexander kild his friend Clytus, being in his Ales and his Cuppes; fo alfo Harry Moumouth being in his right wittes, and his good judgements, turn’d away the fat Knight with the great belly doublet: he was full of lefts, and gypes, and knauresies, and mockes, I have forgot his name.

Gow. Sir John Falstaff.

Flu. That is he: Ile tell you, there is good men pore at Moumouth.

Gow. Here comes his Maiestie.

Alarum. Enter King Harry and Burbon with prisoners. Flourish.

King. I was not angry since I came to France, Vnil this infantic. Take a Trumpet Herald, Ride thou unto the Horfemen on yond hill: If they will fight with vs, bid them come downe, Or voyde the field: they do offend our fight. If they do neither, we will come to them, And make them sker away, as swift as flones Enforced from the old Affyrin flings: Befides, wee’ll cut the throats of those we haue, And not a man of them that we shall take, Shall taste our mercy. Go and tell them fo.

Enter Montaign.

Exe. Here comes the Herald of the French, my Liege Glou. His eyes are humbler then they vs to be.

King. How now, what means this Herald? Knowst thou not, That I haue fin’d thefe bones of mine for ranfome? Com’t thou againe for ranfome?

Her. No great King: I come to thee for charitable Licence, That we may wander ore this bloody field, To booke our dead, and then to bury them, To fort our Nobles from our common men. For many of our Princes (wote the while) Lye drownd’d and foak’d in mercenary blood: So do our vulgar drench their peaffant limbs In blood of Princes, and with wounded steedes Fret fet-locke deep in gore, and with wilde rage Yerke out their armed heeleis at their dead masters, Killing them twice. O glue vs leave great King, To view the field in safety, and difpole Of their dead bodies.

Kin. I tell thee truly Herald, I know not if the day be ours or no, For yet a many of your horfemen peepe, And gallop ore the field.

Her. The day is yours.

Kin. Praifed be God, and not our strength for it: What is this Castle call’d that flends hard by.

Her. They call it Agincourt.

King. Then call we this the field of Agincourt, Fought on the day of Crespin Crespinus.

Flu. Your Grandfather of famous memory (an’t please your Maiestie) and your great Vnle Edward the Placke Prince of Wales, as I haue read in the Chronicles, fought a moft proue pattle here in France.

Kin. They did Fluellen.

Flu. Your Maiestie fayes very true: If your Maiesties is remembred of it, the Welchmen did good seruice in a Garden where Leeckes did grow, weering Leeckes in their Moumouth caps, which your Maiestie know to this howre is an honourable badge of the seruice: And I do beleue your Maiestie takes no scorne to weare the Leecke vpon S. Taues day.

King. I weare it for a memorabla honor:

For I am Welch you know good Countrman.

Flu. All the water in Wye, cannot wash with your Maiesties Welth plod out of your pody, I can tell you that: God pleafe it, and preferue it, as long as it pleases his Grace, and his Maiestie too.

Kin. Thanks good my Countrymen.

Flu. By infu, I am your Maiesties Countreyman, I care not who know it: I will conflite it to all the Orld, I need not to be afhamed of your Maiestie, praifed be God so long as your Maiestie is an honett man.

King. Good keepe me fo.

Enter Williams.

Our Herals go with him, Bring me luft notice of the numbers dead On both our parts. Call yonder fellow hither.

Exe. Souldier, you must come to the King.

Kin. Souldier, why wear’st thou that Gloue in thy Cappe?

Will. And’t pleafe your Maiestie, tis the gage of one that I should fight withall, if he be alieue.

Kin. An Englishman?

Will. And’t pleafe your Maiestie, a Raffcall that swag’r’d with me last night: who if alieue, and euer dare to chellenge this Gloue, I have fwanre to take him a boxe a’th ere: or if I can fee my Gloue in his cappe, which he fware as he was a Souldier he would weare (if alieue) I wil strike it out founfly.

Kin. What thinkes you Captaine Fluellen, is it fit this souldier keepe his oath.

Flu. Hee is a Crouaine and a Villaine else, and’t pleafe your Maiestie in my confience.

King. It may bee, his enemy is a Gentleman of great fort quite from the anwer of his degree.

Flu. Though he be as good a Gentleman as the diuel is, as Lucifer and Belzebub himfelfe, it is neceffary (looke your Grace) that he keepe his vow and his oath: If hee bee periur’d (fee you now) his reputation is as arrant a villaine and a facke fawce, as euer his blacke fho trodd upon Gods ground, and his earth, in my confience law.

King. Then keepe thy vow firrath, when thou meet’st the fellow.

Wil. So, I wil my Liege, as I liue.

King. Who feru’ft thou vnder?
The Life of Henry the Fift.

Will. Vnder Captaine Gower, my Liege.

Flu. Gower is a good Captaine, and is good know ledge and literaturd in the Warres.

King. Call him hither to me, Souldier.

Will. I will my Liege. Exit.

King. Here Fluellen, weare thou this favoure for me, and flyke it in thy Cappe: when Alarfon and my feldife downe together, I plucke this Gloue from his Helme: if any man challenge this, hee is a friend to Alarfon, and an enemy to our Perfon; if thou encounter any such, apprehend him, and thou doe't me loue.

Flu. Your Grace doo's me as great Honors as can be defir'd in the hearts of his Subieets: I would faine fee the man, that ha's but two legges, that shall find himfelfe agreed at this Gloue; that is all: but I would faine fee it once, and pleafe God of his grace that I might fee.

King. Know'th thou Gower?

Flu. He is my deare friend, and pleafe you.

King. Pray thee goe seeke him, and bring him to my Tent.

Flu. I will fetch him. Exit.

King. My Lord of Warwick, and my Brother Gloster, Follow Fluellen clofeely at the hecles.
The Gloue which I haue given him for a favour, May haply purchafe him a box 'a'there.
It is the Souldiers: I by bargaining shoi'd Wear it my felfe. Follow good Cousin Warwick:
If that the Souldier strike him, as I judge
By his blunt bearing, he will keepe his word;
Some fjodaine michflee may arife of it:
For I doe know Fluellen valiant,
And toucht with Choler, hot as Gunpowder,
And quickly will returne an infirue.
Follow, and see there be no harme betweene them.
Goe you with me, Vnckle of Exeter. Exeunt.

Enter Gower and Williams.

Will. I warrant it is to Knight you, Captaine.

Enter Fluellen.

Flu. Gods will, and his pleasure, Captaine, I believe you now, come space to the King: there is more good toward you paraudenture, then is in your knowledge to dreasme of.

Will. Sir, know you this Gloue?

Flu. Know the Gloue? I know the Gloue is a Gloue.

Will. I know this, and thus I challenge it.

Striketh him.

Flu. Shud, an arrant Traytor as anyes in the Vniver fall world, or in France, or in England.

Will. Doe you thinke Ie be forsworne?

Flu. Stand away Captaine Gower, I will give Trefon his payment into ploues, I warrant you.

Will. I am no Traytor.

Enter Warwick and Glouesher.

Warw. How now, how now, what's the matter?

Flu. My Lord of Warwick, heere is, prayed be God for it, a most contagious Trefon come to light, looke you, as you shall desire in a Summers day. Heere is his Maietti.

Enter King and Exeter.

King. How now, what's the matter?

Flu. My Liege, heere is a Villaine, and a Traytor, that looke your Grace, he's frooke the Gloue which your Maietti is take out of the Helmet of Alar fon.

Will. My Liege, this was my Gloue, here is the fellow of it, and he that I gave it to in change, promis'd to weare it in his Cappe: I promis'd to strike him, if he did: I met this man with my Gloue in his Cappe, and I have been as good as my word.

Flu. Your Maietti heare now, fauling your Maieties Manhood, what an arrant racally, beggerly, lowfe Knaue it is: I hope your Maietti is peare me tettomie and witneffe, and will auoeuement, that this is the Gloue of Alarfon, that your Maietti is glue me, in your Con fi ne now.

King. Glue me thy Gloue Souldier;

Looke, here is the fellow of it:
'Twas I indeed thou promis'd it to strike,
And thou haft given me moft bitter termes.

Flu. And please your Maietti, let him Necke answere for it, if there is any Marhall Law in the World.

King. How canft thou make me satisfaction?

Will. All offences, my Lord, come from the heart: nouer came any from mine, that might offend your Maietti.

King. It was our feldie thou didst abuse.

Will. Your Maietti came not like your feldie: you appear'd to me but as a common man: witneffe the Night, your Garments, your Lowlineffe: and what your Highniffe suther'd vnder that shape, I belehe you take it for your owne fault, and not mine: for had you beeene as I tooke you for, I made no offence; therefore I belehe your Highniffe pardon me.

King. Here Vnckle Exeter, fill this Gloue with Crownes, And give it to this fellow. Keep it fellow, And weare it for an Honor in thy Cappe, Till I doe challenge it. Give him the Crownes:

And Captaine, you must needs be friends with him.

Flu. By this Day and this Ligh, the fellow ha's mettell enough in his belly: Hold, there is twelve-pence for you, and I pray you to ferue God, and keepe you out of prawles and prabbes, and quarrels and diffentions, and I warrant you it is the better for you.

Will. I will none of your Money.

Flu. It is with a good will: I can tell you it will serue you to mend your shoes: come, wherefore should you be so payfull, your shoes is not so good: 'tis a good filling I warrant you, or I will change it.

Enter Herald.

King. Now Herauld, are the dead numbred?

Herald. Heere is the number of the slaught'red French.

King. What Prisoners of good fort are taken, Vnckle?

Exe. Charles Duke of Orleanc, Nephew to the King, John Duke of Burbon, and Lord Beauchiquald:
Of other Lords and Barons, Knights and Squires, Full fifteene hundred, besides common men.

King. This Note doth tell me of ten thousand French That in the field lye flaine: of Princes in this number, And Nobles bearing Banners, three lye dead One hundred twenty six: added to thefe, Of Knights, Efquires, and gallant Gentlemen, Eight thousand and foure hundred: of the which, Five hundred were but yesterday dubb'd Knights. So that in thefe ten thousand they haue loft, There are but fifteene hundred Mercenariyes:
The reft are Princes, Barons, Lords, Knights, Squires,
And Gentlemen of bold and qualitative.
The Names of those their Nobles that theye dead:
Charles Delabrethi, High Constable of France,
Jaques of Chatillon, Admiral of France,
The Master of the Crouie-bowes, Lord Rambures,
Great Master of France, the braue Sir Guichard 'Dolphin,
John Duke of Alainfor, Antonio Duke of Brabant,
The Brother to the Duke of Burgundie,
And Edward Duke of Bari : of lusie Earles,
Grandpree and Rouffe, Faucencbridge and Foyes,
Beaumont and Marl, Pandemont and Lefrale.
Here was a Royall fellowship of death.
Where is the number of our English dead?
Edward the Duke of Yorke, the Earle of Suffolk,
Sit Richard Ketly, Davy Gam Esquier;
None elfe of name : and of all other men,
But flue and twentie.
O God, thy Arme was heere:
And not to vs, but to thy Arme alone,
Afribe we all : when, without stratagem,
But in plaine shock, and even play of Battale,
Was euer knowne so great and little loffe?
On one part and on the other, take it God,
For it is none but thine.
Exit. "Tis wonderfull.
King. Come, goo me in proceffion to the Village:
And be it death proclaymed through our Houfe,
To boaff of this, or take that prafye from God,
Which is his own.
Flu. Is it not lauffual and pleafe your Maiftie, to tell how many is kill'd?
King. Yes Captain: but with this acknowledgement,
That God fought for vs.
Flu. Yes, my confcience, he did vs great good.
King. Doe we all holy Rights:
Let there be fung Non unab, and Te Deum,
The dead with charitie enclos'd in Clay :
And then to Callice, and to England then,
Where ne're from France arriu'd more happy men.
Exeunt.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Chorus.
Vouchsafe to thofe that have not read the Story,
That I may prompt them : and of fuch as have,
I humbly pray them to admit the'receipt
Of time, of numbers, and due course of things,
Which cannot in their huge and proper life,
Be here prefented. Now we bear the King
Toward Callice: Grant him there ; there teene,
Heauen him away upon your winged thoughts,
Athewart the Sea : Behold the English beach
Pales in the flood : with Men, Wives, and Boyes,
Whose Shouts & claps out-voyce the deep-mouth'd Sea,
Which like a mightie Whiffler 'fore the King,
Seemes to prepare his way : So let him land,
And solemnly fee him set on to London.
So swift a pace hath Thought, that even now
You may imagine him upon Black-Heath:
Where, that his Lords defire him, to have borne
His bruifed Helmet, and his bended Sword
Before him, through the Cifie : he forbids it,
The Life of Henry the Fift.

Ques. So happy be the Ifue brother Ireland
Of this good day, and of this gracious meeting,
As we are now glad to behold your eyes,
Your eyes which hitherto have borne
In them against the French that met them in their bent,
The fatal Balls of murthering Baisilkes:
The venome of fuch Lookeis we fairly hope
Haue loft their qualitie, and that this day
Shall change all griefes and quarrels into lone.
Eng. To cry Amen to that, thus we appeare.
Que. You English Princes all, I doe salue you.
Eng. My dutie to you both, on equall lone.
Great Kings of France and England:that I haue labour'd
With all my wits, my paines, and strong endeavors,
To bring your moft Imperiall Maiesties
Vnto this Barre, and Royall interview;
Your MIGHTINESS on both parts beft can witneffe.
Since then my Office hath fo farre preuy'd,
That Face to Face, and Royall Eye to Eye,
You haue congregated: let it not difgrace me.
If I demand before this Royall view
What Rubies, what Impediment there is,
Why that the naked, poore, and mangled Peace,
Deare Nourse of Arts, Plentyes, and joyful Births,
Should not in this beft Garden of the World,
Our fertile France, put vp her lowly Vifage?
Alas, mee hath from France too long been chas'd,
And all her Husbandry doth lye on heapes,
Corrupting in it owne fertilitie.

Her Vine, the merry cheerer of the heart,
Unpruned, dyes: her Hedges euen pleach'd,
Like Prisoners wildly ouer-growne with hayre,
Put forth disorder'd Twigs: her fallow Leas,
The Darnell, Hemlock, and ranke Fementary,
Doth root vp; while that the Culer rufs,
That should deracinate fuch Sauagery:
The euen Meade, that erft brought fweetly forth
The freckled Cowflip, Burnet, and greene Clouer,
Wanting the Sythe, withall vncoformed, ranke;
Concieus by idlenesse, and nothing teemes,
But hateful Docks, rough Thiftles, Kekfyes, Burres,
Loofing both beautie and vitelitie;
And all our Vineyards, Fallowes, Meades, and Hedges,
Defectitue in their natures, grow to wildneffe.
Euen fo our Houses, and our felves, and Children,
Have loue, or do not leerne, for want of time,
The Sciences that should become our Countrie;
But grow like Sauages, as Souldiers will,
That nothing doe, but meditate on Blood,
To Swearing, and ferne Lookeis, defu'd Attyre,
And euyry thing that feemes vnnatural.
Which to reduce into our former fauour,
You are assembled: and my speech entreats,
That I may know the Let, why gentle Peace
Should not expell thefe inconueniences,
And bleffe vs with her former qualities.

Eng. If Duke of Burgonie, you would the Peace,
Whole want giues growth to th'imperfections
Which you haue cited: you muft buy that Peace
With full accord to all our luft demands;
Whole Tenures and particular effeets
You haue enchited: briefly in your hands.

Burg. The King hath heard them: to the which, as yet
There is no Anwer made.

Eng. Well then: the Peace which you before fo vrg'd,
Lyes in his Anwer.

France. 1
France. I hau'e but with a curfelarie eye
O're-glanc't the Articles: Plea/th your Grace
To appoint fome of your Counsell prefently
To fit with vs once more, with better head
To re-fureuy them; we will fuddenly
Paffe our accept and peremptorie Anfwer.

Eng'and. Brother we shall. Goe Vnckle Exeter,
And Brother Clarence, and you Brother Gloucefker,
Warwic', and Huntington, goe with the King,
And take with you free power, to ratifie,
Augment, or alter, as your Wildomes bef.
Shall fee advantageous for our Dignifie,
Any thing in or out of our Demands,
And we'll confine thereto. Will you, faire Siffer,
Goe with the Princes, or flay here with vs?

Que. Our gracious Brother, I will goe with them:
Happily a Womans Voce may doe fome good,
When Articles too nicely vrg'd, be flood on.

Eng'and. Yet leave our Cousin Katherine here with vs,
She is our capitall Demand, compris'd
Within the fore-ranke of our Articles.

Que. She hath good leave. Exequat omnes.

Manet King and Katherine.

King. Faire Katherine, and moft faire,
Will you vouchsafe to teach a Souldier tearmes,
Such as will enter at a Ladies ear,
And pleade his Loue-fult to her gentle heart.

Katb. Your Malefie fall mock at me, I cannot fpeakc your Eng'and.

King. O faire Katherine, if you will loue me founfly
With your French heart, I will be glad to heare you confeffe it brokenly with your English Tongue. Doe you like me, Kate?

Katb. Pardon me, I cannot tell wat is like me.

King. An Angell is like you Kate, and you are like an Angell,

Katb. Que dit il que le fue semblable a les Anges?

Lady. Ouy eraymont (fauf vofgre Grace) ainf dis il.
King. I laid fo, deare Katherine, and I must not bluf
To affirme it.

Katb. O bon Dieu, les languages des hommes font plein de traverfies.

King. What fayes she, faire one? that the tongues of men are full of deceits?

Lady. Ouy, dat de tongues of de mens is be full of de-ceits: dat is de Princesse.

King. The Princesse is the better Engli/h-woman: yfaith Kate, my wooing is fit for thy vnderftanding, I am glad thou canst flpeak no better English, for if thou couldt, thou wouldt finale me fuch a plaine King, that thou wouldft thinke, I had foled my Frame to buy my Crowne. I know no wayes to mince it in loue, but di-crcfly to fay, I loue you; then if you vgr me farther, then to fay, Doe you in faith? I weare out my fuite; Give me your anwer, yfaith doe, and fo clap hands, and a bargaine: hoe fay you, Lady?

Katb. Sauf vosgre bonure, me vnderfand well.

King. Marry, if you would put me to Verifies, or to Dance for your fake, Kate, why you vndid me: for the one
I have neither words nor meafure; and for the other,
I haue no ftrength in meafure, yet a reafonable meafure in Streng'th. If I could winne a Lady at Leape-frogge, or by Vawting into my Saddle, with my Armour on my backe; vnnder the correction of bragging be it spoken, I should quickly leape into a Wife: Or if I might buflett for my

Lowe, or bound my Horfe for her favours, I could lay on like a Butcher, and fit like a lack an Apes, neuer off.
But before God Kate, I cannot looke greenely, nor gafte out my eloquence, nor I haue no cunning in proteftation; onely downe-right Oakes, which I neuer vfe till vrg'd, nor neuer breake for vrging.
If thou canst loue a fellow of this temper, Kate, whole face is not worth Sunne-burning & that neuer lookes in his Glasse, for loue of any thing hee fees there? let thine Eye be thy Cooke. I fpeekc to thee plaine Soul'dier: If thou canst loue me for this, take me? if not? to fay to thee that I thall dye, is true; but for thy loue, by the L. No: yet I loue thee too. And while thou liu'ft, deare Kate, take a fellow of plaine and vnoynd Confiance, for he perfome muft do thee right, because he hath not the gift to woe in other places:
for these fellows of infinit tongue, that can ryme themselfes into Ladies favours, they doe alwaies reafon themselues out againe. What? a fpeaker is but a prater, a Ryme is but a Ballad: a good Legge will fall, a dart Backe will floope, a blacke Beard will turne white, a curl'd Pate will grow bald, a faire Face will wither, a full Eye will wax hollow: but a good Heart, Kate, is the Sunne and the Moone, or rather the Sunne, and not the Moone; for it shines bright, and neuer changes, but keeps his courfe crully. If thou would haue fuch a one, take me? and take me; take a Soul'dier: take a Soul'dier; take a King.
And what fay'ft thou then to my Loue? speake my faire, and fairly, I pray thee.

Katb. Is it poiffible dat I fould loue de ennemie of France?

King. No, it is not poiffible you fhould loue the Ene-mie of France, Kate; but in louing me, you fhould loue the Friend of France: for I loue France fo wel, that I will not part with a Village of it; I will haue it all mine:
and Kate, when France is mine, and I am yours; then yours is France, and you are mine.

Katb. I cannot tell wat is dat.

King. No, Kate? I will thee in French, which I am fure will hang vpon my tongue, like a new-married Wife about her Husbands Necke, hardly to be hooke off; I faund fur le paffonement de France, & quand vous avez le poffeftion de moy. (Let mee fee, what then? Saint Dennis be my speede.) Donc vosgre eft France, & vous yez mienne.
It is as eafe for me, Kate, to conquer the Kingdome, as to fpeak fo much more French: I shall neuer moue thee in French, vnleffe it be to laugh at me.

Katb. Sauf vosgre bonure, le Francois ques vous parlez, il
& meilieux que l'Anglois le quel je parle.

King. No faith is't not, Kate: but thy fpeaking of my Tongue, and I thine, moft truely falifie, muf needes be graunted to be much at one. But Kate, don't thou vnderftand this much English? Canst thou loue me?

Katb. I cannot tell.

King. Can any of your Neighbours tell, Kate? Ile ask me them. Come, I know thou loueft me: and at night, when you come into your Closet, you fetion this Gentlewoman about me; and I know Kate, you will to her difplaye thefe parts in me, that you loue with your heart: but good Kate, mocke me mercifully, the rather gentle Princesse, because I loue thee cruellly. If euer thou beef seen, Kate, as I have a fauing Faith within me tells me thou halt; I get thee with skambling, and thou muft therefore needes prowe a good Soul'dier-breeder:
Shall not thou and I, between Saint Dennis and Saint George, compound a Boy, halfe French halfe English,
k
that shall go to Conchantinople, and take the Turke by the Beard. Shall wee not? what say'lt thou, my faire Flower-de-Luce.

Kate. I doe not know dat.

King. No: tis hereafter to know, but now to promise: doe but now promise Kate, you will endeavour for your French part of such a Boy; and for my English mytyle, take the Word of a King, and a Batcheler. How answer you, La plus belle Katherine du monde mon trescher O dezin deefte.

Kath. Your Malefieue au faufe Frenche enough to deceuе de moft fage Dameoil de dat is en Fraunce.

King. Now fue vpon my faufe French; by mine Honor in true English, I loue thee Kate; by which Honor, I dare not sweare thou loue me, yet my blood begins to flatt-ter me, that thou doo'ft; notwithstanding the poore and wemptering effect of my Vifage. Now befre thy Fathers Ambition, hee was thinking of Cuill Warres when hee got me, therefore was I created with a stub- borne out-fide, with an aspetto of Irony; that when I come to wooe Ladies, I fright them: but in faith Kate, the eld-er I wax, the better I shall appeare. My comfort is, that Old Age, that ill layer vp of Beatitie, can doe no more fpoyle vpon my Face. Thou haft me, if thou haft me, at the worfd; and thou shalt weare me, if thou weare me, better and better: and therefore tell me, most faire Ka- therine, will you haue me? Put off your Maiden Blusses, aouoch the Thoughts of your Heart with the Lookes of an Emprefs, take me by the Hand, and say, Harry of England, I am thine: which Word thou shalt noo finer blefee mine Eare withall, but I will tell thee alowd, Eng-land is thine, Ireland is thine, France is thine, and Henry Plamaginet is thine; who, though I speake it before his Face, if he be not fellow with the belft King, thou shalt finde the belft King of Good-fellowes. Come your An- fwer in bawerful Muick; for thy Voyce is Muick, and thy English broken: Therefore Queene of all, Katherine, haue me: for I tell thine that I am not a Mufitt, but a Dame, and I doe weare my faire fuffant Saigneur.

King. Then I will kill if thy Lippes, Kate.

Kath. Les Dames & Damaifels pour efftre haifte devant leur noycefe il ne pas le coufume de Fraunce.

King. Madame, my Interpreter, what faies thee?

Lady. Dat it is not be de fahon for the Ladies of Fraunce; I cannot tell wat is buffne en Anglifh.

King. To kiffe.

Lady. Your Malefitee entenandre better que moy.

King. It is not a fahon for the Maides in Fraunce to kiffe before they are married, would the fay?

Lady. O voy errayment.

King. O Kate, nice Cupetees curfe to great Kings. Deare Kate, you and I cannot bee confind within the weake Lyft of a Countrysay fahon: wee are the ma- kers of Manners, Kate; and the libetrie that followes our Places, flopotes the mouth of all finde-faults, as I will doe yours, for vpholding the nice fahon of your Countrey, in denying me a Kifft: therefore patienfly, and yelding. You haue Witch-craft in your Lippes, Kate: there is more eloquence in a Sugar touch of them, then in the Tongues of the French Countee; and they should sooner periuate Harry of England, then a generall Petition of Monarchs. Heere comies your Father.

Enter the Frenche Power, and the English Lords.

Burg. God fave your Malefite, my Royall Cousin, teach you our Princesse English?

King. I would haue her learn, my faire Cousin, how properly I love her, and that is good English.

Burg. Is thee not apt?

King. Our Tongue is rough, Coze, and my Condi- tion is not smooth: so that haung neyther the Voyce nor the Heart of Flatterie about me, I cannot fo cormise vp the Spirit of Loue in her, that hee will appeare in his true likenesse.

Burg. Pardon the franknesse of my mirth, if I answer you for that. If you would cormise in her, you must make a Circle: if cormise vp Loue in her in his true likenesse, hee must appeare naked, and blinde. Can you blame her then, being a Maid, yet roe'd outher with the Virgin Crimfon of Modeffe, if thee deny the apparence of a naked blinde Boy in her naked feeling selfe? It were (my Lord) a hard Condition for a Maid to configne to.

King. Yet they doe winke and yeold, as Loue is blind and enforces.

Burg. They are then excus'd, my Lord, when they fee not what they doe.

King. Then good my Lord, teach your Cousin to content winking.

Burg. I will winke on her to content, my Lord, if you will teach her to know my meaning: for Maides well Summer'd, and warme kept, are like Flyes at Bartholo- mew-tyde, blinde, though they have their eyes, and then they will endure handling, which before would not abide looking on.

King. This Morall tyes me ouer to Time, and a hot Summer; and so I shall catch the Flye, your Cousin, in the latter end, and shee must be blinde to.

Burg. As Loue is my Lord,before it loues.

King. It is fo: and you may, some of you, thanke Loue for my blindnese, who cannot fee many a faire French Clide for one faire French Maid that stands in my way.

French King. Yes my Lord, you see them perspec- tively: the Cities turn'd into a Mald; for they are all gyrdled with Maiden Walls, that Warre hath entred.

England. Shall Kate be my Wife?

France. So please you.

England. I am content, so the Maiden Cities you call of, may wait on her: so the Maid that flood in the way for my Wifh, shall shew me the way to my Will.

France. Wee have conferred to all these matters of rea- son.

England. Is't so, my Lords of England?

Wel. The King hath granted every Article: His Daughter first; and in sequell,e all, According to their farte propofed natures.

Exct. Onely
The Life of Henry the Fift.

Exeunt. Onely he hath not yet subcribed this:
Where your Miftfie demands, That the King of France having any occasion to write for matter of Graunt, shall name your Highnffe in this forme, and with this additon, in French: Nofre trescher fils Henry Roy d'Angleterre Heretere de France: and thus in Latine; Praeclariffimus Filius nofter Henricus Rex Anglie & Heres Franciae.

France. Nor this I have not Brother to deny'd,
But your request shall make me let it passe.

England. I pray you then, in loue and deare allyance,
Let that one Article ranke with the rest,
And thereupon glue me your Daughter.

France. Take her faire Sonne, and from her blood rayle vp
Iffue to me, that the contending Kingdomes
Of France and England, whose very thoares looke pale,
With enuy of each others happinesse,
May ceafe their hatred; and this deare Coniunction
Plant Neighbour-hood and Christian-like accord
In their sweet Bosomes: that neuer Warre advance
His bleeding Sword 'twixt England and faire France.

Lords. Amen.

King. Now welcome Kate: and beare me witness all,
That here I kiffe her as my Soueraigne Queene.

Flourish.

Quee. God, the best maker of all Marriages,
Combine your hearts in one, your Realmes in one:
As Man and Wife being two, are one in loue,
So be there 'twixt your Kingdomes such a Spousall,
That neuer may ill Office, or fell Jealousie,
Which troubles oft the Bed of blessed Marriage,
Thruft in betwene the Pation of these Kingdomes,
To make diuorce of their incorporate League:
That English may as French, French Englishmen,
Receive each other. God speake this Amen.

All. Amen.

King. Prepare we for our Marriage: on which day,
My Lord of Burgundy wee'le take your Oath
And all the Peere, for suretie of our Leagues.
Then shall I sweare to Kate, and you to me,
And may our Oathes well kept and prof'rous be.

Senet.

Exeunt.

Enter Chorus.

Thus farre with rough, and all-vnable Pen,
Our bending Author hath pursu'd the Story,
In little roome confining mightie men,
Mangling by starts the full course of their glory.
Small time: but in that small, most greatly liued
This Starre of England. Fortune made his Sword;
By which, the Worlds best Garden he achieued:
And of it left his Sonne Imperiall Lord.

Henry the Sixt, in Infant Bands crown'd King
Of France and England, did this King succeed:
Whose State so many had the managing,
That they loft France, and made his England bleed:
Which oft our Stage hath shone; and for their sake,
In your faire minds let this acceptance take.

FINIS.

k 2
The first Part of Henry the Sixt.

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Dead March.

Enter the Funerall of King Henry the Fift, attended on by the Duke of Bedford, Regent of France; the Duke of Gloster, Protector; the Duke of Exeter Warren, the Bishop of Winchefter, and the Duke of Somerset.

Bedford. Vng be ye haue with black, yield day to night; Comets importing change of Times and States, Brandish your crystall Trestles in the Skie, And with them scourge the bad revolting Stars, That have confedent vnto Henries death: King Henry the Fift, too famous to live long, England ne'er was a King of so much worth.

Gloft. England ne'er was a King until his time; Vertue he had, defending to command, His brandish Sword did blinde men with his beams, His Armes fired wider then a Dragons Wings: His sparkling Eyes, releat with wrathfull fire, More daunted and drove back his Enemies, Then mid-day Sunne, fierce bent against their faces. What should I say? his Deeds exceed all speech: He ne'er lift vp his Hand, but conquerd.

Exe. We mourne in black, why mourn we not in blood? Henry is dead, and neuer shall resuce: Vpon a Wooden Coffin we attend; And Deaths dishonourable Vicarie, We with our stately preence glorifie, Like Captivs bound to a Triumphant Carre. What? shall we curse the Planets of Mihap, That plotted thus our Glories overthrow? Or shall we thinke the subtile-witted French, Conuiered and Sorcerers, that afraid of him, By Magick Verfes haue contru'd, his end. Winch. He was a King, bleft of the King of Kings. Vnto the French, the dreadfull judgement-Day So dreadfull will not be, as was his fight. The Battallies of the Lord of Hofs he fought: The Churches Prayers made him fo prosperous.

Gloft. The Church? where is it? Had not Church-men pray'd, His thred of Life had not fo foone decay'd. None doe you like, but an effiminate Prince, Whom like a Schoole-boy you may ouer-awe.

Winch. Gloster, what ere we like, thou art Protector, And lookeft to command the Prince and Realme. Thy Wife is prov'd, she holdeth thee in awe, More then God or Religious Church-men may.

Gloft. Name not Religion, for thou lou't the Flesh, And ne're throughout the yeere to Church thou go't, Except it be to pray against thy foes.

Bed. Cease, cease theire Iarres, & reft your minds in peace: Let's to the Altar: Heralds want on vs; In stead of Gold, wee're offer vp our Armes, Since Armes auayle not, now that Henry's dead, Potterie await for wretched yeeres, When at their Mothers mitifned eyes, Babes shall suck, Our Ile be made a Nourish of falt Teares, And none but Women left to weaye the dead. Henry the Fift, thys Ghost I invocate; Prosper this Realme, keepe it from Cuill Broyles, Combat with aduerse Planets in the Heauens; A farre more glorious Starre thy Soule will make, Then Iulius Ceasar, or bright---

Enter a Messenger.

Maff. My honourable Lords, health to you all: Sad tidings bring I to you out of France, Of loffe, of slaughter, and difcomfite: Guyen, Champaigne, Rheimes, Orlance, Paris, Guyfors, Poictiers, are all quite loft.

Bedf. What say'th thou man, before dead Henry's Coarfe? Speake softly, or the loffe of those great Townes Will make him burst his Lead, and rife from death.

Gloft. Is Paris loft? is Roan yeelded vp? If Henry were recall'd to life again, These news would caufe him once more yeeld the Ghost. Exe. How were they loft? what trecherie was vs'd?

Maff. No trecherie, but want of Men and Money. Amongst the Souls this is muttered, That here you maintaine feuerall Factiones: And whil'st a Field shoold be dispatcht and fought, You are disputing of your Generals. One would have lingaring Warres, with little cost; Another would flye swift, but wanteth Wings: A third thinke's, without expence at all, By guilefull faire words, Peace may be obtaynd. Awake, a wake, English Nobilitie, Let not fouth dimme your Honors, new begot; Cropt are the Flower-de-Luces in your Armes Of Englands Coat, one halfe is cut away.

Exe. Were our Teares wanting to this Funerall, These Tidings would call forth her flowing Tides.

Bedf. Me they concern, Regent I am of France: Give me my Steele Coat, Ie fight for France. Away with these difgracefull wayling Robes; Wounds will I lend the French, in stead of Eyes, To wepe their intermifflue Miferies.
Enter them another Messengers.
Mess. Lords view these Letters,full of sad mischance.
France is revolted from the English quite,
Except some petty Townes,of no import.
The Dolphin Charles is crowned King in Rheimes:
The Bafard of Orleans with him is ioynd:
Reynold,Duke of Aniou, doth take his part,
The Duke of Alanfon flyeth to his side. Exit.
Exit. The Dolphin crownd' King, all flye to him?
O whither shall we flye from this reproch?
Gloft. We will not flye, but to our enemies throats.
Bedford,if thou be flacke, Ile fight it out,
Bird. Gloster, why doubtst thou of my forwardnesse?
An Army have I murther'd in my thoughts,
Wherewith already France is ouer-run.

Enter another Messengers.
Mess. My gracious Lords, to adore to your lamentes,
Wherewith you now bedew King Henries heare,
I must informe you of a dismall fight,
Betwixt the frowt Lord Talbot, and the French.
Win. What wherein Talbot overcame, is't so?
Mess. O no : wherein Lord Talbot was o'rethrown:
The circumference Ile tell you more at large.
The tenth of August laft, this dreadfull Lord,
Retrying from the Siege of Orleans,
Having full farrce fix thousand in his troup,
By three and twentie thousand of the French
Was round incompass'd, and fet vp on:
No leuyre had he to enranke his men.
He wanted Pikes to fet before his Archers :
In stead whereof, sharpe Stakes pluckt out of Hedges
They pitched in the ground confudely,
To keepe the Horfemen off, from breaking in.
More then three houres the fight continued :
Where valiant Talbot, aboue humane thought,
EnaGled wonders with his Sword and Lance.
Hundreds he fent to Hell, and none durft fland him:
Here, there, and every where enrag'd he fllew.
The French exclaym'd, the Deuell was in Armes,
All the whole Army fnow agaz'd on him.
His Souldiers fpying his vndaemoned Spirit,
A Talbot, a Talbot, cry'd out amaine,
And ruft into the Bowels of the Battaile.
Here had the Conqueft fully beene seal'd vp,
If Sir John Fallaffe had not play'd the Coward.
He being in the Vauward, piac't behinde,
With purpofe to relieue and follow them,
Cowardly flid, not having flruck one froke.
Hence grew the generall wrack and maffe :r
Enclose were they with their Enemies.
A base Walion, to win the Dolphins grace,
Thrust Talbot with a Speare into the Back,
Whom all France, with their chiefe affembled strength,
Durft not preuyme to looke once in the face.
Bedf. Is Talbot flaine then? I will flay my felfe,
For liuing idly here, in pompe and eafe,
Whil'st fuch a worthy Leader, wanting ayd,
Vnto his daftard foe-men is betray'd.
3. Mess. O no, he liues, but is tooke Prisoner,
And Lord Scales with him, and Lord Hungerford:
Moft of the reft fllaughter'd, or tooke likewise.
Bedf. His Ranfome there is none but I shall pay,
Ile hale the Dolphin headlong from his Throne,
His Crowne flall be the Ranfome of my friend:
Foure of their Lords Ile change for one of ours.

Farwell my Maftyrs, to my Task ye will I,
Bonfires in France forthwith I am to make,
To keepe our great Saint George Pleaf withall.
Ten thoufand Soulsiders with me I will take,
Whose bloody deeds shall make all Europe quake.
3. Mess. So you had need, for Orleance is befeg'd,
The English Army is growne weake and faint :
The Earle of Salisbury craueth supply,
And hardly keeper his men from mutinie,
Since they to few, watch such a multitude.
Exit. Remember Lords your Oathes to Henryfworne:
Eythor to quell the Dolphin vitrly,
Or bring him in obedience to your yoake.
Bedf. I do remember it, and here take my leave,
To goe about my preparation. Exit Bedford.
Gloft. Ile to the Tower with all the haft I can,
To view th' Artilerie and Munition,
And then I will proclaime young Henry King.

Exe. To Eltam will I, where the young King is,
Being ordayned his speciall Gouernour,
And for his faftie there Ile beft deuide:
Exit. Wincb. Each hath his Place and Function to attend:
I am left out ; for me nothing remains :
But long I will not be face out of Office.
The King from Eltam I intend to fende,
And fit at chieffe Sterne of publike Weale.

Exit.

Sound a flourifh.

Enter Charles, Alanfon, and Reignier, marching with Drum and Souldiers.

Charles. Mars his true mowing, even as in the Heauen,
So in the Earth,to this day is not knowne.
Late did he shine vpnon the English fide :
Now we are Victora, vp on he smiles.
What Townes of any moment, but we haue ?
At pleasure here we lye, neere Orleance :
Otherwhiles, the famifht English, like pale Ghosts,
Faintly besiege vs one houre in a moneth.
Alan. They want their Porridge, & their fat Bul Beues:
Eythor they must be dyeted like Mules,
And haue their Prouender ty'd to their mouthes,
Or pitteous they will looke, like drowned Mice.
Reignier. Let's rafle the Siege: why lie we idly here?
Talbot is taken, whom we wont to fpare :
Remayneth none but mad-braynd Salibury,
And he may well in fretting fpend his gall,
Nor men nor Money hath he to make Warre.
Charles. Sound,found Alarum, we will ruff on them.
Now for the honour of the forlorn French :
Him I forgive my death, that killeth me,
When he fes me goe back one foot, or fve. Exeunt.
Here Alarum, they are beaten back by the English,with great loss.

Enter Charles, Alanfon, and Reignier.

Charles. Who euer faw the like?what men haue I,
Doggles, Cowards, Daiftards : I would ne're haue fledd,
But that they left me midft my Enemies.
Reignier. Salibury is a deprate Homicide,
He fighteth as one weary of his life :
The other Lords, like Lyons wanting foode,
Doe ruify vpou vs as their hungry prey.

k 3Alanf. Frey...
The first Part of Henry the Sixt.

Alanjon. Freydyard, a Countryman of ours, records,
English all Others and Roundlands breed,
During the time Edward the third did reigne:
More truly now may this be verified;
For none but Samsons and Goliasses
It fendeth forth to skirmish: one to tenne;
Leane raw-bond Rascais, who would e're supposse,
They had such courage and audacitie?

"Charles. Let's leave this Towne,
For they are hayre-brayn'd Slaves.
And hunger will enforce them to be more eager:
Of old they were never rather with their Teeth
The Walls they'll bear downe, then forsake the Siege.

Reignier. I think by some odde Gimmons or Deuce
Their Armes are set, like Clockes, still to strike on;
Elfe ne're could they hold out so as they doe:
By my consent, we'll even let them alone.

Enter the Bafward of Orleans.

Dolpb. Bafward of Orleance,thrice welcome to vs.

Baf. Me thinks your looks are sad,your dear appal'd.

Hath the late outrethrow wrought this offence?
Be not dismay'd, for succour is at hand:
A holy Maid hither with me I bring,
Which by a Vision sent to her from Heauen,
Ordained is to rayfe this tedious Siege,
And drive the English forth the bounds of France:
The spirit of deepe Prophecye the hath,
Exceeding the nine Stiles of old Rome:
What's pa'd, and what's to come, the can defcry.
Speake,shall I call her in? beleue my words,
For they are certaine, and vnfallible.

Dolpb. Goe call her in: but first, to try her skill,
Reignier stand thou as Dolphin in my place;
Question her proundly, let thy Lookes be sterne,
By this meanes shall we found what skill the hath.

Enter Ioane Puel.

Reignier. Faire Maid, is't thou wilt doe these wondrous feats?
Puel. Reignier, it's thou that thinkest to beguile me?
Where is the Dolphin? Come, come from behinde,
I know thee well, though neuer seene before.
Be not amaz'd, there's nothing hid from me;
In private will I talke with thee apart:
Stand back you Lords, and give vs leave a while.

Reignier. She takes upon her bruely at first daith.
Puel. Dolphin, I am by birth a Shepheards Daughter,
My wit vntry'd in any kind of Art:
Heaven and our Lady gracious hath it pleas'd
To shine on me of my comtemprible estate.

Dolpb. Loe,whilst I wayted on my tender Lambs,
And to Sunnes parching heat dispayld my cheykes,
Goda Mother deigned to appeare to me,
And in a Vifon full of Maifeifie,
Will'd me to leaue my base Vocation,
And free my Countreys from Calamitie:
Her aye the promis'd, and afford'd successe.
In compleat Glory thee reveal'd her selfe:
And whereas I was black and swart before,
With those cleare Rays, which thee influd'd on me,
That beautie am I blest with, which you may fee.

Ask me what question thou canst possibly,
And I will answer vnpremeditated:
My Courage trie by Combat, if thou dar'ft,
And thou shalt finde that I exceed my Sex.
Refoulge on this, thou shalt be fortunate,
If thou receive me for thy Warlike Mate.

Dolpb. Thou hast adorn'd me with thy high termes:
Only this proveo Ile of thy Valour make,
In single Combat thou shalt bucke with me;
And if thou vanquishest, thy words are true,
Otherwise I renounce all confidence.

Puel. I am prepar'd: here is my keenene-edg'd Sword,
Deckt with fine Flower-de-Luces on each side,
The which at Touraine,in S.Katherine's Church-yard,
Out of a great deale of old Iron, I chofe forth.

Dolpb. Then come a Gods name, I feare no woman.
Puel. And while I live, Ile ne're flye from a man.

Here they fight, and Ioane de Puel overcomes.

Dolpb. Stay,thou thy hands, thou art an Amazon,
And fightest with the Sword of Debra.

Puel. Chrifts Mother helps me, else I was too weake.

Dolpb. Who e're helps thee, 'tis thou that must help me:
Impatiently I burne with thy desire,
My heart and hands thou haust at once fub'd.
Excellent Puel, if thy name be so,
Let me thy servant, and not Soueraigne be,
'Tis the French Dolphin suet to thee thus.

Puel. I must not yeeld to any rights of Loue,
For my Profession's sacred from above:
When I haue chas'd all thy Foes from hence,
Then will I think on a recompense.

Dolpb. Meane time looke gracious on thy prostrate Thrall.

Reignier. My Lord me thinkes is very long in talke.

Alan.] Doubtlesse he shries this woman to her smock,
Elfe ne're could he so long prostract his speech.

Reignier. Shall wee disturbe him, since hee keeps no meane?

Alan. He may meane more then we poor men do know,
Thefe women are shrewd tempters with their tongues.

Reignier. My Lord, where are you? what deuise you on?
Shall we give o're Orleance, or no?
Puel. Why no, I sye: diuersfull Recreants,
Fight till the last gaffe: Ile be your guard.

Dolpb. Whose thee sages, Ile confirme: wee'll fight it out.

Puel. Assighn'd am I to be the English Scourge.
This night the Siege assuredly Ile rayfe:
Expect Saint Martin's Summer, Halesyon days,
Since I haue entred into these Warres.
Glory is like a Circle in the Water,
Which neuer ceaseth to enlage it selfe,
Till by broad spreading, it diisperfe to naught.
With Henries death, the English Circle ends,
Dispered are the glories it included:
Now am I like that proud infulting Ship,
Which Caesar and his fortune bare at once.

Dolpb. Was Machomet inspired with a Doue?
Thou with an Eagle art inspired then.
Helen, the Mother of Great Constantin,
Nor yet S.Philips daughters were like thee.
Bright Starre of Venus, faine downe on the Earth,
How may I reuerently worship thee enough?

Alanjon. Leave off delays, and let vs rayfe the Siege.

Reignier. Wo-
Enter Gloster, with bis Serving-men.

Gloster. I am come to suruy the Tower this day;
Since Henries death, I fear there is Conveyance:
Where be these Warders, that they wait not here?
Open the Gates, this Gloster calls that.

2. Warder. Who ere he be, you may not be let in.
1. Man. Villaines, answer you to the Lord Protector?
1. Warder. The Lord protect him, fo we answer him,
We doe no other wife then wee are will'd.
Gloster. What wife you, or whose wife shall fands but mine?
There's none Protector of the Realm but I:
Breake vp the Gates, Ile be your warrantize;
Shall I be flowted thus by dunghill Groomes.

Glosters men rude at the Tower Gates, and Wooduile the Lieutenant breaks within.

Wooduile. What noyfe is this? what Traytors haue wee here?
Gloster. Lieutenant, is it you whom voyce I heare?
Open the Gates, here's Gloster that would enter.

Wooduile. Haue patience Noble Duke, I may not open
The Cardinall of Winchefter forbi'd:
From him I haue expreff commandement,
That thou nor none of thine shall be let in.
Gloster. Faint-hearted Wooduile, prizeth him fore me?
Arrogant Winchefter, that haughty Prelate,
Whom Henrie our late Soveraigne ne're could brooke?
Thou art no friend to God, or to the King:
Open the Gates, or Ile shut thee out shortly.

Serving-men. Open the Gates vnto the Lord Protecor,
Or wee'le burth them open, if that you come not quickly.

Enter to the Protecor at the Tower Gates, Winchefter and his men in Tawney Coates.

Winchefer. How now ambitious Vmpeir, what means this?
Gloster. Piel'd Priest, don't thou command me to be shut out?

Winchefer. I doe, thou mot vfurping Proctor,
And not Protecor of the King or Realme.

Gloster. Stand back thou manifest Conspirator,
Thou that contrived't to murder our dead Lord,
Thou that giu'ft Whores Indulgence to finde,
Ile canuas thee in thy broad Cardinalls Hat,
If thou proceed in this thy inofience.

Winchefer. Nay, stand thou back, I will not budge a foot:
This be Damauces, be thou curfed Cain,
To flay thy Brother Abel, if thou wilt.

Gloster. I will not flay thee, but Ile drive thee back:
Thy Scarlet Robes, as a Childs bearing Cloth,
Ile vfe, to carry thee out of this place.

Winchefer. Doe what thou dar'ft, I beard thee to thy face.

Gloster. What? am I dar'd, and bearded to my face?
Draw men, for all this priviledged place,
Blew Coats to Tawney Coats. Priel, beware your Beard,
I meaune to tugge it, and to cuffe you foundly.
Vnder my feet I stampe thy Cardinalls Hat:

In spight of Pope, or dignities of Church,
Here by the Cheekes Ile drag thee vp and downe.

Winchefer. Gloster, thou wilt anfwere this before the Pope.

Gloster. Winchefer Goofe, I cry, a Rope, a Rope.
Now beat them hence, why doe you let them flay?
Their Ile chafe hence, thou Wolfe in Sheepes array.
Out Tawney Coates, out Scarlet Hypocrize.

Here Glosters men beat out the Cardinalls men, and enter in the burly-burly the Maior
of London, and bis Officers

Maior. Fye Lords, that you being supreme Magistrates,
Thus contumeliously should breake the Peace.
Gloster. Peace Maior, thou know'st little of my wrongs:
Here's Beauford, that regards nor God nor King,
Hath here diftrayn'd the Tower to his wfe.

Winchefer. Fye Gloster, a Foe to Citizens,
One that fill motions Warre, and newer Peace,
O're-charging your free Purfes with large Fines;
That seekes to overthrow Religion,
Because he is Protecor of the Realme;
And would have Armour here out of the Tower,
To Crowne himfelfe King, and suppresse the Prince.

Gloster. I will not anfwere thee with words, but blowes,
Here they shrift heat againe.

Maior. Naught reft for me, in this tumultuous stiffe,
But to make open Proclamation.

Come Officer, as low as e're thou canst, cry:
All manner of men, assembled here in Armes this day, againft Gods Peace and the Kings, we charge and command you,
in his Highnes Name, to repaire to your feueller dwelling places, and not to weare, handle, or wife any Sword, Weapon, or Dagger hence-forward, vpon paine of death.

Gloster. Cardinall, Ile be no breaker of the Law:
But we shall meet, and breake our minds at large.

Winchefer. Gloster, wee'le meet to thy-cof, be fue:
Thy heart-blood I will haue for this dayes worke.

Maior. Ie call for Clubs, if you will not away:
This Cardinall's more haughtie then the Deuill.

Gloster. Maior farewell: thou doo'ft but what thou may'ft.

Winchefer. Abominable Gloster, guard thy Head,
For I intend to haue it ere long.

Exeunt.

Maior. See the Coaf clear'd, and then we will depart.
Good God, these Nobles shoulde such stomacks beare,
I my selfe fight not once in fortie yeere.

Exeunt.

Enter the Master Gunner of Orleanc, and bis Boy.

M.Gunner. Sirrha, thou know'st how Orleanc is befeg'd,
And how the English have the Suburbs wonne.

Boy. Father I know, and oft haue shot at them,
How e're vnfortunate, I mis'd my ayme.

M.Gunner. But now thou shalt not. Be thou rul'd by me:
Chiefie Master Gunner am I of this Towne,
Something I must doe to procure me grace:
The Princes efpyals have inform'd me,
How the English, in the Suburbs clofe entrencht,
Went through a secret Grate of Iron Barres,
In yonder Tower, to ouer-peere the Cite,
And thence difcouer, how with most advantage
They may vex vs with Shot or with Affault.
To intercept this inconuenience,
A Peeece of Orinance 'gainft I haue plac'd,

And
And even these three dayes haue I watcht,
If I could see them. Now doe I watch,
For I can stay no longer.
And thou shalt finde me at the Governors.

Boy. Father, I warrant you, take you no care,
Ile neuer trouble you, if I may fyee them.

Enter Salisbury and Talbot on the Turrets, with others.

Salib. Talbot, my life, my joy, again return'd? How went thou handled, being Prisoner? Or by what meanes got's thou to be releas'd? Discourfe I prethee on this Turrets top.

Talbot. The Earl of Bedford had a Prisoner,
Call'd the brave Lord Ponton de Santrayle,
For him was I exchange'd, and ranfom'd. But with a bafer man of Armes by farre,
Once in contempst they would have barter'd me:
Which I dafing'd, scorn'd, and craued death,
Rather then I would be fo pil'd eftc'm:
In fine, redeem'd I was as I defir'd.
But O, the trecherous Talbaff wounds my heart,
Whom with my bare fifts I would execute,
If I now had him brought into my power.

Salib. Yet tell'st thou not, how thou wert enter-d'.

Tal. With coffes and scornes, and contumelious taunts,
In open Market-place produc't thee me,
To be a publique spectacle to all:
Here, fay'd they, is the Terror of the French,
The Scar-Crow that affrights our Children fo.
Then broke I from the Officers that led me,
And with my nails digg'd ftones out of the ground,
To hurle at the behouders of my fame.
My grify countenance made others fye,
None durft come neere, for feare of fuddaine death.
In Iron Walls they deem'd me not fecure:
So great feare of my Name mongt them were spread,
That they fuppof'd I could rend Barres of Steele,
And fparne in pieces Posts of Adamat.
Wherefore a guard of choften Shot I had,
That walkt about me every Minute while:
And if I did but flirre out of my Bed,
Ready they were to flooit me to the heart.

Salib. I grudge to heare what torments you endur'd,
But we will be reueng'd sufficiently.
Now it is Supper time in Orleanc:
Here, through this Grate, I count each one,
And view the Frenchmen how they fortie:
Let vs looke in, the fight will much delight thee:
Sir Thomas Gargraue, and Sir William Glantdale,
Let me have your expreffes opinions,
Where is bett place to make our Batt'ry next?

Gargraue. I thinke at the North Gate, for there stands Lords.

Glantdale. And I heere, at the Bulwarkke of the Bridge.

Talb. For ought I fee, this Citie must be fambifh,
Or with light Skirmifhes enfeebled. Here they flot, and Salibury falls downe.

Salib. O Lord haue mercy on vs, wretched finners.
Gargraue. O Lord haue mercy on me, woful man.

Talb. What chance is this, that suddenely hath croft vs?
Spake Salisbury; at leaft, if thou canst, speake:

How far't thou, Mirror of all Martiaall men?
One of thy Eyes, and thy Cheeckes side fruck off?
Accurfed Tower, accurfed faltall Hand,
That hath contri'd this wofull Tragedie.
In thirteene Battalies, Salibury o'recame:
Henry the Fift he firft tran'y'd to the Wares.
Whil'st any Trumpe did found, or Drum fluck vp,
His Sword did ne're leave strik'ng in the field.
Yet liu'th thou Salibury? though thy speech doth fayle,
One Eye thou haft to looke to Heaven for grace.

O're the Sunne with one Eye vieweth all the World.
Heauen be thou gracious to none alioe,
If Salibury wants mercy at thy hands.
Bears hence his Body, I will help to bury it.
Sir Thomas Gargraue, haft thou any life?
Spake vnto Talbot, nay, looke vp to him.
Salibury cheere thy Spirit with this comfort,
Thou shalt not dye whiles——
He beckens with his hand, and smiles on me:
As who should fay, When I am dead and gone,
Remember to auenge me on the French.

Plantaginet I will, and like their enemys,
Play on the Lute, beholding the Townes burne:
Wretched tell France be oney in my Name.

Here an Alarum, and it Thunder and Lightens.
What firre is this? what tumult's in the Heauens?
Whence commeth this Alarum, and the noyfe?

Enter a Meflenger.

Meff. My Lord, my Lord, the French haue gather'd head.
The Dolphin, with one Ioane de pulver ioyn'd,
A holy Prophete, new rifen vp,
Is come with a great Power, to rayfe the Siege.

Here Salibury lifteth bimselfe vp, and groanes.

Talb. Heare, heare, how dying Salibury doth groane,
It irkes his heart he cannot be reueng'd.
Frenchmen, Ile be a Salibury to you.
Pusell or Puffell, Dolphin or Dog-fifth,
Your hearts lie flante out with my Horfes heelees,
And make a Quagmire of your mingles brains.
Conuey me Salibury into his Tent,
And then we'll try what these daffard Frenchmen dare.

Alarum. Exeunt.

Here an Alarum againe, and Talbot purfuetb the Dolphin, and drivetb him: Then enter Ioane de Pusell,
Driving Englandmen before her.
Then enter Talbot.

Talb. Where is my strength, my valour, and my force?
Our English Troupes retreye, I cannot stay them,
A Woman clad in Armour chafeth them.

Enter Panel.

Here, here thee comes. Ile haue a bows with thee:
Deuill, or Deuils Dam, Ile conuie thee:
Blood will I draw on thee, thou art a Witch,
And fraught rayue thee Soule to him thou feru'lt.

Pusell. Come, come, 'tis only I that must disgrace thee.

Here they fight.

Talb. Heauens, can you suffer Hell fo to preuyle?
My brente Ile burnt with draining of my courage,
And from my shoulders crack my Armes afunder,
But I will chaffe this high-minded Strumpet.

They fight againe.

Panel. Talbot farwell, thy houre is not yet come,
I must goe Virtuall Orleanc forthwith:
A short Alarum: then enter the Towne with Souldiers.
O’re-take me if thou canst, I scorn thy strength.
Goe, goe, charie vp thy hungry-starved men,
Help Salibury to make his Testament,
This Day is ours, as many more shall be.
Exit.
Talk. My thoughts are whirled like a Potters Wheele,
I know not where I am, nor what I doe:
A Witch by feare, not force, like Hannibal,
Drives back our troupe, and conquers as the lift:
So Bees with sfoake, and Doues with noyfome stench,
Are from their Huyes and Houfes driven away.
They call’d vs, for our fircenefee, English Dogges,
Now like to Whelpes, we crying runne away,
A short Alarum.
Hearde Countreymen, eyther renew the fight,
Or teare the Lyons out of Englands Coat;
Renounce your Soyle, giue Sheepe in Lyons stead:
Sheepe run not halfe fo texherous from the Wolfe,
Or Horfe or Oxen from the Leopard,
As you fye from your oft-fubduef daues.
Alarum. Here another Skirmifh.
It will not be, retyre into your Trenches:
You all confented unto Saliburies death,
For none would strike a froke in his reigne.
Psas is entred into Orleans,
In fpite of vs, or ought that we could doe.
O would I were to dye with Salibury,
The flame hereof, will make me hide my head.
Exit Talbot.
Alarum, Retreat, Flourifh.
Enter on the Walls, Psasel, Dolphin, Reigneir,
Alafon, and Soldiors.
Psasel. Advance our waung Colours on the Walls,
Refc’d is Orleans from the English.
Thus Ioane de Psasel hath perform’d her word.
Dolph. Diuineft Creature, Africa’s Daughter,
How shall I honour thee for this successe?
Thy promifes are like Alons Garden,
That one day bloom’d, and fruitfull were the next.
France, triumph in thy glorious Fuccesfes,
Recover’d is the Towne of Orleans,
More blifhed hap did ne’re befal our State.
Reigneir. Why ring not out the Bells alowd,
Throughout the Towne?
Dolphin command the Citizens make Bonfires,
And feaf and banquet in the open streets,
To celebrate the ioy that God hath gien vs.
Alafon. All France will be replaet with mirth and ioy,
When they shal hear how we haue play’d the men.
Dolph. ‘Tis Ioane, not we, by whom the day is wonne:
For which, I will divide my Crowne with her,
And all the Priests and Fryers in my Realme,
Shall in procifion fing her endless praye.
A flatelayer Pyramis to her Ile reare,
Then Rhodopbes or Memphis ever was.
In memorie of her, when she is dead,
Her Afhes, in an Urne moore precious
Then the rich-iwel’d Coffer of Darinus,
Transported, fhal be at high Feliftuals
Before the Kings and Queenses of France.
No longer on Saint Dennis will we cry,
But Ioane de Psasel fhal be France’s Saint.
Come in, and let vs Banquet Royally,
After this Golden Day of Vtoria.
Flourifh. Exeunt.

Aétus Secundus. Scena Prima.
Enter a Sergeant of a Band, with two Sentinels.
Ser. Sirs, take your places, and be vigilant:
If any noyfe or Souldier you perceive
Neere to the walles, by some apparant figne
Let vs haue knowledge at the Court of Guard.
Sent. Sergeant you fhall. Thus are poore Servitors
(When others sleepe vpon their quiet beds)
Contrain’d to watch in darkneffe, rains, and cold.
Enter Talbot, Bedford, and Burgundy, with scaling Ladders: Their Drummers beating a
Dead March.
Tal. Lord Regent, and redoubtled Burgundy,
By whose approach, the Regions of Arteys;
Wallon, and Pecard, are friends to vs:
This happy night, the Frenchmen are secure,
Having all day carows’d and banquetted,
Embrace we then this opportunite,
As fitting left to quittance their deceite,
Contrib’d by Art, and halefull Sorcerie.
Bed. Coward of France, how much he wrongs his fame,
Difpairing of his owne armes fortitude,
To ioyne with Witches, and the helpe of Hell.
Bur. Traitors have neuer other company.
But what’s that Psasell whom they tearme fo pure?
Tal. A Maid, they fay.
Bed. A Maid? And be fo martiall?
Bur. Pray God the proue not malculine ere long:
If vnderneath the Standard of the French
She carrie Armour, as the hath begun.
Tal. Well, let them praflife and conuerfe with spirits.
God is our Fortrefse, in whose conquering name
Let vs refolve to fcale their flinty bulwarkes.
Bed. Ascend braue Talbot, we will follow thee.
Tal. Not altogether: Better farre I guffe,
That we do make our entrance feurall wayes:
That if it chance the one of vs do faile,
The other yet may rife againft their force.
Bed. Agreed; I le to yond corner.
Bur. And I to this.
Tal. And heere will Talbot mount, or make his graue.
Now Salibury, for thee and for the right
Of English Henry, fhall this night appeare
How much in duty, I am bound to both.
Sent. Arme, arme, the enemy doth make affault.
Cry, S. George, A Talbot.

The French leape ore the walles in their fhirles. Enter  ouerall wayes, Basfard, Alafon, Reigneir, baftle ready, and baftle unready.
Alafon. How now my Lords? what all vnreadie fo?
Bauf. Unreadie! I and glad we fcap’d fo well.
Reiç. ‘Twas time (I thow) to wake and leave our beds,
Hearing Alarums at our Chamber doores.
Alafon. Of all exploits since firt I follow’d Armes,
Nere heard I of a warlike enterprise

More
More venturous, or desperate then this.

_Bedf. I think this Talbot be a Fiend of Hell._

_Rag. If not of Hell, the Heavens sure fav'ur him._

_Alanf. Here commeth Charles, I maruell how he sped._

Enter Charles and Joané.

_Bedf. Tut, holy Joané was his defence Guard._

_Charl. Is this thy cunning, thou deceitfull Dame?_ Is didth thou at first, to flatter vs withall,

_Make vs partakers of a little gayne, That now our loffe might be ten times so much?_ Joané. Wherefore is Charles impatient with his friend? At all times will you have my Power alike.

_Sleeping or waking, mift I still preuayle, Or will you blame and lay the fault on me?_ Improvident Soul'diers, had your Watch been good, This sudden Michifie neuer could haue faile.

_CHARL. Duke of Alanfon, this was your default, That being Captaine of the Watch to Night, Did looke no better to that weightie Charge._

_Alanf. Had all your Quarters been as safely kept, As that whereof I had the government, We had not beene thus shamefully surpriz'd._

_Bedf. Mine was secure._

_Rag. And so was mine, my Lord._

_Charl. And for my felo, most part of all this Night Within her Quarter, and mine owne Precinft, I was imploy'd in paffing to and fro,

About relucising of the Centinels. Then how, or which way, should they first brake in? Joané. Question (my Lords) no further of the cafe, How or which way; 'tis faire they found some place, But weakely guarded, where the breach was made: And now there refts no other shift but this, To gather our Soul'diers, lattier'd and dispier't, And lay new Flat-formes to endammage them.

Enter Talbot, Bed ford, Burgundie.

_Bedf. The Day begins to brake, and Night is fled, Whole pitchy Mantle ouer-vayl'd the Earth._

Here found Retreat, and cesse our hot pursuit. Retreat. _Talb._ Bring forth the Body of old Talbbury, And here advance it in the Market-Place, The middle Centoure of this cursed Towne. Now hauing your Vow vnto his Soule; For every drop of blood was drawnne from him, There hath at leaft five Frenchmen dyed to night. And that hereafter Ages may behold

What ruine happened in revenge of him, Within their chiefeft Temple Ie ereft

_A Tombe, wherein his Corps shall be inter'd:_ Upon the which, that every one may reade, Shall be engrau'd the face of Orleance, The trecherous manner of his mournefull death, And what a terror he had beene to France. But Lords, in all our bloody Massacre, I mufe we met not with the Dolphins Grace,

His new-comme Champion, vertuous Joané of Acre, Nor any of his faile Confederates.

_Bedf. 'Tis thought Lord Talbot, when the fight began, Rows'd on the sudden from their drowzifie Beds, They did amongst the troupes of armed men, Leape o're the Walls for refuge in the field._

_Burg. My felo, as farre as I could well discerne, For smoake, and duskie vapours of the night, Am sure I fear'd the Dolphin and his Trulli,_ When Arme in Arme they both came swiftly running, Like to a payre of lodging Turtle-Douces, _That could not liue afunder day or night. After that things are set in order here, Wee'le follow them with all the power we haue._

Enter a Messenger.

_Mess. All hayle, my Lordswich of this Princely trayne Call ye the Warlike Talbot, for his Acts So much applauded through the Realme of France?_

_Talb. Here is the Talbot, who would speak with him?_

_Mess. The vertuous Lady, Countesse of Ouergne, With modeftie admiring thy Renowne, By me entreats (great Lord) thou wouldst vouchsafe To visit her poore Castle where she lyes, That the may boast the hath beheld the man, Whose glory fills the World with high report._

_Burg. Is it even fo? Nay, then I fee our Warres Will turne vnto a peacefull Comicke sport, When Ladies crate to be encountered with. You may not (my Lord) despise her gentle suit._

_Talb. Ne're tru'th me then: for when a World of men Could not preuayle with all their Oratorie, Yet hath a Womans kindnese ouer-ru'd: And therefore tell her, I returne great thankes, And in submiffion will attend on her._

_Will not your Honors bearre me company?_

_Bedf. No, truly, 'tis more then manners will: And I have heard it sayd, Unbidden Guests Are often welcomme when they are gone._

_Talb. Well then, alone (since there's no remedie) I meane to proue this Ladies courtifie._

Come hither Captaine, you perceive my minde.

_Capt. I doe my Lord, and meane accordingly._

Enter Countesse.

_Count. Porter,remember what I gaue in charge, And when you haue done so, bring the Keyes to me._

_Port. Madame, I will._

_Exit. Count. The Plot is layd, if all things fall out right, I shall as famous be by this exploit, As Scythian Tomyra by Cyrus death._

_Great is the rumour of this dreadful Knight, And his achivements of no leffe account: Faine would mine eyes be wisniffe with mine eares, To gue their cenure of these rare reports._

Enter Messenger and Talbot.

_Mess. Madame, according as your Ladyship desir'd, By Messeage crau'd, so is Lord Talbot come._

_Count. And he is welcome: what? this the man?_

_Mess. Madame, it is._

_Count. Is this the Scourge of France? Is this the Talbot, so much fear'd abroad? That with his Name the Mothers still their Babes? I fee Report is fabulous and faile._
I thought I should have seen some Hercules,
A second Hector, for his grim aspect,
And large proportion of his strong knit Limbs.
Alas, this is a Child, a silly Dwarf:
It cannot be, this weasek and wrinkled skinrose
Should strike such terror to his Enemies.

_Talk._ Madame, I have beene bold to trouble you:
But since your Ladyship is not at leyure,
Ile for some other time to visit you.
_Contr._ What means he now?
Goe ask him, whathehe goes?
_Maj._ Stay my Lord Talbot, for my Lady craves,
To know the cause of your abrupt Departure?
_Talk._ Marry, for that there's in a wrong beleefe,
I goe to certifie her Talbot's here.

_Enter Porter with Keys._
_Contr._ If thou be he, then art thou Prifoner.
_Talk._ Prifoner? to whom?
_Contr._ To me, blood-thirstie Lord:
And for that cause I trayn'd thee to my House.
Long time thy shadow hath beene thrall to me,
For in my Gallery thy Picture hangs:
But now the subsidence shall endure the like,
And I will chayne theege Legges and Armes of thine,
That have by Tyrannie these many yeeres
Wasted our Country, flaine our Citizens,
And fent our Sonsnes and Husbands captivate.
_Talk._ Ha, ha, ha.
_Contr._ Laughnot thou Wretch?
Thy mirth shall turne to moane.
_Talk._ I laugh to see your Ladyship so fond,
To thinke, that you have ought but Talbot's shadow,
Whereon to pratifie your feuerie.
_Contr._ Why? art not thou the man?
_Talk._ I am indeed.
_Contr._ Then haue I subsidence too.
_Talk._ No, no, I am but shadow of my selfe:
You are deceu'd, my subsidence is not here;
For what you see, is but the smalllest part,
And least proportion of Humanitie:
I tell you Madame, were the whole Frame here,
It is of such a spacie lofifie pitch,
Your Roofe were not sufficient to contain't.
_Contr._ This is a Riddling Merchant for the nonce,
He will be here, and yet he is not here:
How can thee contrarieties agree?
_Talk._ That will I shew you presently.

_Winds bore._
_Words._
_How say you Madame? are you now perfwaded,
That Talbot is but shadow of himselfe?
These are his subsidence, fine eyes, armes, and strength,
With which he vosketh your rebellious Neckes,
Razeth your Cities, and subuerets your Townes,
And in a moment makes them defolate.

_Contr._ Victorious Talbot, pardon my abufe,
I finde thou art no leafe then Fame hath bruited,
And more then may be gathered by thy shape.
Let my prejumption not prouoke thy wrath,
For I am forry, that with reverence
I did not entertaine thee as thou art.
_Talk._ Be not difmay'd, faire Lady, nor misconfuter
The minde of Talbot, as you did misake
The outward composition of his body,
What you have done, hath not offended me:
Nor other satisfaction doe I crave,

But onely with your patience, that we may
Taffe of your Wine, and see what Cates you haue,
For Souldiers tromacks always ferue them well.

_Contr._ With all my heart, and thinke me honored,
To feast fo great a Warrior in my House.

Enter Richard Plantagenet, Warwick, Somerset, Poole, and others.

_York._ Great Lords and Gentlemen,
What means this silence?
Dare no man anwer in a Case of Truth?
_Suff._ Within the Temple Hall we were too lowd,
The Garden here is more convenient.

_York._ Then say at once, if I maintaine the Truth:
Or else was wrangling Somerset in the error?
_Suff._ Faith I have bene a Trauant in the Law,
And neuer yet could frame my will to it,
And therefore frame the Law unto my will.

_Som._ Judge you, my Lord of Warwick, then betweene vs.

_War._ Between two Hawks, which flies the higher pitch,
Between two Dogs, which hath the deeper mouth,
Between two Blades, which bears the better temper,
Between two Horses, which doth bear him best,
Between two Girles, which hath the merriest eye,
I have perhaps some shalfe spirit of Judgement:
But in these nice sharpe Quillets of the Law,
Good Faith I am no wiser then a Daw.

_York._ Tut, tut, here is a mannerly forbearance:
The truth appears fo naked on my side,
That any purblind eye may find it out.

_Som._ And on my side it is so well apparrell'd,
So clear, so shining, and so evident,
That it will glimmer through a blind-mans eye.

_York._ Since you are tongue-ty'd, and so loth to speake,
In dumble significants proclaimye your thoughts:
Let him that is a true-borne Gentleman,
And stands uppon the honor of his birth,
If he supposse that I have pleaded truth,
From off this Bryer pluck a white Rose with me.

_Som._ Let him that is no Coward, nor no Flatterer,
But dare maintaine the partie of the truth,
Pluck a red Rose from off this Thorne with me.

_War._ I loue no Colours: and without all colour
Of base infrinuating flatterie,
I pluck this white Rose with Plantagenet.

_Suff._ I pluck this red Rose, with young Somerset,
And say withall, I thinkhe he held the right.

_Vern._ Stay Lords and Gentlemen, and pluck no more
Till you conclude, that he uppon whole side
The fewest Roses are cropt from the Tree,
Shall yeeld the other in the right opinion.

_Som._ Good Master Vern._, it is well obiecte:
If I haue fewest, I subcribe in silence.

_York._ And I.

_Vern._ Then for the truth, and plainesse of the Case,
I pluck this pale and Maiden Blossome here,
Giuing my Verdict on the white Rose side.

_Som._ Prick not your finger as you pluck it off,
Least blessing you doe paint the white Rose red,
And fall on my side fo against your will.

_Vern._ If my Lord, for my opinion bleed,
Opinion shall be Surgeon to my hurt,
And keepe me on the side where still I am.

_Som._ Well, well, come on, who else?

_Lawyer._

491
The first Part of Henry the Sixt.

Lawyer. Vnleffe my Studie and my Bookes be false,
The argument you held, was wrong in you;
Inigne whereof, I pluck a white Rose too.

York. Meane time your cheeks do counterfeit our Roes:
For pale they looke with fear, as withneffing
The truth on our side.

Som. No Planagenet:
'Tis not for feare, but anger, that thy checkes
Blush for pure shame, to counterfeit our Roes,
And yet thy tongue will not confesse thy error.

York. Hath not thy Rofe a Thorne, Planagenet?
York. I, flarpe and piercing to maintain his truth,
Whiles thy confumming Canker eates his falsehood.

Som. Well, Ile find friends to weare my bleeding Roes,
That shall maintaine what I haue faid is true,
Whereas Planagenet dare not be feene.

York. Now by this Maiden Blossome in my hand,
I fcorne thee and thy fasion, peuffe Boy.

Suff. Turne not thy fcorne this way, Planagenet.
York. Proud Poole, I will, and fcorne both him and then.

Suff. Ile turne my part thereof into thy throat.

Som. Away, away, good William de la Poole,
We grace the Yeoman, by converuing with him.

Warm. Now by Gods will thou wrong him, Somerford:
His Grandfather was Lynel Duke of Clarence,
Third Sonne to the third Edward King of England:
Spring Creffleffe Yeomen from fo depe a Root?

York. He beares him on the places Priuledge,
Or durft not for his crauen heart lay thus.
Som. By him that the Rofe, Ile maintaine my words
On any Plot of Ground in Christendome,
Was not thy Father, Richard, Earl of Cambridge,
For Trefon executed in our late Kings dayes?
And by his Trefon, ftrand't not thou attained,
Corrupted, and exempt from ancient Gentry?
His Trefpas yet liues guiltie in thy blood,
And till thou beftor'd, thou art a Yeoman.

York. My Father was attatched, not attainted,
Condemned to dye for Trefon, but no Tratyor;
And that Ie prove on better men then Somerford;
Were growing time once ripened to my will.
For your partaker Poole, and you your selfe,
Ile note you in my Booke of Memorye,
To scourge you for this apprehension:
Looke to it well, and fay you are well warn'd.

Som. Ah, thou shalt finde vs ready for thee fyll:
And know vs by these Colours for thy Foes,
For thafe, my friends in fpithe of thee shall bare.

York. And by my Soule, this pale and angry Rose,
As Cognizance of my blood-drinking hate,
Will I for ever, and my Facion ware,
Vnntill it wither with me to my Graue,
Or flourith to the height of my Degree.

Suff. Goe forward, and be chosk'd with thy ambition:
And to farwell, vnntill I meet thee next.

Som. Haue with thee Poole: Farwelle ambitious Richard.

York. How I am braud', and must perfforce endure it?
Warm. This blot that they obiect against your Houfe,
Shall be whipt out in the next Parliament,

Call'd for the Truce of Winchester and Gloucefter:
And if thou be not then created York,
I will not live to be accounted Warwick.
Meane time, in signall of my love to thee,
Againft proud Somerford, and William Poole,
Will I upon thy partie weare this Rose.
And here I prophesie: this brawlie to day,
Growne to this faction in the Temple Garden,
Shall fend between the Red-Rofe and the White, A thousand Soules to Death and deadly Night.

York. Good Mafter Vernon, I am bound to you,
That you on my behalfe would pluck a Flower.
Ver. In your behalfe still will I weare the fame.

Lawyer. And fo will I.
York. Thankes gentle.
Come, let vs four to Dinner: I dare fay,
This Quarrell will drinke Blood another day.

Exeunt.

Enter Mortimer, brought in a Chayre, and Taylor.

Mort. Kind Keepers of my weake decaying Age;
Let dying Mortimer here reft himfelfe.
Euen like a man now haled from the Wrack,
So fare my Limbes with long Imperioment:
And thefe gray Locks, the Purfuiuants of death,
Nefle-like aged, in an Age of Care,
Argue the end of Edmund Mortimer.

Thefe Eyes, like Lampes, whose wafting Oyle is spent,
Waxe dimme, as drawing to their Exigent.
Weake Shoulders, over-born with burthening Griefe,
And pych-leffe Armes, like to a withered Vine,
That droups his fappe-leffe Branches to the ground.
Yet are thefe Feet, whose strength-leffe flay is numme,
(Unable to support this Lumpe of Clay)
Swift-winged with defire to get a Graue,
As witting I no other comfort haue.

But tell me, Keeper, will my Nephew come?

Keeper. Richard Planagenet, my Lord, will come:
We fent vnto the Temple, vnto his Chamber,
And anfwver was return'd, that he will come.

Mort. Enough: my Soule shall then be fatisfi'd.

Poore Gentleman, his wrong doth equall mine.
Since Henry Mommouth firft began to reigne,
Before whole Glory I was great in Armes,
This laoffhorne fequeftration haue I had;
And even fince then, hath Richard beene obfcur'd,
Depriu'd of Honor and Inheritance.
But now, the Arbitrator of Deputies,
Juft Death, kinde Vmpire of mens miferies,
With sweete enlargement doth difmifse me hence:
I would his troubles likewise were expir'd,
That so he might recover what was loft.

Enter Richard.

Keeper. My Lord, your louing Nephew now is come.

Mort. Richard Planagenet, my friend, is he come?

Rich. I, Noble Vnkle, thus ignobly vs'd,
Your Nephew, late defpifed Richard, comes.

Mort. Direft mine Armes, I may embrace his Neck,
And in his Bofome spend my latter gaine.
Oh tell me when my Lippes doe touch his Checkes,
That I may kindely give one faining Kiffe.
And now declare sweet Stem from Yorkes great Stock,
Why didst thou fay of late thou wert defpis'd?

Rich. Firft
The first Part of Henry the Sixth.

Ric. First, I am thine aged Back against mine Arme, And in that easie, Ile tell thee my Dileafe. This day in argument upon a Cafe, Some words there grew twixt Somerset and me: Among which tearsmes, he voul'd haue been tongue, And did vpbrayd me with my Fathers death; Which obloque fet barres before my tongue, Else with the like I had requited him. Therefore good Vnckle, for my Fathers fake, In honor of a true Plantagenet, And for Alliance fake, declare the cause My Father, Earl of Cambridge, loft his Head. Mort. That cause faire Nephew that imprisond me, And hath detayned me all my flowring Youth, Within a loathfome Dungeon, there to pyne, Was curfe Instrument of his deceale. Rich. Difcouer more at large what cause that was, For I am ignorant, and cannot gueffe. Mort. I will, if that my faying breath permit, And Death approach not, ere my Tale be done. Henry the Fourth, Grandfather to this King, Depo'd his Nephew Richard, Edward's Sonne, The first begotten, and the lawfull Heire Of Edward King, the Third of that Defcent. During whol Reigne, the Perche of the North, Finding his Vifiruation mofl vnuit, Endeavoured my advancement to the Throne. The reason mou'd that Warlike Lords to this, Was, for that youg Richard thus remou'd, Leaving no Heire begotten (of his Body) I was the next by Birth and Parentage: For by my Mother, I derived am From Lionel Duke of Clarence, third Sonne To King Edward the Third; whereas hee, From John of Gaunt doth bring his Pedegree, Being but fourth of that Heroicke Lyne. But marke: as in this haughtie great attempt, They laboured, to plant the rightfull Heire, I loft my Libertie, and they their Lyues. Long after this, when Henry the Fift (Succeeding his Father Bullingbrooke) did reigne; Thy Father, Earl of Cambridge, then deriu'd From famous Edmund Langley, Duke of Yorke, Marrying my Sifter, that thy Mother was: Againe, in pitty of my hard direffe, Leued an Army, weening to redeeme, And haue instaill'd me in the Diademe: But as the ref, fo fell that Noble Earle, And was beheaded. Thus the Mortimers, In whom the Title refiret, were fuppref't. Ricb. Of which, my Lord, your Honor is the laft. Mort. True: and thou feefft, that I no iffe have, And that my fainting words doe warrant death: Thou art my Heire the ref, I wish thee gather: But yet be wary in thy fudious care. Rich. Thy graue admonifhments preuyale with me: But yet me thinkes, my Fathers execution Was nothing leffe then bloody Tyranny. Mort. With silence, Nephew, be thou politick, Strong fixed is the Houfe of Lancife, And like a Mountaine, not to be remou'd. But now thy Vnckle is remouing hence, As Princes doe their Courts, when they are cloy'd With long continuance in a fetted place. Rich. O Vnckle, would some part of my young yeeres Might but redeeme the paffage of your Age.

Mort. Thou don't then wrong me, as I slaughtereth doth, Which gieuteth many Wounds, when one will kill. Mournes not, except thou forrow for my good, Onely gieue order for my Funerall. And to fare well, and fare be all thy hopes, And prosper be thy life in Peace and Warre. Dyett. Ricb. And Peace, no Warre, befall thy parting Soule. In Prifon haft thou spent a Pilgrimage, And like a Hermite over-paft thy daies. Well, I will locke his Counsell in my Breaf, And what I doe imagine, let that reff. Keepers conuey him hence, and I my felfe Will fee his Buryall better then his Life. Exit. Here dyes the duisse Torch of Mortimer, Choakt with Ambition of the meaner fort, And for tho's Wro'th, tho's bitter Injuries, Which Somerset hath offer'd to my Houfe, I doubt not, but with Honor to redefire. And therefore haft I to the Parliament, Eyster to be refored to my Blood, Or make my will th'aduantage of my good. Exit.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Flourieb. Enter King, Exeter, Glofer, Winchefer, Warwick, Somerset, Suffolk, Richard Plantagenet. Glofer offer's to put up a Bill. Winchefer snatches it, tears it. Wincb. Com'th thou with deep premeditated Linces? With written Pamphlets, fuddenly deus'd? Hamfrey of Glofer, if thou canft pulle, Or ought intend'd to lay vnto my charge, Doe it without inuention, suddenly, As I with sudden, and extemporal speech, Purpofe to anfwer what thou canft obiect. Glo. Prefumptuous Priest, this place conmands my patiere, Or thou shoul'd finde thou haft dis-honor'd me. Thine notke, although in Writing I preferv'd The manner of thy vile outrageous Crymes, That therefore I haue forg'd, or am not able Verbatim to reheafe the Method of my Penne. No Prelate, fuch is thy audacious wickedneffe, Thy lewd, pestiferaus, and dilinentes prances, As very Infants prattle of thy pride, Thou art a moft perniciouf Vifuer, Froward by nature, Enemye to Peace, Lajfluous, wanton, more then well beceeems A man of thy Profeflion, and Degree. And for thy Trecherie, what is more manifeft? In that thou lay'dft a Trap to take my Life, As well at London Bridge, as at the Tower. Before, I feare me, if thy thoughts were fillted, The King, thy Soueraigne, is not quite exempt From eneous malice of thy swelling heart. Wincheb. Glofer, I doe defie thee. Lords vouchfafe To give me hearing what I full reply. If I were couteous, ambitious, or peruerse, As he will haue me: how am I fo poore? Or how haps it, I feeke not to aduance Or rayse my felle: but keeppe my wonted Calling. And for Diffention, who preferreth Peace More then I doe? except I be prou'd. No, my good Lords, it is not that offends, It is not that, that hath incens'd the Duke: It is becaufe no one should way but her, No one, but hee, should be about the King; And that engenders Thunder in his breath.
And makes him roar these Accusations forth.
But he shall know I am as good.
Glo. As good?
Thou Baffard of my Grandfather.
Winb. I, Lord Sir; for what are you, I pray,
But one impetuous in another Throne?
Glo. Am I not Protector, so was Priest?
Winb. And am I not a Prelate of the Church?
Glo. Yes, as an Out-law in a Castle keeps,
And vieth it, to patronize his Theft.
Winb. Vntreuer Gloster.
Glo. Thou art reuerent,
Touching thy Spiritual Function, not thy Life.
Winb. Rome shall remedie this.
War. Roame thither then.
My Lord, it were your duty to forbear.
Saw. I, fee the Bishop be not oner-borne:
Me thinks my Lord should be Religious,
And knowe the Office that belongs to such.
War. Me thinks his Lordship shoulde be humbler,
It fitteth not a Prelate so to plead.
Saw. Yes, when his holy State is toucht to noere.
War. State holy, or vnswallow'd, what of that?
Is not his Grace Protector to the King?
Rich. Plagntagem I fee must hold his tongue,
Least it be said, Speake Sirdas when you should:
Mute your bold Verdict enter with Lords?
Else would I have a fling at Winchester.
Kin. Vnckle of Gloster, and of Wincheste.
The speciall Watch-men of our English Weale,
I would preuyale, if Prayers might preuyale,
To looke your hearts in loue and amitie.
Oh, what a Scandal is it to our Crowne,
That two such Noble Peeres as ye should irare?
Believe me, Lords, my tender yeere can tell,
Ciull diffention is a viperscorne,
That gnawes the Bowels of the Common-wealth.
A noye againe, Stones, Stones.

Enter Maior.
Maior. Oh my good Lords, and vertuous Henry,
Pitty the Citie of London, pitty vs:
The Bishop, and the Duke of Glosters men,
Forbidden late to carry any Weapon,
Haue fill'd their Pockets full of peecile stones;
And banding themselfes in contrary parts,
Doe pelt so far at one anothers Pate,
That many haue their giddy braynes knockt out:
Our Windows are broke downe in every Street,
And we, for feare, compell'd to shut our Shops.

Enter in skirmish with bloody Pates.
King. We charge you, on allegiance to our felse,
To hold your slaughtring hands, and keep the Peace:
Pray Vnckle Gloster mitigate this stifle.
1. Seruing. Nay, if we be forbidden stones, we'll fall
It to with our Teeth.
2. Seruing. Doe what ye dare, we are as resolute.
Skirmish againe.
Glof. You of my household, leave this peeciful broyle,
And let this vauncustom'd fight aside.

3. Seru. My Lord, we know your Grace to be a man
Just, and upright; and for your Royall Birth,
Inferior to none, but to his Maiestie:
And ere that we will suffer such a Prince,
So kind a Father of the Common-wealth,
To be disgraced by an Inke-horne Mate,
Wee and our Wives and Children all will fight,
And haue our bodies slaughtred by thy foes.
1. Seru. I, and the very parings of our Nayles
Shall pitch a Field when we are dead.

Glof. Stay, stay, I say:
And if you loue me, as you say you doe,
Let me perfwade you to forbears a while.
King. Oh, how this discord doth afflict my Soule.
Can you, my Lord of Wincheste, behold
My fighes and tears, and will not once relent?
Who should be pittifull if you be not?
Or who should study to preferre a Peace,
If holy Church-men take delight in broyles?
War. Yeld my Lord Protector, yeld Wincheste,
Except you meane with obstinate repulse
To flay your Soueraigne, and destroy the Realme.
You see what Mitchief, and what Murther too,
Hath beene enaeted through your enmitie:
Then be at peace, except ye thirst for blood.
Winb. He shal submitt, or I will never yeld.
Glof. Compassion on the King commands me floupe,
Or I would see his heart out, ere the Priet
Should euer get that priuilege of me.
War. Behold my Lord of Wincheste, the Duke
Hath banisht moodie discontented fury,
As by his smoothe Browses it doth appeare:
Why looke you fill'd so sterno, and tragical?
Glof. Here Wincheste, I offer thee my Hand.
King. Fie Vnckle Beauforde, I have heard you preach,
That Mallice was a great and grievous sinne:
And will not you maintaine the thing you teach?
But prove a chiefe offender in the same.
War. Sweet King: the Bishop hath a kindly gyrd:
For shalme my Lord of Wincheste relent;
What,shall a Child infract you what to doe?
Winb. Well, Duke of Gloster, I will yeld to thee
Loure for thy Loue, and Hand for Hand I give.
Glof. I, but I feare me with a hollow Heart.
See here my Friends and loving Countreymen,
This token ferueth for a Flagge of Truce,
Betwixt our fellvs, and all our followers:
So helpe me God, as I deffable not.
Winb. So helpe me God, as I intend it not.
King. Oh louing Vnckle, kinde Duke of Gloster,
How joyfull am I made by this Contraet.
Away my Maffers, trouble vs no more,
But loyne in friendship, as your Lords haue done.
1. Seru. Content, Ile to the Surgeons.
2. Seru. And fo will I.
3. Seru. And I will see what Phylick the Tauerne affords.

Exeunt.
War. Accept this Scrowle, moft gracious Soueraigne,
Which in the Right of Richard Plantagenet,
Wee doe exhibite to your Maiestie.
Glo. Well vrg'd, my Lord of Warwick: for sweet Prince,
And if your Grace marke every circumstance,
You have great reasan to doe Richard right,
Especialy for those occasions
At Eltam Place I told your Maiestie.

King. And
The first Part of Henry the Sixth.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Pucell disguis'd, with foure Souldiers with Sacks upon their backs.

Pucell. These are the Citie Gates, the Gates of Roan, Through which our Pollicy must make a breach. Take heed, be wary how you place your words, Talkle like the vulgar fort of Market men, That come to gather Money for their Corne. If we have entrance, as I hope we shall, And that we finde the flouthfull Watch but weake, Ie by aigne glue notice to our friends, That Charles the Dolphin may encounter them.

Souldier. Our Sacks shall be a meane to flack the City, And we be Lords and Rulers over Roan, Therefore wee'le knock.

Knock.

Watch. Che la.

Pucell. Peasans la pourre gens de France, Poore Market folkes that come to fell their Corne. Watch. Enter, goe in, the Market Bell is rung. Pucell. Now Roan, Ile shake thy Bulwarkes to the ground.

Exeunt.

Enter Charles, Baflard, Alfonson. Charles. Saint Denii blewe this happy Stratageme, And once againe wee'le asleep secure in Roan. Baflard. Here entred Pucell, and her Practifants: Now she is there, how will she specifie? Here is the tent and face right paffage in.

Reig. By thrusting out a Torch from yonder Tower, Which once discernd, shewes that her meaning is, No way to that(for weakefse) which the entred. Enter Pucell on the top, thrusting out a Torch burning.

Pucell. Behold, this is the happy Wedding Torch, That loyneth Roan vnto her Countreymen, But burning fatal to the Tailbonites.

Baflard. See Noble Charles the Brethren of our friend, The burning Torch ye vnderstand, in their bands.

Charles. Now shine it like a Commet of Reuenge, A Prophet to the fall of all our Foes.

Reig. Deferre no time, delayes haue dangerous ends, Enter and cry, the Dolphin, presently, And then doe execution on the Watch. Alarum.

An Alarum. Talbot in an Excursion.

Tabl.France, thou shalt rue this Trafon with thy teares, If Talbot but furuie thy Trecherie.

Pucell that Witch, that dammed Sorcertaine, Hath wrought this Hellifh Miichief vnwarres, That hardly we escap't the Pride of France. Exit.

Enter Talbot and Burgonie without: within, Pucell, Charles, Baflard, and Reignier on the Wall.

Pucell. God morrow Gallants, want ye Corn for Bread? I think the Duke of Burgonie will faff, Before hee'le buy againe at such a rate. 'Twas full of Darnell: doe you like the taste? Burg. Scoffe on vyle Fiend, and shamelesse Curtizan, I trust ere long to choke thee with thine owne, And make thee curse the Harneft of that Corne. Charles. Your Grace may flature (perhaps) before that time.

Bedf. Oh let no words, but deedes, reuenge this Trafon.

Pucell. What will you doe, good gray-beard? Break a Launce, and runne a-Tilt at Death, Within a Chayre.

Tabl. Foule Fiend of France, and Hag of all despight, Incompasse'd with thy lufffull Paramours, Becomes it thee to taunt his valiant Age, And twit with Cowardize a man halfe dead? Damnell, Ile haue a bowle with you againe, Or else let Talbot perfiw with this shame. Pucell. Are ye so hot? Sir: yet Pucell hold thy peace, If Talbot doe but Thunder, Raine will follow. They whisper together in counsell.

God speed the Parliament: whom shall be the Speaker?

Tabl. Dare.
An Alarum. Enter Talbot, Burgonie, and the rest.

Talb. Loft, and recovered in a day againe,
This is a double Honor, Burgonie:
Yet Heauens have glory for this Victorie.
Burg. Warlike and Martiall Talbot, Burgonie
Inhires thee in his heart, and there ereds
Thy noble Deeds, as Valors Monuments.
Talb. Thanks gentle Duke; but where is Pucell now?
I thinke her old Familiar is asleep.
Now where's the Baffards braues, and Charles his glakes?
What all amoret? Roan hangs her head for grieve,
That such a valiant Company are fled.
Now will we take some order in the Towne,
Placing therein some expert Officers,
And then depart to Paris, to the King,
For ther eyong Henry with his Nobles lye.
Burg. What wills Lord Talbot, pleaseth Burgonie.
Talb. But yet before we goe, let's not forget
The Noble Duke of Bedford, late deceas'd,
But fee his Exequies fulfill'd in Roan,
A brauer Souldeir never couched Launce,
A gentler Heart did never sway in Court.
But Kings and mightie Potentates must dye,
For that's the end of humane miserie.
Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Charles, Baffard, Alanfon, Pucell.
Pucell. Dismay not (Princes) at this accident,
Nor grieve that Roan is so recover'd:
Care is no cure, but rather corrosive,
For things that are not to be remedy'd.
Let frantike Talbot triumph for a while,
And like a Peacock sweepes along his tayle,
Wce'lle pull his Pumes, and take away his Trayne,
If Dolphin and the rest will be but rul'd.
Charles. We have been guided by thee hitherto,
And of thy Cuning had no difidence,
One fudden Foyle shall never breed disfrut.

Baffard. Search out thy wit for secret policies,
And we will make thee famous through the World.

Alanf. Wee'le let thy Statue in some holy place,
And have thee reverenc'd like a bleffed Saint.

Exeunt. Then thus it must be, this doth Ioane deuise:
By faire periwafons, mixt with sugred words,
We will entice the Duke of Burgonie
To leaue the Talbot, and to follow vs.

Charles. I marry Sweeting, if we could doe that,
France were no place for Henryes Warriors,
Nor should that Nation boast it so with vs,
But be extirped from our Proutines.

Pucell. Your Honors shall percieue how I will worke,
To bring this matter to the wilfed end.

Drumme sounds a faire off.

Hearke, by the sound of Drumme you may perceiue
Their Powers are marching vs to Paris-ward.
Here found an Englishe March.
There goes the Talbot, with his Colours spred,
And all the Troupes of English after him.

French
The first Part of Henry the Sixt.

French March.
Now in the Rereward comes the Duke and his:
Fortune in favor makes him lagge behind,
Summon a Parley, we will talk with him.

Trumpets sound a Parley.

Charles. A Parley with the Duke of Burgonie.
Burg. Who causes a Parley with the Burgonie?
Pucell. The Princely Charles of France, thy Countryman.
Charles. Speake Pucell, and enchaunt him with thy words.
Pucell. Brave Burgonie, wondrope hope of France,
Stay, let thy humble Hand speak to thee.
Burg. Speake on, but be not ouer- tedious.
Pucell. Looke on thy Country, look on fertile France,
And see the Cities and the Townes defac't,
By wafting Ruine of the cruell Foe,
As lookes the Mother on her lowly Babe,
When Death doth close his tender-dying Eyes,
See, see the pining Maladie of France.
Behold the Wounds, the most vnaturall Wounds,
Which thou thy selfe hast given her woffull Breast.
Oh turne thy edged Sword another way,
Strike thofe that hurt, and hurt not thofe that helpe:
One drop of Blood drawnne from thy Countries Bosome,
Should grudge thee more then dreames of forgaine gore.
Returne thee therefore with a floud of Teares,
And wash away thy Countries Stayned Spots.
Burg. Either she hath bewitcht me with her words,
Or Nature makes me suddenny relent.
Pucell. Befides, all French and France exclame on thee,
Doubting thy Birth and lawfull Progenie,
Who lovat' thou with, but with a Lordly Nation,
That will not trueth thee, but for profite fake?
When Talbot hath fet footing once in France,
And fashion'd thee that Infrumnt of ill,
Who then, but English Henry, will be Lord,
And thou be thrust out, like a Fugitive?
Call we to minde, and marke but this for profe:
Was not the Duke of Orleance thy Foe?
And was he not in England Prisoner?
But when they heard he was thine Enemy,
They fet him free, without his Rancome pay'd,
In spight of Burgonie and all his friends.
See then, thou figh't against thy Countreymen,
And lovat' thee withall will be thy slaughter-men.
Come, come, returne; returne thou wandering Lord,
Charles and the reft will take thee in their armes.
Burg. I am vanquished:
Thefe haughty words of hers
Haue babbt' me like roaring Cannon-shot,
And made me almost yeeld hypon my knees.
Forgie me Countrey, and sweet Countreymen:
And Lords accept this heartie kind embrace.
My Forces and my Power of Men are yours.
So farwell Talbot, Ile no longer trueth thee.
Pucell. Done like a Frenchman: turne and turne againe.
Charles. Welcome brave Duke, thy friendship makes vs freh.
Baflard. And doth beget new Courage in our Breaths.
Alas. Pucell hath brauely play'd her part in this,
And doth defende a Coronet of Gold.
Enter King, Gloucester, Winchester, York, Suffolk, Somerset, Warwick, Talbot, and Governor Exeter.

Glo. Lord Bishop set the Crown upon his head.

Win. God save King Henry of that name the first.

Glo. Now Gournon of Paris take your oath, That you elect no other King but him; Else none of your friends, but such as are his Friends, And none your foes, but such as shall pretend Malicious practices against his State: This shall ye do, so help you righteous God. Enter Falstaff.

Fal. My gracious Sovereign, as I rode from Calice, To haste unto your Coronation: A letter was delivered to my hands, Writ to your Grace, from the Duke of Burgundy.

Tal. Shame to the Duke of Burgundy, and thee: I vow'd (base Knight) when I did meete the next, To tear the Garter from thy Cruens legge, Which I have done, because (unworthy) Thou wast't inflamed in that High Degree. Pardon me Prince Henry, and the rest. This Daffard, at the battell of Poictiers, When (but in all) I was fixe thousand strong, And that the French were almost ten to one, Before we met, or that a stroke was given, Like to a truffle Squire, did run away. In which assault, we lost twelve hundred men. My selfe, and divers Gentlemen beside, Were thcet surpriz'd, and taken prisoners. Then judge (great Lords) if I have done amiss: Or whether that such Cowards ought to wear This Ornament of Knighthood, yea or no?

Glo. To say the truth, this fact is infamous, And ill bequeathing any common man; Much more a Knight, a Captaine, and a Leader.

Tal. When first this Order was ordain'd my Lords, Knights of the Garter were of Noble birth; Valiant, and Vertuous, full of haughty Courage, Such as were grown to credit by the warres; Not fearing Death, nor shrinking for Diffidence, But always resolute, in most extremes. He then, that is not furnish'd in this fort, Doth but wiare the Sacred name of Knight, Prophaning this most Honourable Order, And should (if I were worthy to be Judge) Be quite degraded, like a Hedge-borne Swaine, That doth presume to boast of Gentle blood.

K. Staine to thy Countrymen, thou hear'st thy doom: Be packing therefore, thou that wast a knight: Henceforth we banish thee on paine of death. And now Lord Protector, view the Letter Sent from our Vnckle Duke of Burgundy.

Glo. What means his Grace, that he hath charg'd his Stile? No more but plaine and bluntly? (To the King.) Hath he forgot he is his Sovereign? Or doth this churlish Supercription Pretend some alteration in good will? What's here? (I have upon speciall cause, Meow'd with compassion of my Countries wrackes, Together with the pittiful complaints Of such as your Oppression feel upon, For taken your pernicious Faction, And ioy'd with Charles, the rightfull king of France. O monstrous Treachery! Can this be so? That in alliance, amity, and oaths, There should be found such false diffembling guile? King. What? doth my Vnckle Burgundy revolt? Glo. He doth my Lord, and is become your foe. King. Is that the worst this Letter doth containe? Glo. It is the worst, and all (my Lord) he writes. King. Why then Lord Talbot there shall talk with him, And give him chaficement for this abuse. How say you (my Lord) are you not content? Tal. Content, my Liege? Yes: But I am prevented, I should have begg'd I might have bene employ'd. King. Then gather strength, and march into him straight:

Let him perceive how ill we brooke his Treaton, And what offence it is to flout his Friends. Tal. I go my Lord, in heart desiring still You may behold confusion of your foes. Enter Vernon and Baffin. Ver. Grant me the Combat, gracious Sovereigne.

Baff. And me (my Lord) grant me the Combat too. Turk. This is my Servant, heare him Noble Prince.

Som. And this is mine (sweet Henry) fav'our him. King. Be patient Lords, and give them leave to speak. Say Gentlemen, what makes you thus exclame, And wherefore crave you Combat? Or with whom?

Ver. With him (my Lord) for he hath done me wrong. Baff. And I with him, for he hath done me wrong.

King. What is that wrong, wherof you both complain First let me know, and then Ie answ'er you.

Baff. Cross'ng the Seas, from England into France, This Fellow here, with enious carping tongue, Vprbraised me about the Rake I wear'd, Saying, the fagnious colour of the Leaues Did represent my Masters blushing cheeckes: When stubbornly he did repugne the truth, About a certaine question in the Law, Argu'd be'twixt the Duke of Yorke, and him: With other vile and ignomimous tearmes. In confection of which rude reproach, And in defence of my Lords worthineffe, I crave the benefit of Law of Armes.

Ver. And that is my petition (Noble Lord:) For though he seeme with forged quaint conceive To fet a gloffe upon his bold intent, Yet know (my Lord) I was provok'd by him, And he first tooke exceptions at this badge, Pronouncing that the paleneffe of this Flower, Bewray'd the faintheffe of my Masters heart. Turk. Will not this malice Somerfet be left? Som. Your proue'd grudge my Lord of Yorke, wil out, Though ne'er so cunningly you smother it.

King. Good Lord, what madeneffe rules in braine-ficke men, When for to flighr and frivolous a cause, Such factious aemulations shall arise?

Good Cofins both of Yorke and Somerset, Quiet your fulves (I pray) and be at peace.

Turk. Let this diffention first be tried by fight, And then your Highnesse shall command a Peace.

Som. The quarrell toucheth none but vs alone, Betwixt our fulves let vs decide it then. Turk. There is my pledge, accept it Somerset. Ver. Nay, let it rest where it began at first.
The first Part of Henry the Sixt.

The plague, Confirm it so, mine honourable Lord.

Gl. Confirm it so? Confounded be your strife, And perish ye with your audacious prate, Puffumptuous vassals, are you not ahum'd With this immodeit clamorous outrage, To trouble and disturb the King, and vs? And you my Lords, me thinkes you do not well To beare with their peruerse Objections: Much leafe to take occaion from their mouths, To raise a mutiny betwixt your fuelles, Let me perfwade you take a better course.

Exeunt. It greeses his Highneffe, Good my Lords, be Friends.

King. Come hither you that would be Combatants:

Henceforth I charge you, as you love our favour, Quite to forget this Quarrell, and the caufe. And you my Lords: Remember where we are, In France, amongt a fickle wauering Nation: If they perceyue defention in our lookes, And that within our fuelles we disgree; How will their grudging stomackes be prouk'd To wilfull Difobedience, and Rebel? Befide, What infamy will there arise, When Forraigne Princes shall be certified, That for a toy, a thing of no regard, King Henrie might bee, and cheere Nobility, Destrue' themselfes, and loft the Realme of France? Oh thinke upon the Conquest of my Father, My tender yeares, and let vs notforgoe That for a trifle, that was bought with blood. Let me be Vnder in this doubltfull strife: I fee no reason if I weare this Rofe, That any one should therefore be fuppicious I more incline to Somerfet, than Yorke: Both are my kinmen, and I love them both. As well they may vployr'd me with my Crowne, Because (forsooth) the King of Scots is Crown'd. But your dilcretions better can perfwade, Then I am able to infruct or teach: And therefore, as we hither came in peace, So let vs still continue peace, and loue. Cozin of Yorke, we inftitute your Grace To be our Regent in these parts of France: And good my Lord of Somerfet, vnite Your Troopes of horfe-men, with his Bands of foote, And like true Subiects, fones of your Progenitors, Go cheerfully together, and difeet Your angry Choller on your Enemies, Our Selve, my Lord Protectour, and the reft, After some refpit, will returne to Calice; From thence to England, where I hope ere long To be prefent at your Victories, With Charles, Alanson, and that Traiterous rout.

War. My Lord of Yorke, I promife you the King Prettily (me thought) did play the Orator.) Yorke. And fo he did, but yet I like it not, In that he weares the badge of Somerfet. War. Tuff, that was but his fancie, blame him not, I dare prefume (sweet Prince) he thought no harme. Yorke. And if I with he did. But let it reft, Other affaires must now bee managed.

Exeunt. Well didst thou Richard to suppreff thy voice: For had the paffions of thy heart burft out, I feare we should have feene decipher'd there

More rancorous spight, more furious raging broyles, Then yet can bee imagin'd or suppo'd: But howfoere, no simple man that sees This larrving discord of Nobilitie, This shoudering of each other in the Court, This factious bandying of their Favourites, But that it doth prefage some ill euent. 'Tis much, when Sceptera are in Childrens hands: But more, when Envy breeds vnkinde deuision, There comes the ruine, there begins confusion.

Exit.

Talb. Go to the Gates of Burdeaux Tumpeter, Summon their Generall into the Wall.

Enter Generall aloft.

English Eebn Talbot (Captaines) call you forth, Servaunt in Armes to Harry King of England, And thus he would. Open your Cittie Gates, Be humble to vs, call my Soueraigne yours, And do him homage as obedient Subjectts, And Ile withdraw me, and my bloody power. But if you frowne upon this proffer'd Peace, You tempt the fury of my three attendants, Leane Famine, quartering Steele, and climbing Fire, Who in a moment, euen with the earth, Shall lay your fately, and ayre-brauing Towers, If you forfake the offer of their loue.

Gap. Thou ominous and fearfull Owle of death, Our Nations terror, and their bloody scourge, The period of thy Tyranny approacheth, On vs thou canst not enter but by death: For I protest we are well fortified, And strong enough to iuffe out and fight. If thou retire, the Dolphin well appointed, Stands with the fnares of Warre to tangle thee. On either hand thee, there are squadrons pitcht, To wall thee from the liberty of Flight; And no way canst thou turn thee for redrefs, But death doth front thee with apparant foyyle, And pale defftruction meets thee in the face: Ten thousand French haue tane the Sacrament, To ryue their dangerous Artillerie Ypon no Chriftian foule but English Talbot: Loe, there thou flanid a breathing valliant man Of an inuincible vnconquer'd spirit: This is the lateft Glorie of thy praffe, That I thy enemy dew thee withall: For ere the Claffe that now begins to runne, Finift the pro infect of his fandy house, These eyes that fee thee now well coloured, Shall fee thee withered, bloody, pale, and dead.

Drum a farre off.

Harke, harke, the Dolphins drumme, a warning bell, Sings heavy Muscke to thy timorous foule, And mine hall ring thy dire departure out.

Exeunt. Talb. He Fables not, I hear the enemie: Out some light Horfemen, and perufe their Wings. O negligent and headleffe Disdisciple, How are we park'd and bounded in a pale? A little Heard of Englands timorous Deere, Max'd with a yelping kennell of French Curres. If we be English Deere, be then in blood, Not Raffcall-like to fall downe with a pinch, But rather moodie mad: And desperate Staggis,
Turne on the bloody Hounds with heads of Steele,
And make the Cowards bloudly fly: none stay:
Sell every man his life as deere as mine,
And they shall finde deere Deere of vs my Friends.
God, and S. George, Talbot and Englands right,
Proper our Colours in this dangerous fight.

Enter a Messanger that meets York. Enter York with Trumpets, and many Soldiers.

Talbot. Who should bide this blacke bower:
That dog'd the mighty Army of the Dolphin?
York. They are return'd my Lord, and give it out,
That he is march'd to Burdeaux with his power
To fight with Talbot as he march'd along.
With his epysals were discovered
Two mightier Troopes then that the Dolphin led,
Which ioy'n'd with him, and made their march
(To Burdeaux)

Talbot. A plague uppon that Villaine Somerset,
That thus delays my promis'd suppy:
Of horsemens, that were leuell for this fiege.
Renowned Talbot, both expect my ayde,
And I am lounged by a Traitor Villaine,
And cannot helpe the noble Chevallier:
God comfort him in this necessitie.
If he miscarry, farewell Warres in France.

Enter another Messanger.
2d.Ms. Thou Princeely Leader of our English strenght,
Neuer fo needfull on the earth of France,
Sparre to the refuge of the Noble Talbot,
Who now is girdled with a waftle of Iron,
And hemm'd about with grim destruction:
To Burdeaux warlike Duke, to Burdeaux Yorkes,
Elsie farwell Talbot, France, and Englands honor.

God, that Somerset who in proud heart
Doth flop my Cornets, were in Talbot place,
So should wee faue a valiant Gentleman,
For forfeyting a Traitor, and a Coward:
Mad ire, and wrathfull fury makes me wepe,
That thus we dye, while remisse Trafford sleepe.

Ms. O send some succour to the ditref Lord.
York. He dies, we looke: I brake my warlike word:
We mourn, France saries: We looke, they daily get,
All long of this vile Traitor Somerset.

Ms. Then God take mercy on brave Talbot foule,
And on his Sonne young John, who two houres since,
I met in trauaille toward his warlike Father;
This tenen yeeres did not Talbot see his fonne,
And now they meeke where both their lives are done.

Talbot. Alas, what joy shall noble Talbot have,
To bid his yong fonne welcome to his Graue:
Away, vexation almost floppes my breath:
That funded friends greete in the houre of death.
Lucie farewell, no more my fortune can,
But curse the caufe I cannot aye the man.
Maine, Blous, Poytiers, and Touris, are wonne away,
Long all of Somerset, and his delay.

Ms. Thus while the Vulture of sedition,
Feedes in the boosome of such great Commanders,
Sleeping negligence doth betray to loffe:
The Conquest of our scarce-cold Conqueror,
That ever-living man of Memorie,
Hentie the fift: Whiles they each other croffe,
Lues, Honours, Lands, and all, hurrie to loffe.

Enter Somerset with his Armie.

Som. It is too late, I cannot send them now:
This expedition was by York and Talbot,
Too rashly plotted. All our generall force,
Might with a fally of the very Towne
Be buckled with: the outer-daring Talbot
Hath full'd all his gloffe of former Honor
By this unbrewd full, desperate, wilde adventure:
Yorkes sent him on to fight, and dye in shame,
That Talbot dead, great Yorks might beare the name.

Cap. Here is Sir William Lucie, who with me
Set from our ore-matcht forces forth for aye:

Som. How now Sir William, whether were you fent?
Lu. Whether my Lord, from bought & sold L. Talbot,
Who ring'd about with bold audacie,
Cries out for noble Yorke and Somerset,
To beate affaying death from his weake Regions,
And whilst the honourable Captain there
Drops bloody swet from his warre-wearied limbs,
And in advantage lingering looks for refuge,
You his faile hope, the trut of Englands honor,
Keep off afoffe with worthlesse emulation:
Let not your private difcord Keep away the
The leuell fuccours that should lend him aye,
While he renowned Noble Gentleman
Yeeld vp his life into a world of odde.

Som. Yorkes sent him on, Yorke shoulde sent him aye.

Luc. And Yorke, as fay upon your Grace exclames,
Swearing that you with-hold his leued hoast,
Collected for this expidition.

Som. Yorke lyes: He might haue sent, & had the Horfe:
I owe him little Dutie, and leffe Loue,
And take foule scorn to fawe on him by fending.

Lu. The fraud of England, not the force of France,
Hath now intrapt the Noble-minded Talbot:
Neuer to England shall he bear his life,
But dies betrail to fortune by your fritre.

Som. Come go, I will dispatch the Horfemen ftrait:
Within fixe houres, they shall be at his aye.

Som. Too late comes rescue, he is tane or flaine,
For fye he could not, if he would have fied:
And fye would Talbot neuer though he might.

Som. If he be dead, brave Talbot then adieu.

Lu. His Fame lies in the world. His Shame in you.

Exeunt.

Enter Talbot and his Sonne.

Talbot. O yong John Talbot, I did fend for thee
To tutor thee in fratagems of Warre,
That Talbots name might be in thee reuid'd,
When faireffe Age, and weake unble limbes
Should bring thy Father to his drooping Chaire.
But O malignant and ill-boading Starres,
Now thou art come vnto a Feafe of death,
A terrible and vnauoyed danger:
Therefore deere Boy, mount on my swiftefft horfe,
And Ie drect thee how thou shalt escape
By foldaine flight. Come, dally not, be gone.

John. Is my name Talbot? and am I your Sonne?
The first Part of Henry the Sixt.

And shall I fuye? O, if you lose my Mother, Dishonor not her Honorable Name, To make a lade, and a Slave of me: The World will fay, he is not Talbots blood, That basely fle'd, when Noble Talbot fled. Talb. Flye, to reuenge my death, if I be flaine.

John. He that flyes fo, will ne're returne againe. Talb. If we both flay, we both are fure to dye. John. Then let me flay, and Father doe you fuye: Your losse is great, fo your regard should be; My worth vnknowne, no losse is knowne in me. Upon my death, the French can little boath; In yours they will, in you all hopes are loft. Flight cannot flayne the Honor you have wonne, But mine it will, that no Exploit haue done. You fled for Vantage, every one will sweare: But if I bow, they'll fay it was for feare.

There is no hope that euer I will flay, If the fift howre I shrinke and run away: Here on my knee I begge Mortalitie, Rather then Life, preferu'd with Infamie. Talb. Shall all thy Mothers hopes lye in one Tombe? John. I, rather then Ie flamme my Mothers Wombe. Talb. Vpon my Blessing I command thee goo. John. To fight I will, but not to fyle the Poe. Talb. Part of thy Father may be fou'd in thee. John. No part of him, but will be flamme in mee. Talb. Thou never hadft Renowne, nor canft not lose it. John. Yes, your renowned Name: shall flight abuse it? Talb. Thy Fathers charge shall cleare thee from f'flaine. John. You cannot witnesse for me, being flamne.

If Death be fo apparant, then both flay. Talb. And leave my followers here to fight and dye? My Age was never tainted with fuch flamme. John. And shall my Youth be guiltie of fuch blame? No more can I be feuered from your fide, Then can your felfe, your felfe in twaine diuidie: Stay, goe, doe what you will, the like doe I;

For Ie I will not, if my Father dye. Talb. Then here I take my leave of thee, faire Sonne, Borne to eclipse thy Life this afternoone: Come, fide by fide, together live and dye.

And Soule with Soule from France to Heauen fuye. Exit.

Alarum: Excursions, wherein Talbots Sonne is benn'd about, and Talbot rescues him.

Talb. Saint George, and Victorious fide Souliders, fide: The Regent hath with Talbot broke his word, And left vs to the rage of France his Sword. Where is John Talbot? powre, and take thy breath, I gauze thee Life, and refcu'd thee from Death. John. O twice my Father, twice am I thy Sonne: The Life thou gaue my fide, was loft and done, Till with thy Warlike Sword, defpight of Fate, to my determin'd time thou gau't new date. Talb. When frot the Dolphins Creft thy Sword fluck fire, It warm'd thy Fathers heart with proud defire Of bold-fact's Victoire. Then Leaden Age, Quick'en'd with Youthfull Spleene, and Warlike Rage,

Beat downe Alanjon, Orleance, Burgrundie, And from the Pride of Gallia refcu'd thee. The irefull Baffard Orleance, that drew blood From thee my Boy, and had the Maidenhood Of thy fift flight, I fone encountered, And interchanging blowes, I quickly thed Some of his Baffard blood, and in disgrace Befpooke him thus: Contaminated, bafe, And mis-begotten blood, I flipp of thine, Meane and right poore, for that pure blood of mine, Which thou didft force from Talbot, my braue Boy.

Here purposing the Baffard to destroy, Came in strong rescue. Speake thy Fathers care: Art thou not wearie, John? How doft thou fare? Wilt thou yet leave the Battalle, Boy, and flye, Now thou art feel'd the Sonne of Chiualrie? Fyte, to reuenge my death when I am dead, The helpe of one stands me in little stead. Oh, too much folly is it, well I wot, To hazard all our limes in one small Battat. If I to day dye not with Frenchmens Rage, To morrow I shall dye with middke Age. By me they nothing gaine, and if I flay, 'Tis but the shortning of my Life one day,

In thee thy Mother dyes, our Households Name, My Deaths Reuenge, thy Youth, and Englands Fame: All thefe, and more, we hazard by thy flay; All thefe are fau'd, if thou wilt fuye away.

John. The Sword of Orleance hath not made me smart, These words of yours draw Life-blood from my Heart.

On that advantage, bought with fuch a flamne, To faue a paltry Life, and fay bright Fame,

Before young Talbot from old Talbot fyye, The Coward Horfe that bears me, fall and dye: And like me to the peftant Boys of France, To be Shames scorn, and subjec of Mifchance.

Surely, by all the Glorie you haue wonne, And if I fyye, I am not Talbots Sonne. Then talk no more of flight, it is no boot, If Sonne to Talbot, dye at Talbots foot.

Talb. Then follow thou thy desp'rate Syre of Creet, Thou Icarus, thy Life to me is feaw: If thou wilt fight, fight by thy Fathers fide, And commendable proud, let's dye in pride. Exit.

Alarum. Excursions. Enter old Talbot led.

Talb. Where is my other Life? mine owne is gone. O, where's young Talbot? where is valiant John? Triumpht Death, fmeard with Capiutie, Young Talbots Valour makes me flime at thee. When he perceiu'd me shrinke, and on my Knee, His bloody Sword he brandifht ouer mee, And like a hungry Lyon did commence Rough deeds of Rage, and ferne Impatience:

But when my angry Guardant foam alone, Tending my ruine, and affay'd of none, Dizzie-ey'd Furies, and great rage of Heart, Suddenly made him from my fide to fart Into the cluftring Battalle of the French: And in that Sea of Blood, my Boy did drench His ouer-mounting Spirit; and there did'de My Icarus, my Blossome, in his pride.

Enter with John Talbot, borne.

Sera. O my deare Lord, loe where your Sonne is borne. Tal. Thou antique Death, which laugh't vs here to fcorr, Anon from thy infulting Tyrannie, Coupled in bonds of perpetuity, Two Talbots winged through the litter Skie, In thy despfight thall-cape Mortalitie.
The first Part of Henry the Sixth.

O thou whose wounds become hard favoured death,
Speak to thy father, ere thou yield thy breath,
Brave death by speaking, whiter he will or no:
Imagine him a Frenchman, and thy foe.
Poorer Boy, be thinkes, as who should say,
Had Death bene French, then Death had dyed to day,
Come, come, and lay him in his Fathers arms,
My spirit can no longer bear these harms.
Souldiers adieu: I have what I would have,
Now my old armes are yong John Talbot grave.

Enter Charles, Alanfor, Bargundis, Baflard, and Pucel.

Char. Had Yorke and Somerset brought refuge in,
We should have found a bloody day of this,
Baff. How the yong whelpes of Talbots raging wood,
Did flesh his punie-fword in Frenchmen blood.
Puc. Once I encountered him, and thus I said:
Thou Maiden youth, be vanquished by a Maide.
But with a proud Maiefcall high iconc
He anfwerd thus: Yong Talbot was not borne
To be the pilage of a Giglot Wenche;
So rushing in the bowls of the French,
He left me proudly, as unworthy fight.
Bar. Doubtfle he would have made a noble Knight:
See where he yses inherited in the armes
Of the most bloody Nurtier of his harms.
Baff. Hew them to peeces, hack their bones affunder,
Whose life was Englands glory, Gallia's wonder.
Char. Oh no forbeare: For that which we haue fled
During the life, let vs not wrong it dead.
Enter Lucie.

Luc. Herald, conduct me to the Dolphins Tent,
To know who hath obtained the glory of the day.
Char. On what submifive meifage art thou lent?
Lucy. Submifion Dolphins? Tis a meere French word:
We English Warriours wot not what it meanes,
And to ferue the bodies of the dead:
Char. For prifoners askt thou? Hell our prifon is.
But tell me whom thou seckst?
Luc. But where's the great Alcides of the field,
Valiant Lord Talbot Earl of Shrewsbury?
Created for his rare fieecife in Armes,
Great Earl of Wifford, Waterford, and Valent,
Lord Talbot of Godrig and Frichifeld,
Lord Strange of Blackmore, Lord Verdon of Alton,
Lord Cromwell of Wingeifeld, Lord Furnifual of Sheffield,
The thrie victorious Lord of Falconbridge,
Knight of the Noble Order of S. George,
Worthy S. Michael, and the Golden Fleece,
Great Marshal to Henry the fixt,
Of all his Warres-within the Realme of France,
Puc. Here's a filly flately filie indecde:
The Turke that two and fixte Kingdomes hath,
Writeth not to teledous a Stile as this.
Him that thou magnifid with all these Titles,
Stinking and fly-blowne eyes heere at our feete.
Lucy. Is Talbot blaine, the Frenchmen only Scourge,
Your Kingdomes terror, and blakc Nemesis?
Oh were mine eye-balles into Bullets turn'd,
That I in rage might shoot them at your faces.
Oh, that I could but call these dead to life,
It were enough to fright the Realme of France.
Were but his Figure left amongst you here,
It would amaze the proudef of you all.
Gie me their Bodys, that I may beare them hence,
And gie them Burial, as befymes their worth.
Pucel. I think this vpstart is old Talbots Ghost,
He spaketh with such a proud commanding spirit:
For Gods fake let him haue him, to keepe them here,
They would but finde, and putrifie the ayre.
Char. Go take their bodies hence.
Lucy. Ie beare them hence:but from their ashes shall be reared
A Phenis that shall make all France affer'd.
Char. So we be rid of them, do with him what y will.
And now to Paris in this conquering vaine,
All will be ours, now bloody Talbots blaine.

Exit.

Scena secunda.

Enter King, Gloceftet, and Exeter.

King. Haue you perus'd the Letters from the Pope,
The Emperor, and the Earle of Arminack?
Glo. I haue my Lord, and their intent is this,
They humbly fume vnto your Excellence,
To haue a godly peace concluded of,
Between the Realmes of England, and of France.
King. How doth your Grace affect their motion?
Glo. Well (my good Lord) and as the only meanes
To ftop effufion of our Christian blood,
And stabifh quenfneffe on every fide,
King. I marry Vnckle, for I alwaies thought
It was both impious and vnnaatural,
That fuch immeynity and bloody ftrife
Should reigne among Profeffors of one Faith.
Glo. Befide my Lord, the sooner to effect,
And furer binde this knot of amitie,
The Earle of Arminacke neere knit to Charlet,
A man of great Authoritie in France,
Proffers his only daughter to your Grace,
In marriage, with a large and fumptuous Dowrie.
King. Marriage Vnckle! Alas my yeares are yong:
And fitter is my fudie, and my Bookes,
Than wanton dilaince with a Parmour.
Yet call th'Embaftadors, and as you please,
So let them haue their answers every one:
I shall be well content with any choyce
Tends to Gods glory, and my Countries weale.

Enter Winchefter, and three Ambaftadors.

Exet. What, is my Lord of Winchefter infall'd,
And call'd vnto a Cardinalis degree?
Then I perceiue, that will be verified
Henry the Fift did fometime prophelie.
If once he come to be a Cardinal,
Hec'll make his cap conqul with the Crowne.
King. My Lords Ambaftadors, your generall suites
Haue bin confider'd and debated on,
Your purpose is both good and reaona:
And therefore are we certenly refolu'd,
To draw conditions of a friendly peace,
Which
Enter Charles, Burgundy, Alarun, Bigard, Reigner, and Jones.

Char. These news (my Lords) may cheere our drooping spirits;
'Tis said, the stout Parissians do revolt,
And turne againe vnto the warlike French.

Alar. Then march to Paris Royall Charles of France,
And keepe not backe your powers in dalliance.
Pucel. Peace be amongst them if they turne to vs,
Elfe ruine combate with their Palaces.

Enter Scout.

Scout. Succeffe vnto your valiant Generall,
And happinesse to his accomplies.

Scout. The English Army that diuided was Into two partes, is now coniion'd in one,
And means to give you battell presently.

Char. Somewhat too fonde Sirs, the warning is,
But we will presently provoke them.

Burg. I trust the Ghost of Talbot is not there:
Now he is gone my Lord, you neede not feare.
Pucel. Of all base passions, Fear is most accurst.
Command the Conquest Charles, it shall be thine:
Let Henry fret, and all the world repine.

Char. Then on my Lords, and France be fortunate.

Exeunt. Alarum. Exeunt.}

Pucel. The Regent conqueres, and the Frenchmen flye.
Now helpe ye charming Spelles and Periapias,
And ye choise spirits that admonish me,
And glue me-signes of future accidents.

Thunder.
You speedy helpers, that are substitutes

Vnder the Lordly Monarch of the North,
Appeare, and syde me in this enterprize.

Enter Friens.

This speedy and quicke appearance argues prowe,
Of your accustom'd diligence to me.
Now ye Familiar Spirits, that are call'd
Out of the powerfull Regions vnder earth,
Help me this once, that France may get the field.

They walkes, and speake not.

Oh hold me not with silence ouer-long:
Where I was wont to feed you with my blood,
Ie lop a member off, and glue it you,
In earneft of a further benefit:
So you do condiscend to helpe me now.

They hang their heads. My body shal
Pay recompence, if you will graunt my suite.

They flathe their heads.

Cannot my body, nor blood-sacrifice,
Intrete you to your wonted furtherance?
Then take my foule; my body, foule, and all,
Before that England glue the French the foyle.

They depart.

See, they forfake me. Now the time is come,
That France must vse her losly plumed Crifl,
And let her head fall into Englands lappe.

My ancient Incantations are too weake,
And hell too stronge for me to bucklee with:
Now France, thy glory droopeth to the durt.

Excursions: Burgundie and York fight hand to hand. French flye.

York. Damfell of France, I thinke I have you fast,
Vnhinge your spirits now with spellings Charnes,
And try if they can gains your liberty.
A goodly prize, fit for the duels grace.
See how the ugly Witch doth bend her brows,
As if with Circe, she would change my shape.
Pucel. Chang'd to a worser shape thou canst not be:

York. Oh, Charles the Dolphin is a proper man,
No shape but his can please your daunty eye.
Pucel. A plaguing mischeefe light on Charles, and thee,
And may ye both be sodainly surpriz'd
By bloody hands, in sleeping on your beds.

York. Fell banning Haggie, Inchantresse hold thy tongue.
Pucel. I prethee give me leave to curse awhile.

York. Curse Miscreant, when thou comst to the flake

Alarum. Enter Suffolk with Margaret in his bate.

Suff. Be what thou wilt, thou art my prifoner.

Oh Fairest Beautie, do not feare, nor flye:
For I will touch thee but with reverend hands,
I kliffe these fingers for eternall peace,
And lay them gently on thy tender fide.

York. Who art thou, say'st that I may honor thee.

Suff. Mar. Margaret my name, and daughter to a King,
The King of Naples, who fo ere thou art.

York. Suff. An Earle I am, and Suffolkc am I call'd.
Be not offended Natures myracle,
Thou art alotted to be tane by me:
So doth the Swan her downie Signets faue,
Keeping them prisoner vnderneath his wings:
Yet if this serule vigae once offend
Go, and be free againe, as Suffolkes friend.
She is going

Oh say: I have no power to let her passe,
My hand would free her, but my heart stays no,
As playes the Sunne vpon the glasse fireames,
Twinkling another counterfettened beame,
So feedes this gorgeous beauty to mine eyes.
Faine would I woe her, yet I dare not speake;
Ile call for Pen and Ink, and write my mindes:
Fye De la Pole, ditable not thy felis:
Haft not a Tongue? Is the not here?
Wilt thou be daunted at a Womans fight?
I: Beauties Princely Maiesty is fuch,
‘Confounds the tongue, and makes the fennes rough.

Mar. Say Earle of Suffolke, if thy name be so,
What ranomust I pay before I passe?
For I perceive I am thy prisioner.

Suf. How canst thou tell she will deny thy suite,
Before thou make a trial of her loue?

M. Why speakest thou not? What ranomust I pay?

Suf. She is beautifull; and therefore to be Woonde:
She is a Woman; therefore to be Wonnne.

eMar. Wilt thou accept of ranomest, yea or no?

Suf. Fond man, remember that thou haft a wife,
Then how can Margaret be thy Paramour?

Mar. I were best to leaue him, for he will not here.

Suf. There all is marr'd; there lies a cooing card.

Mar. He talkes at randon: here the man is mad.

Suf. And yet a difpenfation may bee had.

Mar. And yet I would that you would anwer me:

Suf. Ile win this Lady Margaret. For whom?
Why for my King: Tuth, that's a woodden thing.

Mar. He talkes of wood: It is some Carpenter.

Suf. Yet to my fancy may be satisfied,
And peace be confident betweene these Realmes.
But there remains a scruple in that too:
For though her Father be the King of Naples,
Duke of Aniow and eMyane, yet is he poore,
And our Nobility will come the match.

Mar. Heare ye Captaine? Are you not at leyfure?

Suf. It shall be so, dideaine they ne're so much:
Henry is youthfull, and will quickly yeeld.

Madam, I have a secre't to reueale.

Mar. What though I be in thrall'd, he seames a knight
And will not any way diffent me.

Suf. Lady, vouchsafe to litter what I say,
Mar. Perhaps I shall be rescu'd by the French,
And then I need not curse his curtesie.

Suf. Sweet Madam, give me hearing in a caufe.

Mar. Tuth, women haue bene captituate ere now.

Suf. Lady, wherefore talke you so?

Mar. I cry you mercy, 'tis but quid for quod.

Suf. Say gentle Princeffe, would you not toppose
Your bondage happy, to be made a Queene?

Mar. To be a Queene in bondage, is more vile,
Than is a flue, in base feruility:
For Princes should be free.

Suf. And so shal you,
If happy Englands Royall King be free.

Mar. Why what concerns his freedom vnto me?

Suf. Ie vndertake to make thee Henrius Quene,
To put a Golden Scepter in thy hand,
And fet a precious Crowne vpon thy head,
If thou wilt condiscend to be my—

Mar. What?
The first Part of Henry the Sixth.

But Madame, I must trouble you againe,
No louing Token to his Maiestie?

| Mar. Yes, my good Lord, a pure vnspotted heart, Neuer yet taint with louse, I fend the King. |
| Suf. And this withall. Kiffe ber. |
| Mar. That for thy selfe, I will not so preume, To fend fuch peeciff tokens to a King. |
| Suf. Oh wert thou for my selfe: but Suffixe stay, Thou mayest not wander in that Labyrinth, There Minotaurs and vgy Trefans lurke, Solicite Henry with her wonderou trafe. |

Bethinke thee on her Vertues that furnmount, Mad natural Graces that extinguih Art, Repeat their semblance often on the Seas, That when thou com't to kneele at Henries feete, Thou mayest berae him of his wits with wonder. Exit Enter York. Warwicke. Shephard. Pucell.

Top. Bring forth that Sorceresse condem'd to burne. Slep. Ah Ione, this kils thy Fathers heart out-right, Have I fought every Country farre and neere, And now it is my chance to finde thee out, Muf't I behold thy timeelesse cruell death? Ah Ione, sweet daughter Ione, BLEED with thee. Pucell. Decretit Milfer, false ignoble Wretch, I am descended of a gentler blood, Thou art no Father, nor no Friend of mine. Slep. Out, out: My Lords, and please you, 'tis not so I did beget her, all the Parifh knowes: Her Mother liueth yet, can testify She was the first fruite of my Bachler-ship. War. Gracelesse, wilt thou deny thy Parentage? York. This argues what her kindes of life hath beene, Wicked and vile, and fo her death concludes. Slep. Eye Ione, that thou wilt be fo obstacul'd, God knowes, thou art a collop of my flesh, And for thy sake have I shed many a teare. Deny me not, I pray thee, gentle Ione. No hope, I am enclosed, Pucell. Pezan aun. You have subordon this man. Of purpose, to obturce my Noble birth. I protest Ione. Ione. Slep. 'Tis true, I gave a Noble to the Priest, now Ione. The morne that I was wedded to her mother, Ione. Kneele downe and take my bleeding, good my Gylre. If Wilt thou not roope? Now curbed be the time. Of thy natuife: I would the Milke be thy Axe. Thy mother gave thee when thou suck'd her breefe, I gave a little Rats-bane for thy fake, Ione. Or else, when thou didst keep my Lambs and sheepe, I with some ravenous Wolfe had eaten thee. Doest thou deny thy Father, cursed Drab? Ione. O burne her, burne her, hanging is too good, Slep. To fill the world with vicious qualities. To. Take her away, for she hath seed too long, Slep. To fill the world with vicious qualities. Puc.First let me tell you whom you have condem'd. Not me, begotten of a Shephard-Swaime, But issued from the Progeny of Kings, Vertuous and Holy, chosen from above, By inspiration of Celestiall Graces, To worke exceeding miracles on earth, I never had to do with wicked Spirits. But you that are polluted with your lustes, Stain'd with the guiltifte blood of Innocents, Corrupt and tainted with a thousand Vices. Because you want the grace that others have, You judge it straight a thing impossible To compass Wonders, but by helpe of ducats. No mifconceyued, Ione of Air hath beene A Virgin from her tender infancie, Chaste, and immaculate in very thought, Whofe Maiden-blood thus rigorously effus'd, Will cry for Vengeance, at the Gates of Heauen. York. I will away with her to execution. War. And hearde ye first: because she is a Maide, Spare for no Faggots, let there be now: Place barreles of pitch upon the faltall flake, That fo her tortute may be shortened. Puc. Will nothing turne your varenetting hearts? Then Ione difcount thine infirmity, That warran'thet by Law, to be thy prillud. I am with childe ye bloody Homicides: Murther not then the Fruite within my Wombe, Although ye hale me to a violent death. Top. Now heauen forfend, the holy Maid with child? War. The greatest miracle that ere ye wrought. Is all your thrist precifienees come to this? Top. She and the Dolphin haue bin iugling, I did imagine what would be her refuge. War. Well go too, we'll have no Baffards liue, Especially since Charles must Father it. Puc. You are deceived, my child is none of his, It was Alonfon that ipsit my love. Top. Alonfon that notorious Maccheule? It dyes, and if it had a thousand liues. Puc. Oh give me leave, I have deluded you, 'Twas neither Charles, nor yet the Duke I nam'd, But Reinger King of Naples that preuay'd. War. A married man, that's most intollerable. Top. Why here's a Gyrle: I think she knowes not wel (There were so many) whom the may accuse. War. It's signe she haue beene liberall and free. Top. And yet forsooth she is a Virgin pure. Strumpet, thy words condemne thy Brat, and thee. Vfe no intreaty, for it is in vaine. Puc. Then lead me: hencet with whom I leave my curfe. May never glorious Sunne reflex his beams Upon the Country where you make abode: But darknesse, and the gloomy shade of death Inuiron you, till Mischiefe and Dispaire, Driue you to break your necks, or hang your felues.Exit Enter Cardinall.

York. Break: thou in pieces, and consume to ashes, Thou fowle accursed minister of Hell. Car. Lord Regent: I do greate your Excellence With Letters of Commiffion from the King. For know my Lords, the States of Christendome, Mon'd with remorie of these out-ragious broyles, Have earneftly implored a general peace, But the Prince of our Nation, and the aspiering French; And heere at hand, the Dolphin and his Traine Approacheth, to conferre about some matter. York. Is all our trauell turn'd to this effect, After the slaughter of so many Peeres, So many Captains, Gentlemen, and Soldiers, That in this quarre I have beene ouerthrown, And fold their bodies for their Countries benefit, Shall we at last conclude eftiminate peace? Have we not lost moft part of all the Townes, By Treafon, Falhhood, and by Treacherie, Our great Progenitors had conqured: Oh Warwicke, Warwicke, I forefee with greefe The ytter loffe of all the Realme of France. War. Be patient Yorke, if we conclude a Peace
The first Part of Henry the Sixth.

It shall be with such strict and severe Covenants,
As little shall the Frenchmen gaine thereby.

Enter Charles, Alarcon, Baffard, Reignier.

Char. Since Lords of England, it is thus agreed,
That peacfull truce shall be proclain'd in France,
We come to be informed by your felues,
What the conditions of that league must be.

Tor. Speake Wincheffer, for boying choller chokes
The hollow passage of my poyson'd voyce,
By fight of these our bilefull enemies.
Win. Charles, and the rest, it is enacted thus:
That in regard King Henry giues content,
Of meere compaffion, and of lenity,
To eafe your Countrie of distrefsefull Warre,
And suffer you to breath in fruitfull peace,
You shall become true Liegeemen to his Crowne.

And Charles, upon condition thou wilt wære
To pay him tribute, and submit thy selfe,
Thou shalt be plac'd as Viceroy vnder him,
And still enjoy thy Regall dignity.

Alan. Must he be then as shadow of himselfe?
Adorne his Temples with a Coronet,
And yet in subinance and authority,
Retaine but privilidge of a private man?
This proper is absurd, and reasonleffe.

Char. 'Tis knowne already that I am poifef
With more then halfe the Gallian Territories,
And therein reuerenc'd for their lawfull King.
Shall I for lucre of the ret vnnanquifht,
Detraçt so much from that prerogatuiue,
As to be call'd but Viceroy of the whole?
No Lord Ambaffador, lie rather keepe
That which I haue, an enow of more
Be caft from possibillty of all.

Torke. Infulting Charles, haft thou by secret meanes
Vs'd interceffion to obtaine a league,
And now the matter growes to comprenzie.
Stand'th thou aoofe upon Comparifon.
Either accept the Title thou vpr'th,
Of benefit proceeding from our King,
And not of any challenge of Deferit,
Or we will plague thee with incessant Warres.

Reignier. My Lord, you do not well in obstinacy,
To caull in the course of this Contract:
If once it be negleçted, ten to one
We shall not finde like opportunity.

Alan. To say the truth, it is your policie,
To faue your Subiects from such misrake
And ruthleffe slauthers as are dayly seen
By our proceeding in Hotilitie,
And therefore take this compaçt of a Truce,
Although you brake it, when your pleasur seues.

War. How say'st thou Charles?
Shall our Condition stand?

Char. It shall:
Onely refer'd, you claine no interest
In any of our Townes of Garrifon.

Tor. Then wære Allegiance to his Majefthy,
As thou art Knight, neuer to difobey,
Nor be Rebellious to the Crowne of England,
Thou nor thy Nobles, to the Crowne of England.
So, now dismiffie your Army when ye pleafe:
Hang vp your Ensignes, let your Drummes be still,
For here we entertaine a folemn peace.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Suffolk in conference with the King,
Gloucefter, and Exeter.

King. Your wondrous rare description (noble Earle)
Of beautefous Margaret hath astonifh'd me:
Her vertues grace'd with externall gifts,
Do breed Loues fettled passions in my heart,
And like as rigour of temperfuous guifes
Prouokes the mightieft Hulke againft the tide,
So am I driven by breath of her Renowne,
Either to suffer Shipwracke, or arriue
Where I may have fruition of her Loue.

Suf. Tush my good Lord, this superficial tale,
Is but a preface of her worthy praffe:
The cheefe perfections of that louely Dame,
(Have I sufficient skill to vter them.)
Would make a volume of inicding lines,
Able to rauifh any dull conceit.
And which is more, she is not fo Diuine,
So full replcate with choice of all delights,
But with as humble lowlineffe of minde,
She is content to be at your command:
Command I meane, of Vertuous chriftie intents,
To Loue, and Honor Henry as her Lord.

King. And otherwife, will Henry ne're preffume:
Therefore my Lord Protector, giue content,
That Marg'ret may be Englands Royall Queene.

Glo. So should I giue confent to fatter finne,
You know (my Lord) your Highnesse is betroath'd
Vnto another Lady of effeeme,
How shall we then difpenfe with that contract,
And not deface your Honor with reproach?

Suf. As doth a Ruler with vnlawfull Oathes,
Or one that at a Triumph, hauing vow'd
To try his strength, forfaketh yet the Lites
By reafon of his Aduerfaries oddes.
A poore Earles daughter is vnequall oddes,
And therefore may be broke without offence.

Gloucefter. Why what (I pray) is Margaret more then that?
Her Father is no better than an Earle,
Although in glorious Titles he excell.
Suf. Yes my Lord, her Father is a King,
The King of Naples, and Jerufalem,
And of such great Authoritie in France,
As his alliance will confirme our peace,
And keepe the Frenchmen in Allegence.

Glo. And so the Earl of Arminacke may doe,
Becaufe he is neere Kinsman vnto Charles.

Exe. Beside, his wealth doth warrant a liberal dower,
Where Reignier sooner will receyue, than giue.

Suf. A Dowre my Lords? Disgrace not fo your King,
That he should be fo abled, fable, and poore,
To choofe for wealth, and not for perfec Loue.

Henry is able to enrich his Queene,
And not to feke a Queene to make him rich,
So worthleffe Pezants bargain for their Wines,
As Market men for Oxen, Sheepes, or Horfe.
Marriage is a matter of more worth,
Then to be deeld in by Atturney-ship:
Not whom we will, but whom his Grace affects,

Must
Muft be companion of his Nuptiall bed,
And therefore Lords, fince he affects her moft,
Moft of all these reasons bindeth vs,
In our opinions she should be preferr'd.
For what is wedlocke forced but a Hell,
An Age of discord and continuall strife,
Whereas the contrarie bringeth bliffe,
And is a patterne of Celestiall peace.
Whom should we match with Henry being a King,
But Margaret, that is daughter to a King:
Her peerless feature, loyed with her birth,
Approves her fit for none, but for a King.
Her valiant courage, and undaunted fpirit,
(More then in women commonly is feene)
Will anfwer our hope in iflue of a King.
For Henry, fonne unto a Conqueror,
Is likely to beget more Conquerors,
If with a Lady of fo high refolue,
(As is faire Margaret) he be link'd in loue.
Then yeild my Lords, and heere conclude with mee,
That Margaret fhall be Queene, and none but shee.
King. Whether it be through force of your report,
My Noble Lord of Suffolk : Or for that
My tender youth was neuer yet attain'd
With any paflion of inflaming loue,
I cannot tell: but this I am affur'd,
I feele such sharpe diftention in my breath,
Such fierce alarums both of Hope and Feare,
As I am ficke with working of my thoughts.
Take therefore shipping, pole my Lord to France,
Agree to any covenants, and procure
That Lady Margaret do vouchefafe to come
To croffe the Seas to England, and be crown'd
King Henrys faithfull and appointed Queene.
For your expences and fufficient charge,
Among the people gather vp a tenth.
Be gone I fay, for till you do returne,
I reft perplexed with a thoufand Cares.
And you (good Vnckle) banifh all offence:
If you do cenfure me, by what you were,
Not what you are, I know it will excufe
This fuddaine execution of my will.
And fo conduct me, where from company,
I may revolue and ruminate my greefe.
Exit. Glo. I greefe I feare me, both at firft and laft.
Exit GloceBer.
Suf. Thus Suffolk hath pr euail'd, and thus he goes
As did the youthfull Paris once to Greece,
With hope to finde the like euent in loue,
But proffper better than the Trojan did :
Margaret fhall now be Queene: and rule the King:
But I will rule both her, the King, and Realme.
Exit

FINIS.
The second Part of Henry the Sixt, with the death of the Good Duke

H V M F R E Y.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Glo. Read. Inprimis, It is agreed betwixt the French K. Charles, and William de la Pole Marquess of Suffolk, Ambassador for Henry King of England, That the said Henry shal espousse the Lady Margaret, daughter unto Reignier King of Naples, Sicilia, and Jerusalem, and Crowne her Queene of England, eke the thirtieth of May next ensuing.

Item, That the Ductcy of Anjou, and the County of Main, shall be releas'd and delivered to the King her father.

King. Vnkle, how now? Glo. Pardon me gracious Lord, Some fodeine quame hath strucke me at the heart, And dim'd mine eyes, that I can reade no further.

King. Vnkle of Winchefter, I pray read on.

Win. Item, It is further agreed betwixt them, That the Ducts of Anjou and Maine, shall be released and delivered over to the King her father, and free from either of the Kings of Englands owne proper Cost and Charges, without baying any Dowry.

King. They please vs well. Lord Marques kneel down, We heere create thee the first Duke of Suffolk, And girt thee with the Sword. clown of Yorke, We heere discharge your Grace from being Regent I'th parts of France, till terme of eightene moneths Be full expyr'd. Thanks Vnkle Winchefter, Gloster, Yorke, Buckingham, Somerset, Salisbury, and Warwicke. We thank you all for this great favoure done, In entertainment to my Princely Queene. Come, let vs in, and with all speede prouide To see her Coronation be perform'd.

Exit King, Queene, and Suffolk.

Manet the ref. Glo. Brawe Peeres of England, Pillars of the State, To you Duke Humfreys must vnoade his greefe: Your greafe, the common greafe of all the Land. What did my brother Henry spend his youth, His valour, coin, and people in the warres? Did he so often lodge in open field: In Winters cold, and Summers parching heat, To conquer France, his true inheritance? And did my brother Bedford toyle his wits,
The second Part of Henry the Sixth.

To keepe by policy what Henrie got:
Haue you your felues, Somerfet, Buckingham,
Braise Yorkes, Salisbury, and victorous Warwick,
Receiued deepes scarres in France and Normandie:
Or hath mine Vnkle Beaaford, and my felfe,
With all the Learned Counfel of the Realme,
Studied fo long, fat in the Counsell house,
Early and late, debating too and fro
How France and Frenchmen might be kept in awe,
And hath his Highnesse in his infanct,
Crowned in Paris in delight of foes,
And shall these Labours, and these Honours dye?
Shall Henries Conqueff, Bedford's vigilance,
Your Deeds of Warre, and all our Counfell dye?
O Peeres of England, shamefull is this League,
Fatal this Marriage, cancelling your Fame,
Blotting your names from Bookes of memory,
Racing the Charracters of your Renowne,
Defacing Monuments of Conquer'd France,
Vndoing all as all had never bin.
Car. Nephew, what means this passionate discourse?
This prerogation with such circumstance:
For France, 'tis ours; and we will keepe it still.
Glb. I Vnkle, we will keepe it, if we can:
But nowe let us impend the Impediments,
Suffolke, the newe made Duke that rules the roff,
Hath gien the Dutchy of Anjou and Mayne,
Vnto the poore King Reigrier, whose large fyle
Agrees not with the leannes of his purfe.
Sal. Now by the death of him that dyed for all,
These Counties were the Keyes of Normandie:
But wherefore weeps Warwick, my valiant fonne?
War. For greefe that they are paff pocrerie.
For were there hope to conquer them againe,
My fword fhou'd fhed hot blood, mine eyes no teares.
Anjou and Maine? My felle did win them both:
Those Provinces, thefe Armes of mine did conquer,
And are the Cities that I got with wounds,
Deliver'd vp againe with peacefull words?
Mort Dieu.
York. For Suffolkes Duke, may he be suffocate,
That dims the Honor of this Warlike Ile:
France fhou'd haue torne and rent my very hart,
Before I would haue yeelded to this League.
I never read but Englands Kings haue had
Large fummes of Gold, and Dowries with their wifes,
And our King Henry gies away his owne,
To match with her that brings no vantages.
Hum. A proper felfe, and never heard before,
That Suffolke fhou'd demand a whole Fifteenth,
For Cofts and Charges in transporting her:
She fhou'd have faid in France, and fter'd in France
Before——
Car. My Lord of Glofter, now ye grow too hot,
It was the pleafure of my Lord the King.
Hum. My Lord of Wincheffer I know your minde.
'Tis not my fpeeches that you do mislike:
But 'tis my prefence that doth trouble ye,
Rancour will out, proud Prelate, in thy face
I fee thy furie: If I longer stay,
We hall begin our ancient bickerings:
Lordinges farewell, and fay when I am gone,
I prophefed, France will be loft ere long. Exit Humfrey.
Car. So, there goes our Prince in a rage:
'Tis knowne to you he is mine enemy:
Nay more, an enemy vnto you all,
And no great friend, I fearne to me the King;
Consider Lords, he is the next of blood
And heere apparent to the English Crowne:
Had Henrie got an Empire by his marriage,
And all the wealthy Kingdomes of the Weft,
There's reafon he fhould be diuiples'd at it:
Looke to it Lords, let not his smoothing words
Bewitch your hearts, be wife and circumspect.
What though the common people faueur him,
Calling him, Humfrey the good Duke of Glofter,
Clapping their hands, and crying with loud voyce,
Let maintain your Royall Excellence,
With God preferue the good Duke Humfrey:
I fearne me Lords, for all this flattering gloffe,
He will be found a dangerous Protecor.
Buc. Why should he then protecor our Soueraigne?
He being of age to gouerne of himfelfe.
Cofin of Somerfet, ioyne you with me,
And altogether with the Duke of Suffolke,
We'll quickly hoyle Duke Humfrey from his feat.
Car. This weighty buinesse will not brooke delay,
Ile to the Duke of Suffolke prefently. Exit Cardinall.
Som. Cofin of Buckingham, though Humfries pride
And greatnesse of his place be greefe to vs,
Yet let vs watch the haughty Cardinal,
His inoffence is more intollerable
Then all the Princes in the Land befide,
If Glofter be displeac'd, he'll be Protecor.
Buc. Or thou, or I Somerfet will be Protecors, Defpite Duke Humfrey, or the Cardinall.
Exit Buckingham, and Somerfet.
Sal. Pride went before, Ambition follows him.
While thefe do labour for their owne preerment,
Behoues it vs to labor for the Realme.
I neuer faw but Humfrey Duke of Glofter,
Did beare him like a Noble Gentleman:
Oft haue I fene the haughty Cardinall,
More like a Souldier then a man o'th Church,
As ftoct and proud as he were Lord of all,
Sware like a Ruffian, and demeane himfelfe
Unlike the Ruler of a Common-wexe.
Warwicke my fonne, the comfort of my age,
Thy deeds, thy plainnesse, and thy houfe-keeping,
Hath wonne the greateft favour of the Commons,
Excepting none but good Duke Humfrey,
And Brother Yorke, thy Acts in Ireland,
In bringing them to ceall Discipline:
Thy late exploits done in the heart of France,
When thou wert Regent for our Soueraigne,
Hauce made thee fear'd and honor'd of the people,
Ioyne we together for the publicke good,
In what we can, to bridge and fuppreffe
The pride of Suffolke, and the Cardinall,
With Somerfets and Buckinghames Ambition,
And as we may, cherife Duke Humfries deeds,
While they do tend the profit of the Land.
War. So God helpe Warwicke, as he loues the Land,
And common profit of his Country.
Tor. And fo fays Yorke,
For he hath greateft caufe.
Salisbury. Then lets make haft away,
And looke vnto the maine.
Warwicke. Vnto the maines?
Oh Father, Maine is loft,
That Maine, which by maine force Warwicke did winne,
And would have kept, so long as breath did laft:
The second Part of Henry the Sixt.

Main-chance father you meant, but I meant Maine,
Which I will win from France, or else be flaine.
York, Aniou and Maine are given to the French,
Paris is loth, the Rate of Normandie
Stands on a tickle point, now they are gone:
Suffolke concluded on the Articles,
The Peeres agreed, and Henry was well pleas'd,
To change two Dukedomes for a Dukes faire daughter.
I cannot blame them all, what is't to them?
'Tis thine they glue away, and not their owne.
Pirates may make cheaper penworthys of their pillage,
And purchase Friends, and glue to Curtezans,
Still revelling like Lords till all be gone,
While as the silly Owner of the good
Weepes over them, and wrings his hapless hands,
And shakes his head, and trembling stands aloofe,
While all is shar'd, and all is borne away,
Ready to sterue, and dare not touch his owne.
So Yorke mufit fit, and fret, and bite his tongue,
While his owne Lands are bargain'd for, and fold:
Me thinks the Realmes of England, France, & Ireland,
Beare that proportion to my flesh and blood,
As did the fatal brand Althea burnt,
Vnto the Princes heart of Cadelan :
Aniou and Maine both gien unto the French?
Cold newes for me: for I had hope of France,
Euen as I haue of fertile Englands folle.
A day will come, when Yorke shall claim his owne,
And therefore I will take the Nevils parts,
And make a shew of love to proud Duke Humfrey,
And when I spie advantage, claim the Crowne,
For that's the Golden marke I fecke to hit:
Nor shall proud Lancater vrurpe my right,
Nor hold the Scepter in his childlith Fitt,
Nor weare the Diadem vpon his head,
Whole Church-like humors fits not for a Crowne.
Then Yorke be full a-while, till time do serue:
Watch thou, and wake when euer be aleape,
To prie into the secrets of the State,
Till Henrie surfetting in joyes of love,
With his new Bride, & Englands deere bought Queen,
And Humfrey with the Peeres be false at iarres:
Then will I raise aloft the Milke-white-Rofe,
With whose sweet smell the Ayre shall be perfum'd,
And in my Standard bear the Armes of Yorke,
To grapple with the house of Lancater,
And force perfirce Ile make him yield the Crowne,
Whole bookish Rule, hath pull'd faire England downe.

Enter Duke Humfry and his wife Elianor.
Eli. Why droopes my Lord like ouer-rifen'd Corn,
Hanging the head at Ceres plenteous load?
Why doth the Great Duke Humfrey knitt his browes,
As frowning at the Favours of the world?
Why are thine eyes fixt to the fullen earth,
Gazing on that which feemes to dimme thy sight?
What feeth thou there? King Henries Diadem,
Inchaed with all the Honors of the world?
If fo, Gaze on, and grousell on thy face,
Vntil thy head be circl'd with the same,
Put forth thy hand, reach at the glorious Gold.
What, is't too short? Ie lengthen it with mine,
And hauing both together head'it vp,
WEE'II both together lift our heads to heaven,
And never more abase our fight fo low,
That shall make answere to such Questions,
As by your Grace shall be propounded him.

Elianor. It is enough, Ile thinke upon the Questions:
When from Saint Albones we doe make returne,
Woe wee see these things effected to the full.
Here Hume, take this reward, make merry man
With thy Confederates in this weightie caufe.

Exit Elianor.

Hume. Hume must make merry with the Ducheffe Gold:
Marry and shall : but how now, Sir John Hume ?
Seale vp your Lips, and glue no words but Mum,
The businesse asketh silent secrecy.
Dame Elianor gives Gold, to bring the Witch :
Gold cannot come amisse, were it a Deuil.
Yet haue I Gold flies from another Coaft :
I dare not say, from the rich Cardinal,
And from the great and new-made Duke of Suffolke;
Yet I doe finde it so : for to be plaine,
They (knowing Dame Elianors aspiring humor)
Have hyred me to vnder-mine the Ducheffe,
And buzzie thefe Coniurations in her brayne.
They say, A cractfie Knaue doo's need no Broker,
Yet am I Suffolke and the Cardinalls Broker.
Hume, if you take not heed, you shall goe neere
To call them both a payre of cractfie Knaues.
Well, fo it standes: and thus I feeare at laft,
Humes Knauerie will be the Ducheffe Wracke,
And her Attainture, will be Humphreys fall :
Sort how it will, I shall haue Gold for all.

Exit.

Enter three or four Petitioners, the Armorers.

"Man being one."

1. Pet. My Matters, let's stand close, my Lord Protecor will come this way by and by, and then wee may deliver our Supplications in the Quill.

2. Pet. Marry the Lord protect him, for hee's a good man, Iefu bleffe him.

Enter Suffolke, and Queene.

Peter. Here a comes me thinkes, and the Queene with him: Ile be the first fure.

2. Pet. Come backe foole, this is the Duke of Suffolke, and not my Lord Protecor.

Suff. How now fellow, would't any thing with me?

Queene. To my Lord Protecor? Are your Supplications to his Lordship? Let me see them: what is thine?

1. Pet. Mine is, and't pleaze your Grace, against John Goodman, my Lord Cardinals Man, for keeping my Houte, and Lands, and Wife, and all, from me.

Suff. Thy Wife too? that's some Wrong indeede.
What's yours? What's here? Against the Duke of Suffolke, for enclosing the Commons of Melforde. How now, Sir Knaue?

2. Pet. Alas Sir, I am but a poore Petitioner of our whole Township.

Peter. Against my Matter Thomas Horner, for saying, That the Duke of Yorke was rightfull Heire to the Crowne.

Queene. What say't thou? Did the Duke of Yorke say, hee was rightfull Heire to the Crowne?

Peter. That my Miftresse was? No forsooth: my Matter said, that he was, and that the King was an Vfurper.

Suff. Who is there?

Enter Servant.

Take this fellow in, and fend for his Master with a Purfent presently: we'll hear more of your matter before the King.

Exit.

Queene. And as for you that love to be protected
Under the Wings of our Protecors Grace,
Begin your Sutes anew, and fue to him.

Tears the Supplication.

Away, base Cullions: Suffolke let them goe.

All. Come, let's be gone.

Queene. My Lord of Suffolke, say, is this the guile?

Is this the Fanions in the Court of England?

Is this the Government of Britaines Ile?

And this the Royalty of Albions King?

What, shall King Henry be a Pupill still,
Under the furlhy Glafters Gourmandence?

Am I a Queene in Title and in Stile,
And muft be made a Subiect to a Duke?

I tell thee Poole, when in the Citie Tours
Thou ran't a tilt in honor of my Loue,
And flo't away the Ladies hearts of France;

I thought King Henry had refembrled thee,
In Courage, Courtship, and Proportion:

But all his minde is bent to Holinfie,
To number Anes-Maries on his Beades:
His Champions, are the Prophets and Apoftles,
His Weapons, holy Saves of sacred Writ,
His Studie is his Tilt-yard, and his Loues
Are brazen Images of Canonized Saints.

I would the Colledge of the Cardinalls
Would chufe him Pope, and carry him to Rome,
And fet the Triple Crowne upon his Head;

That were a State fit for his Holinfie.

Suff. Madame be patient: as I was caufe
Your Highneffe came to England, fo will I

In England worke your Grace full content.

Queene. Behide the haughter Protecor, haue we Beauford
The imperious Churchman; Surrey, Buckingham,
And grumbling Yorks: and not the least of these,
But can doe more in England then the King.

Suff. And he of these, that can doe moft of all,
Cannot doe more in England then the Nefff:
Salisbury and Warwick are no simple Peeres.

Queene. Not all these Lords do vex me halfe so much,
As that proud Dame, the Lord Protectors Wife:
She sweeps it through the Court with troupes of Ladies,
More like an Emprefle, then Duke Humphreys Wife:
Strangers in Court, doe take her for the Queene:
She bears a Dukses Reuencews on her backe,
And in her heart she scornes our Poordefi:
Shall I not liue to be aung'd on her?

Contemptuous base-born Callot as she is,
She vaunted 'mongft her Minions t'other day,
The very trayne of her worst wearing Gowne,
Was better worth then all my Fathers Lands,
Till Suffolke gave two Dukeftomes for his Daughter.

Suff. Madame, my fels haue lym'd a Bufti for her,
And plaet a Quier of fuch enticing Birds,
That she will light to listen to the Layes,
And neuer mount to trouble you againe.

So let her red-: and Maffe lifh to me,
For I am bold to counfaile you in this;
Although we fancie not the Cardinall,
Yet muft we loyne with him and with the Lords,
Till we have brought Duke Humphre in disgrace.
Enter Humfrey.

Humph. Now Lords, my Choller being ouer-blowne, With walking once about the Quadrangle, I come to tale of Common-wealth Affayres. As for your spightfull falsie Objections, Pruee them, and I lyee open to the Law. But God in meche fo deal with my Soule, As I in dutie love my King and Courtey. But to the matter that we haue in hand: I say, my Souraigne, York is meetest man To be your Regent in the Realme of France.

Suff. Before we make election, give me leave To shew some reason, of no little force, That York is most vnmeet of any man.
York. He tell thee, Suffolk, why I am vnmeet. Firft, for I cannot flatter thee in Pride: Next, if I be appointed for the Place, My Lord of Somerset will keepe me here, Without Difcharge, Money, or Furniture, Till France be worne into the Dolphins hands: Last time I danc't attendance on his will, Till Paris was befieg'd, famift, and loft, Warw. That can I winffe, and a fouler faft Did neuer Traytor in the Land commit. Suff. Peace head-strong Warwicke. Warw. Image of Pride, why should I hold my peace?

Enter Armorer and his Man.

Suff. Because here is a man accused of Trefon, Pray God the Duke of Yorke excufe himfelfe.
Yorke. Dooth any one accuse York for a Traytor? King. What mean'lt thou, Suffolk? tell me, what are thefe?
Suff. Please it your Maleifie, this is the man That doth accuse his Master of High Trefon; His words were thefe: That Richard, Duke of Yorke, Was rightfull Heire vnto the English Crowne, And that your Maleifie was an Vfurper.
King. Say man, were thefe thy words?
Armorer. And'lt shal please your Maleifie, I neuer fayd nor thought any fuch matter: God is my winffe, I am falfely accus'd by the Vllaine.
Peter. By thefe tenne bones, my Lord, hee did speake them to me in the Garret one Night, as wee were floowing my Lord of Yorke's Armor.
Yorke. Bafe Dunghill Villaine, and Mechankall, I haue thy Head for this thy Traytours speeche: I doe befeech your Royall Maleifie, Let him haue all the rigor of the Law.
Armorer. Alas, my Lord, hang me if euere I spake the words: my accuer is my Prentice, and when I did correet him for his fault the other day, he did vow vpon his knees he would be euens with me: I haue good winffe of this; therefore I befeech your Maleifie, doe not caft away an honest man for a Villaines accutation.
King. Vnuckle, what shall we say to this in law?
Humph. This doome, my Lord, if I may judge: Let Somerset be Regent o're the French, Because in Yorke this breedes fuspiotion; And let these haue a day appointed them For single Combat, in convenient place, For he hath winffe of his feruantes malice:
This is the Law, and this Duke Humfreyes doome.
The second Part of Henry the Sixt.

Enter the Wittb, the two Priest, and Bullingebrookes.

Hume. Come my Masters, the Duchefle I tell you expect performance of your promises. 'Bulling. Master Hume, we are therefore prouided: will her Ladyship behold and heare our Exorclimes? Hume. I, what else? feare you not your courage. 'Bulling. I have heard her reported to be a Woman of an inuincible spirit: but it shall be conuenient, Master Hume, that you be by her aloft, while wee be busie below; and fo I pray you goe in Gods Name, and leave us. Exit Hume.

Mother Jordan, be you prostrate, and grouell on the Earth; John Southwvll read you, and let vs to our worke.

Enter Elianor aloft.

Elianor. Well said my Masters, and welcome all: To this geere, the sooner the better. Bullin. Patience, good Lady, Wizzards know their times: Deepe Night, darke Night, the silent of the Night, The time of Night when Troy was set on fire, The time when Screech-owles cry, and Bandogs howle, And, Spirits walke, and Ghofts breake vp their Graues; That time beft fits the worke we have in hand. Madame, fit you, and feare not: whom wee rayle, Wee will make faft within a hallow'd Verge.

Here doe the Ceremonies belonging, and make the Circle, Bullingbrookes or Southwvll read, Conuor te, &c. It Thunders and Lightens terribly: then the Spirit rifeth.

Spirit. Ad summ. Witcb. Ajmatb, by the eternall God, Whose name and power thou tremblest at, Anfwere that I shall aske: for till thou speake, Thou shalt not paife from hence. Spirit. Aske what thou wilt; that I had faidy, and done.

Thunder and Lightning. Exit Spirit.

Enter the Duke of Yorke and the Duke of Buckingham with their Guard, and break in.

Yorke. Lay hands vpon thefe Traytors, and their tras: Beldam I thinke we watcht you at an ych, What Madame, are you there? the King & Commonweale Are deeply indebet for this peece of paines; My Lord Protector will, I doubt it not, See you well gueardon for these good deferts. Elianor. Not halfe fo bad as thine to Englands King, Injurious Duke, that threatteit where's no caufe. Buck. True Dame, none at allis what call you this? Away with them, let them be claat vp clofe, And kept afrander: you Madame shall with vs. Stafford take her to thee. Wele see your Trinkets here all forth-conning, All away. Exit. Yorke. Lord Buckingham, me thinks you watcht her well: A pretty Plot, well chofen to build vpon, Now pray my Lord, let's fee the Deuits Writ. What haue we here? Reades. The Duke yet liues, that Henry shall depoſe: But him out-liue, and dye a violent death. Why this is luft, Als Esaida Romanos vincere poſfe, Well, to the ref: Tell me what fate awaits the Duke of Suffolke? By Water shall be dyke, and take his end. What shall betide the Duke of Somerfet? Let him donee Cables, Safer flall be vpon the fandie Plaines, Then where Cables mounted fland, Come, come, my Lords, These Oracles are hardly attain'd, And hardly vnderfood. The King is now in progreffe towards Saint Albons, With him, the Husband of this lowely Lady: Thither goes these News, As far as Horfe can carry them: A forry Breakfast for my Lord Protector. Buck. Your Grace shall give me leaue, my Lord of Yorke, To be the Poete, in hope of his reward. Yorke. At your pleafure, my good Lord, Who's within there, hoe? Enter a Servaunaman. Inuite my Lords of Salisbury and Warwick To fuppe with me to morrow Night. Away. Exit.

Enter the King, Queene, Protecor, Cardinal, and Suffolke, with Faulkners bullowing.

Queene. Beleeue me Lords, for flying at the Brooke, I fae not better sport thefe yeues yeeres day: Yet by your leaue, the Winde was very high, And ten to one, old Jouze had not gone out. King. But what a point, my Lord, your Faulcon made, And what a pynch the flew aboue the ref: To fee how God in all his Creatures workes, Yea Man and Birds areayne of climbing high. Suff. No maruell, and it like your Maielie, My Lord Protectors Hawkes doe towre fo well, They know their Maiers loues to be aloft, And beares his thoughts above his Faulcons Pitch. Gloft. My Lord, 'tis but a base ignoble minde, That mounts no higher then a Bird can fore.
Enter the Mayor of Saint Albones, & his Brethren, bearing the man betweene two in a Chayre.

Card. Here comes the Townef-men, on Procession, To present your Highnesse with the man.
King. Great is his comfort in this Earthly Vale, Although by his sight his finne be multiplied.
Gloft. Stand by, my Masters, bring him neere the King, His Highnesse pleasure is to talke with him.
King. Good-fellow, tell vs here the circumstance, That we for thee may glorifie the Lord.
What, haft thou beene long blinde, and now refract'd? Simp. Borne blinde, and't pleaze your Grace.
Wife. I indeede was he.
Suff. What Woman is this?
Wife. His Wife, and't like your Worships.
Gloft. Hadst thou been his Mother, thou couldst have better told.
King. Where wert thou borne?
Simp. At Barwick in the North, and't like your Grace.
King. Poore Soule,
Gods goodnesse hath beene great to thee: Let never Day nor Night unhallowed passe,
But still remember what the Lord hath done.
Queene. Tell me, good-fellow,
Cam't thou here by Chance, or of Deuotion,
To this holy Shrine?
Simp. God knowes of pure Deuotion,
Being call'd a hundred times, and oftner,
In my sleepe, by good Saint Albans:
Who fald; Symon, come; come offer at my Shrine,
And I will helpe thee.
Wife. Moft true, forfooth:
And many time and oft my felfe have heard a Voyce,
To call him so.
Card. What,art thou lame?
Simp. I, God Almightye helpe me.
Suff. How cam't thou fo?
Simp. A fall off of a Tree.
Wife. A Plum-tree, Master.
Gloft. How long haft thou beene blinde?
Simp. O borne fo, Master.
Gloft. What, and would't climbe a Tree?
Simp. But that in all my life, when I was a youth.
Wife. Too true, and bought his climbing very deare.
Gloft. 'Maffe, thou lour'd St Plumes well, that wouldn't venture fo.
Simp. Alas, good Master, my Wife defir'd some Damsons, and made me climbe, with danger of my Life.
Gloft. A fubtil Knaue, but yet it shall not ferue:
Let me fee thine Eyes: winke now, now open them,
In my opinion, yet thou feest not well.
Simp. Yes Master, cleare as day, I thanke God and Saint Albones.
Gloft. Say how thou seest: what Colour is this Cloake of?
Simp. Red Master, Red as Blood.
Gloft. Why that's well fald: What Colour is my Gowne of?
Simp. Black forsooth, Coale-Black, as Jet.
King. Why then, thou know'st what Colour Jet is of?
Suff. And yet I thince, Jet did he neuer see.
Gloft. But
Gloft. But Cloakes and Gownes, before this day, a many.
Wife. Neuer before this day, in all his life.
Gloft. Tell me Sirrha, what's my Name?
Simp. Alas Mafter, I know not.
Gloft. What's his Name?
Simp. I know not.
Gloft. Nor his?
Simp. No indeede, Mafter.
Gloft. What's thine owne Name?
Simp. Sundar Simpsoon, and if it please you, Mafter.
Gloft. Then Sundar, sit there.
The lying'tt Knaue in Christendome.
If thou hadst beene borne blinde,
Thou mightst as well have knowne all our Names,
As thus to name the feuerall Colours we doe wearre.
Sight may diftinguifh of Colours:
But suddenly to nominate them all,
It is impoffible.
My Lords,Saint Albone here hath done a Miracle:
And would ye not thinke it, Cunning to be great,
That could reftore this Cripple to his Legges againe.
Simp. O Mafter, that you could?
Gloft. My Mafter of Saint Albone,
Have you not Beadles in your Towne,
And Things call'd Whippes?
Mafter. Yes, my Lord, if it please your Grace,
Gloft. Then fend for one prefently.
Mafter. Sirrha, goe fetch the Beadle hither straight.
Exit.
Gloft. Now fetch me a Stoole hither by and by,
Now Sirrha, if you meane to faye your felfe from Whipping,
Leape me over this Stoole, and runne away.
Simp. Alas Mafter, I am not able to ftand alone:
You goe about to torture me in vaine.

Enter a Beadle with Whipps.
Gloft. Well Sir, we must have you finde your Legges.
Sirrha Beadle, whippe him till he leape over that fame Stoole.
Beadle. I will, my Lord.
Come on Sirrha, off with your Doublet, quickly.
Simp. Alas Mafter, what hall I doe? I am not able to ftand.

After the Beadle bath bit him once, he leapes over the Stool, and runnes away: and they follow, and cry, A Miracle.
King. O God, feeth thou this, and beares it so long?
Queene. It made me laugh, to fee the Villaine runne.
Gloft. Follow the Knaue, and take this Drab away.
Wife. Alas Sir, we did it for pure need.
Gloft. Let the be whipt through every Market Towne,
Till they come to Barwick, from whence they came.
Exit.

Card. Duke Humfrey ha's done a Miracle to day.
Suff. True: made the Lame to leape and flye away.
Gloft. But you have done more Miracles then I:
You made in a day, my Lord, whole Townes to flye.

Enter Buckingbam.

King. What Tidings with our Cousin Buckingbam?
Buck. Such as my heart doth tremble to vnfold:
A fort of naughty persons, lewdly bent,
Vnder the Countenance and Confederacie

Of Lady Elianor, the Protecora Wife,
The King-leader and Head of all this Rout,
Haue practis'd dangerously against your State,
Dealing with Witches and with Conjurers,
Whom we haue apprehended in the Faft,
Raying vp wicked Spirits from vnder ground,
Demanding of King Henries Life and Death,
And other of your Highneffe Priue Councell,
As more at large your Grace shall vnderftand.
Card. And to my Lord Protecor, by this meanes
Your Lady is forth-comming, yet at London.
This Newes I thinke hath turn'd your Weapons edge;
'Tis like, my Lord, you will not keepe your houre.
Gloft. Ambitious Church-man, leave to afflicke my heart:
Sorrow and griefe haue vanquift all my powers,
And vanquift as I am, I yeeld to thee,
Or to the meaneft Groome.

King. O God, what mischiefe work the wicked ones?
Heaping confusion on their owne heads thereby.
Queene. Gloft. See here the Taincture of thy Neft,
And looke thy felpe be faultiflie, thou wert bift.
Gloft. Madame, for my felfe, to Heauen I doe appeale,
How I haue lou'd my King, and Common-ewe:
And for my Wife, I know not how it fhands,
Sory I am to hear what I haue heard.
Noble fhew is: but if thee haue forgot
Honor and Vertue, and conquer't with fuch,
As like to Pythc, defile Nobilitie;
I banifie her my Bed, and Company,
And give her as a Prey to Law and Shame,
That hath dis-honored Glofters honest Name.
King. Well, for this Night we will repose vs here:
To morrow toward London, back againe,
To looke into this Buifiefe thorowly,
And call these foule Offenders to their Anfwers;
And poyle the Caufe in Iuflice equall Scales,
Whole Beame fands fure, whole rightfull caufe preuailes.

Floyrfs. Exeunt.

Enter York, Salisbury, and Warwick.

York. Now my good Lords of Salsbury & Warwick,
Our ampre Supper ended, glue me leave,
In this clofe Walke, to satisfie my felfe,
In crauing your opinion of my Title,
Which is infallible, to Englands Crowne.
Salsib. My Lord, I long to heare it at full.
Warw. Sweet Yorke begin: and if thy clayne be good,
The Nevills are thy Subiects to command.
York. Then thus:
Edward the third, my Lords, had feuen Sonnes:
The first, Edward the Black-Prince, Prince of Wales;
The seconf, William of Hatsfield; and the third,
Lionel, Duke of Clarence; next to whom,
Was John of Gaunt, the Duke of Lancaffer;
The fift, was Edmond Langley, Duke of Yorke;
The fift, was Thomas of Woodtoffe, Duke of Glofters;
William of Windfor was the feuenth, and laft.
Edward the Black-Prince dyed before his Father,
And left behind him Richard, his only Sonne,
Who after Edward the third's death, raign'd as King,
Till Henry Bullingbrookes, Duke of Lancaffer,
The eldeft Sonne and Heire of John of Gaunt,
Crown'd by the Name of Henry the fourth,
Seiz'd on the Realme, depo'd the rightfull King,
Sent his poore Queene to France, from whence she came,
And him to Pumfret; where, as all you know,
Harmelle Richard was murthred traiterously.
Warm. Father, the Duke hath told the truth;
Thus got the Houfe of Lancaster the Crowne.
York. Which now they hold by force, and not by right.
For Richard, the first Sonnes Heire, being dead,
The Ilffe of the next Sonne should have reign'd.
Salib. But William of Hatfield dyed without an Heire.
York. The third Sonne, Duke of Clarence,
From whole Line I clayne the Crowne,
Heir Ilffe Phillipa a Daughter.
Who married Edmond Mortimer, Earle of March:
Edmond had Ilffe, Roger, Earle of March;
Roger had Ilffe, Edmond, Anne, and Elianor.
Salib. This Edmond, in the Reynge of Bullingbrooke,
As I have read, layd clayne vnto the Crowne,
And but for Owen Glendor, had beene King;
Who kept him in Cauitione, till he dyed.
But, to the right.
York. His eldef Sister, Anne,
My Mother, being Heire vnto the Crowne,
Married Richard, Earle of Cambridge,
Who was to Edmond Langley,
Edward the thirds fift Sonnes Sonne;
By her I clayne the Kingdome:
She was Heire to Roger, Earle of March,
Who was the Sonne of Edmond Mortimer,
Who married Phillip, sole Daughter
Vnto Lionel, Duke of Clarence.
So, if the Ilffe of the elder Sonne
Succeed before the younger, I am King.
York. Heire the thirdlings is more plain then this:
Henry doth clayne the Crowne from John of Gaunt,
The fourth Sonne, Yorke claymes it from the third:
Till Lionel Ilffe fayle, his should not reigne.
It fayle not yet, but flourishes in thee,
And in thy Sonnes, faire slips of such a Stock.
Then Father Salisbury, kneele we together,
And in this priuate Plot be we the first,
That shall salute our rightfull Sovereigne
With honor of his Birth-right to the Crowne,
'Bob. Long liue our Sovereigne Richard, Englandes
King.
York. We thank ye Lords:
But I am not your King, till I be Crown'd,
And that my Sword be flay'd
With heart-blood of the Houfe of Lancaster.
And that's not suddeynly to be perform'd,
But with aduice and flent ferrecie.
Doe you as I doe in thefe dangerous days,
Winke at the Duke of Suffolkes infolence,
At Beaufords Pride, at Somerfets Ambition,
At Buckingham, and all the Crew of them,
Till they have fans'd the Shephard of the Flock,
That vertuous Prince, the good Duke Humfrey:
'Tis that they seeke; and they, in seeking that,
Shall finde their deathes, if Yorke can prophecie.
Salib. My Lord, breaue we off; we know your minde at full.
Warm. My heart affures me, that the Earle of Warwick
Shall one day make the Duke of Yorke a King.
York. And Neill, this I doe affure my felse,
Richard shall liue to make the Earle of Warwick
The greatest man in England, but the King.
Exeunt.
Enter at one Doore the Armorer and his Neighbours, drinking to him so much, that bee is drunk; and he enters with a Drumme before him, and his Staffe, with a Sand-bagge fastened to it; and at the other Doore his Man, with a Drumme and Sand-bagges, and Prentices drinking to him.

1. Neighbour. Here Neighbour Hornor, I drink to you in a Cup of Sack; and fear not Neighbour, you shall doe well enough.

2. Neighbour. And here Neighbour, here's a Cuppe of Charneco.

3. Neighbour. And here's a Pot of good Double-Beere, Drink and take my Man.

Armorer. Let it come yfaith, and Ile pledge you all, and a figg for Peter.

1. Prent. Here Peter, I drink to thee, and be not a frald.

2. Prent. Be merry Peter, and fear not thy Master, Fight for credit of the Prentices. Peter. I thank you all, drink, and pray for me, I pray you, for I think I have taken my last Draught in this World. Here Robin, and if I dye, I give thee my Aporne, and Will, thou shalt have my Hammer: and here Tom, take all the Money that I have. O Lord bleffe me, I pray God, for I am never able to deal with my Master, hee hath learnt so much fence already.

Salib. Come, leave your drinking, and fall to blows.

Sirrha, what's thy Name? Peter. Peter forfeith.

Salib. Tompe? Then fee thou thumpe thy Master well.

Armorer. Masters, I am come hither as it were upon my Mans infigation, to proue him a Knaue, and my felfe an honest man: and touching the Duke of Yorke, I will take my death, I never meant him any ill, nor the King, nor the Queene: and therefore Peter haue at thee with a downe-right blow.

Yorke. Difpatch, this Knaues tongue begins to double. Sound Trumpets, Alarum to the Combatants.

They fight, and Peter strikes him downe.

Armorer. Hold Peter, hold, I confesse, I confesse Treafon.

Yorke. Take away his Weapon: Fellow thanke God, and the good Wine in thy Masters way.

Peter. O God, haue I overcame mine Enemies in this prefence? O Peter, thou haft presuyl'd in right.

King. Go, take hence that Traytor from our fight, For by his death we doe perceiue his guilt, And God in Iuftice hath reuaile'd to vs The truth and innocence of this poore fellow, Which he had thought to have murther'd wrongfully. Come fellow, follow vs for thy Reward.

Sound a flourib. Exeunt.

Enter Duke Humphrey and his Men in Mourning Cloakes.

Glofi. Thus sometimes hath the brighteft day a Cloud: And after Summer, eumore succeede Barren Winter, with his wrathfull nipping Cold; So Cares and Joyses abound, as Seafts fleet. Sirs, what's a Clock?

Scr. Tenne, my Lord.

Glofi. Tenne is the houre that was appointed me, To watch the comming of my punifht Ducheffe: Vnneath may flee endure the Flinte Streets, To tread them with her tender-feeling feet. Sweet Nell, ill can thy Noble Minde abroke The abfct People, gazing on thy face, With enouis Lookes laughing at thy shame, That erit did follow thy proud Charlot-Wheelses, When thou didst ride in triumph through the streets. But soft, I think she comes, and Ile prepare My teare-flayn'd eyes, to see her Milferies.

Enter the Ducheffe in a white Sket, and a Taper burning in her hand, with the Sherife and Officers.

Scr. So pleafe your Grace, we'le take her from the Sherife.

Glofi. No, flirre not for your lyes, let her passe by.

Elianor. Come you, my Lord, to see my open shame? Now thou do'ft Penance too. Looke how they gaze, See how the shdy multitude doe point, And nodde their heads, and throw their eyes on thee. Ah Glofler, hide thee from their hatefull lookes, And in thy Clofet pent vp, rue thy shame, And banne thine Enemies, both mine and thine.

Glofl. Be patient, gentle Nell, forget this griefe.

Elianor. Ah Glofler, teach me to forget my felle: For whileft I think I am thy married Wife, And thou a Prince, Protector of this Land; Me thinkes I shoul not thus be led along, Mayl'd vp in shame, with Papers on my back, And follow'd with a Rabble, that rejocye To see my teares, and hear my deepe-fet groanes. The ruthless Flint doth cut my tender feet, And when I fart, the enious people laugh, And bid me be adjused how I treads.

Ah Humfrey, can I beare this shamefull yoke? Trowe thou, that ere Ile looke vpone the World, Or count them happy, that enjoyes the Sunne? No: Darke shall be my Light, and Night my Day. To thinke to vpon my Pompe, shall be my Hell. Sometime Ile say, I am Duke Humfryes Wife, And he a Prince, and Ruler of the Land: Yet fo he rul'd, and such a Prince he was.

As he flood by, whileft I, his farlorne Ducheffe, Was made a wonder, and a pointing fock To every idle Raffcal follower.

But be thou milde, and blufh not at my shame, Nor ferre at nothing, till the Axe of Death Hang over thee, as fure it shortly will.

For Suffolk, he that can doe all in all With her, that hateh thee and hates vs all, And Yorke, and impious Beaufrond, that falfe Priet, Haue all lyn'd Bulhes to betray thy Wings, And flye thou how thou canft, they'll tangle thee.

But fere not thou, vntil thy foot be snar'd, Nor never feke prevention of thy foes.

Glofl. Ah Nell, forbearesthou aymett all awry, I must offend, before I be attainted:

And had I twenty times fo many foes, And each of them had twenty times their power, All thefe could not procure me any feathe, So long as I am loyall, true, and crimeleffe. Would't haue me refuge thee from this reproach?
Why yet thy scandal was not wip ay where,
But I in danger for the breach of Law,
Thy greatest help is quiet, gentle Neil:
I pray thee for thy heart to patience,
These few days wonder will be quickly wore:

Enter a Herald.

Her. I summons your Grace to his Malefices Parliament,
Holden at Bury, the first of this next Moneth.

Glof. And my content ne'er ask'd here before?
This is close dealing. Well, I will be there.
My Neil, I take my leave: and Master Sheriff,
Let not her Penance exceed the Kings Commission.
Sir, And't please your Grace, here my Commission tayles:
And Sir John Stanly is appointed now,
To take her with him to the Ile of Man.

Glof. Muft you, Sir John, protefct my Lady here?
Stanly. So am I glaven in charge, may't please your Grace.

Glof. Entreat here not the worfe, in that I pray.
You vie her well! the World may laugh againe,
And I may live to doe you kindneffe, if you doe it her.
And to Sir John, farewell.

Elianor. What, gone my Lord, and bid me not farewell?
Glof. Witneffe my teares, I cannot fly to speake.

Elianor. Art thou gone to all comfort goe with thee,
For none abides with me: my Joy, is Death;
Death, at whose Name I oft haue beene afar'd,
Becaufe I wish'd this Worlds eternitie.
Stanley, I prethee goe, and take me hence,
I care not whither, for I begge no favor;
Onely covey me where thou art commandt.
Stanley. Why, Madame, that is to the Ile of Man,
There to be vs'd according to your State.

Elianor. That's bad enough, for I am but reproach:
And shall I then be vs'd reproachfully?
Stanley. Like to a Ducheffe, and Duke Humphrey's Lady,
According to that State you shall be vs'd.

Elianor. Sheriff farewell, and better then I fare,
Although thou haft beene Conduct of my name.
Sheriff. It is my Office, and Madame pardon me.
Elianor. I, I, farewell, thy Office is dilcharger'd:
Come Stanley, shall we goe?

Stanley. Madame, your Penance done,
Throw off this Sheet,
And goe we to attyre you for our Journey.
Elianor. My faine will not be shifted with my Sheet:
No, it will hang upon my richest Robes,
And shew it selfe, attyre me how I can.

Goe, leade the way, I long to fee my Prifon.

That all the Court admired him for submifion.
But meet him now, and be it in the Morne,
When every one will glue the time of day,
He knits his Brow, and fiewes an angry Eye,
And pafteth by with fiffle vsnbowed Knee,
Disdaining durfe that to vs belongs.

Small Curres are not regarded when they gryane,
But great men tremble when the Lyon rores,
And Humphrey is no little Man in England.

Firt note, that he is neere you in diftant,
And should you fail, he is the next will mount.
Me seemeth then, it is no Policie,
Respecting what a rancorous minde he beares,
And his advantage following your deceafe,
That he shold come about your Royall Person,
Or be admitted to your Highneffe Counsell.

By flattering hath he wonne the Commons hearts:
And when he pleafe to make Commotion,
'Tis to be fear'd they all will follow him.

Now'tis the Spring, and Weeds are shallow-rooted,
Suffer them now, and, they're o're-grow the Garden,
And chace the Herbes for want of Husbandry.

The reverent care I bare unto my Lord,
Made me collect these dangers in the Duke.
If it be fond, call it a Womans feare:
Which feare, if better Reafons can supplant,
I will fubfcribe, and fay I wrong'd the Duke.
My Lord of Suffolk, Buckingham, and Yorke,
Reproue my allegiation, if you can,
Or else conclude my words effectual.

Suff. Well hath your Highneffe feene into this Duke:
And had I fift beene to fpeak my minde,
I think I should have told your Graces Tale.

The Ducheffe, by his fuboration,
Upon my Life began her diuellifh prafcttse:
Or if he were not prueie to thofe Faults,
Yet by repute of his high difcent,
As next the King, he was fuccelue Heire,
And fuch high vaunts of his Nobilitie,
Did infinate the Bedlam braine-fick Ducheffe,
By wicked meanes to frame our Soueraines falf.

Smooth runnes the Water, where the Brooke is depe,
And in his fimple fiew he harbours Treafon.

The Fox barks not, when he would ftele the Lambe.

No, no, my Soueraine, Glofter is a man,
Unfounded yet, and full of deep deceit,

Card. Did he not, contrary to forme of Law,
Deuife strange deaths, for small offences done?

York. And did he not, in his Proteftorship,
Leue great fummes of Money through the Realme,
For Souldiers pay in France, and neuer fent it?
By meanes whereof, the Townes each day reuel'd.

Buck. Tut, thefe are petty faults to faults vnknowne,
Which time will bring to light in smooth Duke Humphry.

King. My Lords at once: the care you haue of vs,
To move downe Thones that would annoy our Foot,
Is worthy praye: but fhall I fpeak my conscience,
Our Kinman Glofter is as innocent,
From meaning Treafon to our Royall Perfons,
As is the fucking Lambe, or harmeleffe Doue:
The Duke is vertuous, milde, and too well gien,
To dreame on euill, or to worke my downefall,
Qu. Ah what's more dangerous, then this fond affiance?
Seemes he a Doue? his feathers are but borrow'd,
For hee's dispoofed as the hatefull Rauen.
Is he a Lambe? his Skinner is surely lent him,
Enter Somerset.

Som. All health vnto my gracious Soueraigne.

king. Welcome Lord Somerset: What Newes from France?

Som. That all your Interest in those Territories, is vttely bereft you: all is loft.

king. Cold Newes, Lord Somerset: but Gods will be done.

Tork. Cold Newes for me: for I had hope of France, as firme as I hope for fertile England. Thus are my Blossomes blasted in the Bud, and Caterpillers cate my Leaues away: But I will remede this geare ere long, Or fell my Title for a glorious Graue.

Enter Gloucester.

Glofi. All hapinesse vnto my Lord the King: Pardon, my Liege, that I have stay'd so long.

Suff. Nay Glofter, know that thou art come too soon, Vainele thou wert more joyfull then thou art: I doe arrest thee of High Trefon here.

Glofi. Well Suffolk, thou hailest not me blusht, Nor change my Countenance for this Arreft: A Heart vnspotted, is not easily daunted. The purest Spring is not so free from muddre, As I am cleare from Trefon to my Soueraigne. Who can accuse me? wherein am I guilitie? Tork.'Tis thought, my Lord, That you toxoke Bribes of France, and being Protecor, stay'd the Souldiers pay, By meanes whereof, his Highnesse hath loft France.

Glofi. Is it but thought so? What are they that thinke it? I neuer rob'd the Souldiers of their pay, Nor euer had one penny Bribe from France. So helpe me God, as I haue watcht the Night, I, Night by Night, in studyng good for England, That Dayt that ere I wreathed from the King, Or any Groat I hoarded to my yfe, Be brought against me at my Tryall day. No: many a Pound of mine owne proper flore, Because I would not take the needless Commons, Haue I dispurfed to the Garrisons, and neuer ask'd for refituation.

Card. It feres you well, my Lord, to fay so much. Glofi. I fay no more then truth, fo helpe me God. Tork. In your Protecorship, you did defile Strange Tortures for Offenders, never heard of, That England was defam'd by Tyrannie. Glofl. Why 'tis well known, that whiles I was Protecor, Pittle was all the fault that was in me: For I shoul'd melt at an Offenders teares, and lowly words were Ranfome for their fault: Vnleffe it were a bloody Murtherer, Or foule felonious Theefe, that fleev'd poor passengers, I neuer gau thee condigne punishment: Murther indeede, that bloodie finne, I torture'd Above the Felon, or what Trefpas elle.

Suff. My Lord, these faults are easie, quickly answer'd: But mightier Crimes are lay'd vnto your charge, Whereof you cannot easily purge your selfe,

I doe arrest you in his Highnesse Name, And here commit you to my Lord Cardinal To keepe, vntill your further time of Tryall.

king. My Lord of Glofter, 'tis my speciall hope, That you will cleare your selfe from all fulfence, My Conscience tells me you are innocent.

Glofi. Ah gracious Lord, thefe dayes are dangerous: Vertue is chossed with foule Ambition, And charitable cha'st hence by Rancours hand; Foule Subornation is predominant, And Equeitie exil'd your Highnesse Land.

I know, their Complot is to haue my Life: And if my death might make this land happy, And proue the Period of their Tyrannie, I would expend it with all willingness. But mine is made the Prologue to their Play: For thoundays more, that yet fufpet ftill, Will not conclude theire plotted Tragedie.

Beaufors red sparkling eyes blab his hearts mallice, And Suffols cloudie Brow his stormie hate; Sharpe Buckingbam vnburthen with his tongue, The enuious Load that Iyes vpon his heart:

And dogged Tork, that reaches at the Moone, Whose over-weening Arme I have pluckt back, By falle accufe doth leuell at my Life. And you, my Soueraigne Lady, with the refi, Caufelesse haue lay'd difgraces on my head, And with your best endeoure haue tir'd vp My liefest Liege to be mine Enemie: I, all of you haue lay'd your heads together, My felfe had notice of your Conuenicles, And all to make away my guiltlesse Life.

I shall not want falle Wiennefe, to condemne me, Nor flore of Trefons, to augment my guilt: The ancient Prouverbe will be well effect,

A Staffe is quickly found to beat a Dogge.

Card. My Liege, his rayling is intollerable. If thole that care to keepe your Royall Perfon From Trefons secret Knife, and Traylers Rage, Be thus wrapt, and clad, and rated at,

And the Offender graunted scope of speech, 'Twill make them coole in zeale vnto your Grace.

Suff. Hath he not twit our Soueraigne Lady here With ignominious words, though Clarkely cought? As if he had fuborned some to fwear

Falle allegations, to o'rethrow his fate,

Qu. But I can give the lofer leau to chide.

Glofl. Farre truer fpoke then meant: I lofe indeepe, Bethrew the winners, for they play'd me falle, And well fuch lofirs may have leaue to speake.

Buck. Hee'll wreath the fence, and hold vs here all day. Lord Cardinal, he is your Prifoner.

Card. Sir, take away the Duke, and guard him faire.

Glofl. Ah, thus King Henry throwes away his Crutch, Before his Legges be firme to bear his Body, Thus is the Shephered beaten from thy fide, And Wolues are gnarling, who fhall gnav thee firft. Ah that my fearre were falle, ah that it were:

For good King Henry, thy decay I feare.

Exit Glofter.

king. My Lords, what to your wifdomes feemeth best, Doe, or vndoe, as if our felfe were here.

Queen. What, will your Highnesse leaue the Parliamet?

king. I Margaret: my heart is drown'd with grieue, Whole floud begins to flowe within mine eyes, My Body round engryt with miserie:
The second Part of Henry the Sixth.

For what's more miserable than Discontent?

Ah Vancke Humfrey, in thy face I see

The Map of Honor, Truth, and Loyaltie:

And yet, good Humfrey, is the house to come,

That ere I prou'd thee false, or feard thy faith.

What lowring Starre now enuies thy eftates?

That teafe great Lords, and Margaret our Queene,

Doe feke fubfuution of thy harmless Life.

That thefe teafe them wrong, nor no man wrong:

And as the Butcher takes away the Calfe,

And binds the Wretch, and beats it when it straies,

Bearing it to the bloody Slaughter-house;

Even fo remorfeleffe haue they borne him hence:

And as the Damme runnes lowing vp and downe,

Looking the way her harmless young one went,

And can doe naught but waie her Darlings loffe;

Even fo my felfe bewayles good Glofters cafe

With fad vnhelpfull teares, and with dimm'd eyes;

Looke afer him, and cannot doe him good:

So mighte be his vowed Enemies.

His fortunes I will weeppe, and 'twixt each groane,

Say, who's a Traitor? Gloffer he is none.

Queene. Free Lords:

Cold Snow melts with the Sunnes hot Beames:

Henry, my Lord, is cold in great Affaires,

Too full of foolish pitie: and Glofters shew

Beguiles him, as the mornenfull Crocodile

With forrow fnares retellent paffengers:

Or as the Snake, roll'd in a flowing Banks,

With thinne checker'd flough doth flinge a Child,

That for the beautie thinkes it excellent.

Beleeue me Lords, were none more wife then I,

And yet herein I judge mine owne Wit good;

This Gloffer should be quickly rid the World,

To rid vs from the feare we haue of him.

Card. That he shou'd dye, is worthie policie,

But yet we want a Colour for his death:

'Tis meet he be condemn'd by course of Law.

Suff. But in my minde, that were no policie:

The King will not haue to faue his Life,

The Commons haply rife, to faue his Life;

And yet we haue but trialll argument,

More then mistruft, that theyes him worthy death.

Yorce. So that by this, you would not haue him dye.

Suff. Ah Yorke, no man alio, fo faine as I.

Yorke. 'Tis Yorke that hath more reason for his death.

But my Lord Cardinal, and you my Lord of Suffolke,

Say as you thinke, and speake it from your Soules:

Wer't not all one, an empie Eagle were fet,

To guard the Chicken from a hungry Kyte,

As place Duke Humfrey for the Kings Protecor?

Queene. So the poore Chicken fhad the cure of death.

Suff. Madame 'tis true: and wer't not madnede then,

To make the Fox furveyor of the Fold?

Who being accus'd a craffle Murtherer,

His guilt should be but idly pofted ouer,

Because his purpofe is not executed,

Not let him dye, in that he is a Fox,

By nature prou'd an Enemie to the Flock,

Before his Chaps be fayyn'd with Crimfon blood,

As Humfrey prou'd by Reasons to my Liege,

And doe not stand on Quilletts how to flay him:

Be it by Gynnes, by Smars, by Subltices,

Sleeping, or Waking, 'tis no matter how,

So he be dead; for that is good deceit,

Which makes him firft, that firft intends deceit.

Queene. Thrice Noble Suffolke, 'tis refulutely spoke.

Suff. Not refulute, except fo much were done,

For things are often spoke, and seldom meant,

But that my heart accordeth with my tongue,

Seeing the deed is meritorious,

And to prefume my Soueraigne from his Foe,

Say but the word, and I will be his Prieff.

Card. But I would have him dead, my Lord of Suffolke,

Ere you can take due Orders for a Prieff:

Say you confent, and censure well the deed,

And Ie prouide his Executioner,

I tender to the faftetie of my Liege.

Suff. Here is my Hand, the deed is worthy doing.

Queene. And to fay I.

Yorke. And I: and now we three haue spoke it,

It skills not greatly who impugnes our doome.

Enter a Post.

Post. Great Lords, from Ireland am I come amaine,

To signifie, that Rebels there are vp,

And put the Englishmen vnto the Sword.

Send Successors(Lords) and frop the Rage betime,

Before the Wound doe grow vncurable.

For being greene, there is great hope of helpe.

Card. A Breach that caueth a quick expedient froppe.

What counfaile you give in this weightie caufe?

Yorke. That Somerffe be fent as Regent thither;

'Tis meet that luckie Ruler be imploy'd,

Witnesse the fortune he hath had in France.

Som. If Yorke, with all his farre-fet policie,

Had beeene the Regent there, in stead of me,

He neuer would have fay'd in France fo long.

Yorke. No, not to lofe it all, as thou haft done.

I rather would have loft my Life betimes,

Then bring a burthen of dis-honour home,

By faying there fo long, till all were loft.

Shew me one skarre, character'd on thy Skinne,

Mens foes prefer'd fo whole, doe feldome winne.

Qa. Nay then, this fpark will prove a raging fire,

If Wind and Fuell be brought, to feed it with:

No more, good Yorke; sweet Somerffe be still.

Thy fortune, Yorke, hadt thou beeene Regent there,

Might haply haue prou'd farre worse then his.

Yorke. What, worfe then naught? nay, then a flame take all.

Somerffe. And in the number, thee, that wilheft flame.

Card. My Lord of Yorke, trie what your fortune is:

Th'vnctuill Kernes of Ireland are in Armes,

And temper Clay with blood of Englishmen.

To Ireland will you leade a Band of men,

Collected choycely, from each Countie fome,

And trie your hap againft the Irifhmen?

Yorke. I will, my Lord, fo pleafe his Maiefte.

Suff. Why, our Authoritie is his convent,

And what we doe eftablifh, he confirmes:

Then, Noble Yorke, take thou this Taskie in hand.

Yorke. I am content: Prouide me Souldiers, Lords,

While I take order for mine owne affaires.

Suff. A charge, Lord Yorke, that I will fee perform'd.

But now returne we to the faffe Duke Humfrey.

Card. No more of him: for I will deale with him,

That henceforth he shall trouble vs no more:

And so breake off, the day is almoft fpent,

Lord Suffolke, you and I must talke of that euent,

Yorke. My
The second Part of Henry the Sixt.

Yorke. My Lord of Suffolke, within foureteene dayes At Brittown I expect my Souldiers, For there Ie shippeth them all for Ireland.

Suff. Ile see it truly done, my Lord of Yorke. Exit.

Manet Yorke.

Yorke. Now Yorke, or other, steele thy fearfull thoughts, And change midsight to resolution; Be that thou hop't to be, or what thou art; Refigne to death, it is not worth th'employing; Let pale-fac'd fearie keeppe with the meane-born man, And finde no harbor in a Royall heart. Fater the Spring-time flowres, comes thought on thought, And not a thought, but thinkes on Dignitie. My Brayne, more bufe then the laboring Spider, Weaves tedious Snares to trap mine Enemie. Well Nobles, well: 'tis politelie done, To sende me packing with an Hoast of men: I feare me, you but warme the troubled Snake, Who cherisht in your breasts, will sting your hearts. 'Twas men I lackt, and you will giue them me; I take it kindly: yet be well affird, You put sharpe Weapons in a mad-mans hands. Whiles I in Ireland nourish a mightie Band, I will flaire vp in England some black Storyme, Shall blowe ten thousand Soules to Heauen, or Hell: And this all Trumpetts shall no ceafe to rage, Vntill the Golden Circuit on my Head,

Like to the glorious Sunnes transparant Beames, Doe calme the furie of this mad-brad Flawe. And for a minifter of my intent, I haue fuced'a head-strong Kentifhman, John Cad of Adforde, To make Commotion, as full well he can, Under the Title of John Mortimer.

In Ireland haue I fene this ruffborne Cad Oponc himselfe against a 'Troupe of Kernes, And fought fo long, till that his thighs with Darts Were almoft like a sharpe-quilled Porpentine: And in the end being refuced, I haue fene Him capre wright, like a wilde Morifco, Shaking the bloody Darts, as he his Bells. Full often, like a flag-hayr'd craftie Kerne, Hath he conuerfed with the Enemie, And vndifcourer'd, come to me againe, And given me notice of their Villanies. This Deuill here shall be my subfittue; For that John Mortimer, which now is dead, In face, in gate, in speecch he doth refemble. By this, I shall perceiue the Commons minde, How they affect the Houfe and Claiyne of Yorke.

Say he be taken, racket, and tortured; I know, no paine they can inflict vpon him, Will make him say, I mou'd him to those Armes. Say that he thrue, as 'tis great like he will, Why then from Ireland come I with my strengthe, And reape the Harueft which that Rafcall fow'd. For Humfrey; being dead, as he shall be, And Henry put apart: the next for me. Exit.

Enter two or three running over the Stage, from the Murther of Duke Humfrey.

1. Runne to my Lord of Suffolke: let him know We haue difpatcht the Duke, as he commanded. 2. Oh, that it were to doe: what haue we done? Didst euer hear a man fo penent? Enter Suffolke.

1. Here comes my Lord.

Suff. Now Sirs, have you dispatcht this thing?

1. My good Lord, he's dead.

Suff. Why that's well said. Goe, get you to my Houfe, I will reward you for this venturous deed: The King and all the Peeres are here at hand, Haue you layment faire the Bed? Is all things well, According as I gaue directions.

1. 'Tis, my good Lord. Suff. Away, be gone. Exit.

Sound Trumpets. Enter the King, the Queen, Cardinall, Suffolke, Somerjet, with attendants.

King. Goe call our Vnckle to our presence straight: Say, we intend to try his Grace to day, If he be guiltie, as 'tis published.

Suff. Ile call him presently, my Noble Lord. Exit. King. Lords take your places: and I pray you all Proceed no straiter 'gainst our Vnckle Glofter, Then from true evidence, of good efteeme, He be approvd in praifliche culpable.

Queen. God forbid any Malice should preuaule, That faultifie may condemn a Noble man: Pray God he may acquit him of futilution.

King. I thanke thee Neill, these wordes content mee much.

Enter Suffolke.

Card. Gods secret Iudgement: I did dreaume to Night, The Duke was dumbe, and could not speake a word. King sounds.

Qu. How fares my Lord? Helpe Lords, the King is dead.

Suff. Rere vp his Body, wring him by the Nose.

Qu. How fares my gracious Lord?

Suff. Comfort my Soueraigne, gracious Henry comfor-

King. What, doth my Lord of Suffolke comfort me?

Came he right now to fing a Rauens Note, Whose dimmall tune benefit my Vitall powres: And thinkes he, that the chirping of a Wren,

By crying comfort from a hollow breaste,

Can chafe away the fird-conceied found? Hide not thy payson with such fугed words,

Lay not thy hands on me: forbeare I say,

Their touch affrights me as a Serpents fling.

Thou balefull Messenger, out of my fight:

Vpon thy eye-balls, murderous Tyrannie

Sits in grim Maiestie, to fright the World.

Looke not vpone me, for thine eyes are wounding;

Yet doe not goe away: come Bafliske,

And kill the innocent gazer with thy fight:

For in the shade of death, I shall finde joye;

In life, but double death, now Glofter's dead.

Queen. Why do you raise my Lord of Suffolke thus?

Although the Duke was enemie to him, Yet he moft Christian-like laments his death:

And for my selfe, Foe as he was to me,

Might liquid teares, or heart-offending groanes,

Or blood-consuming fighes recall his Life;

n 3
The second Part of Henry the Sixt.

I would be blinde with weeping, sicke with grones, Looke pale as Prim-role with blood-drinking fishes, And all to have the Noble Duke alive.

What know I how the world may deeme of me? Nor is it nowne we were but hollow Friends: It may be iudg'd I made the Duke away, So thall my name with Slanders tongue be wounded, And Princes Courts be fill'd with my reproach: This get I by his death: Aye me vnhappy, To be a Queene, and Crown'd with infamie.

King. Ah woe is me for Gloster, wretched man.

Queene. Be woe for me, more wretched then he is. What, Doft thou turne away, and hide thy face? I am no loathsome Leaper, looke on me. What? Art thou like the Ader waxen daefe? Be pouzounous too, and kill thy forlorn Queenne. Is all thy comfort shuf in Glosters Tombe? Why then Dame Elianor was neere thy joy. Ereft his Statue, and worship it, And make my Image but an Ale-house signe. Was I for this nye wrack'd upon the Sea, And twice by awkward winde from Englands banke Droue backe againe vnto my Natucle Clime. What boaded this? but well fore-waring winde Did feeme to say, seek not a Scorpions Neft, Nor fea footing on this vnkinde Shore. What did I then? But curft the gentle gufts, And he that lood them forth their Brazen Caues, And bid them blow towards Englands blissted shore, Or turne our Sterne upon a dreadful Rocke: Yet Æolus would not be a murtherer, But left that hatefull office vnto thee. The pretty vaulting Sea refus'd to drowne me, Knowing that thou wouldst haue me drown'd on shore With teares as fall as Sea, through thy vnkindesse. The splirting Rockes cow'd at the finking sands, And would not dash me with their ragged sides, Because thy flinty heart more hard then they, Might in thy Pallace, perih Elianor. As farre as I could ken thy Chalky Cliffes, When from thy Shore, the Tempeft beate vs backe, I stood vpon the Hatches in the storme: And when the dudle sky, began to rob My earneft-gaping-fight of thy Landa view, I took a coffly Jewell from my necke, A Hart it was bound in with Diamonds, And thruw it towards thy Land: The Sea receiued it, And so I wish'd thy body might my Heart: And even with this, I loft faire Englands view, And bid mine eyes be packing with my Heart, And call'd them blinde and duskie Speacles, For loofing ken of Ælibions wish'd Coaft. How often haue I tempted Suffolkes tongue (The agent of thy foule inconstancie) To fit and watch me as Aescaunus did, When he to madding Ælios would vnofold His Fathers Acts, commenc'd in burning Troy. Am I not worth like her? Or thou not falle like him? Aye me, I can no more: Dye Elianor, For Henrie weepes, that thou doft liue so long.

Noyes within. Enter Warwicke, and many Commons.

War. It is reported, mighty Soueraigne, That good Duke Humfrey Traiterously is murdered

By Sufholke, and the Cardinal Beaufords means: The Commons like an angry Hvie of Bees That want their Leader, flatter vp and downe, And care not who they sting in his reuenge. My selfe haue calm'd their spleenfull mutinie, Vntill they heare the order of his death.

King. That he is dead good Warwicke, 'tis too true, But how he dyed, God knowes, not Henrie: Enter his Chamber, view his breathlesse Corpes, And comment then vpon his fodeaine death.

War. That shall I do my Liege; Stay Salisbury With the rude multitude, till I returne. King. O thou that judgest all things, say my thoughts: My thoughts, that labour to perfwade my soule, Some violent hands were laid on Humfries life: If my suspet be false, forgive me God, For judgmem only doth belong to thee: Faine would I go to chafe his pale lips, With twenty thoufand kifles, and to draine Vpon his face an Ocean of falt teares, To tell my loue vnto his dumbe daefe trunke, And with my fingers feel his hand, vnfeeling: But all in vaine are these Meane Oblequies, Bed put forth. And to suruey his dead and earthy Image: What were it but to make my forrow greater?

War. Come hither gracious Soueraigne, view this body.

King. That is to fee how deepe my graue is made, For with his foule fled all my worldly folace: For seeing him, I see my life in death.

War. As surely as my foule intends to liue With that dread King that tooke our flatce vpon him, To free vs from his Fathers wrathfull curfe, I do beleue that violent hands were laid Vpon the life of this thriefe-famed Duke.

War. See how the blood is fetted in his face. Ofte haue I feene a timely-parted Ghooft, Of afhy famblance, meager, pale, and bloodleffe, Being all descended to the labouring heart, Who in the Confict that it holds with death, Attraets the fame for aydance gainft the enemy, Which with the heart there cooles, and ne'ere returneth, To bluish and beautifie the Cheeke againe. But fee, his face is blacke, and full of blood: His eye-balles further out, than when he liued, Staring full gally, like a strangled man: His hayre vpreard, his nostrils stretche with frugling: His hands abroad display'd, as one that graffit And tugg'd for Life, and was by strength subduce. Looke on the sheets his haire (you see) is flicking, His well proportion'd Beard, made ruffe and rugged, Like to the Summers Corne by Tempeft lodged: It cannot be but he was murdred here, The leaff of all thefe signes were probable.

Sof. Why Warwicke, who should do the D.to death? My selfe and Beauford had him in protection, And we I hope fir, are no murtherers.

War. But both of you were worred D.Humfries foes, And you (forboth) had the good Duke to kepe: Tis like you would not feaft him like a friend, And 'tis well feene, he found an enemy.

Queene. Than you belike suspet thes Noblemen, As guilty of Duke Humfries timeleffe death.

War.
The second Part of Henry the Sixth.

Warr. Who finds the Heyder dead, and bleeding freth,
And fees fast-bye, a Butcher with an Axe,
But will suppose, 'twas he that made the slaughter?
Who finds the Partrige in the Puttocks Neft,
But may imagine how the Bird was dead,
Although the Kyte soare with vnbloudied Beake?
Euen so fulpiusius is this Tragedie.

Qu. Are you the Butcher, Suffolk? where's your Knife?

Is Beauford team'd a Kyte? where are his Talions?

Suff. I weare no Knife, to slaughter sleeping men,
But here's a vengefull Sword, ruffled with eafe,
That shall be fowred in his rancorous heart,
That flanders me with Murther's Crimmon Badge.
Say, if thou dar'p, proud Lord of Warwickshire,
That I am faultie in Duke Hamfreys death.

Warr. What dares not Warwick, if falfe Suffolk dare him?

Qu. He dares not calme his contumelious Spirit,
Nor ceafe to be an arrogant Controller,
Though Suffolk dare him twentieth thousand times.

Warr. Madame be still: with reverence may I say,
For every word you speake in his behalf,
Is flander to your Royall Dignity.

Suff. Blunt-witted Lord, ignorant in demeanor,
If euer Lady wrong'd her Lord so much,
Thy Mother tooke into her blamefull Bed
Some fterne vnturat Charle: and Noble Stock
Was grafted with Crab-tree slipspe, whole Fruit thou art,
And neuer of the Nesils Noble Race.

Warr. But that the guilt of Murther bucklers thee,
And I shoul rob the Deaths-man of his Fee,
Quitting thee thereby of ten thousand shames,
And that my Soueraigne preferce makes me milde,
I would, falfe mur'deous Coward, on thy Knee
Make thee begge pardon for thy passe fpeech,
And say, it was thy Mother that thou meant'st,
That thou thy felte waft borne in Baffardle;
And after all this fearefull Homage done,
Glee thee thy hyre, and send thy Soule to Hell,
Pernicious blood-sucker of sleeping men.

Suff. Thou shalt be wakynge, while I thee by blood,
If from this preferce thou dar'ft goe with me.

Warr. Away eu evenow, or I will drag thee hence:
Vnworthy though thou art, Ic e cope with thee,
And doe some servise to Duke Hamfreys Ghoff.

Execunt.

King. What stronger Bred-plate then a heart unainted?
Thrice is he arm'd, that hath his Quarrell luft,
And he but naked, though lockt vp in Steele,
Whole Confidence with Injustice is corrupted.

A noye within.

Queene. What noyse is this?

Enter Suffolk and Warwick, with their Weapons drawn.

King. Why how now Lords?
Your wrathfull Weapons drawn, how
Here in our presence? Dare you be so bold?
Why what tumultuous clamour have we here?

Suff. The tray'r'rous Warwick, with the men of Bury,
Set all upon me, mightie Soueraigne.

Enter Salisbury.

Salsib. Sirs stand apart, the King shall know your minds.

Dread Lord, the Commons send you word by me,
Vnleffe Lord Suffolk straight be done to death,
Or banished faire Englandes Territories,
They will by violence tear him from your Pallace,
And torture him with grieuous linging death.
They lay, by him the good Duke Hamfrey dy'de:
They lay, in them they fear your Highness death;
And meere ininfinit of Loue and Loyaltie,
Free from a frubborne opposite intent,
As being thought to contradict your liking,
Makes them thus forward in his Banishment.
They say, in care of your most Royall Person,
That if your Highneffe should intend to sleepe,
And charge, that no man should disturbe your rest,
In paine of your dislike, or paine of death;
Yet notwithstanding such a strait Edict,
Were there a Serpent fene, with forked Tongue,
That flyly gyled towards your Maiestie,
It were but necessarie you were wak't:
Leaft being suffer'd in that harmefull slumber,
The mortall Worne might make the sleepe eternall.
And therefore doe they cry, though you forbid,
That they will guard you, where you will, or no,
From fuch foul Serpents as Suffolk gos;
With whose innuended and fatall fling,
Your louing Vnckle, twente times his worth,
They say is haimefull bere of life.

Commons within. An answer from the King, my Lord of Salisbury.

Suff. 'Tis like the Commons, rude vnpolisht Hindes,
Could send fuch Meffeage to their Soueraigne:
But you, my Lord, were glad to be imploy'd,
To fhow how queint an Orator you are.
But all the Honor Salisbury hath wonne,
Is, that he was the Lord Embaffador,
Sent from a fort of Tinkers to the King.

Within. An answer from the King, or wee will all breakes in.

King. Go to Salisbury, and tell them all from me,
I thanke them for their tender louing care;
And had I not bene cited fo by them,
Yet did I purpose as they doe entreat:
For sure, my thoughts doe hourly prophecie,
Milchance vnto my State by Suffolkes meanes.
And therefore by his Maiestie I swear,
Whole farrd-vnworthie Deputie I am,
He shall not breathe inthis ayr,
But three dayes longer, on the paine of death.

Qu. Oh Henry, let me pleade for gentle Suffolk.

King. Vgentle Queene, to call him gentle Suffolk.
No more I say: if thou don't pleade for him,
Thou wilt but adde encreafe unto my Wrath.
Had I but sayd, I would have kept my Word;
But when I swear, it is irreuocable:
If after three dayes space thou here be't found,
On any ground that I am Ruler of,
The World shall not be Ranponde for thy Life.
Come Warwick, come good Warwick, goe with mee,
I have great matters to impart to thee.

Exeunt.

Qu. Milchance and Sorrow goe along with you,
Hearts Discontent, and fowre Affliction,
Be fay-pleasowe to keepe you companie:
There's two of you, the Deuill make a third,
And three-fold Vengeance tend upon your steps.

Suff. Ceafe, gentle Queene, thefe Execrations,
And let thy Suffolk take his heauie leauue.

Queene. Fye.
The second Part of Henry the Sixt.

Queene. Fye Coward woman, and soft harted wretch, Haft thou not spirit to curfe thine enemy.

Suf. A plague vpon them: wherefore should I curfe them?

Would curfes kill, as doth the Mandrakes grone, I would invent as bitter searching terms, As curf, as harsh, and horrible to hear, Delier’d strongly through my fixed teeth, With full as many signes of deadly hate, As leane-fac’d enuy in her loathfome face. My tongue shou’d rumble in mine earnt words, Mine eyes should sparkle like the beaten Flint, Mine hair be fixt as an, one diffraf : I, every joynt should seeme to curfe and ban, And euen now my burthen’d heart would breake Should I not curfe them. Poyfon be their drinke. Gall, worfe then Gall, the daintieft that they taste: Their sweetef shade, a groue of Cypresse Trees: Their cheefeft Prophet, murr’d ring Bafilsikes: Their softef Touch, as smart as Lyzzards flings: Their Muficke, frightfull as the Serpents hiffe, And boading Sereech-Owles, make the Comfort full. All the foule terrours in darke fcorched hell.

Q. Enough sweet Suffolke, thou torment’t thy felfe, And th’dead curef curfes like the Sunne’gainft glaffe, Or like an ouer-charged Gun, recoile, And turns the force of them vpon thy felfe. Suf. You bad me ban, and will you bid me leafe? Now by the ground that I am banish’d from, Well cou’d I curfe away a Winters night, Though flanding naked on a Mountain top, Where byting cold would neuer let graffe grow, And think it is but a minute spent in sport. Qy. Oh, let me intreat thee ceafe, glue me thy hand, That I may dew it with my mornfull tea:

Nor let the raine of heauen wet this place, To wash away my woefull Monuments. Oh, cou’d this kiffe be printed in thy hand, That thou might’st thynke vpon thefe by the Seale, Through whom a thoufand sighes are breath’d for thee. So get thee gone, that I may know my grefs, ‘Tis but formiz’d, whiles thou art flanding by, As one that surfets, thinking on a want : I will repeale thee, or be well affur’d, Advenure to be banish’d my felfe; And banifhed I am, if but from thee. Go, speake not to me; even now be gone. Oh go not yet. Euen thus, two Friends condemn’d, Embrace, and kiffe, and take ten thoufand leaues, Loathet a hundred times to part then dye; Yet now farewell, and farewell Life with thee. Suf. Thus is poore Suffolke ten times banifhed, Once by the King, and three times thrice by thee. ‘Tis not the busy I care for, war’t thou thence, A Wildernefe is populous enough, So Suffolke had thy heavenly company: For where thou art, there is the World it felfe, With euery feueral pleasure in the World: And where thou art not, Defolation, I can no more: Live thou to ioy thy life; My felfe no ioy in nought, but that thou liu’st.

Enter Vaux.

Vaux. To signifie vnto his Maeliftye, That Cardinall Beauford is at point of death : For sodainly a greeuous sicknesse tooke him, That makes him gaspe, and stare, and catch the aire, Blaspheming God, and curfing men on earth. Sometime he talkes, as if Duke Humfries Ghost Were by his side: Sometime, he calleth the King, And whispers to his pillow, as to him, The secrets of his ouer-charged soule, And I am fent to tell his Maeliftye, That euen now he cries slowd for him. Qu. Go tell this heauy Message to the King. Exit Aye me! What is this World? What newes are these? But wherefore greeue I at an hours poore loss, Omitting Suffolkes exile, my foules Treasure? Why onely Suffolke mourne I not for thee? And with the Southern clouds, contend in teares? Thois for the earths encreafe, mine for my forrowes. Now get thee hence, the King thou know’st is comming, If thou be found by me, thou art but dead. Suf. If I depart from thee, I cannot live, And in thy fight to dye, what were it elege, But like a pleafant flumber in thy lap? Here cou’d I breath my foule into the ayre, As milde and gentle as the Cradle-bane, Dying with mothers dugge betweene it’s lips. Where from thy fight, I should be raging mad, And cry out for thee to clofe vp mine eyes: To have thee with thy lips to stop my mouth : So should’t thou euyther turne my flying foule, Or I should breathe it fo into thy body, And then it liu’d in sweete Elijium. To dye by thee, were but to dye in left, From thee to dye, were torture more then death : Oh let me flay, befal what may befal. Queene. Away! Though parting be a fretfull corollaire, It is appoyded to a deathfull wound. To France sweet Suffolke : Let me hearne from thee : For wherefore thou art in this worlds Globe, Ie haue an Iri that shall finde thee out. Suf. I go. Qu. And take my heart with thee. Suf. A Iewell lockt into the woful Caske, That euer did containe a thing of worth, Euen as a splittet Barkes, so funder we : This way fall I to death. Qu. This way for me. Exeunt

Enter the King, Salisbury, and Warwicks, to the Cardinal in bed.

King. How fare’s my Lord? Speake Beauford to thy Surreyaigne.

Ca. If thou beest death, Ile glue thee Englands Treasures, Enough to purchase such another Island, So thou wilt let me live, and feele no paine. King. Ah, what a signe it is of euill life, Where death’s approach is seene fo terible. War. Beauford, it is thy Surreyaigne speakes to thee. Beauf. Bring me vnto my Triall when you will. Dy’d he not in his bed? Where should he dye? Can I make men liue where they will or no? Oh torture me no more, I will confesse. Aliue againe? Then shew me where he is, Ile glue a thousand pound to looke vpon him. He hath no eyes, the duft hath blinded them.
The second Part of Henry the Sixt.

Combe downe his haire; looke, looke, it standes vp right,
Like Lime-twiges let to catch my winged soule:
Grieve me some drinkes, and bid the Apothecarie
Bring the strong pooyon that I bought of him.

King. Oh thou eternall mouer of the heauens,
Looke with a gentle eye vpon this Wretch,
Oh beate away the bufie medling Fiend,
That layes strong fiege vnto this wretches soule,
And from his boosome purge this blacke dispaire.

War. See how the panges of death doe make him grin.
Sal. Disturbe him not, let him paffe peaceably.

King. Peace to his soule, if Gods good pleasure be.
Lord Cardnall, if thou thinke'st on heauens bliss,
Hold vp thy hand, make signall of thy hope,
He dies and makes no signe: Oh God forgive him.

War. So bad a death, argues a monstrous life.

King. Forbeare to judge, for we are sinners all.
Cloe vp his eyes, and draw the Curtaine close,
And let vs all to Meditation.

Exeunt.

Alarum. Fight at Sea. Ordaunce goes off.

Enter Lieutenant, Suffolk, and others.

Lieut. The gaudy babbling and remorsefull day,
Is crept into the boosome of the Sea:
And now loud howling Wolves arouse the Iades
That dragge the Tragickene melancholy night:
Who with their drowze, flow, and flagging wings
Cleare dead-men graues, and from their misty Iawes,
Breath soule contagious darknesse in the ayre:
Therefore bring forth the Souldiers of our prize,
For whilst our Pinncace Anchors in the Downes,
Heere shall they make their ranfome on the fand,
Or with their blood taine this dicoloured shore.

Marter, this Prisoner freely give I thee,
And thou that art his Mate, make boote of this:
The other Walter Whitmore is thy fhour.

Mac. A thousand Crownes, or elf lay down your head.

Mate. And so much shall you give, or off goes yours.

Lieut. What thinke you much to pay 2000 Crownes,
And beare the name and port of Gentlemen?
Cut both the Villaines throats, for you shal:
The lives of those which we have loft in fight,
Be counter-poss'd with such a pettie fummings:
1. Gent. Ie give it vp, and therefore spare my life.
2. Gent. And so will I, and write home for it straitly.

Whit. I loft mine eye in laying the prize aboord,
And therefore to reuenge it, shalt thou dye,
And so should thefe, if I might have my will.

Lieut. Be not so rafh, take ranfome, let him liue.

Suf. Looke on my George, I am a Gentleman,
Rate me at what thou wilt, thou shalt be payed.

Whit. And so am I my name is Walter Whitmore.
How now? why stars thou? What doth death affright?

Suf. Thy name affrights me, in whose found is death:
A cunning man did calculate my birth,
And told me by that Water I shoulde dye:
Yet let not this make thee be bloody-minded,
Thy name is Gualtier, being rightly founded.

Whit. Gualtire or Walter, which it is I care not,
Neuer yet did bafe dighton our houre our name,
But with our sword we wip'd away the blot.
Therefore, when Merchant-like I fell reuenge,
Broke be my sword, my Armes torne and defac'd,
And I proclaim'd a Coward through the world.

Suf. Stay Whitmore, for thy Prisoner is a Prince,
The Duke of Suffolk, William de la Pole.

Whit. The Duke of Suffolkes, muffled vp in ragges?
Suf. I, but these ragges are no part of the Duke.

Lieut. But loue was neuer slaine as thou shalt be,
Obfure and lowfie Swaine, King Henryes blood.

Suf. The honourable blood of Lancaster
Muft not be shed by such a laded Groome:
Haft thou not kift thy hand, and held my firrop?
Bare-headed plodded by my foot-cloth Mule,

And thought thee happy when I booke my head.
How often haft thou waited at my cup,
Fed from my Trencher, knell'd downe at the boord,
When I have feasted with Queene Margaret?

Remember it, and let it make thee Creft-faine,
I, and alay this thy abtolute Pride:
How in our voyding Lobby haft thou ftood,
And duly wayted for my comming forth?
This hand of mine hath writ in thy behalf,
And therefore shall it charme thy riutous tongue.

Whit. Speak Captaine, shall I flab the forlorn Swain.

Lieut. First let my words flab him, as he hath me.

Suf. Safe flawe, thy words are blunt, and fo art thou.

Lieut. Conuey him hence, and on our long boats fide,
Strike off his head.

Suf. Thou dar'st not for thy owne.

Lieut. Pool, Sir Pool? Lord, I kennell, puddle, finke, whose filth and dirt Troubles the fluer Spring, where England drinks.
Now will I dam vp this thy yawning mouth,
For swallowing the Treasure of the Realme.

Thy lips that kift the Queene, shall swepe the ground:
And that thow fmil'd at good Duke Hamfries death,
Against the fenfeless windes shall grin in vaine,
Who in contempt shall hisse at thee again.

And wedded be thou to the Hagges of hell,
For daring to affyle a mighty Lord
Vnto the daughter of a worthifull King,
Haveing neyther Subiect, Wealth, nor Diadem:
By diuellifh policy art thou gnowne great,
And like ambitious Sylla ouer-gord'd,
With gobbets of thy Mother-bleeding heart.
By thee Aniou and Maine were fold to France.
The falle reuolting Normans thorough thee,
Dildaine to call vs Lord, and Picardie
Hath flaine their Governors, surpriz'd our Forts,
And fent the ragged Souldiers wounded home.
The Princeley Warwicke, and the Neslais ali,
Whole dreadfulful fwords were neuer drawne in vaine,
As hating thee, and riung vp in armes.
And now the Houfe of Yorke thrust from the Crowne,
By thamefull murther of a guiltife King,
And lofty proud incroaching tyranny,
Burnes with reuenging fire, whose hopfull colours
Advance our halfe-fac'd Sunne, fiuing to shine;
Vnder which is writ, Invitit nubibus.
The Commons heere in Kent are vp in armes,
And to conclude, Reproach and Beggerie,
Is crept into the Pallace of our King,
And all by thee: away, conuey him hence.

Suf. O that I were a God, to shoo forth Thunder
Upon thofe paltry, ferulle, abfol Drujges:
Small things make bafe men proud. This Villaine heere,
Being Captaine of a Pinncace, threatens more
Then Bargius the ftrong Illyrian Pyrate.

Drones fuckle not Eagles blood, but rob Bee-huies:
It is impossiible that I should dye

By
The second Part of Henry the Sixt.

By such a lowly Vaillant as thy selfe.

Thy words moue Rage, and not remorse in me:
I go of Meffage from the Queene to France to
I charge thee wafte me safely croffe the Channell.

Lieu. Water: W. Come Suffolkes, I must waft thee to thy death.

Suf. Pine gelidae timor aceptat artus, it is thee I feare.

Wal. Thou that haue caufe to feare before I leave thee.

What, are ye danted now? Now will ye ftoope.

Suf. Suffolkes Imperial tongue is stern and rough:

Vs'd to command, vntaught to please for favour,
Farre be it, we should honor such as thefe
With humble fulte: no, rather let my head
Stoop to the blocke, then thefe knees bow to any,
Sawe to the God of heauen, and to my King:
And sooner dance upon a bloody pole,
Then fhould vulnerable to the Vulgar Groome.

True Nobility, is exempt from feare:

More can I beare, then you dare execute.

Lieu. Hale him away, and let him talk no more:

Come Souldiers, fhew what cruelty ye can.

Suf. That this my death may neuer be forgot.

Great men oft dye by vile Bezonions.

A Romane Sworder, and Bandetto flau.

Murther'd sweet Tally. Brutus Baffard hand

Stab'd Julus Caesar. Savage Hangers

Pompey the Great, and Suffolk dyes by Pryrats.

Exit Water with Suffolk.

Lieu. And as for thefe whose ranfome we have fet,
It is our pleafure one of them depart:

Therefore come you with vs, and let him go.

Exit Lieutenant, and the refi.

Manet the firft Gent. Enter Walter with the body.

Wal. There let his head, and liueffe bodie lye,

Vntill the Queene his Misfirs bury it. Exit Walter.

1. Gent. O barbarous and bloudy spectacle,

His body will I beare vnto the King:

If he reuenge it not, yet will his Friends,
So will the Queene, that living, held him deere.

Enter Beau, and John Holland.

Beau. Come and get thee a sword, though made of a

Lath, they haue bene vp thefe two days.

Hol. They have the more neede to sleepe now then.

Beau. I tell thee, take Cade the Cloathier, meanes to dreffe the Common-wealthe and turne it, and fet a new nap vpone it.

Hol. So he had need, for 'tis thred-bare. Well, I fay, it was neuer merrie world in England, since Gentlemen came vp.

Beau. O piferible Age: Vertue is not regarded in Handy-crafts men.

Hol. The Nobilitie thinke fcorne to goe in Leather

Aprons.

Beau. Nay more, the Kings Counsell are no good

Workemen.

Hol. True: and yet it is faid, Labour in thy Vociation:
in which is as much to fay, as let the Magiftrates be labouring men, and therefore should we be Magiftrates.

Beau. Thou haft hit it: for there's no better figne of a brave minde, then a hard hand.

Hol. I fee them, I fee them: There's Byfls Sonne, the Tanner of Wingham.

Beau. Hee fhall haue the skinnes of our enemies, to make Dogges Leather of.

Hol. And Dicke the Butcher.

Beau. Then is fln frucke downe like an Oxe, and ini-quities throate cut like a Calfe.

Hol. And Smith the Weauer.

Beau. Argos, their thred of life is flun.

Hol. Come, come, let's fall in with them.

Drumme. Enter Cade, Dicke Butcher, Smith the Weauer, and a Sawyer, with infinite numbers.

Cade. Wee John Cade, to tearn'd of our supposed Father.

But. Or rather of fealing a Cade of Herrings.

Cade. For our enemies shall fall before vs, inspired with the spirit of putting down Kings and Princes. Command filence.

But. Silence.

Cade. My Father was a Mortimer.

But. He was an honest man, and a good Bricklayer.

Cade. My mother a Plantagenet.

But. I knew her well, she was a Midwife.

Cade. My wife defcended of the Lacies.

But. She was indeed a Pedlers daughter, & told many Laces.

Weauer. But now of late, not able to trauell with her furr'd Packe, the wafhes buckes here at home.

Weauer. Therefore am I of an honorable houfe.

But. I by my faith, the field is honourable, and there was he borne, vnder a hedge: for his Father had neuer a houfe but the Cage.

Cade. Valiant I am.

Weauer. A muft needs, for beggary is valiant.

Cade. I am able to endure much.

But. No queffion of that: for I haue feene him whipt three Market dayes together.

Cade. I feare neither fword, nor fire.

Wea. He neede not feare the fword, for his Coate is of Profe.

But. But me thinks he fhould stand in feare of fire, being burnt i'th hand for fealing of Shepe.

Cade. Be braue then, for your Captain is Braue, and Vowes Reformation. There fhall be in England, feuen halfe peny Loases fould for a peny: three the hoop'd pot, shall haue ten hoopes, and I wil make it Felony to drink small Beere. All the Realme fhall be in Common, and in Cheapfide fhall my Palfrey goe to graffe: and when I am

King, as King I will be.

All. God faue your Malefty.

Cade. I thank ye good people. There fhall bee no mony, all fhall eate and drinke on my score, and I will apparell them all in one Livery, that they may agree like Brothers, and worship me their Lord.

But. The firft thing we do, let's kill all the Lawyers.

Cade. Nay, that I meane to do. Is not this a lamente-ble thing, that of the skin of an innocent Lambe should be made Parchment; that Parchment being scribeld ore, should vnfoe a man. Some fay the Bee flyings, but I fay,
'tis the Bees waxe: for I did but faile once to a thing, and
I was neuer mine owne man fince. How now? Who's there?

Enter a Cearke.

Weauer. The Clearke of Chartam: hee can write and reade, and caie accompt.

Cade. O monftrous.

Wea. We tooke him fetting of boyes Copies.
Cade. Here's a Villaine.

Vex. He's a Bookie in his pocket with red Letters in't.

Cade. Nay then he is a Conjurier.

But. Nay, he can make Obligations, and write Court hand.

Cade. I am sorry for't: The man is a proper man of mine Honour: vnleffe I finde him guilty, he shall not die. Come hither Sirrah, I must examine thee: What is thy name?

Cleark. Emanuell.

But. They vfe to write it on the top of Letters: 'Twill go hard with you.

Cade. Let me alone: Doft thou vfe to write thy name? Or hast thou a marke to thy selfe, like a honeft plain dealing man?

Cleark. Sir I thank God, I have bin so well brought vp, that I can write my name.

All. He hath confent: away with him: he's a Villaine and a Traitor.

Cade. Away with him I say: Hang him with his Pen and Inke-horne about his necke.

Exit one with the Cleark

Enter Michael.

Mich. Where's our Generall?

Cade. Here he am thou particular fellow.

Mich. Fly, fly, fly, Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother are hard by, with the Kings Forces.

Cade. Stand villaine, stand, or I'll fell thee downe: he shall be encountered with a man as good as himselfe. He is but a Knight, is a?

Mich. No.

Cade. To equall him I will make my selfe a knight prently; Rife vp Sir Iohn Mortimer. Now haue at him.

Enter Sir Humphrey Stafford, and his Brother, with Drum and Soldiers.

Staf. Rebellious Hinds, the filth and scum of Kent, Mark'd for the Gallowes: Lay your Weapons downe, Home to your Cottages: forfake this Grome.

The King is mercifull, if you revolt.

Bro. But angry, wrathfull, and inclin'd to blood,
If you go forward: therefore yeeld, or dye.

Cade. As for these silken-coated flaues I passe not, It is to you good people, that I speake,
Ouer whom (in time to come) I hope to raigne:
For I am rightfull heyre vnto the Crowne.

Staff. Villaine, thy Father was a Playterer,
And thou thy selfe a Sheareman, art thou not?

Cade. And Adam was a Gardiner.

Bro. And what of that?

Cade. Marry, this Edmund Mortimer Earle of March, married the Duke of Clarence daughter, did he not?

Staf. I fir.

Cade. By her he had two children at one birth.

Bro. That's false.

Staf. I, there's the question; But I say, 'tis true: The elder of them being put to nurse, Was by a begger-woman stolen away,
And ignorant of his birth and parentage, Became a Bricklayer, when he came to age.
His fonne am I, deny it if you can.

But. Nay, 'tis too true, therefore he shall be King.

Vex. Sir, he made a Chimney in my Fathers house, & the brickes are alioe at this day to tellifie it: therefore deny it not.

Staf. And will you credit this base Drudges Words, that speakes he knowes not what.

All. I marry will we: therefore get ye gone.

Bro. I achke Cade, the D. of York hath taught you this.

Cade. He lyes, for I invented it my selfe. Go too Sirrah, tell the King frome me, that for his Fathers sake Henry the fifth, (in whole time, boyes went to Span-counter for French Crownes) I am content he shall raigne, but I'll be Protecor ouer him.

Butcher. And furthermore, we'll haue the Lord Sayes head, for telling the Dukedome of Maine.

Cade And good reafon: for thereby is England main'd And fame to go with a raffe, but that my puifance holds it vp. Fellow-Kings, I tell you, that that Lord Say hath gelded the Commonwealth, and made it an Eunuch: & more then that, he can speake French, and therefore hee is a Traitor.

Staf. O groffe and miserable ignorance.

Cade. Nay anfwer if you can: The Frenchmen are our enemies: go too then, I ask but this: Can he that speakes with the tongue of an enemy, be a good Counsellor, or no?

All. No, no, and therefore wee'll haue his head.

Bro. Well, seeing gentle words will not prevaile,
Affayle them with the Army of the King.

Staf. Herald away, and throughout every Towne,
Proclaine them Traitors that are vp with Cade.
That those which flye before the battell ends,
May euen in their Wives and Childrens fight,
Be hang'd vp for example at their doores:
And you that be the Kings Friends follow me.

Exit.

Cade. And you that love the Commons, follow me:
Now fhyr your felues men, 'tis for Liberty.
We will not leave one Lord, one Gentleman:
Spare none, but fuch as go in clouted fhoen,
For they are thrifty honeft men, and fuch
As would (but that they dare not) take our parts.

But. They are all in order, and march toward vs.

Cade. But then are we in order, when we are moft out of order. Come, march forward.

A llarum to the fight, wherein both the Staffords are slain.

Enter Cade and the ref.

Cade. Where's Dicke, the Butcher of Ashford?

But. Heere fir.

Cade. They fell before thee like Sheepe and Oxen, & thou behaued'th thy felfe, as if thou hadit beene in thine owne Slaughter-houfe: Therefore thus will I reward thee, the Lent fhall be as long againe as it is, and thou fhall haue a Licenfe to kill for a hundred lacking one.

But. I define no more.

Cade. And to speake truth, thou deferu'th no leffe.
This Monument of the victorie will I beare, and the bodies shall be dragg'd at my horse heeles, till I do come to London, where we will haue the Maiors Iword born before vs.

But. If we meane to thrive, and do good, breake open the Gaoles, and let out the Prisoners.

Cade. Feare not that I warrant thee. Come, let's march towards London.

Exeunt.

Enter the King with a Supplication, and the Queene with Suffelkes bead, the Duke of Buckingham, and the Lord Say.

Queene. Oft haue I heard that greese softens the mind.

And
The second Part of Henry the Sixt.

And makes it fearfull and degenerate,
Think therefore on revenge, and ceased to weep.
But who can cease to weep, and looke on this?
Here may his head lye on my throbbing brest:
But where's the body that I should imbrace?

But. What answer makes your Grace to the Rebels Supplication?

King. He send some holy Bishop to intreat:
For God forbid, so many fimple soules
Should perish by the Sword. And I my felfe,
Rather then bloody Warre shall cut them short,
Will parley with Jacke Cade their Generall.
But stay, 11e read it ouer once again.

Qu. Ah barbarous villains: Hath this lovely face,
Ru'd like a wandering Planeter ouer me,
And could not inforce them to relent,
That were unworthy to behold the fame.

King. Lord Say, Jacke Cade hath sworn to huse thy head.

Say. I, but I hope your Highness shall hauve his.

King. How now Madam?
Still lamenting and mourning for Suffolkes death?
I feare me (Lowe) if that I had beene dead,
Thou would'nt then have mourd so much for me.

Qu. No my Lowe, I should not mourne, but dye for thee.

Enter a Messenger.

King. How now? What newes? Why com't thou in such haste?

Mf. The Rebels are in Southwatke: Fly my Lord:
Jacke Cade proclaims himselfe Lord Mortimer,
Defended from the Duke of Clarence house,
And calles your Grace Visuper, openly,
And voices to Crowne himselfe in Westminster.
His Army is a ragged multitude
Of Hindes and Peazants, rude and mercifull:
Sir Humphrey Stafford, and his Brothers death,
Hath given them heart and courage to procede:
All Schollers, Lawyers, Courtiers, Gentlemen,
They call falle Catterpillers, and intend their death.

Kin. Oh gracefull men: they know not what they do.

Buck. My gracious Lord, retire to Kilingworth,
Vnstill a power be rais'd to put them downe.

Qu. Ah were the Duke of Suffolke now alive,
The felf Kentifh Rebels would be foone appeas'd.

King. Lord Say, the Traitors hateh thee,
Therefore away with vs to Kilingworth.

Say. So might your Grace persion be in danger:
The fight of me is odious in their eyes:
And therefore in this City will I flay,
And live alone as secret as I may.

Enter another Messenger.

The Citizens fye and forfave their houses:
The Rafcall people, threatening after pray,
Joine with the Traitor, and they joyntly sweare
To spoyle the City, and your Roall Court.

Bar. Then linger not my Lord, away, take horfe.

King. Come Margaret, God our hope will succor vs.

Qu. My hope is gone, now Suffolkke is deceit.

King. Farewell my Lord, truft not the Kentifh Rebels

Bar. Truft no body for feare you betrail.

Say. The truft I haue, is in mine innocence,
And therefore am I bold and resolute.

Enter Lord Scales upon the Tower walking. Then enters two or three Citizens below.

Scales. How now? Is Jacke Cade slaine?

1.Cit. No my Lord, nor likely to be slaine:
For they haue wonne the Bridge,
Killing all thofe that withfand them:
The L. Major coupon ayd of your Honor from the Tower
To defend the City from the Rebels.

Scales. Such ayd as I can spare you shall command,
But I am troubled here with them my felfe,
The Rebels haue affay'd to win the Tower,
But get you to Smithfield, and gather head,
And thither I will send you Mathew Goffe.
Fight for your King, your Countrey, and your Liues,
And so farwell, for I must hence againe.

Exeunt

Enter Jacke Cade and the refte, and strikes bis flagge on London stone.

Cade. Now is Mortimer Lord of this City,
And heere fitting upon London Stone,
I charge and command, that of the Cities cofl
The piffing Conduit run nothing but Clarret Wine
This firth yeares of our raigne
And now henceforward it shall be Trefon for any,
That calleth me other then Lord Mortimer.

Enter a Soldier running.

Soul. Jacke Cade, Jacke Cade.

Cade. Knocke him downe there. They kill him.

But. If this Fellow be wife, hee'ner neuer call yee Jacke

Cade more, I think he hath a very faire warning.

Diiie. My Lord, there's an Army gathered together in Smithfield.

Cade. Come, then let's goe fight with them:
But firt, goe and let London Bridge on fire,
And if you can, burne downe the Tower too.

Come, let's away.

Exeunt omnes.

Aallarums. Mathew Goffe is slain, and all the refte.
Then enter Jacke Cade, with bis Company.

Cade. So firs: now goe fome and pull down the Sauoy:
Others to'th Innes of Court, downe with them all.

Hut. I have a fuite vnto your Lordifhip.

Cade. Bee it a Lordifhippe, thou haue it for that word.

But. Onely that the Lawes of England may come out of your mouth.

John. Maffe'wil be for Law then, for he was thruf in the mouth with a Speare, and 'tis not whole yet.

Smith. Nay John, it will be finking Law, for his breath flinkez with eating toasted cheeze.

Cade. I have thought vpon it, it shall bee fo. Away, burne all the Records of the Realme, my mouth shall be the Parliament of England.

John. Then we are like to haue biting Statutes
Vniffe his teeth be pull'd out.

Cade. And hence-forward all things shall be in Common.

Enter a Messenger.

Mf. My Lord, a prize, a prize, heeres the Lord Say, which fold the Townes in France. He that made vs pay one and twenty Fifteenes, and one thilling to the pound, the last Subsidie.
Enter George, with the Lord Say.

Cade. Well, thee shall be beheaded for it ten times: Ah thou Say, thou Surge, nay thou Buckram Lord, now art thou within point-blanke of our Jurisdiction Regall. What canst thou answer to my Maiefty, for giving vp of Normandie vnto Mounfieur Bajfmeu, the Dolphin of France? Be it knowne vnto thee by thefe preuence, even the preuence of Lord Mortimer, that I am the Beesome that muft sweepe the Court cleanse of fuch fith as thou art: Thou haft moft traiterously corrupted the youth of the Realme, in eereing a Grammar Schoole: and where- as before, our Fore-fathers had no other Bookes but the Score and the Tally, thou haft caufed printing to be vs'd, and contrary to the King, his Crowne, and Dignity, thou haft built a Paper-Mill. It will be pronounced to thy Face, that thou haft men about thee, that ufually take of a Nowne and a Verbe, and fuch abominable wordes, as no Chrifian ear can endure to hear. Thou haft appoin- ted Juifles of Peace, to call poore men before them, about matters they were not able to anfwer. Moreover, thou haft put them in prifon, and because they could not reade, thou haft hang'd them, when (indeede) onely for that caufe they have beene most worthy to live. Thou doft ride in a foot-clothe, doft thou not?

Say. What of that?

Cade. Marry, thou ought'Lt not to let thy horfe weare a Cloake, when honeftr men then thou go in their Hoft and Doublets.

Dicke. And warke in their shirt to, as my fefle for ex- ample, that am a butcher.

Say. You men of Kent.

Dir. What fay you of Kent.

Say. Nothing but this: 'Tis bona terra, mala gens.

Cade. Away with him, away with him, he fpeakes Latine.

Say. Heare me but fpeake, and beare mee wher'e you will:

Kent, in the Commentaries Cefar writ,
Is term'd the ciuel'ft place of all this Ile:
Sweet is the Covntry, becaufe full of Riches,
The People Liberall, Valiant, Aflue, Wealthy,
Which makes me hope you are not void of pitty.
I fold not Emaine, I loft not Normandie,
Yet to recover them would loafe my life:
Juifice with favour haue I always done,
Prayres and Teares haue mou'd me, Gifts could never.
When haue I ought exaict at your hands?
Kent to maintaine, the King, the Realme and you,
Large gifts haue I betow'd on learned Clearkes,
Because my Booke preferv'd me to the King.
And faying Ignorance is the curfe of God,
Knowledge the Wing wherewith we flye to heauen.
Vnleffe you be poofft with diuellifh spirits,
You cannot but forbear to murther me:
This Tongue hath parlied vnto Forraigne Kings
For your behooffe.

Cade. Tut, when fruck't thou one blow in the field?

Say. Great men haue reaching handstoof haue I fruck
That I neuer saw, and frucke them dead.

Gov. O montrous Coward! What, to come behinde Folkes?

Say. Thefe checkes are pale for watching for your good

Cade. Give him a box o'th'ear, and that will make 'em red again.

Say. Long fitting to determine poore mens caufes,
Hath made me full of fickneffe and difeaces.

Cade. Ye shall have a hempen Candle then, & the help of hatchet.

Dicke. Why doft thou quier man?

Say. The Palfie, and not feare prouokes me.

Cade. Nay, he noddes at vs, as who fhould fay, Ile be even with you. Ie fee if his head will fland fledder on a pole, or no: Take him away, and behead him.

Say. Tell me: wherein haue I offended moft?

Hau e I affeded wealth, or honor? Speake.

Are my Chefts fill'd vp with extorted Gold?

Is my Apparell fumptuous to behold?

Whom haue I injur'd, that ye feele my death?

These hands are free from guiltife bloodshedding,
This breath from harbouring foule deceitfull thoughts.
O let me live.

Cade. I feele remorde in my felfe with his words: but Ile bridle it: he shall dye, and it bee but for pleading fo well for his life. Away with him, he ha's a Familiar un- der his Tongue, he fpeakes not a Gods name. Goe, take him away I fay, and strike off his head prefently,and then breake into his Sonne in Lawes houfe, Sir James Cromer, and strike off his head, and bring them both vppon two poles thither.

All. It fhall be done.

Say. Ah Countrimen: If when you make your prair's,
God fhould be fo obdurate as your felves:
How would it fare with your departed foules,
And therefore yet relent, and faue my life.

Cade. Away with him, and do as I command ye: the proudeft Peere in the Realme, fhall not weare a head on his shoulder, vnleffe he pay me tribute: there fhall not a maid be married, but the fhall pay to me her Mayden- head ere they haue it: Men fhall hold of mee in Cpite.

And we charge and command, that their foules be as free as heart can with, or tongue can tell.

Dicke. My Lord,
When fhall we go to Cheapeide, and take vp commodi- ties vpon our billes?

Cade. Marry presently.

All. O braue.

Enter one with the beads.

Cade. But is not this braue:
Let them kiffe one another: For they lou'd well
When they were allue. Now part them againe,
Leaff they confult about the giving vp
Of fome more Townes in France. Soldiers,
Deferre the spoile of the Citie vntill night:
For with these borne before vs,in fteed of Maces,
Will we ride through the ftreets, & at every Corner
Haue them kiffe. Away.

Alarum, and Retreat. Enter againe Cade, and all bi rabblement.

Cade. Vp Fifh-freete, downe Saint Magnes corner, kill and knocke downe, throw them into Thames:

Sound a parley.

What noife is this I heare?

Dare any be fo bold to found Retreat or Parley

When I command them kifse?

Enter
Enter Buckingham, and old Clifford.

Buc. I heere they be, that dare and will disturb thee:
Know Cade, we come Ambassadors from the King Vnto the Commons, whom thou haft mifled,
And heere pronounce free pardon to them all,
That will forfaketh thee, and go home in peace.
Cliff. What fay ye Countremen, will ye relent
And yeeld to mercy, whilf't is offered you,
Or let a rabble leade you to your deaths.
Who loves the King, and wilbrace his pardon,
Fling vp his cap, and say, God faue his Maiestie.
Who hateth him, and honors not his Father,
Henry the fift, that made all France to quake,
Shake he his weapon vp, and passe by.

All. God faue the King, God faue the King.
Cade. What Buckingham and Clifford are ye fo braue?
And you bafe Perants, do ye beleue him, will you needs be hang'd with your Pardons about your neckes? Hath my fword therefore broke through London gates, that you should leave me at the White-heart in Southwarke.
I thought ye would never haue given out these Armes til you had recovered your ancient Freedome. But you are all Recrants and Daftards, and delight to live in flawerie to the Nobility. Let them brakake your backes with burthens, take your houfes ouer your heads, rauith your Wifes and Daughters before your faces. For me, I will make shift for one, and fo Gods Curse light vppon you all.

All. We'l follow Cade,
We'll follow Cade.
Cliff. Is Cade the fonne of Henry the fift,
That thus you do exclame you'll go with him.
Will he conduct you through the heart of France,
And make the meanest of you Earles and Dukes?
Alas, he hath no home, no place to flye too:
Nor knowes he how to fly, but by the fpolle,
Vnleffe by robbing of your Friends, and vs.
Wer't not a lame, that whilft you lie at iarre,
The fearfull French, whom ye late vanquifhed
Should make a fhort ore-foas, and vanquiff you?
Me thinkes alreadie in this ciuill broyle,
I fee them Lording it in London streets,
Crying Village vnto all they meete.
Better ten thousand bafe-born Cades miscarry,
Then you should fpoope vnto a Frenchmans mercy.
To France, to France, and get what you haue loft:
Spare England, for it is your Native Coast:
Henry hath mony, you are ftrong and manly:
God on our fide, doubt not of Vtoriae.'

All. A Clifford, a Clifford,
We'll follow the King, and Clifford.
Cade. Was euer Feather fo lightly blowne too & fro, as this multitude? The name of Henry the fift, hales them to an hundred mifchieues, and makes them leaue me defolate. I fee them lay their heads together to furprize me.
My fword make way for me, for heere is no flaying:
in defpite of the duiels and hell, hauing through the verie middite of you, and heauens and honor be witneffe, that no want of reolution in mee, but onely my Followers bafe and ignominious trefauns, makes me betake me to my heele.

Exit. Buckingham, and old Clifford.

Exit. What is he fled? Go fome and follow him,
And he that brings his head vnto the King,
Shall have a thoufand Crownes for his reward.

Exeunt. some of them.

Follow me fouldiers, wee'll deuife a meane,
To reconcile you all vnto the King.

Sound Trumpets. Enter King, Queue, and Somerfet on the Terras.

King. Was euer King that ioy'd an earthly Throne,
And could command no more content then I?
No fooner was I crept out of my Cradle,
But I was made a King, at nine months olde.
Was neuer Subiect long'd to be a King,
As I do long and with to be a Subiect?

Enter Buckingham and Clifford.

Buc. Health and glad dyings to your Maiestie.
King. Why Buckingham, is the Traitor Cade furpris'd?
Or is he but retir'd to make him ftrong?

Enter Multitudes with Halteres about their Neckes.

Cliff. He is fled my Lord, and all his powers do yeeld,
And humberly thus with halteres on their neckes,
Expeft your Highneffe doome of life, or death.

King. Then heaven fet ope thy everlasting gates,
To entertaine my vowes of thankes and praife.
Souldiers, this day haue you redeem'd your liues,
And shew'd how well you love your Prince & Countrey:
Continue still in this fo good a minde,
And Henry though he be infurnate,
Affure your felues will neuer be vnkinde:
And go with thankes, and pardon to you all,
I do difmiffle you to your feuerall Countrees.

All. God faue the King, God faue the King.

Enter a Messanger.

Mef. Please it your Grace to be aduerfted,
The Duke of Yorke is newly come from Ireland,
And with a puifiant and a mighty power
Of Gallow-glassies and flout Kernes,
Is marching hitherward in proud array,
And still proclaimeth as he comes along,
His Armes are onely to remoue from thee
The Duke of Somerfet, whom he tarmes a Traitor.

King. Thus stands my flate, 'twixt Cade and Yorke difdreff,
Like to a Ship, that hauing ftap'd a Tempeft,
Is ftraight way calme, and boorded with a Pyrate.
But now is Cade driven backe, his men dippier'd,
And now is Yorke in Armes, to fecoude him.
I pray thee Buckingham go and meete him,
And ask him what's the reafon of these Armes:
Tell him, Ie fend Duke Edmund to the Tower,
And Somerfet we will commit thee thither,
Vntill his Armes be difmiff from him.

Somerfet. My Lord,
Ile yeelde my felfe to prifon willingly,
Or vnto death, to do my Countrey good.

King. In any cafe, be not to rough in terme,
For he is fierce, and cannot brooke hard Language.

Buc. I will my Lord, and doubt not fo to deal,
As all things fhall redound vnto your good.

King. Come wife, let's in, and learne to gouern better,
For yet may England curfe my wretched raigne.

Flourish. Exeunt. Enter.
Enter Cade.

Cade. Fye on Ambitions: fie on my selfe, that have a fword, and yet am ready to famish. Thise fwee daies haue I hid me in thse Woods, and durft not peep out, for all the Country is laid for me: but now am I fo hungry, that if I might have a Leaf of my life for a thousand yeares, I could flay no longer. Wherefore on a Brice'ke wall haue I climb'd into this Garden, to fee if I can eate Grathe, or picke a Sallet another while, which is not amifs to coole a mans fomacke this hot weather: and I think this word Sallet was borne to do me good: for many a time but for a Sallet, my braine-pan had bene cleft with a brown Bill; and many a time when I haue beene dry, & brauely march- ing, it hath feru'd me infeede of a quart pot to drinke in: and now the word Sallet mutt ferue me to feed on.

Enter Iden.

Iden. Lord, who would lye turmoyled in the Court, And may enjoy fuch quiet wayles as thofe? This fmall inheritance my Patre left me, Contenteth me, and worth a Monarchy. I feeke not to waxe great by other warnings, Or gather wealth I care not with what enuy: Sufficeth, that I haue maintaines my state, And fends the poore well pleafed from my gate.

Cade. Heere's the Lord of the Soile come to felle me for a ftray, for entering his Fee-simpe without leave. A Villaine, thou wilt betray me, and get a 1000. Crownes of the King by carrying my head to him, but Ile make thee eate Iron like an Oftridge, and swallow my Sword like a great pin ere thou and I part.

Iden. Why rude Companion, whatfoere thou be, I know thee not, why then should I betray thee? Is't not enough to breake into my Garden, And like a Theefe to come to rob my grounds: Climbing my walles infight of me the Owner, But thou wilt braue me with these favcie termes?

Cade. Braue thee? I by the beet blood that euer was broach'd, and bearde thee to. Looke on mee well, I haue eate no meate thefe feue daies, yet come thou and thy five men, and if I doe not leave you all as dead as a doore naile, I pray God I may neuer eate graffe more.

Iden. Nay, it fhall neer be fald, while England flands, That Alexander Iden an Efquire of Kent, Took oddes to combate a poore famifht man. Oppofe thy feldfaft gazing eyes to mine, See if thou canft out-face me with thy lookes: Set limbe to limbe, and thou art farre the lefser: Thy hand is but a finger to my fift, Thy legge a flicker compar'd with this Truncheon, My foote fhall fight with all the ftrength thou haft, And if mine armes be heaued in the Ayre, Thy graue is digg'd already in the earth:

As for words, whole greatneffe anfwer's words, Let this my fword report what fpeech forbeares.

Cade. By my Valour: the moft compleate Cham- pion that euer I haft heard. Steele, if thou turne the edge, or cut not out the burly bon'd Cloinne in chines of Beefe, ere thou sleepe in thy Sheath, I beezech Ioue on my knees thou mayft be turn'd to Hobnailes.

Here they Fight.

O I am flaine, Famine and no other hath flaine me, let ten thousand diuelles come against me, and give me but the ten meales I haue loft, and I'de defie them all. Wither Garden, and be henceforth a burying place to all that do dwell in this houfe, because the unconquered soule of Cade is fled.

Iden. Is't Cade that I haue flain, that monftrous traitor? Sword, I will hallow thee for this thy deed, And hang thee o're my Tombe, when I am dead, Ne're fhall this blood be wiped from thy poynt, But thou shalt weare it as a Heralds coate, To emblaze the Honor that thy Mafter got.

Cade. Iden farewell, and be proud of thy victory: Tell Kent from me, she hath loft her felft man, and exhart all the World to be Cowards: For I that never feared any, am vanquifhed by Famine, not by Valour. Dys.

Id. How much thou wrong't me, heauen be my judge;
Die damned Wretch, the curfe of her that bare thee:
And as I thruft thy body in with my fword,
So with I, I might thruft thy foule to hell.
Hence will I dragge thee headlong by the heelles
Vnto a dunghill, which fhall be thy graue,
And there cut off thy moft vragorous head,
Which I will bear in triumph to the King,
Leaung thy trunke for Crowes to feed vpon. Exit.

Enter Yorks, and his Army of Irfe, with Drum and Colours.

Yor. From Ireland thus comes York to claim his right,
And plunge the Crowne from feeble Henries head.
Ring Belles alowd, burne Bonfires clear and bright
To entertaine great Englands lawfull King.
AhSanta Mañias! who would not buy thee deere?
Let them obey, that knowes not how to Rule.
This hand was made to handle nought but Gold.
I cannot give due action to my words,
Except a Sword or Scepter balance it.
A Scepter fhall it haue, haue I a foule,
On which Ile toft the Fleur-de-Luce of France.

Enter Buckingham.

Whom haue we heere? Buckingham to disturb me?
The king hath fent him fure: I muft difemble.

Buc. Yorks, if thou maneafet wcl, I greet thee well.

Ter. Hemfrey of Buckingham, I accept thy greeting.

Art thou a Meffenger, or come of pleafure.

Buc. A Meffenger from Henry, our dread Liege,
To know the reafon of these Armes in peace.
Or why, thou being a Subject, as I am,
Against thy Oath, and true Allegiance sworne,
Should raife fo great a power without his leave?
Or dare to bring thy Force fo neere the Court?

Ter. Scarfe can I fpeeke, my Choller is fo great.
Oh I could hew vp Rockes, and fight with Flint,
I am fo angry at these abfque tearmes.
And now like Aixc Talamious,
On Shepee or Oxen could I spend my furie.
I am farre better borne then is the king:
More like a King, more Kingly in my thoughts.
But I must make faire weather yet a while,
Till Henry be more weake, and I more strong.
Buckingham, I prethee pardon me,
That I have giuen no anfwer all this while:
My minde was troubled with deep Melancholly.
The caufe why I haue brought this Armie hither,
Is to remoue proud Somerset from the King,
Seditious to his Grace, and to the State.
  Buc. That is too much presumption on thy part:
But if thy Armes be to no other end,
The King hath yielded vnto thy demand:
The Duke of Somerset is in the Tower.
  York. Vpon thine Honor is he Prifoner?
Buck. Vpon mine Honor he is Prifoner.
  York. Then Buckingham I do dilimnifie my Powres.
Souldiers, I thank you all: differpe your fuelles:
Meet me to morrow in S. Georges Field,
You shall haue pay, and every thing you with.
And let my Soueraigne, vertuous Henry,
Command my eldrie fonne, nay all my fonnes,
As pledges of my Feallie and Love,
Ile fend them all as willing as I lue:
Lands, Goods, Horfe, Armor, any thing I haue
Is his to vfe, fo Somerset may die.
  Buc. Yorke, I commend this kinde submiffion,
We twaine will go into his Highneffe Tent.

Enter King and Attendants.
  King. Buckingham, doth Yorke intend no harme to vs
That thus he marcheth with thee arme in arme?
  York. In all submiffion and humility,
Yorke doth prefent himfelf vnto your Highneffe.
K. Then what intends thefe Forces thou doft bring?
  Tor. To haue the Traitor Somerset from hence,
And fight againft that monftrous Rebell Cade,
Who fince I heard to be discomfited.

Enter Iden with Cades head.
  Iden. If one fo rude, and of fo meane condition
May passe into the prentice of a King:
Loe, I prefent your Grace a Traitors head,
The head of Cade, whom I in combat flew.
  King. The head of Cade!Great God, how lufet art thou?
Oh let me view his Viilage being dead,
That liuing wrought me fuch exceeding trouble.
Tell me my Friend, art thou the man that flew him?
  Iden. I was, an't like your Maiestie.
  King. How art thou call'd? And what is thy degree?
  Iden. Alexander Iden, that's my name,
A poore Esquire of Kent, that loues his King.
  Buc. So pleafe it you my Lord, 'twere not amiffle
He were created Knight for his good seruice.
  King. Iden, kneele downe, rife vp a Knight:
We geue thee for reward a thousand Markes,
And will, that thou henceforth attend on vs.
  Iden. May Iden liue to merit fuch a bountie,
And never liue but true vnto his Liege.

Enter Queens and Somerfet.
  K.See Buckingham, Somerfet comes with th'Queene,
Go bid her hide him quickly from the Duke.
  Qu. For thousand Yorkes hee shall not hide his head,
But boldly fland, and front him to his face.
  Tor. How now! is Somerset at libertie?
Then Yorke vnloose thy long imprifonned thoughts,
And let thy tongue be equall with thy heart.
Shall I endure the sight of Somerset?
False King, why haft thou broken faith with me,
Knowing how hardly I can brooke abuse?
King did I call thee? No; thou art not King:
Not fit to governe and rule multitudes,
Which dar't not, no nor can't not rule a Traitor.

That Head of thine doth not become a Crowne:
Thy Hand is made to grace a Palmers fflaffe,
And not to grace an awefull Princely Scepter.
That Gold, mutt round engirt thefe brows of mine,
Whose Smile and Frowne, like to Achilles Speare
Is able with the change, to kill and cure.
Here is a hand to hold a Scepter vp,
And with the fame to ade conteilling Lawes:
Glue place: by heaven thou shalt rule no more
O're him, whom heaven created for thy Ruler.
  Som. O monftrous Traitor! I arreft thee Yorke
Of Capitall Trefon' gainft the King and Crowne:
Obey audacious Traitor, kneele for Grace.
  York. Wold'vet have me kneele?First let me ask of thee,
If they can brooke I bow a knee to man:
Sirrah, call in my fonne to be my bale:
I know ere they will haue me go to Ward,
They'll paue my swords of my infranchillement.
  Qu. Call hither Clifford, bid him come amaine,
To say, if that the Baffart boydes of Yorke
Shall be the Surety for their Traitor Father.
  York. O blood-bepotted Nepomulan,
Out-call of Naples, Englands bloody Scourge,
The fonne of Yorke, thy better in their birth,
Shall be their Fathers baile, and bane to thofe
That for my Surety will refufe the Boyes.
  Enter Edward and Richard.
See where they come, 1le warrant they'll make it good.

Enter Clifford.
  Qu. And here comes Clifford to deny their baile.
Cliff. Health, and all happinesse to my Lord the King.
Tor. I thanke thee Clifford: Say, what newes with thee?
Nay, do not fright vs with an angry looke:
We are thy Soueraigne Clifford, kneele againe;
For thy miftaking fo, We pardon thee.
  Cliffs. This is my King Yorke, I do not miftake,
But thou miftakes me much to thinke I do,
To Bedlem with him, is the man grawne mad.
  King. Clifford, a Bedford and ambitious humor
Makes him oppofe himfelfe againft his King.
  Cliffs. He is a Traitor, let him to the Tower,
And chop away that fadicous pate of his.
  Qu. He is atrefled, but will not obey:
His fonne(s)he fayes) shall give their words for him.
  Tor. Will you not Sonnes?
  Edw. I Noble Father, if our words will ferue.
  Rich. And if words will not, then our Weapons shal.
  Cliffs. Why what a brood of Traitors haue we here?
  Torke. Looke in a Glaffe, and call thy Image fo.
I am thy King, and thou a false-heart Traitor:
Call hither to the flake my two braue Bears,
That with the very flaking of their Chains,
They may afhonish these fell-lurking Curres,
Bid Salsbury and Warwicke come to me.

Enter the Earles of Warwick and Salsbury.
  Cliffs. Are thee thy Bears? We'll bate thy Bears to death,
And manache the Berard in their Chains,
If thou dar'ret bring them to the baying place.
  Rich. Ofte haue I seeno a hot ore—weining Curr,
Run backe and bite, becaufe he was with—held,
Who being suffer'd with the Bears fell paw,
Hath clapt his tale, betweene his legs and crize,
And fuch a pece of servise will you do,
If you oppose your felues to match Lord Warwick.

Cliff. Hence heape of wrath, foule indigested lumpes, As crooked in thy manners, as thy shape.

Tyr. Nay we shall heate you thorouly anon.

Cliff. Take heedle leaf by your heat ye burne your felues:

King. Why Warwick, hath thy knee forgot to bow?

Old Salsbury, shame to thy filuer haire,

Whose silly mildeader of thy braine-ficke fonne,

What wilt thou on thy death-bed play the Ruffian?

And fecke for forrow with thy Spectacles?

Oh where is Faith? Oh, where is Loyalty?

If it be banish't from the frolick head,

Where shall it finde a harbour in the earth?

Wilt thou go digge a grave to finde out Warre,

And fame thine honourable Age with blood?

Why art thou old, and want'ft experience?

Or wherefore doest abuse it, if thou haft it?

For shame in dutey bend thy knee to me,

That bowes ynto the graue with mickle age.

Sal. My Lord, I have considerd with my selfe

The Title of this most renowned Duke,

And in my conidence, do repute his grace

The rightfull heere to Englands Royall feate.

King. Haft thou not sworne Allegiance, ynto me?

Sal. I haue.

Ki. Canst thou dispence with heauen for such an oath?

Sal. It is great finne, to swearne ynto a finne:

But greater finne to keepe a finfull oath:

Who can be bound by any solemne Vow

To do a mur'drous deed, to rob a man,

To force a spotlefe Virgins Chaffitie,

To reauce the Orphan of his Patrimonie,

To wring the Widow from her cuthom'd right,

And haue no other reason for this wrong,

But that he was bound by a solerne Oath?

Qy. A subtile Traitor needs no Sophister.

King. Call Buckingham, and bid him arme himselfe.

Tyrke. Call Buckingham, and all the friends thou haft,

I am resolu'd for death and dignitie.

Old Cliff. The first I warrant thee, if dreams prove true

War. You were best to go to bed, and dreame againe,

To keepe thee from the Tempest of the field.

Old Cliff. I am resolu'd to beare a greater storme,

Then any thou canst conjure vp to day:

And that I ple wnte vp thy Burgonet.

Might I but know thee by thy houfed Badge,

War. Now by my Fathers badge, old Neulfs Creft,

The rampart Beare chaine'd to the ragged stafe,

This day Ie were abode my Burgonet,

As on a Mountain top, the Cedar thows,

That keeps his leaves infipgh of any storme,

Euen io affrigh thee with the view thereof.

Old Cliff. And from thy Burgonet Ie rend thy Beare,

And tread it vnder foot with all contempt,

Despight the Bearard, that proteets the Beare.

Ye Cliff. And so to Armes victorius Father,

To quell the Rebels, and their Complices.

Rich. Fie, Charite for shame, speake not in spight,

For thou shall sup with Iefu Chrift to night.

Ye Cliff. Foule flygmatickes that's more then thou canst tell.

Rit. If not in heaven, you'ull ferue in hell. Exeunt

Enter Warwicke.

War. Clifford of Cumberland, 'tis Warwicke calleth:

And if thou dost not hide thee from the Beare,

Now when the angrie Trumpet sounds alarum,

And dead mens cries do fill the empitie ayre,

Clifford I say, come forth and fight with me,

Proud Northerne Lord, Clifford of Cumberland,

Warwicke is hoarse with calling thee to armes.

Enter Tyrke.

War. How now my Noble Lord? What all a-foot?

Tyr. The deadly handed Clifford flew my Steed:

But match to match I haue encountred him,

And made a prey for Carrion Kytes and Crowes.

Euen of the bonnie beast he loud to well.

Enter Clifford.

War. Of one or both of vs the time is come.

Tyr. Hold Warwicke, seek thee out some other chace

For I my selfe must hunt this Deere to death.

War. Then nobly Yorke, 'tis for a Crown thou fightst:

As I intend Clifford to thrive to day,

It greues my foule to leave thee vsnall'd. Exit War.

Cliff. What seest thou in me Yorke?

Why dost thou pause?

Tyrke. With thy brave bearing should I be in loue,

But that thou art so faft mine enemie.

Cliff. Nor should thy proweffe want praise & esteeme,

But that 'tis shewe ignobly, and in Trefon.

Tyrke. So let it helpe me now against thy sword,

As I in iustice, and true right expressie it.

Cliff. My foule and bodie on the action both.

Tyr. A dreadful lay, addrefse thee infantly.

Cliff. La fin Corrone les euenmes.

Tyr. Thus Warre hath gluene thee peace, for thy art still,

Peace with his foule, heauen if it be thy will.

Enter young Clifford.

Cliff. Shame and Confusion all is on the rout,

Fears frames disordred, and disordred wounds

Where it should guard. O Warre, thou fonne of hell,

Whom angry heauenas do make their minifier,

Throw in the frozen boomes of our part,

Hot Coales of Vengeance. Let no Souldier flye.

He that is truly dede to Warre,

Hath no felte-loue: nor he that loues himselfe,

Hath not effentially, but by circumstance

The name of Valour. O let the vile world end,

And the premied Flames of the Laft day,

Knit earth and heauen together.

Now let the generall Trumpet blow his blaff,

Particularities, and pettie founds

To ceafe. Was't thou ordain'd (deere Father)

To looe thy youth in peace, and atcheue the

The Siluer Linery of aduised Age,

And in thy Reverence, and thy Chaire-dayes, thus

To drie in Ruffian battall? Euen at this fight,

My heart is turn'd to stone: and while 'tis mine,

It shall be flyne. Yorke, not our old men spares

No more will I their Babes, Teares Virginall,

Shall to be me, even as the Dew to Fire,

And Beautie, that the Tyrant oft reclaimes,

Shall to my flaming wrath, be Oyle and Flax:

Henceforth, I will not have to do with pitty.

Meet I an infant of the house of Yorke,

Into as many gobbitts will I cut it

As wild Meata yong Abiridi did.

In cruelty, will I feke out my Fame.

Come thou new ruine of olde Clifords house:

As did Aneas old Anchylus beare,

So beare I thee upon my manly shoulders:

But then, Aneas bare a liuing loade;
Nothing so heavy as these woes of mine.

Enter Richard, and Somerset to fight.

Ric. So lye thou there:
For vnderneath an Ale-house paltry signe,
The Castle in St. Albans, Somerset
Hath made the Wizard famous in his death:
Sword, hold thy temper; Heart, be wrathfull still:
Priests pray for enemies, but Princes kill.

Fight. Excursions.

Enter King, Queens, and others.

Qu. Away my Lord, you are flow, for shame away.
King. Can we outrun the Heauens? Good Margaret stay.

Qu. What are you made of? You'll nor fight nor fly:
Now is it manhood, wisedome, and defence,
To glie the enemy way, and to secure vs
By what we can, which can no more but flye.

Alarum a faire off.

If you be tane, we then should see the bottome
Of all our Fortunes: but if we haply scape,
(As well we may, if not through your neglecd)
We shall to London get, where you are lou'd,
And where this breach now in our Fortunes made
May readily be flipt.

Enter Clifford.

Cliff. But that my hearts on future milcheese fet,
I would speake blaphemy ere bid you flye:
But flye you must: Vncureable dishomfite
Reignes in the hearts of all our present parts.
Away for your reliefe, and we will lye
To see their day, and them our Fortune sue.
Away my Lord, away.

Alarum. Retreat. Enter Yorke, Richard, Warwicke, and Soldiers, with Drum & Colours.

Yorke. Of Salisbury, who can report of him,
That Winter Lyon, who in rage forgets
Aged contusions, and all tumult of Time:
And like a Gallant, in the brow of youth,
Repaires him with Occasion. This happy day
Is not it selle, nor have we wonne one foot,
If Salisbury be lofd.

Ric. My Noble Father:
Three times to day I holpe him to his horse,
Three times befrid him: Thrice I led him off,
Perfwaded him from any further act:
But still where danger was, still there I met him,
And like rich hangings in a homely house,
So was his Will, in his old feeble body,
But Noble as he is, looke where he comes.

Enter Salisbury.

Sal. Now by my Sword, well haft thou fought to day:
By'th'Maffe fo did we all. I thanke you Richard.
God knows how long it is I haue to liue:
And it hath pleasd him that three times to day
You haue defended me from imminent death.
Well Lords, we haue not got that which we haue,
'Tis not enough our foes are this time fled,
Being opposites of such repayring Nature.

Yorke. I know our safety is to follow them,
For (as I heare) the King is fled to London,
To call a prefent Court of Parliament:
Let vs pursue him ere the Writs go forth.
What fayes Lord Warwicke, shall we after them?
War. After them: nay before them if we can:
Now by my hand (Lords) 'twas a glorious day.
Saint Albons battell wonne by famous Yorke,
Shall be eterniz'd in all Age to come.
Sound Drumme and Trumpets, and to London all,
And more such days as thefe, to vs befall.

FINIS.
The third Part of Henry the Sixt,
with the death of the Duke of Yorke.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Alarum.

Enter Plantagenet, Edward, Richard, Norfolk, Montague, Warwick, and Souldiers.

Warwick. Wonder how the King escape'd our hands? Pl. While we purs'd the Horsemen of York, He fly'd stole away, and left his men:

Whereat the great Lord of Northumberland, Whose Warlike eares could not bearre brooke retreated, Cheer'd up the drooping Army, and himselfe, Lord Clifford and Lord Stafford all a-brest Charg'd our maine Battales Fronts and breaking in, Were by the Swords of common Soul'diers flaine.

Edw. Lord Stafford's Father, Duke of Buckingham, Is either flaine or wounded dangerous.

I left his Beauer with a down-right blow:

That this is true (Father) behold his blood.

Mount. And Brother, here's the Earl of Wiltshire Whom I encountred as the Battels ioyn'd. (blood, Rich. Speake thou for me, and tell them what I did.

Plan. Richard hath best deferu'd of all my Sonnes:

But is your Grace dead, my Lord of Somerset? Nor. Such hope haue all the line of John of Gaunt. Rich. Thus do I hope to make King Henrys head. Warw. And so doe I, victorious Prince of York.

Before I see thee seated in that Throne, Which now the House of Lancaster vspires, I vow by Heauen, these eyes shall never close.

This is the Pallace of the fairest full King, And this the Regall Seat: posseste it York, For this is thine, and not King Heires Heires.

Plant. Afflict me then, sweet Warwick, and I will, For hither we have broken in by force.

Nor. Wee're all affrighte you: he that flyes, shall dye:

Plant. Thankes gentle Norfolk, staye by me my Lords, And Soulliers stay and lodge by me this Night.

They goe vp.

Warw. And when the King comes, offer him no violence, Vnlesse he seek to thratt you out perforce. Plant. The Queene this day here holds her Parliament, But little thinkes we shall be of her counsaille, By words or blows here let vs winne our right.

Rich. Arm'd as we are, let's stay within this House.

Warw. The bloody Parliament shall this be call'd, Vnlesse Plantagenet, Duke of Yorke, be King, And bafhfull Henry depos'd, whose Cowardize Hath made vs by-words to our enemies.

Plant. Then leaue me not, my Lords be resolute, I meaning to take possiflion of my Right.

Warw. Neither the King, nor he that loves him best, The proudeth hee that holds wp Lancastre, Dares stirre a Wing, if Warwick shake his Bells.

Ile plant Plantagenet, root him vp who dares: Resolue thee Richard, claye the English Crowne.

Flore. Enter King Henry, Clifford, Northumberland, Wiltmarch, Exeter, and the rest.

Henry. My Lords, looke where the sturdie Rebell fits, Even in the Chayre of State: belike he means, Backt by the power of Warwick, that falle Peere, To aspire into the Crowne, and reigne as King.

Earle of Northumberland, he flyed thy Father, And thine, Lord Clifford, & you both haue vow'd reuenge, On him, his Sonnes, his Favorites, and his friends.

Nortumb. If I be not, Heauens be reuenge'd on me. Clifford. The hope thereof, makes Clifford mourne in Steele.

Wesm. What, shall we suffer this? lets pluck him down, My heart for anger burnes, I cannot brooke it.

Henry. Be patient, gentle Earl of Wiltmarch. Clifford. Patience is for Poultroones, such as he: He durnt not fit there, had your Father liv'd.

My gracious Lord, here in the Parliament
Let vs afflyse the Family of York.

North. Well haft thou spoken, Cousin be it so.

Henry. Ah, know you not the Citie favours them, And they haue troupe of Soul'diers at their beck?

Wesm. But when the Duke is flaine, they're quickly flye.

Henry. Farre be the thought of this from Henrys heart, To make a Shambles of the Parliament House.

Cousin of Exeter, frownes, words, and threats, Shall be the Warre that Henry means to vse.

Thou faduous Duke of Yorke defend my Throne, And kneele for grace and mercie at my feet, I am thy Soueraigne.

Yorke. I am thine.

Ex. For shame come downe, he made thee Duke of Yorke.

Yorke. It was my Inheritance, as the Earledome was.

Ex. Thy
The third Part of Henry the Sixt.

Exet. Thy Father was a Traytor to the Crowne.
Warw. Exeter thou art a Traytor to the Crowne,
In following this whirling Henry.
Clifford. Whom should hee follow, but his natural King?
Henry. And shall I fland, and shoule fit in my Throne?
York. It must and shal be fo, content thy selfe.
Warw. Be Duke of Lancaster, let him be King.
Wesm. He is both King, and Duke of Lancaster,
And that the Lord of Welfterland shal maintaine.
Warw. And Warwick shall disproue it. You forget
That we are those which chas'd you from the field,
And flew your Fathers, and with Colours spred
March't through the Grite to the Palace Gates:
Northumb. Yes Warwick, I remember it to my griefe,
And by his Soule, thou and thy House shall rue it.
Wesm. Plantagenet, of thee and thene thy Sonnes,
Thy Kinshfene, and thy Friends, Ile have more liues
Then drops of blood were in my Fathers Veines.
Cliff. Vrge it no more, left that in stead of words,
I tend those, Warwick, such a Meffenger,
As shall revenge his death, before I thire.
Warw. Poore Clifford, how I foronce his worthlesse Threats.
Plant. Will you we shew our Title to the Crowne?
If not, our Swords shall pleade it in the field.
Henry. What Title haft thou Traytor to the Crowne?
My Father was as thou art, Duke of Yorke,
Thy Grandfather Roger Mortimer, Earle of March.
I am the Sonne of Henry the Fift,
Who made the Dolphin and the French to floupe,
And feide upon their Townes and Princes.
Warw. Taleke not of France, fith thou haft loft it all.
Henry. The Lord Protector loft it, and not I:
When I was crowned, I was but nine moneths old.
Rich. You are old enough now,
And yet me thinkes you loofe:
Father teare the Crowne from the Whorlers Head.
Edward. Sweet Father doe fo, fet it on your Head.
Mount. Good Brother,
As thou lou'tt and honeoreft Armes,
Let's fight it out, and not stand cauiling thus.
Richard. Sound Drummes and Trumpets, and the King will flye.
Plant. Sonnes peace.
Henry. Peace thou, and give King Henry leaue to speake.
Warw. Plantagenet shal speake first: Haere him Lords,
And be ye silent and attentuoe too,
For he that interrupts him, shall not liue.
Hen. Think'tt thou, that I will leave my Kingly Throne,
Wherein my Grandfiri and my Father fat?
Nofirft shall Warre vpeople this my Realme;
I, and their Couler often borne in France,
And now in England, to our hearts great sorrow,
Shall be my Winding-sheer. Why fain't you Lords?
My Title's good, and better farre then his.
Warw. Prov'y ne it Henry, and thou shalt be King.
Hen. Henry the Fourth by Conquest got the Crowne.
Plant. 'Twas by Rebellion against his King.
Henry. I know not what to say, my Titles weake:
Tell me, may not a King adopt an Heire?
Plant. What then?
Henry. And if he may, then am I lawfull King:
For Richard, in the view of many Lords,
Reign'd the Crowne to Henry the Fourth,
Whole Heire my Father was, and I am his.
Plant. He rofe against him, being his Soueraigne,
And made him to reigne his Crowne perfore.
Warw. Supp'ofe, my Lords, he did it vnconstrayn'd,
Thinke you 'twere preudiciall to his Crowne?
Exet. No: for he could not fo reigne his Crowne,
But that the next Heire should fucceeed and reigne,
Henry. Art thou against vs, Duke of Exeter?
Exet. His is the right, and therefore pardone me,
Plant. Why whisper you, my Lords, and anfwer not?
Exet. My Conience tells me he is lawfull King.
Henry. All will revoult from me, and turne to him.
Warw. Depot's he shall be, in defpight of all.
Northumb. Thou art deceu'd:
'Tis not thy Southerne power
Of Efex, Northolfe, Suffolke, nor of Kent,
Which makes thee thus preumptuous and proud,
Can fet the Duke vp in defpight of me.
Clifford. King Henry, be thy Title right or wrong,
Lord Clifford vowes to fight in thy defence:
May that ground gape, and swallow me alioe,
Where I shall kneele to him that flew my Father.
Henry. Oh Clifford, how thy words reuie my heart.
Plant. Henry. Henry of Lancaster, reigne thy Crowne:
What mutter you, or what confpire you Lords?
Warw. Doe right vnto this Princely Duke of Yorke,
Or I will fill the House with armed men,
And ouer the Chayre of State, where now he fits,
Write vp his Title with vfluring blood.
He flampes with his foot, and the Soulidors
Shew themfelves.
Henry. My Lord of Warwick, heare but one word,
Let me for this my life time reigne as King.
Plant.Confirme the Crowne to me and to mine Heires,
And thou shalt reigne in quiet while thou liu'in.
Henry. I am content: Richard Plantagenet
Enjoy the Kingdome after my deceafe.
Clifford. What wrong is this vnto the Prince, your Sonne?
Warw. What good is this to England, and himselue?
Wesm. Safe, fearefull, and defpaying Henry.
Clifford. How haft thou injur'd both thy fyle and vs?
Wesm. I cannot flay to heare thefe Articles.
Northumb. Nor I.
Clifford. Come Cousin, let vs tell the Queene these Newses.
Wesm. Farwell faine-hearted and degenerate King,
In whose cold blood no fpark of Honor bides.
Northumb. Be thou a prey vnto the House of Yorke,
And dye in Banda, for this vnmanly deed.
Cliff. In dreadfull Warre may'tt thou be overcame,
Or liue in peace abandon'd and defpis'd.
Warw. Turne this way Henry, and regard them not.
Exeter. They feake reuenge, and therefore will not yeeld.
Henry. Ah Exeter.
Warw. Why should you sigh, my Lord?
Henry. Not for my felle Lord Warwick, but my Sonne,
Whom I vmanaturally shall diff-inhereite.
But be it as it may: I here entale
The Crowne to thee and to thine Heires for euer,
Conditionally, that heere thou take an Oath,
To ceafe this Guiill Crowne: and whil'st I liue,
The third Part of Henry the Sixt.

To honor me as thy King, and Soueraigne:
And neither by Traison nor Hysterie,
To seek to put me downe, and reigne thy selues.

Plant. This Oath I willingly take, and will performe.
War. Long live King Henry: Plantagenet embrace him.

Henry. And long live thou, and these thy forward

Sonne.

Plant. Now York and Lancaster are reconcil'd.
Exet. Accurrit he be that seekes to make them foes.
Sene. Here they come downe.

Plant. Farewell my gracious Lord, Ile to my Caffle.
War. And Ile keep London with my Souldiers.
Nor. And I to Norfolk with my followers.
Mount. And I vato the Sea, from whence I came.

Henry. And I with griefe and sorrow to the Court.

Enter the Queene.

Exeter. Heere comes the Queene,
Whole Lookes bewray her anger:
Ile steale away.

Henry. Exeter so will I.

Queene. Nay, goe not from me, I will follow thee.
Henry. Be patient gentle Queene, and I will stay.

Queene. Who can be patient in such extremes?
Ah wretched man, would I had dy'd a Maid?
And never sene thee, never borne thee Sonne,
Seeing thou haft prou'd fo vnnaturall a Father.
Hath he deser'd to loose his Birth-right thus?
Hadst thou but lou'd him halfe so well as I,
Or felt that paine which I did for him once,
Or nourish'd him, as I did with my blood;
Thou would'st have left thy dearest heart-blood there.
Rather then haue made that fauage Duke thine Heire,
And di-inherited thine onely Sonne.

Prince. Father, you cannot di-inherit me:
If you be King, why should not I succede?

Henry. Pardon me Margaret, pardon me sweet Sonne,
The Earl of Warwick and the Duke enforce me.

Queene. Enforce thee? Art thou King, and wilt be forc't?
I shame to heare thee speake: ah timorous Wretch,
Thou haft vndone thy selfe, thy Sonne, and me,
And giu'n unto the House of York such head,
As thou shalt reigne but by their sufferance.
To entayle him and his Heires vnto the Crowne,
What is it, but to make thy Sepulcher,
And crepe into it farre before thy time?

Warwick is Chancellour, and the Lord of Callice,
Stere, Fallowbridge commands the Narrow Seas,
The Duke is made Protecor of the Realme,
And yet shalt thou be fate? Such fatetie finds
The trembling Lambe, inuironed with Wolves.
Had I beene there, which is a filly Woman,
The Souldiers shoulde haue to'd me on their Pikes,
Before I would haue granted to that Act.

But thou pretend'st thy Life, before thine Honor.
And feeing thou dost, I here diuorce my selfe,
Both from thy Table Henry, and thy Bed,
Vntill that Act of Parliament be repeal'd,
Whereby my Sonne is di-inherited.
The Northerne Lords, that haue forsworne thy Colours,
Will follow mine, if once they see them spread:
And spread they shall be, to thy foule dligrace,
And vter ruine of the House of York.

Thus doe I leave thee: Come Sonne, let's away,
Our Army is ready; come, wee're after them.

Henry. Stay gentle Margaret, and hear me speake.
Queene. Thou haft spoke too much already: get thee gone.

Henry. Gentle Sonne Edward, thou wilt stay me?
Queene. I, to be murther'd by his Enemies.

Prince. When I returne with victorie to the field,
Ile see your Grace: till then, Ile follow her.

Queene. Come Sonne away, we may not linger thus.

Henry. Poor Queene,
How loue to me, and to her Sonne,
Hath made her brake out into terms of Rage.
Reueng'd my father, I shall bee on that hatefull Duke,
Whole haughtie Spirit, winged with defire,
Will coft my Crowne, and like an empite Eagle,
Tye on the flesh of me, and of my Sonne,
The losse of thofe three Lords torments my heart:
Ile write vnto them, and entreat them faire;
Come Cousin, you shall be the Messenger.

Exet. And I, I hope, shall reconcile them all. Exit.

Flourib. Enter Richard, Edward, and Mountague.

Edward. No, I can better play the Orator.
Mount. But I have reasons strong and forceable.

Enter the Duke of York.

York. Why how now Sonnes, and Brother, at a striffe?
What is your Quarrell? how began it first?

Edward. No Quarrell, but a flight Contention.

York. About what?

Rich. About that which concerns your Grace and vs,
The Crowne of England, Father, which is yours.

York. Mine Boyt not till King Henry be dead.

Richard. Your Right depends not on his life, or death.

Edward. Now you are Heire, therefore enjoy it now:
By giuing the House of Lancaster leauce to breathe,
It will out-runne you, Father, in the end.

York. I tooke an Oath, that hee should quietly reigne.

Edward. But for a Kingdom any Oath may be broken:
I would break a thousand Oathes, to reigne one yeere.

Richard. No: God forbid your Grace should be forsworne.

York. I shall be, if I clayme by open Warre.

Richard. Ile proue the contrary, if you're heare mee speake.

York. Thou canst not, Sonne: it is impossible.

Richard. An Oath is of no moment, being not tooke
Before a true and lawfull Magistrate,
That hath authoritie over him that sweares.

Henry had none, but did vuerpe the place.
Then seing 'twas he that made you to depose,
Your Oath, my Lord, is vaine and friuellous.

Therefore to Armes: and Father doe but think,
How sweett a thing it is to weare a Crowne,
Within whose Circuit is Elinium,
And all that Poets faine of Bliffe and Joy.

Why doe we linger thus? I cannot reft,
Vntill the White Rose that I weare, be dy'de
Even in the lake-warme blood of Henries heart.

York. Richard ynowe: I will be King, or dye.
Brother, thou shalt to London prefently,
And whet on Warwick to this Enterprize.
Thou Richard shalt to the Duke of Norfolke,
And tell him pruily of our intent.
You Edward shall vnto my Lord Cobham,
With whom the Kentishmen will willingly rife.
In them I trust: for they are Souldiers,
Wittie, courteous, liberal, full of spirit.
While you are thus implovd, what refeth more?
But that I feake occasion how to rife,
And yet the King not priue to my Drift,
Nor any of the House of Lancaster.

Enter Gabriel.

But stay, what Newes? Why comm't thou in such pothe?

Gabriel. The Queene,
With all the Northerne Earles and Lords,
Intend here to besiege you in your Castle.
She is hard by, with twenti thousand men:
And therefore fortifie your Hold, my Lord.

Torke. I, with my Sword.

What? thinke'lt thou, that we feare them?
Edward and Richard, you shall fly with me,
My Brother Mountague shall pothe to London.
Let Noble Warricks, Cobham, and the rest,
Whom we have left Protectors of the King,
With powrefull Pollicie strengthen themselues,
And truft not simple Henry, nor his Oathes.

Mount. Brother, I goe: Ile winne them, feare it not.
And thus most humbly I doe take my leaue.

Exit Mountague.

Enter Mortimer, and bis Brother.

York. Sir Iohn, and Sir Hugh Mortimer, mine Vnckles,
You are come to Sandall in a happie houre.
The Armie of the Queene meane to besiege vs.
Iohn. Shee shall not neede, wee'le meece her in the field.

York. What, with fuiue thousand men?

Richard. I, with fuiue hundred, Father, for a neede.

A Woman's generall: what should we feare?

A March afarre off.

Edward. I heare their Drummes:
Let's set our men in order,
And fifue forth, and bid them Battale straight.

York. Fifue men to twentieth, though the oddes be great,
I doubt not, Vnckle, of our Viictorie.
Many a Battale haue I wonne in France,
When as the Enemie hath beene tenne to one:
Why should I not now haue the like successe?

Alarum. Exit.

Enter Rutland, and bis Tutor.

Rutland. Ah, whither shall I flye, to scape their hands?
Ah Tutor, looke where bloody Clifford comes.

Enter Clifford.

Clifford. Chaplaine away, thy Priesthood flues thy life.
As for the Brat of this accurst Duke,
Whoe Father flew my Father, he shall dye.

Tutor. And I, my Lord, will beare him company.

Clifford. Souldiers, away with him.

Tutor. Ah Clifford, murther not this innocent Child,
Leaft thou be hatned both of God and Man.

Exit.

Clifford. How now? is he dead alreadie?

Or is it feare, that makes him clofe his eyes?
Ile open them.

Rutland. So looks the pent-vp Lyon o're the Wretch,
That trembles under his deouerung Paws:
And fo he walkes, infulting o're his Prey,
And fo he comes, to rend his Limbes afunder,
Ah gentle Clifford, kill me with thy Sword,
And not with such a cruel threatning Lookke.
Sweet Clifford heare me speake, before I dye:
I am too meane a subiect for thy Wrath,
Be thou reueng'd on men, and let me liue.

Clifford. In vaine thou speake't, poor Boy:
My Fathers blood hath flopt the pacage
Where thy words shou'd enter.

Rutland. Then let my Fathers blood open it againe,
He is a man, and Clifford cope with him.

Clifford. Had I thy Brethren here, their liues and thine
Were not reuenge sufficient for me:
No, if I digg'd vp thy fore-fathers Graues,
And hung their rotten Coffins vp in Chaynes,
It could not flake mine ire, nor eafe my heart.
The fight of any of the House of Torke,
Is as a furie to torment my Soule:
And till I root out their accrued Line,
And leave not one alue, I liue in Hell.
Therefore---

Rutland. Oh let me pray, before I take my death:
To thee I pray, sweet Clifford pity me.

Clifford. Such pitty as my Rapiers point affords.

Rutland. I never did thee harme: why wilt thou flay me?

Clifford. Thy Father hath.

Rutland. But 'twas ere I was borne.

Thou haft one Sonne, for his fake pitty me,
Leaft in reuenge thereof, th'God is iust,
He be as miferably flaine as I.
Ah, let me liue in Prifon all my dases,
And when I giue occasion of offence,
Then let me dye, for now thou haft no cause.

Clifford. No caufe? thy Father fliew my Fathers therefor dye.

Rutland. Dil faciant laudis summa fi jfa tue.

Clifford. Plantagenet, I come Plantagenet:
And this thy Sonnes blood cleansing to my Blade,
Shall ruft vpom my Weapon, till thy blood
Congel'd with this, doe make me wipre off both.

Exit.

York. The Army of the Queene hath got the field:
My Vnckles both are slaine, in refcuing me;
And all my followers, to the eager for
Tume back, and flye, like Ships before the Winde,
Or Lambs purf'd by hunger-fared Wolves.
My Sonnes, God knows what hath bechanc'd them:
But this I know, they have demean'd themselues
Like men borne to Renowne, by Life or Death.
Three times did Richard make a Lane to me,
And thrice cry'de, Courage Father, fight it out:
And full as oft came Edward to my side,
With Purple Faulchion, painted to the Hilt,
In blood of thofe that had encountered him:
And when the hardyeft Warriors did retyre,
Richard cry'de, Charge, and give no foot of ground,
And cry'de, A Crowne, or else a glorious Tombe,
The third Part of Henry the Sixth. 151

A Scepter, or an Earthly Sepulchre.
With this we charg’d againe: but out alas,
We bodg’d againe, as I have seen a Swan
With bootlesse labour swimme against the Tyde,
And spend her strength with ouer-matching Waves.
A short Alarum within.

Ah heareke, the fatal followers doe pursue,
And I am faint, and cannot fye their fue:
And were I strong, I would not thunne their fue.
The Sands are numbred, that makes vp my Life,
Here muft I stay, and here my Life must end.

Enter the Queens, Clifford, Northumberland,
the young Prince, and Souldiers.

Come bloody Clifford, rough Northumberland,
I dare your quenchlesse fueir to more rage:
I am your Butt, and I abide your Shot.

Northumb. Yeeld to our mercy, proud Plantagenet.
Clifford. I, to fuch mercy, as his ruthlesse Arme
With downe-right payment, shew’d vs to your Father.
Now Peace hath tumbled from his Carre,
And made an Euening at the Noones-tide Prick.

Northumb. Clifford, all hopelesse of their Luiues,
Breathe out Inueclues ’gainst the Officers.

York. Oh Clifford, but bethinke thee once again,
And in thy thought ore-run my former time:
And if thou canst, for blushing, view this face,
And bite thy tongue, that flanders him with Cowardice,
Whose frowne hath made thee faint and fye ere this.

Clifford. I will not bandie with thee word for word,
But buckler with thee blowes twice two for one.

Queene. Hold valiant Clifford, for a thousand cauSES
I would prolong a while the Traytors Life:
Wrath makes him deafe: speake thou Northumberland.

Northumb. Hold Clifford, doe not honor him so much,
To prick thy finger, though to wound his heart.
What valoure were it, when a Curre doth grinne,
For one to thufl his Hand betweene his Teeth,
When he might spurre him with his Foot away?
It is Warres prize, to take all Vantages,
And tenne to one, is no impeach of Valour.

Clifford. I, I, so driues the Woodcocke with the Gynne.

Northumb. So doth the Connie struggle in the Net.

York. So triumph Theuees upon their conquer’d Booty,
So True men yeeld with Robbers, so o’re-macth.

Northumb. What would your Grace haue done vs him now?

Queene. Braue Warriors, Clifford and Northumberland,
Come make him stand vs on this Mole-hill here,
That raught at Mountains with out-stretched Armes,
Yet parted but the shadow with his Hand.
What, was it you that would be Englands King?
Was’t you that reuell’d in our Parliament,
And made a Preachment of your high Defcency?
Where are your Meffe of Sonnes, to back you now?
The wanton Edward, and the luftie George?

And where’s that valiant Crook-back Prodigie,
Dickie, your Boy, that with his grumbling voyce
Was wont to cheare his Dad in Mutinies?
Or with the ref, where is your Darling, Rutland?
Looke York, I stay’d this Napkin with the blood
That valiant Clifford, with his Rapiers point,
Made issue from the Bosome of the Boy:
And if thine eyes can water for his death,
I glue thee this to drie thy Cheekes withall.
Alas poore York, but that I hate thee deadly,
I should lament thy miserable fate.
I prythee grieue, to make me merry, York.
What, hath thy fierie heart to parcht thine entrailes,
That not a Teare can fall, for Rutlands death?
Why art thou patient, man? thou shoul’dt be mad:
And I, to make thee mad, doe mock thee thus.
Stame, raue, and fret, that I may sing and dance.
Thou wouldst be fpee’d, I fee, to make me sport:
York cannot speake, vnleffe he were a Crowne.
A Crowne for York; and Lords, bow lowe to him:
Hold you his hands, whilst I doe let it on.
I marry Sir, now lookes he like a King:
I, this is he that tooke King Henryes Chaire,
And this he is, who had mee take his Head.
But how is it, that great Plantagenet
Is crown’d fo foone, and broke his solemne Oath?
As I bethinke me, you should not be King,
Till our King Henry had tooke hands with Death.
And will you pale your head in Henries Glory,
And rob his Temples of the Diademe,
Now in his Life, against your holy Oath?
Oh ’tis a fault too too unpanorable.
Off with the Crowne, and with the Crowne, his Head,
And whilst we breathe, take time to doe him dead.

Clifford. That is my Office, for my Fathers fake.
Queene. Nay fay, let’s hear the Orizons hee makes.

York. Shee-Wolfe of France,
But worse then Wolues of France,
Whose Tongue more poiyons then the Adders Tooth:
How ill-befeeing is it in thy Sex,
To triumph like an Amazonian Trull,
Vpon their Woes, whom Fortune captiuates?
But that thy Face is Vizard-like, exchanging,
Made impudent with vfe of euill deedes.
I would affay, prov’d Queene, to make thee blush.
To tell thee whence thou cam’st, of whom deriu’d,
Were shame enough, to shame thee,
Wert thou not shamelesse.
Thy Father bears the type of King of Naples,
Of both the Sicils, and Jerusalem,
Yet not fo wealthie as an English Yeoman.
Hath that poore Monarch taught thee to infult?
It needes not, nor it bootees thee not, prov’d Queene,
Vnleffe the Adage must be verifi’d,
That Beggers mounted, runne their Horse to death.
’Tis Beautie that doth oft make Women proud.
But God he knowes, thy share thereof is small.
’Tis Vertue, that doth make them most admir’d,
The contrary, doth make thee wondred at.
’Tis Government that makes them seeme Diuine,
The want thereof, makes thee abominable.
Thou art as opposite to every good,
As the Antipodes are vnto vs,
Or as the South to the Septentrion.
Oh Tygres heart, wrapt in a Womans Hide,

How
The third Part of Henry the Sixt.

How couldst thou drayne the Life-blood of the Child, To bid the Father wipe his eyes withall, And yet be scene to bear a Womans face? Women are soft, mild, pittifull, and flexible; Thou, sterner, obdurate, flinty, rough, remorselesse. Biddst thou me rage? why now thou hast thy wish. Wouldst haue me wepe? why now thou hast thy will. For raging Wind blowes vp inceffant flowers, And when the Rage alyayes, the Rain begins. These Teares are my sweet Rutland Obfequies, And every drop cryes vengeance for his death, 'Gainst thee fell Clifford, and thee false French-woman, Northumb. Behreuw me, but his paffions mouses me so, That hardly can I check my eyes from Teares. York. That Face of his, The hungry Caniballs would not haue toucht, Would now have flayd with blood; But you are more inhumane, more inexorable, Ol, tenne times more then Tygers of Hycrania. See, ruthless Queene, a haplfe Theres Teares: This Cloth thou dip'dt in blood of my sweet Boy, And I with Teares doe waft the blood away, Keepe thou the Napkin, and goe boatt of this, An thou telt 't the heauie storie right, Vpon my Soule, the hearers will shed Teares: Yea, even my Foes will shed fat-falling Teares, And say, Alas, it was a pitious deed, There, take the Crowne, and with the Crowne,my Curfe, And in thy need, fuch comfort come to thee, As now I reape at thy too cruell hand. Hard-hearted Clifford, take me from the World, My Soule to Heauen, my Blood upon your Heads. Northumb. Had he beene slaughter-man to all my Kinne, I should not for my Life but wepe with him, To see how inly Sorrow grieves his Soule. Queen. What, weeping ripe, my Lord Northumberland? Thynke but upon the wrong he did vs all, And that will quickly drie thy melting Teares. Clifford. Here's for my Oath, here's for my Fathers Death. Queene. And here's to right our gentle-hearted King. York. Open thy Gate of Mercy, gracious God, My Soule flyes through these wounds, to seek out thee. Queen. Off with his Head, and set it on Yorkes Gates, So York may ouer-looke the Towne of Yorkes. Flourish. Exit. A March. Enter Edward, Richard, and their power.

Edward. I wonder how our Princely Father scap't: Or whether he be scap't away, or no, From Cliffsords and Northumblands pursuit? Had he beene ta'ne, we should have heard the newes; Had he beene slaine, we should have heard the newes: Or had he scap't, me thinkes we should have heard The happy tidings of his good escape. How fares my Brother? why is he so sad? Richard. I cannot joy, till I be resolute Where him in the Battale range about, And watcht him how he fangled Clifford forth. Me thought he bore him in the thickest troupe, As doth a Lyon in a Heard of Neat, Or as a Beare encompaund with Dogges:

Who having pincht a few, and made them cry, The red stand all aleepe, and barke at him. So far'd our Father with his Enemies, So fled his Enemies my Warlike Father: Me thinkes 'tis prize enough to be his Sonne. See how the Morning opes her golden Gates, And takes her farwell of the glorious Sunne. How well reembles it the prime of Youth, Trimm'd like a Yorke, prauencing to his Loue? Ed. Daunce mine eyes, or doe I see three Sunnes? Rich. Three glorious Sunnes, each one a perfect Sunne, Not seperated with the racking Clouds, But feuer'd in a pale cleare-shining Skye.

See, fee, they joyne, embrace, and seeme to kisse, As if they vow'd some League inuiolable. Now are they but one Lampe, one Light, one Sunne: In this, the Heauen figures some euent. Edward. 'Tis wondrous strange, The like yet neuer heard of. I thinke it cites vs(Brother) to the field, That wee, the Sonnes of braue Plantagenet, Each one alreadie blazing by our meedes, Should notwithstanding joyne our Lights together, And ouer-shine the Earth, as this the World. What ere it bodes, hence-forward will I beare Vpon my Targuet three faire shining Sunnes.

Richard. Nay, beare three Daughters: By your leaue, I speake it, You loue the Breeder better then the Male.

Enter one blowing.

But what art thou, whole heauie Lookes fore-tell Some dreadfull story hanging on thy Tongue? Meff. Ah, one that was a woufull looker on, When as the Noble Duke of Yorke was slaine, Your Princely Father, and my louing Lord. Edward. Oh speake no more, for I haue heard too much.

Richard. Say how he dy'd, for I will heare it all. Meff. Environed he was with many foes, And flood against them, as the hope of Troy Against the Greetes, that would have entred Troy, But Hercules himselfe must yeeld to oddes: And many stroakes, though with a little Axe, Hewes downe and fells the hardest-tymbre'd Oake. By many hands your Father was subdu'd, But onely slaughtred by the irrefull Arme

Of vn-releenting Cliffsord, and the Queene: Who crown'd the gracious Duke in high deslight, Laugh'd in his face: and when with griefe he wept, The ruthless Queene gave him, to dry his Cheekes, A Napkin, steeped in the harmelose blood Of sweet young Rutland, by rough Cliffsord slaine, And after many scorres, many foule taunts, They tooke his Head, and on the Gates of Yorke They set the same, and there it doth remaine, The faddest speectacle that ere I view'd.

Edward. Sweet Duke of Yorke, our Prop to leaue vpon, Now thou art gone, wee haue no Staffe, no Stay. Oh Cliffsord, boy'r'rous Cliffsord, thou haist slaine The flowre of Europe, for his Cheualrie, And trecherously haist thou vanquifht him, For hand to hand he would haue vanquifht thee. Now my Soules Pallace is become a Prifons:

Ah, would the breake from hence, that this my body

Might
Might in the ground be clozed vp in rest:
For neuer henceforth shall I joy againe;
Neuer, or neuer shall I see more joy.

Rich. I cannot wepe: for all my bodies moytubre
Scarle ferues to quench my Furnace-burning hart:
Nor can my tongue vnloade my hearts great burthen,
For selfe-fame winde that I should speake withall,
Is kindling coales that fires all my breft,
And burns me vp with flames, that tears would quench.
To wepe, is to make lefle the depth of greefe:
Tears then for Babes; Blowses, and Reuenge for mee.

Rich. I hear thee name, Ile venge thy death,
Or dye renowned by attempting it.

Ed. His name that valiant Duke hath left with thee:
His Dukeedom, and his Chaire with me is left.

Rich. Nay, if thou be that Princely Eagles Bird,
Shew thy defent by gazing 'gainst the Sunne:
For Chaire and Dukeedom, Throne and Kingdome fay, Either that is thine, or else thou wert not his.

March. Enter Warwick, Marqueffe Mountacute, and their Amy.

Warwick. How now faire Lords? What faire? What news abroad?

Rich. Great Lord of Warwick, if we should recompt
Our balefull news, and at each words deliuerance
Stab Poniards in our flefis, till all were told,
The words would adde more anguith then the wounds.
O valiant Lord, the Duke of Yorke is flaine.

Edw. O Warwicke, Warwicke, that Plantagenet
Which held thee deeerely, as his Soules Redemption,
Is by the ferne Lord Clifford done to death.

War. Ten dayes ago, I drown these newes in teares.
And now to adde more measur to your woes,
I come to tell you things fith then befalne.
After the bloody Fray at Wakefield fought,
Where your brave Father breathd his latest gaspe,
Tydings, as twofold as the Pottes could runne,
Were brought me of your Loffe, and his Depart.

I then in London, keeper of the King,
Muster'd my Soldiers, gathered flockes of Friends,
Marcht toward S. Albons, to intercept the Queene,
Bearing the King in my behalfe along:
For by my Scouts, I was audent
That she was comming with a full intent
To dath our late Decree in Parliament,
Touching King Henrys Oath, and your Succesion:
Short Tale to make, weat S. Albons met,
Our Battales joynd, and both sides fiercely fought:
But whether twas the coldneffe of the King,
Who lookd full gentlly on his warlike Queene,
That robbd my Soldiers of their heated Spleene.
Or whether twas report of her succewe,
Or more then common feare of Cliffsords Rigour,
Who thunders to his Captuies, Blood and Death,
I cannot iudge: but to conclude with truth,
Their Weapons like to Lightning, came and went:
Our Souldiers like the Night, Owles lazie flight,
Or like a lazie Thresher with a Flasie,
Fell gentlly downe, as if they strucke their Friends.
I cheerd them vp with luffte of our Caule,
With promise of high pay, and great Rewards:
But all in vaine, they had no heart to fight,
And we (in them) no hope to win the day,
So that we fled: the King vnto the Queene,
Lord George, your Brother, Norfolke, and my Selfe,

In hafte, post hafte, are come to loyne with you:
For in the Marches heere we heard you were,
Making another Head, to fight againe.

Ed. Where is the Duke of Norfolk, gentle Warwick?
And when came George from Burgundy to England?

War. Some fix miles off the Duke is with the Soldiers,
And for your Brother he was lately sent
From your kinde Aunt Dutcheffe of Burgundie,
With ayde of Soulidiers to this needfull Warre.

Rich. Twas oddes belike, when valiant Warwick fled;
Oft haue I heard his praiies in Purfuite,
But ne're till now, his Scandal of Retire.

War. Nor now my Scandal Richard, dost thou heare:
For thou shalt know this strong right hand of mine,
Can plucke the Diadem from faint Henries head,
And wring the awefull Scepter from his Fift,
Were he as famous, and as bold in Warre,
As he is famd for Mildnene, Peace, and Prayer.

Rich. I know it well Lord Warwick, blame me not,
'Tis loue I hear thy glories make me speake:
But in this troublous time, what's to be done?
Shall we go throw away our Coates of Steele,
And wrap our bodies in blacke mourning Gownes,
Numbering our Aue-Maries with our Beads?
Or shall we on the Helmets of our Foes
Tell our Devotion with reuengefull Armes?
If for the left, say I, and to it Lords.

War. Why therefore Warwick came to seek you out,
And therefore comes my Brother Mountague:
Attend me Lords, the proud infulting Queene,
With Clifford, and the haught Northumberland,
And of their Feather, many moe proud Birds,
Haue wrought the eafeef-melting King, like Wax.
He fwores content to your Succession,
His Oath enrolled in the Parliament.
And now to London all the crew are gone,
To frustrate both his Oath, and what beside
May make against the houfe of Lancafet.
Their power (I thinke) is thirty thousand strong:
Now, if the helpe of Norfolk, and my felie,
With all the Friends that thou braue Earle of March
Among't the louing Weffhmen can't procure,
Will but amount to flue and twenty thousand,
Why Via, to London will we march,
And once againe, beftride our foaming Steeds,
And once again cry Charge vpon our Foes,
But neuer once again turne backe and flye.

Rich. I, now me thinks I hear great Warwick speake;
Ne're may he liue to fee a Sun-thine day,
That cries Retire, if Warwick bid him flay.

Ed. Lord Warwickke, on thy shoulder will I leane,
And when thou fallist (as God forbid the houre)
Muf't Edward fall, which perill heauen forefend.

War. No longer Earle of March, but Duke of Yorke:
The next degree, is Englands Royall Throne:
For King of England shalt thou be proclaimed
In euery Burrough as we paffe along,
And he that throwes not vp his cap for joy,
Shall for the Fault make forfeit of his head.

King Edward, valiant Richard Mountague:
Stay we no longer, dreaming of Renowne,
But found the Trumpets, and about our Taskes.

Rich. Then Clifford, were thy heart as hard as Steele,
As thou haft shewn it flintie by thy deeds,
I come to pierce it, or to give thee mine.

Ed. Then strike vp Drums, God and S. George for vs.

War.
Enter a Messenger.

War. How now? what newes?

Mess. The Duke of Norfolke sends you word by me, The Queene is comming with a puxifiant Hoafe, And craves your company, for speedy counsell.

War. Why then it forts, braue Warriors,let's away.

Exeunt Omnes.

Flourish. Enter the King, the Queene, Clifford, Northumb- and Yong Prince, with Drumme and Trumpettes.

Qu. Welcome my Lord, to this braue town of Yorke, Yonders the head of that Arch-enemy, That fought to be incompaet with your Crowne. Doth not the object cheere your heart,my Lord. K. L, as the rockes cheere them that feare their wrack, To fee this fight, it lites my very foule, With-hold reuenge (deere God) 'tis not my fault, Nor wittingly have I infringing'd my Vow.

Clif. My gracious Liege, this too much lenity And harmfull pitty must be layd aside : To whom do Lyons caft their gentle Lookes? Not to the Beaf, that would vfurpe their Den. Whose hand is that the Forreft Bear doth licke? Not his that spoyles her yong before her face. Who scapes the lurking Serpents mortall sting? Not he that fets his foot vpon her backe. The smallest Worme will turne, being troden on, And Doues will pecke in fafeguard of their Brood. Ambitious Yorke, did leuell at thy Crowne, Thou fingling, while he knitt his angry browes. He but a Duke, would have his Sonne a King, And raife hisifie like a louing Sire. Thou being a King, bleft with a goodly fonne, Did't yeeld conuent to disfainer him :

Which argued thee a moft vnloving Father. Unreaftionable Creatures feed their young, And though mans face be fearfull to their eyes, Yet in their heart of their tender ones. Who hath not feen them euin with those wings, Which sometime they haue va'd with fearfull flight, Make ware with him that climbat vnto their neft, Offering their owne liues in their yongs defence: For shame, my Liege, make them your Prefident : Were it not pitty that this goodly Boy Should looie his Birth—right by his Fathers fault, And long heererafter lay vnto his childe, What my great Grandfather, and Grandfire got, My carelesse Father fondly gane away. Ah, what a shame were this? Looke on the Boy, And let his manly face, which promifeth Succesful Fortune steale thy melting heart, To hold thine owne, and leave thine owne with him.

King. Full well hath Clifford plaide the Orator, Inferring arguments of mightie force : But Clifford tell me, did't thou neuer heare, That things ill got, had euuer bad succeffe. And happy always was it for that Sonne, Whose Father for his hoarding went to hell : Ilte leave my Sonne my Vertuous deeds behinde, And would my Father had left me no more: For all the rest is held at such a Rate, As brings a thousand fold more care to keepe, Then in poftellion any lot of pleafure. Ah Cofin Yorke, would thy beft Friends did know, How it doth greeue me that thy head is heere. Qu. My Lord cheere vp your spirites, our foes are nye, And this soft courage makes your Followers faint : You promitt Kindneffe to our forward Sonne, Vnfeath your sword, and dub him prently. Edward, kneele downe.

King. Edward Plantagenet, arife a Knight, And learne this Lefion; Draw thy Sword in right.

Prin. My gracious Father, by your Kingly leave, Ie draw it as Apparant to the Crowne, And in that quarrell, vfe it to the death.

Clif. Why that is spoken like a toward Prince.

Enter a Messenger.

Maff. Royall Commanders, be in readinesse, For with a Band of thirty thouand men, Comes Warwicke backing of the Duke of Yorke, And in the Townes as they do march along, Proclaims him King, and many fye to him, Darraigne your battell, for they are at hand.

Clif. I would your Highnesse would depart the field, The Queene hath beft successe when you are abfent.

Qu. I'g good my Lord, and leave va to our Fortune.

King. Why, that's my fortune too, therefore Ie fay.

North. Be it with resolution then to fight.

Prin. My Royall Father, cheere thefe Noble Lords, And heare thofe that fight in your defence:

Vnfeath your Sword, good Father: Cry S. George.

Edw. Now periu'd Henry, wilt thou kneel for grace? And fett thy Diadem vpon my head? Or hide the mortall Fortune of the field.

Qu. Go rate thy Minions, proud Infulting Boy, Becomes it thee to be thus bold in terms, Before thy Soueraigne, and thy lawfull King?

Ed. I am his King, and he would bow his knee : I was adopted Heire to his conuent.

Cla. Since when, his Oath is broke: for as I heare, You that are King, though he doe ware the Crowne, Haue cau'd him by new Act of Parliament, To blot out me, and put his owne Sonne in.

Clif. And reaon too, Who should succeede the Father, but the Sonne.

Clif. I Crooke-back, here I fand to anfwer thee, Or any he, the proue of thy for.

Rich. 'Twas you that kill'd yong Rutland, was it not? Clif. I, and old Yorke, and yet not fatisfie.

Rich. For Gods fake Lords give signall to the fight.

War. What faie'ft thou Henry, Wilt thou yeeld the Crowne? (you fpeak)

Qu. Why how now long-tongu'd Warwicke, dare

When you and I, met at S. Allons laft,

Your leggtes did better feruice then your hands.

War. Then 'twas my turne to fly, and now 'tis thine :

Clif. You faid fo much before, and yet you fled.

War. 'Twas not your valor Clifford droue me thence.

Nor.No, nor your manhood that durft make you stay.

Rich. Northumberland, I hold thee reuerently, Breake off the parley, for fcarfe I can refraine

The execution of my big iwolne heart

Vpon that Clifford, that cruel Child-killer.

Clif. I flw thy Father, cal'ft thou him a Child?
Rich. I like a Daffard, and a treacherous Coward,
As thou didst' fight our tender Brother Rutland,
But ere Sunset, I will make thee curse the deed.
King. Have done with words (my Lords) and hear me speake.
Qu. Difie them then, or els holde close thy lips.
King. Yet I prithee give no limits to my Tongue,
I am a King, and pruell'd go to speake.
Cliff. My Liege, the wound that bred this meeting here,
Cannot be cut by Words, therefore be still.
Rich. Then Executioner vnheath thy word:
By him that made vs all, I am relou'd,
That Cliffs Hand, with his tongue.
Ed. Say Henry, shall I have my right, or no?
A thousand men haue broke their Fafts to day,
That ne're shall dine, vnleafe thou yield the Crowne.
War. If thou deny their, Blood upon thy head,
For Yorke in justice put's his Armour on.
Pr.Ed. If that be right, which Warwick saies is right,
There is no vrvong, but every thing is right.
War. Who euer got thee, there thy Mother stands,
For well I vrot, thou haft thy Mother tongues.
Qu. But thou art neyther like thy Sire nor Damme,
But like a foule Lizard in Spight.
Mark'd by the Definitions to be avoided,
As venom Toades, or Lizards dreadfull rings.
Rich. Iron of Naples, hid with English gilt,
Whose Father bears the Title of a King,
(As if a Channell shou'd be call'd the Sea)
(Sham's thou not, knowing whence thou art extraught,
To let thy tongue deteet thy base-born heart.
Ed. A wiphe of straw were worth a thousand Crowns,
To make this shamefull Callet know her selfe:
Hel en of Greece was fayer farre then thou,
Although thy Husband may be Memelau;
And ne're was Agamemnon Brother wrong'd
By that false Woman, as this King by thee.
His Father reuel'd in the heart of France,
And tam'd the King,and made the Dolphin floope:
And had he match'd according to his State,
He might haue kept that glory to this day.
But when he took a begger to his bed,
And grac'd thy poore Sire with his Bridall day,
Even then that Sun-shine brew'd a thowre for him,
That waft his Fathers fortunes forth of France,
And head'd fediton on his Crowne at home:
For what hath broach'd this tumult but thy Pride?
Had't thou bene meeke, our Title still had flpt,
And we in pitty of the Gentle King,
Had fip't our Claine, vntill another Age.
Cla. But when we saw, our Sunshine made thy Spring
And that thy Summer bred vs no increafe,
We fet the Axe to thy vfurping Roote:
And though the edge hath something hit our felues,
Yet know thou, since we have begun to strike,
We'll neuer leaue, till we have hewne thee downe,
Or bath'd thy growing, with our heated bloods.
Edw. And in this refolution, I defie thee,
Not willing any longer Conference,
Since thou denied' the gentle King to speake.
Sound Trumpets, let our bloody Colours waue,
And either Victorie, or else a Graue.
Qu. Stay Edward.
Ed. No wrangling Woman, wee'l no longer flay,
These words will cost ten thousand liues this day.
Exeunt omnes.

Alarum. Excursions. Enter Warwick.

War. Fore-spent with Toile, as Runners with a Race,
I lay me downe a little while to breath:
For strokes receu'd, and many blows repaid,
Have robb'd my strong knit finesew of their strenght,
And spight of spight, needs must I ret a-while.

Enter Edward running.

Ed. Smile gentle heauen, or strike vngentle death,
For this world frownes, and Edwards's Sunne is clouded.
War. How now my Lord, what happe? what hope of good?

Enter Clarence.

Cl. Our hap is loffe, our hope but sad dispaire,
Our rankes are broke, and ruine followes vs.
What counfaile give you? whether shall we flye?
Ed. Bootlesse is flight, they follow vs with Wings,
And weake we are, and cannot shun purftue.

Enter Richard.

Rich. Ah Warwick, why haft' thou withdrawn thy selfe?
Thy Brothers blood the thirty earth hath drunk,
Broach'd with the Steely point of Cliffs Launce:
And in the vryngs of death, he cryde,
Like to a dismall Clangor heard from farre,
Warwicke, reuenge; Brother, reuenge my death.
So vnderneath the belly of their Steeds,
That shan't their Fetlocks in his smoaking blood,
The Noble Gentleman gaue yp the ghost.
War. Then let the earth be drunken with our blood:
Ile kill my Horfe,because I will not fyfe:
Why shal I weake like soft-hearted women here,
Wayling our loffes, whilstes the Foe doth Rage,
And looke vpon, as if the Tragedie
Were plaied in gelt, by counterfettig Actors.
Heere on my knee, I vow to God aboue,
Ie neuer pawfe againe, neuer stand still,
Till either death hath clost these eyes of mine,
Or Fortune gien me measure of Reuenge.
Ed. Oh Warwicke, I do bend my knee with thine,
And in this vow do chaine my foule to thine:
And ere my knee rife from the Earths cold face,
I throw my hands, mine eyes, my heart to thee,
Thou fetter yp, and placuer downe of Kings:
Befeeching thee (if with thy will it stand)
That to my Foes this body mutt be prey,
Yet that thy brazen gates of heauen may ope,
And glue sweet passage to my sinfull foule.
Now Lords, take leaue vntill we meete againe,
Where ere it be, in heauen,or in earth.
Rich. Brother,
Gie me thy hand, and gentle Warwicke,
Let me imbrace thee in my weary armes:
I that did neuer wepe, now melt with wo,
That Winter should cut off our Spring-time so.
War. Away, away:
Once more sweet Lords farwell.
Cla. Yet let vs altogether to our Troopes,
And giue them leaue to flye, that will not flay:
And call them Pillars that will stand to vs:
And if we thrive, promife them such rewards
As victors were at the Olympian Games.
This may plant courage in their quailing breasits,
For yet is hope of Life and Victorie:

p 2
The third Part of King Henry the Sixt.

Forec'no longer, make we hence amaine. Exeunt

Exeunt. Enter Richard and Clifford.

Rich. Now Clifford, I have sung thee alone,
Suppose this arm is for the Duke of York,
And this for Rutland, both bound to reunge,
Wert' thou inuiron'd with a Brazen wall.

Cliff. Now Richard, I am with thee heere alone,
This is the hand that flabb'd thy Father York,
And this the hand, that flew thy Brother Rutland,
And here's the heart, that triumphs in their death,
And cheers these hands, that flew thy Sire and Brother,
To execute the like upon thy selfe,
And so haue at thee.

Thee Fight, Warwickes cometh, Clifford flieth.

Rich. Nay Warwickes, sangle out some other Chace,
For I my selfe will hunt this Wolfe to death. Exeunt.

Alerum. Enter King Henry alone.

Hen. This battell fares like to the mornings Warre,
When dying clouds contend, with growing light,
What time the Shepheard blowing of his nailes,
Can neither call it perfect day, nor night.
Now fwayes it this way, like a Mighty Sea,
Fors' by the Tide, to combat with the Winde:
Now fwayes it that way, like the felse-fame Sea,
Fors' to retreie by furie of the Winde.
Sometimes, the Flood prevails; and than the Winde:
Now, one the better: then, another best;
Both ruggig to be Victors, breft to breft:
Yet neither Conqueror, nor Conquered.
So is the equall poise of this feld Warre.
Here on this Mole-hill will I fit me downe,
To whom God will, there be the Victorie:
For Margaret my Queene, and Clifford too
Have chil'd me from the Battell: Swearing both,
They prosper best of all when I am thence.
Would I were dead, if Gods good will were so;
For what is in this world, but Greefe and Woe.
Oh God! me thinks it were a happy life,
To be no better then a homely Swaine,
To fit vpone a hill, as I do now,
To curie out Dials quiently, point by point,
Thereby to fee the Minutes how they runne:
How many makes the Houre full compleate,
How many Hores brings about the Day,
How many Days will fìnish vp the Yeare,
How many Yeares, a Mortall man may lye.
When this is knowne, then to diluie the Times:
So many Horses, muft I tend my Flocke;
So many Horses, muft I take my Reft:
So many Horses, muft I Contemple:
So many Horses, muft I Sport my felle:
So many Days, my Eues have bene with yong:
So many weakes, erre the poore Fooles will Eate:
So many yeares, erre I shall thence the Fleece:
So Minutes, Hores, Days, Monthes, and Yeares,
Paft ouer to the end they were created,
Would bring white haires, vnto a Quiet graue.
Ah! what a life were this? How sweet? how lovely?
Gius not the Hawthorne buft a Sweeter shade
To Shepherds, looking on their filly Sherpe,
Then doth a rich Imbroider'd Canopie
To Kings, that fear their Subjects treacherie?
Oh yes, it doth; a thousand fold it doth.
And to conclude, the Shepherds homely Curds,

His cold thinnge drinke out of his Leather Bottle,
His wonted fleape, under a fresh trees shade,
All which secure, and sweetly he enloyes,
Is farre beyond a Princes Delicates:
His Viands sparkling in a Golden Cup,
His bodie couched in a curious bed,
When Care, Misfortun, and Treaflon waits on him.

Alerum. Enter a Sonne that bathe kill'd his Father, at one doore: and a Father that bathe kill'd his Sonne at another doore.

Son. Ill blows the winde that profits no body,
This man whom hand to hand I fiew in fight,
May be pouflewed with some store of Crownes,
And I that (happily) take them from him now,
May yet (ere night) yeild both my Life and them.
To fome man elfe, as this dead man doth me.
Who's this? Oh God! It is my Fathers face,
Whom in this Conflict, I (vnwares) haue kill'd:
Oh heavy times! begetting fuch Evens.
From London, by the King was I pref't forth,
My Father being the Earl of Warwickes man,
Came on the part of York, pref't by his Mafter:
And I, who at his hands receiu'd my life,
Have by my hands, of Life bereaued him.
Pardon me God, I knew not what I did:
And pardon Father, for I knew not thee.
My Teares fhall wipe away thofe bloody markes:
And no more words, till they have flow'd their fill.

King. O pitteous fpectacle! O bloody Times!
Whiles Lyons Warre, and battale for their Dennes,
Poore harmleffe Lambes abide their enmity.
Wpee wretched man: Ile ayde thee Teare for Teare,
And let our hearts and eyes, like Cuill Warre,
Be blinde with teares, and break ore-charg'd with griece

Enter Father, bearing of his Sonne.

Fa. Thou that fo floutly hath refifi'd me,
Gie me thy Gold, if thou haue any Gold:
For I have bought it with an hundred blowes.
But let me fee: Is this my Foe-mans face?
Ah, no, no, no, it is mine onely Sonne.
Ah Boy, if any life be left in thee,
Throw vp thine eye: fee, fee, what showres arife,
Blowne with the windie Tempeft of my heart,
Vpon thy wounds, that kills mine Eye, and Heart.
O pitty God, this miferable Age!
What Stragems? how fell how Butcherly?
Erreounous, mutinous, and vnnaturall,
This deadly quarrell daily doth beget?
O Boy! thy Father gae thee life too foone,
And hath bereft thee of thy life too late.

King. Wo aboue wo:greefe, more thë common greefe
O that my death would stay thefe ruthfull deeds:
O pitty, pitty, gentle heauen pitty:
The Red Rose and the White are on his face,
The fallall Colours of our ftringuing Houfes:
The one, his purple Blood right well refembles,
The other his pale Cheekes (me thinks) prefenteth:
Wither one Rose, and let the other flourith:
If you contend, a thoufand lines muft wither.

Son. How will my Mother, for a Fathers death
Take on with me, and ne're be fatisfi'd?

Fa. How will my Wife, for flaughter of my Sonne,
Shed fears of Teares, and ne're be fatisfi'd?

King. How will the Country, for thofe woful chances,
Mil-thinke the King, and not be satisfied?
Son. Was ever Sonne, so rew’d a Fathers death?
Fath. Was ever Father so bemoan’d his Sonne?
Hen. Was ever King so green’d for Subiects woe?
Much is your sorrow; Mine, ten times so much.
Son. I le beare thee hence, where I may wepe my fill.
Fath. Thse arms of mine shall be thy wounding sheeet:
My heart (sweet Boy) shall be thy Sepulcher,
For from my heart, thine Image ne’er shall go.
My fighting breaf, shall be thy Funerall bell
And fo obsequious will thy Father be,
Men for the loffe of thee, hauing no more,
As PriaM was for all his Valiant Sons,
I le beare thee hence, and let them fight that will,
For I haue murthered where I should not kill.
Exit
Hen. Sad-hearted-men, much ouergone with Care;
Heere fits a King, more wofull then you are.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter the Quean, the Prince, and Exeter.

Prin. Fly Father, flye: for all your Friends are fled.
And Warwicke rages like a madde Bull:
Away, for death doth hold vs vs in puruite.
Qu. Mount you my Lord, towards Warwicke post a maisme:
Edward and Richard like a brace of Grey-hounds,
Hauing the fearfull flying Hare in sight,
With fiery eyes, Sparkling for very wrath,
And bloody fleete graiift in their yrefull hands
Are at our backes, and therefore hence amaine.
Exeit. Away: for vengeance comes along with them,
Nay, stay not to expoultate, make speed,
Or elle come after, I le away before.
Hen. Nay take me with thee, good sweet Exeter:
Not that I feare to flay, but loue to go
Whether the Queene intends. Forward, away.

Exeunt

A loud alarum. Enter Clifford Wounded.

Cliff. Heere burns my Candle out; I, heere it dies,
Which whiles it lafted, gave King Henry light.
O Lancasser! I feare thy overthrow,
More then my Bodies parting with my Soule:
My Love and Feare, glew’d many Friends to thee,
And now I fall. Thy tough Conmiatures melts,
Impairing Henry, streng’ning misproud Yorke;
And whether flye the Gnats, but to the Sunne
And who shines now, but Henrys Enemies?
O Phebus! had’t thou never gien consente,
That Phaeton should checke thy fiery Steeds,
Thy burning Carre neuer had scorch’d the earth.
And Henry, had’t thou swaid’ as Kings should do,
Or as thy Father, and his Father did,
Giuing no ground vnto the houffe of Yorke,
They never then had sprung like Sommer Flyes:
I, and ten thousand in this lucklesse Realme,
Hed left no mournung Wildowes for our death,
And thou this day, had’t kept thy Chaire in peace.
For what doth cheriish Weeds, but gentle ayre?
And what makes Robbers bold, but too much lenity?
Bootleffe are Plains, and Cureleffe are my Wounds:
No way to flye, nor strength to hold out flight:
The Foe is mercifulle, and will not pitty:
For at their hands I have deuer’d no pitty.
The ayre hath got into my deadly Wounds,
And much effuse of blood, doth make me faint:
Come York, and Richard, Warwicke, and the reft,
I stab’d your Fathers bofomes; Split my bref.

Ed. Now breath we Lords, good fortune bids us pause,
And smooth the frownes of War, with peacefull looks:
Some Troopes pursue the bloody-minded Queene,
That led calme Henry, though he were a King,
As doth a Saile, fill’d with a fretting Gult
Command an Argofe to stemme the Waues.
But thinke you (Lords) that Clifford fled with them?
War. No, ’tis imposible he shoulde escape:
(For though before his face I speake the words)
Your Brother Richard markt him for the Grane,
And wherefore he is, hee’s surely dead. Clifford groans
Rich. Whole soule is that which takes his heavy leau.
A deadly groan, like life and deaths departing.
See who it is.
Ed. And now the Battailies ended,
If Friend or Foe, let him be gently vied.
Rich. Revoke that doome of mercy, for ’tis Clifford,
Who not contented that he lope’d the Branch
In hewing Rutland, when his leaues put forth,
But set his murthering knife vnto the Roote,
From whence that tender spryad did sweetly spring,
I meane our Princely Father, Duke of Yorke.
War. From off the gates of Yorke, fetch down ye head,
Your Fathers head, which Clifford placed there:
In rade whereof, let this supply the roome,
Measure for measure, must be anwered.
Ed. Bring forth that fatal Schreechowle to our houfe,
That nothing fung but death, to vs and ours:
Now death shall stop his dismall threatening found,
And his ill-boading tongue, no more shall speake.
War. I thinke is understanding is bereft:
Speake Clifford, doft thou know who speaks to thee?
Darke cloudy death ore-shades his beames of life,
And he nor fees, nor heares vs, what we say.
Rich. O would he did, and fo (perhaps) he doth,
’Tis but his policy to counterfet,
Because he would avoid such bitter taunts
Which in the time of death he gave our Father.
Cla. If to thou think’st,
Vex him with eager Words,
Rich. Clifford, ask mercy, and obtaine no grace.
Ed. Clifford, repent in bootlesse penitence.
War. Clifford, deuise excuses for thy faults.
Cla. While we deuise fell Tortures for thy faults.
Rich. Thou diid’l love Yorke, and I am fon to Yorke.
Edw. Thou pitied’rt Rutland, I will pitty thee.
Cla. Where’s Captaine Margaret, to fence you now?
War. They mocke thee Clifford,
Swere as thou was’t wont.
Rich. What, not an Oath? Nay then the world go’s hard
When Clifford cannot spare his Friends an oath:
I know by that he’s dead, and by my Soule,
If this right hand would buy two hours life,
That I (in all despeight) might rayle at him,
This hand should chop it off: & with the islingue Blood
Stifie the Villaine, whose vnflanced thrift
Yorke, and yong Rutland could not satisifie
War. I, but he’s dead. Of with the Traitors head,
And rear it in the place your Fathers stands.
And now to London with Triumphant march,

P. 3

There
The Tyger will be milde, whiles she doth mourn;
And Nero will be tainted with remorse,
To heare and see her plaints, her Brinith Tearpes
I, but shee's come to begge, Warwick to glue:
Shee on his left side, crauing ayde for Henrie;
He on his right, asking a wife for Edward.
Shee Weepes, and says, her Henrie is depos'd:
He Smiles, and says, his Edward is infaul'd:
That the (poore Wretch) for greefe can speake no more:
Whiles Warwick tells his Title, smooths the Wrong,
Inferreth arguments of mightie strenght,
And in conclusion winnes the King from her,
With promisse of his Sitter, and what else,
To strengthen and support King Edwards place.
O Margaret, thus 'twill be, and thou (poore foule)
Art then forfaken, as thou went't forlorn.
Hum. Say, what art thou talk't of Kings & Queens?
King. More then I seeeme, and leffe then I was born to:
A man at leaft, for leffe I should not be:
And men may talke of Kings, and why not I?
Hum. I, but thou talkst, as if thou wer't a King.
King. Why fo I am (in Mind) and that's enough.
Hum. But if thou be a King, where is thy Crowne?
King. My Crowne is in my heart, not on my head:
Not deck'd with Diamonds, and Indian stones:
Nor to be seene: my Crowne, is call'd Content,
A Crowne it is, that fildome Kings enjoy.
Hum. Well, if you be a King crownd with Content,
Your Crowne Content, and you, must be contented
To go along with vs. For (as we think)
You are the king King Edward hath depos'd:
And we his subiects, sworne in all Allegence,
Will apprehend you, as his Enemie.
King. But did you never sware, and breake an Oath.
Hum. No, neuer such an Oath, nor will not now.
King. Where did you dwell when I was K. of England?
Hum. Here in this Country, where we now remaine.
King. I was annoitied King at nine months old,
My Father, and my Grandfather were Kings:
And you were sworne true Subjectts unto me:
And tell me then, haue you not broke your Oathes?
Sir. No, for we were Subjectts, but while you wer king
King. Why? Am I dead? Do I not breath a Man?
Ah simple men, you know not what you sware:
Looke, as I blow this Feather from my Face,
And as the Ayre blows it to me again,
Obeying with my winde when I do blow,
And yelding to another, when it blowes,
Commanded alwayes by the greater guft:
Such is the lightneffe of you, common men.
But do not breake your Oathes, for of that sinne,
My milde intreatie shall not make you gultie.
Go where you will, the king shall be commanded,
And bye kings, command, and Ile obey.
Sinklo. We are true Subjectts to the king,
King Edward.
King. So would you be againe to Henrie,
If he were feated as king Edward is.
Sinklo. We charge you in Gods name & the Kings,
To go with vs unto the Officers.
King. In Gods name lead, your Kings name be obeyd,
And what God will, that let your King performe,
And what he will, I humbly yeeld vs.

Enter K.Edward, Gloucester, Clarence, Lady Gray.
King. Brother of Gloster, at S.Albons field.
This Ladies Husband, Sir Richard Grey, was slaine,
His Land then felz'd on by the Conqueror,
Her fuit is now, to repoffife thofe Lands,
Which wee in Ioffice cannot well deny,
Because in Quarrell of the Houfe of York,
The worthy Gentleman did lofe his Life.

Rich. Your Highneffe fhall doe well to graunt her fuit:
It were diſhonour to deny it her.

King. It were no leffe, but yet Ile make a pawfe.

Rich. Yea, is it fo?
I fee the Lady hath a thing to graunt,
Before the King will graunt her humble fuit.

Clarence. Hee knowes the Game, how true hee keeps the winde?

King. Widow, we will confider of your fuit,
And come fome other time to know our minde.

Wid. Right gracious Lord, I cannot brooke delay:
May it please your Highneffe to refolute me now,
And what your pleafure is, fhall fullifie me.

Rich. I Widow? then Ile warrant you all your Lands,
And if what pleafes him, fhall fullifie you:

Fight clofher, or good faith you'lle catch a Blow.

Clarence. I feare her not, vnleffe the chance to fall.

Rich. God forbid that, for hee'tele take vantages.

King. How many Children haft thou, Widow? tell me.

Clarence. I thinke he means to begge a Child of her.

Rich. Nay then whip me: hee'larer glue her two.

Wid. Three, my moft gracious Lord.

Rich. You fhall haue foure, if you'le be rul'd by him.

King. 'Twere pittie they fhould leve their Fathers Lands.

Wid. Be pittiful, dread Lord, and graunt it then.

King. Lords glue vs leaue, Ile trye this Widowes
it.

Rich. I, good leaue haue you, for you will haue leaue,
Till Youth take leaue, and leaue you to the Crutch.

King. Now tell me, Madame, doe you loue your Children?

Wid. I, as full as dearely as I loue my felfe.

King. And would you not doe much to doe them good?

Wid. To doe them good, I would fuffayne fome harme.

King. Then get your Husbands Lands, to doe them
good.

Wid. Therefore I came vnto you Malefifie.

King. Ile tell you how these Lands are to be got.

Wid. So fhall you bind me to your Highneffe feurice.

King. What feurice wilt thou doe me, if I glue them?

Wid. What you command, that refles in me to doe.

King. But you will take exceptions to my Boone.

Wid. No, gracious Lord, except I cannot doe it.

King. I, but thou canft doe what I mean to ask.

Wid. Why then I will doe what your Grace commands.

Rich. Hee plyes her hard, and much Raine weares the Marble.

As red as fire? nay then, her Wax muft melt.

Wid. Why ftoppes my Lord? fhall I not heare my Taskes?

King. An eafe 'Taskes,' tis but to loue a King.

Wid. That's foone perfor'm'd, because I am a Subieft.

King. Why then, thy Husbands Lands I freely glue thee.
Enter a Noble man.

Rich. That would be tenne daies wonder at the leaft.

Clarence. That’s a day longer then a Wonder lafts.

Rich. By fo much is the Wonder in extremes.

King. Well,leaf on Brothers; I can tell you both,

Her fault is granted for her Husbands Lands.

Enter a Noble man.

Nob. My gracious Lord, Henry your Foe is taken,
And brought your Prifoner to your Pallece Gate.

King. See that he be convey’d unto the Tower:
And goe wee Brothers to the man that tooke him,
To queation of his apprehension.

Widow goe you along: Lords vfe her honourable.

Exeunt.

Mamet Richard.

Rich. I, Edward will vfe Women honourably:
Would he were wafted, Marrow, Bones, and all,
That from his Loynes no hopefull Branch may spring,
To croffe me from the Golden time I looke for:
And yet, betweene my Soules desire,and me,
The fulftfull Edwards Title buried,
Is Clarence, Henry, and his Sonne young Edward,
And all the vnlook’d-for Illue of their Bodies,
To take the Roome, ere I can place my felfe:
A cold premitiation for my purpofe.
Why then I doe but dreame on Soueraintie,
Like one that flands vnpon a Promontorie,
And fpies a farre-off shore, where hee would tred;
Withing his foot were equal with his eye,
And chides the Sea, that funders him from thence,
Saying, hee'le lade it dry, to haue his way:
So doe I with the Crowne, being fo farre off,
And so I chide the meanes that keeps me from it,
And fo (I fay) Ile cut the Caufes off,
Flattering me with impoffibilitie:
My Eyes too quicke,my Heart o’re-weenes too much,
Vnleffe my Hand and Strength could equal them.
Well, fay there is no Kingdome then for Richard:
What other Pleafeare can the World afford ?
Ile make my Heauen in a Ladies Lappe,
And decke my Body in gay Ornaments,
And witch sweet Ladies with my Words and Lookes.
Oh miserable Thought: and more unlikely,
Then to accompliﬁst twenty Golden Crownes.
Why Lose forrowe me in my Mothers Wombe:
And for I fhould not deale in her soft Lawes,
Shee did corrupt frayle Nature with fome Bribe,
To shrinke mine Arme vp like a witherd Schrub,
To make an enuious Mountaine on my Back,
Where fits Deformity to mocke my Body;
To shape my Legges of an unequall size,
To dif-proportion me in euery part:
Like to a Chaos, or an vn-lick’d Beare-whele,
That carries no impression like the Damme.
And am I then a man to be belou’d?
Ob monftrous fault, to harbour fuch a thought.
Then fince this Earth affords no joy to me,
But to command, to check, to o’re-beare fuch,
As are of better Perfon then my felfe:
Ile make my Heauen, to dreame vpon the Crowne,
And whiles I life,t’account this World but Hell,
Vntil my mis-fhap’d Trunke, that bares this Head,
Be round impaile with a glorious Crowne.
And yet I know not how to get the Crowne,
For many Liues fland betwixte me and home:

And I, like one loft in a Thornie Wood,
That rents the Thorns, and is rent with the Thorns,
Seeking a way, and staring from the way,
Not knowing how to finde the open Ayre,
But toying desperatly to finde it out,
Torment my felfe, to catch the English Crowne:
And from that torment I will free my felfe,
Or hew my way out with a bloody Axe.
Why I can fmile, and mutter whiles I fmile,
And cry, Content, to that which grieues my Heart,
And wet my Cheeckes with artificiall Tears,
And frame my Face to all occasions.
Ile drowne more Saylers then the Mermaid shall,
Ile lay more gazers then the Baflike,
Ile play the Orator as well as Nehor,
Difcouer more Ily then Piffes could,
And like a Synon, take another Troy.
I can adde Colours to the Camelion,
Change shapes with Protes, for advantages,
And let the murthorous Machault to Schole.
Can I do this,and cannot get a Crowne ?
Tut, were it farther off, Ile plucke it downe.

Exeunt.

Flourish.

Enter Lewis the French King, bis Siler Bona, bis
Admirall, call’d Bourbon : Prince Edward,
Queene Margaret, and the Earle of Oxford.

Lewis,ﬁts, and rife vp againe.

Lewis. Faire Queene of England,worthy Margaret,
Sit downe with vs : it ill beftis thy State.
And Birth, that thou shoul’d fland, while Lewis doth fit.
Marg. No, mighty King of France: now Margaret
Muft strike her fayle, and learned a while to ferue,
Where Kings command. I was (I muft confesse)
Great Albions Queene, in former Golden dayes :
But now mifchance hath trod my Title downe,
And with dif-honor layd me on the ground,
Where I muft take like Seat vnto my fortune,
And to my humble Seat conforme my felfe.

Lewis. Why fay, faire Queene, whence springs this deepse defpaire ?
Marg. From fuch a caufe, as ﬁlls mine eyes with teares,
And fops my tongue, while heart is drown’d in cares.
Lewis. What ere it be, be thou still, like thy felle,
And ﬁt thee by our fide
Sodo our fonf.
Yeeld not thy necke to Fortunes yoake,
But let thy dauntlefe minde full ride in triumph,
Ouer all mifchance.
Be plaine, Queene Margaret, and tell thy griefe,
It shall be eas’d,if France can yeeld reliefe.
Marg. Thofe gracious words
Reuieue my drooping thoughts,
And give my tongue-ty’d forrowes leauue to speake.
Now therefore be it knowne to Noble Lewis,
That Henry, folle poifeﬂor of my Loue,
Is, of a King,become a banilft man,
And for’d to lie in Scotland a Forlorne ;
While proud ambitious Edward,Duke of Yorke,
Vf Wordpress the Regall Title, and the Seat
Of Englands true anoynted lawfull King.
This is the caufe that I, pooro Margaret,
With this my Sonne,Prince Edward,Henryes Heire,
Am come to craue thy luft and lawfull aye:
And if thou faile vs,all our hope is done.
Scotland hath will to helpe,but cannot helpe:

Our
The third Part of King Henry the Sixt.

Our People, and our Peeres, are both mis-led,
Our Treasure seiz'd, our Souliors put to flight,
And (as thou feest) our felues in heauie plight.

Lewi. Renowned Queene,
With patience calme the Storme,
While we bethinke a meane to breake it off.

Marg. The more wee flay, the stronger grows our Foe.

Lewi. The more I flay, the more Ile succour thee.

Marg. O, but impatience waiteth on true forrow,
And fee where comes the breeder of my forrow.

Enter Warwick.

Lewi. What's hee approacheth boldly to our prefence?

Marg. Our Earle of Warwick, Edwards greatest Friend.

Lewi. Welcome braue Warwick, what brings thee to France? I see defends. Shee arift.

Marg. I now begins a second Storme to rife,
For this is hee that moves both Winde and Tyle.

Warm. From worthy Edward, King of Albon,
My Lord and Souraigne, and thy vowed Friend,
I come (in Kindneffe, and vnfayned Loue)
First, to doe greetings to thy Royall Person,
And then to craue a League of Amitie :
And laftly, to confirme that Amitie
With Nuptiall Knot, if thou vouchsafe to graunt
That vertuous Lady Bona, thy faire Sifter,
To Englands King, in lawfull Marriage.

Marg. If that goe forward, Henries hope is done.

Warm. And gracious Madame, Speaking to Bona.

In our Kings behalf,
I am commanded, with your leauue and favor,
Humbly to kiffe your hand, and with my Tongue
To tell the pasion of my Souraigne Heart;
Where Fame, late entring at his heedfull Eares,
Hath plac'd thy Beauties Image, and thy Verte.

Marg. King Lewis, and Lady Bona, heare me speake,
Before you anfwer Warwick. His demand
Springs not from Edwards well-mean't honest Loue,
But from Deceit, bred by Necessitie;
For how can Tyrant safely governe home,
Vnleffead abroad they purchase great allying?
To prove him Tyrant, this reafon may suffice,
That Henry Lueth still: but were hee dead,
Yet here Prince Edward fands, King Henries Sonne.

Looke therefore Lewis, that by this League and Mariage
Thou draw not on thy Danger, and Dis-honor:
For though Viapers ifway the rule a while,
Yet Heau'ns are iuft, and Time uppreffeth Wrongs.

Warm. Injurios Margaret.

Edw. And why not Queene?

Warm. Because thy Father Henry did vfurpe,
And thou no more art Prince, then thee is Queene.

Oxf. Then Warwick difparres great Iohn of Gaunt,
Which did subdue the greatest part of Spaine;
And after Iohn of Gaunt, Henry the Fourth,
Whose Wildome was a Mirror to the wifte:
And after that wife Prince, Henry the Fifth,
Who by his Prowesse conquered all France:
From thefe, our Henry lineally descends.

Warm. Oxford, how haps it in this smooth discours,
You told not, how Henry the Sixt hath loft
All that, which Henry the Fift had gotten:

Me thinkes these Peeres of France should smile at that.
But for the ref: you tell a Pedigree
Of threescore and two yeares, a filly time
To make prescription for a Kingdomes worth.

Oxf. Why Warwick, canst thou speake against thy Liege,
Whom thou obey'dst thirtie and fix yeeres,
And not betray thy Treafon with a Blush?

Warm. Can Oxford, that did euer fence the right,
Now buckler Falsehood with a Pedigree?
For ifme leave Henry, and call Edward King.

Oxf. Call him my King, by whose injuriose doome
My elder Brother, the Lord Aubrey vere
Was done to death? and more then fo, my Father,
Euen in the downe-fall of his mellow'd yeeres,
When Nature brought him to the door of Death?
No Warwick, no: while Life vpholds this Arme,
This Arme vpholds the House of Lancaster.

Warm. And I the Houfe of Yorke.

Lewi. Queene Margaret, Prince Edward, and Oxford,
Vouched your reques? to fland aside,
While I vfe further conference with Warwick.

They fland alofte.

Marg. Heauens graunt, that Warwickes wordes be-watch him not.

Lewi. Now Warwick, tell me euen upon thy conscience
Is Edward your true King? for I were loth
To linke with him, that were not lawfull choen.

Warm. Thereon I paimne my Credit, and mine Honor.

Lewi. But is hee gracious in the Peoples eye?

Warm. The more, that Henry was vnfortunate.

Lewi. Then further: all dissembling fet aside,
Tell me for truth, the meafure of his Loue
Vnto our Sifter Bona.

Warm. Such it femes,
As may befeeeme a Monarch like himfelfe.
My felfe have often heard him fay, and fware,
That this his Loue was an externall Plant,
Whereof the Root was fixt in Vertues ground,
The Leaues and Fruit maintain'd with Beauties Sunne,
Exempt from Enuy, but not from Difdain,
Ynleffe the Lady Bona quitt his paine.

Lewi. Now Sifter, let vs heare your firme refolute.

Bona. Your graunt, or your denyall, fhall be mine.

Yet I confefs, that often ere this day,

Speaks to War.

When I have heare your Kings defert recounted,
Mine ear hath tempt't judgement to defire.

Lewi. Then Warwick, thus:

Our Sifter fhall be Edwards,
And now forthwith fhall Articles be drawne,
Touching the Joynture that your King muft make,
Which with her Dowrie fhall be counter-poy'sd:
Draw neere, Queene Margaret, and be a witnefe,
That Bona fhall be Wife to the English King.

Pr. Edw. To Edward, but not to the English King.

Marg. Deceitfull Warwick, it was thy deuise,
By this alliance to make void my fuit:
Before thy comming, Lewis was Henries friend.

Lewi. And fill is friend to him, and Margaret.

But if your Title to the Crowne be weake,
As may appeare by Edwards good succiffe:
Then 'tis but reafon, that I be releas'd
From giving aye, which late I promis'd.
Yet fhall you have all kindneffe at my hand,
That your Eftate requires, and mine can yeeld.

Warm. Henry now lives in Scotland, at his cale;

Where
The third Part of King Henry the Sixt.

Where having nothing, nothing can he lose.
And as for you your selfe (our quondam Queene)
You have a Father able to maintaine you,
And better 'twere, you troubled him, then France.

Mar. Peace impudent, and shamelesse Warwickie,
Proud fetter vp, and puller downe of Kings,
I will not hence, till with my Talke and Tearces
(Both full of Truth) I make King Lewis behold
Thy flye conceuance, and thy Lords false love,

defying a borne Within.

For both of you are Birds of false-fame Feather.
Lewis. Warwickie, this is some poete to vs, or thee.

Enter the Poete.

Poete. My Lord Ambassadors,
These Letters are for you.
Speakes to Warwick.
Sent from your Brother Marquite to Montague.
Thefe from our King, vnto your Maiely.
And Madam, thefe for you:

To Lewis.
To Margaret.

From whom, I know not.

They all read their Letters.

Oxf. I like it well, that our faire Queene and Miftis
Smiles at her newes, while Warwick frownes at his.

Prise Ed. Nay marke how Lewis flampe as he were netted. I hope, all's for the best.

Lew. Warwickie, what are thy Newes?

And yours, faire Queene.

Mar. Mine fuch, as fill my heart with vnhop'd loies.

War. Mine full of sorrow, and hearts discontent.

Lew. What? has your King married the Lady Grey?

And now to dooth your Forgerie, and his,
Sends me a Paper to perfwade me Patience?
Is this th'Alliance that he feekes with France?
Dare he preume to forne vs in this manner?

Mar. I told your Maiesty as much before:
This proueth Edwards Love, and Warwickes honesty.

War. King Lewis, I heere protest in fight of heaven,
And by the hope I haue of heavenly bliffe,
That I am cleere from this misleeed of Edwards;
No more my King, for he doth honor me,
But moft himselfe, if he could fee his shame.
Did I forget, that by the Houfe of Yorke
My Father came vn timely to his death?
Did I let paffe th'abufe done to my Neece?
Did I impale him with the Regall Crowne?
Did I put Henry from his Natime Right?
And am I guerdon'd at the laft, with Shame?
Shame on himselfe, for my Defert is Honor.
And to repair my Honor lof for him,
I heere renounce him, and returne to Henry.

My Noble Queene, let former grudges paffe,
And henceforth, I am thy true Seruitor: I will reuenge his wrong to Lady Bona,
And replant Henry in his former fate.

Mar. Warwickie,
These words haue turn'd my Hate, to Loue,
And I forgive, and quite forget old faults,
And joy that thou becom'st King Henrys Friend.

War. So much his Friend, I, his unfained Friend,
That if King Lewis wouchafe to furnish vs
With some few Bands of choen Soldiours,
Ile undertake to Land them on our Coaft,
And force the Tyrant from his feat by Warre.
'Tis not his new-made Bride shall succour him.

And as for Clarence, as my Letters tell me,
He's very likely now to fall from him,
For matching more for wanton Lust, then Honor,

Or then for strengh and safety of our Country.

Bona. Deere Brother, how shall Bona be reueng'd,
But by thy helpe to this diftreed Queene?

Mar. Renowned Prince, how shall Poore Henry lye,
Vnlesse thou rescue him from foule difpaire?

Bona. My quarrel, and this English Queene, are one.

War. And mine faire Lady Bona, joynes with yours.
Lew. And mine, with hers, and thine, and Margarets.

Therefore, at laft, I firmeely am resolu'd
You shall have ayde.

Mar. Let me giue humble thankes for all, at once,

Lew. Then Englands Messinger, returne in Poete,
And tell falf Edward, thy fupposed King,
That Lewis of France, is fending our Maskers
To reuell it with him, and his new Bride.

Thou feest what's paff, go feare thy King withall.

Bona. Tell him, in hope hee'll prove a widower shortly,
I weare the Willow Garland for his fake.

Mar. Tell him, my mourning weeds are layde aside,
And I am ready to put Armor on.

War. Tell him from me, that he hath done me wrong,
And therefore Ile vn-Crownie him, er't be long.
There's thy reward, be gone.

Exit Poete.

Lew. But Warwickie,
Thou and Oxford, with fucf thousand men
Shall croffe the Seas, and bid falf Edward battle:
And as occasion ferus, this Noble Queen
And Prince, shall follow with a freh Supply.
Yet ere thou go, but anfwer me one doubt:
What Pledge haue we of thy firme Loyalty?

War. This shall affure my conftant Loyalty,
That if our Queene, and this young Prince agree,
Ile joyne mine eldfe daughter, and my Ioy,
To him forthe, in holy Wedlocke bands.

Mar. Yes, I agree, and thanke you for your Motion.
Sonne Edward, he is Faire and Vertuous,
Therefore delay not, gie thy hand to Warwickie,
And with thy hand, thy faith irreconcilable,
That onely Warwickes daughter shall be thine.

Prise Ed. Yes, I accept her, for she well deferves it,
And heere to pledge my Vow, I giue my hand.

He giues his hand to Warw.

Lew. Why fay we now? Thefe foldiers falbe leued,
And thou Lord Bourbon, our High Admirall
Shall waft them ouer with our Royall Fleete.
I long till Edward fall by Warres mischance,
For mocking Marriage with a Dame of France.

Exeunt. Mamet Warwickie.

War. I came from Edward as Ambassadors,
But I returne his oforne and mortall Foe:
Matter of Marriage was the charge he gau me,
But dreadfulle Warre shall anfwer his demand.
Had he none elfe to make a fale but me?
Then none but I, fhall turne his left to Sorrow.
I was the Cheefe that rais'd him to the Crowne,
And Ile be Cheefe to bring him downe againe:
Not that I pity Henries misfery,
But feke Reuenge on Edwards mockery.

Exit.

Enter Richard, Clarence, Somerset, and Mountague.

Rich. Now tell me Brother Clarence, what thinke you
Of this new Marriage with the Lady Gray?
Hath not our Brother made a worthy choice?

Cla. Alas, you know, 'tis farre from hence to France,
The third Part of King Henry the Sixt. 163

How could he stay till Warwicke made returne?
Som. My Lords, forbear this talkke: heere comes the King.

Flourish.

Enter King Edward, Lady Grey, Penbrooke, Stafford, Hastings: four stand on one side, and four on the other.

Rich. And his well-chosen Bride.

Clarence. I minde to tell him plainly what I think.

King. Now Brother of Clarence,

How like you our Choice,
That you stand penfuse, as halfe malecontent?

Clarence. As well as Lewys of France,
Or the Earle of Warwicke,
Which are so weake of courage, and in judgement,
That they take no offence at our abuse.

King. Suppose they take offence without a cause:
They are but Lewys and Warwicke, I am Edward,
Your King and Warwicke, and must haue my will.

Rich. And shall haue your will, because our King:
Yet hafte Marriage feldome proueth well.

King. Yea, Brother Richard, are you offended too?

Rich. Not I: no:

God forbid, that I should with them feuer'd,
Whom God hath ioynt'd together;
I, and twere pittie, to funder them,
That yoke fo well together.

King. Setting your skornes, and your mislike aside,
Tell me some reafon, why the Lady Grey
Should not become my Wife, and Englands Queene?
And you too, Somerfet, and Mountague,
Speake freely what you thinke.

Clarence. Then this is mine opinion:
That King Lewys becomes your Enemye,
For mocking him about the Marriage
Of the Lady Bona.

Rich. And Warwicke, doing what you gaue in charge,
Is now dis-honored by this new Marriage.

King. What, if both Lewys and Warwicke be appeas'd,
By fuch invention as I can deuife?

Mount. Yet, to haue ioynt'd with France in fuch alliance,
Would more hafte strength'ned this our Commonwealth
'Gainst forraine forces, then any home-bred Marriage.

Halt. Why, knowes not Mountague, that of it felse,
England is safe, if true within it felse?

Mount. But the safer, when 'tis back'd with France.

Halt. 'Tis better vling France, then trufing France:
Let vs be back'd with God, and with the Seas,
Which he hath giu'n for fence impregnable,
And with their helpe, onely defend our felues:
In them, and in our felues, our faftite lyes.

Clar. For this one speech, Lord Hastings well deferves
To haue the Heire of the Lord Hungerford.

King. I, what of that? it was my will, and graunte,
And for this once, my Will shall stand for Law.

Rich. And yet me thinks, your Grace hath not done well,
To give the Heire and Daughter of Lord Scales
Vnto the Brother of your Louing Bride;
Shes better would haue fitted me,or Clarence:
But in your Bride you burie Brotherhood.

Clar. Or else you would not haue betow'd the Heire
Of the Lord Bonwill on your now Wives Sonne,
And leave your Brothers to goe speede elsewhere.

King. Alas, poore Clarence: is it for a Wife
That thou art malecontent? I will provide thee.

Clarence. In chusing for your sele,
You shewed your judgement:
Which being shallow, you shall give me leave
To play the Broker in mine owne behaife;
And to that end, I shortly minde to leave you.

King. Leave me, or tarry, Edward will be King,
And not be ty'd vnto his Brothers will.

Lady Grey. My Lords, before it pleas'd his Maiefte,
To rayle my State to Title of a Queene,
Doe me but right, and you must all confesse,
That I was not ignoble of Defcent,
And meaneer then my felfe haue had like fortune.
But as this Title honors me and mine,
So your dillikes, to whom I would be pleasing,
Doth cloud my loyes with danger, and with forrow.

King. My Loue, forbear to fawne vpon their frownes:
That danger, or what forrow can befall thee,
So long as Edward is thy confant friend,
And their true Soueraigne, whom they must obey?
Nay, whom they shall obey, and loue thee too,
Vnleffe they feele for hate at my hands:
Which if they doe, yet will I keepe thee safe,
And they shall feele the vengeance of my wrath.

Rich. I heare, yet fay not much, but thinke the more.

Enter a Poft.

King. Now Messenger, what Letters, or what Newes from France?

Poft. My Soueraigne Liege, no Letters, & few words,
But fuch, as I (without your speciall pardon)
Dare not relate.

King. Goe too, wee pardon thee:
Therefore, in briefe, tell me their words,
As neere as thou canst gueffe them.

What answer makes King Lewys vnto our Letters?

Poft. At my depart, thefe were his very words:
Goe tell fafe Edward, the suppoed King,
That Lewys of France is fending ouer Maskers,
To reull it with him, and his new Bride.

King. Is Lewys fo brave? be like he thinke I me Henry.
But what faid Lady Bona to my Marriage?

Poft. Thefe were her words, vttred with mild difdain:
Tell him, in hope hee're prove a Widower shortly,
Ile ware the Willow Garland for his fake.

King. I blame not her; she could fay little leffe:
She had the wrong. But what faid Henries Queene?
For I haue heard, that she was there in place.

Poft. Tell him (quoth he):
My mourning Weedes are tooe,
And I am ready to put Armour on.

King. Belike she minds to play the Amazone.
But what faid Warwicke to these injuries?

Poft. He, more incende against your Maiestie,
Then all the reft, difcharg'd me with thefe words:
Tell him from me, that he hath done me wrong,
And therefore Ile vncrowne him, er't be long.

King. Ha! durft the Traytor breath out fo proud words?
Well, I will arme me, being thus fore-warn'd:
They shall haue Warres, and pay for their preemption.
But fay, is Warwicke friends with Margaret?

Poft. J, gracious Soueraigne,
They are fo link'd in friendship,
That yong Prince Edward marries Warwicke Daughter.

Clarence. Belike, the elder;

Clarence will haue the younger.
Now Brother King farewell, and fit you fast,
For I will hence to Warwickes other Daughter,
That though I want a Kingdom, yet in Marriage
I may not prove inferior to your felle.
You that love me, and Warwick, follow me.
Exit Clarence, and Somerset follows.

Rich. Not I:
My thoughts aye in a further matter:
I stay not for the loue of Edward, but the Crowne.
King. Clarence and Somerset both gone to Warwick?
Yet am I arm'd against the worst can happen:
And hate is needful in this desperate case.
Pembroke and Stafford, you in our behalfs
Goe leue men, and make prepare for Warre;
They are already, or quickely will be landed:
My felle in person will straight follow you.
Exit Pembroke and Stafford.

But ere I goe, Hasting and Montague
Resolve my doubt: you twaine, of all the rest,
Are neere to Warwick, by bloud, and by alyance:
Tell me, if you loue Warwick more then me;
If it be fo, then both depart to him:
I rather with you fce, then hollow friends.
But if you minde to hold your true obedience,
Glue me aurance with some friendly Vow,
That I may neuer have you in fufept.

Mount. So God helpe Montague, as hee proues true.

Haft. And Hasting, as hee favours Edwards caufe.
King. Now, Brother Richard, will you stand by vs?
Rich. I, in defpite of all that shall withfand you.
King. Why fo: then am I sure of Victorie.
Now therefore let vs hence, and lose no howre,
Till wee meet Warwick, with his forreine powre.
Exit.

Enter Warwick and Oxford in England, with French Soldiers.

Warw. Trust me, my Lord, all hitherto goes well,
The common people by numbers swarne to vs.
Enter Clarence and Somerset.
But fee where Somerset and Clarence comes:
Speake suddenly, my Lords, are wee all friends?
Claro. Fear not that, my Lord,
Warw. Then gentle Clarence, welcome vs into Warwick,
And welcome Somerset: I hold it cowardize,
To refi misftruell, where a Noble Heart
Hath pawn'd an open Hand in figne of Loue;
Else might I thinke, that Clarence, Edward Brother,
Were but a fained friend to our proceedings:
But welcome sweet Clarence, my Daughter shall be thine.
And now, what refts? but in Nights Couverture,
Thy Brother being carelefeely encamp'd,
His Soldiours lurking in the Towne about,
And but attended by a fimple Guard,
Wee may purfue and take him at our pleafure,
Our Scouts have found the adventure very eafe:
That as Vpjas, and flout Diomede,
With Height and manhood fole to Raphus Tents,
And-brought from thence the Thracian faultall Streets;
So wee, well couer'd with the Nights black Mantle,
At vnawares may beat downe Edwards Guard,
And feize himfelle: I fay not, flaughter him,
For I intend but onely to purfue him.
You that will follow me to this attempt,

Applaud the Name of Henry, with your Leader.
They all cry, Henry.
Why then, let's on our way in silent fort,
For Warwick and his friends, God and Saint George.

Enter three Watchmen to guard the Kings Tent.

1. Watch. Come on my Masters, each man take his Stand,
The King by this, is set him downe to sleepe.
2. Watch. What, will he be not to Bed?
1. Watch. Why, no: for he hath made a Solemn Vow,
Never to lye and take his naturalle Rest,
Till Warwick, or himfelfe, be quite fuppreft.
2. Watch. To morrow then belike shall be the day,
If Warwick be fo neere as men report.
3. Watch. But fay, I pray, what Noble man is that,
That with the King here refeth in his Tent?
1. Watch. 'Tis the Lord Hasting, the Kings chiefest friend.
3. Watch. O, is it fo? but why commands the King,
That his chiefef followers lodge in Townes about him,
While he himfelfe keeps in the cold field?
2. Watch. 'Tis the more honour, because more dangerous.
3. Watch. I, but give me worship, and quietneffe,
I like it better then a dangerous honor.
If Warwick knew in what estate he stands,
'Tis to be doubted he would waken him.
1. Watch. Vnleffe our Halberdes did fhut vp his paffage.
2. Watch. I: wherefore elfe guard we his Royall Tent,
But to defend his Perfon from Night-foes?

Enter Warwick, Clarence, Oxford, Somerset, and French Soulidors, silent all.

Warw. This is his Tent, and fee where f tand his Guard:
Courage my Masters: Honor now, or neuer:
But follow me, and Edward shall be ours.
1. Watch. Who goes there?
2. Watch. Stay, or thou dyeft.
Warwick and the refi cry all, Warwick, Warwick,
and fet upon the Guard, who fte, crying, Armes, Armes,
Warwick and the refi following them.

The Drumme playing, and Trumpet sounding.
Enter Warwick, Somerset, and the refi, bringing the King out in his Cowne, fitting in a Chaire: Richard and Hasting, flyes over the Stage.

Som. What are they that flye there?
Warw. Richard and Hasting: let them goe, heere is the Duke.
K.Edw. The Duke?
Why Warwickes, when wee parted,
Thou call'd me King.
Warw. I, but the cafe is alter'd.
When you difgrac'd me in my Embaffadore,
Then I degraded you from being King,
And come now to create you Duke of Yorke.
Alas, how should you gouerne any Kingdom,
That know not how to vfe Embaffadors,
Nor how to be contented with one Wife,
Nor how to vfe your Brothers Brotherly,
Nor how to study for the Peoples Welfare,
Nor how to throwd your felle from Enemies?

K.Edw. Yea,

500
The third Part of King Henry the Sixth. 167

K. Edw. Yea, Brother of Clarence,
Art thou here too?
Nay then I see, that Edward needs must downe.
Yet Warwick, in despiet of all mischance,
Of thee thy selfe, and all thy Complizes,
Edward will always bare himselfe as King:
Though Fortunes mallice overthrow our State,
My minde exceeds the compass of her Wheele,
Warwicke. Then for his minde, be Edward Englands King,

Takes off his Crowne.

But Henry now shall ware the English Crowne,
And be true King indeede: thou but the shadow.
My Lord of Somerset, at my request,
See that forthwith Duke Edward be conuey'd
Wnto my Brother Arch-Bishop of Yorke:
When I haue fought with Pembrookes, and his fellows,
Ile follow you, and tell what anfwer
Lewis and the Lady Bona send to him.
Now for a while farewell good Duke of Yorke.
They lead him out forcibly.

K.Ed. What Fates impose, that men must needs abide;
It boots not to refit both winde and tide.
Exeunt.

Oxf. What now remains my Lords for vs to do,
But march to London with our Soldiers?
War. I, that's the first thing that we have to do,
To free King Henry from imprisonmert,
And free him seated in the Regall Throne. exit.

Enter Rivers, and Lady Gray.

Riu. Madam, what makes you in this fodain change?
Gray. Why Brother Rivers, are you yet to learne
What late misfortune is befalne King Edward?
Riu. What loffe of some pitchett battell
Against Warwick?
Gray. No, but the losse of his owne Royall person?
Riu. Then is my Soueraigne flaine?
Gray. I almoft flaine, for he is taken prifoner,
Either betrayed by fadthhood of his Guard,
Or by his Foe surpriz'd at vnawares:
And as I further haue to vnderfand,
Is new committ to the Bishop of Yorke,
Fell Warwickes Brother, and by that our Foe.
Riu. Thfis Newes I must confesse are full of greece,
Yet gracious Madam, beare it as you may,
Warwicke may looke, that now hath wonne the day.
Gray. Till then, faire hope mutt hinder lues decay:
And I the rather waine me from difpaine
For losse of Edwards Off-spring in my wombe:
This is it that makes me bridle passion,
And beare with Mildnesse my misfortunes croffe:
I, I, for this I draw in many a teare,
And stop the rifting of blood-fucking fighes,
Leaf with my fighes or teares, I blait or crowne
King Edwards Fruite, true heyre to th'Englith Crowne.
Riu. But Madam,
Where is Warwick then become?

Gray. I am inform'd that he comes towards London,
To fet the Crowne once more on Henries head,
Gueffe thou the reft, King Edwards Friends mutt downe.
But to prevent the Tyrants violence,
(For truft not him that hath once broken Faith)
Ile hence forthwith unto the Sanctuary,

To faue (at least) the heire of Edwards right:
There shall I rest secure from force and fraud:
Come therefore let vs flye, while we may flye,
If Warwick take vs, we are sure to dye.

Leaue off to wonder why I drew you hither,
Into this cheefeThicketh of the Parke.
Thus fland the cafe: you know our King, my Brother,
Is prifoner to the Bishop here, at whose hands
He hath good vflage, and great liberty,
And often but attended with weake guard,
Come hunting this way to disport himself.
I haue aduerti'd him by secrete meanes,
That if about this houre he make this way,
Vnder the colour of his vsual game,
He shall heere finde his Friends with Horfe and Men,
To fet him free from his Captuitle.

Enter King Edward, and a Huntsman with him.

Huntsman. This way my Lord,
For this way lies the Game.
King Edw. Nay this way man,
See where the Huntsmen fland.
Now Brother of Glofter, Lord Hastings, and the reft,
Stand you thus close to steale the Bifhops Deere?
Rich. Brother, the time and cafe, requireth haft,
Your horfe flands ready at the Parke-corner.
King Edw. But whether shall we then?
Hau. To Lyn my Lords,
And flipt from thence to Flanders.
Rich. Wel guet beleeue me, for that was my meaning
K. Edw. Stanley, I will require thy forwardneffe.
Rich. But wherefore stay we not time to talke.
K. Edw. Huntsman, what say'th thou?
Wilt thou go along?

Huntz. Better do fo, then tarry and be hang'd.
Rich. Come then away, let ha no more adoo.
K. Edw. Bifhop farwell,
Sheeld thee from Warwickes crowne,
And pray that I may re-polishe the Crowne.

Exeunt.

Flourib. Enter King Henry the fext, Clarence, Warwick, Somerfet, young Henry, Oxford, Montague, and Lieutenant.

K.Hen. M. Lieutenant, now that God and Friends
Hawe flaken Edward from the Regall seate,
And turn'd my captiue flate to libertie,
My feare to hope, my forrowes vnto loyes,
At our enlargement what are thydue Fees?
Lie. Subjects may challenge nothing of their Sou'rains
But, if an humble prayer may preuaile,
I then crave pardon of your Malefie.
K.Hen. For what, Lieutenant? For well vffing me?
Nay, be thou sure, Ile well require thy kindneffe.
For that it made my imprisionment, a pleazure:
I, such a pleazure, as incaged Birds
Conceive when after many moody Thoughts,
At laft, by Notes of Houfhold harmonic,
They quite forget their loft of Liberitie.
The third Part of King Henry the Sixt.

Enter a Poet.

Warm. What newses, my friend?
Poete. That Edward is escaped from your Brother,
And red (as shee heares since) to Burgundie.
Warm. Vnfaourie newses: but how made he escape?
Poete. He was conve"d by Richard, Duke of Glofter,
And the Lord Hafings, who attended him
In secret ambush, on the Forreft side,
And from the Bishops Huntmen refcu'd him:
For Hunting was his dayly Exercife.
Warm. My Brother was too careleffe of his charge.
But let vs hence, my Soueraigne, to prouide
A false for any fore, that may betide.

Exeunt.

Manet Somerfet, Richmond, and Oxford.

Som. My Lord, I like not of this flight of Edwards:
For doubleffe, Burgundie will yeeld him helpe,
And we shall have more Warsre before be long.
As Henrys late prefaging Prophemie
Did glad my heart, with hope of this young Richmond:
So doth my heart mi-glue me, in these Conflicts,
What may befall him, to his harme and ours.
Therefore, Lord Oxford, to prevent the worst,
Fortwith with wele fend him hence to Britannie,
Till he become part of Chillum Emittere.

Oxf. 1: for if Edward re-pooffer the Crowne,
'Tis like that Richmond, with the rest, shall downe.

Som. It shall be so: he shall to Britannie,
Come therefore, let's about it speedily.

Exeunt.

Edw. Now Brother Richard, Lord Hafings, and the rest,
Yet thus farre Fortune maketh vs amends,
And fayes, that once more I shall enterechange
My wained state, for Henrys Regall Crowne.
Hauwe wee paft, and now re-paft the Seas,
And brought desired helpe from Burgundie.
What then remains, we being thus arrui'd
From Rauenfpurre Hauen, before the Gates of Yorke,
But that we enter, as into our Dukedome?

Rich. The Gates made fast?
Brother, I like not this.
For many-men that tumble at the Threshold,
Are well fore-told, that danger lurkes within.

Edw. Tufh man, abodements must not now affright vs:
By faire or foule meanes we must enter in,
For hither will our friends repaire to vs.

Haff. My Lige, Ie knocke once more, to summon them.

Enter on the Walls, the Maior of Yorke,
And his Brethren.

Maior. My Lords,
We were fore-warned of your comming,
And shut the Gates, for safetie of our felues;
For now we owe allegiance vnto Henry.
Edw. But, Mafter Maior, if Henry be your King,
Yet Edward, at the leaft, is Duke of Yorke.
Maior. True, my good Lord, I know you for no leffe.

Edw. Why, and I challenge nothing but my Dukedome,
As being well content with that alone.

Rich. But
The third Part of King Henry the Sixt.

Rich. But when the Fox hath once got in his Nofe, Hee le foonee meanes to make the Body follow.

Hairf. Why, Matter Maior, why stand you in a doubt? Open the Gates, we are King Henrys friends.

Maior. I lay you fo? the Gates shall then be opened. He defends.

Hairf. The good old man would faine that all were wel, So were not long of him; but being entred, I doubt not I, but we shall foone periwade Both him, and all his Brothers, vnto reason.

Enter the Maior, and two Aldermen.

Edw. So, Matter Maior; these Gates muft not be shut, But in the Night, or in the time of Warre. What, feare not man, but yeeld me vp the Keyes, Takes bis Keyes.

For Edward will defend the Towne, and thee, And all those friends, that deifie to follow mee.

March. Enter Mountgomerie, with Drummes and Souldiers.

Rich. Brother, this is Sir John Mountgomerie, Our trouffle friend, unleffe I be deceu'd.

Edw. Welcome Sir John: but why come you in Armes?

Mount. To helpe King Edward in his time of storme, As every loyall Subiect ought to doe.

Edw. Thanks good Mountgomerie: But we now forget our Title to the Crowne, And onely clayne our Dukedome, Till God pleafe to fend the ref. Mount. Then fare you well, for I will hence againe, I came to ferve a King, and not a Duke: Drummer strike vp, and let vs march away.

The Drumme begins to march.

Edw. Nay fay, Sir John, a while, and we'll debate By what fafe meanes the Crowne may be recover'd.

Mount. What talk ye of debating? in few words, If you're not here proclaim your felfe our King, Ie leave you to your fortune, and be gone, To keepe them back, that come to fuccour you. Why fhall we fight, if you pretend no Title?

Rich. Why Brother, wherefore fland you on nice points?

Edw. When wee grow stronger, Then we'll make our Clayme: Till then, 'tis wifdom to conceale our meaning.

Hairf. Away with scrupulouf Wit, now Armes muft rule.

Rich. And feareleffe minds claime foonest vnto Crowns. Brother, we will proclaim you out of hand, The bruit thereof will bring you many friends.

Edw. Then be it as you will: for 'tis my right, And Henry but vifpures the Diadem.

Mount. I, now my Soueraigne feaketh like himfelfe, And now will I be Edwards Champion.

Hairf. Sound Trumpet, Edward that be here proclaimed: Come, fellow Souldior, make thou proclamation.

Flourifh. Sound.

Soul. Edward the Fourth, by the Grace of God, King of England and France, and Lord of Ireland, &c.

Mount. And whomfoe're gainfayes King Edwards right, By this I challenge him to fingle fight.

Thrones downe bis Gauntlet.

All. Long live Edward the Fourth.

Edw. Thanks brave Mountgomerie, And thanks vnto you all:

If fortune fcrue me, Ie requite this kindneffe, Now for this Night, let's harbor here in Yorke: And when the Morning Sunne fhall rayfe his Carre Aboue the Border of this Horizon, Wee'll forward towards Warwick, and his Matfe; For well I wot, that Henry is no Souldier. Ah froward Clarence, how euiit it befeemes thee, To flatter Henry, and forfake thy Brother? Yet as wee may, wee'll meet both thee and Warwick. Come on brave Souldiars: doubt not of the Day, And that once gotten, doubt not of large Pay. Exeunt.

Flourifh. Enter the King, Warwick, Mountague, Clarence, Oxford, and Somerfe.

War. What counfaile, Lords? Edward from Belgie, With haffle Germanes, and blunt Hollanderis, Hath paft'd in faftede through the Narrow Seas, And with his troups doth march amaine to London, And many giddie people flock to him.

King. Let's leue men, and beat him backe againe.

Clar. A little fire is quickly trodden out, Which being fuffere'd, Rivers cannot quench.

War. In Warwickshire I have true-hearted friends, Not mutinous in peace, yet bold in Warre, Thofe will I mufter vp: and thou Sonne Clarence Shalt thire vp in Suffolk, Norfolke, and in Kent, The Knights and Gentlemen, to come with thee. Thou Brother Mountague, in Buckingham, Northampton, and in Leicestershire, shalt find Men well enclin'd to hear what thou command'st. And thou, brave Oxford, wondrous well belou'd, In Oxforfshe fhalt mufter vp thy friends. My Soueraigne, with the louing Citizens, Like to his Iland, gyrt in with the Ocean, Or moftef Dyne, circlled with her Nymphs, Shall reft in London, till we come to him: Faire Lords take leaue, and f tand not to reply.

Farewell my Soueraigne.

King. Farewell my Heitor, and my Troyes true hope.

Clar. Inigne of truth, I kiffe your Highneffe Hand.

King. Well-minded Clarence, be thou fortunate.

King. Sweet Oxford, and my louing Mountague, And all at once, once more a happy farewell.

War. Farewell, sweet Lords, let's meet at Countery.

Exeunt.

King. Here at the Pallace will I reft a while. Cousin of Exeter, what thinkes your Lordshipp? Me thinkes, the Power that Edward hath in field, Should not be able to encounter mine. Exeunt. The doubt is, that he will fuccede the ref. King. That's not my fear, my deed hath got me fame: I have not flott mine ears to their demands, Nor pofted off their fuites with flow delays, My pittie hath beene balme to heal their wounds, My mildneffe hath allay'd their swelling griefes, My mercie dry'd their water-flowing teares. I have not beene defirous of their wealth, Nor much oppref them with great Subfidades, Nor forward of reuenge, though they much err'd. Then why should they loue Edward more then me? No Exeter, thefe Graces challenge Grace:

q a

And
And when the Lyon fawnes vp on the Lambe,
The Lambe will never caele to follow him.
And once againe proclaime vs King of England.
You are the Fount, that makes small Brookes to flow,
Now fops thy Synge, my Sea shall fuch them dry,
And fwell fo much the higher, by their ebe,
Hence with him to the Tower, let him not speake.
Exit with King Henry.

Edw. Seize on the flamefaced Henry, bare him hence,
And once againe proclaime vs King of England.
You are the Fount, that makes small Brookes to flow,
Now fops thy Synge, my Sea shall fuch them dry,
And fwell fo much the higher, by their ebe,
Hence with him to the Tower, let him not speake.
Exit with King Henry.

And Lords, towards Couentry bend we our course,
Where remembrance Warwicke now remains:
The Sunne shines hot, and if we vfe delay,
Cold biting Winter marres our hop’d for Hay.
Rich. Away betimes, before his forces ioyne,
And take the great-grown Traytor vnawares:
Braue Warriors, march amaine towards Couentry.
Exeunt.

Enter Warwicke, the Major of Couentry, two Messengers, and others upon the Walls.

War. Where is the Pot that came from valiant Oxford?
How farre hence is thy Lord, mine honest fellow?
Mess. By this at Dunmore, marching hitherward.
War. How farre off is our Brother Mountague?
Where is the Pot that came from Mountague?

Mess. By this at Daintry, with a puifant troope.
Enter Somersaile.

War. Say Somersaile, what eyes my louing Sonne?
And by thy gaffe, how nigh is Clarence now?
Somers. At Southam I did leave him with his forces,
And doe expect him here fome two howres hence.
War. Then Clarence is at hand, I here his Drumme.
Somers. It is not his, my Lord, here Southam lyes:
The Drum your Honor heares, marcheth from Warwicke.
War. Who should that be? belike vnlook’d for friends.
Somers. They are at hand, and you shall quickly know.

March. Flourish, Enter Edward, Richbard, and Souldiers.

Edw. Go Trumpet, to the Walls, and found a Parle.
Rich. See how the furly Warwicke mars the Wall.
War. Oh vnblid fpight, is sportfull Edward come?
Where s秣t our Scouts, or how are they fedu’d,
That we could heare no newes of his repaire.
Edw. Now Warwicke, wilt thou oue the Citie Gates,
Speake gentle words, and humbly bend thy Knee,
Call Edward King, and at his hands begge Mercy,
And he shall pardon thee thofe Outrages?
War. Nay rather, wilt thou draw thy forces hence,
Confelle who fet thee vp, and pluckt thee downe,
Call Warwicke Patron, and be penitent,
And thou shalt fill remaine the Duke of Yorke.
Rich. I thought at leaft he would have faid the King,
Or did he make the Ieaf against his will?
War. Is not a Dukedom, Sir, a goodly gift?
Rich. I, by my faith, for a poore Earle to gie,
Ie doe thee fervice for fo good a gift.
War. Twas I that gau the Kingdome to thy Brother.

Edw. Why then ’tis mine, if but by Warwicke gift.
Against his Brother, and his lawfull King:
Perhaps thou wilt obiect my holy Oath:
To keepe that Oath, were more impiete,
Then Ithobol, when he forficid his Daughter.
I am so sorry for my Trefpas made,
That to defuer well at my Brothers hands,
I here proclayme my selfe thy mortall foe:
With resolution, wherefoere I mee thee,
(As I will mee thee, if thou firre abroad.)
To plague thee, for thy foule mis-leading me.
And so, proud-hearted Warwick, I defie thee,
And to my Brother turne my blushing Cheeks.
Pardon me Edward, I will make amends:
And Richard, doe not frowne vpon my faults,
For I will henceforth be no more vnconstant.

Edw, Now welcome more, and ten times more belou'd,
Then if thou neuer hadst defero'd our hate.

Rich. Welcome good Clarence, this is Brother-like.
Warr. Oh paffing Traytor, periu'd and vniuent.
Edw. What Warwick,
Wilt thou leave the Towne, and fight?
Or shall we beat the Stones about thine Eares?

War. Alas, I am not coop'd here for defence:
I will away towards Barnet prefently.
And bid thee Batallia, Edward, if thou darst.

Edw. Yes Warwick, Edward dares, and leads the way:
Lords to the field; Saint George, and Victorie.

Exeunt.
March. Warwick and his companie follows.

Aalarum, and Excursions. Enter Edward bringing forth Warwick wounded.

Edw. So, lye thou there: dye thou, and dye our feare,
For Warwick was a Bugge that fear'd vs all.
Now Mountague fit faft, I fekke for thee,
That Warwick Bones may keepe thine companie.

Warr. Ah, who is nigh? come to me, friend, or foe,
And tell me who is Victor, Torke, or Warwick?
Why ask I that? my mangled body shewes,
My blood, my want of strength, my fice heart shewes,
That I must yeeld my body to the Earth,
And by my fall, the conquest to my foe.
Thus yeelds the Cedar to the Axes edge,
Whofe Armes gauve shelter to the Princely Eagle,
Vnder whose shade the ramping Lyon slept,
Whofe top-branch ouer-pee'd Iows spreading Tree,
And kept low Shrubs from Winters pow'full Winde.
These Eyes, that now are dim'd with Deaths black Veyle,
Have beene as piercing as the Mid-daie Sunne,
To search the secret Trefaouns of the World:
The Wrinkles in my Browes, now fill'd with blood,
Were lik'ned oft to Kingly Sepulchers:
For who liu'd King, but I could digge his Graue?
And who durft smilie, when Warwick bent his Brow?
Loe, now my Glory smeard in dust and blood.
My Parke, my Walkes, my Mannors that I had,
Even now forlacke me; and of all my Lands,
Is nothing left me, but my bodies length.
Why, what is Pompe, Rule, Reigne, but Earth and Dust?
And liue we how we can, yet dye we must.

Enter Oxford and Somerfet.

Som. Ah Warwick, Warwick, wert thou as we are,
We might recouer all our Loffe againe:

The Queene from France hath brought a puiffant power.
Euen now we heard the newes: ah, could'nt thou flye.

Warm. Why then I would not flye. Ah Mountague,
If thou be there, sweet Brother, take my Hand,
And with thy Lippes keepe in my Soule a while.
Thou lou't me not: for, Brother, if thou didst,
Thy tears would waqsh this cold congealed blood,
That glewes my Lippes, and will not let me speake.
Come quickly Mountague, or I am dead.

Som. Ah Warwick, Mountague hath breath'd his laft,
And to the lattef galpe, cry'd out for Warwicke:
And faid, Commend me to my valiant Brother.
And more he would haue faid, and more he spoke,
Which founded like a Cannon in a Vault.
That mought not be diftinguifht: but at laft,
I well might heare, delivered with a groane,
Oh farewell Warwick.

Warm. Sweet reft his Soule:
Fyle Lords, and faue your felues,
For Warwicke bids you all farewell, to meet in Heauen.

Oxf. Away, away, to meet the Queenes great power.
Here they heare away his Body.

Exeunt.
Flourifh. Enter King Edward in triumph, with Richard, Clarence, and the rest.

King. Thus farre our fortune keeps an upward courfe,
And we are grac'd with wreaths of Victorie:
But in the midft of this bright-flining Day,
I fy a black fuphicious threatening Cloud,
That will encounter with our glorious Sunne,
Ere he attaine his eafefull Wefterne Bed:
I meane, my Lords, those powers that the Queene
Hath rays'd in Gallia, have arriued our Coaft,
And, as we heare, march on to fight with vs.

Clar. A little gale will foon difperfe that Cloud,
And blow it to the Source from whence it came,
Thy very Beames will dry thofe Vapours vp,
For euer Cloud engenders not a Storme.

Rich. The Queene is valued thirtie thoufand Strong,
And Somerfet, with Oxford, fled to her:
If the haue time to breathe, be well affur'd
Her fafion will be full as strong as ours.

King. We are aduerتis'd by our loving friends,
That they doe holde their course towards Tewksbury.
We hauing now the beet at Barnet field,
Will ftillier ftraight, for willingneffe rides way,
And as we march, our ftrength will be augmented:
In euer Countie as we goe along,
Strike vp the Drumme, cry courage, and away.

Exeunt.

Flourifh. March. Enter the Queene, young Edward, Somerfet, Oxford, and Soldierts.

Qu. Great Lords, wife men ne'r fit and waile their loffe,
But chearfully feeke how to redrefs their harms.
What though the Maift be now blowne ouer-board,
The Cable broke, the holding-Anchor loft,
And halfe our Sailers swallow'd in the flood?
Yet liues our Pilot fill. Let see, that he Should leaue the Helm, and like a fearefull Lad,
With tearfull Eyes addde Water to the Sea,
And giue more strength to that which hath too much,
While in his moane, the Ship flits on the Rock,
Which Induftrie and Courage might haue fau'd?
Ah what a shame, ah what a fault were this.
Say Warwick was our Anchor: what of that?

And
And Mountague our Top-Mast: what of him? Our saught'red friends, the Tackles: what of these? Why is not Oxford here, another Anchor? And Somerset, another goodly Mast? The friends of France our Shrouds and Tacklings? And though vnskillful, why not Ned and I, For once allow'd the skilfull Pilots Charge? We will not from the Helme, to fit and weep, But keepe our Courie (though the rough Winde fay no) From Sheles and Rocks, that threaten vs with Wrack. As good to chide the Waues, as speake them faire. And what is Edward, but a ruthless Sea? What Clarence, but a Quick-fand of Deceit? And Richard, but a raged fatal Rock? All these', the Enemies to our poor Barke. Say you can fwm, alas 'tis but a while: Tread on the Sand, why there you quickly finke, Beftride the Rock, the Tyde will wash you off, Or else you famish, that's a three-fold Death. This speake I (Lords) to let you understand, If cafe some one of you would flye from us, That there's no hop'd-for Mercy with the Brothers, More then with ruthless Waues, with Sands and Rocks. Why courage then, what cannot be avoided, 'Twere childifh weakeffe to lament, or feare. Prince. Me thinkes a Woman of this valiant Spirit, Should, if a Coward heard her speake these words, Infule his Breast with Magnanimitie, And make him, naked, foyle a man at Armes. I speake not this, as doubting any here: For did I but fuppofe a fearefull man, He should haue leauce to goe away betimes, Leaff in our need he might infect another, And make him of like Spirit to himselfe. And make him of like Spirit to himselfe. If any fuch be here, as God forbid, Let him depart, before we neede his helpe. Oxf. Women and Children of fo high a courage, And Warriors faint, why 'twere perpetuall shame. Oh braue young Prince: thy famous Grandfather Doth line againe in thee; long may'th thou live, To bear his Image, and renew his Glories. Som. And he that will not fight for fuch a hope, Go home to Bed, and like the Owle by day, If he arife, be mock'd and wondred at. Q4. Thanks gentle Somerset, sweet Oxford thanks. Prince. And take his thanks, that yet hath nothing else. Enter a Messenger. Miff. Prepare you Lords, for Edward is at hand, Readie to fight: therefore be refolute. Oxf. I thought no leffe: it is his Policie, To haffe thus faft, to finde vs vnprovid'd. Som. But hee's deceall'd, we are in readinesse. Q4. This chares my heart, to fee your forwardnesse. Oxf.Here pitch our Battale, hence we will not budge.

Flourish, and march. Enter Edward, Richard, Clarence, and Souldiers.

Edward. Brave followers, yonder flands the thornie Wood, Which by the Heauens affifiance, and your strength, Muft by the Roots be hewn vp yet ere Night. I need not add more fuel to your fire, For well I wot, ye blaze, to burne them out: Gieue signall to the fight, and to it Lords.
The third Part of King Henry the Sixt.

Rich. Why should thee live, to fill the World with words.

Rich. Clarence excuse me to the King my Brother:
Ile hence to London on a serious matter,
Ere ye come there, be fare to hear some newes.

Cla. What? what?

Rich. Tower, the Tower. Exit.

Qu. Oh Ned,sweet Ned,spake to thy Mother Boy.

Can't thou not spake? O Traitsors, Murtherers!
They that flabb'd Cæsar, shed no blood at all:
Did not offend, nor were not worthy Blame,
If this foule deed were by, to equal it.
He was a Man; this (in respect) a Child,
And Men, ne're spend their fury on a Child.
What's worse then Murtherer, that I may name it?

No, no, my heart will burff, and if I spake,
And I will spake, that fo my heart may burft.

Butchers and Villaines, bloody Caniballes,
How sweet a Plant have you vntimely crop:
You have no children (Butchens) if you had,
The thought of them would have flarr'd vp remorse,
But if you euer chance to have a Childe,
Looke in his youth to have him fo cut off.

As deathfinen you have rid this sweet yong Prince.

King. Away with her, go beare her hence perfcor.

Qu. May, neuer beare me hence, dispatch me heere; Here sheath thy Sword, Ile pardon thee my death:
What wilt thou not? Then Clarence do it thou.

Cla. By heauen, I will not do thee so much eafe.

Qu. Good Clarence do: sweet Clarence do thou do it.

Cla. Did'th thou not hear me sweare I would not do it?

Qu. I, but thou vleft to forswear thy selfe.

"Twas Sin before, but now 'tis Charity.

What wilt y'not? Where is that diuels butcher Richard?

Hard fouar'd Richard? Richard, where art thou?
Thou art not heere; Murtherer is thy Almeed-deed:

Petitioners for Blood, thou ne're put'th backe.

Ed. Away I say, I charge ye beare her hence,

Qu. So come to you, and yours, as to this Prince.

Exit Quene.

Ed. Where's Richard gone.

Cla. To London all in poft, and as I guesse,
To make a bloody Supper in the Tower.

Ed. He's fodieane if a thing comes in his head.

Now march we hence, dicharge the common fort
With Pay and Thankes, and let's away to London,
And see our gentle Quenee how well she fares,

By this (I hope) the hath a Sonne for me.

Enter Henry the fift, and Richard, with the Lieutenant on the Walles.

Rich. Good day, my Lord, what at your Bookke so hard?

Hen. I my good Lord : my Lord I shoulde say rather,
'Tis finne to flatter, Good was little better:
'Good Groffer, and good Deuill, were alike,
And both preperator: therefore, not Good Lord.

Rich. Sirra, leave vs to our felues, we must conferre.

Hen. So flies the wreakelefe shepheard from the Wolfe:
So first the harmleffe Sheepe doth yield his Fleece,
And next his Throaste, worship the Bithers Knife.

What Scene of death bath Refinat now to Acte?

Rich. Sufpition always haunts the guilty minde,

The Theefe doth feare each buft an Officer,

Hen. The Bird that hath bin lin'd in a buft,
With trembling wings mildoubteth every buft;
And the happefe Male to one sweet Bird,
Have now the fatal ObieQ in my eye,
Where my poore yong was lim'd, was caught, and kill'd.

Rich. Why what a penuish Foose was that of Creet,
That taught his Sonne the office of a Fowle,
And yet for all his wings, the Foose was drown'd.

Hen. I Dedalus, my poore Boy Icarus,

Thy Father Minos, that den'de our courfe,
The Sunne that fear'd the wings of my sweet Boy.

Thy Brother Edward, and thy Selfe, the Sea
Whole enious Guife did swallow vp his life:

Ah, kill me with thy Weapon, not with words,
My brest can better brooke thy Daggers point,
Then can my eares that Tragicke Histroy.

But wherefore doft thou come? Is't for my Life?

Rich. Think'th thou I am fone thau art,
If murtherring Innocents be Executing,

Then why thou art an Executioner.

Rich. Thy Son I kill'd for his preumpion.

Hen. Hadfit thou bin kill'd, when first y' didst presume,
Thou had'ft not liud' to kill a Sonne of mine:

And thus I propelfe, that many a thouland,
Which now milnruit no parcell of my spare,

And many an old mans fighe, and many a Widdowes,
And many an Orphans water-floding-eye,

Men for their Sonnes, Wives for their Husbands,
Orphans, for their Parents timeles death,

Shall rue the hour that euer thou was't borne.

The Owle shriek'd at thy birth, an euill figne,
The Night-Crow cry'de, aboding luckleffe time,

Dogs howl'd, and hideous Tempeft thooke down Trees:

The Rauen rooke'd her on the Chinnies top,

And chatte'ring Pies in diftmall Difcorde fong:

Thy Mother felt more then a Mothers paine,
And yet brought forth leffe then a Mothers hope,

To wit, an indigred and deformed Lume,
Not like the fruit of fuch a Goodly Tree.

Teeth had'th thou in thy head, when thou was't borne,

To signifie, thou cam'ft to bite the world:

And if the reft be true, which I have heard,

Thou cam'ft—

Rich. Ile hearre no more:

Dye Prophet in thy speech, Stabbes bim.

For this (among'th the reft) was I ordain'd.

Hen. I, and for much more fraught after this,
O God forgive my finnes, thy pardon thee.

Dye. Rich. What will the aspiring blood of Lancaster
Sink in the ground? I thought it would have mounted.

See how my fword weepes for the poore Kings death.
O may fuch purple teares be alway thred

From thofe that with the downfall of our house.
If any spark of Life be yet remaining,

Downe, downe to hell, and fay I fent thee thither.

Stab bis againe.

I that have neyther pitty, loue, nor feare,
Indeed 'tis true that Henrie told me of:
For I have often heard my Mother fay,
I came into the world with my Lefges forward.

Had I not reafon (think ye) to make haft,
And feek their Ruine, that vfurp'd our Right?

The Midwife wonder'd, and the Women cri'd

O Iefus bleffe vs, he is borne with teeth,

And
The third Part of King Henry the Sixt

FINIS.
The Tragedy of Richard the Third:
with the Landing of Earle Richmond, and the Battell at Bosworth Field.

Actus Primus.  Scæna Prima.

Enter Richard Duke of Glofsier, Solus.

Ow is the Winter of our Discontent,
Made glorious Summer by this Son of Yorke:
And all the clouds that low'r'd upon our house
In the deep bosome of the Oceane buried.
Now are our browses bound with Vifitorious Wreathes,
Our bruised armes hung vp for Monuments;
Our Æternæ Alarms chang'd to merry Meetings;
Our dreadful Marches, to delightful Measures.
Grim-vig'd Warre, hath smooth'd his wrinkled Front:
And now, in stead of mounting Barbed Steeds,
To fright the Souls of fearfull Adversaries,
He capers nimbly in a Ladies Chamber,
To the lascivious pleasing of a Lute.
But I, that am not shap'd for sportive tricks,
Nor made to court an amorous Looking-glasse:
I, that am Rudely flampt, and want lousie Malefty,
To frut before a wonton ambling Nymph:
I, that am curtail'd of this faire Proportion,
Chested of Feature by diffembling Nature,
Deform'd, vn-finith'd, fent before my time
Into this breathing World, scarfe halfe made vp,
And that loamely and vnfashionable,
That dogges barke at me, as I halt by them.
Why I (in this weake piping time of Peace)
Haue no delight to passe away the time,
Vnleffe to see my Shadow in the Sunne,
And deffant on mine owne Deformity.
And therefore, since I cannot prove a Louer,
To entertaine thefe faire well spoken days,
I am determined to prove a Villaine,
And hate the idle pleasures of thefe days.
Plots haue I laide, Inductions dangerous,
By drunken Prophecies, Libels,and Dreames,
To fet my Brother Clarence and the King
In deadly hate, the one against the other:
And if King Edward be as true and luit,
As I am Subtle, Fale,and Treacherous,
This day should Clarence closly be mew'd vp:
About a Prophecie, which fayes that G,
Of Edwards heyres the vndertherer shall be,
Diue thoughts downe to my foule, here Clarence comes.

Enter Clarence, and Brazenbury, Guarded.
Brother, good day: What means this armed guard

That waite vpon your Grace?
Cl. His Maiesty tendering my persons safety,
Hath appointed this Conduct, to conuay me to the Tower.
Rich. Vpon what caufe?
Cl. Because my name is George.
RICH. Alacke my Lord, that fault is none of yours:
He should for that commit your Godfather.
O belike, his Maiesty hath fome intent,
That you should be new Chrifned in the Tower,
But what's the matter Clarence, may I know?
Cl. Yea Richard, when I know: but I protest
As yet I do not: But as I can learne,
He hearkeens after Prophecies and Dreames,
And from the Crotie-row plac'd the letter G:
And fayes, a Wizard told him, that by G,
His illuc dishonestd should be.
And for my name of George begins with G,
It followes in his thought, that I am he.
These (as I learne) and fuch like toyes as thefe,
Hath mow'd his Highneffe to commit me now.
RICH. Why this it is, when men are rul'd by Women:
'Tis not the King that fends you to the Tower,
My Lady Grey his Wife, Clarence's thefe.
That tempts him to this harf Extremity.
Was it not thefe, and that good man of Worship,
Anthony Woodulle her Brother there,
That made him fend Lord Haffings to the Tower?
From whence this prefent day he is deliuere?
We are not safe Clarence, we are not safe.
Cl. By heauen, I thinke there is no man secure
But the Queens Kindred, and night-walking Heralfes,
That trudge betwixt the King, and Miiftris Short.
Heard you not what an humble Suppliant
Lord Haffings was, for her deliuery?
RICH. Humbly complaining to her Deitie,
Got my Lord Chamberlaine his libertie.
He tell you what, I thinke it is our way,
If we will keepe in favour with the King,
To be her men, and wear her Livery,
The jealous ore-worne Widdow, and her selfe,
Since that our Brother dub'd them Gentlewomen,
Are mighty Gofips in our Monarchy.
BRA. I beseech your Grace both to pardon me,
His Maiesty hath straightly given in charge,
That no man shall have private Conference
(Of what degree fouer) with your Brother.

Rich.
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Rich. Even so, and please your Worship Brakenbury, You may partake of any thing we say; We speak no treason, man; We say the King Is wise and vertuous, and his Noble Queene Well strooke in yeares, faire, and not jealous. We say, that Shores Wife hath a pretty Foot, A cherry Lip, a bonny Eye, a passing pleasing tongue: And that the Queens Kindred are made gentle Folkes. How say you sir? can you deny all this? "Bra. With this (my Lord) my felle haued not to doo.

Rich. Naught to do with Mirths Shore? I tell thee Fellow, he that doth naught with her (Excepting one) were best to do it secretly alone. "Bra. What one, my Lord? Rich. Her Husband Knave, would'th thou betray me? "Bra. I do beseech your Grace To pardon me, and withhall forbear Your Conference with the Noble Duke. Cla. We know thy charge Brakenbury, and will obey. Rich. We are the Queens ableds, and must obey. Brother farewell, I will vnto the King, And whatfoe're you will impresse me in, Were it to call King Edward's Widow, Sifter, I will performe it to infranchize you. Meane time, this depe dilgrace in Brotherhood, Touches me deeper then you can imagine. Cla. I know it plentiful neither of vs well. Rich. Well, your imprisonment shall not be long, I will deliever you, or else lyfe for you: Meane time, haue patience. Cla. I must perforese: Farewell. Exit Clar. Rich Go tredace the path that thou shalt ne're return: Simple plaine Clarence, I do love thee so, That I will shortly send thy Soule to Heauen, If Heauen will take the present at our hands. But who comes here? the new deliered Haftings?

Enter Lord Haftings. Rich. Good time of day vnto my gracious Lord. Rich. As much vnto my good Lord Chamberlaine: Well are you welcome to this open Ayre, How hath your Lordship brooke'd imprisonment? Haft. With patience (Noble Lord) as prisoners must: But I shall lyse (my Lord) to glue them thankes That were the caule of my imprisonment. Rich. No doubt, no doubt, and so shall Clarence too, For they that were your Enemies, are his, And haue peuell'd as much on him, as you, Haft. More pitty, that the Eagles should be mew'd, Whiles Kites and Buzzards play at liberty. Rich. What newes abroad? Haft. No newes so bad abroad, as this at home: The King is sickly, weak, and melancholly, And his Physicians feare him mightily. Rich. Now by S. John, that Newes is bad indeed. O he hath kept an euil Diet long, And ouer-much confound's his Royall Perfon: 'Tis very greoues to be thought vpon. Where is he, in his bed? Haft. He is. Rich. Go you before, and I will follow you. Exit Haftings. He cannot lyue I hope, and must not dye, Till George be pack'd with post-horfe vp to Heauen. Ile in to vrgge his hatred more to Clarence, With Lyes well steepd with weighty Arguments, And if I faille not in my deepse intent, Clarence hath not another day to liue: Which done, God take King Edward to his mercy, And leau the world for me to busie in, For then, Ile marry Warwickes yongest daughter. What though I kill'd her Husband, and her Father, The readie sloe to make the Wench amends, Is to become her Husband, and her Father: The which will I, not all so much for loue, As for another secret close intent, By marrying her, which I must reach vnto. But yet I run before my horse to Market: Clarence still breathes, Edward still liues and raignes, When they are gone, then muft I count my gains. Exit

Scéna Secunda.

Enter the Coarfe of Henrie the first with Halkehrs to guard it, Lady Anne being the Mourner.

Anne. Set downe, set downe your honourable load, If Honor may be showered in a Herse; Whil'st I a while obsequiouly lament Th'vuntimely fall of Vertuous Lancaster. Poore key-cold Figure of a holy King, Pale Ashes of the Houfe of Lancaster; Thou bloodlesse Remnant of that Royall Blood, Be it lawfull that I implore thy Ghost, To hear the Lamentations of poore Anne, Wife to thy Edward, to thy slachtred Sonne, Stab'd by the selfe-same hand that made these wounds. Loe, in these windowes that let forth thy life, I powre the helpless Balm of my poore eyes, O curfed be the hand that made these holes: Curfed the Heart, that had the heart to do it: Curfcd the Blood, that let this blood from hence: More direfull hap betide that hated Wretch That makes vs wretched by the death of thee, Then I can with to Wolues, to Spiders, Toades, Or any creepinge venom'd thing that liues. If euer he haue Childe, Abortiue be it, Prodigious, and vntimely brought to light, Whose vgly and vonnaturall Aspect May fright the hopefull Mother at the view, And that be Heyre to his vnhappinesse. If euer he haue Wife, let her be made More miserable by the death of him, Then I am made by my young Lord, and the. Come now towards Cberfey with your holy Lode, Taken from Paules, to be interred there. And still as you are weary of this waight, Rest you, whiles I lament King Henries Coarfe.

Enter Richard Duke of Glafter.

The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Gen. My Lord stand backe, and let the Coffin passe.
Rich. Vnmanner'd Dogge,
Stand't thou when I command:
Advanc' thy Halbert higher then thy brest,
Or by S. Paul Ile strike thee to my Foute,
And fprene vpone thee Beggar for thy boldnesse.
Anne. What do you tremble? are you all affraid?
Alas, I blame you not, for you are Mortall,
And Mortall eyes cannot endure the Diuell.
Auant thou dreadfull minister of Hell?
Thou had'ft but power ouer his Mortall body,
His Soule thou canst not hau'ne. Therefore be gone.
Rich. Sweet Saint, for Charity, be not fo curt.
An. Foul Diuell,
For Gods fake hence, and trouble vs not,
For thou hast made the happy earth thy Hell:
Fill'd it with cursing cries, and deepe exclamations:
If thou delight to view thy heynous deeds,
Behold this pattern of thy Butcheries.
Oh Gentlemen, fee, fee dead Henries wounds,
Open their congeal'd mouthes, and bleed afresh.
Blush, blush, thou lumpe of fowle Deformitie:
For 'tis thy preffence that exhales this blood
From cold and empty Veines where no blood dwells.
Thy Deeds in humane and vnnatural
Prouokes this Deluge most vnnatural.
O God! which this Blood mad'nt, reuenge his death:
O Earth! which this Blood drink'nt, reuenge his death.
Either Heau'n with Lightning strike the murther' red
Or Earth gape open wide, and eate him quicke,
As thou dost swalpha vp this good Kings blood,
Which his Hell-gouern'd arme hath butchered.
Rich. Lady, you know no Rules of Charity,
Which renders good for bad, Blessings for Curles.
An. Villaine, thou know'ft not law of God nor Man,
No Be'ft so fierce, but knowes some touch of pity.
Rich. But I know none, and therefore am no Be'ft.
An. O wonderfull, when diuels tell the truth!
Rich. More wonderfull, when Angels are so angry:
Vouchfafe (divine perfection of a Woman)
Of these supposed Crimes, to give me leaue
By circumstance, but to acquit my selfe.
An. Vouchfafe (defud' infection of man)
Of these knowne euils, but to give me leaue
By circumstance, to curse thy cursed Selfe.
Rich. Fairer then tongue can name thee, let me haue
Some patient leyture to excuse my felfe.
An. Fouler then heart can thinke thee,
Thou can't make no excuse currant,
But to hang thy felfe.
Rich. By such di 사람이, I should acquie my selfe.
An. And by dispairing fhalt thou fland excused,
For doing worthy Vengeance on thy selfe,
That did't vnworthy slaughter vpon others.
Rich. Say that I flew them not.
An. Then say they were not flaine:
But dead they are, and diuellish flame by thee.
Rich. I did not kill your Husband.
An. Why then he is alive.
Rich. Nay, he is dead, and flaine by Edwards hands.
An. In thy foule throat thou Lyght,
Quenelle Margaret law
Thy mur'drous Faulchion smoaking in his blood:
The which, thou once did'dt bend against her brest,
But that thy Brothers beate aside the point.
Rich. I was provoked by her fland'rous tongue,
That laid their guilts, vpon my guiltlesse Shoulders.
An. Thou was't proppesed by thy bloody minde,
That neuer dream'd on ought but Butcheries:
Did't thou not kill this King?
An. Do'ft grant me Hedge-hogge,
Then God graunt me too
Thou may'lt be damned for that wicked deed,
O he was gentle, milde, and vertuous.
Rich. The better for the King of heauen that hath him.
An. He is in heauen, where thou shalt neuer come.
Rich. Let him thanke me, that holpe to fend him thither:
For he was fitter for that place then earth.
An. And thou vnsift for any place, but hell.
Rich. Yes one place elze, if you will heare me name it.
An. Some dungeon.
An. I ill reft betide the chamber where thou lyest.
Rich. So will it Madam, till I lye with you.
An. I hope fo.
Rich. I know fo. But gentle Lady Anne,
To leaze this keen encounter of our wittes,
And fall something into a flower method.
Is not the caufer of the timelesse deaths
Of these Plantagenets, Henrie and Edward,
As blamefull as the Executioner.
An. Thou was't the caufe, and moft accurat effect.
Rich. Your beauty was the caufe of that effect:
Your beauty, that did haunt me in my sleepe,
To vndertake the death of all the world,
So I might live one houre in your sweet boosome.
An. If I thought that, I tell thee Homicide,
These Nalles shou'd rent that beauty from my Cheekes.
Rich. Thefe eyes could not endure 3 beauties wrack,
You should not blemish it, if I flould by;
As all the world is cheared by the Sunne,
So I by that: It is my day, my life.
An. Blacke night ore-shade thy day, & death thy life.
Rich. Curle not thy selfe faire Creature,
Thou art both,
An. I would I were, to be reueng'd on thee.
Rich. It is a quarrell moft vnnatural,
To be reueng'd on him that loueth thee.
An. It is a quarrell luft and reaconable,
To be reueng'd on him that kill'd my Husband.
Rich. He that bereft the Lady of thy Husband,
Did it to helpe thee to a better Husband.
An. His better doth not breath vpon the earth.
Rich. He liues, that loues thee better then he could.
An. Name him.
An. Why that was he.
Rich. The selfe fame name, but one of better Nature.
An. Where is he?
Rich. Heere:
Why dost thou spit at me.
An. Would it were mortall poifon, for thy fake.
Rich. Neuer came poifon fo fweet a place.
An. Neuer hung poifon on a fowler Toade.
Out of my sight, thou doft infeete mine eyes.
Rich. Thine eyes (sweet Lady) have infection mine.
An. Would they were Basiliskes, to strike thee dead.
Rich. I would they were, that I might dye at once:
For now they kill me with a liuing death.
Those eyes of thine, from mine have drawne falt Tear's.

Sham'd their Aspects with store of childish drops:
These eyes, which neer shed remorvefull teare,
No, when my Father Yorke, and Edward wept,
To heare the pitious moane that Rutland made
When black-fac'd Clifford shooke his sword at him.
Nor when thy warlike Father like a Child,
Told the sad storie of my Fathers death,
And twenty times, made paufe to fob and weeper:
That all the flanders by had wet their cheeks.
Like Trees bedash'd with raine. In that sad time,
My manly eyes did fcorne an humble teare:
And what thefe forrowes could not thence exhale,
Thy Beauty hath, and made them blinde with weeping.
I neuer fued to Friend, nor Enemy:
My Tongue could never learne sweet smoothing word.
But now thy Beauty is propof'd my Fee,
My proud heart fues, and prompts my tongue to Speake.
She looks fornyly at him.

Teach not thy lip fuch Scorne; for it was made
For kifing Lady, not for fuch contemp.
If thy reuengefull heart cannot forgive,
Loe here I lend thee this sharpe-pointed Sword,
Which if thou pleafe to hide in this true breff,
And let the Soule forth that adorth thee,
I lay it naked to the deadly stroke,
And humbly begge the death vpon my knee.
He layes his breath open, he offers at with his sword.
Nay do not paufe: For I did kill King Henrie,
But 'twas thy Beauty that prouoked me.
Nay now dispatch: 'Twas I that flabb'd yong Edward,
But 'twas thy Heauenly face that fet me on.
She failes the Sword.

Take vp the Sword againe, or take vp me.
An. Arife Difembler, though I wish thy death,
I will not be thy Executioner.
Rich. Thy sword I will kiffe thefle, and I will do it.
An. I have already.
Rich. That was in thy rage:
Speake it againe, and even with the word,
This hand, which for thy loue, did kill thy Loue,
Shall for thy loue, kiffe a farre truer Loue,
To both their deaths that thou be necessary.
An. I would I knew thy heart.
Rich. 'Tis figur'd in my tongue.
An. I feare me, both are falf.
Rich. Then neuer Man was true.
An. Well, well, put vp your Sword.
Rich. Say then my Peace is made.
An. That fhalt thou know hereafter.
An. All men I hope I lye fo.
Vouchsafe to weare this Ring.
Rich. Looke how my Ring incomparfeth thy Finger,
Even fo thy Breff inclofeth my poor heart:
Weare both of them, for both of them are thine.
And if thy poore deuoted Seruant may
But beg one favoure at thy gracieous hand,
Thou doft confirm his happinesse for euer.
An. What is it?
Rich. That it may please thee leave thefle fad designes,
To him that hath moft caufe to be a Mourner,
And prefently repayre to Crosbie Houfe:
Where (after I have folemnly inter'd
At Chertfley Monaf'try this Noble King,
And wet his Graue with my Repentant Teares)
I will with all expedient duty fee you,

For diuers un knowne Reasons, I befeech you,
Grant me this Boon.
An. With all my heart, and much it loyes me too,
To fee you are become fo penitent.
Treffel and Barkley, go along with me.
Rich. Bid me farwell.
An. 'Tis more then you deferue:
But since you teach me how to flatter you,
Imagine I haue faide farewell already.

Exit two with Anne.

Gent. Towards Chertfley, Noble Lord?
Rich. No: to White Friars, there attend my comming

Exit Cears.

Was euer woman in this humour wo'd?
Was euer woman in this humour wonne?
Ile haue her, but I will not keepe her long.
What? that I kill'd her Husband, and his Father,
To take her in her hearts extreme hate.
With curfe in her mouth, Teares in her eyes,
The bleeding witneffe of my hatred by,
Hauing God, her Confience, and these bars against me,
And I, no Friends to backe my fulte withall,
But the plaine Diueli, and diffembling lookest?
And yet to winne her? All the world to nothing.

Hah!
Hath the forget alreadie that braue Prince,
Edward, her Lord, whom I (some three months since)
Stab'd in my angry mood, at Tewkesbury?
A sweeter, and a louelie Gentleman,
Frame'd in the prodigality of Nature:
Yong, Valiant, Wife, and (no doubt)right Royal,
The fpacious World cannot againe affoord:
And will the yet abafe her eyes on me,
That cropt the Golden prime of this sweete Prince,
And made her Widowe to a woffull Bed?
On me, whose All not equal Edwards Moytie?
On me, that halts, and am mishapen thus?
My Dukedome, to a Beggerly denier!
I do miftake my perfon all this while:
Vpon my life she findes (although I cannot)
My felfe to be a maruellous proper man.
Ile be at Charges for a Looking-glafe,
And entertaine a fcorre or two of Taylors,
To fludy fashions to adorne my body:
Since I am crept in favour with my felle,
I will maintaine it with some little coft.
But firit Ile turne you Fellow in his Graue,
And then returne lamenting to my Loue.
Shine out faire Sunne, till I have bought a glaffe,
That I may fee my Shadow as I paffe.

Scena Tertia.

Enter the Queene Mother, Lord Riuerst, and Lord Gray.

Riu. Haue patience Madam, ther's no doubt his Maiesty
Will soon recover his accentom'd health.
Gray. In that you brooke it ill, it makes him worse,
Therefore for Gods fake entertaine good comfort,
And cheere his Grace with quicke and merry eyes
Qu. If he were dead, what would betide on me?

Gray.
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

If he were dead, what would betide on me?

Gray. No other harme, but losse of such a Lord.

Qu. The losse of such a Lord, includes all harms.

Gray. The Heauens have blest you with a goodly Son,

To be your Comforter, when he is gone.

Qu. Ah! he is young; and his minority
Is put vnto the trust of Richard Gloufier,
A man that loues not me, nor none of you.

Q. Is it concluded he shall be Protector?

Qu. It is determined, not concluded yet:
But lo it must be, if the King miscarry.

Enter Buckingham and Derby.

Gray. Here comes the Lord of Buckingham & Derby.

Buc. Good time of day vnto your Royall Grace.

Der. God make your Maiesty joyful, as you have bin

Qu. The Countefle Richmond, good my Lord Derby.

To your good prayer, will scarifye say, Amen.

Yet Derby, notwithstanding thee's your wife, And loues not me, be you good Lord aflurd,
I hate not you for your proud arrogancy.

Der. I do beseech you, either not beleeue The enormus flanders of her false accusers:
Or if she be accus'd on true report,
Bear with her weakness, which I think proceed From wayward fickleness, and no grounded malice.

Qu. Saw you the King to day my Lord of Derby.

Der. But now the Duke of Buckingham and I,
Are come from visiting his Maiesty.

Que. What likelihood of his amendment Lords.

Buc. Madam good hope, his Grace speaks cheerfully.

Que. God grant him health, did you confer with him?

Buc. I Madam, he defires to make attenton Between the Duke of Gloufier, and your Brothers, And betweene them, and my Lord Chamberlaine, And sent to warn e them to his Royall preference.

Qu. Would all were well, but that will neuer be,
I feare our happinesse is at the height.

Enter Richard.

Rich. They do me wrong, and I will not induce it, Who is it that complains vnto the King,
That I (forsooth) am storne, and loue them not?
By holy Paul, they loue his Grace but lightly,
That fill his ears with such differentious Rumors.
Because I cannot flatter, and looke faire,
Smile in mens faces, smooth, deceive, and cogge,
Ducke with French nods, and Apish curtesie,
I must be held a rancorous Enemy.
Cannot a plaine man live, and thinke no harme,
But thus his simple truth must be abus'd,
With filken, flye, infinuating Jackes?

Gray. To who in all this preffence speaks your Grace?

Rich. To thee, that hast nor Honesty, nor Grace:
When haue I injur'd thee? When done thee wrong?
Or thee? or thee? or any of your Faction?
A plague vpon you all. His Royall Grace (Whom God preferras better then you would)
Cannot be quiet scarce a breathing while,
But you must trouble him with lewd complaints.

Qu. Brother of Gloufier, you mistake the matter:
The King on his owne Royall disposition,
(And not prouok'd by any Sutor elfe)
Ayming (belike) at your interiour hatred,

That in your outward action shewes it selfe
Against my Children, Brothers, and my Selfe,
Makes him to send, that he may learne the ground.

Rich. I cannot tell, the world is grown so bad,
That Wrens make prey, where Eagles dare not pearch.
Since euerie Iacke became a Gentleman,
There's many a gentle person made a Jacke.

Qu. Come, come, we know your meaning Brother
You enuoy my advancement, and my friends: (Glofter)
God grant we neuer may havee neede of you.

Rich. Meane time, God grants that I haue need of you.
Our Brother is imprifon'd by your meanes,
My selfe difgrac'd, and the Nobilitie
Held in contempt, while great Promotions
Are daily gien to ennable those
That fcare some two days since were worth a Noble.

Qu. By him that rais'd me to this carefull height,
From that contented hap which I inloy'd,
I neuer did incende his Maiestie
Against the Duke of Clarence, but haue bin
An earnest advocate to plead for him.

My Lord you do me shamefull injurie,
Faliely to draw me in thefe vile fufpect.

Rich. You may deny that you were not the meane
Of my Lord Haffings late imprifonment.

Qu. She may my Lord, for-

Rich. She may Lord Riuer's, why who knowes not fo?
She may do more fir then denying that:
She may helpes you to many faire preferments,
And then deny her ayding hand therein,
And lay those Honors on your high defert.
What may the, the may, I marry may the.

Qu. What marry may the?

Rich. What marrie may the? Marrie with a King,
A Batcheller, and a handsome stirling too,
I wis your Grandam had a worther match.

Qu. My Lord of Gloufier, I have too long borne
Your blunt vpraidings, and your bitter scoffes:
By heauen, I will acquaint his Maiestie
Of those grosse taunts that oft I have endur'd.
I had rather be a Countrie seruant maide
Then a great Queene, with this condition,
To be fo bated, scorn'd, and stormed at,
Small joy haue I in being Englands Queene.

Enter old Queene Margaret.

Mar. And lesned be that small, God I befeech him,
Thy honor, fate, and seate, is due to me.

Rich. What threat you me with telling of the King?
I will awouch't in preffence of the King:
I dare adventure to be sent to th' Tower.
'Tis time to speake,
My paines are quite forgot.

Margaret. Our Diuell,
I do remember them too well:
Thou killd'ft my Husband Henry in the Tower,
And Edward my poore Son, at Tewkesbuarie.

Rich. Ere you were Queene,
Or your Husband King:
I was a packe-horse in his great affaires:
A weeder out of his proud Adverfaries,
A liberrall rewarder of his Friends,
To royalize his blood, I spent mine owne.

Margaret. I and much better blood
Then his, or thine.

rich.
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Ricb. In all which time, you and your Husband Grey
Were factious, for the House of Lancaster;
And Rivers, for you: Was not your Husband,
In Margaret's Battle, at Saint Alknu, thaine?
Let me put in your minde, if you forget
What you have beene ere this, and what you are:
Withall, what I have beene, and what I am.

Q. M. A mutchrous Villaine, and so fill thou art.
Ricb. Poor Clarence did forake his Father Warwick,
1, and forsook himselfe (which I sue pardon.)

Q. M. Which God renue.

Ricb. To fight on Edwards partie, for the Crowne,
And for his meeke, poor Lord, he is mewed vp:
I would to God my heart were Flint, like Edwards,
Or Edwards soft and pitifull, like mine:
I am too childish foolish for this World.

Q. M. High thee to Hell for shame, & leave this World
Thou Cadecodem, there thy Kingdome is.

River. My Lord of Gloster: in those busie dayes,
Which here you vpe, to prose vs Enemies,
We follow'd then our Lord, our Soueraigne King,
So should we, you, if you should be our King.

Ricb. If 1 should be? I had rather be a Pedler:
Farre be it from my heart, the thought thereof.

Qa. As little joy (my Lord,) as you suppos'd
You should enjoy, were you this Countries King,
As little joy you may suppos'd in me.
That I enjoy, being the Queene thereof.

Q. M. A little joy enjoyes the Queene thereof,
For I am thee, and altogether joyelle:
I can no longer hold me patient.
Hear me, you wrangling Pyrates, that fall out,
In fearing that which you have pill'd from me:
Which off you trembles not, that looker on me?
If not, that I am Queene, you bow like Subiects;
Yet that by you depov'd, you quake like Rebels.

Ah gentle Villaine, do not turne away,
(fight?)
Ricb. Foule wrinckled Witch, what mak'th thou in my

Q. M. But repetition of what thou haft mar'd,
That will I make, before I let thee goe.

Rich. Wert thou not banishe, on paine of death?

Q. M. I was: but I doe find more paine in banishment,
Then death can yeeld me here, by my abode.
A Husband and a Sonne thou ow'tt to me,
And thou a Kingdome; all of you, allegance:
This Sorrow that I haue, by right is yours,
And all the Pleasures you viure, are mine.

Ricb. The Curfe my Noble Father layd on thee,
When thou didst Crown his Warrior Browes with Paper,
And with thy scornes drewn't River's from his eyes,
And then to dry them, gau'th the Duke a Clowt,
Steep'd in the faultie blood of prettie Rutland:
His Curfe then, from bitterneffe of Soule,
Denounc'd against thee, are all faine upon thee:
And God, not we, hath plag'd thy bloody deed.

Qa. SoJuift is God, to right the innocent.

Haft. O'twas the soulefull deed to play that Babe,
And the most mercifull, that ere was heard of.

Riv. Tyrants themselfes wept when it was reported.

Dorl. No man but prophesied reuenge for it.

Back. Northumberland, then pretend, went to see it.

Q. M. What? were you snarling all before I came,
Ready to catch each other by the throat,
And turne you all your hatred now on me?
Did Tortes dread Curfe preuaile so much with Hauean,
That Henrys death, my lovely Edwards death,

Their Kingdome losse, my wofull Banishment,
Should all but answere for that peeculess Brat?
Can Curfes pierce the Clouds, and enter Hauean?
Why then give way dull Clouds to my quick Curfes.
Though not by Warre, by Surfet dye your King,
As ours by Murther, to make him a King.

Edward thy Sonne, that now is Prince of Wales,
For Edward our Sonne, that was Prince of Wales,
Dye in his youth, by like vntimely violence.

Thy felle a Queene, for me that was a Queene,
Out-lie thy glory, like my wretched felles:
Long may't thou line, to wayle thy Childrens death,
And fee another, as I fee thee now,

Deck'd in thy Rights, as thou art fad'd in mine.
Long dye thy happie dayes, before thy death,
And after many length'd howres of grieue,
Dye neyther Mother, Wife, nor Englands Queene.

Rivers and Dorf, you were flanders by,
And fo weat thou, Lord Haftings, when my Sonne
Was stab'd with bloody Daggers:God, I pray him,
That none of you may live his natural age,
But by some vnlook'd accident cut off.

Ricb.Haue done thy Charge, and hatefull wither'd Hagg.

Q. M. And leave out thee thy Dog, for y shalt hear me.
If Hauean have any griesous plague in store,
Exceeding those that I can with vpon thee,
O let them keepe it, till thy finnes be ripe,

And then hrule downe their indignation
On thee, the trouble of the poore Worlds peace.
The Worme of Conscience full begnaw thy Soule,
Thy Friends fufpect for Traytors while thou liu'tt,
And take deep Traytors for thy dearest Friends:
No sleepe clofe vp that deadly Eye of thine,

Vnleffe it be while some tormenting Dreaume
Affrights thee with a Helli of ougely Deuils.
Thou eluifh mark'd, abortive rooting Hogge,
Thou that waft feald in thy Naturall
The flame of Nature, and the Sonne of Hell:
Thou flander of thy heauie Mothers Wombe,
Thou loathed Ifue of thy Fathers Loynes,

Thou Ragge of Honor, thou detested--

Ricb. Margar
t.

Q. M. Richard.

Rich. Ha,

Q. M. I call thee not.

Ricb. I cry thee mercie then: for I did thynke,
That thou hadst call'd me all these bitter names.

Q. M. Why so I did, but look'd for no reply.

Oh let me make the Period to my Curfe.

Rich. 'Tis done by me, and ends in Margare
t.

Qu. Thus haue you breath'd your Curfe against your fel.

Q. M. Poor painted Queene, vaunourish of my fortune,
Why strew'th thou Sugar on that Bottel'd Spider,
Whose deadie Web enstarts thee about?

Foole,foole, thou whet'st a Knife to kill thy felte:
The day will come, that thou shalt wish for me,

To helpe thee curfe this poysonous Bunch-backt Toade.

Haff.Falle boding Woman, end thy frantick Curfe,
Leaft to thy harme, thou mov'e our patience.

Q. M. Foulfe shame vpon you, you have all mow'd mine.

Ri. Were you well feru'd, you would be taught your duty.

Q. M. To ferue me well, you all shoul'd do me duty,

Teach me to be your Queene, and you my Subiects:
O ferue me well, and teach your felues that duty.

Dorl. Dispute not with her, she is lunaticke.

Q. M. Peace Master Marquess, you are malapert,

Your fire-new flampe of Honor is scarce currant.
O that your yong Nobility could judge
What twere to love it, and be miserable.
They that fland high, have many blasts to shake them,
And if they fall, they dash themselves to pieces.

Rich. Good counfaile marry, leerne it, leerne it Mar-queffe.

Dor. It touches you my Lord, as much as me.
Rich. I, and much more : but I was borne fo high:
Our ayerie buildeth in the Cedars top,
And dallies with the winde, and scornes the Sunne.

Mar. And turns the Sun to shade : alas, alas,
Witnesse my Sonne, now in the shade of death,
Whose bright out-shining beams, thy cloudy wrath
Hath in eternall darknesse folded vp,
Your ayerie buildeth in our ayeries Neft:
O God that feest it, do not suffer it,
As it is wonne with blood, loft be it so.

Buc. Peace,peace for shame : If not, for Charity.

Mar. Vrge neither charity,nor shame to me:
Vncharitably with me haue you dealt,
And shamefully my hopes (by you) are butcher'd.
My Charity is outrage, Life my name,
And in that flame, fill lye my forrowes rage.

Buc. Have done, have done.

Mar. O Princely Buckingham, lle kiffe thy hand,
In signe of League and amity with thee :
Now faire befall thee, and thy Noble house :
Thy Garments are not spottet with our blood :
Nor thou within the compass of my curfe.

Buc. Nor no one heere : for Curfes neuer paft
The lips of those that breath them in the ayre.

Mar. I will not thinke but they ascend the sky,
And there awake Gods gentle sleepeing peace.
O Buckingham, take heed of yonder dogge :
Looke when he fawnes, he bites; and when he bites,
His venom tooth will rangle to the death.
Haue not to do with him, beware of him,
Sinne, death, and hell haue fet their markes on him,
And all their Minifters attend on him.

Rich. What doth the say, my Lord of Buckingham.
Buc. Nothing that I repect my gracious Lord.

Mar. What doft thou forne me
For my gentle counfell?
And footh the diuell that I warne thee from.
O but remember this another day:
When he shall fplit thy very heart with forrow :
And fay {poore Margaret} was a Prophetife :
Lye euery one of you libelous to his hate,
And he to yours, and all of you to Gods.

Rich. My haire doth fland an end to heare her curfes.

Riu. And fo doth mine, I muft whye the he's at libertie.

Rich. I cannot blame her, by Gods holy mother,
She hath had too much wrong, and I repent
My part thereof, that I haue done to her.

Mar. I neuer did her any to my knowledge.

Rich. Yet you haue all the vantage of her wrong:
I was too hot, to do somebody good,
That is too cold in thinking of it now :
Marry as for Clarence, he is well repayed :
He is frank'd vp to flattering for his paines,
God pardon them, that are the caufe thereof.

Riu. A vertuous, and a Christian-like conclusion
To pray for them that have done fafh to vs.

Rich. So do I euer, being well advis'd.

Speakes to himself.

For had I curft now, I had curft my felfe.

Enter Catesby.

Cates. Madam, his Maiefty doth call for you,
And for your Grace, and yours my gracious Lord.

Riu. Catesby I come, Lords will you go with mee.

Enter two murderers.

Rich. I do the wrong, and first begin to brawle.
The secret Mitcheefes that I fet abroach,
I lay vnto the greuous charge of others.

Clarence, who I indeede haue caft in darknesse,
I do bewepe to many fimple Gulles,
Namely to Derby, Haftings, Buckingham,
And tell them 'tis the Queene, and her Allies,
That flire the King againft the Duke my Brother.
Now they beleevte it, and withall whet me
To be reueng'd on River, Dorl, Grey.
But then I figh, and with a pcece of Scripture,
Tell them that God bids vs do good for euill :
And thus I cloath my Naked Villanie
With odde old ends, florne forth of holy Writ,
And feeme a Saint, when moft I play the deuill.

Enter Clarence and Keeper.

Keep. Why lookes your Grace fo heauily to day.

Cla. O, I haue paft a miserable night,
So full of fearefull Dreames, of vgy fights,
That as I am a Chriftian faithfull man,
I would not spen another such a night
Though twere to buy a world of happy daies:
So full of difinall terror was the time.

Keep. What was your dream, my Lord, I pray you tel me

Cla.Me thoughts that I had broken from the Tower,
And was embark'd to croffe to Burgundy,
And in my company my Brother Gloufier,
Who from my Cabin tempted me to walke,
Vpon the Hatches : There we look'd toward England,
And cited vp a thousand heauy times,

Scena Quarta.

Speakes to himself.

For had I curft now, I had curft my felfe.

During
During the wars of Yorke and Lancaster
That had befalne vs. As we pac'd along
Upon the giddy footing of the Hatches,
Me thought that Clouguet humbled, and in falling
Strooke me (that thought to slay him) ouer-board,
Into the tumbling billowes of the maine.
O Lord, me thought what paine it was to drowne,
What dreadfull noife of water in mine eares,
What fights of ugly death within mine eyes.
Me thoughts, I saw a thousand fearfull wrackes:
A thousand men that Fihes gnaw'd vpon:
Wedges of Gold, great Anchors, heapes of Pearle,
Ineffimable Stones, unvalued Jewels,
All scattered in the bottome of the Sea,
Some lay in dead-men Scalles, and in the holes
Where eyes did once inhabit, there were crept
(As 'twere in forne of eyes) reflecting Gemmes,
That wo'd the flimy bottome of the deep,
And mock'd the dead bones that lay fattred by.

Keep. Had you such feyure in the time of death
To gaze vpon these secretes of the deep?
Cla. Me thought I had, and often did I frive
To yeeld the Ghost: but still the envious Flood
Stop'd in my foule, and would not let it forth
To find the empty, vaft, and wand'r'ing ayre:
But smother'd it within my panting bulke,
Who almost hurft, to belch it in the Sea.

Keep. Awak'd you not in this fore Agony?
Clar. No, no, my Dreame was lengthen'd after life.
O then, began the Tempell to my Soule.
I paft (me thought) the Melancholy Flood,
With that fewre Ferry-man which Poets write of,
Vnto the Kingdome of perpetuall Night.
The firft that there did greet my Stranger-soule,
Was my great Father-in-Law, renowned Warwicke,
Who spake aloude: What scarce for Periurie,
Can this darke Monarchy afford false Clarence?
And fo he vanish'd. Then came wand'r'ing by,
A Shadow like an Angell, with bright hayre
Dabbel'd in blood, and he shriek'd out alowd
Clarence is come, false, fleeting, periur'd Clarence,
That flabb'd me in the field by Tewkesbury:
Seize on him Furies, take him vnto Torment.
With that (me thought) a Legion of foule Fiends
Inoiron'd me, and howled in mine eares
Such hideous cries, that with the very Noife,
I (trembling) walk'd, and for a season after,
Could not beleue, but that I was in Hell,
Such terrible Impression made my Dreame.

Keep. No maruell! Lord, though it affrighted you,
I am affraid (me thinkes) to hear you tell it.
Cla. Ah Keeper, Keeper, I have done these things
(That now giue evidence against my Soule)
For Edwards fakes, and see how he requites mee.
O God! if my deepe prayses cannot appease thee,
But thou wilt be angu'sd on my misdeeds,
Yet execute thy wrath in me alone:
O spare my guiltyf Wife, and my poore children.
Keeper, I prythee fit me a while.
My Soule is heavy, and I faine would sleepe.

Keep. I will my Lord, God giue your Grace good ref.

Enter Brakenbury the Lieutenant.

Bra. Sorrow breaks Seasons, and reposyng houres,
Makes the Night Morning, and the Noon-tide night:

Princes haue but their Titles for their Glories,
An outward Honor, for an inward Toyle,
And for vnfelt Imagination.
They often feele a world of reftlesse Cares:
So that betweene their Titles, and low Name,
There's nothing differs, but the outward fame.

Enter two Muriborers.

1. Mar. Ho, who's heere?
Bra. What would'thou Fellow? and how cam'th thou hither.
2. Mar. I would speak with Clarence, and I came hither on my Legges.
Bra. What so brefe?
1. 'Tis better (Sir) then to be tedious:
Let him fee our Commission, and talk no more.
Bra. I am in this, commended to deliuer
The Noble Duke of Clarence to your hands.
I will not reaon what is meant heereby,
Because I will be guiltlesse from the meaning.
There lies the Duke affleepe, and there the Keys.
Ile to the King, and signifie to him,
That thus I have refign'd to you my charge.

1. You may fit, 'tis a point of wifdom:
Far you well.
2. What, shall we ftab him as he sleepe?
1. No, he'll say I was done cowardly, when he wakes
2. Why he shall neuer wake, vntil the great Judgement day.
1. Why then he'll say, we ftab'd him sleepeing.
2. The vrging of that word Judgement, hath bred a kind of remorse in me.
1. What's art thou affraid?
2. Not to kill him, having a Warrant,
   But to be damn'd for killing him, from the which
   No Warrant can defend me.
1. I thought thou had'lt bin refolute.
2. So I am, to let him live.
1. Ile bace backe to the Duke of Clouger, and tell him so.
2. Nay, I prythee play a little:
I hope this passionate humor of mine, will change,
It was wont to hold me but while one tels twenty.
1. How do'thou feele thy felfe now?
2. Some certaine dregges of confidence are yet within mee.
1. Remember our Reward, when the deed's done.
2. Come, he dies: I had forgot the Reward.
1. Where's thy confidence now.
1. When he opens his purfe to giue vs our Reward, thy Confidence flies out.
2. 'Tis no matter, let it goe: There's few or none will entertaine it.

1. What if it come to thee again?
2. Ile not meddle with it, it makes a man a Coward:
   A man cannot fleace, but it accuceth him: A man cannot Swear, but it Checks him: A man cannot lye with his Neighbours Wife, but it detects him. 'Tis a blushing shamefac'd spirit, that mutinies in a mans boosome:
   It fileth a man full of Obstacles. It made me once renose a Purrif of Gold that (by chance) I found: It beggars any man that keeps it: It is turn'd out of Townes and Cit-ties for a dangerous thing, and every man that means to live well, endeuours to truft to himselfe, and live without it.

1 'Tis
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

1. 'Tis even now at my elbow, perwading me not to kill the Dkue.
2. Take the diuell in thy minde, and beleue him not:
   He would insinuate with thee but to make thee figh.
   I am strong fram'd, he cannot prevale with me.
2. Spoke like a tall man, that respecks thy reputation.
Come, shall we fall to worke?
1. Take him on the Coftard, with the hitles of thy Sword, and then throw him into the Malmeley-Butte in the next roome.
2. O excellent device; and make a sop of him.
1. Soft, he wakes.
2. Trinke.
1. No, wee'll reason with him.

Cla. Where art thou Keeper? Give me a cup of wine.
2. You shall have Wine enough my Lord anon.

Cla. In Gods name, what art thou?
1. A man, as you are.
2. But not as I am Royall.
1. Nor you as we are, Loyall.

Cla. Thy voice is Thunder, but thy looks are humble.
1. My voice is now the Kings, my looks mine owne.

Cla. How darkly, and how deadly doth thou speake?
Your eyes do menace me: why looke you pale?
Who sient you hither? Wherefore do you come?
1. To o, to... Cla. To murther me?

Bath. I, I.

Cla. You scarly haue the hearts to tell me fo,
And therefore cannot haue the hearts to do it.
Wherein my Friends haue I offended you?
1. Offended vs you haue not, but the King.
2. I shall be reconcil'd to him againe.
2. Neuer my Lord, therefore prepare to dye.

Cla. Are you drawne forth among a world of men
To play the innocent? What is my offence?
Where is the Evidenc that doth accuse me?
What lawfull Quest have gluenn their Verdict vp Vnto the frowning Judges? Who shal pronounce'd
The bitter sentence of poor Clarence death,
Before I be conuict by courfe of Law? To threaten me with death, is most vnlawfull.
I charge you, as you hope for any goodnesse,
That you depart, and lay no hands on me:
The deed you undertake is damnable.
1. What we will do, we do vpvn command.
2. And he that hath commanded, it our King.

Cla. Erroneous Vaflalls, the great King of Kings
Hath in the Table of his Law commanded
That thou shalt do no murther. Will you then
Sparne at his Edict, and fullfill a Mans?
Take heed: for he holds Vengeance in his hand,
To hurle vpvn their heads that breake his Law.
2. And that fame Vengeance doth he hurle on thee, For falf Forfwearing, and for murther too:
Thou shoul'd receive the Sacrament, to fight
In quarrell of the Houfe of Lancatement.
1. And like a Traitor to the name of God,
Did't breake that Vow, and with thy treacherous blade,
Vnrip't the Bowels of thy Sou'reignes Sonne.
2. Whom thou wast f'worne to cherish and defend.
1. How canst thou urge Gods dreadfull Law to vs,
When thou hast broke it in fuch desere degree?

Cla. Alas! for whole face did I that ill deed?
For Edward, for my Brother, for his fake.
He sents you not to murther me for this:

For in that finne, he is as deepe as I.
If God will be avenged for the deed,
O know you yet, he doth it publiftely,
Take not the quarrell from his powerfull arme:
He needs no indirect, or lawlefe courfe,
To cut off those that have offended him.
1. Who made thee then a bloudy minifter,
When gallant springing braue Plantagenet,
That Princely Nounce was frucke dead by thee?

Cla. My Brothers loue, the Diuell, and my Rage.
1. Thy Brothers Loue, our Duty, and thy Faults,
Prouoke vs hitter now, to laughther thee.

Cla. If you do loue my Brother, hate not me:
I am his Brother, and I loue him well.
If you are hy'nd for meed, go backe againe,
And I will send you to my Brother Gloufter:
Who shall reward you better for my life,
Then Edward will for tydings of my death.
2. You are deceuil'd,
Your Brother Gloufter hates you.

Cla. Oh no, he loues me, and he holds me deere:
Go you to him from me.
1. I fo we will.

Cla. Tell him, when that our Princely Father Yorke,
Blef his three Sonnes with his victorius Arme,
He little thought of this diuided Friendfhip:
Bid Gloufter think of this, and he will wepe.
1. I Milftones, as he leffioned vs to wepe.

Cla. O do not flander him, for he is kinde.
1. Right, as Snow in Harrefet:
Come, you deceule your felwe,
'Tis he that sendes vs to devorue you here.

Cla. It cannot be, for he bewpt my Fortune,
And hugg'd me in his armes, and fwoered with fobs,
That he would labour my deliuerie.
1. Why fo do heoth, when he deliueres you
From this earths thrallome, to the loyes of heaven.
2. Make peace with God, for you must die my Lord.

Cla. Have you quarrell hollie ftingling in your foules,
To counfalle me to make my peace with God,
And are you yet to your owne foules fo blinde,
That you will warre with God, by murd'reng me.
O firs confider, they that fet you on
To do this deedee, will hate you for the deedee.
2. What shal we do?

Clar. Relent, and faue your foules:
Which of you, if you were a Princes Sonne,
Being pent from Liberty, as I am now,
If two fuch murtherers as your felues came to you,
Would not intreat for life, as you would begge
Were you in my diftreffe,
1. Relent! no: 'Tis cowardly and womanish.

Cla. Not to relent, is beaftly, fauage, diuellifh:
My Friend, I fpy some pitty in thy looke:
O, if thine eye be not a Flatterer,
Come thou on my fide, and intreate for mee,
A begging Prince, what begger pitties not.
2. Lookie behinde you, my Lord.
1. Take that, and that, if all this will not do, Stabs him.
2. A bloody deed, and desperately dispatcht:
How faine (like Pilate) would I waft my hands
Of this moft greevous murther.

Enter 1. Murthber.
1. How now? what mean'th thou that thou help't me not?
By Heaven the Duke shall know how flacke you have beene.
Enter Ratcliff, and Gloster.

Rich. Good morrow to my Soueraigne King & Queen
And Princely Peeres; a happy time of day.
King. Happy indeed, as we have spent the day:
Gloster, we have done deeds of Charity,
Made peace of enmity, faire loute of hate,
Between thee dwelling wrong incensed Peeres.
Rich. A bleffed labour my moft Soueraigne Lord;
Among this Princely heapes, if any here
By false intelligence, or wrong furmise
Hold me a Foe: If I unwillingly, or in my rage,
Haue ought committed that is hardly borne,
To any in this prefence, I defire
To reconcile me to his Friendly peace :
'Tis death to me to be at enmity:
I hate it, and defire all good mens loute,
First Madam, I intreate true peace of you,
Which I will purchase with my dutious feruice.
Of you my Noble Cokin Buckingham,
If euer any grudge were lodg'd betweene vs,
Of you and you, Lord Riuers and of Dorfes,
That all without defert have vnfeigned on me:
Of you Lord Woodull, and Lord Scales of you,
Dukes, Earles, Lords, Gentlemen, indeed of all.
I do not know that Englishman alioe,
With whom my foule is any iot at oddes,
More then the Infant that is borne to night:
I thank my God for my Humilitie.
Qu. A holy day fhall this be kept hereafter:
I would to God all strifes were well compounded.
My Soueraigne Lord, I do bfeech your Highneffe
To take our Brother Clarence to your Grace.
Rich. Why Madam, haue I ofred loute for this,
To be fo flowted in this Royall prefence?
Who knowes not that the gentle Duke is dead? They
You do him injurie to scorn his Coarfe.
King. Who knowes not he is dead ?
Who knowes he is ?
Qu. All-feeing heauen, what a world is this?
Buc. Looke I fo pale Lord Dorfes, as the refl?
Der. I my good Lord, and no man in the prefence,
But his red colour hath forfooke his cheekeks.
King. Is Clarence dead ? The Order was reverit.
Rich. But he (poore man) by your firft order dyed,
And that a winged Mercurie did beare:
Some tardie Cripple bare the Countermand,
That came too lage to fee him buried.
God grant, that some lefte Nobles, and lefte Loyall,
Neerer in bloodye thoughts, and not in blood,
Defere not wors e then wretched Clarence did,
And yet go currant from Suspiion.

Enter Earle of Derby.

Der. A boone my Soueraigne for my feruice done.
King. I prethee peace, my foule is full of sorrow.
Der. I will not rife, vrneffe your Highnes heare me.
King. Then lay at once, what is it thou requeris.
Der. The forfeit (Soueraigne) of my feruants life,
Who flew to day a Riotous Gentleman,
Lately attendant on the Duke of Norfolk.
King. Have I a tongue to doome my Brothers death?
And shal that tongue glue pardon to a flave?
My Brother kill'd no man, his fault was Thought,
And yet his punishment was bitter death.

Who
Who sued to me for him? Who (in my wrath)
Kneel'd and my feet, and bid me be advis'd?
Who spoke of Brother-hood? who spoke of love?
Who told me how the poor soule did for sake
The mighty Warwick,could not fight for me?
Who told me in the field at Tewkesbury,
When Oxford had me downe, he refused me;
And said deare Brother lie, and be a King?
Who told me, when we both lay in the Field,
Frozen(almost) to death, how he did lap me
Even in his Garments, and did give himselfe
(All thin and naked) to the numbe cold night?
All this from my Remembrance, brutifh wrath
Sinfully pluckt, and not a man of you
Had so much grace to put it in my minde.
But when your Carters, or your wayting Vassalls
Have done a drunken Slaughter, and defac'd
The precious Image of our deere Redeemer,
You straight are on your knees for Pardon, pardon,
And I (vainfully too) must grant it you.
But for my Brother, not a man would speake,
Nor I (vngracious) speake vnto my selfe
For him poore Soule. The proudeft of you all,
Have bin beholding to him in his life:
Yet none of you, would once begge for his life.
O God! I feare thy justice will take hold
On me, and you; and mine, and yours for this,
Come Haflings helps me to my Cloffet,
Ah poore Clarence. Exeunt some with Kl & Queen.
Rich. This is the fruits of raifhnes Markt you not,
How that the guilty Kindred of the Queene
Look'd pale,when they did heare of Clarence death.
O! they did vre it fell ntto the King,
God will reuenge it. Come Lords will you go,
To comfort Edward with our company.
Bu. We wait vpon your Grace.

Scena Secunda.

Enter the old Dutcheffe of Yorke, with the two children of Clarence.

Edw. Good Grandam tell vs, is our Father dead?
Daugh. No Boy.
"Daugh. Why do wepe so oft? And beate your Breft?
And cry, O Clarence, my vnhappy Sonne.
Boy. Why do you looke on vs, and thake your head,
And call vs Orphants, Wretches, Caftaways,
If that our Noble Father were alive?
Dut. My pretty Coftins,you mistake me both,
I do lament the ficknefe of the King,
As loath to lofe him, not your Fathers death:
It were loft forrow to waile one that's looft.
Boy. Then you conclude, (my Grandam) he is dead:
The King mine Vnkle is too blame for it.
God will reuenge it, whom I will importune
With carnet prayers, all to that effect.
Daugh. And fo will I.
Dut. Peace children peace, the King doth louse you weel.
Incapeeble, and shallow Innocents,
You cannot gueffe who caus'd your Fathers death.
Boy. Grandam we can: for my good Vnkle Glofter
Told me, the King prouok'd to it by the Queene,
Deuis'd impeachments to imprifon him;
And when my Vnkle told me so, he wept,
And pittied me, and kindly kit my cheeke:
Bad me rely on him, as on my Father,
And he would loue me deeply as a childe.
Dut. Ah! that Deceit should steale such gentle fhape,
And with a vertuous Vizor hide deepe vive.
He is my fonne, I, and therein my fpane,
Yet from my dugges, he drew not this deceit.
Boy. Thinke you my Vnkle did difemble Grandam?
Dut. I Boy.
Boy. I cannot think it. Hearke, what noifie is this?

Enter the Queene with her hoare about her ears,
Rivers & Dorjet after her.

Qy. Ah! who shall hinder me to waile and wepe?
To chide my fortune, and torment my Selfe.
Ile ioyne with blacke difpaire against my Soule,
And to my felle, become an enemie.
Dut. What meane you this Scene of rude impatience?
Qy. To make an act of Tragicke violence.
Edward my Lord, thy Sonne, our King is dead.
Why grow the Branches, when the Roote is gone?
Why wither not the leaves that want their fap?
If you will live, Lament: if dye, be brefre.
That our swift-winged Soules may catch the Kings,
Or like obedient Subiechts follow him,
To his new Kingdome of nere-changing night.
Dut. Ah fo much intereft hauie in thy forrow,
As I had Title in thy Noble Husband:
I have beewe a worthy Husbandes death,
And liu'd with looking on his Images:
But now two Mirrors of his Princely femblance,
Are crack'd in pieces, by malignant death,
And I for comfort, haue but one falfe Glaffe,
That grecues me, when I fee my faine in him.
Thou art a Widow: yet thou art a Mother,
And haft the comfort of thy Children left,
But death hath snatch'd my Husband from mine Armes,
And pluckt two Crutches from my felle hands,
Clarence, and Edward. O, what caufe haue I,
(Thine being but a moity of my moane)
To ouer-go thy woes, and drowne thy cries.
Boy. Ah Aunt! you wept not for our Fathers death:
How can we ayde you with our Kindred tears?
Daugh. Our fatherlesse diiftrefe was left vnmoan'd,
Your widowe-dolour, likewis be vnwept.
Qy. Give me no helpe in Lamentation,
I am not barren to bring forth complaints,
All Springs reduce their currents to mine eyes,
That I being govern'd by the waterie Moone,
May fend forth plenteous tears to drowne the World.
Ah, for my Husband, for my deere Lord Edward.
Chil. Ah for our Father, for our deere Lord Clarence.
Dut. Alas for both, both mine Edward and Clarence.
Qy. What fay had I but Edward, and he's gone?
Chil. What fay had we but Clarence & he's gone.
Dut. What fayes had I, but they are gone.
Qy. Was never widdow had fo deere a losse.
Chil. Were neuer Orphans had fo deere a losse.
Dut. Was neuer Mother had fo deere a losse.
Alas! I am the Mother of thefe Greeses,
Theirs were parcell'd, mine is generall.
She for an Edward weepes, and do I:
I for a Clarence weepes, so doth not shee:
Thefe Babes for Clarence weepes, so do not they.
Alas! you three, on me threefold diuerte:
Power all your teares, I am your forrowes Nure,
And I will sopp it with Lamentation.

Dor. Comfort deere Mother, God is much displeas'd,
That you take with vnthankfulnesse his doing.
In common worlds thing, 'tis call'd vngratefull,
With dull vnwillingsnesse to repay a debt,
Which with a bounteous hand was kindly lent:
Much more to be thus opposite with heauen,
For it requires the Royall debt you lent.

Riuers. Madam, bethinke you like a carefull Mother
Of the young Prince your fonne: send straights for him,
Let him be Crown'd, in him your comfort lies.
Drowne desperate frowne in dead Edwards graue,
And plant your loydes in living Edwards Throne.

Enter Richard, Buckingham, Derbe, Hasting, and Racilie.

Ricb. Sifter haue comfort, all of vs haue caufe
To waile the dimming of our shining Starre:
But none can help our harrmes by wayling them.
Madam, my Mother, I do cry your mercie,
I did not fee your Grace. Humbly on my knee,
I crave your Blessing.

Dut. God bleffe thee, and put meeknes in thy breast,
Loue Charity, Obediencie, and true Dutie.
Ricb. Amen, and make me die a good old man,
That is the butt-end of a Mothers blessing;
I maruell that her Grace did leave it out.

Buc. You clowdy-Princes, & hart-forowing-Peepers,
That beare this heacie mutuall loade of Moane,
Now cheere each other, in each others Loue:
Though we haue spent our Harueft of this King,
We are to eate the Harueft of his Sonne.
The broken rancour of your high-oulone hates,
But lately splinter'd, knit, and joynd to gether,
Must gently be preferu'd, cherisht, and kept:
Me feemeth good, that with some little Traine,
Forthe from Ludlow, the young Prince be set
Hither to London, to be crown'd our King.

Riuers. Why with some little Traine,
My Lord of Buckingham?

Buc. Marrie my Lord, letly by a multitude,
The new-heal'd wound of Malice should break out,
Which would be so much the more dangerous,
By how much the eftate is greene, and yet vaguer'd.
Where euer Horse bears his commanding Reine,
And may direct his courfe as pleafe himelfe,
As well the fear of harrme, as harrme apparrant,
In my opinion, ought to be prevented.
Ricb. I hope the King made peace with all of vs,
And the compact is firme, and true in me.

Riu. And to me, and to (I thinkes) in all.
Yet since it is but greene, it should be put
To no apparrant likely-hood of breach,
Which haply by much company might be vrg'd:
Therefore I say with Noble Buckingham,
That it is meete so few should fetch the Prince.

Hafi. And so say L.
Ricb. Then be it so, and go we to determine
Who they shall be that strait shall posse to London.
Madam, and you my Sifter, will you go
To give your cenures in this businesse.

Enter one Citizen at one doore, and another at the other.

1. Cit. Good morrow Neighbour, whether away so fast?
2. Cit. I promise you, I fearely know my selfe:
Hearre you the newes abroad?
1. Yes, that the King is dead.
2. Ill newes bylady, seldom comes the better.
I feare, I feare, 'twill proue a giddy world.

Enter another Citizen.

3. Neighbours, God speed.
1. Glue you good morrow fir.
2. Dorth the newes hold of good king Edwards death?
1. I fir, it is too true, God helpe the while.
2. Then Matters looke to fee a troublous world.
1. No, no, by Gods good grace, his Son shall reigne.
2. Wot to that Land that's govern'd by a Child.
3. In him there is a hope of Government,
Which in his nonage, councell vnder him,
And in his full and ripened yeares, himselfe
No doubt shall then, and till then gouerne well.
1. So flowd the State, when Henry the fift
Was crown'd in Paris, but at nine months old.
3. Stood the State fo? No, no, good friends, God wot
For then this Land was famously enrich'd
With politike graue Counsell: then the King
Had vertuous Vnkies to protect his Grace.
1. Why fo hath this, both by his Father and Mother.
3. Better it were they all came by his Father:
Or by his Father there were none at all:
For emulation, who shall now be neereft,
Will touch vs all too neere, if God preuent not.
O full of danger is the Duke of Cloufter,
And the Queenes Sons, and Brothers, haught and proud:
And were they to rule, and not to rule,
This fickly Land, might solace as before.

1. Come, come, we feare the worst: all will be well.
3. When Clouds are seen, wifemen put on their clohes;
When great leaues fall, then Winter is at hand;
When the Sun fets, who doth not looke for night?
Vsntimely stormes, makes men expect a Dearth:
All may be well; but if God fort it fo,
'Tis more then we defende, or I expect.
2. Truly, the hearts of men are full of feare:
You cannot reaon (almoft) with a man,
That lookes not heauily, and full of dread.
3. Before the dayes of Change, still is it fo,
By a duiune infinit', mens minds mistrust

Mans Buckingham, and Richard.

Buc. My Lord, who euer journyes to the Prince,
For God sake let not vs two play at home:
For by the way, Ile fort occasion,
As Index to the story we late talk'd of,
To part the Queens proud Kindred from the Prince.
Ricb. My other felse, my Counfalias Consistory,
My Oracle, My Prophet, my deere Coine,
1, as a childe, will go by thy direction,
Toward London then, for we'll not play behinde.

Scena Tertia.

The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Pursuing danger : as by proofe we see
The Water swell before a boy's you storne :
But leave it all to God. Whither away ?
1. Marry we were sent for to the Justices.
2. And so was I: Ile bear you company. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Arch-bishop, young York, the Queene, and the Dutchefe.

Arch. Last night I heard they lay at Stony Stratford,
And at Northampton they do rest to night:
To morrow, or next day, they will be here.

Dut. I long with all my heart to see the Prince:
I hope he is much growing since last I saw him.

Qu. But I heare no, they say my sonne of Yorke
Ha's almost overtane in him his growth.

Yorke. I Mother, but I would not haue it so.

Dut. Why my good Cosin, it is good to grow.

Ter. Grandam, one night as we did fit at Supper,
My Vnkle Riuers talk'd how I did grow.
More then my Brother. I, quoth my Vnkle Gloufer,
Small Herbes haue grace, great Weeds do grow apace.
And since, me thinkes I would not grow so fast,
Because sweet Flowres are flow, and Weeds make haft.

Dut. Good faith, good faith, the sayyng did not hold
In him that did oblect the fame to thee.
He was the wretched'st thing when he was yong,
So long a growing, and so leyfuely,
That if his rule were true, he should be gracious.

Ter. And so no doubt he is, my gracious Madam.

Dut. I hope he is, but yet let Mothers doubt.

Ter. Now by my troth, if I had beene remembred,
I could have given my Vnkle Grace, a flout,
To touch his growth, nearer then he toucht mine.

Dut. How my yong Yorke,
I prythee let me heare it.

Ter. Marry (they say) my Vnkle grew so fast,
That he could gnaw a crust at two hours old,
'Twas full two yeares ere I could get a tooth.

Grandam, this would haue beene a byting Ieft.

Dut. I prythee pretty Yorke, who told thee this?

Ter. Grandam, his Nurle.

Dut. His Nurle? why she was dead ere I was borne.

Ter. If'twere not she, I cannot tell who told me.

Qu. A parlous Boygo too, you are too shrew'd.

Dut. Good Madam, be not angry with the Childe.

Qu. Pitchers haue cares.

Enter a Messenger.

Arch. Here comes a Mellenger: What Newes?

Mes. Such newes my Lord, as greeues me to report.

Qu. How doth the Prince?

Mes. Well Madam, and in health.

Dut. What is thy Newes?

Mes. Lord Riuers, and Lord Grey,
Are sent to Pomfret, and with them, Sir Thomas Vaughan, Prisoners.

Dut. Who hath committed them?

Mes. The mighty Dukes, Gloufer and Buckingham.

Arch. For what offence?

Mes. The fumme of all I can, I haue disclos'd:
Why, or for what, the Nobles were committed,
Is all unknoonne to me, my gracious Lord.

Qu. Aye me! I see the ruine of my Houfe:
The Tyger now hath feiz'd the gentle Hinde,
Insulting Tiranny beginsse to Iutt
Upon the innocent and aweleffe Throne:
Welcome Destruction, Blood, and Massacre,
I fee (as in a Map) the end of all.

Dut. Accurred, and vnquiet wrangling dayes,
How many of you have mine eyes beheld?
My Husband lost his life, to get the Crowne,
And often vp and downe my fonnes were toft
For me to joy, and wepe, their gaine and loffe.
And being feated, and Demeflichke broyles
Cleane ouer-blowne, themselues the Conquerors,
Make warre vpon themselues, Brother to Brother;
Blood to blood, selfe against selfe : O preposterous
And franticke outrage, end thy damned spleeene,
Or let me dye, to looke on earth no more.

Qu. Come, come my Boy, we will to Sanctuary.

Madam, farwell.

Dut. Stay, I will go with you.

Qu. You have no caufe.

Arch. My gracious Lady go,
And thether bear your Treasure and your Goode,
For my part, Ile refigne ynto your Grace
The Seale I keepe, and fo betide to me,
As well I tender you, and all of yours.

Go, Ile conduct you to the Sanctuary.

Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

The Trumpets found.

Enter young Prince, the Duke of Gloufter, and Buckingham,
Lord Cardinall, with others.

Buc. Welcome sweete Prince to London,
To your Chamber.

Rich. Welcome deere Cosin, my thoughts Soueraign
The wearie way hath made you Mellaucholy.

Prin. No Vnkle, but our croffes on the way,
Haue made it tedious, wearisome, and heauie.
I want more Vnkle heere to welcome me.

Rich. Sweet Prince, the unexpec'ted vertue of your yeers
Hath not yet diu'd into the Worlds deceipt:
No more can you distinguishe of a man,
Then of his outward shew, which God he knowes,
Seldome or neuer lumpeth with the heart.
Those Vnkle which you want, were dangerous:
Your Grace attended to their Sugred words,
But look'd not on the paylon of their hearts:
God keepe you from them, and from fuch false Friends.

Prin. God keepe me from falle Friends,
But they were none.

Rich. My Lord, the Maior of London comes to greet you.

Enter Lord Maior.

La. Maior. God bleffe your Grace, with health and happie dayes.

Prin. I thanke you, good my Lord, and thank you all:

Enter Lord Maior.
I thought my Mother, and my Brother York.
Would long, ere this, have met vs on the way.
Fie, what a Slug in Hastings, that he comes not
To tell vs, whether they will come, or no.

Enter Lord Hastings.

Buck. And in good time, here comes the sweating Lord.
Prince. Welcome, my Lord: what, will our Mother come?
Haf. On what occasion God he knowes, not I.
The Queen e your Mother, and your Brother York.
Haue taken Sanctuarie: The tender Prince
Would faine have come with me, to meet your Grace,
But by his Mother was perforce with-held.
Buck. Fie, fie, what an indirec and peevish course
Is this of hers? Lord Cardinall, will your Grace
Perfide the Queene, to send the Duke of Yorke
Vnto his Princeely Brother presently?
If the denie, Lord Hastings goe with him,
And from her jealous Armes pluck him perforce.
Card. My Lord of Buckingham, if weake Oratorie
Can from his Mother winne the Duke of Yorke,
Anon expext him here: but if she be obdurate
To milde entreaties, God forbid
We should infringe the holy Priuiledge
Of blesed Sanctuarie: not for all this Land,
Would I be guiltie of so great a fault.
Buck. You are too fenecelesse obtinate, my Lord,
Too ceremonious, and traditionall.
Weigh it but with the grovelfenee of this Age,
You breake not Sanctuarie, in felling him:
The benefit thereof is alwayes granted
To toffe, whose dealings haue deferu'd the place,
And those who haue the wit to clayme the place:
This Prince hath neyther claym'd it, nor deferu'd it,
And therefore, in mine opinion, cannot haue it.
Then taking him from thence, that is not there,
You breake no Priuiledge, nor Charter there:
Oft haue I heard of Sanctuarie men,
But Sanctuarie children, ne're till now.
Card. My Lord, you shall o're-rule my mind for once.
Come on, Lord Hastings, will you goe with me?
Haf. I goe, my Lord. Exit Cardinall and Hastings.
Prince. Good Lords, make all the speedie haft you may.
Say, Vnckle Gloucester, if our Brother come,
Where shall we soueraine, till our Coronation?
Glo. Where it think'st best vnto your Royall felde.
If I may counsel you, some day or two.
Your Highness shall repose you at the Tower:
Then where you please, and shall be thought most fit
For your health, and recreation.
Prince. I do not like the Tower, of any place
Did Julius Cæsar build that place, my Lord?
Buck. He did, my gracious Lord, begin that place,
Which fince, succeeding Ages haue re-edify'd.
Prince. Is it vpon record? or else reported
Succeduallye from age to age, he built it?
Buck. Vpon record, my gracious Lord.
Prince. But say, my Lord, it were not registred,
Me thinke's the truth should liue from age to age,
As 'twere rety'd to all posteritie,
Euen to the generall ending day.
Glo. So wise, so young, they say doe never live long.
Prince. What say you, Vnckle?
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

York. What will you goe vnto the Tower, my Lord?
Prince. My Lord Protecor will haue it fo.
York. I shall not sleepe in quiet at the Tower.
Glo. Why, what should you feare?
York. Marry, my Vnkle Clarence angry Ghof : My Grandam told me he was murther'd there.
Prince. I feare no Vnckles dead.
Glo. Nor none that live, I hope.
Prince. And if they live, I hope I need not feare. But come my Lord : and with a heauie heart, Thinking on them, goe I vnto the Tower.

A Senet. Exeunt Prince, Yorke, Haslings, and Dorset.

Manet Richard, Buckingham, and Catesby.

Buck. Thineke you, my Lord, this little prating Yorke Was not incendied by his fulble Mother, To taunt and scorn you thus opprobriously?
Glo. No doubt, no doubt: Oh 'tis a perillous Boy, Bold, quicke, ingenious, forward, capable: Hee is all the Mothers, from the top to toe. Buck. Well, let them ret: Come hither Catesby,
Thou art toforme as deepely to effect what we intend,
As clofely to conceal what we impart:
Thou knoweft our reasons vrg'd vpon the way.
What think'ft thou is it not an eafe matter,
To make William Lord Haslings of our minde,
For the infalliment of this Noble Duke
In the Seat Royall of this famous Ile?
Cates. He for his fathers fake so loves the Prince,
That he will not be wonne to ought against him.
Buck. What think'ft thou then of Stanley? Will not hee?
Cates. Hee will doe all in all as Haslings doth.
Buck. Well then, no more but this: Goe gentle Catesby, and as it were farre off,
Sound thou Lord Haslings,
How he doth stand affected to our purpofe,
And summon him to morrow to the Tower,
To fit about the Coronation.
If thou do'ft finde him trable to vs,
Encourage him, and tell him all our reafons:
If he be leade, ycle, cold, unwilling,
Be thou fo too, and fo breake off the talke,
And glue vs notice of his inclination:
For we to morrow hold diuided Councils,
Wherein thy felle ihaft highly be empoy'd.
Rich. Commend me to Lord William: tell him Catesby,
His ancient Knot of dangerous Adverfaries
To morrow are let blood at Pompfret Caffle,
And bid my Lord, for joy of this good newes,
Glue Miltreffe Store one gentle Kiffe the more.
Buck. Good Catesby, goe effect this bufineffe founly.
Cates. My good Lords both, with all the heed I can.
Rich. Shall we heare from you, Catesby, ere we fleepe?
Cates. You shall, my Lord.
Rich. At Crofby Houfe, there fhall you find vs both.

Buck. Now, my Lord,
What shall we do, if wee perceiue
Lord Haslings will not yeld to our Complots?
Rich. Chop off his Head:
Something wee will determine:
And looke when I am King, clame thou of me
The Earldome of Hereford, and all the moueables
Whereof the King, my Brother, was posfeft.

Buck. Ile clame that promeie at your Graces hand.
Rich. And looke to have it yeelded with all kindneffe.
Come, let vs suppe betimes, that afterwards
Wee may digest our complots in some forme.

_Exit._

Scena Secunda.

Enter a Messenger to the Doore of Haslings.

Mejf. My Lord, my Lord.
Haff. Who knockes?
Mejf. One from the Lord Stanley.
Haff. What is't a CLOCKE?
Mejf. Upon the stroke of foure.

Enter Lord Haslings.

Haff. Cannot my Lord Stanley sleepe these tedious Nights?
Mejf. So it appears, by that I haue to fay:
First, he commends him to your Noble felle.
Haff. What then?
Mejf. Then certifies your Lordfhip, that this Night
He dreame, the Bore had rafed off his Helme:
Befides, he fayes there are two Counceulls kept;
And that may be determ'ned at the one,
Which may make you and him to rue at th'other.
Therefore he fends to know your Lordfhips pleafure,
If you will prefently take Horfe with him,
And with all speed poff with him toward the North,
To fhan the danger that his Soul fhoule diuines.
Haff. Goe fellow, goe, returne vnto thy Lord,
Bid him not feare the feperat Counceull:
His Honor and my felle are at the one,
And at the other, is my good friend Catesby;
Where nothing can proceede, that toucheth vs,
Whereof I shall not have intelligence:
Tell him his Fears are fharl, without infance.
And for his Dreams, I wonder hee's fo fimple,
To truft the mock'ry of vaquet fumerus.
To fye the Bore, before the Bore pursues,
Were to incende the Bore to follow vs,
And make purfu'd, where he did mane no chafe.
Goe, bid thy Mafter rife, and come to me,
And we will both together to the Tower,
Where he shall fee the Bore will vfe vs kindly.
Mejf. Ile goe, my Lord, and tell him what you fay.

_Exit._

Cates. Many good morrowes to my Noble Lord.
Haff. Good morrow Catesby, you are early ftring:
What newes, what newes, in this our toft'ring State?
Cates. It is a reeling World indeed, my Lord;
And I beleue will never fland upright,
Till Richard were the Garland of the Realme.
Haff. How weare the Garland?
Doef thou moane the Crowne?
Cates. I, my good Lord.
Haff. Ile haue this Crown of mine cut fr'o my shoulders,
Before Ile fee the Crowne so foule mil-date'd:
But canft thou guffe, that he doth ayme at it?

Cates. 1,
And I in better state then ere I was.

Purf. God hold it, to your Honors good content.

HafT. Gramercie fellow: there, drinke that for me.

Throws him his Purfe.

Purf. I thankye your Honor. Exit Purfuanant.

Enter a Prieff.

Prieff. Well met, my Lord, I am glad to see your Hon-

HafT. I thankye thee, good Sir John, with all my heart.

I am in your debt, for your last Exercise:

Come the next Sabbath, and I will content you.

Prieff. Ile wait vpon your Lordship.

Enter Buckingham.

Buc. What, talking with a Prieff, Lord Chamberlaine?

Your friends at Pomfret, they doe need the Prieff,

Your Honor hath no thiying worke in hand.

HafT. Good faith, and when I met this holy man,

The men you talk of, came into my minde,

What, goe you toward the Tower?

Buc. I doe, my Lord, but long I cannot stay there:

I shall returne before your Lordship, thence.

HafT. Nay like enough, for I stay Dinner there.

Buc. And Supper too, although thou know'st it not.

Come, will you goe?

HafT. Ile wait vpon your Lordship. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Sir Richard Ratcliff, with Halberds, carrying the Nobles to death at Pomfret.

Riuer. Sir Richard Ratcliff, let me tell thee this,
To day shalt thou behold a Schieft die,
For Truth, for Dutie, and for Loyaltie.

Grey. God bleffe the Prince from all the Pack of you,
A Knot you are, of damned Blood-fuckers.

Vaughb. You lie, that shall cry woe for this hereafter.

Rat. Dispatch, the limit of your Lives is out.

Riuer. O Pomfret, Pomfret! O thou bloody Prison!
Fatall and ominous to Noble Peeres:
Within the guiltie Clofure of thy Walls,
Richard the Second here was hackt to death:
And for more flander to thy difmiffle Seat,
Woe gee to thee our guiltie Blood to drinke.
Grey. Now Margarets Curse is faile vpon our Heads,
When thee exclay'd on Hatings, you, and I,
For flanding by, when Richard flab'd her Sonne.

Riuer. Then curs'd thee Richard,
Then cunt'd thee Buckingham,
Then cunt'd thee Hatings. Oh remember God,
To heare her prayer for them, as now for vs:
And for my Sifer, and her Princely Sonnes,
Be satisfy'd, deare God, with our true blood,
Which, as thou know'st, vnaftly must be fipt.

Rat. Make haffe, the houre of death is expiate.

Riuer. Come Grey, come Vaughb, let vs here embrace.
Farewell, vntill we meet againe in Heauen.

Exeunt.
Enter Buckingham, Darby, Hafting, Bishop of Ely, Norfolk, Ratcliffe, Louell, with others, at a Table.

Haft. Now Noble Peers, the cause why we are met, Is to determine of the Coronation: In Gods Name speake, when is the Royall day? Buck. Is all things ready for the Royall time? Darb. It is, and wants but nomination. Ely. To morrow then I judge a happie day. Buck. Who knowes the Lord Protectors mind herein? Who is most inward with the Noble Duke? Ely. Your Grace, we thinke, should soonest know his minde. Buck. We know each others Faces: for our Hearts, He knows no more of mine, then I of yours, Or I of his, my Lord, then you of mine: Lord Haftings, you and he are neere in love. Haft. I thanke his Grace, I know he loves me well: But for his purpose in the Coronation, I have not found him, nor he deliver'd His gracious pleasure any way therein: But you, my Honorable Lords, may name the time, And in the Dukes behalfe Ie give my Voice, Which I presume hee'le take in gentle part.

Enter Gloucester.

Ely. In happy time, here comes the Duke himselfe. Rich. My Noble Lords, and Cousins all, good morrow: I have bene long a sleeper: but I trust, My abstinence doth neglect no great designe, Which by my presence might have beene concluded. Buck. Had you not come vpon your Q, my Lord, William, Lord Haftings, had pronounced your part; I meane your Voice, for Crowning of the King. Rich. Then my Lord Haftings, no man might be bolder, His Lordship knowes me well, and loyes me well. My Lord of Ely, when I was laft in Holborne, I saw good Strawberries in your Garden there, I doe beseech you, lend for some of them. Ely. Mary and will, my Lord, with all my heart. Exit Bishop.

Rich. Cousin of Buckingham, a word with you. Catchby hath founded Haftings in our businesse, And finds the taste Gentleman so hot, That he will loose his Head, ere glue content His Masters Child, as worshipfully he tearems it, Shall loose the Royalte of Englands Throne. Buck. Withdraw your selse a while, Ie goe with you. Exeunt.

Darb. We have not yet set downe this day of Triumph: To morrow, in my judgement, is too suddan, For I my selfe am not so well proviued, As else I would be, were the day prolong'd.

Enter the Bishop of Ely.

Ely. Where is my Lord, the Duke of Glofoter? I have sent for these Strawberries. Ha. His Grace looks cheerfully & smooth this morning, There's some conceit or other likes him well, When that he bids good morrow with fuch spirit. I thinke there's never a man in Chriftendome Can leffer hide his loue, or hate, then hee, For by his Face straight shall you know his Heart. Darb. What of his Heart perceiue you in his Face, By any liuelyhood he shew'd to day? Haft. Mary, that with no man here he is offended: For were he, he had shewn it in his Lookes.

Enter Richard and Buckingham.

Rich. I pray you all, tell me what they do reserve, That doe confirme my death with diuellish Plots Of damned Witchcraft, and that have prevai'd Vpon my Body with their Hellish Charmes. Haft. The tender loue I bearre your Grace, my Lord, Makes me most forward, in this Princely presence, To doome th'Offenders, whosoe're they be: I say, my Lord, they have deceased death. Louell. Then be your eyes the witnesse of their euill. Rich. Ie looke how I am bewitch'd: behold, mine Arme Is like a blased Splaing, wher'd vp: And this is Edwards Wife, that monstrous Witch, Conforted with that Harlot, Strumpet Shrew, That by their Witchcraft thus have marked me. Haft. If they have done this deed, my Noble Lord. Rich. If? thou Protector of this damned Strumpet, Talk'th thou to me of Is? thou art a Traytor, Off with his Head; now by Saint Paul I sweare, I will not dine, vntill I see the same. Louell and Ratcliff, looke that he be done: Exit. The reft that loue me, rife, and follow me.

Manet Louell and Ratcliff, with the Lord Haftings.

Haft. Woe, woe for England, not a whit for me, For I, too fond, might have presented this: Stanley did dreame, the Bore did rowse our Helmes, And I did sorne it, and disdain'd to fye: Three times to day my Foot-Cloth-Horse did tumble, And started, when he look'd vpon the Tower, As loth to beare me to the slaughter-house. O now I need the Priest, that spoke to me: I now repent I told the Pursuivant, As too triumphing, how mine Enemies To day at Pomfret bloody were butcher'd, And I my selse secure, in grace and favour. Oh Margaret, Margaret, now thy beauteous Curfe Is lighted on poore Haftings wretched Head. Ra. Come, come, dispatch, the Duke would be at dinner: Make a short Shrift, he longs to see your Head. Haft. O momentarie grace of mortall men, Which we more hunt for, then the grace of God! Who builds his hope in ayre of your good Lookes, Lues like a drunken Sayler on a Mast, Readie with every Nod to tumble downe, Into the fattall Bowels of the Deepe. Lou. Come, come, dispatch, 'tis bootleffe to exclaime. Haft. O bloody Richards, miserable England, I prophecie the fearfull time to thee, That euer wretched Age hath look'd vpon. Come, lead me to the Block, beare him my Head, They smile at me, who shortly shall be dead. Exeunt.
Enter Richard, and Buckingham, in stately Armour, marvellous ill-favoured.

Richard. Come Cousin,
Canst thou quake, and change thy colour, Morter thy breath in middle of a word, And then again begin, and stop again, As if thou were distraught, and mad with terror?

Buck. Tut, I can counterfeit the deep Tragedian, Speak, and looke backe, and prit on every side, Tremble and start at wagging of a Straw: Intending deepes subtilion, gaitly Lookes Are at my service, like enforced Smiles; And both are ready in their Offices, At any time to grace my Stratagamges.

But what, is Catesby gone?

Ricb. He is, and hee brings the Maior along.

Enter the Maior, and Catesby.

Buck. Lord Maior.

Ricb. Looke to the Draw-Bridge there.

Buck. Hearke, a Drumme.

Ricb. Catesby, o'looke the Walls.

Buck. Lord Maior, the reason we have sent.

Ricb. Look back, defend thee, here are Enemies.

Buck. God and our Innocence defend, and guard vs.

Enter Louell and Ratcliff, with Hasting's Head.

Ricb. Be patient, they are friends Ratscliff, and Louell.

Louell. Here is the Head of that ignoble Traytor, The dangerous and vnsuspected Hasting.

Ricb. So deare I lou'd the man, that I must weep:
I took him for the plainest harmelesse Creature, That breath'd upon the Earth, a Christian.
Made him my Bookie, wherein my Soule recorded The Historie of all her secret thoughts.
So smooth he daw'd his Vice with shew of Vertue, That his apparent open Guilt omitted;
I meane, his Conuersation with Shores Wife,
He liu'd from all attinder of suspecks.

Buck. Well, well, he was the counterfet shetted Traytor That euer liu'd.
Would you imagine, or almost beleue,
Wert not, that by great preueruation
We liue to tell it, that the subtil Traytor
This day had plotted, in the Counsell-Houfe,
To murther me, and my good Lord of Gloffter.

Maior. Had he done so?

Ricb. What? thinke you we are Turkes, or Infidels?
Or that we would, against the forme of Law, Proceed thus rashly in the Villaines death,
But that the extreme perill of the cafe,
The Peace of England, and our Perfons safetie,
Enforc'd vs to this Execution.

Maior. Now faire befall you, he defuer'd his death,
And your good Graces both haue well proceeded,
To warne faire Traytours from the like Attempts.

Buck. I never look'd for better at his hands,
After he once fell in with Mistrefse Shore:
Yet had we not determin'd he should dye,
Vntill your Lordship came to fee his end,
Which now the louing hafe of these our friends,
Something against our meanings, haue prevented:
Becaufe, my Lord, I would haue had you hear
The Traytor speake, and timorous confesse
The manner and the purpoe of his Treaftons:
That you might well have signify'd the fame
Vnto the Citizens, who haply may
Misconfeir vs in him, and wayle his death.

Maior. But, my good Lord, your Grace's words shal fere, As well as I had feene, and heard him speake:
And doe not doubt, right Noble Princes both,
But Ie acquaint our dutious Citizens
With all your luft proceedings in this cafe.

Ricb. And to that end we wish'd your Lordship here,

Tavoid the Cenfures of the carping World.

Buck. Which since you come too late of our intent,
Yet witnesse what you hear we did intend:
And fo, my good Lord Maior, we bid farwell.

Exit Maior.

Ricb. Goe after, after, Cousin Buckingham.
The Maior towards Guild-Hall hyes him in all poete: There, at your meetest vantage of the time,
Inferre the Baffardie of Edwards Children.
Tell them, how Edward put to death a Citizen,
Only for saying, he would make his Sonne
Heire to the Crowne, meaning indeed his Houfe,
Which, by the Signe thereof, was tearmed fo.
Moreuer, vrging his hatefull Luxury,
And beaftall appetit in change of Luft,
Which strech't vs their Servants, Daughters, Wives,
Even where his raging eye, or fauge heart,
Without controll, lufted to make a prey.
 Nay, for a need, thus farre come neere my Perfon:
Tell them, when that my Mother went with Child
Of that inquitate Edward; Noble Yorks,
My Princely Father, then had Warres in France,
And by true computation of the time,
Found, that the Issue was not his begot:
Which well appeared in his Lineaments,
Being nothing like the Noble Duke, my Father:
Yet touch this sparingly, as'twere farre off,
Becaufe, my Lord, you know my Mother lies.

Buck. Doubt not, my Lord, Ie play the Orator,
As if the Golden Fee, for which I plead,
Were for my selfe: and fo, my Lord,adu'e.

Ricb. If you thiue wel, bring them to Baynards Caffe,
Where you shall finde me well accompanied
With reverend Fathers, and well-learned Bishops.

Buck. I goe, and towards three or foure a Clocke
Looke for the Newes that the Guild-Hall affords.

Exit Buckingham.

Ricb. Goe Louell with all speed to Doctor Shaw,
Goe thou to Fryer Pewker, bid them both
Meet me within this house at Baynards Caffe.

Exit.

Ricb. Now will I goe to take some priue order;
To draw the Brats of Clarence out of fight,
And to give order, that no manner perfon
Have any time recours into the Princes.

Exit.

Enter a Scriuener.

Scr. Here is the Indictment of the good Lord Hasting,
Which in a fet Hand fairely is engrofs'd,
That it may be to day read o're in Paules.
And marke how well the sequell hangs together:
Eleuen hours I haue spent to write it ouer,
For yeter-night by Catesby was it sent me,
The Precedent was full as long a doing,
And yet within these five hours Hasting's liu'd,
Vntainted, vnxexamind, free, at libertie.

Here's a good World the while.
Who is so groffe, that cannot see this palpable deuise?
Yet
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Yet who so bold, but fayes he sees it not?
Bad is the World, and all will come to nought,
When such ill dealing must be seen in thought. Exit.

Enter Richard and Buckingham at severall Doors.

Rich. How now, how now, what fay the Citizens?
Buck. Now by the holy Mother of our Lord,
The Citizens are mum, lye not a word.
Rich. Toucht you the Bafhird of Edwards Children?
Buck. I did, with his Contraft with Lady Lucy,
And his Contraft by Deputie in Frank,
Th'vnfatiate greediness of his defire,
And his enforcement of the Cite Wius,
His Tyrannie for Trifes, his owne Bafhirdie,
As being got, your Father then in France,
And his refemblance, being not like the Duke.
Withall, I did inferre your Lineaments,
Being the right Idea of your Father,
Both in your forme, and Noblenesse of Minde:
Layd open all your Victories in Scotland,
Your Discipline in Warre, Wildome in Peace,
Your Bountie, Vertue, faire Humilitie:
Indeed, left nothing fittting for your purpofe,
Vntoucht, or feightly handled in difcourfe.
And when my Oratorie drew toward end,
I bid them that did love their Countries good,
Cry, God faue Richard, Englands Royall King.

Rich. And did they so?

Buck. No, fo God helpe me, they fpake not a word,
But like dumbe Statues, or breathing Stones,
Star'd each on other, and look'd deadly pale:
Which when I faw, I reprehended them,
And ask'd the Maior, what meant this wilfull fILENCE?
His anfwer was, the people were not vfed
To be fpoke to, but by the Recorder.
Then he was vrg'd to tell my Tale again:
Thus fayth the Duke, thus hath the Duke inferr'd,
But nothing fpoke, in warrant from himfelfe.
When he had done, fome followers of mine owne,
At lower end of the Hall, hurld vp their Caps,
And fome tenne voyces cry'd, God faue King Richard:
And thus I tooke the vantage of thofe few.
Thankes gentle Citizens, and friends, quoth I,
This generall applause, and chearfull shout,
Argues your wildome, and your loue to Richard:
And even here brake off, and came away.

Rich. What tongue-leafle Blockes were they,
Would they not fpake?
Will not the Maior then, and his Brethren, come?

Buck. The Maior is here at hand: intend fome feare,
Be not you fpoke with, but by mightie fuit:
And looke you get a Prayer-Booke in your hand,
And fland betwixte two Church-men, good my Lord,
For on that ground Ile make a holy Defcant:
And be not eafily wonne to our requeris,
Play the Maidis party, flill anfwer may, and take it.

Rich. I goe: and if you plead as well for them,
As I can fay nay to thee for my felfe,
No doubt we bring it to a happe llufue.

Buck. Go, go vp to the Leads, the Lord Maior knocks.

Enter the Maior, and Citizens.

Welcome, my Lord, I dance attendance here,
I thinkke the Duke will not be fpoke withall.

Enter Catesby.

Buck. Now Catesby, what fayes your Lord to my requerest?

Catesby. He doth entreat your Grace, my Noble Lord,
To visit him to morrow, or next day:
He is within, with two right reverend Fathers,
Diuinely bent to Meditation,
And in no Worldly suits would he be mou'd,
To draw him from his holy Exercife.

Buck. Returne, good Catesby, to the gracious Duke,
Tell him, my felfe, the Maior and Aldermen,
In deepe deigines, in matter of great moment,
No leffe importing then our generall good,
Are come to have fome conference with his Grace.

Catesby. Ile signifie fo much unto him ftraight. Exit.

Buck. Ah ha, my Lord, this Prince is not an Edward,
He is not lulling on a lewd Loue-Bed,
But on his Knees, at Meditation:
Not dallying with a Brace of Curitzans,
But meditating with two deepe Diuines:
Not feeping, to engroffe his idle Body,
But praying to enrich his wardfull Soule.
Happe he were England, would this vertuous Prince
Take on his Grace the Soueraignct thereof.
But sure I feare we fhalt not winne him to it.

Maior. Marry God defend his Grace should fay vs

Buck. I feare he will: here Catesby comes again.

Enter Catesby.

Now Catesby, what fayes his Grace?

Catesby. He wonders to what end you have assembled
Such troopes of Citizens, to come to him,
His Grace not being warn'd thereof before:
He feares, my Lord, you meane no good to him:

Buck. Sorry I am, my Noble Cousin should
Suspfe me, that I meant no good to him:
By Heauen, we come to him in perfitt loue,
And fo once more returne, and tell his Grace. Exit.

When holy and devout Religious men
Are at their Beades, 'tis much to draw them thence,
So fweet is zealous Contemplation.

Enter Richard afoft, betwene two Bifhops.

Maior. See where his Grace fands, twene two Clergie men.

Buck. Two Props of Vertue, for a Chriftian Prince,
To fay him from the fall of Vanitie:
And see a Booke of Prayer in his hand,
True Ornaments to know a holy man.
Famous Plantagenets, moft gracious Prince,
Lend favourable eare to our requeris,
And pardon vs the interruption
Of thy Deuotion, and right Chriftian Zeale.

Rich. My Lord, there needes no fuch Apologie:
I doe behoove your Grace to pardon me,
Who earneth in the fernce of my God,
Deferr'd the vifitation of my friends,
But leaving this, what is your Graces pleafure?

Buck. Euen that (I hope) which pleafeth God aboue,
And all good men, of this vn gouern'd Ile.

Rich. I doe fufepe I have done fome offence,
That feemes difgracious in the Cities eye,
And that you come to reprehend my ignorance.
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Buck. You have, my Lord: Would it might please your Grace, On our entreaties, to amend your fault.

Buck. Know then, it is your fault, that you refuse The Supreme Seat, the Throne Maiestickally, The Sceptred Office of your Ancestors, Your State of Fortune, and your Deaw of Birth, The Lineall Glory of your Royall Houfe, To the corruption of a blinfhit Stock;

Whiles in the mildneffe of your sleepy thoughts, Which here we wake to our Countries good, The Noble Lie doth want his proper Limmes: His Face defec'd with scarres of Infamie, His Royall Stock graffit with ignoble Plants, And almost fhoilded in the fwallowing Gulfe Of darke Forgetfulness, and deep Obluition. Which to recure, we heartily sollicite Your gracious felfe to take on you the charge And Kingly Government of this your Land: Not as Protector, Steward, Substitute, Or lowly Factor, for anothers gaine; But as facefullie, from Blood to Blood, Your Right of Birth, your Empery, your owne. For this, comforted with the Citizens, Your very Worshipfull and loyng friends, And by their vehement indigation, In this luft Caufe come I to move your Grace, Rich. I cannot tell, if to depart in silence, Or bitterly to speake in your reproofs, Beft fitthe my Degree, or your Condition. If not to anfwer, you might haply thinke, Tongue-ty'd Ambition, not replying, yeelded To beare the Golden Yoake of Sovereignty, Which fondly you would here impose on me. If to reproue you for this fult of yours, So feafon'd with your faithfull love to me, Then on the other fide I check'd my friends. Therefore to speake, and to avoid the fift, And then in speaking, not to incure the laft, Definituely thus I anfwer you.

Your loue deferves my thankes, but my defert Vnmeritall, fhippnes your high requeft. Firft, if all Obfacles were cut away, And that my Path were even to the Crowne, As the ripe Reuenue, and due of Birth: Yet fo much is my pouerite of spirit, So mightle, and fo manie my defects, That I would rather hide me from your Greatneffe, Being a Barke to brooke no mightle Sea; Then in my Greatneffe couet to be hid, And in the vapour of my Glory fmothder'd. But God be thank'd, there is no need of me, And much I need to helpe you, were there need: The Royall Tree hath left vs Royall Fruit, Which mellow'd by the fealing howres of time, Will well become the Seat of Maiestie, And make (no doubt) vs happy by his Reigne. On him I lay that, you would lay on me, The Right and Fortune of his happie Starres, Which God defend that I should wring from him.

Buck. My Lord, this argues Confidence in your Grace, But the refpeets thereof are nice, and triuall, All circumftances well confidered. You fay, that Edward is your Brothers Sonne, So fay we too, but not by Edwards Wife:

For firft was he contracd to Lady Lucie, Your Mother lies a Witneffe to his Vow; And afterward by subftitute betroth'd To Bona, Siter to the King of France. Thefe both put off, a poore Petitioner, A Care-crass'd Mother to a many Sonnes, A Beaulie-waining, and diftreffed Widow, Even in the after-noone of her beft dayes, Made prize and purchase of his wonton Eye, Seduc'd the pich, and height of his degree, To bafe defelenfon, and loath'd Bigamie. By her, in his unlawfull Bed, he got This Edward, whom our Manners call the Prince. More bitterly could I expofulate, Saue that for reverence to some alue, I give a sparing limit to my Tongue. Then good, my Lord, take to your Royall felfe This proffer'd benefit of Dignific: If not to blesse vs and the Land withall, Yet to draw forth your Noble Anceftrie From the corruption of abufing times, Ver a Lineall true derived course. Maior. Do good my Lord, your Citizens entreat you. Buck. Refufe not, mightie Lord, this proffer'd love. Cateab. O make them joyfull, grant their lawfull suit, Rich. Alas, why would you heap this Care on me? I am vnfit for State, and Maiestie: I doe beholde you take it not amiffe, I cannot, nor I will not yeeld to you.

Buck. If you refufe it, as in loue and zeale, Loth to depefe the Child, your Brothers Sonne, As we well know your tenderneffe of heart, And gentle, kinde, effeminate remorse, Which we have noted in you to your Kindred, And ealley indee to all Eftates: Yet know, where you accept our fult, or no, Your Brothers Sonne shall never reigne our King, But we will plant some other in the Throne, To the disgrace and downe-fall of your Houfe: And in this resolution here we leaue you. Come Citizens, we will entreat no more. Exeunt. Cateab. Call him againe, sweet Prince, accept their fuit:

If you denie them, all the Land will rue it.

Rich. Will you enforce me to a world of Cares, Call them againe, I am not made of Stones, But penetrable to your kinde entreaities, Albeit agaft my Confidence and my Soule, Enter Buckingham, and the ref. Cousin of Buckingham, and fage graue men, Since you will buckle fortune on my back, To beare her burthen, where I will or no. I muft have patience to endure the Load: But if black Scandal, or foule-fac'd Reproach, Attend the fquall of your Imposition, Your meere enforcement shall acquaintance me From all the impure blots and faynes thereof; For God doth know, and you may partly fee, How farre I am from the defire of this.

Maior. God bleffe your Grace, we fee it, and will say it. Rich. In saying fo, you shall but say the truth. Buck. Then I salute you with this Royall Title, Long live King Richard, Englands worthy King. All. Amen.

Buck. To morrow may it please you to be Crown'd.

Rich. Even when you please, for you will have it fo.
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Back. To morrow then we will attend your Grace, And so most joyfully we take our leave. Rich. Come, let us to our holy Works again. Farewell my Cousins, farewell gentle friends. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter the Queen, Anne Duchess of Gloucester, the Duchess of York, and Marguerite Dorset.

Anne. God give your Graces both, a happy And a joyfull time of day.

Qu. As much to you, good Sifer; whither away? Anne. No farther then the Tower, and as I guess, Upon the like deuition as your selues, To gratulate the gentle Princes there.

Qu. Kind Sifer thankes, wee'le enter all together:

Enter the Lieutenant.

And in good time, here the Lieutenant comes. Master Lieutenant, pray you, by your levee, How doth the Prince, and my young Sonne of York? Lieu. Right well, deare Madame: by your patience, I may not suffer you to visit them, The King hath strictly charg'd the contrary.

Qu. The King? who's that?

Lieu. I mean, the Lord Protector.

Qu. The Lord protect him from that Kingly Title. Hath he fet bounds betwene their love, and me? I am their Mother, who shal barre me from them?

Duch. York. I am their Fathers Mother, I will see them.

Anne. Their Aunt I am in law, in love their Mother: Then bring me to their fights, Ie beare thy blame, And take the Office from thee, on my peril.

Lieu. No, Madame, no; I may not leave it so: I am bound by Oath, and therefore pardon me. Exit Lieutenant.

Enter Stanley.

Stanley. Let me but meet you Ladies one howre hence, And Ile salute your Grace of York as Mother, And reuerend looker on of two faire Queens. Come Madame, you must straight to Wemminster, There to be crowned Richards Royal Queene.

Qu. Ah, cut my Lance afunder, That my pety heart may have some scope to beat, Or else I swoone with this dead-killing newes.

Anne. Delightfull tidings, O vnpleaung newes.

Dorf. Be of good cheare: Mother, how fares your Grace?

Qu. O Dorset, speake not to me, get thee gone, Death and Destruction dogges thee at thy heels, Thy Mothers Name is ominous to Children.
Scena Secunda.

Sound a Sennet. Enter Richard in pomp, Buckingham, Catesby, Ratcliff, Leuel.

Rich. Stand all apart. Cousin of Buckingham.

Buck. My gracious Sovereigne.

Rich. Give me thy hand. Sound. Thus high, by thy advice, and thy assistance, Is King RichardSTATED: But shall we wear these Glories for a day? Or shall they last, and we rejoice in them?

Buck. Still live they, and for ever let them last.

Rich. Ah Buckingham, now doe I play the Touch.

To trie if thou be currant Gold indeed:

Young Edward lives, think now what I would speake.

Buck. Say on my louing Lord.

Rich. Why Buckingham, I say I would be King.

Buck. Why be you are, my thrice-renowned Lord.

Buck. True, Noble Prince.

Rich. O bitter consequence!

That Edward still should live true Noble Prince.

Cousin, thou wafst not wont to be so dull.

Shall I be plainly? I wish the Baitards dead,

And I would have it suddenly perform’d:

What say’t thou now? speake suddenly, be briefe.

Buck. Your Grace may doe your pleasure.

Rich. Tut, tut, thou art all Ice, thy kindneffe freezes:

Say, hau’st I thy consent, that they shall dye?

Buck. Give me some little breath, some pawfe, deare Lord,

Before I politly speake in this; I will refole you herein prefently. Exit Buck.

Catesby. The King is angry, fee he gnaues his Lippe.

Rich. I will conuerfe with Iron-witted Fool, And varefpectus Boys: none are for me,

That looke into me with confiderate eyes,

High-reaching Buckingham grows circumfpeck.

Boy.

Page. My Lord.

Rich. Know’st thou not any, whom corrupting Gold

Will tempt into a clofe exploit of Death?

Page. I know a discontented Gentleman,

Whose humble means match not his haughtie spirit:

Gold were as good as twentie Orators,

And will (no doubt) tempt him to any thing.

Rich. What is his Name?

Page. His Name, my Lord, is Tyrrell.

Rich. I partly know the man: goe call him hither,

Boy. Exit.

The deepe revoluing wittie Buckingham,

No more shall be the neighbor to my counsaille.

Hath he fo long held out with me, vntyrd,

And stops he now for breath? Well, be it fo.

Enter Stanley.

How now, Lord Stanley, what’s the newes?

Stanley. Know my louing Lord, the Marquess Dorset

As I heare, is fled to Richmond,

In the parts where he abides.

Rich. Come hither Catesby, rumor it abroad,

That Anne my Wife is very grievous sick.

I will take order for her keeping close.

Inquire me out some meane poore Gentleman,

Whom I will marry straight to Clarence Daughter:

The Boy is foolish, and I feare not him.

Looke how thou dream’st: I say againe, give out,

That Anne, my Queene, is sicke, and like to dye.

About it, for it stands me much vpon

To stop all hopes, whose growth may dammage me.

I must be marry’d to my Brothers Daughter,

Or else my Kingdome stands on brittle Glasse:

Murther her Brothers, and then marry her,

Vncertaine way of gains. But I am in

So farre in blood, that finne will pluck on finne,

Tearre-falling Pittie dwells not in this Eye.

Enter Tyrrel.

Is thy Name Tyrrel?

Tyr. James Tyrrel, and your most obedient subject.

Rich. Art thou indeed?

Tyr. Prone me, my gracious Lord.

Rich. Dar’st thou refolute to kill a friend of mine?

Tyr. Pleafe you:

But I had rather kill two enemies.

Rich. Why then thou haft it: two deepe enemies,

Foes to my Reft, and my sweet sleepes disturbers,

Are they that I would have thee deale vpon

Tyrrel, I mean thee Baftards in the Tower.

Tyr. Let me have open meanes to come to them,

And foone He rid you from the feare of them.

Rich. Thou fing’st sweet Musique:

Harke, come hither Tyrrel,

Goe by this token: rise, and lend thine Eare, Whispers.

There is no more but: say it is done,

And I will loue thee, and preferre thee for it.

Tyr. I will dispatch it straight. Exit.

Enter Buckingham.

Buck. My Lord, I have consider’d in my mind,

The late requelt that you did found me in.

Rich. Well, let that refit: Dorset is fled to Richmond.

Buck. I hear the newes, my Lord.

Rich. Stanley, he is your Wifes Sonne: well, looke vnto it.

Buck. My Lord, I clayme the gift, my due by promife,

For which your Honor and your Faith is pown’d,

Th’Earledome of Hertford, and the moueables,

Which you haue promis’d I shall poiffe.

Rich. Stanley looke to your Wife: if she comow.

Letters to Richmond, you shall answere it.

- Buck. What fayes your Highnesse to my iuft requelt?

Rich. I doe remembe me, Henry the Sixt

Did prophecie, that Richmond should be King,

When Richmond was a little peevish Boy.

A King perhaps.

Buck. May it please you to refole me in my fuit.

Rich. Thou troublest me, I am not in the vaine. Exit.

Buck. And is it thus? repayses he my deepe servisue

With fuch contempt? made I him King for this?

O let me thinke on Haftings, and be gone.

To Brecnock, while my fearefull Head is on. Exit.

Enter Tyrrel.

Tyr. The tyrannous and bloodie Act is done,

The moft arch deed of pittious maffacre
That ever yet this Land was guilty of:
Dighton and Forrest, who I did suborne
To do this piece of ruthfull Butchery,
Albeit they were sitted Villaines, bloody Dogges,
Melted with tenderneffe, and milde compassion,
Welpe like to Children, in their deaths tab Story.
O thus (quoth Dighton) lay the gentle Babes:
Thus, thus (quoth Forrest) girdling one another
Within their Alabaster innocent Armes:
Their lips were foure red Roses on a filake,
And in their Summer Beauty kilt each other.
A Booke of Prayers on their pillow lay,
Which one (quoth Forrest) almost chang'd my minde:
But oh the Duell, there the Villaine flopt:
When Dighton thus told on, we mintered
The most replenished sweet worke of Nature,
That from the prime Creation ere she framed,
Hence both are gone with Confidence and Remorse,
They could not speake, and so I left them both,
To bear this tydings to the bloody King.

Enter Richard.

And heere he comes. All health my Soueraigne Lord.
Tir. If to have done the thing you gave in charge,
Beget your happinesse, be happy then,
For it is done.
Rich. But did it thou see them dead.
Tir. I did my Lord.
Rich. And buried gentle Tirrell.
Tir. The Chaplain of the Tower hath buried them,
But where (to say the truth) I do not know.
Rich. Come to me Tirrell soone, and after Supper,
When thou shalt tell the proceisse of their death.
Meane time, but thinke how I may do the good,
And be inheritor of thy defire.
Farewell till then.
Tir. I humbly take my leave.
Rich. The Sonne of Clarence haue I pent vp close,
His daughter meanly haue I matcht in marriage,
The Sonnes of Edward sleepe in Abruams bosome,
And Anne my wife hath bid this world good night,
Now for I know the Britaine Richmond aymes
At yong Elisabeth my brothers daughter,
And by that knot lookes proudly on the Crowne,
To her go I, a lolly thrilling wooer.

Enter Ratcliffe.

Rat. My Lord.
Rich. Good or bad newes, that thou com't in so bluntly?
Rat. Bad news my Lord, Meurton is fled to Richmond,
And Buckingham backerd with the hardy Welfmen
Is in the field, and sill his power encreaseth.
Rich. Ely with Richmond troubles me more neere,
Then Buckingham and his raffe leuied Strength.
Come, I have learn'd, that fearfull comming.
Is leden ferulor to dull delay.
Delay les impotent and Smale-pac'd Beggery:
Then fiecle expedition be my wing,
loues Mercury, and Herald for a King:
Go muter men: My counfaile is my Sheeld,
We must be breefe, when Traitors braue the Field.
Exeunt.
Prayes on the issue of his Mothers body,
And makes her Pue-fellow with others none.
  Dut. Oh Harries wife, triumph not in my woes:
  God witnewse with me, I haue wept for thine.
  Mar. Beare with me: I am hungry for reuenge,
  And now I cloy me with beholding it.
  Thy Edward he is dead, that kill'd my Edward,
The other Edward dead, to quit my Edward;
Yong Yorke, he is but boote, because both they Matcht not the high perfection of my loffe.
  Thy Clarence he is dead, that stab'd my Edward,
  And the beholders of this fraunkie play,
  Th'adulterate Hafings, Riuers, Vaughan, Gray,
  Vntimely smother'd in their dusky Graues.
Richard yet liues, Heis blacke Intelligencer,
Onely refer'd their Factor, to buy foule,
  And lend them thither. But at hand, at hand,
  Infues his pitious and vnpritty end.
Earth gaping, Hell burnes, Fiends roare, Saints pray,
T o have him sodainly coney'd from hence:
  Cancell his bond of life, deere God I pray,
That may liue and flye, The Dogge is dead.
  Qu. O thou didst prophesie, the time would come,
  That I should wish for thee to helpe me curfe
  That bottell'd Spider, that foule bunch-back'd Toad.
  Mar. I call'd thee then, vaine flouris of my fortunes:
  I call'd thee then, poore Shadow, painted Queen,
The presentation of but what I was;
The flattering Index of a direfull Pageant;
  One head'd a high, to be hurld downe below:
  A Mother oneley mockt with two faire Babes;
  A dreaume of what thou waft, a garisht Flagge
To be the ayme of euery dangerous Shot;
  A signe of Dignity, a Breath, a Bubble;
  A Queene in icke, onely to fill the Scene.
Where is thy Husband now? Where be thy Brothers?
Where be thy two Sonnes? Wherein doft thou Joy?
  Who fues, and kneesse, and fayes, God faue the Queene?
  Where be the bending Peere that flatter'd thee?
Where be the thronging Troopes that followed thee?
  Decline all this, and fea what now thou art.
For happy Wife, a moft distrefsed Widdow:
  For joyfull Mother, one that wailes the name:
  For one being fued too, one that humble fues:
  For Queene, a very Caytiffe, crown'd with care:
  For the that scorn'd at me, now scorn'd of me:
  For the being feared of all, now fearing one:
  For the commanding all, obedy of none.
Thus hath the courfe of Iuffice whil'd about,
  And left thee but a very prey to time,
  Having no more but Thought of what thou waft.
To torture thee the more, being what thou art,
  Thou didst vsurpe my place, and doft thou not
Vsurpe the luft proportion of my Sorrow?
  Now thy proud Necke,耙es halfe my burrende' yoke,
  From which, even heere I fip my wearied head,
  And leue the burren of it all, on thee.
  Farwell Yorke wife, and Queene of fad mischance,
These English woes, shall make me fmile in France.
  Qu. O thou well skill'd in Curfes, thy a-weile,
  And teach me how to curfe mine enemies.
  Mar. Forbear to fleepe the night, and fait the day:
  Compare dead happinnes, with livyng wo:
  Thynke that thy Babes were sweeter then they were,
  And he that flew them fowler then he is:
  Bett'ring thy loffe, makes the bad caufer worr,
The Life and Death of Richard the Third. 197

Rich. You speake too bitterly.
Dut. Hear me a word:
For I shall neuer speake to thee againe.
Rich. So.
Dut. Either thou wilt dye, by Gods just ordinance
Ere from this warre thou turne a Conqueror:
Or I with griefe and extreme Age shall perish,
And neuer more behold thy face againe.
Therefore take with thee my most greuous Curfe,
Which in the day of Battell trye thee more
Then all the compleat Armour that thou warft.
My Prayers on the aduerse party flie,
And there the little foules of Edward Children,
Whisper the Spirits of thine Enemies,
And promife them Succeffe and Victory:
Bloody thou art, bloody will be thy end:
Shame ferues thy life, and doth thy death attend. Exit.
Qu. Though farre more caufe, yet much leffe Spirit to curfe
Abides in me, I say Amen to her.
Rich. Stay Madam, I must talke a word with you.
Qu. I have no more fones of the Royall Blood
For thee to flaughter. For my Daughters (Richard)
They shall be praying Nunnes, not weeping Queens:
And therefore leuell not to hit their lines.
Rich. You have a daughter call'd Elisabeth,
Vertuous and Faire, Royall and Gracious?
Qu. And must fhe dye for this? O let her live,
And Ile corrupt her Manners, faine her Beauty,
Slander my Selfe, as fale to Edward's bed:
Throw over her the vaile of Infamy,
So she may live vncafe'd of bleeding flaughter,
I will confede fhe was not Edward's daughter.
Rich. Wrong not her Byrth, fhe is a Royall Princesse.
Qu. To fave her life, Ile fay fhe is not fò.
Rich. Her life is fafe onely in her byrth.
Qu. And onely in that fafety, dyed her Brothers.
Rich. Loe at their Birth, good faries were oppofite.
Qu. No, to their lines, ill friends were contrary.
Rich! All vnnaughted is the doome of Deftiny.
Qu. True: when auoyed grace makes Deftiny.

My Babes were deflin'd to a fairer death,
If grace had bleft thee with a fairer life.
Rich. You speake as if that I had flaine my Cofins?
Qu. Cofins indeed, and by their Vnckle couzend,
Of Comfort, Kingdome, Kindred, Freedom, Life,
Whole hand fouer lanch'd their tender hearts,
Thy head (all indirectly) guee direction.
No doubt the murd'rous Knife was dull and blunt,
Till it was whetted on thy fHONE-hard heart,
To reuell in the Intrails of my Lambes.
But that still vfe of greefe, makes wilde greefe tame,
My tongue should to thy eares not name my Boyes,
Till that my Nayles were anchor'd in thine eyes:
And I in fuch a deprate Bay of death,
Like a poore Barke, of failes and tackling reft,
Rush all to peeces on thy Rocke bofome.
Rich. Madam, fo thrue I in my enterprise
And dangerous fucceffe of bloody warres,
As I intend more good to you and yours,
Then euer you and yours by me were harm'd.
Qu. What good is couer'd with the face of heaven,
To be difcouered, that can do me good.
Rich. Th'advancement of your children, gentle Lady
Qu. Vp to fome Scaffold, there to looke their heads.
Rich. Vnto the dignity and height of Fortune,
The high Imperial Type of this earths glory.

Qu. Flatter my forrow with report of it:
Tell me, what State, what Dignity, what Honor,
Canst thou demife to any child of mine.
Rich. Even all I have; I, and my felfe and all,
Will I withall inow a child of thine:
So in the Lethe of thy angry foule,
Thou drowne the sad remembrance of thofe wrongs,
Which thou fuppofeft I have done to thee.
Qu. Be breefe, leaft that the proceffe of thy kindneffe
Laft longer telling then thy kindneffe date.
Rich. Then know,
That from my Soule, I love thy Daughter.
Qu. My daughters Mother thinkes it with her foule.
Rich. What do you thinke?
Qu. That thou doft loue my daughter from thy soule
So from thy Soules love dideft thou love her Brothers,
And from my hearts loue, I do thanke thee for it.
Rich. Be not fo hafly to confound my meaning:
I meane that with my Soule I love thy daughter,
And do intend to make her Queene of England.
Qu. Well then, who doft ye meanall be her King.
Rich. Even he that makes her Queene:
Who elfe should bee?
Qu. What, thou?
Rich. Even fo: How thinke you of it?
Qu. How canft thou wou her?
Rich. That I would learnie of you,
As one being beft acquainted with her humour.
Qu. And wilt thou learnie of me?
Rich. Madam, with all my heart.
Qu. Send to her by the man that flew her Brothers,
A paire of bleeding hearts: theron ingraine
Edward and York, then haply will the wepe:
Therefore prefent to her, as sometime Margaret
Did to thy Father, flep't in Rutland blood,
A hand-kercheefe, which fay to her did dreyne
The purple fappe from her sweet Brothers body,
And bid her wipe her weeping eyes withall.
If this inducement moue her not to loue,
Send her a Letter of thy Noble deeds:
Tell her, thou mad'ft away her Vnckle Clarence,
Her Vnckle Riuers, I (and for her fake)
Mad'ft quicke confeuancy with her good Aunt Anne.
Rich. You mocke me Madam, this the not way
To win your daughter.
Qu. There is no other way,
Vnielle thou could'ft put on some other shape,
And not be Richard, that hath done all this.
Rich. Say that I did all this for loue of her,
Qu. Nay then indeed the cannot choofe but hate thee
Having bought louse, with fuch a bloody foyle.
Rich. Look where what is done, cannot be now amended:
Men flall deale vnadvisedly sometim's,
Which after-hours giues leuyre to repent.
If I did take the Kingdome from your Sonnes,
To make amends, Ile giue it to your daughter:
If I haue kill'd the ifues of your wombe,
To quicken your encrease, I will beget
Mine yftue of your blood, vpon your Daughter:
A Grandams name is little leffe in love,
Then is the doting Title of a Mother:
They are as Children but one flippe below,
Euen of your mettall,of your very blood:
Of all one paine, faue for a night of groanes
Endur'd of her, for whom you bid like forrow.
Your Children were vexation to your youth,
But mine shall be a comfort to your Age,
The loffe you have, is but a Sonne being King,
And by that loffe, your Daughter is made Queene.
I cannot make you what amends I would,
Therefore accept such kindeffe as I can.
Darefet your Sonne, that with a fearfull foule
Leads discontented steps in Foraine foyle,
This faire Alliance, quickly shall call home
To high Promotions, and great Dignity.
The King that calles your beauteous Daughter Wife,
Familiarly shall call thy Darefer, Brother:
Againe shall you be Mother to a King:
And all the Ruines of diuertifull Times,
Repay'd with double Riches of Content.
What we have many goodly days to fee:
The liquid drops of Teares that you haue shed,
Shall come againe, transform'd to Orient Pearle,
Advantaging their Love, with intereft
Often-times double gaine of happinesse.
Go then (my Mother) to thy Daughter go,
Make bold her balthfull yeares, with your experience,
Prepare her cares to heare a Woers Tale.
Put in her tender heart, th'aspiring Flame
Of Golden Soueraignty: Acquaint the Princesse
With the sweet fluent loes of Marriage loyes:
And when this Arme of mine hath chafficed
The petty Rebell, dull-brain'd Buckingham,
Bound with Triumpht Garlands will I come,
And leade thy daughter to a Conquerors bed:
To whom I will retaile my Conquest wonne,
And the shalfe folle Victoreffe, Cæfar Cæsar.
Qu. What were I best to say, her Fathers Brother
Would be her Lord? Or shall I say her Vnkle?
Or he that flew her Brothers, and her Vnkles?
Vnder what Title shall I woo for thee,
That God, the Law, my Honor, and her Loue,
Can make feeme pleasing to her tender yeares?
Rich. Inferre faire Englands peace by this Alliance.
Qu. Which the shal fullowne with all lattind warre.
Rich. Tell her, the King that may command, Intreats.
Qu. That at her hands, which the kings King forbids.
Rich. Say the shall be a High and Mighty Queene.
Qu. To vallie the Title, as her Mother doth.
Rich. Say I will love her everallingly.
Qu. But how long shall that title ever laft?
Rich. Sweetly in force, vnto her faire liues end.
Qu. But how long fairely shall her sweet life laft?
Rich. As long as Heauen and Nature lengthens it.
Qu. As long as Hell and Richard likes of it.
Rich. Say I her Soueraigne, am her Subiect low.
Qu. But the your Subiect, lothes fuch Soueraignty.
Riche. Be eloquent in my behalfe to her.
Qu. An honest tale speads beft, being plainly told.
Rich. Then plainly to her, tell my louing tale.
Qu. Plaine and not honest, is too harfle a fyle.
Rich. Your Reafons are too shallow, and to quicke.
Qu. O no, my Reafons are too deepe and dead,
Too deepe and dead (poore Infants) in their graues,
Harpe on it full laff I till heart-ftrings breaue.
Rich. Harpe not on that string Madam, that is past.
Now by my George, my Garter, and my Crowne.
Qu. Prophan'd, diſhonor'd, and the third vfurpt.
Qu. By nothing, for this is no Oath:
Thy George prophan'd, hath loft his Lordly Honor;
Thy Garter blemish'd, pawn'd his Knightly Vertue;
Thy Crowne vſpur'd, disgrac'd his Kingly Glory:
If something thou would'ſt sweare to be beleu'd,
Sweare then by something, that thou haft not wrong'd.
Rich. Then by my Selfe.
Qu. Thy Selfe, is felle-mifles'd.
Qu. 'Tis full of thy foule wrongs.
Rich. My Fathers death,
Qu. Thy life hath it diſhonor'd.
Rich. Why then, by Heaven.
Qu. Henan's wrong is most of all:
If thou did'ſt feare to breake an Oath with him,
The unity the King my husband made,
Thou had'ſt not broken, nor my Brothers died.
If thou had'ſt fear'd to breake an oath by him,
Th'Imperiall mettall, circling now thy head,
Had grac'd the tender temples of my Child,
And both the Princes had bene breathing heere,
Which now two tender Bed-fellowes for dut,
Thy broken Faith hath made the prey for Wormes.
What can't thou swear by now.
Rich. The time to come.
Qu. That thou haft wronged in the time ore-paft:
For I my selfe have many teares to waff
Hearer after time, for time paft, wrong'd by thee.
The Children liue, whose Fathers thou haft slau'd,
Vngouern'd youth, to waile it with their age:
The Parents liue, whose Children thou haft butcher'd,
Old barren Plants, to waile it with their Age.
Sweare not by time to come, for that thou haft
Mis'd ere vs'd, by times ill- vs'd repaft.
Rich. As I entend to prosper, and repent:
So thrive I in my dangerous Affayres
Of hoUile Armes: My selfe, my selfe confound:
Heauen, and Fortune barre me happy hours:
Day, yeeld me not thy light; nor Night, thy refl.
Be opposite all Planets of good lucke.
To my proceeding, if with deere hearts loue,
Immaculate deuotion,holy thoughts,
I tender not thy beauteous Princeely daughter.
In her, consifts my Happinesse, and thine:
Without her, follows to my felle, and thee;
Her felle, the Land, and many a Chriftian foule,
Death, Defolation, Ruine, and Decay:
It cannot be auoyed, but by this:
It will not be auoyed, but by this.
Therefore deare Mother (I must call you fo)
Be the Attorney of my loue to her:
Plead what I will be, not what I have beene;
Not my deferts, but what I will deferue:
Vrge the Necesiitty and fate of times,
And be not peecilh found,in great Desigues.
Qu. Shall I be tempted of the Diuell thus?
Rich. I, if the Diuell tempt you to do good.
Qu. Shall I forget my felle, to be my felle.
Rich. I, if your felves remembrance wrong your felle.
Qu. Yet thou didst kill my Children.
Rich. But in your daughters wombe I bury them.
Where in that Neif of Spicery they will breed.
Selve of themelvses, to your recomforture.
Qu. Shall I go win my daughter to thy will?
Rich. And be a happy Mother by the deed.
Qu. I go, write to me very shortly,
And you shal vnderstand from me her mind.
Exit Q.
Rich. Beare her my true loues kiffe, and so farewell.
Relenting Foole,and shallow-changing Woman.

How
How now, what news?

Enter Ratcliffe.

Rat. Moot mightie Soueraigne, on the Wetherne Coaft
Rideth a puliant Naue: to our Shores
Throng many doubtfull hollow-hearted friends,
Vnarm'd, and vnrecelu'd to beat them backe.
'Tis thought, that is Richmond their Admirall:
And there they pull, expecting but the side
Of Buckingham, to welcome them afores.
Rich. Some light-foot friend fto to y Duke of Norfolk:
Ratcliffe thy felfe, or Catesby, where is hee?
Cat. Here, my good Lord.
Cat. I will, my Lord, with all convenient hafte.
Rich. Catesby come hither, potfe to Salisbury:
When thou com'st thither: Dull vnmindfull Vlllaine,
Why flay'ft thou here, and go'ft not to the Duke?
Cat. First, mightie Liege, tell me your Hightneffe pleasure,
What from your Grace I shall deliver to him.
Rich. O true, good Catesby, bid him leuie straight
The greatest ftrength and power that he can make,
And meet me suddenly at Salisbury.
Cat. I goe. Exit.
Rich. What, may it please you, shall I doe at Salisbury?
Rich. Why, what would'ft thou doe there, before I goe?
Rich. Your Hightneffe told me I should potfe before.
Rich. My minde is chang'd:

Enter Lord Stanley.

Stanley, what news with you?
Sta. None, good my Liege, to pleafe you with y hearing,
Nor none fo bad, but well may be reported.
Rich. Hoday, a Riddle; neither good nor bad:
What need'ft thou runne fo many miles about,
When thou mayeft tell thy Tale the neareft way?
Once more, what newes?
Stan. Richmond is on the Seas.
Rich. There let him finke, and be the Seas on him,
White-luer'd Runnagate, what doth he there?
Stan. I know not, mightie Soueraigne, but by guffe.
Rich. Well, as you guffe.
Stan. Stir'd vp by Dorjet, Buckingham, and Morton,
He makes for England, here to clayne the Crowne.
Rich. Is the Chayre empipt? is the Sword vnbw'nd?
Is the King dead? or the Empire vnpoppft?
What Heire of York is there alie, but wee?
And who is Englands King, but great Yorkes Heire?
Then tell me, what makes he vpohn the Seas?
Stan. Vnleffe for that, my Liege, I cannot guffe.
Rich. Vnleffe for that he comes to be your Liege,
You cannot guffe wherefore the Welchman comes.
Thou wilt revolt, and flye to him, I feare.
Stan. No, my good Lord, therefore mistrust me not.
Rich. Where is thy Power then, to beat him back?
Where be thy Tenants, and thy followers?
Are they not now vpohn the Wetherne Shore,
Safe-conducing the Rebels from their Shippes?
Stan. No, my good Lord, my friends are in the North.
Rich. Cold friends to me: what do they in the North,
When they should ferue their Soueraigne in the Weft?

Sain. They have not been commanded, mighty King:
Pleafe thee your Malefie to give me leave,
Ile mutter vp my friends, and meet your Grace,
Where, and what time your Malefie shall please.
Rich. I, thou would'ft be gone, to lioyne with Richmond:
But Ile not truft thee.
Sain. Moot mightie Soueraigne,
You have no caufe to hold my frindhip doubtfull,
I neuer was, nor neuer will be false.
Rich. Go, then, and mutter mewbut leave behind
Your Sonne George Stanley: looke your heart be firme,
Or else his Heads affurance is but fraile.
Sain. So deale with him, as I proue true to you.
Exit Stanley.

Enter a Messenger.

Meff. My gracious Soueraigne, now in Devonshire,
As I by frinds am well aduerfted,
Sir Edward Courtnay, and the haughtie Prelate,
Bifhop of Exeter, his elder Brother,
With many moe Confederates, are in Armes.

Enter another Messenger.

Meff. In Kent, my Liege, the Guilfords are in Armes,
And every houre more Competitors
Flocke to the Rebels, and their power growes strong.

Enter another Messenger.

Meff. My Lord, the Armie of great Buckingham.
Rich. Out on ye, Owles, nothing but Songs of Death,
He firkeb him.
There, take thou that, till thou bring better newses.
Meff. The newes I have to tell your Malefie,
Is, that by sudden Floods, and fall of Waters,
Buckingham Armie is difpersd' and scatter'd,
And he himfelfe wanded away alone,
No man knowes whither.
Rich. I cry thee mercy:
There is my Purfe, to cure that Blow of thine.
Hath any well-aduised friend proclaymd
Reward to him that brings the Traitor in?
Meff. Such Proclamation hath been made, my Lord.

Enter another Messenger.

Meff. Sir Thomas Lewell, and Lord Marqueffe Dorset,
'Tis fai'd, my Liege, in Yorkshire are in Armes:
But this good comfort bring I to your Highneffe,
The Britaine Naue is difpersd' by Tenmep.
Richmond in Dorsethire fent out a Boat
Vnto the shore, to aske thofe on the Banks,
If they were his Affitants, yea, or no?
Who anfwervd him, they came from Buckingham,
Vpon his partie: he mistruffing them,
Hoys'd fayle, and made his course againe for Britaine.
Rich. March on, march on, foce we are vp in Armes,
If not to fight with forraigne Enemies,
Yet to beat downe thefe Rebels here at home.

Enter Catesby.

Cat. My Liege, the Duke of Buckingham is taken,
That is the beft newes: that the Earle of Richmond
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Is with a mighty power Landed at Milford,
Is colder Newes, but yet they must be told.

Rich. Away towards Salisbury, while we reason here,
A Royall battle might be wonne and loft:
Some one take order Buckingham be brought To Salisbury, the rest march on with me. Florib. Exeunt

Scena Quarta.

Enter Derby, and Sir Christopher.

Der. Sir Christopher, tell Richmond this from me,
That in the flye of the moost deadly Bore,
My Sonne George Stanley is frankt vp in hold:
If I resolute, off goes yong George head,
The fear of that, holds off my prefent ayde.
So get thee gone: commend me to thy Lord.
Withall say, that the Queene hath heartily consented
He should espousc Elizabeth his daughter.
But tell me, where is Princely Richmond now?

Cbre. At Penbroke, or at Hertford West in Wales.

Der. What men of Name refer to him.

Cbre. Sir Walter Herbert, a renowned Souldier,
Sir Gilbert Talbot, Sir William Stanley,
Oxford, redoubted Pembroke, Sir James Blunt,
And Rice ap Thomas, with a valiant Crew,
And many other of great name and worth:
And towards London do they bend their power,
If by the way they be not fought withall.

Der. Well hye thee to thy Lord: I kiffe his hand,
My Letter will refoule him of my minde.
Farewell. Exeunt

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Buckingham with Halberds, led to Execution.

Buc. Will not King Richard let me speake with him?
Sber. No my good Lord, therefore be patient.

Buc. Hastings, and Edwards children, Gray & Rivers,
Holy King Henry, and thy faire Sonne Edward,
Vaughan, and all that haue miscarried
By vnder-hand corrupted foule injustice,
If that your moody discontented foules,
Do through the clowds behold this prefent houre,
Euen for revenge mocke my defraction,
This is All-foules day (Fellow) is it not?
Sber. It is.

Buc. Why then Al-foules day, is my bodies doomsday
This is the day, which in King Edwards time
I wish'd might fall on me, when I was found
Falle to his Children, and his Wives Allies.
This is the day, wherein I wist to fall
By the falles Faith of him whom moost I trusted.
This, this All-foules day to my fearfull Soule,
Is the determin'd repit of my wrongs:
That high All-feer, which I dallied with,

Hath turn'd my fained Prayer on my head,
And guen in earnest, what I begg'd in left.
Thus doth he force the swords of wicked men
To turre their owne points in their Mastres fomoses.
Thus Margaret's curse falles heavy on my necke:
When he (quoth he) shall split thy heart with forrow,
Remember Margaret was a Propheteisse:
Come leade me Officers to the blocke of flame,
Wrong hath but wrong, and blame the due of blame.
Exeunt Buckingham with Officers.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Richmond, Oxford, Blunt, Herbert, and others, with drum and colours.

Richm. Fellowes in Armes, and my moost louing Friends
Brusl'd vnderneath the yoke of Tyranny,
Thus farre into the bowles of the Land,
Hau we marcht on without impediment;
And here receueth we from our Father Stanley
Lines of faire comfort and encouragement:
The wretched, bloody, and vfurping Boare,
(That spoyle'd your Summer Fieldes, and fruitfull Vines)
Swilles your warm blood like waf, & makes his trough
In your embowel'd fomoses: This foule Swine
Is now euen in the Centrty of this Isle,
Ne're to the Towne of Leicesters, as we learene:
From Tamworth thiser, is but one days march.
In Gods name cheerely on, couragious Friends,
To reape the Harueft of perpetuall peace,
By this one bloody tryall of sharpe Warre.

Osf. Every mans Confession is a thousand men,
To fight against this guilty Homicide.

Her. I doubt not but his Friends will turne to vs.

Blunt. He hath no friends, but what are friends for fear,
Which in his deerest neede will flye from him.

Richm. All for our vantage, then in Gods name march,
True Hope is swift, and flyes with Swallowes wings,
Kings it makes Gods, and meaner creatures Kings.

Exeunt Omnes.

Enter King Richard in Armes, with Norfolk, Ratcliffe, and the Earle of Surrey.

Rich. Here pitch our Tent, even here in Bosworth field,
My Lord of Sury, why looks you so fad?

Sur. My heart is ten times fighter then my lookes.

Rich. My Lord of Norfolk.

Nor. Heere moost gracious Liege.

Rich. Norfolk, we must haue knockes:
Ha, must we not?

Nor. We must both glue and take my louing Lord.

Rich. Vp with my Tent, heere wil I lye to night,

But where to morrow? Well, all's one for that.
Who hath defcried the number of the Trainers?

Nor. Six or feuen thouand is their vmtoft power.

Rich. Why our Battalia trebilles that account:
Besides, the Kings name is a Tower of stregth,
Which they vnpon the aduerse Faction want.

Vp with the Tent: Come Noble Gentleman,
Let vs fureuy the vantage of the ground,
Call for some men of sound direction:

Let's
The Life and death of Richard the Third.

Let's lacke no Discipline, make no delay, For Lords, to morrow is a busie day.

Enter Richmond, Sir William Brandon, Oxford, and Dorset.

Richm. The weare Sunne, hath made a Golden set, And by the bright Track of his fiery Carre, Glues token of a goodly day to morrow. Sir William Brandon, you shall bear my Standard: Glue me some Ink and Paper in my Tent: Ile draw the Forme and Modell of our Battaille, Limit each Leader to his feuerall Charge; And part in just proportion our small Power. My Lord of Oxford, you Sir William Brandon, And your Sir Walter Herbert stay with me: The Earle of Pembroke keeps his Regiment; Good Captaine Blunt, beare my goodnight to him, And by the second hour in the Morning, Desire the Earle to fee me in my Tent: Yet one thing more (good Captaine) do for me: Where is Lord Stanley quarter'd, do you know? Blunt. Valeffe I have milita his Colours much, (Which well I am affur'd I have not done) His Regiment lies halfe a Mile at least South, from the mighty Power of the King.

Richm. If without peril it be possible, Sweet Blunt, make some good meanes to speake with him And give him from me, this most needfull Note. Blunt. Upon my life, my Lord, I vndepart it, And fo God give you quiet reft to night. Richm. Good night good Captaine Blunt: Come Gentlemen, Let vs confult vpon to morrowes Buisenesse; Into my Tent, the Dew is rawe and cold.

They withdraw into the Tent.

Enter Richard, Ratcliffe, Norfolke, & Catesby.

Rich. What is't a Clocke?
Cat. It's Supper time my Lord, it's nine a clocke.

King. I will not fup to night, Glue me some Ink and Paper:

What, is my Beauer eader then it was? And all my Armour laid into my Tent? Cat. It is my Liege: and all things are in readinesse.

Rich. Good Norfolke, hye thee to thy charge, Vfe carefull Watch, choife trufly Centinels, Nor. I go my Lord,

Rich. Stir with the Larke to morrow, gentle Norfolk. Nor. I warrant you my Lord,

Rich. Ratcliffe,

Rat. My Lord.

Rich. Send out a Pursuivant at Armes
To Stanley Regiment: bid him bring his power Before Sun-rifing, leaff his Sonne George fall Into the blinde Caue of eternall night. Fill me a Bowle of Wine: Glue me a Watch, Sadde white Surrey for the Field to morrow: Look that my Staeus be foun, & not too heauy. Ratcliffe.

Rat. My Lord.

Rich. Saw'ft the melancholy Lord Northumberland? Rat. Thomas the Earle of Surrey, and himselfe, Much about Cockfhut time, from Troope to Troope Went through the Army, cheating vp the Souldiers.

King. So, I am satisfied: Glue me a Bowle of Wine, I have not that Alacrity of Spirit,

Nor cheere of Minde that I was wont to haue. Set it downe. Is Inke and Paper ready?

Rat. It is my Lord,

Rich. Bid my Guard watch. Leave me, Ratcliffe, about the mid of night come to my Tent And helpe to arme me. Leave me I say. Exit Ratcliffe.

Enter Derby to Richmond in his Tent.

Der. Fortune, and Victory fit on thy Helme.

Rich. All comfort that the darke night can afford, Be to thy Perfon, Noble Father in Law. Tell me, how fares our Noble Mother?

Der. I by Atturneyre, bleffe thee from thy Mother, Who prays continually for Richmond good: So much for that. The silent houres steale on, And flakie darkenesse breaks within the Eaft. In brefe, for fo the seafon bids vs be, Prepare thy Battell early in the Morning, And put thy Fortune to th'Arbitrement.

Of bloody Breakes, and mortal flaring Warre: I, as I may, that which I would. I cannot, With Richm. Good Lords conduct him to his Regiment: Ile ftrive with troubled noife, to take a Nap, Left leade slumber peize me downe to morrow, When I should mont with wings of Victory: Once more, good night kinde Lords, and Gentlemen.

Exeunt. Manet Richmond.

O thou, whose Captaine I account my felfe, Looke on my Forces with a gracious eye: Put in their hands thy briling Irons of wrath, That they may cruft downe with a heauy fall, Th'vpurfing Helmets of our Adleraries; Make vs thy minifters of Chaffiment, That we may praffe thee in thy Victory: To thee I do commend my watchfull foule, Ere I let fall the windowes of mine eyes: Sleeping, and wakking, oh defend me fmall.

Sleeps.

Enter the Ghost of Prince Edward, Sonne to Henry the fift.

Gh.to Ri. Let me fte heauy on thy foule to morrow: Think how thou flab't me in my prime of youth At Teukesbury: Dispaire therefore, and dye.

Ghoft to Richm. Be chearefull Richmond, For the wronged Soules

Of butcher'd Princes, fight in thy behalfe: King Henrys ifue Richmond comforts thee.

Enter the Ghost of Henry the fift.

Ghoft. When I was mortall, my Annotated body By thee was punched full of holes; Think on the Tower, and me: Dispaire, and dye, Harry the fift, bids thee dispaire, and dye.

To Richm. Vertuous and holy be thou Conqueror: Harry that prophesied thou should't be King, Doth comfort thee in fleep: Blue, and flourifh.

Enter
Enter the Ghost of Clarence.

_Ghost_. Let me fit heavy in thy foule to morrow.
I that was wagh'd to death with Fullome Wine:
Poor Clarence by thy guile betray'd to death:
To morrow in the battell thinke on me,
And fall thy edgelef Sword, dispaire and dye.

_To Richem._ Thou off-spring of the house of Lancaster
The wronged heyres of Yorke do pray for thee,
Good Angels guard thy battell, Lieue and Flourish.
_Enter the Ghoft of Riuers, Gray, and Vaughan._

Rua. Let me fit heavy in thy foule to morrow,
Riuers, that dy'ast at Pomfret: dispaire, and dye.
_GRAY._ Thinke vpvn Gray, and let thy foule dispaire.
_Vaugh._ Thinke vpvn Vaughan, and with guilty feare
Let fall thy Lance, dispaire and dye.

_All to Richem._ Awake,
And thinke our wrongs in Richardus Bofome,
Will conquer him. Awake, and win the day.
_Enter the Ghoft of Lord Haftings._

_Gho._ Bloody and guilty: guiltily awake,
And in a bloody Battell end thy days.
Thinke on Lord Haftings: dispaire, and dye.
_Haft to Richem._ Quiet vntroubled foule,
Awake, awake: Arme, fight, and conquer, for faire Englands sake.
_Enter the Ghosts of the two young Princes._

_Ghofts._ Dreame on thy Cousins
Smothered in the Tower:
Let vs be laid within thy bosome Richard,
And weep thee downe to ruine, shame, and death,
Thy Nephewes foule bids thee dispaire and dye.

_Ghoft to Richem._ Sleepe Richmond,
Sleepe in Peace, and wake in Ioy,
Good Angels guard thee from the Boares annoy,
Lye, and beget a happy race of Kings,
Edwards vnhappy Sonnes, do bid thee flourishe.
_Enter the Ghost of Anne, his Wife._

_Ghoft to Rich._ Richard, thy Wife,
That wretched Anne thy Wife,
That neuer slept a quiet houre with thee,
Now filles thy sleepe with perturbations,
To morrow in the Battalle, thinke on me,
And fall thy edgelef Sword, dispaire and dye:

_Ghoft to Richem._ Thou quiet foule,
Sleepe thou a quiet sleepe:
Dreame of Successe, and Happy Victories,
Thy Adversaries Wife doth pray for thee.
_Enter the Ghost of Buckingham._

_Ghoft to Rich._ The first was I
That help'd thee to the Crowne:
The laft was I that felt thy Tyranny,
O, in the Battalle think on Buckingham,
And dye in terror of thy gultinesse.
Dreame on, dreame on, of bloody deeds and death,
Fainting dispaire; dispaireing yet thy breath.

_Ghoft to Richem._ I dyed for hope
Er e I could lend thee Ayde;
But cheere thy heart, and be thou not dismayde:
God, and good Angels fight on Richmonds side,
And Richard fall in height of all his pride.

_& Richard starts out of his dreame._

RICH. Give me another Horfe, bind vp my Wounds:
Hauce mercy Iefu. Soft, I did but dreame.
O coward Confcience! how doft thou afflict me?
The Lights burned blew. It is not dead midnight.
Cold fearfull drops stand on my trembling flieth.

What? do I fear my Selfe? There's none else by,
Richard loues Richard, that is, I am I.
Is there a Murtherer here? No; Yes, I am I:
Then flye; What from my Selfe? Great reason why?
Left I Reuenge. What? my Selfe upon my Selfe?
Alacke, I loye my Selfe. Wherefore? For any good
That I my Selfe, hauce done vnto my Selfe?
O no. Alas, I rather hate my Selfe,
For hatefull Deeds committed by my Selfe.
I am a Villaine: yet I Lye, I am not.
Foole, of thy Selfe speake well: Foole, do not flatter.
My Confcience hath a thousand feuerall Tongues,
And every Tongue brings in a feuerall Tale,
And euerie Tale condemnes me for a Villaine;
Periurie, in the high'ft Degree,
Murther, ferne murther, in the dyr'ft degree,
All feuerall Sinnes, all vs'd in each degree,
Throng all to' th Barre, crying all, Guilty, Guilty.
I shall dispaire, there is no Creature loues me;
And if I die, no foule shall pittie me.
Nay, wherefore shoulde they? Since that I my Selfe,
Finde in my Selfe, no pittie to my Selfe.
Me thought, the Soules of all that I had murther'd
Came to my Tent, and euery one did threat
To morrowes vengeance on the head of Richard.

Enter Ratcliffe.

RAT. My Lord.

KING. Who's there?

RAT. Ratcliff. my Lord, tis I: the early Village Cock
Hath twice done falutation to the Morn,
Your Friends are vp, and buckle on their Armour.

KING. O Ratcliff, I feare, I feare.

RAT. Nay good my Lord, be not affraid of Shadows.

KING. By the Apoife Paul, shadowes to night
Hauce stroke more terror to the foule of Richard,
Then can the Subtance of ten thousand Soldiars
Armed in proofe, and led by shallow Richmound
'Tis not yet neere day. Come go with me,
Vnder our Tents Ie play the Eafe-dropper,
To hear if any meane to shrinke from me.

_Exeunt Richard & Ratcliff._

_Enter the Lords to Richmond sitting in his Tent._

RICH. Good morrow Richmond.

RICH. Cry mercy Lords, and watchfull Gentlemen,
That you haue taken a tardi floggard heere?

LORDS. How haue you slipt my Lord?

RICH. The sweetef sleepe,
And faireft boding Dreames,
That euery entred in a drowzie head.
Haue I since your departure had my Lords.
Me thought their Soules, whole bodies Rich. murther'd,
Came to my Tent, and cried on Victory:
I promise you my Heart is very locod,
in the remembrance of fo faire a dreame,
How farre into the Morning is it Lords?

LORD. Vpon the stroke of four.

RICH. Why then 'tis time to Arme, and guie direction.

His Oration to his Soldiars

More then I haue saide, lousing Countrymen,
The leyfire and inforcement of the time
Forbids to dwell vpon: yet remember this,

God
God, and our good cause, fight upon our side,
The Pray'rs of holy Saints and wronged soules,
Like high rear'd Bulwarkes, stand before our Faces,
(Richard except) those whom we fight against.
Had rather haue vs win, then him they follow.
For, what is he they follow? Truly Gentlemen,
A bloody Tyrant, and a Homicide:
One rais'd in blood, and one in blood establihed;
One that made means to come by what he hath,
And slaughter'd those that were the means to help him:
A base foule Stone, made precious by the foyle
Of Englands Chaire, where he is falsely fet:
One that hath ever beene Gods Enemy.
Then if you fight against Gods Enemy,
God will in justice ward you as his Soldiers.
If you doe fweare to put a Tyrant downe,
You sleepe in peace, the Tyrant being flaine:
If you do fight against your Countries Foes,
Your Countries Fat shall pay your paines the hyre.
If you do fight in fadge of your wives,
Your wifes shall welcome home the Conquerors,
If you do free your Children from the Sword,
Your Childrens Children quits it in your Age.
Then in the name of God and all these rights,
Advance your Standards, draw your willing Swords.
For me, the ranfome of my bold attempt,
Shall be this cold Corpse on the earth's cold face.
But if I thrive, the gaine of my attempt,
The feaf of you shall share his part thereof.
Sound Drummes and Trumpets boldly, and cheerfully,
God, and Saint George, Richmond, and Victory.

Enter King Richard, Ratcliffe, and Catesby.

K. What said Northumberland as touching Richard?
Rat. That he was never trained vp in Armes.
King. He said the truth: and what said Surrey then?
Rat. He smil'd and said, the better for our purpose.
King. He was in the right, and so indeed it is.
Tell the clocke there. Clocke frikes.
Give me a Kalender: Who saw the Sunne to day?
Rat. Not I my Lord.
King. Then he dildaines to shine: for by the Booke
He should haue brau'd the East an houre ago,
A blacke day will it be to somebody. Ratcliffe.
Rat. My Lord.
King. The Sun will not be seene to day,
The sky doth frowne, and lowre vp on our Army.
I would thef' dewy teares were from the ground.
Not shine to day? Why, what is that to me
More then to Richmond? For the felfe-fame Heauen.
That frownes on me, looke's fadly vp on him.

Enter Norfolke.

Nor. Arme, arme, my Lord: the foe vaunts in the field.
King. Come, butle, butle. Caparison my horse.
Call vp Lord Stanley, bid him bring his power,
I will leade forth my Soldiers to the plaine,
And thus my Battell shal be ordred.
My Foreward shall be drawne in length,
Conflifting equally of Horse and Foot:
Our Archers shall be placed in the mid't;
John Duke of Norfolke, Thomas Earl of Surrey,
Shall haue the leading of the Foot and Horfe.
They thus directed, we will fowre.

Enter Norfolke.

Nor. Arme, arme, my Lord: the foe vaunts in the field.
King. Come, butle, butle. Caparison my horse.
Call vp Lord Stanley, bid him bring his power,
I will leade forth my Soldiers to the plaine,
And thus my Battell shal be ordred.
My Foreward shall be drawne in length,
Conflifting equally of Horse and Foot:
Our Archers shall be placed in the mid't;
John Duke of Norfolke, Thomas Earl of Surrey,
Shall haue the leading of the Foot and Horfe.
They thus directed, we will fowre.

In the maine Battell, whose puifance on either fide
Shall be well-winged with our cheeffeft Horfe:
This, and Saint George to boote.
What thinke'st thou Norfolke.

Nor. A good direfion warlike Soueraigne,
This found I on my Tent this Morning,
Lacocke of Norfolke, be not fo bold,
For Dickon thy master is bought and fold.

King. A thing deuided by the Enemy.
Go Gentlemen, euer my man to his Charge,
Let not our babling Dreams affright our foules:
For Confidence is a word that Cowards f pe,
Deuid'st at firft to keep the frong in awe,
Our frong armes be our Confidence, Swords our Law.
March on, joynce braily, let vs too't pell mell,
If not to heauen, then hand in hand to Hell.
What fhall I fay more then I have inferr'd?
Remember whom you are to cope withall,
A fort of Vagabonds, Raftacles, and Run-awayes,
A fcum of Britaine, and base Lackey Peants,
Whom their o're-cloyed Country vomits forth.
To desperate Adventures, and affurd Deftruction.
You fleeping fafe, they bring you to vnref.
You hauing Lands, and bleuf with beauteous wines,
They would reftraine the one, deftain the other,
And who doth leade them, but a paltry Fellow?
Long kept in Britaine at our Mothers coft,
A Milke-fop, one that neuer in his life
Felt fo much cold, as ouer shoes in Snow:
Let's whip these fraglers o're the Seas againe,
Lath hence thefe ouer-weening Ruffes of France,
Thefe famih'd Beggers, weary of their liues,
Who (but for dreaming on this fond exploit)
For want of meanes (poore Rats) had hang'd themfelves.
If we be conquered, let men conquer vs,
And not these bafard Britaine,n whom our Fathers
Haue in their owne Land beaten, bobb'd, and thump'd,
And on Record, left them the heries of flame.
Shall thefe enjoy our Lands? yee with our Wifes?
Raffh our daughters?

Drum afarre off
Hearke, I hearre their Drumme,
Right Gentlemen of England, fight boldly yeomen,
Draw Archers draw your Arrows to the head,
Spurre your proud Horfes hard, and ride in blood,
Amare the welkin with your broken fhaues.

Enter a Meijenger.

What fayes Lord Stanley, will he bring his power?
Mis. My Lord, he doth deny to come.
King. Off with his fonne Georges head.
Nor. My Lord, the Enemy is poft the Marsh:
After the battalle, let George Stanley dye.
King. A thound heartes are great within my bofon.
Advance our Standards, let vp on our Foes,
Our Ancient word of Courage, faire S. George
Infpire vs with the flieene of fiery Dragons:
Vpon them, Victorie fits on our helps.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter Catesby.

Car. Rescue my Lord of Norfolke,
Rescue, Rescue:
The King enacts more wonders then a man,
Daring an oppofite to every danger:
His Horfe is faine, and all on foot he fights,
Seeking for Richmond in the throat of death:
Rescue faire Lord, or else the day is loft.

Alarums. Enter
Enter Richard.

Exit. Withdraw my Lord, I le helpe you to a Horfe

Rich. Slaue, I haue seft my life upon a caft,
And I will fland the hazard of the Dye:
I thinke there be five Richmonds in the field,
Fie haue I flaine to day, in stead of him.
A Horfe, a Horfe, my Kingdom for a Horfe.

Alatun, Enter Richard and Richmond, they fight, Richard is slaine.

Retreat, and Flourish. Enter Richmond, Derby bearing the Crownes, with divers other Lords.

Rich. God, and your Armes
Be prais'd Victorious Friends;
The day is ours, the bloody Dogge is dead.

Der. Courageous Richmond,
Well haft thou acquit thee; Loe,
Heere thefe long vfurped Royalties,
From the dead Temples of this bloody Wretch,
Haue I pluck'd off, to grace thy Brows withall.
Weare it, and make much of it.

Rich. Great God of Heauen, say Amen to all:
But tell me, is yong George Stanley living?

Der. He is my Lord, and safe in Leicester Towne,
Whither (if you please) we may withdraw vs.

Rich. What men of name are slaine on either fide?

Der. John Duke of Norfolke, Walter Lord Ferris,

Rich. Interre their Bodies, as become their Births,
Proclaim a pardon to the Soldiers fied,
That in fubmiſion will returne to vs,
And then as we haue tane the Sacrament,
We will unite the White Rofe, and the Red.
Smile Heauen uppon this faire Coniunction,
That long haue frown'd upon their Enmity:
What Traitor heares me, and fayes not Amen?
England hath long beene mad, and fcar'ed her felfe;
The Brother blindly shed the Brothers blood;
The Father, rashly flaughtered his owne Sonne;
The Sonne compell'd, beene Butcher to the Sire;
All this divided Yorke and Lancalter,
Divided, in their dire Diuifion.
Onow, let Richmond and Elizabeth,
The true Succeeders of each Royall Houfe,
By Gods faire ordinance, conioyned together:
And let thy Heires (God if thy will be fo)
Enrich the time to come, with Smooth-face'd Peace,
With fmilling Plenty, and faire Profperous dayes.
Abate the edge of Traitors, Gracious Lord,
That would reduce thefe bloody dayes againe,
And make poore England weepe in Streams of Blood;
Let them not dye to taste this Lands increafe,
That would with Treafon, wound this faire Lands peace.
Now Ciull wounds are fopp'd, Peace lives azen;
That she may long liue heere, God fay, Amen. Exeunt

FINIS.
The Famous History of the Life of King HENRY the Eight.

THE PROLOGUE.

Come no more to make you laugh, Things now,
You take a Weighty, and a Serious Brow,
Sad, high, and working, full of State and War:
Such Noble Scenes, as draw the Eye to flow
We now present. Those that can Pity, beare
May (if they think it well) let fall a Teare,
The Subject will defcribe it. Such as give
Their Money out of hope they may believe,
May boore finde Truth too. Those that come to see
Oney a play or two, and so a cease,
The Play may passe: If they be still, and willing,
Ite undertake may fee way their spoiling
Richly in two short bourses. Onely they
That come to boare a Merry, Bandy Play,
A noyle of Targets: Or to fee a Fellow
In a long Motley Coate, garded with Yellow,

Will be decey'd. For gentle Hearer, know
To ranke our cho'en Truth with such a flow
As Fools, and Fights it, before forfeityng
Our owne Braine, and the Opinion that we bring
To make that onely true, we now intend,
Will leave us newer an understanding Friend.
Therefore, for Godnesse sake, and as you are knowne
The First and Happiest Hauers of the Towne,
Be sad, as we would make ye. Thinks ye fee
The very Persons of our Noble Story,
As they were Luing : Thine ye fee them Great,
And ffollow'd with the general trumbr, and sweat
Of thoufand Friends: Then, in a moment, fee
How soone this Mightineffe, meets Misery:
And if you can be merry then, Ie say,
A Man may wepe upon his Wedding day.

ACTUS PRIMUS. SCENA PRIMA.

Enter the Duke of Norfolke at one doore. At the other,
the Duke of Buckingham, and the Lord Abirgauenny.

Buckingham.

Ood morrow, and well met. How haue ye done
Since laft we faw in France?
Nor. I thank your Grace:

Ood full, and euer since a freth Admirer
Of what I faw there.

Back. An vntimely Ague
Staid me a Prisoner in my Chamber, where
Those Sunnes of Glory, those two Lights of Men
Met in the vale of Andren.

Nor. "Twixt Guynes and Arde,
I was then prefent, faw them salute on Horfebacke,
Beheld them when they lighted, how they clung
In their Embracement, as they grew together,
Which had they,
What foure Thron'd ones could have weigh'd
Such a compounded one?
Back. All the whole time
I was my Chambers Prisoner.

Nor. Then you loft
The view of earthly glory: Men might fay
Till this time Pompe was fingle, but now married
To one aboue it felfe. Each following day
Became the next daies matter, till the laft
Made former Wonders, it's. To day the French,
All Clinquant all in Gold, like Heathen Gods  Shone downe the English; and to morrow, they Made Britaine, India: Every man that fodd, Shew'd like a Mine. Their Dwarfifh Pages were
As Cherubins, all gilt: the Madams too,
Not vs'd to toyle, did almoft sweat to boare
The Pride upon them, that their very labour
Was to them, as a Painting. Now this Maske
Was cry'de incomparable; and thenfuing night
Made it a Foele, and Begger. The two Kings
Equall in luftrg, were now beft, now worft
As prefence did prefent them: Him in eye,
Still him in praffe, and being prefent both,
"Twas faid they faw but one, and no Difterner
Durft wagge his Tongue in cenfure, when these Sunnes
(For fo they prafe'em) by their Heralds challeng'd
The Noble Spirits to Armes, they did perforne

Beyond
Beyond thoughts Compass, that former fabulous Storie
Being now seene, possible enough, got credit
That Bevis was beleued.

Buc. Oh you go farre.
Nor. As I belong to worship, and affect
In Honor, Honesty, the tract of eu'try thing,
Would by a good Discourfer looke some life,
Which Actions selle, was tongue too.

Buc. All was Royall,
To the disposing of it rought rebell'd,
Order gave each thing new. The Office did
Difinently his full Function: who did guide,
I meane who fet the Body, and the Limbes
Of this great Sport together?

Nor. As you guessfe:
One certes, that promisses no Element
In such a businesse.

Buc. I pray you who, my Lord?
Nor. All this was ordered by the good Discretion
Of the right Reuerend Cardinal of Yorke.

Buc. The diuell feed him: No mans Pye is feed
From his Ambitious finger. What had he
To do in these fierce Vanities? I wonder,
That such a Knavish care with his very bulke
Take vp the Rayes o'th'beneficial Sun,
And keepe it from the Earth.

Nor. Surely Sir,
There's in him flufse, that put's him to these ends:
For being not prop't by Auncestry, whose grace
Chalckes Succeedors their way; nor call'd upon
For high feats done to'th'Crowne; neither Allied
To eminent Affiants; but Spider-like
Out of his Selfe-drawing Web. O giues vs note,
The force of his owne merit makes his way
A guift that heaven giues for him, which buyes
A place next to the King.

Abur. I cannot tell
What Heauen hath giuen him: let some Grauer eye
Pierce into that, but I can see his Pride
Peep through each part of him: whence ha's he that,
If not from Hell? The Diuell is a Niggard,
Or ha's giuen all before, and he begins
A new Hell in himselfe.

Buc. Why the Diuell,
Vpon this French going out, tooke he vpon him
(Without the priuity o'th'King) t'appoint
Who should attend on him? He makes vp the File
Of all the Gentry; for the moft part fuch
To whom as great a Charge, as little Honor
He meant to lay vpon: and his owne Letter
The Honourable Board of Counsell, out
Muff fetch him in, he Papers.

Abur. I do know
Kinsmen of mine, three at the leaf, that haue
By this, fo ficken'd their Eftates, that never
They shall abound as formerly.

Buc. O many
Have broke their backes with laying Mannors on 'em
For this great Journey. What did this vanity
But minister communication of
A moft poore issue.

Nor. Greeuingly I thinke,
The Peace betweene the French and vs, not valewes
The Coff that did conclude it.

Buc. Every man,
After the hideous storme that follow'd, was

A thing Insipr'd, and not consulting, broke
Into a generall Prophesie; That this Tempest
Daunting the Garment of this Peace, aboaded
The sodaine breach on't.

Nor. Which is budding out,
For France hath flaw'd the League, and hath attach'd
Our Merchants goods at Burdeaux.

Abur. Is it therefore Th'Ambaffador is filenc'd?
Nor. Marry is't.

Abur. A proper Title of a Peace, and purchas'd
At a superfluous rate.

Buc. Why all this Businesse
Our Reuerend Cardinal carried.

Nor. Like it your Grace,
The State takes notice of the private difference
Betwixt you, and the Cardinal. I aduise you
(And take it from a heart, that wishes towards you Honor, and plentuous safety) that you reade
The Cardinals Malice, and his Potency
Together: To consider further, that
What his high Hatred would effect, wants not
A Minifter in his Power. You know his Nature,
That he's Revengefull, and I know, his Sword
Hath a sharpe edge: It's long, and't may be faine
It reaches farre, and where 'twill not extend,
Thither he darts it. Besoome vp my counsell,
You'll finde it wholefome. Loe, where comes that Rock
That I aduise your thuning.

Enter Cardinal Walfy, the Purse borne before him, certaine of the Guard, and two Secretaries with Papers: The Cardinal in his paffage, fixeth his eye on Buck-ham, and Buckingham on him,
both full of disdaine.

Car. The Duke of Buckingham's Surveyor? Ha?
Where's his Examination?
Serc. Heere fo pleafe you.
Car. Is he in perfon, ready?
Serc. I, pleafe your Grace.
Car. Well, we shall then know more, & Buckingham shall leffen this bigge looke.

Exeunt Cardinal, and his Traine.

Buc. This Butchers Curre is venom'd-mouth'd, and I
Have not the power to muzzle him, therefore beft
Not wake him in his flumber. A Beggers booke,
Out-worthes a Nobles blood.

Nor. What are you chaff'd?
Aske God for Temp'rance, that's th'appliance onely
Which your diseafe requires.

Buc. I red in's looks
Matter against me, and his eye reuil'd
Me as his abiece object, at this instant
He bores me with some tricke; He's gone to'th'King:
Ile follow, and out-fare him.

Nor. Stay my Lord,
And let your Reason with your Choller question
What 'tis you go about: to clime steepe hilles
Requires flow pace at first. Anger is like
A full hot Horfe, who being allow'd his way
Selfe-mettle tyres him: Not a man in England
Can aduise me like you: Be to your felle,
As you would to your Friend.

Buc. Ile to the King,
And from a mouth of Honor, quite cry downe

This
This Ipswich fellowes insolence; or proclaime,
There's difference in no person.

Norf. Be adult'd;
Heat not a Furnace for your foe so hot
That it do finde your selfe. We may out-runne
By violent swiftneffe that which we run at;
And lofe by ouer-running : know you not,
The fire that mountes the liquor til'run ore,
In leaning to augment it, wafts it: be adult'd;
I say againe there is no English so wise,
More stronger to direct you then your selfe;
Or if with the sap of reason you would quench,
Or but allay the fire of passion.

Buck. Sir,
I am thankfull to you, and Ie goe along
By your prescription : but this top-proud fellow,
Whom from the flow of gall I name not, but
From sincere motions, by Intelligence,
And proofes as cleere as Founts in Iply, when Wee fee each graine of grasse: I doe know
To be corrupt and treasonous.
Norf. Say not treasonous.

Buck. To th' King Ile fay, & make my vouch as strong
As shore of Rockes: attend. This holy Fexe,
Or Wolfe, or both (for he is equall rau'ous
As he is subtle, and as prone to mischief;
As able to perform' t) his minde, and place
Infcetling one another, yea reciprocally,
Only to shew his pompe, as well in France,
As here at home, fuggeth the King our Master
To this laft costly Treaty: Th'enterievew,
That swallowed so much treason, and like a glasse
Did breake ith'wrenching.

Norf. Faith, and so it did.

Buck. Pray give me fauour Sir: This cunning Cardinal
The Articles o' th' Combination drew
As himselfe pleas'd;and they were ratifed
As he cride thus let be, to as much end,
As give a Crutch to th'dead. But our Count-Cardinal
Has done this, and tis well: for worthy Wolfe
(Who cannot erre) he did it. Now this followes,
(Which as it take it, is a kinde of Puppie
To th'old dam 'Treacon) Charles the Emperour,
Vnder pretence to fee the Queene his Aunt,
(For twas indeed his colour, but he came
To whisper Wolfe) where mistakitation,
His fears were that the Interview bevitwixt
England and France, might through their amity
Breed him some prejudice; for from this League,
Peep'd harms that menac'd him. Priuily
Deales with our Cardinal, and as I troa
Which I doe well; for I am sure the Emperour
Paid ere he promis'd, whereby his Suit was grant
Ere it was ask'd. But when the way was made
And pau'd with gold : the Emperor thus desir'd,
That he would please to alter the Kings course,
And breake the foresaid peace. Let the King know
(As soone he shall by me) that thus the Cardinal
Does buy and sell his Honour as he pleases,
And for his owne advantage.

Norf. I am forry
To heare this of him; and could with he were Something mistaken in't.

Buck. No, not a fillable:
I doe pronounce him in that very shape
He shall appeare in prooфе.
The other moiety you ask is given,
Repeat your will, and take it.
Queen. Thank you Majesty.
That you would love your felies, and in that love
Not vnconsider'd leave your Honour, nor
The dignity of your Office, is the point
Of my Petition.
Kin. Lady mine proceed:
Queen. I am solicited not by a few,
And those of true condition: That your Subjectes
Are in great grievance: There haue beene Commissions
Sent downe among 'em, which hath flaw'd the heart
Of all their Loyalties; wherein, although
My good Lord Cardinall, they vent reproches
Moft bitterly on you, as putter on
Of these exaction: yet the King, our Maister
(Not Whatsoever Heauen shield from solie; even he escapes
Language vnmanfully yea, such which breaks
The fide of loyalty, and almost appears
In lowd Rebellion.
Nor. Not almost appeares,
It doth appeare; for, vpon these Taxations,
The Clothiers all not able to mainaine
The many to them longing, haue put off
The Spinsters, Carders, Fullers, Weaveres, who
Vnfit for other life, compell'd by hunger
And lack of other meanes, in desperate manner
Daring th'euen too th'eethes, are all in vprore,
And danger ferues among them.
Kin. Taxation?
Wherein? and what Taxation? My Lord Cardinall,
You that are blam'd for it alike with vs,
Know you of this Taxation?
Card. Please you Sir,
I know but of a single part in ought
Pertaines to th'State; and front but in that File
Where others tell steps with me.
Queen. No, my Lord?
You know no more then others: But you frame
Things that are knowne alike, which are not wholesome
To thofe which would not know them, and yet must Perforce be their acquaintance. Thesee exaction
(Whereof my Soueraigne would have note) they are Moft peffilent to th'hearing, and to beare 'em,
The Backe is Sacrifice to th'load; They fay
They are deuid'd by you, er elle you fuffer
Too hard an exclamtion.
Kin. Still Exaction:
The nature of it, in what kinde let's know,
Is this Exaction?
Queen. I am much too venturous
In tempting of your patience, but am boldned
Vnder your promis'd pardon. The Subjectes grieve
Comes through Commissions, which compels from each
The fixt part of his Subfiance, to be leued
Without delay; and the pretence for this
Is nam'd, your warres in France: this makes bold mouths,
Tongues spit their duties out, and cold hearts freeze
Allegance in them; their curses now
Lie where they had prayers did: and it's come to paffe,
This trableable obedience is a Slauet
To each incendit Will: I would your Highnesse
Would give it quicke consideration; for
There is no primer bafeness.
Kin. By my life,
This is against our pleasure.
Card. And for me,
I have no further gone in this, then by
A finge voice, and that not paft me, but
By learned approbation of the Judges: If I am
Trau'd, to ignorant Judges, which neither know
My faculties nor perfon, yet will be
The Chronicles of my doing: Let me fay,
'Tis but the fate of Place, and the rough Brake
That Vertue must goe through: we muft not flint
Our necessarie actions, in the feare
To cope malicious Cenfurers, which euer,
As rau'rous Filhes doe a Veffell follow
That is new trim'd; but benefit no further
Then vainly longing. What we oft doe beft,
By ficke Interpreters (once weake ones) is
Not ours, or not allow'd: what word, as oft
Hitting a groffer quality, is crade vp
For our beft Act: if we shall stand still,
In feare our motion will be mock'd, or carp'd at,
We should take route here, where we fit;
Or fit State- Statues onely.
Kin. Things done well,
And with a care, exempt themselfes from feare:
Things done without example, in their issue
Are to be leat'd: Haue you a President
Of this Commission? I beleue, not any,
We muft not rend our Subjectes from our Lawes,
And flicke them in our Will. Sixt part of each?
A tremibling Contribution; why we take
From every Tree, lop, barke, and part o' th' Timber:
And though we leave it with a roote thus hacket,
The Ayre will driuine the Sap. To every County
Where this is question'd, fend our Letters, with Free pardon to each man that has deny'de
The force of this Commission: pray looke too't,
I put it to your care.
Card. A word with you.
Let there be Letters writ to every Shire,
Of the Kings grace and pardon: the greeued Commons
Hardly conceu of me. Let it be nois'd,
That through our Interceflion, this Renouement
And pardon comes: I shall anon advis you
Further in the proceeding. Exit Secret.

Enter Suruyor.
Queen. I am sorry, that the Duke of Buckingham
Is run in your difpleasure.
Kin. It grieues many:
The Gentleman is Learnd, and a moft rare Speaker,
To Nature none more bound; his trayning fuch,
That he may furnish and instruct great Teachers,
And neuer feeke for ay out of himselfe: yet fee,
When thefe fo Noble benefits shall prowe
Not well dispos'd, the minde growing once corrupt,
They turne to vicious forms, ten times more vugly
Then euer they were faire. This man fo compleat,
Who was enrol'dmongt wonders; and when we
Almoft with rauih'd lifting, could not finde
His houre of speech, a minute: He, (my Lady)
Hath into moniftrous habits put the Graves
That once were his, and is become as blacke,
As if befh'md'd in hell. Sit by Vs, you shall heare
(This was his Gentleman in trau't) of him
Things to strike Honour fad. Bid him recount
The fore-recit'd prattifis, whereof
We cannot feele too little, heare too much.
Card.
The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

Card. Stand forth, & with bold spirit relate what you
Most like a carefull Subject have collected
Out of the Duke of Buckingham.

Kin. Speak freely.

Sur. First, it was vsefull with him; every day
It would infect his Speech: That if the King
Should without ifue dye; hee'll carry it fo
To make the Scepter his. These very words
I've heard him vter to his Sonne in Law,
Lord Aburgany, to whom by oth he menace'd
Reuenge vpon the Cardinall.

Card. Please your Highness note
This dangerous conception in this point,
Not frended by his wish to your High perfon;
His will is most malignant, and it stretches
Beyond you to your friends.

Queen. My learn'd Lord Cardinall,
Deliver all with Charity.

Kin. Speak on;
How grounded hee his Title to the Crowne
Vpon our faile; to this point haft thou heard him,
At any time speake ought?

Sur. He was brought to this,
By a valie Prophefie of Nicolas Henton.

Kin. What was that Henton?

Sur. Sir, a Chartreux Fryer.

His Confelfor, who fed him euer minute
With words of Soveraignty.

Kin. How know'nt thou this?

Sur. Not long before your Highness sped to France,
The Duke being at the Rofe, within the Parith
Saint Lawrence Poulney, did of me demand
What was the speech among the Londoners,
Concerning the French Journey. I replide,
Men Fear the French would proce perfidious
To the Kings danger: prefently, the Duke
Said,twas the fear indeed, and that he doubted
'Twould prove the verity of certaine words
Spoke by a holy Monke, that oft, fayes he,
Hath fent to me, willing me to permit
John de la Car, my Chaplinne, a choyce howre
To heare from him a matter of some moment:
Whom after vnder the Commifions Seale,
He follemny had frowne, that what he spoke
My Chaplainne to no Creature living, but
To me, should vter, with demure Confidence,
This painfully enfu'de; neither the King, nor's Heyres
(Tell you the Duke) shall prosper, bid him friue
To the loue o'th'Commonalty, the Duke
Shall governe England.

Queen. If I know you well,
You were the Dukes Surueyor, and left your Office
On the complaint o'th' Tenants; take good heed
You charge not in your Spleene a Noble perfon,
And spoyle your nobler Soule: I fay, take heed;
Yes, heartly befeech you.

Kin. Let him on: Goe forward.

Sur. On my Soule, I speake but truth,
I told my Lord the Duke, by th'Diuels Illusions
The Monke might be deceiu'd, and that 'twas dangerous
For this to ruminate on this fo farre, vntill
It forg'd him some defigne, which being beleue'd
It was much like to doe: Heanwer'd, Thowh,
It can doe me no dammage adding further,
That had the King in his left Sickneffe fald,
The Cardinals and Sir Thomas Lewell heads
Should have gone off.

Kin. Ha? What, fo rancke? Ah, ha,
There's mifchiefe in this man; canst thou lay further?

Sur. I can my Liedge.

Kin. Proceed.

Sur. Being at Greenwich,
After your Highneffe had reprou'd the Duke
About Sir William Blumer.

Kin. I remember of such a time, being my sworn fer-
The Duke restein'd him his. But on what hence?

Sur. If (quoth he) I for this had beene committed,
As to the Tower, I thought; I would have plaid
The Part my Father meant to act vpon
Th'Surpurer Richard, who being at Salisbury,
Made fuit to come in's presence; which if granted,
(As he made fumblance of his duty) would
Have put his knife into him.

Kin. A Gyant Traytor.

Card. Now Madam, may his Highnes lieue in freedome,
And this man out of Prifon.

Queen. God mend all.

Kin. Ther's somthing more would out of thee; what

Sur. After the Duke his Father, with the knife
He stretch'd him, and with one hand on his dagger,
Another spread on's braeft, mounting his eyes,
He did discharge a horrible Oath, whose tenor
Was, were he euill vs'd, he would outgoe
His Father, by as much as a performance
Do's an irrefolute purpofe.

Kin. There's his period,
To fheath his knife in vs: he is attach'd,
Call him to prefent tryall; if he may
Finde mercy in the Law, 'tis his; if none,
Let him not feek't of vs: By day and night
Hee's Traytor to th' height.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter L. Chamberlaine, and L. Sandys.

L. Ch. Is't poiffible the spies of France should iugle
Men into such strange mysteries?

L. San. New cutomes,
Though they be newer fo ridiculous,
(Nay let 'em be vmnaturally yet are follow'd.

L. Ch. As farre as I fee, all the good our English
Hauet got by the late Voyage, is but meere
A fit or two o'th' face, (but they are shrewd ones)
For when they hold 'em, you would scweare direccly.
Their very noxes had beene Councillors
To Pepin or Clotharius, they keepe State fo.

L. San. They have all new legs,
And lame ones; one would take it,
That never fee 'em pace before, the Spanien
A Spring-halt rain'd among 'em.

L. Ch. Death my Lord,
Their cloathes are after such a Pagan cut too's,
That sure th'haue worn e out Ch iftendome:how now?
What newes, Sir Thomas Lewell?

Enter Sir Thomas Lewell.

Lewell. Faith my Lord,
I heare of none but the new Proclamation,
That's clapt vpon the Court Gate.

L. Chas.
L. Cham. What is't for?
Lou. The reformation of our truel'd Gallants,
That fill the Court with quarrels, talke, and Taylors.
L. Cham. I'm glad 'tis there;
Now I would pray our Monfiers
To thinke an English Courtier may be wife,
And never fee the Louare.
Lou. They must either
(For to run the Conditions) leave those reminants
Of Foole and Feather, that they got in France,
With all their honourable points of ignorance
Pertaining thereunto; as Fights and Fire-workes,
Abusing better men then they can be
Out of a forreigne wifedome, renouncing cleane
The faith they have in Tennis and tall Stockings,
Short blifftred Breeches, and thefe types of Truell;
And vnderstand againe like honest men,
Or pack to their old Playfellows; there, I take it,
They may Cam Praulgie, wee away
The lag end of their lewdnede, and be laugh'd at.
L. San. To bee time to give 'em Phylckee, their disease
Are growne so catching.
L. Cham. What a loffe our Ladies
Will haue of these trim vanities?
Louell. I marry,
There will be wee indeed Lords, the flye whorfans
Haue got a speeding tricke to lay downe Ladies.
A French Song, and a Fiddle, ha's no Fellow.
L. San. The Dieur fiddle 'em,
I am glad they are going,
For sure there's no converting of 'em: now
An honest Country Lord as I am, beaten
A long time out of play, may bring his plaine song,
And haue an houre of hearing, and byr Lady
Held currant Musick too.
L. Cham. Well fird Lord Sands,
Your Colts tooth is not cast yet?
L. San. No my Lord,
Nor shall not while I have a stumpe.
L. Cham. Sir Thomas,
Whither were you a going?
Lou. To the Cardinals;
Your Lordship is a guest too.
L. Cham. O, 'tis true;
This night he makes a Supper, and a great one,
To many Lords and Ladies; there will be
The Beauty of this Kingdom Ile affure you.
Lou. That Churchman
Beares a bounteous minde indeed,
A hand as fruitfull as the Land that feeds vs,
His dewes fall evey where.
L. Cham. No doubt he's Noble;
He had a blacke mouth that fird other of him.
L. San. He may my Lord,
Ha's wherewithall in him;
Sparing would shew a worfe finne,then ill Doctrine,
Men of his way, shoulde be moft liberal,
They are fct heere for examples.
L. Cham. True, they are so;
But few now glue fo great ones;
My Barge flayes;
Your Lordship shall along: Come, good Sir Thomas,
We shall be late elfe, which I would not be,
For I was spoke to, with Sir Henry Guilford
This night to be Comptrollers.
L. San. I am your Lordships.

Scena Quarta.

Hoboes. A small Table under a State for the Cardinal, a longer Table for the Ghosts. Then Enter Anne Bullen, and divers other Ladies, & Gentlemen, as Ghosts at one Door; at another Door enter Sir Henry Guilford.

S. Hen. Guilf. Ladies,
A generall welcome from his Grace
Salutes ye all; This Night he dedicates
To faire content, and you: None heere he hopes
In all this Noble Beuy, has brought with her
One care abroad: hee would haue all as mery:
As first, good Company, good wine, good welcome,
Can make good people.

Enter L. Chamberlains L. Sands, and Louell.
O my Lord, y're tardy;
The very thought of this faire Company,
Clapt wings to me.
Cham. You are young Sir Harry Guilford.
San. Sir Thomas Louell, had the Cardinal
But halfe my Lay-thoughts in him, some of these Should finde a running Banket, ere they refited,
I thinke would better pleafe 'em: by my life,
They are a sweet society of faire ones.
Lou. O that your Lordship were but now Convellor,
To one or two of thefe.
San. I would I were,
They should finde easie pannce.
Lou. Faith how easie?
San. As easie as a downe bed would afford it.
Cham. Sweet Ladies will it pleaue you fit; Sir Harry Place you that fide, Ile take the charge of this;
His Grace is entring. Nay, you muft not freeze,
Two women plac'd together, makes cold weather;
My Lord Sands, you are one will keepe 'em waking:
Pray fit betwixt thesefe Ladies.
San. By my faith,
And thanke your Lordship: by your leve sweet Ladies,
If I chance to talke a little wild, forgive me:
I had it from my Father.
An. Bul. Was he mad Sir?
San. O, very mad, exceeding mad, in loue too;
But he would bite none, lust as I doe now,
He would Kiss you Twenty with a breath.
Cham. Well faid my Lord:
So now y'are fairely fated: Gentleman,
The penanceyes on you; if these faire Ladies
Paffe away frowning.
San. For my little Cure,
Let me alone.

Hoboes. Enter Cardinal Wolsey, and takes his State.
Card Y'are welcome my faire Guests; that noble Lady
Or Gentleman that is not freely mery
Is not my Friend. This to confirmre my welcome,
And to you all good health.
San. Your Grace is Noble,
Let me haue such a Bowle may holde my thanks,
And faue me fo much talking.
Card. My Lord Sands,
The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

I am beholding to you: cheere your neighbours:
Ladies you are not merry; Gentlemen,
Whose fault is this?
San. The red wine first must rise.
In their faire cheues my Lord, then wee shall have 'em,
Talke vs to silence.

An. B. You are a merry Gamter.
San. You cannot shew me.
An. B. You are a merry Gamter.
San. I told your Grace, they would talke anon.
Card. What's that?
Cham. Look out there, some of ye.
Card. What warlike voyage,
And to what end is this? Nay, Ladies, fear not;
By all the lawes of Warre y'are priviledg'd.

Enter a Seruant.
Cham. How now, what is't?
Seru. A noble troupe of Strangers,
For so they feeme; th'hau'e left their Barge and landed,
And hither make, as great Embassadors
From forraigne Princes.
Card. Good Lord Chamberlaine,
Go, giue 'em welcome; you can speake the French tongue
And praye receu'e 'em Nobly, and conduct 'em
Into our preffence, where this heauen of beauty
Shall shine at ftrange upon them. Some attend him.
All, rife, and Tables remou'd.
You haue now a broken Banquet, but we'll mend it.
A good digestion to you all; and once more
I showe a welcome on yee; welcome all.

Hoboyes. Enter King and others as Maskers, habited like Shepheards, vnder'd by the Lord Chamberlaine. They paie directly before the Cardinal, and gracefully faile
him.
A noble Company: what are their pleasures?
Cham. Because they speake no English, thus they prad
To tell your Grace: That hauing heard by fame
Of this so noble and so faire Assembly,
This night to meet heere they could doe no leffe,
(Out of the great respect they beare to beauty)
But leaue their Flockes, and vnder your faire Conduct
Craue leau'e to view thefe Ladies, and entreat
An houre of Reuels with 'em.
Card. Say, Lord Chamberlaine,
They haue done my poore haufe grace:
For which I pay'em a thousand thankes,
And praye'em take their pleasures.
Chosse Ladies, King and An. Bullen.
King. The faireft hand I euer touch'd: O Beauty,
Till now I never knew theee.
Muficke, Dance.
Card. My Lord.
Cham. Your Grace.
Card. Pray tell 'em thus much from me:
There should be one amongst 'em by his perfon
More worthy this place then my felfe, to whom
(If I but knew him) with my loue and duty
I would furrender it. Whipter.
Cham. I will my Lord.
Card. What fay they?
Of divers witnesses, which the Duke deir'd
To him brought viva voce to his face;
At which appear'd against him, his Surveyor
Sir Gilbert Pegge his Chancellor, and John Car,
Confessor to him, with that Diuell Monk,
Hopkins, that made this mischief.
2. That was her
That fed him with his Prophecies.
1. The fame,
All these accus'd him strongly, which he faie
Would haue flung from him; but indeed he couldnot;
And so his Peeres vpon this evidence,
Hawe found him guilty of high Trestion. Much
He spake, and learnedly for life; But all
Was either pitted in him, or forgotten.
2. After all this, how did he bear himselfe?
1. When he was brought agen to th' Bar, to heare
His Knell rung out, his judgement, he was fir'd
With furie, Antony, he sweate extremly;
And fomthing spoke in choller, ill, and haftly:
But he fell to himselfe againe, and sweetly,
In all the rest fhw'd a most Noble patience.
2. I doe not thinke he feares death.
1. Sure he does not,
He neuer was fo womanish, the caufe
He may a little grieue at.
2. Certainly,
The Cardinal is the end of this.
1. Tis likely,
By all conieciures: Firft Kildares Attendere;
Then Deputy of Ireland, who remou'd
Earle Surry, was fent thither, and in haft too,
Leaft he should helpe his Father.
2. That tricke of State
Was a deepe envious one,
1. At his returne,
No doubt he will requite it; this is noted
(And generally) who euer the King favours,
The Cardnall infantly will finde imployement,
And farre enough from Court too.
2. All the Commons
Hate him perniciously, and o' my Conience
With him ten faddom deepe: This Duke as much
They loue and doate on: call him bounteous Buckingham,
The Mirror of all courtefe.

Enter Buckingham from his Arraignment; Tipstaffs before him, the Axe with the edge towards him, Halberds on each side, accompanied with Sir Thomas Louell, Sir Nicholas
Vaux, Sir Walter Sands, and common people, &c.

1. Stay there Sir,
And see the noble ruin'd man you speake of.
2. Let's stand close and behold him.
Buck. All good people,
You that thus farre have come to pitty me;
Hear what I faie, and then goe home and lose me.
I haue this day recei'd a Traitors judgement,
And by that name muft dye; yet Haueen bear witness,
And if I haue a Conscience, lett it speake me,
Euen as the Axe falls, if I be not faithfull.
The Law I bear no mallice for my death,
T'has done uppon the premis, but Fate:
But thofe that fought it, I could with more Christians:
(For what they will) I heartily forgive 'em;
Yet let 'em looke they glory not in mischief;
Nor build their euiis on the graces of great men;
For then, my guiltiefe blood muft cry against'em.
For further life in this world I ne' re hope,
Nor will I sue, although the King haue mercies
More then I dare make faults.
you few that lou'd me,
And dare be bold to wepe for Buckingham,
His Noble Friends and Fellowes; whom to leave
Is only bitter to him, only dying:
Goe with me like good Angels to my end,
And as the long duriose of Steele falls on me,
Make of your Prayers one sweet Sacrifice,
And lift my Soule to Heauen.
Lead on a Gods name.
Louell. I doe befeech your Grace, for charity
If euery any malice in your heart
Were hid against me, now to forgive me frankly.
Buck. Sir Thomas Louell, I as free forgive you
As I would be forgiven; I forgive all.
There cannot be tho'ee numberlesse offences
Gainst me, that I cannot take peace with:
No blacke Envy shall make my Graue.
Commend mee to his Grace:
And if he speake of Buckingham; pray tell him,
You met him halfe in Heauen: my vows and prayers
Yet are the Kings; and till my Soule forfake,
Shall cry for blessings on him. May he live
Longer then I have time to tell his yeares;
Euer belou'd and louing, may his Rule be;
And when old Time shall lead him to his end,
Goodneffe and he, fill vp one Monument.
Lou. To th' water side I must conduct your Grace;
Then gue my Charge vp to Sir Nicholas Vaux,
Who undertakes you to your end.
Vaux. Prepare there,
The Duke is comming: See the Barge be ready;
And fit it with such furniture as suites
The Greatnesse of his Perfom.
Buck. Nay, Sir Nicholas,
Let it alone; my State now will but mocke me.
When I came hither, I was Lord High Conitable,
And Duke of Buckingham: now, poore Edward Bobun;
Yet I am richer then my bafe Accusers,
That neuer knew what Truth meant: I now feale it;
And with that bloud will make 'em one day groane for't.
My noble Father Henry of Buckingham,
Who firft rais'd head against Vforping Richard,
Flying for succour to his Servant Banister,
Being diftreffed; was by that wretch betrayd,
And without Tryall, fell; Gods peace be with him.
Henry the Seauneth succeeding, truly pittyng
My Fathers loffe; like a moft Royall Prince
Refor'd me to my Honours: and out of ruins
Made my Name once more Noble. Now his Sonne,
Henry the Eight, Life, Honour, Name and all
That made me happy; at one stroke he's taken
For euer from the World. I had my Tryall,
And muft needs faie a Noble one; which makes me
A little happier then my wretched Father:
Yet thus faire we are beguine: for both
Fell by our Servants, by thofe Men we lou'd moft:
A moft vnnatural and faithlesse Service.
Heauen ha's an end in all: yet, you that heare me,
This from a dying man receiue as certaine:
Where you are liberall of your loues and Counsels,
Be faire you be not looie; for those you make friends,
And
And give your hearts to; when they once perceiue
The leaf rub in your fortunes, fall away
Like water from ye, never found againe
But where they meane to minke ye: all good people
Pray for me, I must now forlike ye; the last houre
Of my long weary life is come vpon me:
Farewell, and when you would say somthing that is fas,
Speak how I fall,
I have done; and God forgive me.

Exeunt Duke and Traines.

1. O, this is full of pitty; Sir, it calves
I fear, too many curses on their heads
That were the Authors.
2. If the Duke be guilteffe,
'Tis full of woe: yet I can giue you inckling
Of an enfuing euill, if it fall,
Greater then this.
1. Good Angels keepe it from vs:
What may it be? you doe not doubt my faith Sir?
2. This Secret is so weighty, twill require
A strong faith to conceale it.
1. Let me haue it:
I doe not talke much.
2. I am confident;
You shall Sir: Did you not of late dies heare
A buzzing of a Separation
Between the King and Katherine?
1. Yes, but it held not;
For when the King once heard it, out of anger
He sent command to the Lord Mayor straight.
To stop the rumour, and allay those tongues
That durft differie it.
2. But that slander Sir,
Is found a truth now: for it growses agen
Frehser then e're it was; and held for certaine
The King will venture at it. Either the Cardinall,
Or some about him neere, have out of malice
To the good Queene, posseft him with a scruple
That will vndoe her: To confirme this too,
Cardinall Campeius is arriu'd, and lately,
As all thinke for this busines.
1. This the Cardinall;
And meerely to revenge him on the Emperour,
For not bethowen on him at his asking,
The Archbishoppricke of Toledo, this is purpos'd.
2. I thinke Sir,
You have hit the marke; but is't not cruell,
That she should feel the smart of this: the Cardinall
Will haue his will, and she must fall.
1. 'Tis woffull.
Wee are too open here to argue this:
Let's thinke in priuate more.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Lord Chamberlaine, reading this Letter.

My Lord, the Horrost your Lordship sent for, with all the care I had, I saw well coven, riddien, and furnibij'd. They were young and bandijme, and of the best breed in the North. When they were ready to set out for London, a man of my Lord Cardinall's, by Commision, and maine power toke 'em from me, with this reason: his maifter would bee feru'd before a Subiect, if not before the King, which stop'd our mouths Sir.

I fear he will inteude; well, let him haue them; hee will haue all I thinke.

Enter to the Lord Chamberlaine, the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk.

Nor. Well met my Lord Chamberlaine.
Cham. Good day to both your Graces.
Suff. How is the King imploidy?
Cham. I left him priuate,
Full of sad thoughts and troubles.
Nor. What's the caufe?
Cham. It feemes the Marriage with his Brothe Wife
Ha's crete too neere his Conscience.
Suff. No, his Conscience
Ha's crete too neere another Ladie.
Nor. This is the Cardinals doing: The King-Cardinall,
That blindes Priest, like the eldest Sonne of Fortune,
Turns what he lift. The King will know him one day.
Suff. Pray God he doe,
Hee'l never know himselfe else.
Nor. How hollily he works in all his businesse,
And with what zeal? For now he has crackt the League
Between vs & the Emperor (the Queens great Nephew)
He diues into the Kings Soule, and there fatteres
Dangers, doubts, wringing of the Conscience,
Fears, and delpaires, and all thefe for his Marriage.
And out of all thefe, to refotre the King,
He counfels a Divorce, a loft of her
That like a fewell, ha's hung twenty yeares
About his necke, yet neuer loft her lucre.
Of her that loues him with that excellency,
That Angels loue good men with: Euen of her,
That when the greates ftoake of Fortune falls
Will bleffe the King: and is not this course pious?
Cham. Heauen keep me from such counefel: its moft true
These newes are euery where, euery tongue speaks 'em,
And euery true heart weepes for't. All that da re
Looke into these affaires, fee this maie end,
The French Kings Sifer. Heauen will one day open
The Kings eyes, that fo long haué slept vpon
This bold bad man.
Suff. And free vs from his flauery.
Nor. We had need pray,
And heartily, for our deliuerance;
Or this imperious man will worke vs all
From Princes into Pages: all mens honours
Lie like one lump before him, to be fashion'd
Into what pitch he pleafe.
Suff. For me, my Lords,
I love him not, nor fear him, there's my Creede:
As I am made without him, so Ie fland,
If the King pleafe: his Curfes and his blessings
Touch me alike: th'are breath I not beleue in.
I knew him, and I know him: so I leave him
To him that made him proud; the Pope.
Nor. Let's in:
And with some other busines, put the King
From these sad thoughts, that work too much vpon him:
My Lord, youle beare vs company?
Cham. Excuse me,
The King ha's sent me other where: Befides
You'll finde a moit vnfit time to disturbe him:
Health to your Lordships.

Nor.
The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

Norfolk. Thankes my good Lord Chamberlaine.
Exit Lord Chamberlaine, and the King draws the Curtaine and fits reading penfully.

Suff. How sad he looks; sure he is much afflicted.
Kin. Who's there? Ha?
Norf. Pray God he be not angry. (fleeus)
Kin. Who's there I say? How dare you thruff your Into my private Meditations?
Who am I? Ha?
Norf. A gracious King, that pardons all offences Malice ne're meant: Our breach of Duty this way, Is businesse of Eftate; in which, we come To know your Royall pleafure.
Kin. Ye are too bold; Go too; Ile make ye know your times of businesse: Is this an howre for temporell affairs? Ha?

Enter Wolsey and Campeius with a Commission.
Thou art a cure fit for a King; you welcome Moft learned Reverend Sir, into our Kingdome, Vfe vs, and in: My good Lord, haue great care, I be not found a Talker.
Wol. Sir, you cannot;
I would your Grace would vfe vs but an houre Of private conference.
Kin. We are bufie, goe.
Norf. This Prieff ha's no pride in him?
Suff. Not to speake of: I would not be fo fickle though for his place:
But this can not continue.
Norf. If it doe, Ile venture one; haue at him.
Suff. I another

Exeunt Norfolk and Suffelke.
Wol. Your Grace ha's giuen a President of wifedome About all Princes, in committig freely Your scrupe to the voyeur of Christendome:
Who can be angry now? What Enuy reach you? The Spaniard tide by blood and fauer to her, Muft now confesse, if they have any goodneffe,
The Tryall, luft and Noble. All the Clerkes, (I meane the learned ones in Christian Kingdome) Haue their free voyces. Rome (the Nurfe of Judgement) Invited by your Noble felfe, hath fent One generall Tongue vnto va. This good man, This luft and learned Prieff, Cardinal Campeius, Whom once more, I prefent vnto your Highneffe.
Kin. And once more in mine armes I bid him welcome, And thanke the holy Conclave for their loues, They haue fent me fuch a Man, I would haue wifh'd for.
Cam. Your Grace muft needs deferue all Strangers loues, You are fo Noble: To your Highneffe hand I tender my Comffion; by whole vertue, The Court of Rome commanding. You my Lord Cardinal of Yorkes are ioyn'd with me their Seruant, In the unpartiall judging of this Buifedee.
(ted
Kin. Two equall men: The Queene shall be acall- Forwith for what you come. Where's Gardiner?
Wol. I know your Malefy, ha's alwayes lou'd her So deare in heart, not to deny her that A Woman of leeffe Place might aike by Law; Schollers allow'd freely to argue for her.
Kin. I, and the beft the fhall haue; and my favoure To him that does beft, God forbid els: Cardinal, Prethee call Gardiner to me, my new Secretary. Ifind him a fit fellow.

Enter Gardiner.
Wol. Give me your hand: much joy & fauoure to you;
You are the Kings now.
Gard. But to be commanded
For ever by your Grace, whose hand ha's rais'd me. Kin. Come bither Gardiner.
Walkes and wifhers.
Camp. My Lord of York, was not one Doctor Place In this mans place before him?
Wol. Yes, he was.
Camp. Was he not held a learned man?
Wol. Yes furely.
Camp. Beleeue me, there's an ill opinion spread then, Even of your felle Lord Cardinal.
Wol. How of me?
Camp. They will not flick to say, you enuide him; And fearing he would rife (he was fo vertuous) Kept him a forraigne man still, which fo greeu'd him, That he ran mad, and dice.
Wol. Heau'n peace be with him:
That's Christian care enough: for lying Mururers, There's places of rebuke. He was a Fool; For he would needs be vertuous. That good Fellow, If I command him follows my appointment, I will haue none fo neere els. Learne this Brother, We liue not to be grip'd by meaner perfonas.
Kin. Delier this with modeffy to th' Queene.

Exit Gardiner.
The moft conuenient place, that I can thinke of For fuch receipt of Learning, is Black-Fryers:
There ye fhall meete about this weightie busines,
My Wolfsy, fee it furnish'd, O my Lord,
Would it not grieue an able man to leaue So sweet a Bedfellow? But Conffience, Conffience; O'tis a tender place, and I muft leaue her. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Anne Bullen, and an old Lady.

An. Not for that neither, here's the pang that pinches.
His Highneffe, having liu'd fo long with her, and the So good a Lady, that no Tongue could ever Pronounce diffonour of her; by my life,
She never knew harme-doing: Oh, now after So many courfes of the Sun enthroaned, Still growing in a Malefie and pompe, the which To leaue, a thoufand fold more bitter, then 'Tis fweet at firft t'acquire. After this Proceffe. To give her the auant, it is a pitty
Would muoe a Monfter.
Old La. Hearts of moft hard temper Melt and lament for her.
An. Oh Gods will, much better She ne're had knowne pompe; though't be temporall, Yet if that quarrell. Fortune, do diuorce It from the bearer, 'tis a sufferrance, panging As foule and bodies feuering.
Old L. Alas poore Lady,
She's a stranger now againe.
An. So much the more Muft pitty drop vpon her; verily I fware,tis better to be lowly borne,
And range with humble liers in Content,
Then to be perk’d vp in a gliftring grieue,
And weare a golden frowne.

Old L. Our content
Is our best hating.

Anne. By my troth, and Maidenhead,
I would not be a Queene.

Old L. Behew me, I wold,
And venture Maidenhead for’t; and so would you
For all this fpice of your Hipocrify:
You that have so faire parts of Woman on you,
Haue (too) a Womans heart, which euer yet
Affected Eminence, Wealth, Soueraignty;
Which, to fay troth, are Bleffings; and which guilts
(Sauing your mincing) the capacity
Of your soft Chiuerrl Confidenfe, would receive,
If you might pleafe to ftretch it.

Anne. Nay; good troth.

Old L. Yes troth; & troth; you would not be a Queene?
Anne. No, not for all the riches vnder Heauen.

Old L. This is strange; a threepence bow’d would hire me
Old as I am, to Queene it: but I pray you,
What thinke you of a Dutchefle? Haue you limbs
To bear that load of Title?

An. No in truth.

Old L. Then you are weakly made; plucke off a little,
I would not be a young Count in your way,
For more then blushing comes to: If your backe
Cannot vouchsafe this burthen, tis too weake
Euer to get a Boy.

An. How you doe talke;
I sweare againe, I would not be a Queene,
For all the world:

Old L. In faith, for little England
You’d venture an embalming: I my selfe
Would for Carnaruanbire, although there long’d
No more to th’ Crowne but that: Lo, who comes here?

Enter Lord Chamberlaine.

Cham. Lady;
I shall not fade t’approfe the faire conceit
The King hath of you. I haue perus’d her well,
Beauty and Honour in her are so mingled,
That they have caught the King: and who knowes yet
But from this Lady, may proceed a feme,
To lighten all this Ille. I’le to the King,
And say I spoke with you.

An. My honour’d Lord.

Old L. Why this it is: See, fee,
I haue bene beging fixteen yeares in Court
(Am yet a Courtier beggerly) nor could Come pat betwixt too early, and too late
For any fuit of pounds: and you, (oh fate)
A very fresh Fife heere; yfe, yfe, yfe upon
This compell’d fortune: haue your mouth fild vp,
Before you open it.

An. This is strange to me.

Old L. How tarles it? Is it bitter? Forty pence, no:
There was a Lady once (ts an old Story)
That would not be a Queene, that would fhe not
For all the mud in Egypt, haue you heard it?

An. Come you are pefant.

Old L. With your Theame, I could
O’re-mount the Larke: The Marchionefle of Pembroke?
A thousand pounds a yeare, for pure repect?
No other obligation? by my Life,
That promifes mo thounfands: Honours traine
Is longer then his fore-skirt; by this time
I know your backe will beare a Dutchefle. Say,
Are you not stronger then you were?

An. Good Lady,
Make your felfe mirth with your particular fancy,
And leave me out on’t. Would I had no being
If this fulate my blood a loit; it faints me
To thinke what followes.
The Queene is confortable, and wee forgetfull
In our long abfence: pray doe not delier,
What heere y’haue heard to her.

Old L. What doe you thinke me—— Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Trumpets, Sennet, and Cornets.

Enter two Vergeres, with short fluier wands; next them two Scribes in the habite of Doctors; after them, the Bishop of Canterbury alone; after him, the Bishops of Lincolne, Ely, Rochefter, and S. Alfpb: Next them, with some small difance, follows a Gentleman bearing the Purfe, with the great Seale, and a Cardinals Hat: Then two Priests, bearing each a Siler Crofe; Then a Gentleman Vffer bare-beaded, accompanied with a Sergeant at Armes, bearing a Siler Mace: Then two Gentlemen bearing two great Siler Pillars: After them, ride by ride, the two Cardinals, two Noblemen, with the Sword and Mace. The King takes place under the Cloth of State. The two Cardinals fit under him as Judges. The Queene takes place some difance from the King. The Bishops place themfelves on each fide the Court in manner of a Confiftory: Below them the Scribes. The Lords fit next the Bishops: The reft of the Attendants ftand in convenient order about the Stage.

Card.
The Life of King Henry the Eighth.
Camp. The Queene is obstinate,
Stubborne to Jusitce, apt to accuse it, and Difdainfull to be tride by't; tis not well.
Shee's going away.
Kin. Call her again.
Crier. Katherine, Q. of England, come into the Court.
Gen. Of. Madam, you are calde backe.
Que. What need you note it? pray you keep your way,
When you are calde returne. Now the Lord helpe,
They vexe me past my patience, pray you passe on;
I will not tarry no, nor ever more
Upon this buffel my appearance make,
In any of their Courts.
Exit Queene, and her Attendants.
Kin. Go thy wayes Kate,
That man i' th' world, who shall report he ha's
A better Wife,let him in naught be trusted,
For speaking falle in that ; thou art alone
(If thy rare qualities, sweet gentlenesse,
Thy meeknesse Saint-like, Wife-like Government,
Obeying in commanding, and thy parts
Souveraigne and Piouls els, cou'd speake thee out)
The Queene of earthly Queenes: Shee's Noble borne;
And like her true Nobility, the ha's
Carried her felfe towards me.
Wol. Most gracious Sir,
In humbleftr manner I require your Highnes,
That it shall pleafe you to declare in hearing
Of all these cares(for where I am rob'd and bound,)
There must I be vnloos'd, although not there
At once,and fully fatsisfe) whether eu'er I Did broach this buſines to your Highnes,or Laid any feruple in your way, which might Induce you to the question on'tor eu'er
Have to you, but with thanks to God for such A Royall Lady, speake one, the least word that might Be to the prejudice of her prefent State,
Or touch of her good Perfom?
Kin. My Lord Cardinal,
I doo excufe you; yea, upon mine Honour,
I free you from't: You are not to be taught
That you have manyenemies, that know not
Why they are so; but like to Village Curres,
Barke when their fellows doe. By fome of these
The Queene is put in anger; y'are excu'd:
But will you be more ifufli'd? You euer
Have with'd the fleeping of this buſines, neuer defir'd
It to be flird; but ofte have hindred,oft
The paffages made toward it; on my Honour,
I speake my good Lord Cardinall, to this point;
And thus fare clear him.
Now, what moud me too't,
I will be bold with time and your attention: (too't)
Then marke th'inducement. Thus it came: Siege heede
My Confiance first recei'd a tendernes,
Scruple, and pricke, on certaine Speeches vtt'red
By th'Bishop of Bayon, then French Embaffador,
Who had beene hither fent on the debating
And Marriage twixt the Duke of Orleance, and
Our Daughter Mary: I th'Progreffe of this buſines,
Ere a determinate revolution, hee
(I meane the Bishop) did require a reſpite,
Wherein he might the King his Lord aduertife,
Whether our Daughter ware legittimate,
Respecting this our Marriage with the Dowager,
Sometimes our Brothers Wife. This reſpite ſhooke

The boſome of my Confiance, enter'd me;
Yea, with a fittinge power, and made to tremble
The region of my Breast, which for'd fuch way,
That many maz'd considerings, did thron
And preft in with this Caution. First,me thought
I flond not in the flmite of Heauen, who had Commanded Nature, that my Ladies wombe
If it conceiu'd a male-child by me, shoul'd
Doe no more Offices of life too't: then
The Graue does to th' dead: For her Male Ifue,
Or di'd where they were made, or shortly after
This world had ayr'd them. Hence I took a thought,
This was a judgement on me, that my Kingdome
(Well worthy the beft Heyre o'th World) should not Be gladdned in't by me. Then followes,that I weigh'd the danger which my Realmes flond in
By this my Ifues faile, and that gauze to me
Many a groaning throw : thus hullying in
The wild Sea of my Confiance, I did fieere
Toward this remedy, whereupon we
Now prefent heere together:that's to fay,
I meant to rectifie my Confiance, which
I then did feele full fикke, and yet not well,
By all the Reuerend Fathers of the Land,
And Doctors learnd. First I began in priuate,
With you my Lord of LincoJne; you remember
How vnder my oppreffion I did reece
When I firft moud you.

B. Lin. Very well my Lidge.
Kin. I haue fpoke long, be pleas'd your fry to fay
How farre you fatsifde me.

Lin. So pleafe your Highnes,
The question did at firft fo flagger me,
Bearing a State of mighty moment in't,
And confequence of dread, that I committed
The darlingt Counſil which I had to doubt,
And did entreate your Highnes to this courte,
Which you are running heere.

Kin. I then moud you,
My Lord of Canterbury, and got your leaue
To make this prefent Summons vnfolicite.
I left no Reuerend Perfon in this Court;
But by particular conflent proceeded
Vnder your hands and Seales; therefore goe on,
For no dislike i' th' world againft the perfon
Of the good Queene; but the sharpe thorny points
Of my alleag'd reaſons, drivet this forward:
Prove but our Marriage lawfull, by my Life
And Kingly Dignity, we are contented
To weare our mortall State to come, with her,
(Katherine our Queene) befor the primeſt Creature
That's Parragon'd o'th World

Camp. So pleafe your Highnes,
The Queene being abfent, 'tis a needfull fitneſſe,
That we adiourne this Court till further day;
Meane while, muft be an earnest motion
Made to the Queene to call backe her Appeale
She intends vnto his Holineffe.

Kin. I may perceiue
These Cardinalls trie with me: I abhorre
This dilatory loth, and trickes of Ribaule,
My learn'd and wellbelou'd Servant Cramer,
Preethie returnes, with thy approch: I know,
My comfort comes along: breake vp the Court;
I fay, fet on.

Exeunt, in manner as they enter'd.

v 3
Enter Queen and her Women as at works.

Queen. Take thy Lute wench,
My Soule growes sad with troubles,
Sing, and disperse' em if thou canst: leave working:

Song.

O
PABO with his Lute made Trees,
And the Mountaines tops that freeze,
Bow them-selves when he did sing.
To his Musick, Plants and Flowers
Euer sprung; as Sunne and Showers,
There bad made a laffing Spring.
Euer thing that heard him play,
Euen the Billowes of the Sea,
Hung their heads, & then lay by.
In sweet Musick is such Art,
Killing care, & pride of hearts,
Fall asleeps, or hearing dye.

Enter a Gentleman.

Queen. How now?

Gent. And't please your Grace, the two great Cardinals
Wait in the presence.

Queen. Would they speake with me?

Gent. They wil'd me say fo Madam.

Queen. Pray their Graces
To come neere: what can be their busines
With me, a poore weake woman, faine from favour?
I doe not like their comming; now I thinke on't,
They should bee good men, their affaires as righteous:
But all Hoods, make not Monkes.

Enter the two Cardinals, Wolsey & Campeian.

Wol. Peace to your Highnesse.

Queen. Your Graces find me heere part of a Houfwife,
(I would be all) against the worst may happen:
What are your pleasures with me, reuerent Lords?
Wol. May it please you Noble Madam, to withdraw
Into your private Chamber; we shall give you
The full caufe of our comming.

Queen. Speake it heere.
There's nothing I have done yet o' my Conscience
Deferves a Corner: would all other Women
Could speake this with as free a Soule as I doe.
My Lords, I care not (fo much I am happy
Aboue a number) if my actions
Were tri'de by eu'ry tongue, eu'ry eye saw'em,
Enuy and base opinion fet against'em,
I know my life so even. If your busines
Seeke me out, and that way I am Wife in;
Out with it boldly: Truth loues open dealing.

Card. Tanta est erga te mentis integritas Regina serenissima.

Queen. O good my Lord, no Latin;
I am not such a Truant fince my comming,
As not to know the Language I haue liu'd in: (out:
A strange Tongue makes my caufe more strange, suppit)
Pray speake in English; heere are fome will thanke you,
If you speake the truth, for their poore Miftris fake;
Believe me the heavens bad much wrong, Lord Cardinal,
The willing'ft finne I ever yet committ'd,
May be abolu'd in English.

Card. Noble Lady,

I am sorry my integrity shoul breed,
(And feruice to his Maiestie and you)
So depe fuipition, where all faith was meant;
We come not by the way of Accufation,
To taint that honour euery good Tongue bleffe;
Nor to betray you any way to forrow;
You have too much good Lady: But to know
How you spend your mind in the weighty difference
Betwene the King and you, and to deliver
(like free and honest men) our luft opinions,
And comforts to our caufe.

Camp. Most honor'd Madam,
My Lord of Yorke, out of his Noble nature,
Zeale and obedience he still bore your Grace,
Forgetting (like a good man) your late Censur
Both of his truth and him (which was too farre)
Offers, as I doe, in a ligne of peace,
His Service, and his Counfell.

Queen. To betray me.
My Lords, I thanke you both for your good wills,
Ye speake like honest men, (pray God ye proue fo)
But how to make ye fo'dainly, I Answere.
In such a poyn't of weight, to neere mine Honour,
(More neere my Life I feare) with my weake wit;
And to fuch men of grauity and learning;
In truth I know not. I was fet at worke,
Among my Mids, full little (God knowes) looking
Either for fuch men, or fuch busynesse;
For her fake that I haue bee, for I feele
The laft fit of my Greatnesse; good your Graces
Let me haue time and Counsell for my Caufe:
Alas, I am a Woman frendleffe, hopeleffe.
Wol. Madam,
You wrong the Kings loue with these feares,
Your hopes and friend are infinite.

Queen. In England,
But little for my profit can you thinke Lords,
That any English man dare give me Counsell?
Or be a knowe friends' gainst his Highnes pleasurer,
(Though he be growne fo deperate to be honest)
And liue a Subiect? Nay forfooth, my Friends,
They that muft weigh out my affillctions,
They that my truft muft grow to, liue not heere,
They are (as all my other comforts) far hence
In mine owne Countrey Lords.

Camp. I would your Grace
Would leave your griefes, and take my Counsell.

Queen. How Sir?
Camp. Put your maine caufe into the Kings protection,
Hee's louing and moft gracious. 'Twill be much,
Both for your Honour better, and your Caufe:
For if the tryall of the Law o'retake ye,
You'll part away disgrac'd.
Wol. He tells you rightly.

Queen. Ye tell me what ye wish for both, my ruine:
Is this your Christian Counsell? Out vpon ye.
Heauen is above all yet; there fits a Judge.
That no King can corrupt.

Camp. Your rage mistakes vs.

Queen. The more shame for ye, holy men I thought ye,
Vpon my Soule two reuerend Cardinal Vertues:
But Cardinal Sins, and hollow hearts I feare ye:
Mend 'em for shame my Lords: Is this your comfort?
The Cordiall that ye bring a wretched Lady?
A woman loft among ye, laught at, scorn'd?
I will not wish ye halfe my miseries,
I have more Charity. But say I warn'd ye;
Take heed, for heauens fake take heed, leat at once
The burthen of my forrowes, fall upon ye.

Car. Madam, this is a meer distraction,
You turn the good we offer, into enuy,

|Quee. Ye turne me into nothing. Woe vpon ye,
And all such false Profeffors. Would you have me
(If you have any Luffice, any Pitty,
If ye be any thing but Churchmens habits)
Put my fccse caufe into his hands, that hates me?
Alas, he's banish'd me his Bed already,
His Loue, too long ago. I am old my Lords,
And all the Fellowship I hold now with him is onely my Obedience. What can happen
To me, about this wretchedneffe? All your Studies
Make me a Curfe, like this.

Camp. Your feas are worfe.

Qu. Have I liu'd thus long (let me speake my selfe, Since Vertue findes no friends) a Wife, a true one?
A Woman (I dare fay without Vainglory)
Neuer yet branded with Sufpicion;
Haue I, with all my full Affections
Still met the King ? Lou'd him next Heau'n?Obey'd him?
Bin (out of fondneffe) superflitious to him?
Almoft forgot my Prayres to content him?
And am I thus rewarded? 'Tis not well Lords.
Bring me a constant woman to her Husband,
One that ne're dream'd a Joy, beyond his pleafure;
And to that Woman (when she has done moft)
Yet will I add an Honor; a great Patience,

Car. Madam, you wander from the good
We ayme at.

Qu. My Lord,
I dare not make my selfe fo guiltie,
To give vp willingly that Noble Title
Your Mafter wed me to: nothing but death
Shall e're diuorce my Dignities.

Car. Pray heare me.

Qu. Would I had neuer trod this English Earth,
Or felt the Flatteries that grow vpon it:
Ye have Angels Faces; but Heauen knowes your hearts.
What will become of me now, wretched Lady?
I am the most vnhappy Woman living.
Alas (poore Wenches) where are now your Fortunes?
Shipwrack'd vpon a Kingdome, where no Pitty,
No Friends, no Hope, no Kindred wepe for me?
Almoft no Graue allow'd me? Like the Lilly
That once was Miftis of the Field, and flourifh'd,
Ie hang my head, and perfich.

Car. If your Grace
Could but be brought to know,our Ends are honest,
You'd feel more comfort. Why shold we(good Lady)
Vpon what cause wrong you? Alas, our Places,
The way of our Profeflion is against it;
We are to Cure fuch forrowes, not to fowe'em.
For Goodneffe fake, confider what you do,
How you may hurt your felfe; I, vterly
Grow from the Kings Acquaintance, by this Carriage.
The hearts of Princes kiffe Obedience,
So much they loue it. But to stubborn Spirits,
They fwell and grow, as terrible as torrines.
I know you have a Gentle, Noble temper,
A Soule as euen as a Calme; Pray thinke vs,
Those we profefle,Peace-makers, Friends, and Seruants.

Camp. Madam,you'll finde it fo:
You wrong your Vertues

With these weake Womens fcares. A Noble Spirit
As yours was, put into you, euer cafts
Such doubts as false Coine from it. The King loues you,
Beware you loose it not: For vs(if you pleafe
To truft vs in your bufineffe)we are ready
To vfe our vtnoff Studies, in your seruice.

Qu. Do what ye will, my Lords:
And pray forgive me;
If I haue vs'd my felfe vnmannishly,
You know I am a Woman, lacking wit
To make a feemingly anfwer to fuch perfon.
Pray do my fervice to his Maielie,
He ha's my heart yet, and haue my Prayers
While I haue my life. Come reuereend Fathers,
Bear your Counceals on me. She now begges
That little thought when the fct footing heere,
She should haue bought her Dignities fo deere.

Scena Secunda.

Enter the Duke of Norfolk, Duke of Suffolk, Lord Surry, and Lord Chamberlaine.

Norf. If you will now vnite in your Complaints,
And force them with a Constancy, the Cardinal
Cannot fland vnder them. If you omit
The offer of this time, I cannot promise,
But that you shall fufaine moe new disgraces,
With thefe you beare alreadie.

Sur. I am joyfull
To meete the leaft occasion, that may give me
Remembrance of my Father-in-Law, the Duke,
To be reueng'd on him.

Suf. Which of the Peeres
Haue vncontemn'd gone by him, or at leaft
Strangely negleget? When did he regard
The flame of Noblenesse in any perfon
Out of hismelfe?

Cham. My Lords, you speake your pleasures:
What he deferves of you and me, I know:
What we can do to him (though now the time Gives way to us) I much feare. If you cannot Barre his accelle to'th King, neuer attempt
Any thing on him: for he hath a Witchcraft
Ouer the King in's Tongue.

Nor. O feare him not,
His fpell in that is out: the King hath found
Matter against him, that for euer marres
The Hony of his Language. No, he's fetted
(Not to come off) in his difpleasure.

Sur. Sir,
I should be glad to heare fuch Newes as this Once euer hour.

Nor. Beleeue it, this is true.
In the Divine, his contrarie proceedings
Are all vnfolded ; wherein he appears,
As I would with mine Enemy.

Sur. How came
His praefifts to light?

Suf. Most strangely.

Sur. O how? how?

Suf. The Cardinals Letters to the Pope miscarried,

And
And came to th'eye o'th'King, wherein was read
How that the Cardinall did intreat his Holineffe
To stay the Judgetmeant o'th'Diurce ; for if
It did take place, I do (quoth he) perceiue
My King is tangel'd in affection, to
A Creature of the Queenes, Lady Anne Bullen,
Sur. He's the King this?
Suf. Believe it.
Sur. Will this worke?
Cham. The King in this perceiues him, how he coasts
And hedges his owne way. But in this point,
All his trickes foundere, and he brings his Phyfecke
After his Patients death; the King already Hath married the faire Lady.
Sur. Would he had.
Suf. May you be happy in your with my Lord,
For I professe you have it.
Sur. Now all my joy
Trace the Conjunction.
Suf. My Amen too'.
Nor. All mens.
Suf. There's order given for her Coronation :
Marry this is yet but yong, and may be left
To some cares unreckoned. But my Lords
She is a gallant Creature, and compleate
In minde and feature. I persuade me, from her
Will fall some bleffing to this Land, which shall
In it be memor'd.
Sur. But will the King
Digget this Letter of the Cardinals?
The Lord forbid.
Nor. Marry Amen.
Suf. No, no :
There be more Wafses that buzz about his Nofe,
Will make this fling the sooner. Cardinall Campeius,
Is flone away to Rome, hath 'tane no leave,
Ha's left the caufe o'th'King vnhandled, and
Is posted as the Agent of our Cardinall,
To second all his plot. I do affure you,
The King cry'de Ha, at this.
Cham. Now God incence him,
And let him cry Ha, lowder.
Nor. But my Lord
When returns Cranmer?
Suf. He is return'd in his Opinions, which Have satisfied the King for his Diuorce,
Together with all famous Colledges
Almost in Chriftendome : shortly (I beleuee)
His second Marriage shall be publish'd, and
Her Coronation. Katherine no more
Shall be call'd Queene, but Princeffe Dowager,
And Widdow to Prince Arthur
Nor. This fame Cranmer's
A worthy Fellow, and hath tane much paine
In the Kings butineffe.
Suf. He ha's, and we shall see him
For it, an Arch-byhop.
Nor. So I heare.
Suf. 'Tis so.
Enter Wolsey and Cromwell.
The Cardinall.
Nor. Obfcrue, obfcrue, heer's moody.
Car. The Packett Cromwell,
Gau't you the King?
Crom. To his owne hand, in's Bed-chamber.
Car. Looks he o' th'inside of the Paper?
Crom. Prefently
He did vnfeale them, and the firft he view'd,
He did it with a Serious minde : a heede
Was in his countenance. You he bad
Attend him heere this Morning.
Car. Is he ready to come abroad?
Crom. I thinke by this he is.
Car. Leave me a while.
Exit Cromwell.
It shall be to the Dutches of Alanfon,
The French Kings Sister; He shall marry her.
Anne Bullen? No : I le no Anne Bullen for him,
There's more in't then faire Viage. Bullen?
No, we'll no Bullen : Speedily I with
To heare from Rome. The Marchionesse of Penroke?
Nor. He's discontented.
Suf. May be he heares the King
Does whet his Anger to him.
Sur. Sharpe enough,
Lord for thy Luffice.
Car. The late Queenes Gentlewoman?
A Knights Daughter
To be her Miftris Miftria? The Queenes, Queene?
This Candle burns not cleere, 'tis I must snuffe it,
Then out it goes. What though I know her vertuous
And well deferving? yet I know her for
A fpleenie Lutheran, and not wholome to
Our caufe, that the should lye i'th'bofome of Our hard rul'd King. Againe, there is frung vp
An Heretique, an Arch-one; Cranmer, one
Hath crawl'd into the fauour of the King,
And is his Oracle.
Nor. He is vex'd at something.

Enter King, reading of a Scedule.

Suf. I would twer somthing you wou'd fret the firong,
The Mafter-cord on't heart.
Suf. The King, the King.
King. What ples of wealth hath he accumulated
To his owne portion? And what expence by'th'houre
Seemes to flow from him? How, I'th'name of Thrift
Does he rake this together? Now my Lords,
Saw you the Cardinall?
Nor. My Lord, we haue
Stood heere obferving him. Some strange Commotion
Is in his braine: He bites his lip, and flarts,
Stops on a fomeine, lookes upon the ground,
Then lays his finger on his Temple: straight
Springs out into faft gate, then flops againe,
Strikes his breft hard, and anon, he caftes
His eye againft the Moone: in moft strange Poftures
We have seenne him fet himselfe.
King. It may well be,
There is a mutiny in's minde. This morning,
Papers of State he sent me, to perufe
As I requir'd: and wou't you what I found
There (on my Confiendence put wivningly)
Forfooth an Inventory, thus importing
The feueral parcels of his Plate.his Treafure,
Rich Stuffes and Ornaments of Houfhold, which I finde at fuch proud Rates, that it out-speakes
Poffiffion of a Subiect.
Nor. It's Heauen's will,
Some Spirit put this paper in the Packet,
To bleffe your eye withall.
King. If we did thinke

His
His Contemplation were above the earth,
And fixt on Spirituall obiecf, he should still Dwell in his Musings, but I am afraid
His Thinkings are below the Moon, not worth
His furious considering.

King takes to his Seat, whibers Lowell, who goes to the Cardinal.

Car. Heaven forgive me,
Euer God blesse your Highness.

King. Good my Lord,
You are full of Heavenly Ruffles, and bear the Inuencyory
Of your best Graces, in your minde, the which
You were now running o're; you have scarce time
To deale from Spirituall luyure, a brieve span
To keepe your earthly Audit, sure in that
I deeme you an ill Husband, and am gald
To have you therein my Companion.

Car. Sir,
For Holy Offices I have a time; a time
To think vpon the part of buifiefe, which
I beare th' State; and Nature does require
Her times of prefler, which perfume
I her fraile fonne, among't my Brethren mortall,
Must glue my tendance to.

King. You have said well.

Car. And euer may your Highness yoke together,
(As I will lend you caufe,) my doing well,
With my wellayers.

King. 'Tis well faid agen,
And 'tis a kinde of good deede to fay well,
And yet words are no deeds. My Father lou'd you,
He faid he did, and with his deed did Crowne
His word vpon you. Since I had my Office,
I haue kep't you next my Heart, haue not alone
Implored you where high Profits might come home,
But par'd my preffent Hausings, to beftow
My Bounties vpon you.

Car. What should this mean?
Sur. The Lord increafe this buifiefe.

King. Haue I not made you
The prime man of the State? I pray you tell me,
If what I now pronounce, you haue found true:
And if you may confefte it, fay withall
If you are bound to vs, or no. What fay you?
Car. My Soueraine, I confefte your Royall graces
Shower'd on me daily, haue bene more then could
My fudied purpofes requisite, which went Beyond all mans endeavours. My endeavours,
Haue euer come too short of my Desires,
Yet fill'd with my Abilities: Mine owne ends
Haue beene mine fo, that euermore they pointed To'th good of your most Sacred Perfon, and
The profit of the State. For your great Graces
Heap'd vpon me (poore Vndeferuer) I
Can nothing render but Allegiant thankes,
My Prayres to heaven for you; my Loyalty
Which euer ha's, and euer shall be growing,
Till death (that Winter) kill it.

King. Fairely anfwer'd:
A Loyall, and obedient Subleeft is Therin illustrated, the Honor of it
Does pay the Act of it, as 'tis contrary
The fowlenesse is the punishment. I preffume,
That as my hand ha's open'd Bounty to you,
My heart drop'd Loue, my powre rain'd Honor, more
On you, then any: So your Hand, and Heart,

Your Braine, and every Function of your power,
Should, notwithstanding that your bond of duty,
As 'twer in Loues particular, be more
To me your Friend, then any.

Car. I do profefte,
That for your Highneffe good, I euer labour'd
More then mine owne: that am, haue, and will be (Though all the world should cracke their duty to you,
And throw it from their Soule, though perils did Abound, as thicke as thought could make 'em, and Appeare in formes more horrid) yet my Duty,
As doth a Rocke againft the chiding Flood,
Should the approach of this wilde Riuier breake,
And fland vnhaoken yours.

King. 'Tis Nobly spoken:
Take notice Lords, he ha's a Loyall breft,
For you haue feene him open't. Read o're this,
And after this, and then to Breakfast with
What appetite you haue.

Exit King, a frowning vpon the Cardinal, the Nobles strong after him fmalld, and whispering.

Car. What thought this mane.

What fodeaine Anger's this? How haue I reap'd it?
He parted Frowning from me, as if Raine
Leap'd from his Eyes. So looke the chafed Lyon
Vpon the daring Huntman that has gall'd him:
Then makes him nothing. I must reade this paper:
I feare the Story of his Anger. 'Tis fo:
This paper ha's vndone me: 'Tis'Accempt
Of all that world of Wealth I haue drawne together
For mine owne ends, (Indeed to gaine the Popedonne,
And fee my Friends in Rome,) O Neglignce!
Fit for a Folee to fall by: What croffe Diiuel
Made me put this maine Secret in the Packet
I lent the King? Is there no way to cure this?
No new deuide to beate this from his Braines?
I know 'twill firre him strongly; yet I know
A way, if it take right, in fpite of Fortune
Will bring me off againe. What is this? To th'Pope?
The Letter (as I live) with all the Buifiefe
I wri't too Holineffe. Nay then, farewell:
I have touch'd the highest point of all my Greatneffe,
And from that full Meridian of my Glory,
I haft now to my Setting. I shall fall
Like a bright exhalation in the Evening,
And no man fee me more.

Enter to Wolsey, the Duke of Norfolk and Suffolk, the Earle of Surrey, and the Lord Chamberlaine.

Nor. Heare the Kings pleasure Cardinal,
Who commands you
To render vp the Great Seale preffently
Into our hands, and to Confine your felfe
To Ather-houfe, my Lord of Winchehsters,
Till you heare farther from his Highneffe.

Car. Stay:
Where's your Commission? Lords, words cannot carry Authority fo weighty.
So, Who dare croffe 'em,
Bearing the Kings will from his mouth expressly?
Car. Till I finde more then will,or words to do it,
(I meane your malice) know, Officous Lords,
I dare, and muft deny it. Now I feele
Of what course Mettle ye are molde, Enuy,
How eagerly ye follow my Disgraces

As
As if it fed ye, and how fleake and wanton
Ye appeare in every thing may bring my ruine?
Follow your enious courtes, men of Malice;
You haue Christian warrant for 'em, and no doubt
In time will finde their fit Rewards. That Seale
You ask with such a Violence, the King
(Mine, and your Mater) with his owne hand, gave me:
Bad me enjoy it, with the Place, and Honors
During my life; and to confirm his Goodneffe,
Tide it by Letters Patent. Now, who'll take it?
Sur. The King that gauie it.
Car. It must be himselfe then.
Sur. Thou art a proud Traitor, Priest.
Car. Proud Lord, thou lyeft:
Within these fortie houres, Surye durft better
Haue burnt that Tongue, than faie faie.
Sur. Thy Ambition
(Thou Scarlet finne) rob'd this bewailing Land
Of Noble Buckingham, my Father-in-Law,
The heads of all thy Brother-Cardinals,
(With thee, and all thy beft parts bound together)
Weigh'd not a hair of his. Plague of your policie,
You sent me Letters from Ireland,
Farre from his foccur: from the King, from all
That might have mercie on the fault, thou gau't him:
Whil'st your great Goodneffe, out of holy pitty,
Abfolou'd him with an Axe.
Wol. This, and all else
This talking Lord can lay vpon my credit,
I answ'er, is moft falfe. The Duke by Law Found his deferts. How innocent I was
From any private malice in his end,
His Noble Iurie, and foule Caufe can witnesse.
If I lou'd many words, Lord, I should tell you,
You haue as little Honofle, as Honor,
That in the way of Loyalte, and Truth,
Toward the King, my euer Rollall Mafter,
Dare mate a founder man then Surrie can be,
And all that loue his follies.
Sur. By my Soule,
Your long Coat (Priest) protects you,
Thou shou'dt feel e
My Sword i' th' Life blood of thee elfe. My Lords,
Can ye endure to hear this Arrogance?
And from this Fellow? If we loue thus tamely,
To be thus faded by a pece of Scarlet,
Farewell Nobilitie; let his Grace go forward,
And dare vs with his Cap, like Larkes.
Card. All Goodneffe
Is poynman to thy Stomacke.
Sur. Yes, that goodneffe
Of gleaning all the Lands wealth into one,
Into your owne hands (Card'nall) by Extortion:
The goodneffe of your intercepted Packets
You writ to th' Pope, against the King: your goodneffe
Since you provoike me, shall be most notorious.
My Lord of Norfolke, as you are truly Noble,
As you repect the common good, the State
Of our delphi'd Nobilitie, our fffues,
(Whom if he lye, will scarce be Gentlemen)
Produce the grand fumme of his finnes, the Articles
Collected from his life. He flarte you
Worfe than the Searing Bell, when the browne Wenches
Lay killing in your Armes, Lord Cardinal.
Car. How much me thinkes, I could defiphe this man,
But that I am bound in Charitie against it.

Nor. Thofe Articles, my Lord, are in the Kings hand:
But thus much, they are foule ones.
Wol. So much fairer
And spotlesse, shall mine Innocence arife,
When the King knowes my Truth.
Sur. This cannot faue you:
I thanke my Memorie, I yet remember
Some of thofe Articles, and out they fhall.
Now, if you can blufh, and defiphe Cardinall,
You'll drow a little Honour.
Wol. Speake on Sir,
I dare your worft Obfekions: If I blufh,
It is to fee a Nobleman want manners.
Sur. I had rather want thofe, then my head;
Haue at you.
Fifth, that without the Kings affent or knowledge,
You wrought to be a Legate, by which power
You maim'd the Jurifdiction of all Bishops.
Nor. Then, That in all you writ to Rome, or elfe
To Forraigne Princes, Ego & Rex meus
Was ftill infecrib'd: in which you brought the King
To be your Seruant.
Suf. Then, that without the knowledge
Either of King or Councell, when you went
Ambassador to the Emperor, you made bold
To carry into Flanders, the Great Seale.
Sur. Item, You fent a large Commission
To Gregory de Caffade, to conclude
Without the Kings will, or the States allowance,
A League betweene his Highneffe, and Ferrara.
Suf. That out of meere Ambition, you haue caus'd
Your holy-Hat to be famt at the Kings Coine.
Sur. Then, That you haue fent innumerable Subftance,
(By what means got, I leave to your owne confidence)
To furnih Rome, and to prepare the ways
You haue for Dignities, to the meere vndooin
Of all the Kingdome. Many more there are,
Which ftince they are of you, and oifuus,
I will not taint my mouth with.

Cham. O my Lord,
Preffe not a falling man too farre'tis Vertue:
His faults lye open to the Lawes, let them
(Not you) correct him. My heart weepes to fee him
So little, of his great Selfe.
Suf. Lord Cardinall, the Kings further pleure is,
Because all thofe things you have done of late
By your power Legatius within this Kingdome,
Fall into th' compaffe of a Preumineure;
That therefore fuch a Write be fued againft you,
To forfeit all your Goods, Lands, Tenements,
Castles, and whatsoever, and to be
Out of the Kings protection. This is my Charge.
Nor. And fo we'll leave you to your Meditations
How to liue better. For your stubborne anfwer
About the guing backe the Great Seale to vs,
The King fhall know it, and (no doubt) shall thank you.
So fare you well, my little good Lord Cardinall.

Exeunt all but Wolsey.

Wol. So farewell, to the little good you bear me.
Farewell? A long farewell to all my Greatneffe.
This is the fight of Man; to day he puts forth
The tender Leaues of hopes, to morrow Blossomes,
And bears his blushing Honors thicke vpon him:
The third day, comes a Froft; a killing Froft,
And when he thinkes, good eafe man, full surely
The Life of King Henry the Eight.

No Sun, shall euer vther forth mine Honors,
Or glide againe the Noble Troopes that weighted
Upon my smiles. Go get thee from me Cromwel,
I am a poore falne man, vnworthy now
To be thy Lord, and Mafter. Seek the King
(That Sun, I pray may neuer set). I haue told him,
What, and how true thou art; he will advance thee:
Some little memory of me, will firre him
(I know his Noble Nature) not to let Thy hopefull seruice perish too. Good Cromwel
Neglect him not; make vse now, and prouide
For thine owne future safety.

Crom. O my Lord,
Muift I then leaue you? Muift I needes forgo
So good, so Noble, and so true a Mafter?
Bears witnesse, all that have not hearts of Iron,
With what a forrow Cromwel leaves his Lord.
The King shall haue my seruice; but my prayers
For euer, and for euer shall be yours.

Card. Cromwel, I did not thinke to shed a teare
In all my Miferies: But thou haft forc'd me
(Out of thy honest truth) to pray the Woman.
Let's dry our eyes: And thus farre heare me Cromwel,
And when I am forgotten, as I shall be,
And fleene in dull cold Marble, where no mention
Of me, more muift be heard of: Say I taught thee;
Say Wolsey, that once trod the ways of Glory,
And founded all the Depths, and Shoales of Honor,
Found thee a way (out of his wracke) to rife in:
A fure, and safe one, though thy Mafter mift it.
Marke but my Fall, and that that Ruind me:
Cromwel, I charge thee, flying away Ambition,
By that finne fell the Angels: how can man then
(The Image of his Maker)hope to win by it?
Loure thy felfe lafte, cherifh thofe hearts that hate thee;
Corruption wins not more then Honesty.
Still in thy right hand, carry gentle Peace
To silence enuius Tongues. Be luft, and feare not;
Let all the ends thou aym'ft at, be thy Countries,
Thy Gods, and Truths. Then if thou fall't (O Cromwel)
Thou fall't a bleffed Martyr.

Serve the King: And prythee leade me in:
There take an Inuentory of all I haue,
To the laft peny, 'tis the Kings. My Robe,
And my Integrity to Heauen, is all,
I dare now call mine owne. O Cromwel, Cromwel,
Had I but feru'd my God, with halfe the Zeale
I feru'd my King: he would not in mine Age
Hawe left me naked to mine Enemies.

Crom. Good Sir, haue patience.

Card. So I haue. Farewell
The Hopes of Court, my Hopes in Heauen do dwell.

Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting one another.

1 Y'are well met once again.
2 So are you.
1 You come to take your stand here, and behold
The Lady Anne,affle from her Coronation.

599
2 'Tis all my businesse. At our last encounter, The Duke of Buckingham came from his Triall.
1 'Tis very true. But that time offer'd forrow, This generall joy.
2 'Tis well : The Citizens I am sure have fewne for all their Royall minds, As let 'em have their rights, they are ever forward In Celebration of this day with Shewes, Pageants, and Sights of Honor.
1 Neuer, greater, Nor Ile affure you better taken Sir.
2 May I be bold to aske what that contains, That Paper in your hand.
1 Yes, 'tis the Life Of those that claime their Offices this day, By custome of the Coronation. The Duke of Suffolke is the first, and claimes To be high Steward; Next the Duke of Norfolke, He to be Earle Marshall : you may reade the rest.
1 I thanke you Sir: Had I not known those customs, I shou'd have beene beholding to your Paper: But I befeech you, what's become of Katherine The Princeſſe of Cadgwith? How goes her businesse?
1 That I can tell you too. The Archbishops Of Canterbury, accompanied with other Learned, and Reuerend Fathers of his Order, Held a late Court at Dunstable ; five miles off From Ampthill, where the Princeſſe lay, to which She was often cvted by them, but appear'd not: And to be short, for not Appearance, and The Kings late Scruple, by the maine affift Of all theſe Learned men, she was diuore'd, And the late Marriage made of none effect: Since which, she was remou'd to Kymmalton, Where she remains now fickle.
2 Alas good Lady, The Trumpets found; Stand close, The Queene is comming. Ho-boyet.

The Order of the Coronation.

1 A lively Flourish of Trumpets.
2 Then, two Judges.
3 Lord Chancellor, with Purfe and Mace before him.
4 Quireſſers singing. Muficke.
5 Major of London, bearing the Mace. Then Garter, in his Coat of Armes, and on his head be wore a Gilt Copper Crown.
6 Marqueſſe Dorſet, bearing a Scepter of Gold, on his head, a Demy Coronall of Gold. With him, the Earle of Suffolk, bearing the Rod of Siluer with the Duke, Crowned with an Earles Coronet. Collars of Elſes.
7 Duke of Suffolk, in his Robe of Elſate, his Coronet on his head, bearing a long white Wand, as High Steward. With him, the Duke of Norfolke, with the Rod of Marſhpallhip, a Coronet on his head. Collars of Elſes.
8 A Canopy, borne by four of the Cinque-Ports, under it the Queene in her Robe, in her baire, richly adorne with b Pearle, Crowned. On each side her, the Bishops of London, and Winchetter.
9 The Olde Dutchesſe of Norfolke, in a Coronall of Gold, wrought with Flowers, bearing the Queenes Traine.
10 Certaine Ladies or Counteffes, with plaine Circlets of Gold, without Flowers. Exeunt, first passing over the Stage in Order and State, and then, A great Flourish of Trumpets.

2 A Royall Traine beleeue me: These I know: Who's that that bears the Scepter?
1 Marqueſſe Dorſet, And that the Earle of Surrey, with the Rod.
2 A bold brave Gentleman. That should bee The Duke of Suffolk.
1 'Tis the fame : high Steward.
2 And that my Lord of Norſolke?
1 Yes,
2 Heauen bleſſe thee, Thouhaft the sweeteft face I euer look'd on. Sir, as I have a Soule, she is an Angell; Our King ha's all the Indies in his Armes, And more, and richer, when he straines that Lady, I cannot blame his Conſcience.
1 They that beare The Cloath of Honoure her, are foure Barons Of the Cinque-Ports.
2 Thofe men are happy, And fo are all, are neere her. I take it, she that carries up the Traine, Is that old Noble Lady, Dutchesſe of Norſolke.
1 It is, and all the rest are Counteffes.
2 Their Coronets say so. These are Stares indeed, And sometimes falling ones.
2 No more of that.

Enter a third Gentleman.
1 God faue you Sir. Where haue you bin brawling?
3 Among the crow'd 'th'Abbe, where a finger Could not be wedg'd in more: I am fliffed With the meere rankneffe of their joy.
2 You faw the Ceremony?
3 That I did.
1 How was it?
3 Well worth the seeing.
2 Good Sir, speake it to vs?
3 As well as I am able. The rich streaume Of Lords, and Ladies, hauing brought the Queene To a prepar'd place in the Quire, fell off A diftance from her; while her Grace fate downe To ref a while, some halfe an houre, or fo, In a rich Chaire of State, oppoſing freely The Beauty of her Perfom to the People. Beleeue me Sir, she is the goodlieft Woman That euer lay by man: which when the people Had the full view of, such a noyle arose,
As the throwides make at Sea, in a iffeTEMPELT, As lowd, and to as many Tunes. Hats, Cloakes, (Doublets, I think) flew vp, and had their Faces Bin loofe, this day they had beene loft. Such joy I never faw before. Great belly'd women, That had not halfe a weeke to go, like Rammes In the old time of Warre, would shake the preſfe And make'em reeſe before'em. No man liuing Could say this is my wife there, all were wouen So stranfely in one pce.
2 But what follow'd?
3 At length, her Grace rofe, and with modest paces Came to the Altar, where the kneel'd, and Saint-like Caft her faire eyes to Heauen; and pray'd devoutly. Then rofe againe, and bow'd her to the people: When by the Arch-bishop of Canterbury, She had alſe the Royall making of a Queene; As holy Oyle, Edward Confessors Crownes, The Rod, and Bird of Peace, and all fuch Emblems Laid Nobly on her: which perform'd, the Quire
With all the choyfeft Muſick of the Kingdom, Together fung Te Deum. So the parted, And with the fame full State pac'd backe againe To Yorke-Place, where the Feast is held.
1 Sir,
You must no more call it Yorke-place, that's past: For since the Cardinall fell, that Titles loft, "Tis now the Kings, and call'd White-Hall.
3 I know it:
But 'tis fo lately alter'd, that the old name Is fresh about me.
2 What two Reuernnd Bytophs Were those that went on each side of the Queens?
3 Stobeyle and Gardiner, the one of Winchester, Newly prefer'd from the Kings Secretary: The other London.
2 He of Winchester Is held no great good louer of the Archbishops, The vertuous Cranmer.
3 All the Land knowes that:
How euer,yet there is no great breach, when it comes Cranmer will finde a Friend will not shrinke from him.
2 Who may that be, I pray you.
3 Thomas Cranwell,
A man in much efteeme with th'King, and truly A worthy Friend. The King ha's made him Master o'th'Jewell Houfe, And one already of the Priuy Counsell.
2 He will deferue more.
3 Yes without all doubt. Come Gentlemen, ye shall go my way, Which is to'th Court, and there ye shall be my Guests: Something I can command. As I walke thither, lie tell ye more.
Bob. You may command vs Sir. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Katherine Dowager, fikke, lead betwene Griffith, her Gentleman Vber, and Patience her Woman.

Grif. How do's your Grace?
Kaib. O Griffith, fikke to death: My Legges like loaden Branches bow to'th'Earth, Willing to leave their burthen: Reaeh a Chaire, So now (me thinkske) I feele a little eafe. Did'th thou not tell me Griffith, as thou laed'th mee, That the great Childe of Honor, Cardinall Wolsey Was dead?
Grif. Yes Madam: but I thanke your Grace Out of the paine you suffer'd, gaue no eare too't.
Kaib. Pre'thee good Griffith, tell me how he dy'de.
If well, he flept before me happily
For my example.
Grif. Well, the voyce goes Madam, For after the flout Earle Northumberland Arrested him at Yorke, and brought him forward As a man forely tainted, to his Anfwer, He fell fikke fobainely, and grew fo ill He could not fit his Mule.
Kaib. Alas poore man.
Grif. At laift, with eafe Rodes, he came to Leicester, Lodg'd in the Abbey; where the reuerend Abbot With all his Counet, honourably receiued him; To whom he gaue these words. O Father Abbot, An old man, broken with the stormes of State, Is come to lay his weary bones among ye: Give him a little eart for Charity. So went to bed; where eangerly his fickness Purf'd him still, and three nights after this, About the houre of eight, which he himfelfe Foretold should be his laft, full of Repentance, Continuall Meditations, Tears, and Sorrows, He gaued his Honors to the world aget, His bleffed part to Heauen, and feipt in peace.
Kaib. So may he reft,
His Faults lyte gently on him: Yet thus farre Griffith, give me leauue to fpeakke him, And yet with Charity. He was a man Of an vnbounded romacke, euer ranking Himfelfe with Princes. One that by fuggtion Ty'de all the Kingdome. Symonie, was fare play, His owne Opinion was his Law. I'th'prefence He would fy vntruthe, and be euer double Both in his words, and meaning. He was never (But where he meant to Ruine) pitiful.
His Promifes, were as he then was, Mighty: But his performance, as he is now, Nothing: Of his owne body he was ill, and gau
The Clergy ill example.
Grif. Noble Madam:
Mens euill manners, lue in Bratte, their Vertues We write in Water. May it pleafe your Highneffe To heare me fpeakke his good now?
Kaib. Yes good Griffith, I were malicious elfe.
Grif. This Cardinall, Though from an humble Stocke, vndoubtedly Was fahion'd to much Honor. From his Cradle He was a Scholler, and a ripe, and good one: Exceeding wife, faire spokene, and perfwading: Lofty, and fowre to them thate lou'd him not: But, to those men that fought him, sweet as Summer. And though he were vnfatisfied in getting, (Which was a finne) yet in beftowing, Madam, He was moft Princely: Euer witneffe for him Thofe twines of Learning, that he rais'd in you, Ipfwich and Oxford: one of which, fell with him, Vnwillong to out-live the good that did it. The other (though vnsinne'd) yet fo Famous, So excellent in Art, and still fo rising, That Chriftendome shall euer fpeakke his Vertue. His Ouerthrow, head'Happineffe vpon him: For then, and not till then, he felt himfelfe, And found the Blesfedeffe of being little. And to adde greater Honors to his Age Then man could give him; he dy'de, fearing God.
Kaib. After my death, I wish no other Herald,
No other speaker of my luing Actions, To keepe mine Honor, from Corruption, But fuch an honete Chronicler as Griffith. Whom I most hated Luuing, thou ha't made mee With thy Religious Truth, and Modell, (Now in his Athea) Honor: Peace be with him.
Patience, be neere me still, and fet me lower, I have not long to trouble thee. Good Griffith, Caufe the Mufitians playe me that sad note I nam'd my Knell; whil't I fitt meditating

x

On
On that Celestial Harmony I go too.
Said and solemnly Musick.
Grif. She is asleep: Good wenche, let's sit down quiet,
For feare we wake her. Softly, gentle Patience.

The Ufjon.
Enter solemnly tripping one after another, five Personages, clad in white Robes, wearing on their heads Garlands of Bayes, and golden Vizards on their faces. Branches of Bayes or Palm in their bands. They first Conge unto her, then Dance: and at certaine Changes, the first two bold a faire Garland over her Head, at which the other four make reverend Curtseys. Then the two that held the Garland, deliver the same to the other next two, who obserue the same Order in their Changes, and holding the Garland over her Head. Which done, they deliver the same Garland to the last two: who likewise obserue the same Order. As which (as it were by inspiration) she makes (in her sleepe) signs of rejoicing, and boldes up her hands to heaven. And so, in their Dancing vanitie, carrying the Garland with them. The Musick continues.
Kath. Spirits of peace, where are ye? Are ye all gone? And leave me heere in wretchednesse, behind ye?
Grif. Madam, we are heere.
Kath. It is not you I call for,
Saw ye none enter since I slept?
Grif. None Madam.
Kath. No! Saw you not even now a blessed Troope
Inuite me to a Banquet, whose bright faces
Calt thousand beames upon me, like the Sun?
They promis'd me eternal Happinesse,
And brought me Garlands (Griffith) which I feele
I am not worthy yet to weare; I shall affuredly.
Grif. I am most joyfull Madam, such good dreams
Possesse your Fancy.
Kath. Bid the Musick cease,
They are harsh and heauy to me. Musick ceases.
Pat. Do you note
How much her Grace is alter'd on the foidaine?
How long her face is drawne? How pale the lookes,
And of an earthy cold? Marke her eyes?
Grif. She is going Wenche. Pray, pray.
Pat. Heauen comfort her.
Enter a Messinger.
Msf. And't like your Grace—
Kath. You are a fawcy Fellow,
Deferre we no more Reuence?
Grif. You are too blame,
Knowing she will not loose her wondt Greatnesse
To vfe so rude behauiour. Go too, kneele.
Msf. I humbly do entreat your Highnesse pardon,
My hauft made me vnmannderly. There is faying
A Gentleman fent from the King, to fee you.
Kath. Admit him entrance Griffith. But this Fellow
Let me ne're fee againe.
Enter Lord Capucibus.
If my fight faile not,
You shou'd be Lord Ambassador from the Emperor,
My Royall Nephew, and your name Capucibus.
Cap. Good Lord! I am the fame. Your Servant.
Kath. O my Lord,
The Times and Titles now are alter'd strangely
With me, since first you knew me.
But I pray you,
What is your pleafure with me?

Cap. Noble Lady,
First mine owne seruice to your Grace, the next
The Kings requet, that I would visit you,
Who greeues much for your weaknesse, and by me
Sends you his Princely Commendations,
And heartily entreats you take good comfort.
Kath. O my good Lord, that comfort comes too late,
'Tis like a Pardon after Execution;
That gentle Phyficke gien in time, had cur'd me:
But now I am past all Comforts heere, but Prayers.
How does his Highnesse?
Cap. Madam, in good health.
Kath. So may he euer do, and euer flourishe,
When I shall dwell with Wormes, and my poore name
Banish'd the Kingdome. Patience, is that Letter
I caus'd you write, yet fent away?
Pat. No Madam.
Kath. Sir, I most humbly pray you to deliver
This to my Lord the King.
Cap. Most willing Madam.
Kath. In which I have commended to his goodnesse
The Modell of our chaft e Ioues: his yong daughter,
The dewes of Heauen fall thicke in Blessings on her,
Befeeching him to give her vertuous breeding.
She is yong, and of a Noble modest Nature,
I hope she will deferue well; and a little
To loue her for her Mothers fake, that lou'd him,
Heauen knowes how deereely.
My next poore Petition,
Is, that his Noble Grace would haue some pittie
Vpon my wretched women, that fo long
Haue follow'd both my Fortunes, faithfully,
Of which there is not one, I dare asow
(And now I shoul not lye) but will deferue
For Vertue, and true Beautie of the Soule,
For honeflie, and decent Carriage
A right good Husband (let him be a Noble)
And fure thofe men are happy that haue 'em.
The laft is for my men, they are the pooreft,
(But poverty could never draw 'em from me)
That they may haue their wages, duly paid 'em,
And something over to remember me by.
If Heauen had pleasa'd to haue given me longer life
And able meanes, we had not parted thus.
These are the whole Contents, and good my Lord,
By that you loue the deerest in this world,
As you with Chriftian peace to foules departed,
Stand thefe poore peoples Friend, and vrg the King
To do me this laft right.
Cap. By Heauen I will,
Or let me loafe the fathion of a man,
Kath. I thanke you honeft Lord. Remember me
In all humiliet unto his Highnesse:
Say his long trouble now is paffing
Out of this world. Tell him in death I blest him
(For fo I will) mine eyes grow dimme. Farewell
My Lord. Griffith farewell. Nay Patience,
You must not leave me yet. I mult to bed,
Call in more women. When I am dead, good Wenche,
Let me be vs'd with Honours; drew me ouer
With Maiden Flowers, the world may know
I was a chafte Wife, to my Graue; Embalm me,
Then lay me forth (although vnqueen'd) yet like
A Queene, and Daughter to a King enterre me.
I can no more.

Exeunt leading Katherine.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Gardiner Bishop of Winchester, a Page with a Torch before him, met by Sir Thomas Lovell.

Gard. It's one a clocke Boy, is't not.
Boy. It hath th'oone.
Gard. Throfe should be hours for necessaries.
Not for delights : Times to repayre our Nature
With comforting repose, and not for vs
To waaste these times. Good houre of night Sir Thomas :
Whether so late?
Lou. Came you from the King, my Lord?
Gar. I did Sir Thomas, and left him at Primero
With the Duke of Suffolk.
Lou. I muft to him too
Before he go to bed. Ie take my leue.
Gard. Not yet Sir Thomas Lovell : what's the matter?
Lou. It feemes you are in haf : and if there be
No great offence belongs too't, glue your Friend
Some touch of your late buenefte : Affairs that waile
(As they fay Spirits do) at midnight, haue
In them a wilder Nature, then the buenefte
That feekes dispatch by day.
Lou. My Lord, I love you ;
And durft commend a secret to your eare
Much weightier then this worke. The Queens in Labor
They lay in great Extremity, and fear'd
Shee'll with the Labour, end.
Gard. The fruites the goes with
I pray for heartily, that it may finde
Good time, and liue : but for the Stocke Sir Thomas,
I with it grubb'd vp now.
Lou. Me thinkes I could
Cry the Amen, and yet my Confidence fayes
Shee's a good Creature, and sweet-Ladie do's
Defuerre our better wishes.
Gard. But Sir, Sir,
Heare me Sir Thomas, y'are a Gentleman
Of mine owne waye. I know you Wife, Religious,
And let me tell you, it will ne're be well,
'Twill not Sir Thomas Lovell, tak't of me,
Till Grammer, Cromwel, her two hands, and thee
Sleepe in their Graues.
Louell. Now Sir, you speake of two
The moft remark'd i'th'Kingdome : as for Cromwell,
Befide that of the Jewell-Houfe, is made Mafter
O'th'Roiles, and the Kings Secretary. Further Sir,
Stands in the gap and Trade of moe Preferments,
With which the Lime will loade him. Th'Archbyshop
Is the Kings hand, and tongue, and who dare speake
One syllable againdt him?
Gard. Yes, yes, Sir Thomas,
There are that Dare, and I my felue have vent'rd
To speake my minde of him : and indeed this day,
Sir (I may tell it you) I thinke I haue
Infent the Lords o'th'Councell, that he is (For fo I know he is, they know he is)
A moft Arch-Hereftine, a Peffilence
That does infect the Land : with which, they moued
Haue broken with the King, who hath fo farre
Guen eare to our Complaint, of his great Grace,
And Princely Care, fore-seeing those fell Mischifes,
Our Reasons layd before him, hath command'd
To morrow Morning to the Councell Board
He be conuented. He's a ranke weed Sir Thomas,
And we must root him out. From your Affairs
I hinder you too long :Good night, Sir Thomas.
Lou. Many good nights, my Lord, I reftr your fervant.
Enter King and Suffolk.

King. Charles, I will play no more to night,
My mindes not on't, you are too hard for me.
Suff. Sir, I did neuer win of you before.
King. But little Charles,
Not hall not when my Fancies on my play,
Now Louell, from the Queene what is the Newes.
Lou. I could not perfonally deliever to her
What you commanded me, but by her woman,
I fent your Mefflage, who return'd her thankes
In the great't humblesffe, and defir'd your Highonnefse
Moft heartily to pray for her.
King. What fay'lt thou! Ha?
To pray for her? What, is the crying out?
Lou. So faid her woman, and that her fuffrance made
Almost each pang, a death.
King. Alas good Lady.
Suf. God fately quire her of her Burthen, and
With gentle Trauaille, to the gladding
Of your Highonnefse with an Heire.
King. 'Tis midnight Charles,
Prythee to bed, and in thy Prayres remember
Th'extafe of my poore Queene. Leave me alone,
For I muft thinke of that, which company
Would not be friendly too.
Suf. I with your Highonnefse
A quiet night, and my good Miftris will Remember in my Prayers.
King. Charles good night.
Well Sir, what followes?
Enter Sir Anthony Denny.
Den. Sir, I haue brought my Lord the Arch-bys-hop,
As you command'd me.
King. Ha! Canterbury?
Den. I my good Lord.
King. 'Tis true : where is he Denny?
Den. He attends your Highonnefse pleasure.
King. Bring him to vs.
Lou. This is about that, which the Byshop speake,
I am happily come hither.
Enter Grammer and Denny.

King. Away the Gallery.
Louell feemes to fay,
Ha! I haue faid. Be gone.
What?

Cran. I am fereful: Wherefore frowning he thus?
'Tis his Affeft of Terror. All's not well.
King. How now my Lord?
You do desire to know wherefore
I fent for you.
Cran. It is my dutie.
'Tattend your Highonnefse pleasure.
King. Pray you arife.
My good and gracious Lord of Canterburie :
Come, you and I muft waile a turne together:
I haue Newes to tell you.
Come, come, glue me your hand.
Ah my good Lord, I greeue at what I speake,
And am right forte to repeat what followes.
I haue, and moit vnwillingly of late

x 2

Heard
The Life of King Henry the Eight.

Heard many grievous. I do say my Lord
Grievous complaints of you; which being consider'd,
Have mou'd vs, and our Counsell, that you shall
This Morning come before vs, where I know
You cannot with such freedome purge your felfe,
But that till further Triall, in choise Charges
Which will require your Anfwer, you must take
Your patience to you, and be well contented
To make your honse our Tower: you, a Brother of vs
It fits we thus proceed, or else no witneffe
Would come againft you.

_Cran._ I humbly thanke your Highneffe,
And am right glad to catch this good occaftion
Most thoroughly to be winnowed, where my Chaffe
And Corne shall flye afunder. For I know
There's none stands vnder more calam nous tongues,
Then I my felfe, poore man.

_King._ Stand vp, good Canterbury,
_Thy Truth, and thy Integrity is rooted
In vs thy Friend. Give me thy hand, fland vp,
Prythee let's walke. Now by my Holy Dame,
What manner of man are you? My Lord, I look'd
You would have giuen me your Petition, that
I shou'd have tane some paines, to bring together
Your felfe, and your Accusers, and to haue heard you
Without indurance further.

_Cran._ Most dread Liege,
The good I fland on, is my Truth and Honetlie:
If they shall faile, I with mine Enemies
Will triumph o're my perfon, which I weigh not,
Being of those Vertues vacant. I fear nothing
What can be faid againft me.

_King._ Know you not
How your faith flands i' th'world, with the whole world?
Your Enemies are many, and not small: their praftifes
Must bear the fame proportion, and not euer
The Judicie and the Truth o'th'queftion carries
The dew o'th'Verdict with it; at what eafe
Might corrupt minres procure, Knaues as corrupt
To fwear againft you: Such things haue bene done.
You are Potently oppo'd, and with a Malice
Of as great Sizze. Weene you of better lucke,
I meane in periu'd Witneffe, then your Matter,
Whole Minifter you are, whiles heere he liu'd
Upon this naughty Earth? Go too, go too,
You take a Precept for no leape of danger,
And woue your owne deftruction.

_Cran._ God, and your Malefie
Protect mine innocencie, or I fall into
The trap is laid for me.

_King._ Be of good cheere,
They shall no more presenta, then we glue way too:
Keene comfort to you, and this Morning fee
You do appare before them. If they shal chance
In charging you with matters, to commit you:
The beft perfiwations to the contrary
Faile not to vfe, and with what vehemenie
Th'occasion hall infruct you. If intretties
Will render you no remedy, this Ring
Deliver them, and your Appeal to vs
There make before them. Looke, the Goodman weeps:
He's honeft in mine Honor. God bifeft Mother,
I fware he is true-heart'd, and a foule
None better in my Kingdome. Get you gone,
And do as I have bid you. _Exit Cranmer._

He ha's strangled his Language in his teares.

Enter Olde Lady,

_Gent.within._ Come backe: what meanes you?

_Lady._ Ile not come backe, the tydings that I bring
Will make my boldneffe, manneres. Now good Angels
Fly o're thy Royall head, and fhafe thy perfon
Vnder their bleffed wings.

_King._ Now by thy lookes
I gefte thy Message. Is the Queene deliver'd?
Say I, and of a boy.

_Lady._ I, I my Liege,
And of a louely Boy: the God of heauen
Both now, and euer bleffe her: 'Tis a Gyre
Promifhes Boyes hereaftter. Sir, your Queen
Defires your Viftitation, and to be Acquainted with this stranger; 'tis as like you,
As Cherry, is to Cherry.

_King._ Lowell.

_Lou._ Sir.

_King._ Glie her an hundred Marke.
Ile to the Queene. _Exit King._

_Lady._ An hundred Marke? By this light, ite ha more.
An ordinary Groome is for fuch payment.
I will haue more, or fcold it out of him.
Said I for this, the Gyre was like to him? Ile
Haue more, or else vnsay't; and now, while'tis hot,
Ile put it to the issue. _Exit Ladie._

Scena Secunda.

Enter Cranmer, Archbyshop of Canterbury.

_Cran._ I hope I am not too late, and yet the Gentleman
That was sent to me from the Councell, pray'd me
To make great haft. All faft? What meanes this? Hoa?
Who waies there? Sure you know me?

_Enter Keeper._

_Keep._ Yes, my Lord:
But yet I cannot help you.

_Cran._ Why?

_Keep._ Your Grace muft waignt till you be call'd for.

_Enter Doctor Buts._

_Cran._ So.

_Buts._ This is a Peere of Malice: I am glad
I came this way fo happily. The King
Shall understand it preftently. _Exit Buts._

_Cran._ 'Tis Buts.

The Kings Phyfitian, as he paff along
How earnefly he caft his eyes vpon me:
Pray heauen he found not my difgrace: for certaine
This is of purpose laid by fome that hate me,
(Game turne their hearts, I neuer foht their malice)
To quench mine Honor; they would fhaie to make me
Wait elfe at doore: a fellow Councellor
'Mong Boyes, Groomes, and Lackeyes.
But their pleafures
Muft be fullifh'd, and I attend with patience.

_Enter the King, and Buts, at a Windowe above._

_Buts._ Ile shew your Grace the strangefte fight.

_King._ What's that Buts?

_Buts._
"Byts. I thynke your Highneffe say this many a day.

Kin. Body a me: where is it?"

"Byts. There my Lord:
The high promotion of his Grace of Canterbury,
Who holds his State at dore 'mongft Purfants,
Pages, and Foot-boyes.

Kin. Ha? 'Tis he indeed.
Is this the Honour they doe one another?
'Tis well there's one aboue 'em yet; I had thought
They had parted fo much honordly among 'em,
At leaff good manners; as not thus to sufler
A man of his Place, and fo neere our fauour
To dance attendance on their Lordships pleafures,
And at the dore too, like a Poft with Packetts:
By holy Mary (Byts) there's knauery;
Let 'em alone, and draw the Curtaine clofe:
We shall heare more anon.

A Councell Table brought in with Chayres and Stooles, and placed under the State. Enter Lord Chanellour, places himselfe at the upper end of the Table, on the left hand: A
State being left void above him, as for Canterburyc State.
Duke of Safforke, Duke of Norfolk, Surrey, Lord Chamber-laine, Gardiner, feat themfelves in Order on each fide.
Cham. at lower end, as Secretary.
Chan. Speake to the bufineffe, M. Secretary;
Why are we met in Councell?
Cram. Pleafe your Honours,
The chiefcafe concerns his Grace of Canterbury.
Gard. Ha's he had knowledge of it?
Cram. Yes.
Norf. Who waits there?
Keep. Without my Noble Lords?
Gard. Yes.
Keep. My Lord Archibhop:
And ha's done hafte an houre to know your pleafures.
Chan. Let him come in.
Keep. Your Grace may enter now.
Cramner approches the Councell Table.
Chan. My good Lord Archibhop, I'm very forry
To fite heere at this preftent, and behold
That Chayre fland empty: But we all are men
In owne natures fraille, and capable
Of our ftreng, few are Angels; out of which frailty
And want of wifedom, you that beft shoud teach vs,
Haue mifmean'd your felfe, and not a little:
Toward the King firft, then his Lawes, in filling
The whole Realme, by your teaching & your Chaplaines
(For fo we are inform'd) with new opinions,
Diuers and dangerous; which are Herefies;
And not reform'd, may proue pernicous.
Gard. Which Reformation mufte be foidaine too
My Noble Lords; for thoie that tame wild Horfes,
Pace 'em not in their hands to make 'em gentle;
But flop their mouthes with flubborn Bits & fpuure 'em,
Till they obey the mannage. If we fuffer
Out of our eafe and childhood pity
To one mans Honour, this contagious fickneffe;
Farewell all Phyfcick: and what folowes then?
Commotions, vpores, with a generall Taint
Of the whole State; as of late days our neighbours,
The upper Germany can deere tryffe:
Yet freely pitted in our memorey.
Cram. My good Lords; Hitherto, in all the Progresse
Both of my Life and Office, I haue labour'd,
And with no little study, that my teaching
And the frong courfe of my Authority,
Might goe one way, and fafely; and the end
Was euer to doe well: nor is there living,
(If I fpeak it with a fingle heart, my Lords)
A man that more deteets, more fitres againft,
Both in his private Confcience, and his place,
Defacres of a publique peace then I doe:
Pray Heaven the King may neuer find a heart
With leffe Allegeance in it. Men that make
Enuy, and crooked malice, nourifhment;
Dare bite the bift. I doe befeech your Lordhips,
That in this cafe of Jutice, my Accufers,
Be what they will, may fland forth face to face,
And freelv vrg against me.

Suff. Nay, my Lord,
That cannot be; you are a Counfelior,
And by that vertue no man dare accuse you. (ment,
Gard. My Lord, because we haue bufines of more mo-
We will be short with you. 'Tis his Highneffe pleafure
And our content, for better tryall of you,
From hence you be committed to the Tower,
Where being but a private man againe,
You shall know many dare accuse you boldly,
More then (I feare) you are prouided for.
Cran. Ah my good Lord of Wincfetf : I thank you,
You are alwayes my good Friend, if your will paffe,
I fhall both finde your Lordfhip, Judge and Iuror,
You are fo meritorious. I fee your end,
'Tis my vndoing. Loue and mekeneffe, Lord
Become a Churchman, better then Ambition:
Win flattering Soules with modelly againe,
Caff none away: That I fhall cleere my felfe,
Lay all the weight ye can upon my patience,
I make as little doubt as you doe confidence,
In doing daily wrongs. I could fay more,
But reuerence to your calling, makes me modelf.
Gard. My Lord, my Lord, you are a Seetary,
That's the plaine truth; your painted glossie d'couers
To men that vnderfand you, words and weakneffe.

Cram. My Lord of Wincfetf, y'are a little,
By your good favour, too sharpe; Men fo Noble,
How euer faulty, yet fhould finde respect
For what they haue beene: 'tis a cruelty,
To load a falling man.
Gard. Good M. Secretary,
I cry your Honour mercifull you may worth
Of all this Table fay fo.
Cram. Why my Lord?
Gard. Doe not I know you for a Fauourer
Of this new Sef? ye are not found.
Cram. Not found?
Gard. Not found I fay.
Cram. Would you were halfe fo honof: Men prayers then would feeke you, not their feares.
Gard. I fhall remember this bold Language.
Cram. Doe.
Remember your bold life too.
Cham. This is too much;
Forbeare for thame my Lords.
Gard. I have done,
Cham. And I
Cham. Then thus for you my Lord, it stands agreed
I take it, by all voyces: That fortheith,
You be conuaid to th'Tower a Prifoner;
There to remaine till the Kings further pleafure
Be knowne vnto vs: are you all agreed Lords.
The Life of King Henry the Eight.

Al. We are.

Cran. Is there no other way of mercy, But I must needs to th' Tower my Lords?

Gard. What other,

Would you expect? You are strangely troublesome:

My moit dread Soueraigne, may it like your Grace,

Fetch the Tongue excufe all. What was purpoe'd

Concerning his imprisonment, was rather

(If there be faith in men) meant for his Tryall,

And faire purgation to the world then malice,

I'm sure in me.

Kin. Well, well my Lords respect him,

More out of Malice then Integrity,

Would trye him to the vertoff, had ye meane,

Which ye shall never have while I live.

Cran. Thus farre

My moit dread Soueraigne, may it like your Grace,

To let my tongue excuse all. What was purposed

Concerning his imprisonment, was rather

(If there be faith in men) meant for his Tryall,

And faire purgation to the world then malice,

I'm sure in me.

Kin. Well, well my Lords respect him,

Take him, and s'ee him well; hee's worthy of it.

I will say thus much for him, if a Prince

May be beholding to a Subject: 1

Am for his loue and feruice, fo to him.

Make me no more ado, but all embrace him;

Be friends for shame my Lords: My Lord of Canterbury

I have a Suite which you must not deny mee.

That is, a faire young Maid that yet wants Baptisme,

You must be Godfather, and anwere for her.

Cran. The greatst Monarch now aise may glory

In such an honour: how may I deserve it,

That am a poore and humble Subject to you?

Kin. Come, come my Lord, you'd spare your spoyles;

You shall haue two noble Partners with you: the old

Duchesse of Norfolk, and Lady Marquefe Dorjet: will thee please thee?

Once more my Lord of Winchefter, I charge you

Embrace, and love this man.

Gard. With a true heart,

And Brother; loye I doe it.

Cran. And let Heauen

Witneffe how deare, I hold this Confirmation. (hearts,

Kin. Good Man, those joyfull tears shew thy true

The common voyce I fee is verified

Of thee, which layes thus: Doe my Lord of Canterbury

A shrewd turne, and hee's your friend for ever:

Come Lords, we trifie time away: I long

To haue this young one made a Christian.

As I haue made ye one Lords,one remaine:

So I grow strong, you more Honour gaine.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Noyfe and Tumult within: Enter Porter and his man.

Port. You'll leave your noyfe anon ye Raskals: doe

you take the Court for Parifh Garden: ye rude Slues,

leave your gaping:

Within. Good M. Porter I belong to th' Larder.

Port. Belong to th' Gallowes, and be hang'd ye Rogue:

Is this a place to roare in? Fetch me a dozen Crab-tree

flaes, and strong ones; these are but switches to 'em:

Ile scratch your heads; you must be seeing Chriftenings?

Do you looke for Ale, and Cakes heere, you rude

Raskals?

Man. Pray Sir be patient; 'tis as much' impossible,

Vnleffe wee sveepe 'em from the dore with Cannons,

To scatter 'em, as 'tis to make 'em sleep

On May-day Morning, which will neuer be:

We may as well puuf against Powles as firre 'em.

Per. How got they in, and be hang'd?
By th' heees, and sodainlyand on your heads
Clap round Fines for negleft; y' are lazy knaus,
And heere ye lye bating of Bombards, when Ye should doe Service. Harke the Trumpets found,
Th'are come already from the Chriftening,
Go breake among the presfale, and finde away out
To let the Troope paffe fрайly; or Ile finde
A Marfhalfey, shall hold ye play thefe two Monthes.
Tor. Make way there, for the Princeffe.
Man. You great fellow,
Stand close vp, or Ie make your head ake.
Per. You 'th Chamblet, get vp o' th'raile,
Ile pecke you o're the pales elle.
Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Trumpets: Round two Aldermen, L. Major,
Garter, Cranmer, Duke of Norfolke, with his Marfhall Staffe, Duke of Suffolke, two Noblemen, bearing a great fanding Bowles for the Chriftening Guift: Then four Noblemen bearing a Canopy, under which the Dutchfeff
Norfolke, Godmother, bearing the Childe richly habited in a Manife, &c. Traine borne by a Lady: Then follows the Marches of Dorset, the other Godmother, and Ladies. The Troope paffe once about the Stage, and Garter speaks.

Gart. Heauen
From thy endiefle goodniff, fend prosperous life,
Long, and euer happy, to the high and mighty
Princeffe of England Elizabethe.

Flour. Enter King and Guard.
Cran. And to your Royal Grace, & the good Queen,
My Noble Partners, and my felfe thus pray
All comfort, joy in this moft gracious Lady,
Heauen euer lacer vp to make Parents happy,
May hourly fall vp on ye.

Kinf. Thanke you good Lord Archbishop:
What is her Name?
Cran. Elizabeth.
Kinf. Stand vp Lord.
With this Kiffe, take my Befliging: God proteft thee,
Into whole hand, I give thy Life.

Cran. Amen.
Kinf. My Noble Goffips, y' haue beeue too Prodigall;
I thanke ye heartily: So shall this Lady,
When she ha's fo much English.
Cran. Let me speake Sir,
For Heauen now bids me; and the words I vttet,
Lest none thinke Flattery, for they'ld finde 'em Truth.
This Royal Infant, Heauen fill moue about her;
Though in her Cradle; yet now promotes
Vpon this Land a thousand thousand Bleffings,
Which Time shall bring to ripenefe: She shall be,
But few now living can behold that goodniffe)
A Pattorne to all Princes living with her,
And all that shall succeed: Saba was never
More couetous of Wiuesome, and faire Vertue
Then this pure Soule shall be. All Princely Graves
That mould vp fuch a mighty Piece as this is,
With all the Vertues that attend the good,
Shall fill be doubted on her. Truth shall Nurfe her,

Holy
The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

Holy and Heavenly thoughts still Counsell her:
She shall be lou'd and fear'd. Her owne shall bleffe her;
Her Foes shake like a Field of beaten Corne,
And hang their heads with sorrow:
Good growes with her.
In her daies, Every Man shall eate in safety,
Vnder his owne Vine what he plants; and sing
The merry Songs of Peace to all his Neighbours.
God shall be truely knowne, and those about her,
From her shall read the perfect way of Honour,
And by those claime their greatnesse; not by Blood.
Nor shall this peace sleepe with her: But as when
The Bird of Wonder dyes, the Mayden Phoenix,
Her Ashes new create another Heyre,
As great in admiration as her selfe.
So shall she leave her Bleffednesse to One,
(When Heauen shall call her from this cloud of darknes)
Who, from the sacred Ashes of her Honour
Shall Star-like rife, as great in fame as she was,
And fo stand fix'd. Peace, Plenty, Loue, Truth, Terror,
That were the Servants to this chos'n Infant,
Shall then be his, and like a Vine grow to him;
Where euer the bright Sunne of Heauen shall shine,
His Honour, and the greatnesse of his Name,
Shall be, and make new Nations. He shall flourish,

And like a Mountaine Cedar, reach his branches,
To all the Plaines about him; Our Childrens Children
Shall see this, and bleffe Heauen.

Kin. Thou speakest wonders.
Cran. She shall be to the happiness of England,
An aged Princesse; many daies shall see her,
And yet no day without a deed to Crowne it.
Would I had knowne no more: But the must dye,
She must, the Saints must haue her; yet a Virgin,
A moft vnspotted Lilly shall she passe
To th' ground, and all the World shall mourn her.

Kin. O Lord Archbifhop
Thou haft made me now a man, neuer before
This happy Child, did I get any thing.
This Oracle of comfort, ha's fo pleas'd me,
That when I am in Heauen, I shall defire
To fee what this Child does, and praise my Maker.
I thank ye all. To you my good Lord Maior,
And you good Brethren, I am much beholding:
I haue receiu'd much Honour by your presence,
And ye shall find me thankfull. Lead the way Lords,
Ye must all see the Queene, and the must thank ye,
She will be ficke els. This day, no man think  'tis businesse at his house; for all shall stay:
This Little-One shall make it Holy-day.

The Epilogue.

Is ten to one, tis this Play can never please
All that are beere: Some come to take their ease,
And sleepe an Act or two; but those we feare
W'raue frighted with our Tumpets: So 'tis cleare,
They'll say it's naught. Others to beare the City
Abus'd extramly, and to cry that's witty,
Which we haue not done neither; that I feare

All the expected good w'are like to beare,
For this Play at this time, is onely in
The mercifull conftruction of good women,
For such a one we bow'd 'em: If they smile,
And say twill do, I know within a while,
All the best men are ours; for 'tis ill bas,
If they bold, when their Ladys bid 'em clap.

FINIS.
The Prologue.

In Troy there lies the Scene: From Iles of Greece
The Princes Orgillow, their high blood chaf'd
Have to the Port of Athens sent their shippes
Fraught with the ministers and instruments
Of cruell Warre: Sixty and nine that were
Their Crownets Regall, from th' Athenian bay
Put forth toward Phrygia, and their vow is made
To ransacke Troy, within whose strong emures
The rauish'd Helen, Menelaus Queene,
With wanton Paris sleepes, and that's the Quarrell.
To Tenedos they come,
And the deepe-drawing Barke do there disgorge
Their warlike fraughtage; now on Dardan Plaines
The fresh and yet unbruised Greekes do pitch
Their braue Pauillions. Priams fix-gated City,
Dardan and Timbria, Helias, Chetas, Troien,
And Antenonidus with masie Staples
And corresponfue and fulfilling Bolts
Stirre vp the Sonnes of Troy.
Now Expectation tickling skittifh spirits,
On one and other fide, Troian and Greeke,
Sets all on hazard. And bither am I come,
A Prologue arm'd, but not in confidence
Of Authors pen, or Aefors voyce; but suited
In like conditions, as our Argument;
To tell you (faire Beholders) that our Play
Leapes ore the vaunt and firlings of those broyles,
Beginning in the middle; starting thence away,
To what may be digested in a Play:
Like, or finde fault, do as your pleasures are,
Now good, or bad, 'tis but the chance of Warre.
THE TRAGEDIE OF
Troilus and Cressida.

Aëtus Primus.  Scæna Prima.

Enter Pandarus and Troilus.

Troilus.

All here my Varlet, I'll vnrarm me againe.
Why should I warre without the walls of Troy
That finde such cruell battell here within?
Each Trojan that is matter of his heart,
Let him to field, Troilus alas hath none.

Pan. Will this geere nere be mended?

Troy. The Greeks are strong, & skilful to their strength,
Fierce to their skill, and to their fierceness Valiant:
But I am weaker then a women teare;
Tamer then teere, tender then ignorance;
Less valiant then the Virgin in the night,
And skilfes as vnpractus'd Infanctes.

Pan. Well, I haue told you enough of this: For my part,
Ie not meddle nor make no farther. Hee that will haue a Cake out of the Wheate, must needes tarry the grinding.

Troy. Haue I not tarry'd?

Pan. I the grinding; but you must tarry the bolting.

Troy. Haue I not tarry'd?

Pan. I the bolting; but you must tarry the leau'ing.

Troy. Still haue I tarry'd.

Pan. I, to the leauening: but heeres yet in the word hereafter, the breading, the making of the Cake, the heating of the Oven, and the Baking; bay, you must stay the cooling too, or you may chance to burne your lips.

Troy. Patience her selfe, what Goddefe ere she be,
Doth lefter blest at suffrance, then I do e:
At Priams Royall Table doe I sit;
And when faire Creffid comes into my thoughts,
So (Trator) then she comes, when she is thence.

Pan. Well:
She look'd yesternight fairer, then euer I saw her looke,
Or any woman elfe.

Troy. I was about to tell thee, when my heart,
As wedged with a figh, would ruue in twaine,
Letit Heifor, or my Father should perceiue me:
I haue (as when the Sunne doth light a-borne)
Buried this figh, in wrinkle of a smile:
But sorrow, that is couched in seeming gladnesse,
Is like that mirth, Fate turnes to fudden sadnesse.

Pan. And her hair was not somewhat darker then
Helens, well go too, there were no more comparifon betweene the Women. But for my part she is my Kinfwoman,
I would not (as they tearme it) praise it, but I wold some-body had heard her talke yesterday as I did: I will not difpraise your fitter Caflandra's wit, but ———

Troy. Oh Pandarus! I tell thee Pandarus!
When I doe tell thee, there my hopes ye clown'd:
Reply not in how many Fadomes deep;
They ye indrench't. I tell thee, I am mad
In Creffid's love. Thou anfver'ft she is faire,
Power't in the open Vicer of my heart,
Her Eyes, her Haire, her Cheeke, her Gate, her Voice,
Handlef in thy difcourfe O that her Hand
(In whole comparifon, all whites are Inke)
Writing their owne reproach; to whole foff feature,
The Cignets Downe is harf, and spirt of Sens
Hard as the palme of Plough-man. This thou tel'ft me;
As true thou tel'ft me, when I fay I love her:
But faying thus, instead of Oyle and Balme,
Thou lai'ft in every gath that loue hath given me,
The Knife that made it.

Pan. I speake no more then truth.

Troy. Thou dote not speake fo much.

Pan. I, Ie not meddle in't: Let her be as fhee is,
If she be faire, 'tis the better for her: and she be not, she has the mends in her owne hands.

Troy. Good Pandarus: How now Pandarus?

Pan. I haue had my Labour for my trauell, ill thought on of her, and ill thought on of you: Gone betwene and betwene, but fmall thanks for my labour.

Troy. What art thou angry Pandarus? what with me?

Pan. Because she's kinne to me, therefore she's not to faire as Helen, and she were not kin to me, she would be as faire on Friday, as Helen is on Sunday. But what care I? I care not and she were a Black-a-Moore, 'tis all one to me.

Troy. Say I she is not faire?

Troy. I doe not care whether you doe or no. Shee's a Fool to stay behind her Father: Let her to the Greeks, and so Ie tell her the next time I fee her: for my part, Ie meddle nor make no more i'th matter.

Troy. Pandarus?

Troy. Sweete Pandarus.

Pan. Pray you speake no more to me, I will leave all as I found it, and there an end.

Exit Pand.

Sound Alarum.

Tro. Peace you vngracious Clamors, peace rude sounds,
Foolcs on both sides, Helen must needs be faire,
When with your bloud you daily paint her thus.
I cannot fight upon this Argument:

It
The Tragedie of Troylus and Cressida.

It is too staru'd a fabicft for my Sword,
But Pandarus : O Gods ! How do you plague me?
I cannot come to Cressid but by Pandar,
And he's as teachy to be woo'd to woe,
As she is hubborne, chaft, against all fute.
Tell me Apollo for thy Daphne Love.
What Cressid is, what Pandar, and what we:
Her bed is India, there she lies, a Pearle,
Between our Illium, and where shee recides
Let it be call the wild and wandering flood,
Our felfe the Merchant, and this saying Pandar,
Our doubtfull hope, our convoy and our Barke.

Alarum. Enter Ennas.

En. How now Prince Troylus?
Wherefore not a field?
Troy. Because not there; this womans answer forts.
For womanith it is to be from thence:
What newes Ennas from the field to day?
En. That Paris is returned home, and hurt.
Troy. By whom Ennas?
En. Troylus by Menelau.
Troy. Let Paris bleed, tis but a scar to fcorne,
Paris is gor'd with Menelau horns.

Alarum. En. Harke what good sport is out of Towne to day.
Troy. Better at home, if would I might may be:
But to the sport abroad, are you bound thither?
En. In all fwiift hal.

Troy. Come goo wee then together.

Exeunt. Enter Cressid and her man.

Cre. Who were thofe went by?
Man. Queene Hecuba, and Hellen.
Cre. And whether go they?
Man. Vp to the Eafterne Tower,
Whose height commands as fubjeft all the vaile,
To fee the battell: Hector whose pacience,
Is as a Vertue fxt, to day was moûd'd:
He chides Andromache and fhroke his Armorner,
And like as there were husbandry in Warre,
Before the Sunne rofe, hee was harneft lyte,
And to the field goe's he; where every flower
Did as a Prophet wepe what it forlaw,
In Hector's wrath.

Cre. What was his caufe of anger?
Man. The noife goe's this; There is among the Greeces,
A Lord of Trojan blood, Nephew to Hector,
They call him Anax.

Cre. Good; and what of him?
Man. They fay he is a very man per fe and ftands alone.
Cre. So do all men, vnlesfe they are drunke, fickle, or haue no legges.

Man. This man Lady, hath robd many beas of their particular additions, he is as valiant as the Lyon, churlifh as the Beare, flow as the Elephant: a man into whom nature hath fo crowded humors, that his valour is cruft into folly, his folly fauced with difcirtion: there is no man hath a vertue, that he hath not a gimpfe of, nor a man an attaint, but he carries fome flaine of it. He is melancholy without caufe, and merry againft the haire, hee hath the floynts of evry thing, but evry thing fo out of floynt, that hee is a growtie Briareus, many hands and no vie; or purblinded Argus, all eyes and no fght.

Cre. But how fhould this man that makes me finte, make Hector angry?

Man. They fay he yedere day cop'd Hector in the battell and froke him downe, the difdain & shame whereof, hath euer fince kept Hector falteing and waking.

Enter Pandarus.

Cre. Who comes here?
Man. Madam your Vncle Pandarus.
Cre. Hector a gallant man.
Man. As may be in the world Lady.
Pan. What's that? what's that?
Cre. Good morrow Vncle Pandarus.
Pan. Good morrow Cozen Cressid: what do you talk of? good morrow Alexander: how do you Cozen? when were you at Illium?
Cre. This morning Vncle.
Pan. What were you talking of when I came? Was Hector arm'd and gon ere yea came to Illium? Hellen was not vp? was the?
Cre. Hector was gone but Hellen was not vp?
Pan. Eene fo: Hector was flirring early.
Cre. That were we talking of, and of his anger.
Pan. Was he angry?
Cre. So he faies here.
Pan. True he was fo: I know the caufe too, heele lay about him to day I can tell them that, and there's Troylus will not come fare behind him, let them take heede of Troylus: I can tell them that too.
Cre. What is he angry too?

Pan. Troylus is the better man of the two.
Cre. Oh Jupiter, there's no comparizon.
Pan. What not between Troylus and Hector? do you know a man if you fee him?
Cre. I, if I ever saw him before and knew him.
Pan. Well I say Troylus is Troylus.
Cre. Then you fay as I fay,
For I am sure he is not Hector.
Pan. No not Hector is not Troylus in fome degrees.
Cre. 'Tis true, to each of them he is himfelfe.
Pan. Himfelfe? alas poore Troylus I would he were.
Cre. So he is.
Pan. Condition I had gone bare-foot to India.
Cre. He is not Hector.
Pan. Himfelfe? no? hee's not himfelfe, would a were himfelfe; well, the Gods are above, time muft friend or end: well Troylus well, I would my heart were in her bofy; no, Hector is not a better man then Troylus.
Cre. Excufe me.
Pan. He is elder.
Cre. Pardon me, pardon me.
Pan. Th'others not come too, you shall tell me another tale when th'others come too: Hector shall not have his will this yere.
Cre. He shall not neede it if he have his owne.
Pan. Nor his qualities.
Cre. No matter.
Pan. Nor his beautie.
Cre. 'Twould not become him, his own's better.
Pan. You have no judgement Necce; Hellen her felfe swore th'other day that Troylus for a browne favour (for to 'tis I muft confede) not browne neither.
Cre. No, but browne.
Pan. Faith to fay truth, browne and not browne.
Cre. To fay the truth, true and not true.
Pan. She prais'd his complexion aboue Paris.
Cre. Why Paris hath colour enough.
Pan. So, he has.
Cre. Then Troylus should have too much, if the prais'd him above, his complexion is higher then his, he hauing colour.
The Tragedie of Troylus and Cresida.

colour enough, and the other higher, is too flaming a praise for a good complexion, I had as lieue Hellens golden tongue had commended Troylus for a copper note.

Pan. Ieware to you, I think Helen loves him better then Parus.

Cre. Then she's a merry Greek indeed.

Pan. Nay I am sure she doth, she came to him th'o other day into the compact window, and you know he has not past three or four hairs on his chinne.

Cre. Indeed a Taphers Arithmetique may soone bring his particulars therein, to a total.

Pan. Why he is very yong, and yet will he within three pound lift as much as his brother Hector.

Cre. Is he so young a man, and so old a lifier?

Pan. But to proose to you that Helen loves him, she came and put me her white hand to his clowen chin.

Cre. I wou haue mercy, how came it clowen?

Pan. Why, you know 'tis dimpled, I thinke his finyling becomes him better then any man in all Phrigia.

Cre. Oh he smiles valiantly.

Pan. Does hee not?

Cre. Oh yes, and 'twere a crow'd in Autumn.

Pan. Why go to then, but to proose to you that Helen loves Troylus.

Cre. Troylus will stand to thee

Proose, if you proose it fo.

Pan. Troylus? why he efteme them no more then I e- fteeme an addle egge.

Cre. If you love an addle egge as well as you love an idle head, you would eate chickens i'th'shell.

Pan. I cannot chufe but laugh to thinke how he tick- led his chin, indeed thee has a maruel's white hand I must needs confesse.

Cre. Without the racke. And shee takes upon her to spie a white hair on his chinne.

Cre. Alas poore chin? many a wart is richer.

Pand. But there was such laughing, Queene Hecuba laught that her eyes ran ore.

Cre. With Militones.

Pan. And Cassandra laught.

Cre. But there was more temperate fire vnder the pot of her eyes; did her eyes run ore too?

Pan. And Hector laught.

Cre. At what was all this laughing?

Pand. Marry at the white haire that Helen spied on Troylus chin.

Cre. And th'had beene a green e hair, I shoude have laught too.

Pand. They laught not so much at the hair, as at his pretie anfwer.

Cre. What was his anfwer?

Pan. Quoth shee, here's but two and fifty hairs on your chinne; and one of them is white.

Cre. This is her queftion.

Pan d That's true, make no queftion of that, two and fiftie hairs quoth he, and one white, that white hair is my Father, and all the rest are his Sonnes. Jupiter quoth she, of which of these hairs is Parus my husband? The for- ked one quoth he, pluckt out and give it him; but there was such laughing, and Helen fo blufhes, and Parus fo chaft, and all the rest fo laught, that it paff.

Cre. So let it now,

For is has beene a great while going by.

Pan. Well Cozen,

I told you a thing yesterday, think on't.

Cre. So I does.

Pand. Ibe he sworn? this true, he will wepe you an'twere a man borne in April.

Sound a retreat.

Cre. And Ibe spring vp in his tears, an'twere a nettle against May.

Pan. Harke they are comming from the field, thal we fland vp here and fee them, as they paffe toward illium, good Neece do, sweet Neece Cresida.

Cre. At your pleafure.

Pan. Heere, here's an excellent place, here we may fee moft brauely, Ile tel you them all by their names, as they paffe by, but marke Troylus above the rest.

Enter Aneas.

Cre. Speake not so low'd.

Pan. That's Aneas, is not that a braue man, hee's one of the flowers of Troy I can you, but marke Troylus, you shal fee anoon.

Cre. Who's that?

Enter Antenor.

Pan. That's Antenor, he has a throw'd wit I can tell you, and hee's a man good enough, hee's one o'th' sound judgement in Troy whofouer, and a proper man of perfon: when comes Troylus? Ile fhev you Troylus anoon, if hee fit me, you fhal fee him nod at me.

Cre. Will he glie you the nod?

Pan. You fhal fee.

Cre. If he do, the rich fhal haue, more.

Enter Hector.

Pan. That's Hector, that, that, looke you, that there's a fellow. Go thy way Hector, there's a braue man Neece, O braue Hector! looke how hee looke? there's a coun- tenance, if not a braue man?

Cre. O braue man!

Pan. Is a not? It does a mans heart good, looke you what hacks are on his Helmet, looke you yonder, do you fee? Looke you there? There's no leaffing, laying on, tak't off, who ill as they fay, there be hacks.

Cre. Be thofe with Swords?

Enter Paris.

Pan. Swords, any thing he cares not, and the diuell come to him, it's all one by Gods lid it does ones heart good. Yonder comes Paris, yonder comes Paris: looke yee yonder Neece, ift not a gallant man to, ift not? Why this is braue now: who fad he came hurt home to day? Hee's not hurt, why this will do Hellens heart good now, ha? Would I could fee Troylus now, you fhal Troylus anoon.

Cre. Whole that?

Enter Hellenus.

Pan. That's Hellenus, I maruell where Troylus is, that's Hel- lenus, I thinke he went not forth to day: that's He- llenus.

Cre. Can Hellenus fight Yncle?

Pan. Hellenus no: yes heele fight indifferent, well, I maruell where Troylus is; harke, do you not haer the people cry Troylus? Hellenus is a Priest.

Cre. What sneaking fellow comes yonder?

Enter Troylus.

Pan. Where? Yonder! That's Dapobus, 'tis Troy- lus! Thar's a man Neece, hem; Braue Troylus, the Prince of Chialtrie.

Cre. Peace, for shame peace.

Pan. Marke him, not him: O braue Troylus; looke well vpon him Neece, looke you how his Sword is blou- died, and his Helme more hackt then Hector, and how he lookeas, looke, and how he goes. O admirable youth! he ne're faw three and twenty. Go thy way, Troylus, go thy way, had I a father were a Grace, or a daughter a Goddeffe, hee should take his choice. O admirable man! Paris? Paris is durt to him, and I warrant, Helen to change, would glue money to boot.

Enter common Souldiers.

Cref. Heere come more.

Pan. Affes, fooles, dolts, chaffe and bran, chaffe and bran; porridge after meat. I could liue and dye i' th'eyes of Troylus. Ne're looke, ne're looke; the Eagles are gon, Crowes and Dawes, Crowes and Dawes: I had rather be such a man as Troylus, then Agamemnon, and all Greece.

Cref. There is among the Greekes Achilles, a better man then Troylus.

Pan. Achilles? a Dray-man, a Porter, a very Camell.

Cref. Well, well.

Pan. Well, well? Why have you any discretion? have you any eyes? Do you know what a man is? Is not birth, beauty, good shape, discourse, manhood, learning, gentleness, vertue, youth, liberality, and so forth: the Spice, and falt that fefions a man?

Cref. I, a mine'd man, and then to be bak'd with no Date in the pegs, for then the mans dates out.

Pan. You are fuch another woman, one knowes not at what ward you lye.

Cref. Upon my backe, to defend my belly; upon my wit, to defend my wifes; upon my fercery, to defend mine honestly; my Maske, to defend my beauty, and you to defend all thefe: and at all thefe wanders I lye at, at a thournd watches.

Pan. Say, one of your watches.

Cref. Nay Ike watch you for that, and that's one of the chiefest of them too: If I cannot ward what I would not have hit, I can watch you for telling how I took the blow, vnlefie it swell past hidding, and then it's past watching.

Enter Boy.

Pan. You are fuch another.

Boy. Sir, my Lord would infantly speake with you.

Pan. Where?

Boy. At your owne house.

Pan. Good Boy tell him I come, I doubt he be hurt.

Fare ye well good Neece.

Cref. Adieu Vnkle.

Pan. Ile be with you Neece by and by.

Cref. To bring Vnkle.

Pan. I, a token from Troylus.

Cref. By the fame token, you are a Bawd. Exit Pand.

Words, vowes, gifts, tears, & loves full facrifice, He offers in another enterprife: But more in Troylus thoufand fold I fee, Then in the glaffe of Pandar's prairie may be; Yet hold I of. Women are Angelos woong, Things won are done, loykes foule Iyes in the dooing: That the belou'd, knowes nought, that knowes not this; Men prize the thing vangin'd, more then it is. That she was never yet, that ever knew Loure got so sweet, as when defire did fue: Therefore this maximize out of loure I teach; "Achievement is command; vangin'd, befeech. That though my hearts Contents firme loure doth bear, Nothing of that shall from mine eyes appeare. Exit.

Senet. Enter Agamemnon, Nefer, Vlyfes, Diome- des, Mamelaus, with others.

Agam. Princes:

What greefe hath fet the Iaudies on your cheekes? The ample propofition that hope makes In all deligins, begun on earth below Fayles in the promiff largeneffe: checks and difafters Grow in the veines of actions height rear'd, As knots by the conflux of meeting fap. Infect the found Pine, and diverts his Grave Tortue and erant from his course of growth. Nor Princes, is it matter new to vs. That we come short of our fuppofe fo farre, That after feuen yeares fiege, yet Troy walles stand, Sith every action that hath gone before, Whereof we have Record, Triall did draw Bias and thwert, not anfwering the ayme: And that unbodied figure of the thought That gau't furmiled fhape. Why then(you Princes) Do you with cheeckes abaff'd, behold our worke, And think and fame, which are (indeed)ought elfe But the protracte trials of great love, To finde perficiff confiance in men? The fineniff of which Metall is not found In Fortunes loue: for then, the Bold and Coward, The Wife and Foole, the Artifi and vn-read, The hard and foft, feeme all affin'd,and kin. But in the Winde and Tempes of her frowne, Diffafion with a lowd and powerfull fan, Puffing at all, winnowes the light away, And what hath maffe, or matter by it felfe, Lies rich in Vertue, and vnmingled.

Nefter. With due Obherence of thy godly feat, Great Agamenon, Nefter shall apply. Thy lately words.

In the reprooffe of Chance,

Lies the true prooffe of men: The Sea being smooth,

How many shallow bauble Boates dare faile Upon her patient brefte, making their way With thofe of Nobler bulke?

But let the Ruffian boreas once enrage The gentle Tothe, and anon behold The strong ribb'd Barke through liquid Mountains cut, Bounding between the two moyft Elements Like Perjans Horfe. Where's then the fawe Boate, Whoft weake vntimber'd fides but even now Co-rival'd Greatneffe? Either to harbour fled, Or made a Toffe for Neptune. Even fo,

Both valours fhou, and valours worth diuide In theormes of Fortune.

For, in her ray and brightneffe,

The Heard hath more annoyance by the Brieze Then by the Tyger: But, when the splifing winde Makes flexible the knees of knotted Oakes, And Flies fled vnder shade, why then The thing of Courage,

As rowz'd with rage, with rage doth sympathize, And with an accent tun'd in felle-fame key, Retyles to chiding Fortune.

Vlyf. Agamenon:

Thou great Commander, Nerue, and Bone of Greece, Heart of our Numbers, foule, and onely spirit, In whom the tempers, and the mindes of all Should be flut vp: Heare what Vlyfes speaks, Besides the applause and approbation The which moft mighty for thy place and sway,
And thou most reverend for thy stretch-out life,
I gie to both your speeches: which were such,
As Agamemnon and the hand of Greece
Should hold vp high in Brasse: and such againe
As venerable Nefior (hatch'd in Siluer)
Should with a bond of ayre, strong as the Axletree
In which the Heauens ride, knit all Greekes cares
To his experience't to النوع: let not this be both (Thou Great, and Wise) to heare Plyffe speake.

Agæ. Speak Prince of Ithaca, and be't of leffe expect:
That matter needleffe of importelie burthen
Duide thy lips; then we are confident
When ranke Tertiary opens his Matckie iawes,
We shall heare Mufick, Wit, and Oracle.

Ulys. Troy yet vpon his bafl has bene downe,
And the great Hectors sword had lack'd a Matter
But for these infancies.
The specialty of Rule hath beene neglected;
And looke how many Grecian Tents do fland
Hollow vpon this Plain, so many hollow Factiones
When that the Generall is not like the Blue,
To whom the Foragers shall all repair.
What Hony is expected? Degree being wizarded,
Th'vnworthie thwes as fairely in the Maske.
The Heauens themselfes, the Planets, and this Center,
Obferue degree, priority, and place,
Inoble eminence, enthron'd and sphere'd
Amid't the other, whose med'cineye
Corrects the ill Aspects of Planets euill,
And poltes like the Command'ment of a King,
Sanz checke, to good and bad. But when the Planets
In euill mixture do dillerender wander,
What Plagues, and what portents, what mutiny?
What raging of the Sea: shakling of Earth?
Commotion in the Winds: Frights, changes, horrors,
Diuert, and cracke, rend and daracinate
The vnity, and married calme of States
Quite from their fixture? O, when Degree is shak'd,
(Which is the Ladder to all high defignes)
The enterprize is fickle. How could Communities,
Degrees in Scholes, and Brother-hoods in Cities,
Peacefull Commerce from diuidable shores,
The primogenuite, and due of Bynth,
Prerogative of Age, Crownes, Scepters, Lawrels,
(But by Degree) fland in Authentique place?
Take but Degree away, vn-tune that ftring,
And hearde what Discord followes: each thing meetes
In meere oppugnancie. The bounded Waters,
Should lift their bofomes higher then the Shores,
And make a topp of all this solid Globie:
Strength should be Lord of imbecility,
And the rude Sonne should strike his Father dead:
Force shou'd be right, or rather, right and wrong,
(Betweene whose enelesse iarre, Ifusice recides)
Should loose her names, and so shou'd Ifusice too.
Then every thing includes it selve in Power,
Power into Will, Will into Appetite,
And Appetite (an vnuerfall Wolfe,
So doth his Will, and Power)
Must make perforce an vnuerfall prey,
And laft, eate vp himselfe.
Great Agamemnon:
This Chaos, when Degree is suffociate,
Troylus and Cressida.

Bold as an Oracle, and fets Tberities
A flauce, whose Gall coins flanders like a Mint,
To match vs in comparisons with durt,
To weaken and defcredit our expoure,
How ranke fouer rounded in with danger.

Vfif. They taxe our policy, and call it Cowardice,
Count Wifedome as no member of the Warre,
Fore-fall priefidence, and esteeme no ac aT
But that of hand : The fill and mental parts,
That do contrue how many hands fhall strike
When finteene call them on, and know by meaure
Of their obferuant toile, the Enemies weight,
Why this hath not a fingers dignity;
They call this Bed-worke, Mapp’ry, Cloflet-Warre:
So that the Ramme that batters downe the wall,
For the great swing and rudeneffe of his poize,
They place before his hand that made the Engine,
Or thefe that with the fineneffe of their foules,
By Reafon guide his execution.

Nef. Let this be granted, and Aciilles horfe
Makes many Thetis fonnes.

Aga. What Trumpet? Look to Monelaus,
Men to Troy Enter Aneas.
Aga. What would you fore our Tent?
Enf. Is this great Agamemnon Tent, I pray you?
Aga. Euen this.
Enf. May one that is a Herald, and a Prince,
Do a faire message to his Kingly ears?
Aga. With surety stronger then Aciilles arm,
Fore all the Greekh heads, which with one voyce
Call Agamemnon Head and Generall.

Enf. Faire leave, and large fecurity. How may
A stranger to those moft Imperial lookes,
Know them from eyes of other Mortals?
Aga. How?
Enf. I t ask, that I might waken reuerence,
And on the cheeke be ready with a blufh
Modeft as morning, when the coldly eyes
The youthfull Phebus :
Which is that God in office guiding men?
Which is the high and mighty Agamemnon?

Aga. This Troyan scornes vs, or the men of Troy
Are ceremonious Courtiers.

Enf. Courtiers as free, as debonnaire ; vnarm’d,
As bending Angels : that’s their Fame, in peace :
But when they would feeme Souldiers, they haue galles,
Good armes, strong ioynets, true fwords, & lowes accord,
Nothing fo full of heart. But peace &Aneas,
Peace Troyan, lay thy finger on thy lips,
The worthineffe of praife diftaines his worfe :
If that he prais’d himfelfe, bring the praife forth.
But what the repining enemy commends,
That breath Fame blowes,that praife fole pure tranfceds.

Aga. Sir, you of Troy, call you your felle &Aneas?
Aga. I Greece, that is my name.
Aga. What’s your affayre I pray you?
Aga. Sir pardon, ’tis for Agamemnon cares.
Aga. He heares nought priuely
That comes from Troy.
Aga. Nor I from Troy come not to whiffer him,
I bring a Trumpet to awake his care,
To fet his fonce on the attentive bent,
And then to speake.
Aga. Speake frankly as the winde,
It is not Agamemnon sleeping houre;
That thou fhalt know Troyan he is awake,
He tells thee fo himfelfe.

Aga. Trumpet blow loud,
Send thy Braffe voyce through all these laze Tents,
And every Greecee of mettle, let him know,
What Troy meanes fairly, shall be spoke alowd.

The Trumpets found.

We have great Agamemnon heere in Troy,
A Prince call’d Hector, Priaun is his Father:
Who in this dull and long-continew’d Truce
Is rufty grownne. He bad me take a Trumpet,
And to this purpose speake : Kings,Princes, Lords,
If there be one among’t the faireft of Greece,
That holds his Honor higher then his eafe,
That feekes his praife, more then he fears his perill,
That knowes his Valour, and knowes not his feare.
That loues his Miftris more then in confeffion,
(With truant voyces to her owne lips he loues)
And dare avow her Beauty,and her Worth,
In other armes then hers : to him this Challenge.

Hector, in view of Troyans, and of Greecees,
Shall make it good, or do his belt to do it.
He hath a Lady, wifer, fairer, truer,
Then ever Greekhe did compaff in his armes,
And will to morrow with his Trumpet call,
Midway betweene your Tents, and walles of Troy,
To rowze a Grecian that is true in lowe.
If any come, Hector shall honour him:
If none, hee’ll fay in Troy when he retires,
The Grecian Dames are fun-burnt, and not worth
The splinter of a Lanc : Euen fo much.

Aga. This shall be told our Louers Lord &Aneas,
If none of them haue foule in fuch a kinde,
We left them all at home : But we are Souliders,
And may that Soulinder a meere recreant prove,
That meanes not, hath not, or is not in lowe:
If then one is, or hath, or meanes to be,
That one meets Hector; if none else, Ile be he.

Nef. Tell him of Nefor, one that was a man
When Hector’s Grandire fuctk : he is old now,
But if there be not in our Grecian mould,
One Noble man, that hath one spark of fire
To anfwver for his Loue ; tell him from me,
Ile hide my Siluer beard in a Gold Beauer,
And in my Vanbrace put this wither’d brawne,
And meeting him, wil tell him, that my Lady
Was fayer then his Grandame, and as chaffe
As may be in the world : his youth in flood,
Ile pawne this truth with my three drops of blood.

Enf. Now heauens forbid fuch carftite of youth.

Vfif. Amen.

Aga. Faire Lord &Aneas,
Let me touch your hand :
To our Paullion shall I leade you first :
Aciilles haue warne word of this intent,
So shall each Lord of Greece from Tent to Tent:
Your felle shall F east with vs before you goe,
And finde the welcome of a Noble Foe.

Exeunt. Manet Vffif, and Nefor.

Vffif. Nefor.

Nef. What fayes Vffif?

Vffif. I have a young conceptions in my braine,
Be you my time to bring it to fome fhape.

Nef. What is’t?

Vffif. This ‘tis:
Blunt wedges riu hard knots : the seeded Pride
That hath to this maturity blowne vp

Yet go we under our opinion still,
That we have better men. But hit or misse,
Our proiects life this shape of fence affumes,
Achilles imployp'd, pluckes downe Achille Plumes.

Neft. Now Polyttes, I begin to relish thy advice,
And I will give a taste of it forthwith
To Agamemnon, go we to him straight :
Two Curtes shall tame each other, pride alone
Must tarre the Matchlesse on, as twere their bone. Exeunt
Enter Aiax, and Therites.

Aia. Therites?
Ther. Agamemnon, how if he had Biles (ful) all our generally.
Aia. Therites?
Ther. And thofe Byles did runne, say fo; did not the General rune, were not that a botchy core?
Aia. Dogge.
Ther. Then there would come some matter from him : I see none now.
Aia. Thou Bitch-Wolfe-Sonne, canst thou not heare? Feele then. Stripes him.
Ther. The plague of Greece upon thee thou Mongrel beast-witted Lord.
Aia. Speake then you whindaft leauen speake, I will beate thee into handfomnesse.
Ther. I shall sooner yeale thee into wit and holiness: but I thinke thy Horfe wil foone con an Oration, then I learn a prayer without booke : Thou canft strike, canst thou? A red Murren o'th thy lades tricks.
Aia. To ada foleo, learn me the Proclamation.
Ther. None doth thou thinke I have no fence thou art I. The Proclamation. (me thus?)
Aia. Thou art proclaim'd a fool, I thinke.
Aia. Do not Purpentine, do not; my fingers itch.
Ther. I would thou didst itch from head to foot, and I had the scratching of thee, I would make thee the lothomf' feat in Greece.
Aia. I say the Proclamation.
Ther. Thou grumbleft & raleft every hour on Achilles, and thou art as ful of enuy at his greatnes, as Cercberas is at Proserpina's beauty. I, that thou barkft at him.
Aia. Mistrefle Therites.
Ther. Thou shoul'dft strike him.
Aia. Coblofe.
Ther. He would punt thee into fluiers with his fift, as a Sailer breaks a bisket.
Aia. Thou foole for a Witch.
Ther. I, do, do, thou sodden-witted Lord : thou haft no more braine then I haue in mine elbows. A Nefcico may tutor thee. Thou scurvy valiant Affe, thou art heere but to thresh Troyans, and thou art bought and folde ammong thofe of any wit, like a Barbarian flane. If thou vfe to beat me, I will begin at thy heele, and tel what thou art by inches, thou thing of no bowels thou.
Aia. You dogge.
Ther. Thou scurvy Lord.
Aia. You Curre.

Achil. Why how now Aiax? wherefore do you this?
How now Therites? what's the matter man?
Ther. You see him there, do you?
Achil. I, what's the matter?
Ther. Nay looke upon him.
Achil. So I do : what's the matter?

576
Troylus and Cressida.

Tber. Nay but regard him well.

Achil. Well, why I do so.

Tber. But yet you looke not well vpon him: for who some euer you take him to be, he is Achil.

Achil. I know that foole.

Tber. I, but that foole knowes not himselfe.

Achil. Therefore I beate thee.

Tber. Lo, lo, lo, lo, what medicums of wit he vterts: his eunions have eares thus long. I haue bobb'd his Braine more then he has beate my bones: I will buy nine Sparrowes for a penny, and his Pianmater is not worth the ninth part of a Sparrow. This Lord (Achilles) Achil who wears his wit in his belly, and his gutes in his head, Ile tell you what I say of him.

Achil. What?

Tber. I say this Achil

Achil. Nay good Achil.

Tber. Has not so much wit.

Achil. Nay, I will hold you.

Tber. As will I flop the eye of Helen's Needle, for whom becomes to fight.

Achil. Peace foole.

Tber. I would have peace and quietnes, but the foole will not: he there, that he, looke you there.

Achil. O thou damn'd Curre, I shall

Achil. Will you set your wit to a Foole.

Tber. No I warrant you, for a foole will shame it.

Pat. Good words Tberfites.

Achil. What's the quarrel?

Achil. I bad thee vile Owle, goe learne me the tenure of the Proclamation, and he raves upon me.

Tber. I ferue thee not.

Achil. Well, go on.

Tber. I ferue heere voluntary.

Achil. Your latesgreece was sufferance, 'twas not voluntary, no man is beaten voluntary: Achil was heere the voluntary, and you as vnder an Impresse.

Tber. E'nefo, a great deal of your wit too lies in your finnesews, or else there be Lisars. Hector shall have a great catch, if he knocke out either of your brains, he were as good cracke a fufette with no kernen.

Achil. What with me to Tberfites?

Tber. There's Flyisses, and old Neffor, whole Wit was moudly ere their Grandfires had nails on their toes,yoke you like draft-Oxen, and make you plough vp the warre.

Tber. Yes good to, to Achilles, to Achil, to Achil. I shall cut out your tongue.

Tber. 'Tis no matter, I shall speake as much as thou afterwards.

Pat. No more words Tberfites.

Tber. I will hold my peace when Achilles Brooch bids me, shall I?

Achil. There's for you Patroclus.

Tber. I wi' fee you hang'd like Clotpoles ere I come any more to your Tents; I will keepe where there is wit fflirring, and leave the faction of foole.

Pat. A good riddance.

Achil. Marry this Sir is proclaim'd through all our hoff, that Hector by the fift houre of the Sunne, Will with a Trumpet, 'twist our Tents and Troy To morrow morning call some Knight to Armes, That hath a romacke, and such a one that dare Maintaine I know not what: 'tis trah. Farewell.

Heknew his man.

Achil. O meaning you, I wil goe learnre more of it. Exit.

Enter Priam, Hector, Troylus, Paris and Helenus.

Pri. After to many hours, liues, speeches spent, Thus once againe fayes Nefor from the Greckes, Deluer Helen, and all damage elfe

(As honour, loffe of time, trauail, expence, Wounds, friends, and what els deere that is confum'd In hot digestion of this comorant Warre.)

Shall be brooke off. Hector, what fay you too't.

Hel. Though no man leffer feares the Greeks then I, As farre as touches my particular: yet dread Priam, There is no Lady of more softer bowels, More fpunge, to fuckle in the f彭e of fearre,

More ready to cry out, who knowes what follows Then Hector is: the wound of peace is furety, Surety secure: but moderate Doubt is cal'd

The Beacon of the wife: the tent that searches To' thbottome of the world. Let Helen go,

Since the firft word was drawne aboute this queftion, Every rythe foule mongt many thousand difines,

Hath bin as deere as Helen: I meane of ours:

If we have loft fo many tenths of ours
To guard a thing not ours, nor worth to vs
(Had it our name) the vale of one ten;
What merit's in that reafon which denies
The yeelding of her vp.

Troy. Fie, fie, my Brother;

Weigh you the worth and honour of a King
(So great as our dread Father) in a Scale
Of common Ounces? Wil you with Counters fumme
The paff proportion of his infinite,

Anderbucke in a wafe moft fathomlefe,
With fpannes and inches to diminutive,
As feares and reafons? Fie for godly flame?

Hel. No maruel though you bite fo sharp at reafons,
You are fo empty of them, should not our Father
Beare the great fway of his affayres with reafons;
Because your speech hath none that tells him fo.

Troy. You are fo dreames & flumbars brother Prieft
You furre your glues with reafon: here are your reafons
You know an enemy intends you harme,
You know, a fword impoy'd is perilous,
And reafon flies the obiect of all harme.

Who maruels then when Helenus beholds
A Grecian and his fword, if he do fet
The very wings of reafon to his heele:
Or like a Starrre diforb'd. Nay, if we talke of Reafon,
And flye like chidden Merycurie from Jouve,
Let's flut our gates and sleepe: Manhood and Honor
Should have hard hearts, wold they but fat their thoughts
With this cram'd reafon: reafon and repect,
Makes Liuers pale, and luftiyhood deiect.

Hel. Brother, the is not worth
What the doth ccof the holding.

Troy. What's aught, but as 'tis valew'd?

Hel. But value dwells not in particular will,
It holds his egffame and dignite.
As well, wherein 'tis precious of if felfe,

As in the prizer: 'Tis made Idolatrie,
To make the fervice greater then the God,
The wall dothes that is inclinabile
To what infectiously it felfe afect.

Without some image of th'affecte merit.

Troy. I take to day a Wife, and my election
Is led on in the conduett of my Will;
My Will enkindled by mine eyes and eares,
'Two traded Pylots twixt the dangerous shores
Of Will, and Judgement. How may I auoyde
(Although my will did daffite what it elec't)
The Wife I chose, th' she can be no euer
To blemish from this, and to stand firme by honour.
We turne not backe the Silkes upon the Merchant
When we have spoil'd them, nor the remainder Viands
We do not throw in vremarkfuple fame,
Because we now are full. It was thought meeete
Paris should do some vengeance on the Greekes;
Your breath of full content bellied his Sailes,
The Seas and Windes (old Wranglers) tooke a Truce,
And did him feruice; he touch't the Pors defir'd,
And for an old Aunt whom the Greekes held Captive,
He brought a Grecean Queen, whose youth & frethneffe
Wrinkles Apollo's, and makes flate the morning.
Why keepe we here the Grecians keepe our Aunt:
Is the worth keeping? Why she is a Pearle,
Whose price hath launch'd aboue a thousand Ships,
And turn'd Crown'd Kings to Merchants.
If you'luoach, 'twas wifedome Paris went,
(As you must needs, for you all cride, Go, go:)
If you confesse, he brought home Noble prize,
(As you must needs) for you all clapt your hands,
And cride ineftable; why do you now
The iffe of your proper Wifedomes rate,
And do a deed that Fortune neuer did?
Begger the effimation which you priz'd;
Richer then Sea and Land? O'Theft moft bafe!
That we have flonde what we feare to keepe.
But Theuses unworthy of a thing fo flane,
That in their Country did them that difgrace,
We fearre to warrant in our Natuc place.

Enter Caftandra with her baire about her eares.

Caf. Cry Troyans, cry.
Priam. What noyle? what shreekes is this?
Troy. 'Tis our mad sifter, I do know her voyce.
Caf. Cry Troyans.
He ft. It is Caftandra.
Caf. Cry Troyans cry; lend me ten thousand eyes,
And I will fill them with Propheticke teares.
He ft. For your sifter, peace.
Caf. Virgins, and Boyes; mid-age & wrinckled old,
Soft infancie, that nothing can but cry,
Add to my clauour: let vs pay betimes
A moity of that maffe of moane to come.
Cry Troyans cry, prafile your eyes with teares,
Troy must not be, nor goody Lillon fland,
Our fire-brand Brother Paris burns vs all.
Cry Troyans cry, a Helen and a woe;
Cry, cry, Troy burns, or elle let Helen goe.
Exit.

He ft. Now youthfull Troylus, do not thefe hee trains
Of diuination in our Sister,worke
Some touches of remorfe? Or is your blood
So madly hot, that no discourse of reaon,
Nor feare of bad successe in a bad caufe,
Can qualifie the fame?
Troy. Why Brother Hector,
We may not thinke the lustneffe of each aete
Such, and no other then event doth forme it,
Nor once deceipt the courage of our mindes;
Because Caftandra's mad, her brainficke raptures
Cannot daffe the goodneffe of a quarrell,
Troylus and Cressida.

Is this in way of truth: yet nere the lefle,
My frifirt brethren, I propend to you
In refolution to keepe Helen still;
For 'tis a caufe that hath no meane depeendance,
Vpon our loynt and feueraall dignities.

Troy. Why? there you toucht the life of our defigne:
Were it not glory that we more affected,
Then the performance of our heaving spleenes,
I would not with a drop of Trojan blood,
Spent more in her defence. But worthy Helen,
She is a theame of honour and renowne,
A fplure to valiant and magnanimous deeds,
Whose prefent courage may beate downe our foes,
And fame in time to come canone vs.

For I prefume brave Helen would not loofe
So right advantage of a promif'd glory,
As smiles vpon the fore-head of this action,
For the wide worlds reuenew.

Hefte. I am yours,
You valiant off-spring of great Priamus,
I have a roiling challenge lent among it
The dull and factious nobles of the Grecianes,
Will strike amazement to their drowifie spirits,
I was aduerse'd, their Great generall feipt,
Whilft emulation in the armie crept:
This I prefume will wake him.

Exeunt.
Here comes Patroclus.

Nef. No Achilles with him?

Vijf. The Elephant hath voyants, but none for curteis:

His legge are legs for necessifie, not for flight.

Patro. Achilles bids me say he is much forry:

If any thing more then your sport and pleasure,
Did moue your greatnesse, and this noble State,
To call vpon him; he hopes it is no other,
But for your health, and your digestion fake;
An after Dinners breath.

Aga. Hear ye Patroclus:
We are too well acquainted with these anwers:
But his euacon winged thus swift with fcorne,
Cannot outflye our apprehensions.

Much attribute he hath, and much the reason,
Why we ascribe it to him, yet all his vertues,
Not vertuously of his owne part beheld,

Doe in our eyes, begin to loose their gloffe;

Yes, and like faire Fruit in an vnholdome dish,
Are like to rot vntafted: goe and tell him,
We came to speake with him; and you shall not finne,
If you doe not, we will take him over proud,
And vnder honeste; in felfe-assumption greater
Then in the note of judgement: & worthier then himselfe
Here tends the sauge strangenege he puts on,
Disguife the holy strength of their command:
And vnder write in an obfuring kinde
His humorous predominance, yea watch
His pettift lines, his efs, his flows, as if
The passafe and whole carriage of this action
Rode on his tyde. Goe tell him this, and adde,
That if he ouerhold his price fo much,
Weele none of him; but let him, like an Engin
Not portable, lye vnder this report.
Bring aacion hither, this cannot goe to warre:
A stirring Dwarfe, we doe allowance glue,
Before a sleeping Gyant: tell him fo.

Pat. I shall, and bring his anwers preffently.

Aga. In second voyce weele not be satisfied,
We come to speake with him, Vliffes enter you.

Exit Vliffes.

Aiax. What is he more then another?

Aga. No more then what he thinkes he is.

Aiax. Is he so much, doe you not thinke, he thinkes himselfe a better man then I am?

Aga. No question.

Aiax. Will you subscribe his thought, and say he is?

Aga. No, Noble Aiax, you are as strong, as valiant, as wife, no leffe noble, much more gentle, and altogether more tractive.

Aiax. Why should a man be proud? How doth pride grow? I know not what it is.

Aga. Your minde is the clearer Aiax, and your vertues the fairest; he that is proud, eates vp himselfe; Pride is his owne Gloffe, his owne trumpet, his owne Chronicle, and what euer praifes it fille but in the deede, devoures the deede in the praife.

Enter Ulysses.

Aiax. I do hate a proud man, as I hate the ingendring of Toades.

Nef. Yet he loues himselfe's is't not strange?

Vijf. Achilles will not in the field to morrow.

Aga. What's his excuse?

Vijf. He doth relye on none,
But carries on the freame of his dispoze,
Without obseruation or respect of any,

In will peculiar, and in felfe admission.

Aga. Why, will he not vpon our faire request,
Ventent his perfon, and thare the ayre with vs?

Vijf. Things small as nothing, for requests sake onely
He makes important; polleff he is with greatnesse,
And speakes not to himfelfe, but with a pride
That quarter at felfe-breath. Imagin'd wroth
Holds in his blood fuch wilone and hot discourse,
That twist his mentall and his active parts,
Kingdom'd Achilles in commotion rages,
And batters gainst it fille; what should I say?
He is fo playu proud, that the death tokens of it,
Cry no recover.

Aga. Let Aiax goe to him,
Deare Lord, goe you and greeete him in his Tent;
'Tis faid he holds you well, and will be led
At your request a little from himfelfe.

Vijf. O Agrimenmon, let it not be fo.

Weele confecrate the steps that Aiax makes,
When they goe from Achilles shall the proud Lord,
That bathes his arroganace with his owne fame,
And neuer sufferers matter of the world.
Enter his thoughts: fuee such as doe revolve
And ruminat himselfe. Shall he be worship'd,
Of that we hold an Idol, more then hee?

No, this thrice worthy and right valiant Lord,
Must not fo flaue his Palme, nobly acquir'd,
Nor by my will affubluge his merit,
As amply titled as Achilles is: by going to Achilles,
That were to enlard his fat already, pride,
And adde more Coles to Cancer, when he burns
With entertaining great Hipieron.

This L. goe to him! Iapeter forbid,
And fay in thunders, Achilles goe to him.

Nef. O this is well, he rules the veine of him.

Dis. And how his silence drinke vp this applauze.

Aiax. If I goe to him, with my armed fit, Ile paue him ore the face.

Aga. O no, you shall not goe.

Aiax. And a be proud with me, Ile pheue his pride: let me goe to him.

Vijf. Not for the worth that hangs vpon our quarrel.

Aiax. A pultry infolent fellow.

Nef. How he describès himfelfe.

Aiax. Can he not be fociable?

Vijf. The Rauen chides blackneffe.

Aiax. Ile let his humours bloud.

Aga. He will be the Phytian that should be the paient.

Aiax. And all men were a my minde.

Vijf. Wit would be out of fashion.

Aiax. A should not beare it fo, a should eate Swords first: shall pride carry it?

Nef. And 'twould, you'd carry halfe.

Vijf. A would haue ten shares.

Aiax. I will kneede him, Ile make him supple, hee's not yet through warme.

Nef. Force him with praifes, pour in, pour in his ambition is dry.

Vijf. My L. you fee thee too much on this dislike.

Nef. Our noble Generall, doe not doe fo.

Dom. You must purge to fight without Achilles.

Vijf. Why, 'tis this naming of him doth him harme.
Here is a man, but 'tis before his face,
I will be filent.

Nef. Wherefore should you fo?
Troylus and Cressida.

He is not emulous, as Achilles is.

VII. 'Know the whole world, he is as valiant.

‘As. A honest dog, that shall palter thus with vs, would he were a Trojan.

Nef. What a vice were it in Aias now——

VII. If he were proud.

Dis. Or courteous of praise.

VII. ‘I, or furlay borne.

Dis. Or strange, or false affected.

P. Thank the heavens I, in this art of sweet compofure; Praise him that get thee, the that gave thee fucce:
Fame be thy Tutor, and thy parts of nature
Thrice fam’d beyond, beyond all xedution;
But he that disciplin’d thy armes to fight,
Let Mars deuide Eternity in twaine,
And give him half, and for thy vigior,
Bull-bearing Mies: his addition yeelds.

To finnowie Aias: I will not praise thy wildeome,
Which like a bourn, a pale, a thre conclines
Thy fpacious and dilated parts; here’s Nefior
Instructed from the Antiquary times;
He must he, is, he cannot but be wise.
But pardon Father Nefior, were your days
As greeue as Aias, and your brains fo temper’d,
You should not have the eminence of him,
But be as Aias.

‘As. Shall I call you Father?

VII. I my good Sonne.

Dis. Be ruled by him Lord Aias.

VII. There is no tarrying here, the Hart Achilles
Keeps thicket: pleafe it our Generall,
To call togethder all his flate of warre
Frensh Kings are come to Troy; to morrow
We must with all our maine of power fland falt:
And here’s a Lord, come Knights from Eafit to Weft,
And call their flowre, Aias shall cope the beft.

Ag. Goe we to Counceile, let Achilles fliepe;
Light Botes may faile swift, though greater bulkes draw Deepe. Exeunt. Musicke sounds within.

Enter Pandaruns and a Servant.

Pan. Friend, you, pray you a word: Doe not you follow the yong Lord Paris?

Ser. I sir, when he goes before me.

Pan. You depend vpon him I mean?

Ser. Sir, I doe depend vpon the Lord.

Pan. You depend vpon a noble Gentleman: I must needs praiie him.

Ser. The Lord be praiied.

Pan. You know me, doe you not?

Ser. Faith sir, superciliously.

Pa. Friend know me better, I am the Lord Pandaruns.

Ser. I hope I shall know your honour better.

Pa. I doe defire it.

Ser. You are in the flate of Grace?

Pa. Grace, not fo friend, honor and Lordship are my title: What Musique is this?

Ser. I doe but partly know sir: it is Musicke in parts.

Pa. Know you the Mufitians.

Ser. Wholly sir.

Pa. Who play they to?

Ser. To the hearers sir.

Pa. At whom pleasure friend?

Ser. At mine sir, and theirs that loue Musick.

Ser. Who shall I command sir?

Pa. Friend, we understand not one another: I am too courtly, and thou art too cunning. At whose request doe these men play?

Ser. That’s too’t indeede sir: marry sir, at the request of Paris my L. who’s there in person; with him the mortall Venus, the heart blood of beauty, loues infinissible foule.

Ser. No sir, Helen, could you not finde out that by her attributes?

Pa. It should feme fellow, that thou haft not seen the Lady Cressida. I come to speake with Paris from the Prince Troylus: I will make a complementall assault vpon him, for my busineffe fteeth.

Ser. Sudden busineffe, there’s a fewed phrafe indeede.

Enter Paris and Helena.

Pan. Faire be to you my Lord, and to all this faire company: faire defires in all faire meafure fairly guide them, especially to you faire Queene, faire thoughts be your faire pillow.

Hel. Doce L. you are full of faire words.

Pan. You speake your faire pleafure faire Queene: faire Prince, here is good broken Musicke.

Pa. You haue broke it cozen: and by my life you shal make it whole againe, you shall pece it out with a pece of your performance. Nel, he is full of harmony.

Pan. Truely Lady no.

Hel. O sir.

Pan. Rude in tooth, in good tooth very rude.

Paris. Well faid my Lord: well, you fay fo in fits.

Pan. I haue buiniffes to my Lord, deere Queene: my Lord will you vouchsafe me a word.

Hel. Nay, this shal not hedge vs out, weele heare you fing certainly.

Pan. Well faire Queene you are pleafant with me, but, marry thus my Lord, my deere Lord, and moft efteeemed friend your brother Troylus.

Hel. My Lord Pandarus, yonne faire Queene.

Pan. Go too faire Queene, goe to.

Commends himfelf most affectionately to you.

Hel. You shall not bob vs out of our melody:
If you doe, our melancholy upon your head.

Pan. Screte Queene, srete Queene, that’s a screte Queene faith——

Hel. And to make a sreete Lady far, is a fower offence.

Pan. Nay, that shal not feeve your turne, that shall it not in truth la. Nay, I care not for fuch words, no, no.

And my Lord he defires you, that if the King call for him at Supper, you will make his excufe.

Hel. My Lord Pandarus?

Pan. What sraie my faire Queene, my very, very faire Queene?

Par. What exploit’s in hand, where fups he to night?

Hel. Nay but my Lord?

Pan. What sraie my sree Queene? my cozen will fall out with you.

Hel. You must not know where he fups.

Par. With my difpofer Cressida.

Pan. No, no, I care not for fuch matter; you are wide, come your difpofer is ficke.

Par. Well, Ile make excufe.

Pan. I good my Lord: why should you say Cressida?

Par. I fpeake.

Pan. You
Enter Pandarus and Troylus.

Pan. How now, wheres thy Maister, at my Couzen Crefidia?

Man. No sir, he stayes for you to conduct him thither.

Enter Troylus.

Pan. O here he comes: How now, how now?

Troy. Sirra walke off.

Pan. Haue you seene my Cousin?

Troy. No Pandarus: I walke about her doore

Like a strange soule upon the Stigeian bankes

Staying for waftage. O be thou my Charos,

And give me swift transportance to those fields,

Where I may wallow in the Liddy beds

Propos’d for the deferrer. O gentle Pandarus,

From Capids shoulder plucke his painted wings,

And flye with me to Crefid.

Pan. Walke here ict’h’Orchard, Ile bring her straight.

Exit Pandarus.

Troy. I am giddy; expectation whirles me round,

Th’imaginable relish is so sweete,

That it enchantes my sense: what will it be

When that the watry pallats taste his deede

Loues thricre reputed Nefar? Death I fear me

Sounding disputation, or some toy too fine,

Too subtle, potent, and too sharpe in sweetnesse,

For the capacitie of my ruder powers;

I fear it much, and I doe fear besides,

That I shall loose distillation in my loyes,

As doth a battaille, when they charge on heapes

The enemy flying.

Enter Pandarus.

Pan. Shee’s making her ready, sheele come straight: you must be wity now, she doth so bluth, & fetches her winde so short, as if she were fraid with a sprite: Ile fetch her; it is the prettie villaine, she fetches her breath so short as a newtane Sparrow.

Exit Pand.

Troy. Euen such a passion doth imbarte my bosome:

My heart beates thicker then a feaurous pule

And all my powers doe their befowing loofe,

Like vallage at vnvaeres encountering

The eye of Maiestie.

Enter Pandarus and Crefida.

Pan. Come, come, what neede you bluth?

Shames a babie; here she is now, swear the oaths now to her, that you haue tworne to me. What are you gone a-gaine, you must be watchte ere you be made tame, must you? come your waies, come your waies, and you draw backward weele: put you ’t hils: why doe you not speake to her? Come draw this curtaigne, & let’s see your picture.

Alaste the day, how loath are you to offend day light? and

’twere darke you’d clofe soonner; So, fo, rub on, and kiffe the misreftre; how now, a kiffe in fee-farme: build there

Carpenter, the ayre is sweete. Nay, you shall fight your hearts out ere I part you. The Faulcon, as the Tercell, for all the Ducks ith Riuier: go too, go too.

Troy. You haue bereft me of all words Lady.

Pan. Words pay no debts; give her deedes: but sheele bereau you ’oth’ deede too, if thee call your actiuitie in question what billing a-gaine? here’s in witnesse whereof- of the Parties interchangeably. Come in, come in, Ile go a fire?

Cref. Will you walke in my Lord?

Troy. O Crefida, how often haue I wisht me thus?

Cref. What my Lord? the gods grant? O my Lord.

Troy. What shoulde they grant? what makes this pretty abstraction? what too curious dreg cfiyes my sweete Laday in the fountain of our loue?

Cref. More
Troilus and Cressida.

Cref. More dregs then water, if my teares have eyes.
'Troy. Feares make diuels of Cherubins, they never see truly.
Cref. Blinde feare, that seeing reason leads, finds safe footing, then blinde reason, stumbling without feare: to feare the worfe, oft cures the worfe.
'Troy. Oh let my Lady apprehend no feare, In all Captaine Pageant there is pretended no monfter.
Cref. Not nothing monftrons neither?
'Troy. Nothing but our undertakings, when we vowe to weepe sease,lie in fire, eate rockes, tame Tygers thincking it harder for our Miles treffe to deuile imposition inough, then for vs to vndergoe any difficulties imposéd. This is the monftruous in lowe Lady, that the will is infinite, and the execution confin'd; that the defire is boundleffe, and the a\[c]t a flue to limit.
Cref. They say all Louers sweare more performance then they are able, and yet referue an ability that they never performes vowing more then the perfection of ten; and discharging leafe then the tenth part of one. They that haue the voyce of Lyons, and the a\[c]t of Hares: are they not Monfters?
'Troy. Are there fuch? fuch are not we: Praife vs as we are ta\[t]ed, allow vs as we pro\[e]ue: our head shall goe bare till merit crowne it: no perfection in reuerion shall haue a praife in prefent: wee will not name defert before his birth, and being borne his addition shall be humble: few words to faire fa\[i]th. Troilus shall be fuch to Cressid, as what enuie can say wor\[f]rt, shall be a mocke for his truth; and what truth can speake tru\[e], not truer then Troy\[u]s.
Cref. Will you walke in my Lord?
Enter Pandaros.
Pan. What blushing ftil? have you not done talking yet?
Cref. Well Vnclle, what folly I commit, I dedicate to you.
Pan. I thanke you for that: if my Lord get a Boy of you, youe giue him me: be true to my Lord, if he flinch, chide me for it.
'Troy. You know now your hostages your Vnckles word and my firme faith.
Pan. Nay, Ie giue my word for her too: our kindred though they be long ere they are wooed, they are con\[f]ant being wone: they are Burres I can tell you, they're flicke where they are throwne.
Cref. Boldneffe comes to mee now, and brings mee heart: Prince Troilus, I haue lou'd you night and day, for many weary moneths.
'Troy. Why was my Cressid then so hard to win? Cref. Hard to feeme won: but I was won my Lord With the first glance; that euer pardon me, If I confesse much you will play the tyrant: I loue you now, but not till now so much But I might maifter it; infa\[i]th I ly:
My thoughts were like vnbrided children grow Too head-strong for their mother: fee we fooles, Why haue I blab'd; who shall be true to vs When we are fo vn\[f]cret to our felues? But though I lou'd you well, I woe you not, And yet good faith I vish my selfe a man; Or that we women had mens pruilledges Of speaking firft. Swete, bid me hold my tongue, For in this rapture I shall fully speake The thing I shall repent: fee, fee, your silence Comming in dumbneffe, from my weake\[n]effe drawes
My foule of counsell from me. Stop my mouth.
Cref. My Lord, I doe be\[f]eech you pardon me, 'Twas not my purpose thus to beg a knife: I am asham'd: O Heauens, what haue I done! For this time will I take my leave my Lord. 'Troy. Your leave sweetes Cressid? Pan. Leave: and you take leave till to morrow morning.
Cref. Pray you content you.
'Troy. What offends you Lady?
Cref. Sir, mine owne company.
'Troy. You cannot thin your selfe. Cref. Let me goe and try:
I haue a kind of selfe recides with you: But an vnkinde selfe, that it selfe will leave,
To be anotheres foole. Where is my wife? I would be gone: I speake I know not what. 'Troy. Well know they what they speake, that speakes fo freely.
Cref. Perchance my Lord, I shew more craft then loue, And fell fro roundly to a large condicion, To Angle for your thoughts: but you are wife, Or else you loue not: for to be wife and loue, Exceedes mans might; that dwells with gods above. 'Troy. O that I thought it could be in a woman: As if it can, I will pre\[f]ume in you, To fee\[d]e for aye her lampe and flames of loue. To keepe her confiance in plught and youth, Out-liuing beauties outward, with a minde That doth newe twitter then blood decays: Or that perfimation could but thus conuince me, That my integrall and truth to you, Might be affronted with the match and wa\[i]ght Of such a winnowd puritie in loue:
How were I then vp-lifted but alas,
I am as true, as truths simplicitie, And simpler then the infaffic of truth. Cr. In that Ie warre with you.
'Troy. O vertuous fight,
When right with right wars who shall be moft right:
True swaines in loue, shall in the world to come Approve their truths by Troilus, when their rimes,
Full of protreff, of oath and big compare:
Wants similes, truth tir'd with iteration,
As true as f\[f]eele, as plantage to the Moone:
As Sunne to day: as Turtle to her mate:
As Iron to Adaman: as Earth to th'Center:
Yet after all comparions of truth,
(As truths authentick author to be cited) As true as Troilus, shall crowne vp the Verfe,
And fanctifie the numbers.
Cref. Prophet may you be:
If I be falle, o f\[f]erve a haire from truth,
When time is old and hath forgot it falle:
When water drops haue worne the Stones of Troy;
And blinde oblivion swallow'd Cities vp;
And mightie States chara\[c]terieffe are grated
To duffie nothing; yet let memory,
From falle to falle, among falle Maides in loue,
Vpbraid my falsehood, when they'ae faid as falle,
As Aire, as Water, as Winde, as wantie earth;
As Foxe to Lambe; as Wolfe to Hei\[f]ers Cafle;
Pard to the Hinde, or Step dame to her Sonne;
Yea, let them say, to flique the heart of falsehood,
As false as Cressida.

Pand. Go too, a bargain made: seale it, seale it. Ile be the witnesse here I hold your hand: here my Cousins, if ever you prove false one to another, since I have taken such paines to bring you together, let all pitifull goers betweene be call'd to the worlds end after my name: call them all Panders; let all constant men be Troyluss, all false women Cressid, and all brokers betweene, Panders:

fay, Amen.

Troy. Amen.

Cres. Amen.

Pan. Amen.

Whereupon I will shew you a Chamber, which bed, becaufe it shall not speake of your prettie encounters, preffe it to death: away.

And Cupid grant all'tong-tide Maidens heere,

Bed, Chamber, and Pander, to prouide this geere. Exeunt.

Enter Vlys, Diomedes, Nefor, Agamemnon, Menelaus and Chalke. Florid.

Cal. Now Princes for the seruice I haue done you, Th'advantage of the time prompts me aloud, To call for recompence: appeare it to your minde, That through the fight I bear in things to love, I haue abandon'd Troy, left my poffeision,

Incur'd a Traitors name, expell'd my felfe,

From certaine and pollifte conuences,

To doubtfull fortunes, fequiring from me all That time, acquaintance, cuftome and condition, Made tame, and most familar to my nature:

And here to doe you feruice am become,

As new into the world, strange, vnacquainted.

I doe beseech you, as in way of taffe,

To give me now a little benefit:

Out of those many registred in promife,

Which you say, lieue to come in my behalfe.

Agam. What would'th thou of vs Trojan? make demand?

Cal. You have a Trojan prisoner, cal'd Antenor, Yesterday tooke: Troy holds him very deere.

Oft haue you (often haue you, thankes therefore) Deft'd my Cressid in right great exchange.

Whom Troy hath still den'd; but this Antenor, I know is such a wretch in his affairs;

That their negotiations all must flacke,

Wanting his manage: and they will almoft,

Gue vs a Prince of blood, a Sonne of Priam,

In change of him. Let him be sent great Princes,

And he shall buy my Daughter: and her prefence,

Shall quite strike off all feruice I haue done,

In most accepted paine.

Aga. Let Diomedes bear him,

And bring vs Cressid hither: Calcas shall haue What he requets of vs: good Diomed

Furnish you fairely for this enterchange;

Withball bring word, if Heitor will to morrow Be anfwerd in his challenge. Aiax is ready.

Dio. This shall I vndertake, and 'tis a burthen

Which I am proud to bear.

Exit.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus in their Tent.

Vlys. Achilles stands i'th entrance of his Tent; Pleafe it our Generall to passe strangely by him,

As if he were forgot: and Princes all,

Lay negligent and loose regard vpon him;

I will come laft, 'tis like heele question me,
Salutes each other with each others forme.
For speculation turns not to it selfe,
Till it hath travaile’d, and is married there
Where it may see it selfe: this is not strange at all.

Vil. I doe not straine it at the position,
It is familiar; but at the Authors drift,
Who in his circumstance, expressly proves
That no may is the Lord of any thing,
(Though in and of him there is much confuting,)
Till he communicate his parts to others:
Nor doth he of himselfe know them for ought,
Till he behold them formed in the applause,
Where they are extended: who like an arch reuerb’rate
The voyce againe; or like a gate of steel,
Fronting the Sunne, receiues and renders backe
His figure, and his heate. I was much rapt in this,
And apprehended here immediately:
The vnknowne Aiax;
Heauen’s what a man is there? a very Horfe,
That has he knowes not what. Nature, what things there
Moit abieft in regard, and deare in vie.
What things againe moit deere in the esteeme,
And poore in worth: now shal we fee to morrow,
An act that very chance doth throw vpon him.
Aiax renown’d? O heauen, what some fome deoe,
While some men leue to doe!
How some men creepe in skittifh fortunes hall,
While others play the Idects in her eyes:
How one man eates to anothers pride,
While pride is feasting in his wantonnefse
To see these Grecian Lords; why, even already,
They clap the luber Aiax on the shoulder,
As if his foote were on braye Heftors brefe,
And great Troy shrinking.

Abil. I doe beleue it:
For they paft by me, as myfers doe by beggars,
Neither gae to me good word, nor looke:
What are my deedes forgot?

Vil. Time hath (my Lord) a wallet at his backe,
Wherein he puts almes for obliuion;
A great fix’d monfter of ingratiatges:
Those scraps are good deedes paft,
Which are deour’d as faft as they are made,
Forgot as foone as done: perfeuerance, deere my Lord,
Keeps honor bright, to haue done, is to hang
Quite out of fashion, like a ruffie male,
In monuments mockrie: take the infant way,
For honour travels in a fraught fo narrow,
Where one but goes a breaft, keepe then the path:
For emulation hath a thousand Sonnes,
That one by one purifie; if you glue way,
Or hedge ahide from the direc’d forth right;
Like to an entred Tyde, they all ruffe by,
And leave you hindmoft:
Or like a gallant Horfe falne in fift ranke,
Lye there for paument to the abieft, neere
Ore-run and trampled on: then what they doe in prefent,
Though lefe then yours in past, mutt ore-top yours:
For time is like a fashionable Hofte,
That lightly shakes his parting Gueft by th’hand;
And with his arms out-stretch’t, as he would flye,
Graifes in the commer: the welcome euer smilies,
And farewells goes out fighting: O let not vertue leafe
Remuneration for the thing it was: for beaute, wit,
High birth, vigor of bone, defert in fortune,
Loure, friendlyh, charitie, are fubiefts all
To enuius and calumniating time:
One touch of nature makes the whole world kin:
That all with one conflent praiife new borne gades,
Though they are made and moulded of things paft,
And goe to duft, that is a little guilt,
More laud then guilt oredussed.
The prefent eye praiifes the pref nt obieft:
Then maruell not thou great and compleat man,
That all the Greekes begin to worship Aiax;
Since things in motion begin to catch the eye,
Then what not flies: the cry went out on thee,
And fill it might, and yet it may againe,
If thou woulde not entombe thy felle alue,
And caste thy reputation in thy Tent;
Whose glorious deeds, but in these fields of late,
Made emulous misfions ‘mongt the gods themfelves,
And draue great Mars to faction.

Abil. Of this my priuacie,
I haue strong reasons.

Vil. But ’gainft your priuacie
The reafons are more potent and heroicall:
’Tis knowne Achilles, that you are in loue
With one of Priamus daughters.

Abil. Ha! knowne?

Vil. Is that a wonder?
The proudnes that’s in a watchfull State,
Knowes almost every graine of Plutoes gold;
Findes botome in thevcn comprehenfifue deepes;
Keepes place with thought: and almost like the gods,
Doe thoughts vnaile in their dumbe cradles:
There is a mysterie (with whom relation Durft neuer meddle) in the foule of State;
Which hath an operation more diuine,
Then breath or pen can glue expreffure to:
All the commerle that you have had with Troy,
As perfeectly is ours, as yours, my Lord,
And better would it fit Achilles much,
To throw downe Heftor then Telefena.
But it muft grieue yong Tirbus now at home,
When fame shall in her Jand found her trumpe; and
And all the Grecian Girls shall tripping fing,
Great Heftors fifer did Achilles winne;
But our great Aiax brauely beate downe him.
Farewell my Lord: I as your louver speake;
The foole flies ore the Ice that you should breake.

Patr. To this effeét Achilles haue I mou’d you;
A woman impudent and manfull growne,
Is not more locht, then an effeminate man,
In time of action: I stand condemne’d for this;
They thinke my little Homacke to the warre,
And your great loue to me, reftraines you thus:
Sweete, roufe your felfe; and the weake wanton Cepho
Shall from your yoke vnloafe his amorous foule,
And like a dew drop from the Lyons mane,
Be shooke to ayrie ayre.

Abil. Shall Aiax fight with Heftor?

Patr. 1, and perhaps receive much honor by him.

Abil. I fee my reputation is at flake,
My fame is howdly gored.

Patr. O then beware:
Those wounds heal lill, that men doe glue them felves:
Ommifion to doe what is neceffary
Seales a conftitution to a blanke of danger,
And danger like an argue subtly taints
Even then when we fit idely in the funne.

Abil. Goe call Therfites hithe Sweet Patroclus,
Troylus and Cressida.

He fend the foole to Ajax, and desire him
To inveite the Trojan Lords after the Combat
To see vs here vnarm'd: I have a womans longings.
An appetite that I am fiche withall,
To fee great Hector in his weedes of peace; Enter Tber:
To talk with him, and to behold his visage,
Euen to my full of view. A labour fau'd.

Tber. A wonder.

Achil. What?

Tber. Achil goes vp and downe the field, asking for himselfe.

Achil. How fo?

Tber. Hee muft fight fingly to morrow with Hector,
And is fo prophetically proud of an heroicall cudgelling,
that he raues in faying nothing.

Achil. How can that be?

Tber. Why he talkes vp and downe like a Peacock, a fride and a fland: ruminates like an hoffeffe, that hath no
Arithmatique but her braine to fet downe her reckoning:
bites his lip with a politique regard, as who should say,
there were wit in his head and two'd out; and fo there is: but it ies as coldly in him, as fire in a flint, which will not fire though he be ftruck without knocking. The mans undone for ever: for if Hector break not his necke i'th'comb, heele break't himfelfe in vaine-glory. He knowes not mee: I faid, good morrow Ajax; And he replies, thankes Agamemnon. What thinke you of this man, that takes me for the Generall? Hee's grown a very land-fish, languagelefe, a monster: a plague of opinion, a man may wearie it on both fides like a leather Jerkin.

Achil. Thou muft be my Ambassador to him Tberfites.

Tber. Who, I: why heele anfwre no body: he profeffes notanfwerring; speaking is for beggers: he weares his tongue in'armes: I will put on his prefence; let Pat-roclus make his demands to me, you shall fee the Pageant of Ajax.

Achil. To him Patroclus; tell him, I humbly desire the valiant Ajax, to invade the moft valorous Hector, to come vnarm'd to my Tent, and to procure safe conduct for his perfon, of the magnuminos and moft illufrious, fife or feauen times honourd Captain, Generall of the Grecian Armie Agamemnon, &c. doe this.

Patro. Tere bleffe great Ajax.

Tber. Hum.

Patro. I come from the worthy Aeibilhes.

Tber. Ha?

Patro. Who moft humbly desires you to inveite Hector to his Tent.

Tber. Hum.

Patro. And to procure safe conduct from Agamemmon.

Tber. Agamemmon?

Patro. I my Lord.

Tber. Ha?

Patro. What fay you too't.

Tber. God buy you with all my heart.

Patro. Your anfwer fir.

Tber. If to morrow be a faire day, by euen a clocke
it will goe one way or other; howfoever, he shall pay for me ere he has me.

Patro. Your anfwer fir.

Tber. Fare you well with all my heart.

Achil. Why, but he is not in this tune, is he?

Achil. No, but he's out a tune thus: what mufcke will be in him when Hecater has knockt out his braines, I know not: but I am sure none, vnleefe the Fidler Apollo get his newes to make catlings on.

Achil. Come, thou fhalt bear a Letter to him straight.

Tber. Let me carry another to his Horfe; for that's the more capable creature.

Achil. My minde is troubled like a Fountaine flir'd,
And my felle fee not the bottome of it.

Tber. Would the Fountaine of your minde were cleere againe, that I might water an Afle at it: I had rather be a
Ticke in a Sheepe, then fuch a valiant ignorance.

Enter at one doore Aneas with a Torch, at another
Paris, Diaphæbus, Antenor, Dismid the Grecian, with Torches.

Par. See hoa, who is that there?

Diaph. It is the Lord Aneas.

Aneas. Is the Prince there in person?

Hadhad I to good occasion to lye long
As you Prince Paris, nothing but heavenly businesse,
Should rob my bed-mate of my company.

Dismid. That's my minde too: good morrow Lord
Aneas.

Par. A valiant Grecian Aneas, take his hand,
Witness the proffee of your speech within;
You told how Dismid in a whole weeke by dayes
Did haunt you in the Field.

Aneas. Health to you valiant fir,
During all queftion of the gentle truce:
But when I meete you arm'd, as blacke defiance,
As heart can think, or courage execute.

Dismid. The one and other Dismid embraces,
Our blouds are now in calme; and fo long health:
But when contention, and occasion meetes,
By Ione, Ile play the hunter for thy life,
With all my force, purfuite and pollicy.

Aneas. And thou shalt hunt a Lyon that will fye
With his face backward, in humane gentlennesse:
Welcome to Troy; now by Anchises life,
Welcome indeede: by Venus hand I fware,
No man allue can loue in fuch a sort,
The thing he meanes to kill, more excellently.

Dismid. We sympathize. Ione let Aneas lye
(If to my sword his fate be not the glory)
A thousand compleat coursees of the Sunne,
But in mine emulous honor let him dye:
With every loynt a wound, and that to morrow.

Aneas. We know each other well.

Dismid. We doe, and long to know each other worfe.

This is the moft, delightful gentile greeting;
The nobleft hatefull love, that ere I heared of.

What businesse Lord so early?

Aneas. I was fent for to the Kingbut why, I know not.

Par. His purfice meets you; it was to bring this Greek
To Caleb's houfe; and there to render him,
For the enfreed Antenor, the faire Cressid:
Lers have your company; or if you pleafe,
Hafte there before vs. I contantly doe thinke
(Or rather call my thought a certaine knowledge)
My brother Troylus lodges there to night.

Par. Roufe him, and give him note of our approach,
With the whole quality whereof, I fear
We shall be much unwelcome.

Aneas. That I affure you. Troylus had rather Troy were borne to Greece,
Then Cressid borne from Troy.

Par. There
Par. There is no helpe: The bitter disposition of the time will have it so.
On Lord, weele follow you.

Æne. Good morrow all. Exit Æneas

Par. And tell me noble Ænomus; faith tell me true,
Euen in the foule of found good fellow ship,
Who in your thoughts merits faire Helen moit?
My selfe, or Memenous?

Dism. Both alike.
He merits well to have her, that doth sckeke her,
Not making any scruple of her soyure,
With such a hell of paine, and world of charge.
And you as well to keepe her, that defend her,
Not pallating the tast of her dishonour,
With such a costly lose of wealth and friends:
He like a pulling Cuckold, would drinke vp
The lees and dregs of a flat tamed peece:
You like a letter, out of whorish loynes,
Are pleas'd to breed out your inheritors:
Both merits pay'd, each weighs no leffe nor more,
But he as he which heauuer for a whore.

Par. You are too bitter to your country-woman.

Dis. Shee's bitter to her countrye: heare me Parke,
For every false drop in her bauy veines,
A Grecians life hath funke: for every scruple
Of her contaminated carrion weight,
A Trojan hath beene flaine. Since she could speake,
She hath not gien so many good words breath,
As for her, Greekes and Troianes suffred death.

Par. Faire Ænomed, you doe as chapmen doe,
Dif praise the thing that you desire to buy:
But we in silence hold this vertue well;
Weele not commend, what we intend to sell.
Here iewes our way.

Enter Troyles and Cressida.

Troy. Deere trouble not your selue: the morne is cold.

Cref. Then sweet my Lord, Ile call mine Vnckle down;
He shall vnbolt the Gates.

Troy. Trouble him not:
To bed, to bed: sleepe kill those pritty eyes,
And glue as soft attachment to thy fences,
As Infants empty of all thought.

Cref. Good morrow then.

Troy. I prithee now to bed.
Cref. Are you a weare of me?

Troy. O Cressida but that the buise day
Wak't by the Larke, hath rous'd the ribauld Crows,
And dreaming night will hide our eyes no longer:
I would not from thee.

Cref. Night hath beene too briefe.

Troy. Behere the witch! with venemous wights she
As hiddiously as hell; but flies the grapes of love,
With wings more momentary, swift then thought
You will catch cold, and curse me.

Cref. Prithee tarry, you men will never tarry;
O foolish Cressida, I might have still held off,
And then you would have tarryed. Harke, ther's one vp?
Pand. within. What's all the doores open here?

Troy. It is your Vnckle. Enter Pandarus.

Cref. A peffilence on him: now will he be mocking:
I shall have such a life.

Pan. How now, how now? how goe maiden-heads?
Heare you Maide: wher's my cozyn Cressida?

Cref. Go hang your self, you naughty mocking Vnckle:
You bring me to doo--and then you floute me too.

Pan. To do what? to do what? let her say what:
What haue I brought you to doe?

Cref. Come, come, beathrew your heart: youle nere be good, nor suffer others.

Pan. Ha, ha: alas poore wretch: a poore Chippakie, haft
not slept to night? would he not (a naughty man) let it
Sleepe: a bug, beast take him.

One knockes.

Cref. Did not I tell you? would he were knockt ith' head. Who's that at doore? good Vnckle goe and fee.

My Lord, come you againe into my Chamber:
You smile and mocke me, as if I meant naughtily.

Troy. Ha, ha.

Cref. Come you are deceu'd, I thinke of no such thing.
How earnely they knocke: pray you come in.

Knocke. I would not for halfe Troy hauue youe seene here. Exit

Pan. Who's there? what's the matter? will you beate downe the doore? How now, what's the matter?

Æne. Good morrow Lord, good morrow.

Pan. Who's there my Lord Æneas? by my troth I knew you not; what newes with you so early?

Æne. Is not Prince Troyles here?

Pan. Here? what should he doe here?

Æne. Come he is here, my Lord, doe not deny him:
It doth import him much to speake with me.

Pan. Is he here say you? 'tis more then I know, Ile be sworne: For my owne, part I came in late: what shoulde
he doe here?

Æne. Who, nay then: Come, come, youle doe him wrong, ere y'are ware: youle be fo true to him, to be faile to him: Doe not you know of him, but yet goe fetch him hither, goe.

Enter Troyles.

Troy. How now, what's the matter?

Æne. My Lord, I'carme hauue leasure to salue you,
My matter is so rath: there is at hand,
Parke your brother, and Deiphobus,
The Grecian Ænomes, and our Antenor
Deliber'd to vs, and for him forth-with,
Ere the firft sacrifice, within this hour,
We must give vp to Ænomeds hand

The Lady Cressida.

Troy. Is it concluded fo?
Æne. By Priam, and the generall state of Troy,
They are at hand, and ready to effect it.

Troy. How my sthilements mocke me;
I will goe meete them: and my Lord Æneas,
We met by chance; you did not finde me here.

Æne. Good, good, my Lord, the secrets of nature
Have not more gift in tacturnitie.

Enter Pandarus and Cressida.

Pan. Is't poiffible? no sooner got but loft: the diuell take Antenor; the yong Prince will goe mad: a plague upon Antenor; I would they had brok'ne necke.

Cref. How now? what's the matter? who was here?

Pan. Ah, ha!

Cref. Why sigh you so profoundly? wher's my Lord gone? tell me sweet Vnckle, what's the matter?

Pan. Would I were as deep under the earth as I am above.

Cref. O the gods! what's the matter?

Pan. Prithee get thee in: would thou had'ft nere beene borne; I knew thou woulde'ft be his death. O poore Gentleman: a plague vpon Antenor.

Cref. Good
Troylus and Cressida.

Cref. Good Vncle I befeech you, on my knees, I beseech you what's the matter?
Pan. Thou must be gone wench, thou must be gone;
thou art chang'd for Antenor: thou must to thy Father, and be gone from Troylus: 'twill be his death: 'twill be his bane, he cannot bear it.
Cref. O you immortall gods! I will not goe.
Pan. Thou must, Cref. I will not Vnacle: I have forgot my Father:
I know no touch of confanguinitie:
No kin, no love, no blood, no foule, so neere me,
As the sweet Troylus: O you gods divine!
Make Crefilds name the very crowne of failhood!
If ever the leave Troylus: time, once and death,
Do to this body what extremitie you can;
But the strong bafe and building of my loue,
Is as the very Center of the earth,
Drawing all things to it. I will goe in and wepe.
Pan. Doe doe.
Cref. Teare my bright heire, and scratch my praied cheekes,
Cracke my cleere voice with sobs, and breake my heart
With founding Troylus. I will not goe from Troy.Exeunt.

Enter Paris, Troylus, Anteus, Delihebus, Anthenor and Dionades.

Par. It is great morning, and the houre prefixt
Of her deliuerie to this valiant Greeke
Comes saft vp: good my brother Troylus,
Tell you the Lady what she is to doe,
And haft her to the purpofe.
Troy. Walke into her house:
Ile bring her to the Grecian prefently;
And to his hand, when I deliuer her,
Think it an Altar, and thy brother Troylus
A Prieff, there offering to it his heart.
Par. I know what 'tis to loue,
And would, as I shal lattie, I could helpe.
Please you walke in, my Lords. Exeunt.

Enter Pandarus and Crefild.
Pan. Be moderate, be moderate.
Cref. Why tell you me of moderation?
The griefe is fine, full perfect that I taste,
And no leffe in a fenne as strong
As that which caufeth it. How can I moderate it?
If I could temporifie with my affection,
Or brew it to a weake and colder pallat,
The like alaiment could I grieue my loue:
My loue admits no qualifying croffe;
My loue is Troylus.
No more my griefe, in such a precious loffe.
Pan. Here, here, here, he comes, a sweet ducce.
Cref. O Troylus, Troylus!
Pan. What a pairre of spectacles is here? let me embrace too: oh hart, as the godly saying is: O heart, heaule heart, why sigheft thou without breaking? where he answers againe; because thou canst not eafe thy braine by friendship, nor by speaking: there was neuer a truer time;
let vs caft away nothing, for we may lye to have neede
of such a Verfe: we fee it, we fee it: how now Lambs?
'Troy. Crefild? I love thee in io strangue a puritie;
That the bleft gods, as angry with my fancie,
More bright in zeale, then the devotion which
Cold lips blow to their Deities: take thee from me.
Cref. Haue the gods enuie?
Troylus and Cressida.

To which the Grecians are most prompt and pregnant:
But I can tell that in each grace of these,
There lurks a still and dumb-discoeurfue diuell,
That tempts most cunningly: but be not tempted.
Cref. Doe you thinke I will:
Troy. No, but something may be done that we wil not:
And sometymes we are diuels to our felues,
When we will tempt the frailtie of our powers,
Prefuming on their changefull potencie.
Enters within. Nay, good my Lord?
Troy. Come kiffe, and let vs part.
Parli within. Brother Troylus:
Troy. Good brother come you hither,
And bring Caman and the Grecian with you.
Cref. My Lord, will you be true?
Exit.
Troy. Who I? alas it is my vice, my fault:
Whiles others fish with craft for great opinion,
I, with great truth, catch meere simplicitie;
Whil't some with cunning gild their copper crownes,
With truth and plainneffe I doe weare mine bare:

Enter the Grecs.
Fear not my truth: the malice of my wit
Is praine and true, ther's all the reach of it.
Welcome sir Diomed, here is the Lady
Which for Antenor, we deliver you.
At the port (Lord) Ie glue her to thy hand,
And by the way possifie thee what she is.
Entreate her faire; and by my foule,faire Greece,
If ere thou stand at mercy of my Sword,
Name Cressid, and thy life shall be as faire
As Priam in Iliion ?
Diomed. Faire Lady Cressid,
So please you faueth thanks this Prince expexts:
The lufrre in your eye, heauen in your cheeke,
Pleades your faire visage, and to Diomed
You shall be mistrefse, and command him wholly.
Troy. Grecian, thou do't not vle me curteously,
To shame the feale of my petition towards,
I praiing her. I tell thee Lord of Greece:
Shee is as farre high saier o're thy praifles,
As thou vnworthy to be cal'd her fervant:
I charge thee vle her well, even for my charge:
For by the dreadfull Pluto, if thou do't not,
(Though the great bulke Achilles be thy guard)
Ie cut thy throte.

Diomed. Oh be not mou'd Prince Troylus;
Let me be pruiledged by my place and meffage,
To be a speaker free? when I am hence,
Ile anfwer to my luff: and know my Lord;
Ile nothing doe on charge: to her owne worth
She shall be priz'd: but that you fay, be't fo;
Ile speake it in my spirit and honor, no.
Troy. Come to the Port. Ie tell thee Diomed,
This braue, shall oft make thee to hide thy head:
Lady, glue me your hand, and as we walke,
To our owne felues bend we our needefull talke.
Sound Trumpet.
Par. Harke, Hectors Trumpet.
Cref. How haue we spent this morning
The Prince must thinke me tardy and remiffe,
That fvore to ride before him in the field.
Par. *Tis Troylus fault: come, come, to field with him.

Dio. Let vs make ready fright.
Cref. Yea, with a Bridegromes freth alacrity

Let vs address to tend on Hector beales:
The glory of our Troy doth this day lyce
On his faire worth, and fingle Chialrie,

Enter Achilles armed, Aegamnom, Menelaus, Patroclus, Calcas, &c.

Ag. Here art thou in appointment freth and faire,
Anticipating time. With flarting courage,
Glue with thy Trumpet a loud note to Troy
Thou dreadfull Achilles, that the appalled air
May pierce the head of the great Combant,
And hale him hither.
Asia. Thou, Trumpet, ther's my purs:
Now cracke thy lungs, and fplit thy brafen pipe:
Blow villainy, till thy fphered Bias chekke
Out-fwell the collïke of puft Aquilone:
Come, streight thy cheeff, and let thy eyes spout bloud:
Thou blowest for Hector.
Vij. No Trumpet anfwers.
Aeg. *Tis but early dayes.
Ag. Is not yong Diomed with Calcas daughter?
Vij. *Tis he, I ken the manner of his gate,
He rites on the toe: that spirit of his
In aspiration lifa him from the earth.
Ag. Is this the Lady Cressid?
Dio. Even she.
Ag. Moft deereely welcome to the Greeks, sweete Lady.
Nef. Our Generall doth salute you with a kiffe.
Vij. Yet is the kindenffe but particular: 'twere better
She were kiff in general.
Nef. And very courtly confell: Ie begin. So much
For Nefet.
Aeg. Ile take that winter from your lips faire Lady
Achilles bids you welcome.
Mene. I had good argument for kiffling once.
Patro. But that's no argument for kiffling now;
For thus pop't Paris in his hardiment.
Vij. Oh deadly gall, and theame of all our scornes,
For which we lose our heads, to gild his hornes.
Patro. The first was Menelaus kiffe, this mine:
Patroclus kiffls you.
Mene. Oh this is trim.
Mene. Ile have my kiffe fir: I Lady by your leave.
Cref. In kiffling doe you render, or receive.
Patro. Both take and glue.
Cref. Ile make my match to live,
The kiffe you take is better then you gue: therefore no kiffe.
Mene. Ile gue you boote, Ile gue you three for one.
Cref. You are an odd man, gue eu'n, or gue none.
Mene. An odd man Lady, euery man is odd.
Cref. No, Paris is not: for you know 'tis true,
That you are odd, and he is eu'en with you.
Mene. You filip me a th' head.
Cref. No, Ile be sworne.
Vij. If there was no match, your naile against his horn:
May I sweete Lady beg a kiffe of you?
Cref. You may.
Vij. I do desire it.
Cref. Why begge then?
Vij. Why then for Venus sake, give me a kiffe :
Then dost thou in mee.
Cref. I am your debtor, claine it when 'tis due.

Vij. Neuer's
Troylus and Cressida.

Ulfs. Neuer's my day, and then a kiss of you.
Diem. Lady a word, Ile bring you to your Father.
Nef. A woman of quickke fence.
Vilis. Fie, fie,ypon her :
Ther's a language in her eye, her cheekke, her lip;
May, her foote spakes, her wanton spirits looke out
At evry joynt, and motyie of her body ;
Oh these encounterers so glib of tongue,
That give a coafting welcome ete it comes ;
And wide vnclaffe the tables of their thoughts,
To evry tickling reader : fet them downe,
For fluttish spoiles of opportunity;
And daughters of the game.

Enter all of Troy, Hector, Paris, Eneas, Helena and Attendants. Florib.

All. The Troians Trumpet.
Aga. Yonder comes the troope.
Eneas. Halle all you flate of Greece : what shalbe done
To him that vict'ry commands? or do you purpose,
A victor shall be knowne : will you the Knights
Shall to the edge of all extremevite
Purse each other; or shall be diuided
By any voyce; or order of the field: Hector bad ask?
Aga. Which way would Hector have it?
Eneas. He cares not, heele obey conditions.
Aga. 'Tis done like Hector, but securely done,
A little proudly, and great deale disprizing
The Knight oppos'd.
Eneas. If not Achilles for, what is your name?
Arib. If not Achilles, nothing.
Eneas. Therefore Achilles: but what ere, know this,
In the extent of great and little:
Valour and pride excell themselves in Hector;
The one almoft as infinite as all;
The other blanke as nothing: weigh him well:
And that which lookes like pride, is curtefe:
This Ajax is halfe made of Hector's blood;
In loue whereof, halfe Hector staines at home:
Halfe heart, halfe hand, halfe Hector, comes to seeke
This blended Knight, halfe Trojan, and halfe Greece.
Arib. A maidens battell then? O I perceiue you.
Aga. Here is fir, Diomed: goe gentle Knight,
Stand by our Ajax : as you and Lord Eneas
Confent upon the order of their fight,
So be it: either to the wittermed,
Or else a breach: the Combattants being kin,
Halfe flints their stiffe, before their strokes begin.
Vilis. They are oppos'd already.
Aga. What Trojan is that fame that looks so heavy?
Vilis. The younge Sonne of Priam.
A true Knight; they call him Troylus;
Not yet mature, yet matchlesse, firm of word,
Speaking in deedes, and deedlesse in his tongue;
Not soone prouek't, nor being prouek't,foone calm'd;
His heart and hand both open, and both free:
For what he has, he giues; what thinks, he shewes;
Yet giues he not till judgement guide his bounty,
Nor dignifies an impaire thought with breath:
Manly as Hector, but more dangerous;
For Hector in his blaze of wrath subcribes
To tender obiecks; but he, in heats of action,
Is more vindecatue then jealous loue.
They call him Troylus; and on him eret,
A second hope, as fairly built as Hector.
Thys faies Eneas, one that knowes the youth,
Even to his inches: and with private foule,
Did in great Illion thus translate him to me.

Alarum.
Aga. They are in action.
Nef. Now Ajax hold thine owne.
Troy. Hector, thou sleepe't, awake thee.
Aga. His blows are end, dispose'd there Ajax.

Trumpe.
Sim. You muft no more.
Anea. Princes enough, so pleace you.
Ala. I am not warne yet, let vs fight againe.

Diam. As Hector pleases.

Hec. Why then will I no more:
Thou art great Lord, my Fathers sisters Sonne;
A confen german to great Priams feede:
The obligation of our blood forbids
A gorie emulation 'twixt vs twaine:
Were they commixion, Greeke and Troian fo,
That thou could'ft say, this hand is Grecian all,
And this is Troian: the finewes of this Legge,
All Greeke, and this all Troy: my Mothers bloud
Runs on the dexter cheekke, and this finiter
Bounds in my fathers : by love multipotent,
Thou shou'dst not beare from me a Greekifh member
Wherein my sword had not impreffure made,
Of our ranke feud: but the iuft gods gainfay,
That any drop thou borrow'd from thy mother,
My facred Aunt, shou'd by my mortall Sword
Be draine. Let me embrace thee Ajax:
By him that thunders, thou haft luftie Armes;
Hector would have them fall upon him thus.
Cozen, all honor to thee.
Ala. I thanke thee Hector:
Thou art too gentle, and too free a man:
I came to kill thee Cozen, and beare hence
A great addition, earned in thy death.
Hec. Not Neoptolomyus fo mirable,
On whose bright creft, fame with her low'd (O yes)
Cries,This is he; cou'd'ft promise to himselfe,
A thought of added honor, torne from Hector.
Eneas. There is expectation here from both the fides,
What further you will doe?
Hec. Weele anfwer it.

The ifue is embracement: Ajax, farewell.
Ala. If I might in entreaties finde successe,
As fel'd I haue the chance; I would define
My famous Cousin to our Grecian Tents.
Diam. 'Tis Agamemnon with, and great Achilles
Both long to fee warm'd the valiant Hector.
Hec. Eneas, call my brother Troylus to me:
And signifie this louing interviewe
To the expecters of our Trojan part:
Desire them home. Gie me thy hand, my Cousin:
I will goe eate with thee, and fee your Knights.

Enter Agamemnon and the rest.
Ala. Great Agamemnon comes to meete vs here.
Hec. The worthei of them, tell me name by name:
But for Achilles, mine owne fering eyes
Shall finde him by his large and portly fize.
Aga. Worthy of Armes: as welcome as to one:
That would be rid of fuch an enemie.
But that's no welcome: vnderhand more cleere
What's paft, and what's to come, is frew'd with huskes;
And formelesse ruine of oblition:
But in this extant moment, faith and troth,
Strain'd purely from all hollow bias drawing:
Bids they with moft diuine integrste,
From heart of very heart, great Hector welcome.

Hec. I thanke thee moft imperious Agamemnon.

Aga. My

590
Aga. My well-fam'd Lord of Troy, no lefe to you,
Men. Let me conferre my Princely brothers greeting,
You brace of warlike Brothers, welcome hither.
Heft. Who muft we anfwer?

Ene. The Noble Menelaus,
Heft. O, you my Lord, by Mars his gauntlet thanks,
Mockenot, that I affeét th'vantraded Oath,
Your quondam wife fweares still by Venos Glowe
She's well, but bad me not commend her to you.
Men. Name her not now fir, she's a deadly Theame.
Heft. O pardon, I offend.

Neft. I have (thou gallant Troyan) fene thee oft
Labouring for deftiny, make cruel way
Through rankes of Greeke all youth: and I have feen thee
As hot as Perjens, fipre thy Phrygian Steed,
And fhene thee confcorning fcorfuls and fubdumens,
When thou haft hung thy advanced sword i' th'ayre,
Not letting it decline, on the declining:
That I have fald vnto my fandiers by,
Loe Jupiter's yonder, dealing life.
And I have fene thee pawle, and take thy breath,
When that a ring of Greekes haue hem'd thee in,
Like an Olympian wreftling. This haue I fene,
But this thy countenance (fihlockt in feele)
I never faw till now. I knew thy Grandire,
And once fought with him; he was a Souldier good,
But by great Mars, the Captaine of vs all,
Neuer like thee. Let an oldman embrace thee,
And (worthy Warriour) welcome to our Tents.

Ene. 'Tis the old Neftor.

Heft. Let me embrace thee good old Chronicle,
That haft fo long walk'd hand in hand with time:
Moft reuerend Neftor, I am glad to claffe thee.
Ne. I would my armes could match thee in contention
As they contend with thee in courtezie.

Heft. I would they could.

Neft. Ha! by this white beard I'd fight with thee to morrow. Well, welcom, welcome: I have feen the time.
Vlyf. I wonder now, now yonder City flands,
When we haue heere her Bafe and pillar by va.

Heft. I know your favour Lord Vlyfes well.
Ah fir, there's many a Greeke and Troyan dead,
Since firft I faw your felle, and Diomed
In Illion, on your Greekeifh Embaffie.
Vlyf. Sir, I foretold you then what would enufe,
My prophefie is but halfe his journey yet;
For yonder wals that perily front your Towne,
Yond Towers, whose wandon tops do buffe the clouds,
Mufh kiffe their owne feet.

Heft. I muft not beleue you:
There they fland yet: and modelfly I thinkke,
The fall of euery Phrygian ftone will cofl
A drop of Grecian blood: the end crownes all,
And that old common Arbitrator, Time,
Will one day end it.

Vlyf. So to him we leave it.
Moft gentle, and molt valiant Heftor, welcome;
After the Generall, I befeech you next,
To feaft with me, and fee me at my Tent.

Ae. I hall forefall thee Lord Vlyfes, thou:
Now Heftor I haue fed mine eyes on thee,
I haue with exact view perus'd thee Heftor,
And quoted thyne eyes by eye.
Heft. Is this this Ae.?

Ae. Ne. I am Ae.

Heft. Stand faire I prythee, let me looke on thee.

Ae. Behold thy fill.

Heft. Nay, I haue done already.

Ae. Thou art to breefe, I will the second time,
As I would buy thee, view thee, limbe by limbe.

Heft. O like a Book of sport thou'lt reade me ore:
But there's more in me then thou understand'st.
Why doeft thou fo opprefse me with thine eye?

Ae. Tell me you Heauens, in which part of his body
Shall I deftroy him? Whether there, or there, or there,
That I may glie the locall wound a name,
And make diffeft the very breach, where-out

Heftor's great Spirit fl-itt. Anwer me heauen's.

Heft. It would difcred the bleft Gods, proud man,
To anfwer fuch a queftion: Stand againe;
Think'rt thou to catch my life fo pleasantly,
As to prenominate in nice conciefeure
Where thou wilt hit me dead?

Ae. I tell thee yea.

Heft. Wert thou the Oracle to tell me fo,
I'd not beleue thee: henceforth guard thee well,
For Ile not kill thee there, nor there, nor there,
But by the forge that fhithyled Mars his helme,
Ile kill thee evey where, yea, ore and ore.

You wildef Grecians, pardon me this bragg,
His infolence draws folly from my lipes.
But Ile endeavoure deeds to match these words,
Or may I neuer——

Aeux. Do not chafe thee Coifin:
And you Ae., let thofe threats alone
Till accident, or purpofe bring you too't.
You may evey day enough of Heftor
If you haue fhomacke. The generallffe I feare,
Can Icarfe intreat you to be odde with him.
Heft. I pray you let vs fee you in the field,
We haue had pelting Warres since you refus'd
The Grecians caufe.

Ae. Doft thou intreat me Heftor?
To morrow do I meete thee fell as death,
To night, all Friends.

Heft. Thy hand vpon that match.

Aga. Firft, all you Peeres of Greece go to my Tent,
There in the full conuiue you: Afterwards,
As Heftor lefuryre, and your bounties fhall
Concurre together, feuerally intreat him.

Beate lowd the Taborins, let the Trumpets blow,
That this great Souldier may his welcome know.

Exeunt Troy. My Lord Vlyfes, tell me I befeech you,
In what place of the Field doth Calchas keepe?

Vlyf. At Menelaus Tent, moft Princely Troylus,
There Diomed doth fraft with him to night,
Who neither lookes on heauen, nor on earth,
But giues all gaze and bent of amorous view
On the faire Greffida.

Troy. Shall I (sweet Lord) be bound to thee fo much,
After we part from Agamemnon Tent,
To bring me thither?

Vlyf. You shall command me fir:
As gentle tell me, of what Honour was
This Greffida in Troy, had the no Lower there
That waileth her abfence?

Troy. O fir, to fuch as boafting fiew their scarres,
A mocke is due: will you walke on my Lord?
She was belou'd, the lou'd; the is, and dooth;
But still sweet Loue is food for Fortunes tooth.

Exeunt Enter Ae. and Patroclus.

Ae. Ile heat his blood with Greekeifh wine to night.
Troylus and Creßida.

Which with my Cemitar Ile coole to morrow:
Patroulus, let vs Feast him to the light.
Pat. Heere comes Tberis. Enter Tberis.
Achil. How now, thou core of Envy?
Thou crufty batch of Nature, what's the newes?
Achil. From wenence, Fragment?
Tber. Why thou full dill of Fools, from Troy.
Pat. Who keeps the Tent now?
Tber. The Surgeons boy, or the Patients wound.
Patr. Well fald adbursity, and what need those tricks?
Tber. Pyrthye be slient boy, I profet not by thy talke, thou art thought to be Achilles male Varlot.
Patro. Male Varlot you Rogue? What's that?
Tber. Why his maculine Whore. Now the rotten diseasfe of the South, guts-graping Ruptures, Catarres, Loads a gruell l'fh'backe, Lethargies, cold Palfies, and the like, take and take againe, such prefrous faultes.
Pat. Why thou damnable box of emoy thou, what mean'tst thou to curfe thus?
Tber. Do I curfe thee?
Patr. When thou, you ruinous But, you whorson indignifable Curr.
Tber. No? why art thou then exaferate, thou idle, immaterial skiene of Sleyd filke; thou greene Sarcenet flap for a fore eye, thou taffell of a Prodigals purfe thou: Ah how the poore world is pefted with such water-flyes, diminutyes of Nature.
Pat. Out gall.
Tber. Finch Egge.
Aeb. My sweet Patroclus, I am thwarted quite
From my great purpofe in to morrowes battell: Heere is a Letter from Queene Helcuba,
A Token from her daughter, my faire Loue,
Both taking me, and gaging me to keepe
An Oath that I have Iworne. I will not breake it,
Fall Greekes, faile Fame, Honor or go, or stay,
My maior vow lyes heere; this Ile obey:
Come,come Tberis, helpe to trim my Tent,
This night in banquetting muft all be spent.
Away Patroclus.
Exit.
Tber. With too much blood,and too little Brain, these two may run mad: but if with too much braine, and too little blood, they do, Ile be a curer of madmen. Heere's Agamennon, an honfet fellow enough, and one that loues Quiales, but he has not so much Braine as care-wax ; and the goodly transformation of Iupiter there his Brother, the Bull, the primatque Statue, and oblique memoriali of Cuckolds, a thinfing-horne in a chaine, hanging at his Brothers legge, to what forme but that he is, thold wit larded with mallice, and mallice forced with wit, turne him to: as Afse were nothing; hee is both Afse and Ox; to an Ox were nothing, hee is both Ox and Afse: to be a Dogge, a Mule, a Cat, a Fitchew, a Toade, a Liward, an Owle, a Puttoccke, or a Herreing without a Roe, I would not care: but to be Menelaus, I would confpire against Deftiny. Ask me not what I would be,if I were not Tberis: for I care not to bee the lowfe of a Lazarr, fo I were not Menelaus. Hoy-dayes, spirits and fires.
Enter Hecelles.
Aeb. We goe wrong, we go wrong.
Aeix. No yonder tis, there where we fee the light.
Hec. I trouble you.

Aeix. No, not a whit.
Enter Achilles.
Vliff. Heere comes himselfe to guide you?
Achil. Welcome braue Hecelles, welcome Princes all.
Agam. So now faire Prince of Troy, I bid goodnight,
Aeix commands the guard to tend on you.
Hec. Thanks, and goodnight to the Greeks general.
Men. Goodnight my Lord.
Hec. Goodnight sweet Lord Menelaus.
Aeix. Sweet draught: sweet quoth-a? sweet finke, sweet sure.
Achil. Goodnight and welcome, both at once, to those that go, or tarry.
Ag. Goodnight.
Achil. Old Nefter tarries, and you too Diomed,
Kenpe Hector company an houre, or two.
Dio. I cannot Lord, I have important bufinesse,
The tide whereof is now, goodnight great Heceltr.
Hec. Give me your hand.
Vliff. Follow him Torch, he goes to Chalcas Tent,
Ile keepe you company.

Troy. Sweet fir, you honour me,
Hec. And fo good night.
Achil. Come,come, enter my Tent.
Exeunt.
Tber. That fame Diomed a false-hearted Rogue, a moft vnuit Knave; I will no more truft him when hee leeres, then I will a Serpent when he hifles: he will spend his mouth & promife, like Brabler the Hound; but when he perfomes, Astronomers foretell it, that it is prodigious, there will come some change: the Sunne borrowes of the Moone when Diomed keeps his word. I will rather leaue to fee Hecelles, then not to dogge him:they fay, he keeps a Troyan Drab, and vff the Traitor Chalcas his Tent. Ile after——Nothing but Letcherie? All incontinent Variets.

Enter Diomed.

Dio. What are you vp here ho? speake?
Chal. Who calls?
Dio. Diomed, Chalcas(I thinke) wher's you Daughter?
Chal. She comes to you.

Enter Troylus and Vliffes.

Vliff. Stand where the Torch may not diffouer vs.
Enter Creßida.

Troy. Creßid comes forth to him.
Dio. How now my charge?
Creß. Now my sweet gardian: harke a word with you. Troy. Yes, fo familiar?
Vliff. She will finge any man at firft figh.
Tber. And any man may finde her, if he can take her life: she's noted.
Dio. Will you remember?
Cal. Remember? yes.
Dio. Nay, but doe then; and let your minde be coupled with your words.

Troy. What shalfe she remember?
Vliff. Lift?
Creß. Sweete hony Greek, tempt me more to folly.
Tber. Roguery.
Dio. Nay then.
Creß. Ile tell you what.
Dio. Fo,fo, come tell a pin, you are a forsworne.---
Creß. In faith I cannot: what would you haue me do?
Tber. A lugging tricke, to be secretly open.
Dio. What did you swear ye would bethow on me?
Creß. I prethee do not hold me to mine oath,
Bid me doe not any thing but that sweete Greekke.

Dio. Good
Dio. Good night.
Troy. Hold, patience.
Ulf. How now Trojan?
Cref. Diomed.
Dio. No, no, good night: Ile be your foole no more.
Troy. Thy better muft.
Cref. Harke one word in your ear.
Troy. O plague and madneffe!
Ulf. You are moused Prince, let vs depart I pray you,
Left your displeasure should enlarge it selfe.
To wrathfull tearmes: this place is dangerous;
The time right deadly: I befeech you goe.
Troy. Behold, I pray you.
Ulf. Nay, good my Lord goe off:
You flow to great distraction: come my Lord?
Troy. I pray thee stay?
Ulf. You haue not patience, come.
Troy. I pray you stay? by hell and hell tormentes,
I will not speake a word.
Dio. And so good night.
Cref. Nay, but you part in anger.
Troy. Doth that griev thee? O witheruth truth!
Ulf. Why, how now Lord?
Troy. By Jove I will be patient.
Cref. Gardian? why Grecke?
Dio. Fo, fo, adew, you palter.
Cref. In faith I do not: come hither once againe.
Ulf. You speake my Lord at something; will you goe?
you will break out.
Troy. She staketh his chekke.
Ulf. Come, come.
Troy. Nay stay, by Jove I will not speake a word.
There is betweene my will, and all offences,
A guard of patience; stay a little while.
Tber. How the diuell Luxury with his fat rumpe and potato finger, tickles thefe together: frye lechery, frye.
Dio. But will you then?
Cref. In faith I will lo; never trust me else.
Dio. Give me some token for the surety of it.
Cref. Ile fetch you one.
Ulf. You haue sworn patience.
Troy. Fearn me not sweete Lord.
I will not be my felle, nor haue cognition
Of what I feel: I am all patience.
Enter Crefid.
Tber. Now the pledge, now, now, now.
Cref. Here Diomed, keepe this Slecue.
Troy. O beautie! where is thy Faith?
Ulf. My Lord.
Troy. I will be patient, outwardly I will.
Cref. You looke vpone that Slecue? behold it well:
He lou’d me: O felle wench: gue’t me againe,
Dio. Whose was’t?
Cref. It is no matter now I haue’t againe.
I will not meete with you to morrow night:
I prythee Diomed vilifie me no more.
Tber. Now the sharpenes: well faid Whetstone.
Dio. I shall haue it.
Cref. What, this?
Dio. I that.
Cref. O all you gods! O prettie, prettie pledge;
Thy Mafter now lies thinking in his bed
Of thee and me, and fighes, and takes my Gloue,
And gues memoriai dainty kiffes to it;
As I kiffe thee.
Dio. Nav, doe not snatch it from me.
Cref. He that takes that, takes my heart withall.

Dio. I had your heart before, this followes it.
Troy. I did fware patience.
Cref. You shall not haue it Diomed; faith you shall not:
Ile gue you something else.
Dio. I will haue this: whose was it?
Cref. It is no matter.
Dio. Come tell me whofe it was?
Cref. ’Twas one that lou’d me better then you will,
But now you haue it, take it.
Dio. Whofe was it?
Cref. By all Diomadas waiting women yond:
And by her felfe, I will not tell you whofe.
Dio. To morrow will I ware it on my Helme,
And grieue his spirit that dares not challenge it.
Troy. Wrt thu the diuell, and won’t it on thy horne,
It shou’d be challeng’d.
Cref. Well, well, ’tis done, ’tis past; and yet it is not:
I will not keepe my word.
Dio. Why then farewell,
Thou neuer shalt mocke Diomed againe.
Cref. You shall not goe: one cannot speake a word,
But it strayt starts you.
Dio. I doe not like this fooling.
Tber. Nor I by Plutus: but that that likes not me, plea-es me best.
Dio. What shall I come the hour?
Cref. I, come: O Jove! doe, come: I shall be plag’d.
Dio. Farewell till then.
Cref. Good night: I prythee come:
Troylus farewell: one eye yet lookes on thee;
But with my heart, the other eye, doth fee.
Ah poore our fexe: this fault in vs I finde:
The errore of our eye,direc’ts our minde.
What errore leads, muft erre: O then conclude,
Mindes swa’lld by eyes, are full of turpitude.
Tber. A proofe of strengh the could not pufhish more;
Vnleffe the fay, my minde is now turn’d whore,
Ulf. Al’s done my Lord.
Troy. It is.
Ulf. Why fay we then?
Troy. To make a recordation to my foule
Of every syllable that here was fpoke:
But if I tell how these two did coact;
Shall I not lye, in publishings a truth?
Sith yet there is a credence in my heart:
An esperance fo obstinately strong,
That doth inuer the teft of eyes and eares:
As if those oyers had deceptious functions,
Created onely to calumniate.

Was Crefid here?
Ulf. I cannot conjure Trojan.
Troy. She was not fure.
Vliff. Moft fure she was.
Troy. Why my negation hath no taste of madness?
Ulf. Nor mine my Lord: Crefid was here but now.
Troy. Let it not be beleev’d for womanhood:
Thinke we had mothers; doe not guie advantage
To stubborne Criticks,ap’t without a theme
For deprauation, to squire the generall sex
By Crefid’s rule. Rather think this not Crefid.
Ulf. What hath the done Prince, that can foyle our mothers?
Troy. Nothing at all, vnleffe that this were she.
Tber. Will he swagger himfelfe out on’s owne eyes?
Troy. This she? no, this is Diomidas Crefida:
If beautie haue a foule, this is not the:

If
If foules guide vows; if vows are fanétimonie;
If fanétimonie be the gods delight:
If there be rule in vnite it selfe,
This is not the 0 madneffe of discouer!
That caufe fets vp, with, and againft thy felfe
By foule authoritie: where reafon can reuolt
Without perdition, and loffe affume all reafon,
Without reuolt. This is, and is not Creffid:
Within my foule, there doth conduce a fight
Of this strange foule, that a thing infeperate,
Divides more within the skie and earth:
And yet the fpacious breath of this diuifton,
Admits no Orifex for a point as subtle,
As Ariaémes broken woole to enter:
Infance, O infance! strong as Phoetes gates:
Creffid is mine, tied with the bonds of heauen;
Infance, O infance, strong as heauen it felfe:
The bonds of heauen are flipt, difflou'd, and loot'd,
And with another knot fliue finger tied,
The fractions of her faith, orts of her loue:
The fragments, fcrapes, the bits, and greazie reliques,
Of her ore-eaten faith, are bound to Diomed
Vli. May worthy Troylus be halfe attached
With that which here his passion doth expreffe?
Troy. I Greecke: and that shall be divulged well
In Characters, as red as Mars his heart
Inflam'd with Venus: never did yong man fancy
With fo eternal, and fo fixt a foule.
Harke Greek: as much I doe Creffida loue;
So much by weight, hate I Diomed.
That Sleeve is mine, that heele bear in his Helme:
Were it a Caske compos'd by Volcan's skill,
My Sword should bite it: Not the dreadful fpout,
Which Shipmen doe the Hurricane call,
Confront'd in maffe by the almighty Fenne,
Shall dizzie with more clamour Neptunes ear
In his difcent; then shall my prompted swords,
Falling on Diomed.
Ther. Heele tickle it for his concupize.
Troy. O Creffid! Of falfe Creffid falfe, falfe, falfe:
Let all vntruths hand by thy flained name,
And theye feme glorious.
Vli. O containe your felle:
Your passion draws eares faireither.

Enter Aéneas. Aéneas.
I have beene feeing you this houre my Lord:
Heftor by this is arming him in Troy.
A sia you Guard, staines to conduct you home.
Troy. Haue with you Prince: my curteous Lord adevs:
Farewell reuoluted faire: and Diomed,
Stand fast, and weare a Caffe on thy head.
Vli. Ile bring you to the Gates.
Troy. Accept diftracted thankes.

Exeunt Troylus,Aéneas, and Vlijjes.

Ther. Would I could meege that roague Diomed, I would eate like a Rauen: I would bode, I would bode:
Petrolus will giue me any thing for the intelligence of his whore: the Parrot will not doe more for an Almond, then he for a commodious drab: Lecchery, lechery, still warres and lechery, nothing else holds fation. A burning duell take them.

Enter Heftor and Andromache.

And. When was my Lord fo much vngently temper'd,
To stop his eares againft admonifhment?
Vnarme, vnarme, and doe not fight to day.
Heftor. You traine me to offend you: get you gone.

By the everlasting gods, He goe.

And. My dreams will furc proce ominous to the day.
Heftor. No more I fay.

Enter Caffandra.

Caff. Where is my brother Heftor?
And. Here fafter, arm'd, and boldy in intent:
Confort me with in loud and deere petition:
Purse we him on knees: for I have dreamp't
Of bloody turbulence; and this whole night
Hath nothing beene but shapes, and formes of slaughter.
Caff. O, 'tis true.

Heftor. Ho! bid my Trumpet found.

Caff. No notes of fallie, for the heauens, sweet brother.
Heftor. Begun I fay: the gods have heard me fware.
Caff. The gods are deafe to hot and peeuilh vowes;
They are polluted offings, more abhor.

Then spottet Luiers in the facrice.

And. O be perfwaded, doe not count it holy,
To hurt by being luft: it is as lawfull:
For we would count give much to as violent thefts,
And rob in the behalfe of charitie.

Caff. It is the purpofe that makes frong the vowed;
But vowes to every purpofe muft not hold:
Vnarme sweete Heftor.

Heftor. Hold you fill I fay;

Mine honour keeps the weather of my fate:
Life every man holds deere, but the deere man
Holds honor farre more precious, deere, then life.

Enter Troylus.

How now yong man? mean'thou to fight to day?
And. Caffandra, call my father to perwade.

Exit Caffandra.

Heftor. No faith yong Troylus; doe thy harnesse youth:
I am to day ith'vaine of Chiaurie:
Let grow thy Sinews till their knots be frong;
And tempt not yet the brushes of the warre.
Vnarme thee, goe; and doubt thou not brave boy,
Ie fland to day, for thee, and me, and Troy.
Troy. Brother, you haue a vice of mercy in you;
Which better fits a Lyon, then a man.
Heftor. What vice is that? good Troylus chide me for it.
Troy. When many times the captive Grecian fails,
Even in the fanne and windes of your faire Sword:
You bid them rife, and live.

Heftor. O 'tis faire play.

Troy. Fools play, by heauen Heftor.
Heftor. How now? how now?

Troy. For th'lofe of all the gods
Let's leaue the Hermit Pitty with our Mothers;
And when we have our Armors buckled on,
The venom'd vengeance ride vpon our fwords,
Spur them to ruthfull worke, reine them from ruth.

Heftor. Fie fauge, fie.
Troy. Heftor, then 'tis warres.
Heftor. Troylus, I would not haue you fight to day.

Troy. Who shoud with-hold me?
Not fate, obedience, nor the hand of Mars,
Beckning with firle truchimon my retire;
Not Priamus, and Hector on knees;
Their eyes o'er-galled with recourse of teares;
Nor you my brother, with your true fword drawne
Oppo'd to hinder me, should ftop my way:
But by my rulce.

Enter Priam and Caffandra.

Caff. Lay hold vpon him Priam, hold him falt.
He is thy cruch; now if thou loofe thy flay,
Thou on him leaning, and all Troy on thee,
Fall all together.

Priam. Come Hector, come, goe backe:
Thy wife hath dreampt: thy mother hath had visions;
Cassandra doth foresee; and I my selfe,
Am like a Prophet suddenly enaught,
to tell thee that this day is ominous:
Therefore come backe.

Hec. Enter Andromache.

And I do stand engag'd to many Greekes,
Even in the faith of valour, to appeare
This morning to them.

Priam. I, but thou shalt not goe,
Hec. I must not breake my faith:
You know me dutifull, therefore deare Sir,
Let me not shame respect; but give me leave
To take that course by your consent and voice,
Which you doe here forbid me, Royall Priam.

Cass. O Priam, yeeld not to him.

And. Doe not deere father.

Hec. Andromache I am offended with you:
Upon the loue you bare me, get you in.

Exit Andromache.

Troj. This foolish, dreaming, superfidious girl,
Makes all these bodements.

Cass. O farewell, deere Hector:
Looke how thou diest; looke how thy eye turns pale:
Looke how thy wounds doth bleede at many vents:
Harke how Troy roares; how Hecuba cries out;
How poore Andromache shrills her soule forth:
Behold diſtraction, frenzy, and amazement,
Like witleffe Antickes one another meete,
And all cry Hector, Hector's dead: O Hector!

Troj. Away, away.

Cass. Farewell: yes, soft: Hector I take my leave;
Those doe not thy felo, and all our Troy deceive.

Exit. Hector. You are amaz'd, my Liege, at her exclame:
Goe in and cheere the Towne, weeke forth and fight:
Doe deedes of praire, and tell you them at night.

Priam. Farewell: the gods with safetie fland about thee.

Alarum. Troy. They are at it, harke: proud Diomed, beleeue
I come to looke my arme, or winne my sleeue.

Enter Pandar.

Pand. Do ye hear my Lord? do ye hear?

Troj. What now?

Pand. Here's a Letter come from yond poore girlie.

Troj. Let me reade.

Pand. A whorson tiscke, a whorson raftally tiscke, so troubles me; and the foolish fortune of this girlie, and what one thing, what another, that I shall leave you one oth'rs dayes: and I haue a rheume in mine eyes too;
and such an ache in my bones; that vnleffe a man were curft,
I cannot tell what to thinke on't. What fayes shee there?

Troj. Words, words, mere words, no matter from the heart;
Th' effect doth operate another way.
Goe winde to winde; ther turne and change together:
My loue with words and errors fill shee feedes;
But edifies another with her deedes.

Pand. Why, but heare you?

Troj. Hence brother lacke; ignomie and shame
Purifie thy life, and like aye with thy name.

Alarum. Exeunt.
Before the belching Whale; then is he yonder,
And there the thraeting Greekes, ripe for his edge,
Fall downe before him, like the mowers swath;
Here, there, and every where, he leues and takes;
Dexterity so obaying appetite,
That what he will, he does, and so much doth,
That proofe is call'd impossibility.

Enter Ulysses.

Ulyss. Oh, courage, courage Princes: great Achilles
Is arming, weeping, cursing, vowing vengeance;
Patroclus wounds have roze’d his drowzie blood,
Together with his mangled Myrmidons,
That noiselle, handleste, hackt and chipt, come to him;
Crying on Hector. Ajax hath left a friend,
And foames at mouth, and he is arm’d, and at i:
Roaring for Troylus; who hath done to day,
Mad and fantafick execution;
Engaging and redeeming of himselfe,
With such a carelesse force, and forcelesse care,
As if that luck in very sight of cunning, bad him win all.

Enter Ajax.

Aia. Troylus, thou coward Troylus.

Dis. I, there, there.

Neft. So, so, we draw together.

Enter Achilles.

Achilles. Where is this Hector?

Come, come, thou boy-queller, shew thy face:
Know what it is to meete Achilles angry.
Hector, wher’s Hector? I will none but Hector.

Enter Ajax.

Aia. Troylus, thou coward Troylus, shew thy head.

Enter Diomed.

Diom. Troylus, I say, wher’s Troylus?

Aia. What would’st thou?

Diom. I would correch him.

Aia. Were I the Generall,
Thou shoul’dst have my office,
Ere that correction: Troylus I say, what Troylus?

Enter Troylus.

Troylus. Oh traitour Diomed!

Turne thy false face thou traitor,
And pay thy life thou owest me for my horse.

Dis. Ha, art thou there?

Aia. Ile fight with him alone, stand Diomed.

Dis. He is my prize, I will not looke vpon.

Troylus. Come both you cegis Greekes, have at you both.

Enter Hector.

Heclor. Yea Troylus? O well fought my yongest brother.

Enter Achilles.

Achilles. Now doe I fee thee; haue at thee Hector.

Heclor. Paufe if thou wilt.

Achilles. I doe disclaime thy curtefe, proud Trojan;
Be happy that my armes are out of vie:
My reit and negligence befriends thee now,
But thou anon shalt hear of me againe:
Till when, goe fecke thy fortune.

Heclor. Fare thee well;

I would have bene much more a frether man,
Had I expected thee: how now, my Brother?

Enter Troylus.

Troylus. Aiax hath tane Aeneas; shall it be?
No, by the flame of yonder glorious heauen,
He shall not carry him: Ile be tane too,
Or bring him off: Fate heare me what I say;

I weake not, though thou end my life to day.

Enter one in Armour.

Heclor. Stand, stand, thou Greeke.

Thou art a goodly marke:
No wilt thou not? I like thy armour well,
Ile frut it, and vnlocke the ricets all,
But Ile be maither of it: wilt thou not beast abide?
Why then flye on, Ile hunt thee for thy hide.

Enter Achilles with Myrmidons.

Achilles. Come here aboute me you my Myrmidons:
Marke what I say; attend me where I wheele:
Strike not a stroake, but keepe your felues in breath;
And when I have the bloudy Hector found,
Empale him with your weapons round about:
In fellet manner execute your armes.
Follow me first, and my proceedings eye:
It is decreed, Hector the great musc dye.

Enter Thersites, Menelaus, and Paris.

Ters. The Cuckold and the Cuckold maker are at it:
now bull, now dogge, lowe: Paris lowe; now my doubl hen’d sparrow. Iowe Paris, I owe; the bull has the game:
ware hornes ho?

Exit Paris and Menelaus.

Enter Bafard.

Bafard. Turne flace and fight.

Ters. What art thou?

Bafard. A Bafard Sonne of Priama.

Ters. I am a Bafard too, I love Bafards, I am a Bafard begot,
Bafard infructed, Bafard in minde, Bafard in valour, in every thing illegitimate: one Beare will not bite another, and wherefore should one Bafard take heede, the quarrel’s most ominous to us: if the Sonne of a whore fight for a whore, he tempts judgement: farewell Bafard.

Bafard. The diuell take thee coward.

Exeunt.

Enter Hector.

Hec. Moft purfified core fo faire without:
Thy goodly armour thus hath cost thy life.
Now is my daies worke done; Ile take good breath:
Reft Sword, thou haft thy fill of blood and death.

Enter Achilles and his Myrmidons.

Achilles. Looke Hector how the Sunne begins to set;
How vgly night comes breathing at his heele,
Euen with the vaille and darkling of the Sunne.
To close the day vp, Hector life is done.

Hec. I am vnarm’d, foregoe this vantage Cresse.

Achilles. Strike fellows, strike, this is the man I fecke.
So Illion full thou: now Troy finke downe:
Here lyes thy heart, thy finewes, and thy bone.

On Myrmidons, cry you all a maine,
Achilles hath the mighty Hector slaine.

Retreat.

Harke, a retreat vpon our Grecian part.

Gree. The Trojan Trumpets sounds the like my Lord.

Achilles. The dragon wing of night ore-spreeds the earth
And stickler-like the Armies seprates
My halfe tupt Sword, that frankly would haue fed,
Pleas’d with this dainty bed; thus goes to bed.
Come, tye his body to my horfes tayle;
Along the field, I will the Trojan tralie.

Exeunt.

Sound Retreat. About.

Enter Agamemnon, Aiax, Menelaus, Neptun,
Diomed, and the rest marching.

Age. Harke, harke, what shott is that?

Neptun. Peace Drums.

Sol. Achilles.
Stay yet; you vile abominable Tents,
Thus proudly pight upon our Phrygian plaines:
Let Titan rise as early as he dare,
Ile through, and through you; & thou great fis'd coward:
No space of Earth shall funder our two hates,
Ile haunt thee, like a wicked conscience still,
That mouldeth goblins swift as frenfies thoughts.
Strike a free march to Troy, with comfort go;
Hope of revenge, shall hide our inward woe.

Enter Pandaros.

Pand. But heare you? heare you?
Troy. Hence broker, lackie, ignomy, and shame
Purse thy life, and liue with thy name.

Exeunt.

Pan. A goodly medicine for mine akingbones: oh world, world, world! thus is the poore agent dispiise: Oh trai-
tours and bawdes; how earnestly are you fet aworke, and how ill required? why should our indeuour be so defir'd, and the performance so loath'd? What Verfe for it? what inftance for it? let me fee.

Full merrily the humble Bee doth sing,
Till he hath loft his hony, and his fling.
And being once subdu'd in armed tale,
Sweete hony, and sweete notes together faile.

Good traders in the fleth, fet this in your painted cloathes;
As many as be here of Panders halle,
Your eyes halfe out, weep out at Pandar's fall:
Or if you cannot weep,yet glie some grones;
Though not for me,yet for your akingbones:
Brethren and fifters of the hold-dore trade,
Some two months hence, my will shall here be made:
It shou'd be now, but that my feare is this:
Some galled Goofe of Winchester would hifle:
Till then, Ile sweate, and feekes about for eales;
And at that time bequeath you my difeates.

Exeunt.

FINIS.
The Tragedy of Coriolanus:

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter a Company of Mutinous Citizens, with Staves, Clubs, and other weapons.

1. Citizen. Before we proceed any further, hear me speake. All. Speake, speake. 1. Cit. You are all resolu'd rather to dy then to famish? All. Refolu'd, refolu'd. 1. Cit. First you know, Caius Martius is chiefe enemy to the people. All. We know't, we know't. 1. Cit. Let vs kill him, and we'll have Corne at our own price. Is't a Verdict? All. No more talking on't; Let it be done, away, away. 2. Cit. One word, good Citizens. 1. Cit. We are accounted poore Citizens, the Patri- cians good: what Authority furnets one, would releue vs. If they would yeeld vs but the superfluities it were wholesome, wee might gueffe they releu'd vs manely: But they thinke we are too deere, the leannesse that afflicts vs, the object of our misery, is as an inuenty- ry to particularize their abundance, our sufferance is a gaine to them. Let vs reuenge this with our Pikes, ere we become Rakes. For the Gods know, I speake this in hunger for Bread, not in thirst for Reuenge. 2. Cit. Would you proceede espescially against Caius Martius. 1. Cit. Against him first: He's a very dog to the Com- monalty. 2. Cit. Consider you what Services he ha's done for his Country? 1. Cit. Very well, and could bee content to give him good report for't, but that hee payes himselfe with bee- ing proud. All. Nay, but speake not maliciously. 1. Cit. I say unto you, what he hath done Famoufie, he did it to that end: though soft conscience'd men can be content to say it was for his Country, he did it to pleafe his Mother, and to be partly proud, which he is, even to the altitude of his vertue. 2. Cit. What he cannot helpe in his Nature, you ac- count a Vice in him: You must in no way fay he is co- uetous. 1. Cit. If I must not, I neede not be barren of Accu- mulations he hath faults (with surplus) to tyre in repetition. Showts within.

What shou'ts are thefe? The other side af' th City is rifen: why fay we prating here? To th'Capitoll. All. Come, come.

1 Cit. Soft, who comes heere? Enter Menenius Agrippa. 2 Cit. Worthy Menenius Agrippa, one that hath al- ways lou'd the people. 1 Cit. He's one honest enough, wold al the refl wer fo. Men. What work's my Countrimen in hand? Where go you with Bats and Clubs? The matter Speake I pray you. 2 Cit. Our busines is not vknoune to th'Senat, they haue had inklings this fortnight what we intend to do, w now wee'll fiew em in deeds: they fay poore Suters haue strong breaths, they thinke we haue strong arms too. Menen. Why Matters, my good Friends, mine honest Neighbours, will you vndo your felues? 2 Cit. We cannot Sir, we are vndone already. Men. I tell you Friends, moft charitable care Haue the Patricians of you for your wants. Your suffering in this deathe, you may as well Strike at the Heauen with your staves, as lift them Against the Roman State, whose courfe will on The way it takes: cracking ten thousand Curbes Of more strong linke affunder, then can ever Appeare in your impediment. For the Dearth, The Gods, not the Patricians make it, and Your knees to them (not arms) muft helpes. Alacke, You are tranport'd by Calamity Then, where more attends you, and you flander The Helmes o' th State; who care for you like Fathers, When you curse them, as Enemies. 2 Cit. Care for vs? True indeed, they are care'd for vs yet. Suffer vs to famish, and their Store-houfes crammd' with Graine: Make Edicts for Vfurie, to support Vfur- ers; repeale daily any wholsome Act established against the rich, and prouide more piercing Statutes daily, to chaine vp and restraine the poore. If the Warres eate vs not vppe, they will; and there's allthe loue they beare vs. Menen. Either you muft Confeffe your felues wondrous Malicious, Or be accus'd of Folly. I shall tell you A pretty Tale, it may be you haue heard it, But fince it ferves my purpose, I will venture To scale't a little more. 2Citizen. Well, Ile hear it Sir: yet you muft not thinke To fobbe off our disgrace with a tale: But and't please you deliver. Men. There was a time, when all the bodies members Rebelled against the Belly; thus accus'd it: That onely like a Gulfe it did remaine a a 1' th
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

1. In mild'd a th'body, idle and vacant,
Still cubbbing the Vlnd, neuer bearing
Like labour with the reft, where th'other Instruments
Did fea, and heare, defults, infruct, walke,feele,
And mutually participate, did minifter
Vnto the appetite; and affefion common
Of the whole body, the Belly answe'd.

2. Cit. Well sir, what anſwer made the Belly.
Men. Sir, I shall tell you with a kindne of Smile,
Which ne're came from the Lungs, but even thus:
For looke you I may make the belly Smile,
As well as speke, it taintingly replied
To the'ldiscontented Members, the mutinous parts
That eiused his receite: euen fo moft fitly,
As you maligne our Senators, for that
They are not fuch as you.

2. Cit. Your Bellies answe: What
The Kingly crown'd head, the vigilant eye,
The Counfailes Heart, the Arme our Souldeir,
Our Steed the Legge, the Tongue our Trumpeter,
With other Muniments and petty helples
In this our Fabricke, if that they—

Men. What then? Foreme, this Fellow speakes.
What then? What then?

2. Cit. Should by the Cormorant belly be refrain'd,
Who is the finke a th'body,
Men. Well, what then?

2. Cit. Body: Agents, if they did complaine,
What could the Belly answe?
Men. I will tell you,
If you'll beftow a small (of what you haue little)
Patience awhile; you'll haue the Bellies anſwer.

2. Cit. Y'are long about it.

Men. Note me this good Friend;
Your moft graue Belly was deliberat
Not raſh like his Accusers, and thus anſwered.
True is it my Incorporate Friends (quoth he)
That I receiv the general Bood at firft
Which you do liue vpon: and fit it is,
Because I am the Store-houfe, and the Shop
Of the whole Body. But, if you do remember,
I fend it through the Rivers of your blood
Even to the Court, the Heart, to th'efe o'th'Braine,
And through the Crankes and Offices of man,
The strongest Nerues, and fmall inferior Veines
From me receiv that naturall competence
Whereby they liue. And though that all at once
(You my good Friends, this fayes the Belly) marke me.

2. Cit. I fir, well, well.

Men. Though all at once, cannot
See what I do deliver out to each,
Yet I can make my Awdit vp, that all
From me do backe receiv the Flowers of all,
And leave me but the Bran. What fay you too't?

2. Cit. It was an anſwer, how apply you this
Men. The Senators of Rome, are this good Belly,
And you the mutinous Members: For examine
Their Counfailes, and their Caresafifted things rightly,
Touching the Weale a'st Common, you shall finde
No pullique benefit which you receuie
But it proceeds, or comes from them to you,
And no way from your felves. What do you thinke?
You, the great Toe of this Assembly?

2. Cit. I the great Toe? Why the great Toe?
Men. For that being one o'th lowest, balfeft, pooreft
Of this moft wife Rebellion, thou goest format:

Thou Rascall, that art worft in blood to run,
Lead'st firft to win some advantage.
But make you ready your fifte hats and clubs,
Rome, and her Rats, are at the point of battell,
The one fide muft haue baile.

Enter Caius Martius.

Hayle, Noble Martius,
Mar. Thanks. What's the matter you difsentious rogue
That rubbing the poore Itch of your Opinion,
Make your felues Scabs.

2. Cit. We haue euer your good word.

Mar. He that will glue good words to thee, wil flatter
Beneath abhorring. What would you haue, you Curses,
That like nor Peace, nor Warre? The one affrights you,
The other makes you proud. He that truts to you,
Where he should finde you Lyons, finds you Hares:
Where Foxes, Geese you are: No surer, no,
Then is the coale of fire vpon the Ice,
Or Hallifone in the Sun. Your Vertue is,
To make him worthy, whole offence subdues him,
And curb that Juflice did it. Who defeuer Greatnes,
Deferves your Hate: and your Affections are
A fickmans Appetite; who defires moft that
Which would encreafe his euill. He that depends
Vpon your favours, swimmes with finnes of Leade,
And heues downe Oakes, with rufhes. Hang ye truuffe ye?
With every Minute you do change a Minde,
And call him Noble, that was now your Hate,
Him vilde, that was your Garland. What's the matter,
That in these feuerall pieces of the Citie,
You cry againft the Noble Senator, who (Under the Gods) keepes you in awe, which else
Would feede on another? What's their feeking?

Men. For Corne at their owne rates, wherof they say
The Citie is well for'd.

Mar. Hang 'em: They fay?
They'll fit by th'fire, and prefume to know
What's done i'th Capitol: Who's like to rife,
Who thrues, & who declines: Side factions, & giue out
Conie& Quarrell Marriages, making partes strong,
And felling such an end, and not in their liking,
Below their cobled Shooes. They fay ther's grain enough?
Would the Nobility lay affide their ruth,
And let me fve my Sword, I'de make a Quarrie
With thousands of chefe quarter'd faues, as high
As I could picke my Lance.

Menen. Nay there be almost thoroughly perfwaded:
For though abundantly they lacke dilcretion
Yet are they pafing Cowardly. But I befeech you,
What fayes the other Troope?

Mar. They are diffloud: Hang' em;
They feld they were an hungry, figh'd forth Proverbes
That Hunger-broke stone wals: that dogges muft eate
That meate was made for mouths. That the gods fent not Corne for the Richmen only: With thefe therds
They vented their Complainings, which being anſwer'd
And a petition granted them, a strange one,
To breake the heart of generofity,
And make bold power looke pale, they threw their caps
As they would hang them on the horns a'st Moone, Shooting their Emulation.

Menen. What is graunted them?

Mar. Five Tribunes to defend their vulgar widoms
Of their owne choice. One's Junius Brutus,
Sicinius Veilus, and I know not. Sdeath,
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

The rabble should have first vnroo'ft the City
Ere fo preuayl'd with me; it will in time
Win vpon power, and throw forth greater Thamines
For Infurrections arguimg.

Men. This is strange.
Mar. Go get you home you Fragments.
Enter a Messenger bafily.

Myl. Where's Caius Marius?"Caius Marius:._
Mar. Hiero: where's the matter?"Hiero: where's the matter?
Myl. The news is fit, the Volces are in Armes.
Mar. I am glad on't, then we shall ha meanes to vent
Our muttie superfluity. See our best Elders.

Enter Scinius Velutus, Annius Brutus Cominius, Titus Larrius, with other Senatours.

1. Sen. Marius 'tis true, that you have lately told vs, how the Volces are in Armes.
Mar. They have a Leader,
Tullus Auffidius, that will put you too't: I finne in envying his Nobility:
And were I any thing but what I am, I would with me oneys.
Com. You have fought together?
Mar. Were halfe to halfe the world by th'eare, & he vpon my partie, I'd reuolt to make Oneys my warres with him. He is a Lion
That I am proud to hunt.

1. Sen. Then worthy Marius,
Attend vpon Cominius to thefe Warres.
Com. It is your former promise.
Mar. Sir it is, and I am confant: Titus Lucius, thou Shalt fee me once more strike at Tullus face.
What art thou blinde? Stay'dst thou?
Tit. No Caius Marius,
Ile leane vpon one Crutch, and fight with tother,
Ere they behind this Businesse.
Men. Oh true bred.
Sen. Your Company to th' Capitoll, where I know
Our greatst Friends attend vs.

Tit. Lead you on: Follow Cominius, we must followe
you, right worthy you Priority.
Com. Noble Marius.
Sen. Hence to your homes, be gone.
Mar. Nay let them follow,
The Volces have much Corne; take these Rats thither,
To gnaw their Garners. Worshipfull Mutiners,
Your valuer puts well forth: Pray follow.

Scin. Was ever man so proud as this Marius?
Bru. He has no equal.
Scin. When were we chosen Tribunes for the people?
Bru. Mark'd you his lip and eyes.
Scin. Nay, but his taunts.
Bru. Being mou'd, he will not spare to gird the Gods.
Scin. Bemocke the modest Moone.
Bru. The preuent Warres deoure him, he is growne
Too proud to be fo valiant.

Scin. Such a Nature, tickled with good successe, diff daines the shadow which he treads on at noone, but I do wonder, his inuolence can brooke to be commanded vn det Cominius?
Bru. Fame, at the which he aymes,
In whom already he's well grae'd, cannot Better be held, nor more attaing then by

A place below the first: for what miscarries
Shall be the Generals fault, though he perforrne
To th' vmoft of a man, and giddy cenfure
Will then cry out of Marius: Oh, If he Had borne the bufineffe.

Scin. Besides, if things go well,
Opinion that fo thicknes on Marius, shall
Of his demerits rob Cominius.

Bru. Come: halfe all Cominius Honors are to Marius
Though Marius earn'd them not: and all his faults to Marius shall be Honors, though indeed
In ought he merit not.

Sen. Let's hence, and heare
How the dispatch is made, and in what fashion
More then his singularity, he goes
Vpon this present Action.

Bru. Let's along.

Enter Tullus Auffidius with Senators of Coriolus.

1. Sen. So, your opinion is Auffidius,
That they of Rome are entred in our Counsailles,
And know how we procedee,

Auff. Is it not yours?

What euer have bin thought one in this State
That could be brought to bodily act, ere Rome
Had circumuention: 'tis not foure days gone
Since I heard thence, these are the words, I thinke
I haue the Letter heere: yes, heere it is;
They haue preft a Power, but it is not knowne
Whether for East or West: the Earth is great,
The people Mutinous: And it is rumour'd,
Cominius, Marius your old Enemy
(Who is of Rome worfe hated then of you)
And Titus Larrius, a most valliant Roman,
These three leade on this Preparation
Whether 'tis bent: most likely, 'tis for you:
Consider of it.

1. Sen. Our Armie's in the Field:
We neuer yet made doubt but Rome was ready
To answere vs.

Auff. Nor did you thinke it folly,
To keepe your great pretences vayl'd, till when
They needs must shew themselues, which in the hatching
It feem'd appear'd to Rome. By the discouery,
We shalbe shortned in our ayme, which was
To take in many Townes, ere (almoft) Rome
Should know we were a foot.

2. Sen. Noble Auffidius,
Take your Commission, bye you to your Bands,
Let vs alone to guard Coriolas
If they set downe before's: for the remoue
Bring vp your Army: but (I thinke) you'll finde
Th' haue not prepar'd for vs.

Auff. O doubt not that, I speak from Certainties. Nay more,
Some parcels of their Power are forth already,
And oneely hitherward. I leave your Honors.
If we, and Caius Marius chance to meete,
'Tis bewteenne vs, we shall euer strike
Till one of them can do no more.

All. The Gods asift you.

Auff. And keepe your Honors safe.

All. Farewell.

a a 2 Exeunt omnes.

Enter.
Enter Volumnia and Virgilia, mother and wife to Martius.
They set them downe on two lowe floores and some.

Volumnia. I pray you daughter fing, or exprisse your felpe in a more comfortable fort : If my Sonne were my Hubband, I should freeler rejoyce in that absence wherein he wonne Honor, then in the embracements of his Bed, where he would shew most louse. When yet hee was but tender-bodied, and the onely Sonne of my wombe; when youth with comelinesse pluck'd all gaze his way; when for a day of Kings entreaties, a Mother should not fel him an houre from her beholding; I considering how Honour would become such a perfon, that it was no better then Picture-like to hang by th' wall. If renowne made it not flirre, was pleas'd to let him feele danger, where he was like to finde fame : To a cruell Warre I fent him, from whence he return'd, his bowes bound with Oakes. I tell thee Daughter, I sprang not more in joy at firft hearing he was a Man-child, then now in firft feeing he had proceed himselfe a man.

Virgilia. But had he died in the Busineffe Madame, how then?

Volumnia. Then his good report should have beene my Sonne, I therein would have found ifue. Heare me profefle fincerely, had I a dozen fons each in my loue alike, and none leffe deere then thine, and my good Martius,
I had rather have eleuen dye Nobly for their Countryn, then one voluptuousely furfet from of Action.

Enter a Gentlewoman.

Gentlewoman. The Lady Valeria is come to visit you.

Virgilia. Before you give me leaue to retife my felpe.

Volumnia. Indeed you fhall not :
Me thinkes, I heare hithe your Husbands Drumme :
See him plucke Auffidius downe by th'haire:
(As children from a Beare) the Volces thunning him :
Me thinkes I fee him flampe thus, and call thus,
Come on you Cowards, you were in feats feare
Though you were borne in Rome ; his bloody bow
With his mail'd hand, then wipping, forth he goes
Like to a Harneft man, that task'd to move
Or all, or leaffe his hyre.

Virgilia. His bloody Bow ? Oh Jupiter, no blood.

Volumnia. Away you Poole, it more becomes a man
Then glit his Trofe. The breaths of Heabea
When she did fuckle Heftar, look'd not louelie
Then Heftors forhead, when it fpit forth blood
At Grecian fword. Contemning, tell Valeria
We are fit to bid her welcome.

Exit Gent.

Uriah. Heauen bleffe my Lord from fell Auffidius.

Uol. Hee let beat Auffidius head below his knee,
And treate upon his necke.

Enter Valeria with an Vffer, and a Gentlewoman.

Valeria. My Ladies both good day to you.]

Vol. Sweet Madam.

Uriah. I am glad to fee your Ladyship.

Valeria. How do you both ? You are mankind house-keepers. What are you fawing here ? A fine spotte in good faith. How does your little Sonne ?

Virgilia. I thank ye your Lady-ship : Well good Madam.

Valeria. He had rather fee the fwords, and hear a Drum,
then looke upon his Schoolmater.

Valeria. A my word the Fathers Sonne : Hee fware 'tis a very pretty boy. A my troth, I look'd vpon him a Wenz-day halfe an houre together : ha's fuch a confirm'd coun-

Volumnia. I saw him run after a gilded Butterflie, & when he caught it, he let it go againe, and after it againe, and ouer and over he comes; and vp againe : catcht it againe i:
whether his fall enrag'd him, or how twas, hee did fo fet his teeth, and tear it. Oh, I warrant how he mammockt
it.

Vol. One on's Fathers moods.

Valeria. Indeed la, tis a Noble childé.

Virgilia. A Cracke Madam.

Valeria. Come, lay a fide your fitchery, I must haue you play the idle Huwife with me this afternoone.

Virgilia. No (good Madam)
I will not out of doores.

Valeria. Not out of doores?

Volumnia. She fhall, the fhall.

Virgilia. Indeed no, by your patience ; Ie not over the threshold, till my Lord returne from the Warres.

Valeria. Eye, you confine your felpe moft unreasonably :
Come, you must go vift the good Lady that lies in.

Virgilia. I will with her speedily strength, and vifite her with my prayers : but I cannot go thither.

Volumnia. Why I pray you.

Plug. 'Tis not to faue labour, nor that I want loue.

Valeria. You would be another Pentelejone ; yet they lay, all the yeanne the fpun in Pfifius abfence, did but fill Abica
full of Mothes. Come, I would your Cambrick were felfible as your finger, that you might leave pricking it for plite. Come you fhall go with vs.

Virgilia. No good Madam, pardon me, indeed I will not forth.

Valeria. In truth la go with me, and Ile tell you excellent newes of your Husband.

Virgilia. Oh good Madam,there can be none yet.

Valeria. Verily I do not left with you; there came newes from him laft night.

Uriah. Indeed Madam.

Valeria. In earneft it's true ; I heard a Senatour fpake it,
Thus it is: the Volces have an Army forth, againt who Cominius the Generall is gone, with one part of our Ro-manc power. Your Lord, and Titus Lartius, are fet down before their City Carolets, they nothing doubt preual-ings, and to make it breve Warres. This is true on mine
Honor, and fo I praye go with vs.

Virgilia. Give me excuse good Madame, I will obe you in every thing hereafter.

Valeria. Let her alone Ladie, as she is now :
She will but difeafe our better mirth.

Valeria. In troth I thinkke she would :
Fare you well then. Come good sweet Ladie.

Virgilia. Prythee Virgilia turne thy feemeneffe out a doore,
And go along with vs.

Virgilia. No

Valeria. At a word Madam; Indeed I must not,
I wish you much mirth.

Valeria. Well then farewel.

Exeunt Ladies

Enter Martius, Titus Lartius, with Drumme and Colour, with Captaines and Soldiers, as before the City Cerialus : to them a Messenger.

Martius. Yonder comes Newes :
A Wager they have met.

Ladie. My horfe to yours, no.

March. Tis done.

Ladie. Agreed.

Mar.
Enter the Army of the Voles.

Mar. They fear vs not, but ifuse forth their Citie.
Now put your Shields before your hearts, and fight With hearts more profufe then Shields.
Advance brave Titus,
They do disdain vs much beyond our Thoughts, which makes me sweat with wrath. Come on my fellows He that retires, Ile take him for a Vole,
And he shall feel mine edge.

Alarum, the Romans are beat back to their Trenches Enter Martius Curtling.

Mar. All the contagion of the South, light on you, You Shames of Rome: you Heard of Byles and Plagues Plaister you o're, that you may be abhor'd Farther then seene, and one infect another Against the Winde a mile: you soules of Geese, That beare the shapes of men, how hauie you run From Slaves, that Apes would beate: Pluto and Hell, All hurt behind, backes red, and faces pale With flight and agued fear, mend and charge home, Or by the fires of heauen, Ile leave the Foe, And make my Warres on you: Lookce too't: Come on, If you'll stand fast, we'll beat them to their Wives, As they vs to our Trenches followes.

Another Alarum, and Martius follows them to gates, and is shot in.

So, now the gates are ope: now proue good Seconds, 'Tis for the followers Fortune, widens them, Not for the flyers: Mark me, and do the like.

Enter the Gait.

1.Sol. Foole-hardiness, not I.
2.Sol. Nor I.
All. To th'pot I warrant him. Enter Titus Lartius Tit. What is become of Martius?
All. Slaine (Sir) doubleste.
1.Sol. Following the Flyers at the very heelees, With them he enters: who upon the foadine Clapt to their Gates, he is himselxe alone, To anfwere all the City.

Lar. Oh Noble Fellow!
Who fensibly out-dares his fencetelle Sword, And when it bowes, and't vp: Thou art left Martius, A Carbuncle intire: as big as thou art Weare not fo rich a Jewell. Thou was a Souldier Euen to Calus with, not fierce and terrible Onely in brokes, but with thy grim lookes,and The Thunder-like percussion of thy founds Thou mad'nt: thine enemies shake, as if the World Were Feaourous, and did tremble.

Enter Martius bleeding, assaulted by the Enemy.

1.Sol. Lookie Sir.
Lar. O'tis Martius.
Let's fetch him off, or make remaine alike.

1.Rom. This will I carry to Rome.
2.Rom. And I this.
3.Rom. A Murrain on't, I tooke this for Siluer. exeqnt.
Enter Martius, and Titus with a Trumpet.

Mar. See here these mones, that do prize their hours At a crack'd Drachme: Cuffions, Leaden Spoones, Irons of a Doit, Dublets that Hangmen would Bury with thofe that were them. These bafe flaues, Ere yet the fight be done, packe vp, downe with them. And harkce, what noyfe the Generall makes: To him There is the man of my foules hate, Auffidious, Piercing our Romanes: Then Valiant Titus take Convenient Numbers to make good the City, Whil'it I with tho'ese that hauie the sprit, wil hafte To helpe Cominius.

Lar. Worthy Sir, thou blest?' Thy exercize hath bin too violent, For a second cours of Fight.

Mar. Sir, prafie me not: My worke hath yet not warm'd me. Fare you well: The blood I drop, is rather Physicall Then dangerous to me: To Auffidious thus, I will appear Lart. Now the faire Goddefe Fortune, (and fight. Fall depee in love with thee, and her great charmes Misguide thy Oppofers swords, Bold Gentleman: Prosperity be thy Page.

Mar. Thy Friend no leffe,
Then thofe the placeth highete: So farewell.
Lart. Thou worthieft Martius,
Go found thy Trumpet in the Market place,
Call thither all the Officers a'th' Tounwe, Where they shall know our minde. Away. Exeunt
Enter Cominius as it were in retire, with soldiers.

Com. Breath you my friends, we lought, we are come Like Romans, neither foolifh in our fands, (off,
Nor Cowardly in retyre: Beleeue me Sirs, We shall be charg'd againe. While we hauie stroke By Interims and conueying guils, we hauie heard The Charges of our Friends. The Roman Gods, Leade their furceffes, as we with our owne, Than both our powers, with fmling Fronts encountering, May gue you thankfull Sacrifice. Thy Newes?

Enter a Meflenger.

Meffd. The Citzizens of Cioioles have yeffied, And gien to Lartius and to Martius Battaile:

a a 3
I faw
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

I saw our party to their Trenches driven,
And then I came away.
Com. Though thou speakest truth,
Me thinkes thou speake't not well. How long is't since?
Mef. Aboue an hour, my Lord.
Com. Tis not a mile: Briefely we heard their drummes.
How could't thou in a mile confound an hour,
And bring thy Newses so late?
Mef. Spies of the Ultes
Held me in chase, that I was forc'd to wheel.
Three or foure miles about, else had I for halfe an hour since brought my report.

Enter Martius.
Com. Whose yonder,
That doe's appear as he were Flead? O Gods,
He has the flame of Martius, and I haue.
Before time feene him thus.
Mar. Come I too late?
Com. The Shepherd knowes not Thunder fro a Taber,
More then I know the found of Martius Tongue.
From every meaneer man,
Martius, Come I too late?
Com. I, if you come not in the blood of others,
But mantled in your owne.
Mort. Oh! let me clip ye.
In Armes as found, as when I woo'd in heart;
As merry, as when our Nuptiall day was done,
And Tapers burnt to Bedward.
Com. Flower of Warriors, how is't with Titus Lartius?
Mar. As with a man bufied about Decrees:
Condemning some to death, and some to exile,
Ranfoming him, or pitying, threatening th'other;
Holding Corioldes in the name of Rome,
Even like a fawning Grey-hound in the Leash,
To let him flip at will.
Com. Where is that Slaue
Which told me they had beate you to your Trenches?
Where is he? Call him hither.
Mar. Let him alone,
He did informe the truth: but for our Gentlemen,
The common file,(a plague-tribunes for them)
The Moufe ne're huntnd the Cat, as they did budge
From Rascals worfe then they.
Com. But how preuail'd you?
Mar. Will the time ferue to tell, I do not thinke:
Where is the enemy? Are you Lords a' th Field?
If not, why ceafe you till you are so?
Com. Martius, we have at disaduantage fought,
And did retyre to win our purpose.
Mar. How lies their Battell? Know you on w side
They haue plac'd their men of truft?
Com. As I guesse Martius,
Their Bands I' th Vaward are the Antients
Of their best truft: O're them Auffidius,
Their very heart of Hope.
Mar. I do befeech you,
By all the Battales wherein we haue fought,
By th'Blood we haue shed together,
By th'Vowes we haue made
To endure Friends, that you directly let me
Against Auffidius, and his Antients,
And that you not delay the preuent (but Filling the aire with Swords aduanee'd) and Darts,
We prove this very hour.
Com. Though I could wish,

You were conducted to a gentle Bath,
And Balmes applied to you, yet dare I never Deny your asking, take your choice of thofe
That beft can ayde your action.
Mar. These are they
That moft are willing; if any such be heere,
(As it were finne to doubt) that love this painting
Wherein you fee me finer'd, if any fear
Letten his hert, then am Ill report:
If any thinke, brave death out-weighes bad life,
And that his Countries deere then himselfe,
Let him alone: Or so many so minded,
Wau this thus to express his disposition,
And follow Martius.
They all shout and waue their swords, take him up in their Armes, and caft up their Caps.
Oh me alone, make you a sword of me:
If these shewes be not outward, which of you
But is foure Volces? None of you, but is Able to beare against the great Auffidius
A Shield, as hard as his. A certaine number
(Though thankes to all) must I feele from all:
The reft shall bear the base in some other fight
(As caufe will be obey'd) please you to March,
And foure shall quickly draw out my Command,
Which men are best inclin'd.
Com. March on my Fellowes:
Make good this ointment, and you shall
Divide in all, with vs.
Exeunt

Titus Lartius, bazing let a guard upon Coriodes, going with Drama and Trumpet toward Cominius, and Caio Mar-tius, Enters with a Lieutenant, other Soulsours, and a Scout.

Lar. So,let the Ports be guarded; keep your Duties
As I have set them downe. If I do send, dispatch
Those Centuries to our aye, the reft will ferue
For a short holding, if we loose the Field,
We cannot keepe the Towne.
Lieu. Fears are not our care Sir.
Lart. Hence; and shut your gates upon's:
Our Guider come, to th'Roman Campe conduct vs. Exit

Enter Martius and Auffidius at several doores.
Mar. Ile fight with none but thee, for I do hate thee
Worfe then a Promife-breaker.
Auffid. We hate alike:
Not Affricke owne a Serpent I abhorre
More then thy Fame and Enuy: Fix thy foot.
Mar. Let the first Budger dye the others Slaue,
And the Gods doeume him after.
Auff. If I flye Martius, hollow me like a Hare.
Mar. Within these three hours Tullus
Alone I fought in your Coriodes walles,
And made what worke I please'd: 'Tis not my blood,
Wherein thou seest me mask'd, for thy Revenge
Wrench vp thy power to th'higheft.
Auff. Wer't thou the HECTOR,
That was the whip of your brag'd Progeny,
Thou shoul'dst not leave me heere.
Here they fight, and certaine Volces come in the aye do Auffi. Martius fights with they be driven in breathes.
Officious and not valliant, you haue sham'd me
In your condemned Seconds.
Flourish. Alarum. A Retreat is founded. Enter at one Doore Cinius, with the Romanes: At another Doore Martius, with his Arme in a Scarfe.

Com. If I should tell thee o’re this thy daies Worke, Thou’st not beleue thy deeds: but Ie report it, Where Senators shall mingle tears with smilies, Where great Patricians shall attend, and shrugs, I’th’end admire: where Ladies shall be frighted, And gladly quak’d, heare more: where the dull Tribunes, That with the fullie Plebeians, hate thine Honors, Shall lay against their hearts, We thank the Gods Our Rome hath fuch a Soulard. Yet can’t thou to a Mortell of this Feaft, Hauing fully din’d before.

Enter Titus with bis Power, from the Pursuit.

Titus Lartius. Oh General: Here is the Steed, wee the Caparison: Hadst thou beheld—

Mar. Pray now, no more: My Mother, who’s a Charter to extoll her Bloud, When she do’s prayfe me, grieues me: I have done as you have done, that’s what I can, Induc’d as you have beene, that’s for my Country: He that ha’s but effect’d his good will, Hath ouerta’ne mine Aft.

Com. You shall not be the Graue of your deferving, Rome must know the value of her owne: ‘Twere a Concealement worse then a Theft, No leffe then a Traducement, To hide your doings, and to silence that, Which to the fpire, and top of praiyes wouch’d, Would feeme but modest: therefore I befeech you, In figne of what you are, not to reward What you have done, before our Armie heare me.

Mar. I have some Wounds upon me, and they smart To heare themselves remembred.

Com. Should they not: Well might they felter ‘gainft Ingratitude, And tent themfelves with death: of all the Horfes, Whereof we haue ta’ne good, and good flore of all, The Treafure in this field archeued, and Cittie, We render you the Tenth, to be ta’ne forth, Before the common-distribution,

At your onely choyfe.

Mar. I thanke you General: But cannot make my heart content to take A Bribe, to pay my Sword: I doe refuse it, And stand upon my common part with thofe, That haue beheld the doing.

A long flourifh. They all cry, Martius, Martius, cast up their Cups and Lances: Cominius and Lartius fland bare.

Mar. May these fame Infruments, which you prophane, Never found more: when Drums and Trumpets shall I’th'field prove flatterers, let Courts and Cities be Made all of falfe-fac’d fothing: When Steele grows soft, as the Parafites Silke, Let him be made an Overture for th’Warres: No more I say, for that I have not waz’d

My Nofe that bled, or fowl’d some debile Wretch, Which without note, here’s many elfe have done, You shot me forth in acclamations hyperbolical, As if I lou’d my little fhou’d be dieted In praiyes, fawc’t with Lyes.

Com. Too modeft are you: More cruel to your good report, then gratefull To vs, that glue you truly: by your patience, It’s gain’d your felle you be incens’d, we’e le put you (Like one that means his proper harme) in Manacles, Then reafon faiwe with you: Therefore be it knowne, As to vs, to all the World, That Caius Martius Weares this Warres Garland: in token of the which, My Noble Steed, knowne to the Campe, I give him, With all his trim belonging; and from this time, For what he did before Coriolo’s, call him, With all th’applaufe and Clamor of the Hoaft, Marcus Caius Corioloanus. Beare th’addition Nobly ever!

Flourifh. Trumpets founds, and Drums. Omnes. Marcus Caius Corioloanus, Martius. I will goe with you: And when my Face is faire, you fhall perceive Whether I blufh, or no: howbeit, I thank you, I mean to ftride your Steed, and at all times To vnder-creft your good Addition, To th’applaufe of my powr.

Com. So, to our Ten.

Where ere we doe reprofe vs, we will write To Rome of our successe: you Titus Lartius Muft to Coriolo’s bacces, fend vs to Rome The belft, with whom we may articulate, For their owne good, and ours. Lartius. I fhall, my Lord.

Mar. The Gods begin to mocke me: I that now refus’d most Princely gifts, Am bound to begge of my Lord General, Com. Tak’t; ’tis yours: what is’t?

Mar. I sometime lay here in Coriolo’s, At a poore mans houfe: he vs’d me kindly, He cry’d to me: I faw him Prifoner: But then Auffidius was within my view, And Wrath o’re-whelm’d my pittie: I requerf you To glue my poore Hoft freedome.

Com. Oh well begg’d; Were he the Butcher of my Sonne, he fhould Be free, as is the Wind: deliuer him, Titus. Lartius. Martius, his Name.

Mar. By Jupiter forgot: I am weare, yea, my memorie is tyr’d: Haue we no Wine here?

Com. Goe we to our Tent: The bloud vpon your Vifage dryes, ’tis time It fhould be lookt too: come.

Exeunt.

A flourifh. Cornets. Enter Tullius Auffidius bloudy, with two or three Soulards.

Auff. The Towne is ta’ne.

Sould. ’Twill be deliuer’d backe on good Condition.

Auffid. Condition? I would I were a Roman, for I cannot, Being a Velec, be that I am. Condition? What good Condition can a Treatie finde I’th’part that is at mercy? five times, Martius, I have fought with thee; I often haft thou beat me: And would it doe fo, I thinke, shou’d we encounter
Enter Menenius with the two Tribunes of the people, Sicinius & Brutus.

Men. The Agurer tells me, we shall have Newes to night.

Brut. Good or bad?

Men. Not according to the prayer of the people, for they loye not Martius.

Sicinius. Nature teaches Beasts to know their Friends.

Men. Pray you, who does the Wolfe love?

Sicinius. The Lambe.

Men. I, to deuour him, as the hungry Plebeians would the Noble Martius.

Brutus. He’s a Lambe indeed, that baes like a Beare.

Men. Hee’s a Beare indeed, that lyes like a Lambe.

You two are old men, tell me one thing that I shall ask you.

Bob. Well sir.

Men. In what enormity is Martius poore in, that you two haue not in abundance?

Brutus. He’s poore in no one fault, but for’d withall.

Sicinius. Especiallly in Pride.

Brutus. And topping all others in boasting.

Men. This is strange now: Do you two know, how you are cenfured here in the City, I mean of vs a’th’right hand File, do you?

Bob. Why? ho ware we cenfur’d?

Men. Because you talk of Pride now, will you not be angry.

Bob. Well, well sir, well.

Men. Why’tis no great matter: for a very little thefe of Occasion, will rob you of a great deale of Patience:

Give your dispositions the reines, and bee angry at your pleasures (at the least)! if you take it as a pleasure to you, in being so: you blame Martius for being proud.

Brutus. We do it not alone, sir.

Men. I know you can doe very little alone, for your helps are many, or else your actions would growe wondrous fingle: your abilities are to infant-like, for doing much alone. You talke of Pride: Oh, that you could turn your eyes toward the Napes of your neckes, and make but an interiour surveye of your good felues. Oh that you could.

Bob. What then sir?

Men. Why then you should discover a brace of vnmeriting, proud, violent, tefifie Magistrates (alias Poole) as any in Rome.

Sicinius. Menenius, you are knowne well enough too.

Men. I am knowne to be a humorous Patrian, and one that loves a cup of hot Wine, with not a drop of alaynig Tiber in’t: Said, to be something imperfect in favourable the first complaint, hafty and Tinder-like vppon, to trivial motion: One, that counterfeites more with the Buttockes of the night, then with the forehead of the morn. What I think, I vter, and spend my malice in my breath. Meeting two such Weales men as you are (I cannot call you Lycargylas) if the drinke you give me, touch my Pa- lat aduery, I make a crooked face at it, I can fay, your Worthies haue deliever’d the matter well, when I finde the Asse in compound, with the Maior part of your yalla- bles. And though I must be content to bare with those, that say you are reuerend graue men, yet they lye deadly, that tell you have good faces, if you see this in the Map of my Microcume, followes it that I am knowne well enou- nough too! What harme can your beeme Confedciu- ties gleane out of this Charrafer, if I be knowne well e- nough too.

Brutus. Come sir come, we know you well enough.

Menenius. You know neither mee, your felues, nor any thing: you are ambitious, for poore knaues cappe and legges: you weare out a good wholesome Forenoone, in hearing a caufe betweene an Orendge wife, and a Forfeit- feller, and then reissue the Controversie of three-pence to a second day of Audience. When you are hearing a matter betweene party and party, if you chauce to bee pinch’d with the Collickes, you make faces like Mum- mers, fet vp the bloodie Flagge against al Patience, and in roaring for a Chamber-pot, dilimize the Controversie breeding, the more intangled by your hearing: All the peace you make in their Cause, is calling both the parties Knaues. You are a payre of strange ones.

Brutus. Come, come, you are well vnderfoot to bee a perfechter gyber for the Table, then a necessarie Benchere in the Capitoll.

Men. Our very Priefes must become Mockers, if they shall encounter such ridiculous Subiects as you are, when you speake beft vnto the purpose. It is not woorth the waggyn of your Beards, and your Beards desere not no honourable a graue, as to stuffle a Bohchers Cushion, or to be intomb’d in an Asse Packe-saddle; yet you must bee sayning, Martius is proud: who in a cheapen estimation, is worth all your predeceffors, since Deneaus, though per- adventure some of the best’em were hereditary hang- men. Golden to your Worthies, more of your commen- fation would infect my Braine, being the Hearofmen of the Beafly Plebeians. I will be bold to take my leaue of you.

Brutus and Sicinius.

Aside. Enter.
Enter Volumina, Virgilia, and Valeria.

How now (my as faire as Noble) Ladies, and the Moone were shee Earthly, no Nobler; whither doe you follow your Eyes at last?

Volum. Honorable Menenius, my Boy Martius approaches for the loyce of Iuno let's goe.

Menen. Ha! Martius comming home?

Volum. I, worthy Menenius, and with most prosperous approbation.

Menen. Take my Cappe Jupiter, and I thanke thee; hoo, Martius comming home?

Volum. Look, here's a Letter from him, the State hath another, his Wife another, and (I think) there's one at home for you.

Menen. I will make my very house reele to night:

A Letter for me?

Virgil. Yes certaine, there's a Letter for you, I saw't.

Menen. A Letter for me? it gives me an Estate of seven yeares health; in which time, I will make a Lippe at the Physician: The most soueraigne Precept: and this Preservative, of no better report then a Horfe-drench. Is he not wounded? he was wont to come home wounded?

Virgil. Oh no, no, no.

Volum. Oh, he is wounded, I thanke the Gods for't.

Menen. So doe I too, if it be not too much: brings a Victorie in his Pocket? the wounds become him.

Volum. On's Brows: Menenius, hee comes the third time home with the Oaken Garland.

Menen. Ha's he disciplin'd Auffidius foundly?

Volum. Titus Lartius Writs, they fought together, but Auffidius got off.

Menen. And 'twas time for him too, Ile warrant him that: and he had fly'd by him, I would not have been so fidious'd, for all the Chefs in Carioles, and the Gold that's in him. Is the Senate poss'd of this?

Volum. Good Ladies let's goe. Yes, yes, yes: The Senate ha's Letters from the Generall, wherein hee gives my Sonne the whole Name of the Warre: he hath in this action out-done his former deeds doubly.

Valer. In troth, there's wondrous things spoke of him.

Menen. Wondrous: I, I warrant you, and not without his true purchasing.

Virgil. The Gods graunt them true.

Volum. True? pow waw.

Men. True? Ile be frowne they are true: where is hee wounded, God fauce your good Worships? Martius is comming home: hee ha's more caufe to be proud: where is he wounded?

Volum. Ith' Shoulder, and Ith' left Arme: there will be large Cicatrices to shew the People, when hee shall stand for his place: he received in the repulfe of Tarquin Iueen hurts ith' Body.

Men. One ith' Neck, and two ith' Thigh, there's nine that I know.

Volum. Hee had, before this last Expedition, twentie five Wounds vpon him.

Men. Now it's twentie Iueen; every gash was an Enemies Graue. Hearke, the Trumpets.

A sound, and flourish.

Volum. These are the Vithers of Martius:

Before him, hee carres Noyfe; And behinde him, hee leaes Teares:

Death, that darke Spirit, in's nerue Arme doth lye, Which being aduanc'd, declines, and then men dye.

A Sonnet.

Enter Cominius the Generall, and Titus Lartius: between them Coriolanus, crownd with an Oaken Garland, with Captains and Soulers, and a Herald.

Herald. Know Rome, that all alone Martius did fight Within Corioles Gates: where he hath wonne, With Fame, a Name to Martius Cajus: These in honor followes Martius Cajus Coriolanus. Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus.

Sound. Flourish.

All. Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus. Coriol. No more of this, it does offend my heart: pray now no more.

Com. Look, Sir, your Mother.

Coriol. Oh! you haue, I know, petition'd all the Gods for thy prosperitie. Kneels.

Volum. Nay, my good Souldier, wp:

My gentle Martius, worthy Cajus,

And by deed-atchieuing Honor newly nam'd,

What is it (Coriolanus) must I call thee?

But oh, thy Wife.

Corio. My gracious silence, hayle:

Would 't thou haue laug'd, had I come Coffin's home,

That weep't to fee me triumph? Ah my deare,

Such eyes the Widowes in Carioles were,

And Mothers that lacke Sonnes.

Mene. Now the Gods Crowne thee.

Com. And lie you yet? Oh my sweet Lady, pardon.

Volum. I know not where to tume.

Oh welcome home, and welcome Generall,

And y'are welcome all.

Mene. A hundred thousand Welcomes:

I could wepe, and I could laugh,

I am light, and heauie; welcome:

A Curfe begin at very root on's heart,

That is not glad to fee thee.

Yon are three, that Rome should dote on:

Yet by the faith of men, we haue

Some old Crab-trees here at home,

That will not be grafted to your Railiff.

Yet welcome Warriors:

Wes call a Nettle, but a Nettle;

And the faults of fooles, but folly.

Com. Euer right.

Cor. Menenius, euer, euer.

Herald. Gieue way there, and goe on.

Cor. Your Hand, and yours?

Ere in our owne houfe I doe shade my Head,

The good Patricians must be visit'd,

From whom I haue receiv'd not onely greetings,

But with them, change of Honors.

Volum. I haue liued,

To fee inherited my very Wishes,

And the Buildings of my Fancie:

Onely there's one thing wanting,

Which (I doubt not) but our Rome

Will cafe vpon thee.

Cor. Know, good Mother,

I had rather be their fervant in my way,

Then sway with them in theirs.

Com. On, to the Capitol.

Flourish. Cornets.

Extant in State, as before.
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

Enter Brutus and Scipio.

Brutus. All tongues speake of him, and the bleared fights
Are speculac'd to fee him. Your prating Nurfe
Into a rapture lets her Baby cry,
While she chats him: the Kitchin Mallkin pinnes
Her richet Lockram'bout her reechie necke,
Clambrong the Walls to eye him:
Stalls, Bulkes, Windows, are another'd vp,
Leades fill'd, and Ridges hon'd
With variable Complexions; all agreeing
In earneftness to fee him: feld-showne Flaminos
Doe prefse among the popular Thronges, and pufse
To winne a vulgar station: our veyl'd Dames
Commit the Warre of White and Damaske
In their nicely gawded Cheekeks, toth' wanton spoyle
Of Phæbus burning Kisses: fuch a poacher,
As if that whatfoever God, who leads him,
Were flyly crept into his humane powers,
And gave him gracefull posture.

Seicin. On the fuddaine, I warrant him Conful.

Brutus. Then our Office may, during his power, goe sleepe.

Seicin. He cannot temp'ratly transport his Honors,
From where he should begin, and end, but will Lose thofe he hath wonne.

Brutus. In that there's comfort.

Seicin. Doubt not,
The Commons, for whom we ftand, but they
Vpon their ancient mallice, will forget
With the leaft caufe, thefe his new Honors,
Which that he will give them, make 1 as little queftion,
As he is proud to doo't.

Brutus. I heard him sware,
Were he to ftand for Conful, never would he Appeare i'th'Market place, nor on him put
The Naples Venture of Humilitie,
Nor fhewing(as the manner is)his Wounds
Toth' People, begge their flinking Breaths.

Seicin. 'Tis right.

Brutus. It was his word:
Oh he would misfe it, rather then carry it,
But by the fuite of the Gentry to him,
And the defire of the Nobles.

Seicin. I with no better, then haue him hold that purpofe, and to put it in execution.

Brutus. 'Tis moft like he will.

Seicin. It fhall be to him then, as our good wills; a fure deftruction.

Brutus. So it must fall out
To him, or our Authorities, for an end.
We must fugget the People, in what hatred
He flill hath held them: that to's power he would
Haue made them Mules, flenc'd their Pleaders,
And disproportioned their Freedomes; holding them,
In humane Aflion, and Capacitie,
Of no more Soule, nor fittneffe for the World,
Then Cammels in their Warre, who have their Pround
Onely for bearing Burtens, and fcor blowes
For finking vnder them.

Seicin. This (as you ray) fuggefted,
At fome time, when his fearing Infolence
Shall teach the People, which time fhall not want,
If he be put vpno't, and that's as eafie,
As to fet Dogges on Sheepe, will be his fire

To kindle their dry Stubble: and their Blaze
Shall darken him for ever.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. What's the matter?

Mess. You are fent for to the Capitoll:
'Tis thought, that your Maffin shall be a Conful:
I have feene the dummy men afraid to fee him,
And the blind to heare him (speake)Matrons flong Gloues,
Ladies and Maids their Scartfles, and Handkerchers,
Vpon him as he paft'd: the Nobles bended
As to Iouet Statue, and the Commons made
A Shower, and Thunder, with their Caps, and Showts:
I never faw the like.

Brutus. Let's to the Capitoll,
And carry with vs Eares and Eyes for th'time,
But Hearts for the event.

Seicin. Haue with you.

Exeunt.
To gratifie his Noble service, that hath
Thus fled for his Country. Therefore please you,
Moft reverend and graue Elders, to defer
The preuent Consull, and left Generall,
In our well-found Successe, to report
A little of that worthy Worke, perform'd
By Martius Cneo Coriolanus: whom
We met here, both to thank, and to remember,
With Honors like himselfe.

1.Sen. Speake, good Corinianus:
Leave nothing out for length, and make vs thinke
 Rather our fates defectiue for requitall,
 Then we to stretch it out. Matters a'th'People,
 We doe request your kinder cares: and after
 Your louing motion toward the common Body,
 To yeld what paffes here.

Scin. We are conuented vpon a pleasing Treatie,
And haue hearts inable to honor and advance the Thame of our Affembly.

Brutus. Which the rather wee shall be bleft to doe, if he remember a kinder value of the People, then he hath hereto priz'd them at.

Menen. That's off, that's off: I would you rather had been silent: Pleafe you to heare Cominianus speake?

Brutus. Moft willingly: but yet my Caution was more pertinent then the rebuke you give it.

Menen. He loues your People, but tye him not to be their Bed-fellow: Worthie Cominianus speake,
Coriolanus rifes, and offers to goe away.

Nay, keepe your place.

Senat. Sit Coriolanus: neuer shame to heare
What you have Nobly done.

Coriol. Your Honors pardon:
I had rather haue my Wounds to heale againe,
Then heare fay how I got them.

Brutus. Sir, I hope my words dis-bench'd you not?

Coriol. No Sir: yet off,
When blowes haue made me flay, I fled from words.
You footh'd not, therefore hurt not: but your People,
I loue them as they weigh—

Menen. Pray now fit downe.

Coriol. I had rather haue one scratch my Head i'th'Sun,
When the Alarum were fruick, then idly fit
To heare my Nothings monfer'd.

Menen. Maffers of the People,
Your multiplying Sorrow, how can he flatter?
That's thound to one good one, when you now fee
He had rather venture all his Limbs for Honor,
Then on ones Eares to heare it. Proceed Cominianus.

Com. I shall lacke voyce: the deeds of Coriolanus
Should not be vter'd feebly: it is held,
That Valour is the chiefest Vertue,
And most dignifies the hauer: if it be,
The man I speake of, cannot in the World
Be fingly counter-poes'd. At fixteen yeeres,
When Tarquin made a Head for Rome, he fought
Beyond the marke of others: our then Dictator,
Whom with all prayse I point at, faw him fight,
When with his Amazonian Shirne he drowe
The brizled Lippes before him: he bestrid
An o're-prect Roman, and i'th'Consuls view
Slew three Oppoers: Tarquins felte he met,
And strucke him on his Knee: in that dayes feats,
When he might dte the Woman in the Scene,
He prou'd bett man i'th'field, and for his meed
Was Brow-bound with the Oake. His Pupill age

Man-entred thus, he waxed like a Sea,
And in the brunt of feventeen Battales since,
He hurc'h all Swords of the Garland: for this laft,
Before, and in Corioles, let me fay
I cannot speake him home: he flot the flyers,
And by his rare example made the Coward
Tuffer terror into sport: as Weeds before
A Veefell vnder fayle, fo men obey'd,
And fell below his Stem: his Sword, Deaths flampe,
Where it did marke, it tooke from face to foot:
He was a thing of Blood, whole every motion
Was tim'd with dying Cryes: alone he entred
The mortall Gate of th'Cite, which he painted
With finleffe deftinie: aydeffe came off,
And with a sudden re-inforcement fruick
Carioles like a Planet: now all's his,
When by and by the dinne of Warre gan pierce
His readie fince: then fhraight his doubled spirit
Requicken'd what in fief was fatigate;
And to the Battale came he, where he did
Runne reeking o're the lines of men, as if 'twere
A perpetuall fpoyle: and till we call'd
Both Field and Cite ours, he neuer ftood
To eafe his Breft with pantiing.

Menen. Worthy man.

Senat. He cannot but with meafeure fit the Honors which we deuife him.

Com. Our fpoyles he kick'd at,
And look'd vpon things preou's, as they were
The common Muck of the World: he couets leffe
Then Miferie it felfe would give, rewards his deeds
With doing them, and is content
To fpend the time, to end it.

Menen. He's right Noble, let him be call'd for.

Senat. Call Coriolanus.

Off. He doth appear.

Enter Coriolanus.

Menen. The Senate, Coriolanus, are well pleas'd to make thee Consull.
Coriol. I doe owe them flill my Life, and Serviues.

Menen. It then remains, that you doe speake to the People.

Coriol. I doe befeech you,

Let me o're-leape that cuftome: for I cannot
Put on the Gowne, fend naked, and entreat them
For my Wounds fake, to give their fuffrage:
Pleafe you that I may paffe this doing.

Scin. Sir, the People muft haue their Voyces,
Neyther will they bate one iot of Ceremonie.

Menen. Put them not too:
Pray you goe fit you to the Cuftome,
And take to you, as your Predecessors haue,
Your Honor with your forme.

Coriol. It is a part that I fhall blufh in aeting,
And might well be taken from the People.

Brutus. Marke you that.

Coriol. To brag unto them, thus I did, and thus Shew them th'warnaking Skarres, which I fhou'd hide,
As if I had receiu'd them for the hyre
Of their breath onely.

Menen. Doe not fland vpon't:
We recommend to you Tribunes of the People
Our purpose to them, and to our Noble Consull
With we all Joy, and Honor.

Senat. To
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

Senat. To Coriolanus come all joy and Honor.
Fowrth Cornets.
Then Execut. Manet Sicinius and Brutus.
Bru. You see how he intends to vse the people.
Seicin. May they perceive his intent: he will require them
As if he did contemne what he requested,
Should be in them to giue.
Bru. Come, we'll informe them
Of our proceedings heere on th'Market place,
I know they do attend vs.
Enter feauon or eight Citizens.
1.Cit. Once if he do require our voyces, wee ought not to deny him.
2.Cit. We may Sir if we will.
3.Cit. We have power in our felues to do it, but it is a power that we have no power to do: For, if hee shew vs his wounds, and tell vs his deeds, we are to put our tongues into thofe wounds, and speake for them: So if he tel vs his Noble deeds, we must alfo tell him our Noble acceptance of them. Ingratitude is monfruous, and for the multitude to be ingrateful, were to make a Monifer of the multitude; of which we, beingmembers, should bring our felues to be monfruous members.
1.Cit. And to make vs no better thought of a little helpe will serve: for once we flood vp about the Corne, he himselfe stucke not to call vs the many-headed Multife-
tude.
3.Cit. We have beene call'd fo of many, not that our heads are some browne, some blacke, some Abram, some bald; but that our wits are fo diversely Coulord; and true-
ly I thinke, if all our wittes were to iiffe out of one Scull, they would flye East, West, North, South, and their confent of one direct way, should be at once to all the points a'th Compaiffe.
2.Cit. Thinke you fo? Which way do you judge my wit would flye.
3.Cit. Nay your wit will not fo soone out as another mans will, 'tis strangely wadg'd vp in a blocke-head : but if it were at liberty, w'ould flye Southward.
2.Cit. Why that way?
3 Cit. To loose it selfe in a Fogge, where being three parts melted away with rotten Dewes, the fourth would returne for Confience fake, to helpe to get thee a Wife.
2.Cit. You are neuer without your trickes, you may,
you may.
3.Cit. Are you all resolu'd to giue your voyces? But that's no matter, the greater part carries it, I say. If hee would incline to the people, there was neuer a worther man.

Enter Coriolanus in a gowne of Humility, with Mencenus.

Heere he comes, and in the Gowne of humility, marke his behavour: we are not to stay altogether, but to come by him where he stands, by ones, by twoes, & by threes.
He's to make his requests by particulars, wherein euery
one of vs ha's a fingle Honor, in giuing him our own voyces with our owne tongues,therefore follow me, and Ile direct you how you shall go by him.

All. Content, content.
Men. Oh Sir,you are not righthaue you not knowne
The worthless men have don't.
Corio. What must I say, I pray Sir?
Plague vpon't, I cannot bring
My touge to such a pace. Looke Sir, my wounds,
I got them in my Countries Seruice, when
Some certaine of your Brethren roar'd, and ranne

From th'noife of our owne Drummes.
Men. Oh me the Gods, you must not speak of that,
You must defire them to thinke vpon you.
Corio. Thinke vpon me? Hang 'em,
I would they would forget me, like the Vertues
Which our Diuines solde by em.
Men. You'll marre all,
I'lle leave you: Pray you speake to em, I pray you
In whollsome manner.

Exit

Enter three of the Citizens.
Corio. Bid them waft their Faces,
And keepe their teeth cleane: So, heere comes a brace,
You know the cause (Sir) of my standing heere.
3.Cit. We do Sir, tell vs what hath brought you too't.
Corio. Mine owne defect.
2.Cit. Your owne defect.
Corio. I, but mine owne desire.
3.Cit. How not your owne desire?
Corio. No Sir, twas neuer my desire yet to trouble the poore with beggins.
3.Cit. You must thinke if we giue you any thing, we hope to gaine by you.
Corio. Well then I pray your price a'th'Confulship.
1.Cit. The price is, to ask it kindly.
Corio. Kindly Sir, I pray let me ha't: I have wounds to shew you, which shall bee yours in priuate: your good voice Sir, what say you?
2.Cit. You shall ha't worthy Sir.
Corio. A match Sir, there's in all two worthie voyces begg'd: I have your Almes, Adieu.
3.Cit. But this is somthing odde.
2.Cit. And 'twere to giue againe: but 'tis no matter.
Exeunt. Enter two other Citizens.
Corio. Pray you now, if it may stand with the tune of your voyces, that I may bee Conful, I haue heere the Customarie Gowne.
1. You have deferred Nobly of your Countrey, and you have not deferred Nobly.
Corio. Your Enigma,
1. You have bin a fource to her enemies, you have bin a Rod to her Friends, you haue not indeede loued the Common people.
Corio. You should account mee the more Vertuous, that I have not bin common in my Loue, I will fir flatter
my wvorne Brother the people to earne a deere estimation of them, 'tis a condition they account gentle: & since the wifedeme of their choice, is rather to haue my Hat, then my Heart, I will practive the infuriating nod, and be off to them moft counterfetly, that is fir, I will counterfer the bewitchment of some popular mam, and giue it bountifull to the defirers: Therefore befeech you, I may be Conful:
2. Woe hope to finde you our friend: and therefore giue you our voices heartily.
1. You have receyued many wounds for your Countrey.
Corio. I wil not Seale your knowledge with shewing them. I will make much of your voyces, and fo trouble you no farther.
Both. The Gods giue you joy Sir heartily.
Corio. Moft sweet Voyces.
Better it is to dye, better to flerne,
Then craue the higher, which firft we do defere.
Why in this Woolfoung thougl shoul I stand heere,
To begge of Hob and Dicke, that does appeare
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

Thei needlese Vouches: Custome calls me too't.
What Custome wills in all things, should we do't?
The Custume on antique Time would ye vnswep't,
And mountainous Error be too highly hearted,
For Truth to o're-peere. Rather then fool'd it so,
Let the high Office and the Honor go
To one that would doe thus. I am halfe through,
The one part suffer'd, the other will I doe.
Enter three Citizens more.

Here come mee Voyces.
Your Voyces? for your Voyces I have sought,
Watcht for your Voyces: for your Voyces, bear
Of Wounds, two dozen odde: Battalies thrice six
I have seen, and heard of: for your Voyces,
Have done many things, some little, some more:
Your Voyces? Indeed I would be Consull.
1.Cit. Hee ha's done Noble, and cannot goe without any honest mans Voyce.
2.Cit. Therefore let him be Consull: the Gods give him joy, and make him good friend to the People.
All. Amen, Amen, God faue thee, Noble Consull.
Corio. Worthy Voyces.

Enter Menenius, with Brutus and Scincinius.

Mene. You haue stood your Limation:
And the Tribunes endue you with the Peoples Voyces,
Remaines, that in th'Officiall Markes inueted,
You anon doe meet the Senate.
Corio. Is this done?
Scicin. The Custume of Request you haue discharg'd:
The People doe admit you, and are summmon'd
To meet anon, vpon your approbation.
Corio. Where? at the Senate-houfe?
Scicin. There, Coriolanus.
Corio. May I change these Garments?
Scicin. You may, Sir.
Corio. That Ie straight do: and knowing my selfe again,
Repayre toth Senate-houfe.
Mene. I le keepe you company. Will you along?
Brut. We lay here for the People.
Scicin. Fare you well.

Exeunt Corio. and Mene.

He's ha't now: and by his Lookes, me thinkes,
'Tis warme at's heart.
Brut. With a proud heart he wore his humble Weeds:
Will you difie the People?
Enter the Plebeians.
Scicin. How now, my Masters, haue you chose this man?
1.Cit. Hee ha's our Voyces, Sir.
Brut. We praye the Gods, he may defeuer your loues.
2.Cit. Amen, Sir; to my poore vnworthy notice,
He mock'd vs, when he begg'd our Voyces.
3.Cit. Certainely, he flowted vs downe-right.
1.Cit. No'tis his kind of speech, he did not mock vs.
2.Cit. Not one amongst vs, saue your selfe, but fayes
He vs'd vs scornfully: he should have shew'd vs
His Marks of Merit, Wounds receu'd for Country,
Scicin. Why fo he did, I am sure.
All. No, no no man saue 'em.
3.Cit. Hee said hee had Wounds,
Which he could shew in priuate:
And with his Hat, thus wauing it in fcorne,
I would be Consull, fayes he: aged Custome,
But by your Voyces, will not so permit me.
Your Voyces therefore: when we granted that,
Here was, I thank you for your Voyces, thank you
Your most sweet Voyces: now you haue left your Voyces,
I have no further with you. Was not this mockerie?
Scicin. Why eyther were you ignorant to see't?
Or seeing it, of such Childish friendliness,
To yeeld your Voyces?
Brut. Could you not haue told him,
As you were Jeoff'nd: When he had no Power,
But was a petitie servant to the State,
He was your Enemie, euuer fpake against
Your Liberties, and the Charters that you beare
I' th'Body of the Weale: and now arraunging
A place of Potencie, and sway o'th'State,
If he should still malignantly remaine
Fait Foe toth' Plebeij, your Voyces might
Be Curfes to your felues. You should haue saied,
That as his worthy deeds did clayne no leffe
Then what he stood for: fo his gracious nature
Would thinke vpon you, for your Voyces,
And translate his Malice towards you, into Loue,
Standing your friendly Lord.
Scicin. Thus to have saied,
As you were fore-aduie'd, had toucht his Spirit,
And try'd his Inclination: from him pluckt
Eyther his gracious Promife, which you might
As caufe had call'd you vp, haue held him to;
Or elie it would haue gall'd his furry nature,
Which eafeily endures not Article,
Tying him to ought, fo putting him to Rage,
You should haue ta'ne th'advantage of his Choller,
And pafs'd him vnelected.
Brut. Did you perceiue,
He did dilliciote you in free Contempt,
When he did need your Loues: and doe you thinke,
That his Contempt shall not be bruizing to you,
When he hath power to cruft? Why, had your Bodyes
No Heart among you? Or had you Tongues, to cry
Against the Reeftorhip of Judgement?
Scicin. Haue you, ere now, deny'd the asker:
And now againe, of him that did not aske, but mock,
Befow't your fa'd—for Tongues?
3.Cit. Hee's not confirm'd, we may deny him yet.
2.Cit. And will deny him:
He haue five hundred Voyces of that found,
1.Cit.I twice five hundred, & their friends, to piece 'em.
Brut. Get you hence infantly, and tell those friends,
They haue chose a Contell, that will from them take
Their Liberties, make them of no more Voyce
Then Dogges, that are as often beat for barking,
As therefore kept to doe so.
Scic.Let them affembles under a faier Judgement,
All reouke your ignorant election: Enforce his Pride,
And his old Hate vnto you: besides, forget not
With what Contempt he wore the humble Weed,
How in his Suit he scorn'd you: but your Loues,
Thinking vpon his Serulices, tooke from you
Th'approhension of his preuent partance,
Which moft glibly, vgrauely, he did fashion
After the inueterate Hate he beares you.
Brut. Lay a fault on vs, your Tribunes,
That we labour'd (no impediment betweene)
But that you must caue your Election on him.
Scic.Lay you chose him, more after our commandment,
Then as guided by your owne true affections, and that
Your Minds pre-occupy'd with what you rather muft do,
Then what you shou'd, made you against the graine
To Voyce him Consull. Lay the fault on vs.

Brut. 1,
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

Actus Tertius.

Corinæi. Enter Corinæuus, Mænænius, all the Gentry, Cominius, Titus Latinus, and other Senators.

Corio. Tellus Auffidius then had made new head.

Latinus. He had, my Lord, and that it was which caus'd our swifter Composition.

Corio. So then the Voices stand but as at first, Readie when time shall prompt them, to make roade Upon's againe,

Com. They are worn (Lord Conful) fo,
That we shall hardly in our ages fee Their Banners waue againe.

Corio. Saw you Auffidius?

Latinus. On safegard he came to me, and did curfe Against the Voices, for they had so wildly Yielded the Towne: he is retiryed to Antium.

Corio. Speoke he of me?

Latinus. He did, my Lord.

Corio. How? what?

Latinus. How often he had met you Sword to Sword: That of all things vpon the Earth, he hated Your person moit: That he would powne his fortunes To hopefull restitution, so he might Be call'd your Vanquisher.

Corio. At Antium lies he?

Latinus. At Antium.

Corio. I wish I had a caufe to seeke him there, To oppose his hatred fully. Welcome home.

Enter Scincinius and Brutus.

Behold, these are the Tribunes of the People, The Tongues o'th Common Mouth. I do deffeipe them:

For they doe pranke them in Authoritie, Against all Noble sufferance.

Scincinius. Paffe no further.

Corio. Hah! what is that?

Brutus. It will be dangerous to goe on--No further.

Corio. What makes this change?

Mene. The matter?

Com. Hath he not paft'd the Noble, and the Common?

Brutus. Cominius, no.

Corio. Haue I had Childrens Voyces?

Senat. Tribunes give way, he shall tooth'Market place.

Brutus. The People are incens'd against him.

Scincinius. Stop, or all will fall in broyle.

Corio. Are thefe your Hear'd?

Muft thefe have Voyces, that can yeld them now, And straighte diclaime their tongues? what are your Offices? You being their Mouthes, why rule you not their Teeth? Haue you not fet them on?

Mene. Be calm, be calm.

Corio. It is a purpos'd thing, and grows by Plot, To curbe the will of the Nobilitie:

Suffer't, and live with such as cannot rule, Nor ever will be ruled.

Brutus. Call'd not a Plot:
The People cry you mockt them: and of late, When Corne was given them grant, you repin'd, Scandal'd the Suppliants: for the People, call'd them Time-pleasers, flatterers, foes to Noblenesse.

Corio. Why this was knowne before.

Brutus. Not to them all.

Corio. Haue you inform'd them fittence?

Brutus. How? I informe them?

Com. You are like to doe such businesse.

Brutus. Not unlike each way to better yours.

Corio. Why then should I be Conful? by yon'd Clouds Let me deferve fo ill as you, and make me Your fellow Tribune.

Scincinius. You fliew too much of that,
For which the People firre: if you will paffe To where you are bound, you must enquire your way, Which you are out of, with a gentler spirit,
Or neuer be so Noble as a Conful,
Nor yoyke with him for Tribune.

Mene. Let's be calm.

Com. The People are abus'd: fet on, this paltring Becomes not Rome: nor ha's Coriolanus Defer'd this fo dihonor Rub, laid falsely I'th' plaine Way of his Merit.

Corio. Tell me of Corne: this was my speech,
And I will speake't again.

Mene. Not now, not now.

Senat. Not in this heat, Sir, now.

Corio. Now as I lie, I will.

My nobler friends, I craue their pardons:
For the mutable ranke-sentenced Meinie,
Let them regard me, as I doe not flatter,
And therein behold themselues: I say againe, In soothing them, we nourish 'gainst our Senate The Cockle of Rebellion, Infolence, Sedition, Which we our felues have ploved for, low'd, & scatter'd,
By mingling them with vs, the honor'd Number, Who lack not Vertue, nor, nor Power, but that Which they have gien to Beggars.

Mene. Well, no more

Senat. No more words, we beseech you.

Corio. How? no more?
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

As for my Country, I have shed my blood,
Not fearing outward force; so shall my Lungs
Coinc words till their decay, against those Meazels
Which we disdaine should Tetter vs, yet fought
The very way to catch them.

Brut. You speake a' th'people, as if you were a God,
To punish, Not a man, of their Infirnity.
Sicin. \Twere well we let the people know'n.

Menc. What, what? His Choller?
Cor. Choller? Were I as patient as the midnight sleep,
By Ioue, twould be my minde.

Sicin. It is a minde that shall remain a poison
Where it is; not poyson any further,
Coro. Shall remaine?

Heare you this Triton of the Minnowes? Marke you
His abolute Shall?
Com. 'Twas from the Cannon.
Cor. Shall? O God! but most vnwise Patricians; why
You grave, but weakllefe Senators, have you thus Quen Hidra here to choope an Officer,
That with his peremptory Shall, being but
The horne, and noife o' th'Monfiers, wants not spirit
To say, he'll turn your Current in a ditch,
And make your Channell his? If he haue power,
Then vale your Ignorance: If none, awake
Your dangerous Lenity: If you are Learn'd,
Be not as common Fools; if you are not,
Let them haue Cufhions by you. You are Plebeians,
If they be Senators; and they are no lesse,
When both your voices blended, the great't taste
Moff pallets theirs. They choose their Magistratce,
And such a one as he, who puts his Shall,
His popular Shall, against a grauer Bench
Then ever frownd in Greece. By Ioue himselfe,
It makes the Conflus base; and my Soule akes
To know, when two Authorities are vp,
Neither Supremae; How foone Confusion
May enter 'twixt the gap of Both, and take
The one by th'other.

Com. Well, on to'th'Market place.
Corio. Who ever gaue that Counfell, to giue forth
The Corne a' th'Store-house gratis, as 'twas vs'd
Sometime in Greece.

Menc. Well, well, no more of that.
Corio. Thoughe there the people had more absolute powre
I say they norife dibidence: fed, the ruin of the State.

Brut. Why shal the people giue
One that speakes thus, their voyce?
Corio. Ile giue my Rea ons,
More worthier then their Voyces. They know the Corne
Was not our recumpence, refiting well affur'd
They ne're did feruice fort; being pref to'th'Warre,
Even when the Nauell of the State was touch'd,
They would not thred the Gates; This kinde of Seruice
Did not deferve Corne gratis. Being 'tith'Warre,
There Mutinies and Reuolts, wherein they shew'd
Most Valour, spoke not for them. Th'Accufation
Which they have often made against the Senate,
All caufe vnborne, could never be the Natuir
Of our fo franke Donation. Well, what then?
How shal this Bofome-multiplied, digeft
The Senates Courtefe? Let deeds expresse
What's like to be their words, We did request it,
We are the greater pole, and in true feare
They gaue vs our demands. Thus we debafe
The Nature of our Seats, and make the Rabble

Call our Cares, Feares; which will in time
Break e ope the Lockes a' th'Senate, and bring in The Crowes to pecke the Eagles.

Menc. Come enough.

Brut. Enough, with ouer meafeure.

Cor. No, take more.

What may be sworne by, both Diuinie and Humane,
Seale what I end withall. This double worship,
Whereon part do's disdaine with caufce, the other
Inuftall with out all reafon: where Gentry, Title, wisdom
Cannot conclude, but by the yea and no
Of generall Ignorance, it muft omit
Reall Neceffities, and giue way the while
To vnfaftble Slightneffe. Purpoze fo barr'd, it followes,
Nothing is done to purpose. Therefore befeech you,
You that will be lesse fearfull, then discreet,
That loue the Fundamentall part of State
More then you doubt the change on't: That preferre
A Noble life, before a Long, and Wifh,
To iumphe a Body with a dangerous Phyfick,
That's fure of death without it: at once plucked out
The Multitudinous Tongue, let them not licke
The sweet which is their poyson. Your diñ honor
Manges true judgement, and bereaues the State
Of that Integrity which shou'd becom't:
Not hauing the power to do the good it would
For th'il which doth controul't.

Brut. Has faid enough.

Sicin. Ha's fpoken like a Traitor, and shall answer
As Traitors do.

Cor. Thou wretch, defpfight ore-whelme thee:
What should the people do with these bald Tribunes?
On whom depending, their obedience failes
To'th'greater Bench, in a Rebellion:
When what's not meet, but what muft be, was Law,
Then were they choisen: in a better houre,
Let what is meet, be faide it muft be meet,
And throw their power i'th'duift.

Brut. Manifeft Treafon.
Sicin. This a Confiull? No.

Enter an ædile.

Brut. The Ediles hoe: Let him be apprehended:
Sicin. Go call the people, in whose name my Selfe
Attach thee as a Traitorous Innouator:
A Foe to'th'publike Weale. Obey I charge thee,
And follow to thine answer.

Coro. Hence old Goat.
All. We'l Surerly him.

Com. Ag'd fir, hands off.
Coro. Hence rotten thing, or I shall shake thy bones
Out of thy Garments.

Sicin, Helpe ye Citizens.

Enter a rabble of Plebeians with the ædiles.

Menc. On both fides more refpeft.

Sicin. Here's hee, that would take from you all your power.

Brut. Seize him ædiles.

All. Downe with him, downe with him.

2 Sen. Weapons, weapons, weapons:
They all busle about Coriolanus.

Tribunes, Patricians, Citizens: what ho:

Sicin. Brutus, Coriolanus, Citizens.

All. Peace, peace, peace, fray, hold, peace.

Menc. What is about to be? I am out of Breath,
Confusions neere, I cannot speake. You, Tribunes
To'th people: Coriolanus, patience: Speak good Sicin.
Sci. Heare me, People peace.
All. Let's here our Tribune : peace, speake, speake, speake.
Sci. You are at point to lose your Liberties :
Martius would have all from you; Martius,
Whom late you have nam'd for Conful.
Mene. Fie, fie, fie, this is the way to kindle, not to quench.
Sena. To unbuild the Cite, and to lay all flat.
Sci. What is the Cite, but the People?
All. True, the People are the Cite.
Brut. By the conferent of all, we were establisht'd the Peoples Magistrates.
All. You fo remaine.
Mene. And fo are like to doe.
Com. That is the way to lay the Cite flat,
To bring the Roofe to the Foundation,
And burie all, which yet distinfitly raungeth
In heapes, and piles of Ruine.
Sci. This defures Death.
Brut. Or let vs stand by our Authoritie,
And let vs raise it: we do here pronounce,
Vpon the part o'th People, in whose power
We were electted theirs,Martius is worthy Of present Death.
Sci. Therefore lay hold of him:
Beare him toth Rock Tarpeian, and from thence
Into destrucion caft him.
Brut. AEdiles feize him.
All Ple. Yeald Martius, yeald.
Mene. Heare me one word, 'befeech you Tribunes,
Heare me but a word.
AEdiles. Peace, peace.
Mene. Be that you feeme, truly your Countries friend,
And tempitately proceed to what you would
Thus violently redresse.
Brut. Sir, thofe cold wayes,
That feeme like prudent helpers, are very poyfonous,
Where the Difeafe is violent. Lay hands vpon him,
And bear him to the Rock. Corio. drawes bis Sword.
Corio. No, Ile die here :
There's fome among you have haue me fighting,
Come trie vpon your felues, what you haue feene me.
Mene. Downe with that Sword, Tribunes withdraw a while.
Brut. Lay hands vpon him.
Mene. Helpe Martius, helpe : you that be noble, helpe him young and old.
All. Downe with him, downe with him. Exeunt.
In this Matinus, the Tribunes, the AEdiles, and the People are beat in.
Mene. Go, get you to our Houfe: be gone, away,
All will be naught elfe.
2. Sena. Get you gone.
Com. Stand fakst, we haue as many friends as enemies.
Mene. Shall it be put to that?
Sena. The Gods forbid :
I praythee noble friend, home to thy Houfe,
Leave vs to cure this Caufe.
Mene. For 'tis a Sore vpon vs,
You cannot Tent your felfe be gone, 'befeech you.
Corio. Ye, Sir, along with vs.
Mene. I would they were Barbarians, as they are,
Though in Rome litter'd: not Romans, as they are not,
Though call'd i'th Porch o'th Capitoll :
Be gone, put not your worthy Rage into your Tongue,
One time will owe another.
Corio. On faire ground, I could beat fortie of them.
Mene. I could my felfe take vp a Brace o'th beft of them, yea, the two Tribunes.
Com. But now 'tis oddes beyond Arithmetick,
And Manhood is call'd Foolerie, when it stands
Against a felling Fabrick. Will you hence, before the Tagge returnes? whofe Rage doth rend
Like interrupted Waters, and o're-beare
What they are vs'd to beare.
Mene. Pray you be gone:
Ile trie whether my old Wit be in requeft
With thofe that haue but little: this muft be patcht
With Cloth of any Colour.
Com. Nay, come away.

Patri. This man ha's marr'd his fortune.
Mene. His nature is too noble for the World:
He would not flatter Neptune for his Trident,
Or Jove, for power to Thunder: his Heart's his Mouth :
What his Breft forges, that his Tongue muft vent,
And being angry, doe forget: that ever
He heard the Name of Death. A Noise within.
Here's goodly worke.
Patri. I would they were a bed.
Mene. I would they were in Tyber.
What the vengeance, could he not speake 'em faire?
Enter Brutus and Sicinius with the rabbage again.
Sicin. Where is this Viper,
That would depopulate the city, & be every man himself?
Mene. You worthy Tribunes.
Sicin. He shall be throwne downe the Tarpeian rock
With rigorous hands: he hath refifted Law,
And therefore Law shall forme him further Triall
Then the feverity of the publicke Power,
Whiri he fo fets at naught.
1 Cit. He shall well know the Noble Tribunes are
The peoples mouths, and we their hands.
All. He shall fure ou't.
Mr. Do not cry haucke, where you fhood but hunt
With modeft warrant.
Sicin. Sir, how com't that you haue holpe
To make this rescue?
Mene. Heere me speake? As I do know
The Confils worthinesse, fo can I name his Faults.
Sicin. Confull what Confull?
Mene. The Confull Coriolanus.
Brut. He Confull.
All. No, no, no, no, no.
Mene. If by the Tribunes leau'e,
And yours good people,
I may be heard, I would craue a word or two,
The which shall turne you to no further harme,
Then fo much loffe of time.
Sic. Speake briefly then,
For we are peremptory to dispatch
This Viporous Traitor: to eiec't him hence
Were but one danger, and to keepe him heere
Our certaine death therefore it is decreed,
He dyes to night.
Mene. Now the good Gods forbid,
That our renowned Rome, whose grateuflue
Towards her deferved Children, is enrolld
In Ioues owne Booke, like an vvnaturall Dam
Should now eate vp her owne.

Sicin. 614
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

Sicin. He's a Diseafe that must be cut away.

Men. Oh he's a Limbe, that ha's but a Diseafe
Mortal, to cut it off: to cure it, eafe.
What ha's he done to Rome, that's worthy death?
Killing our Enemies, the blood he hath loit
(Which I dare vouch, is more then he hath
By many an Ounce) he dropp'd it for his Country:
And what is left, to loose it by his Country,
Were to vs all that doo't, and suffer it
A brand to th'end a'th World.

Sicin. This is cleane kamme.

Brut. Merely a way:
When he did loue his Country, it honour'd him.

Men. The service of the foote
Being once gangren'd, is not then repected
For what before it was.

Brut. Wee'l hear no more:
Peruse him to his house, and plucke him thence,
Leafe his infection being of catching nature,
Speed further.

Men. One word more, one word:
This Tiger-footed-rage, when it shall find
The harne of vs'nkan'd swiftneffe, will (too late)
Tye Leaden pounds too's heeles. Proceed by Proceffe,
Leafe parties (as he is belou'd) breake out,
And facke great Rome with Romanes.

Brut. If it were so?

Sicin. What do ye talke?
Haue we not had a taste of his Obedience?
Our Edilles thin: our felues refiht: come.

Men. Consider this: He ha's bin bred i'th'Warres
Since a coul'd draw a Sword, and is ill-school'd
In boulted Language: Meale and Bran together
He throwes without difiinition. Give me leave,
Ile go to him, and undertake to bring him in peace,
Where he shall anfwer by a lawfull Forme
(Inc peace) to vtsmost perill.

1 Sen. Noble Tribunes,
It is the humane way: the other course
Will proue to bloody: and the end of it,
Unknowne to the Beginning.

Sic. Noble Meneinus, be you then as the peoples officer
Matters, lay downe your Weapons.

Brut. Go not home.

Sen. Meet on the Market place: wee'l attend you there:
Where if you bring not Martino, wee'll proceede
In our firft way.

Men. Ile bring him to you.
Let me defire your company: he mu't come,
Or what is worft will follow.

Sen. Pray you let's to him.

Exeunt Omnes.

Enter Coriolanus with Nobles.

Corio. Let them pull all about mine ears, prefent me
Death on the Wheelie, or at wilde Horfes heeles,
Or pile ten hilles on the Tarpeian Rocke,
That the precipitation might dwayne stretch
Below the beame of fight: yet will I fill
Be thus to them.

Enter Volumnia.

Noble. You do the Noble.

Corio. I mufe my Mother
Do's not approve me further, who was wont to call them Wollen Vaffailes, things created
To buy and fell with Groats, to fwayne bare heads
In Congregations, to yawne, be fill: and wonder,
When one but of my ordinance ftood vp

To speake of Peace, or Warre, I talke of you,
Why did you with me milder? Would you haue me
Falfe to my Nature? Rather fay, I play
The man I am.

Volum. Oh fir, fir, fir,
I would haue you put your power well on
Before you had wonne it out.

Corio. Let go.

Vt. You might haue beene enough the man you are,
With ftringing leffe to be fo: Leffer had bin
The things of your difpositions, if
You had not fhow'd them how ye were disposed
Ere they lack'd power to croffe you.

Corio. Let them hang,

Volumn. 1, and burne too.

Enter Meneinus with the Senators.

Men. Come, come, you haue bin too rough, somthing too rough you muft returne, and mend it.

Sen. There's no remedy,
Vnlee by not fo doing, our good Citie
Cleaze in the midd't, and perill.

Volumn. Pray be couena'll:
I haue a heart as little apt as yours,
But yet a braine, that leads my vfe of Anger
To better vantage.

Men. Well faid, Noble woman:
Before he fhould thus fupe fo'th'heart, but that
The violent fit a'th'time crues it as Phyficke
For the whole State; I would put mine Armour on,
Which I can fearfully beare.

Corio. What muft I do?

Men. Returne to th'tribunes.

Corio. Well, what then?what then?

Men. Repent, what you have fpoke.

Corio. For them, I cannot do it to the Gods,
Muft I then dou't to them?

Volumn. You are too absolute,
Though therein you can never be too Noble,
But when extremeties fpeake. I haue heard you fay,
Honor and Policy, like vnfeuer'd Friends,
I'th'Warre do grow together: Grant that, and tell me
In Peace, what each of them by th'other loofe,
That they combine not there?

Corio. Thuf, thuf.

Men. A good demand.

Volumn. If it be Honoure in your Warres, to feme
The fame you are not, which for your beft ends
You adopt your policy: How is it leffe or worfe
That it fhall hold Companionhip in Peace
With Honour, as in Warre; since that to both
It flands in like requet.

Corio. Why force you this?

Volumn. Bcaufe, that
Now it lyes you on to fpeake to th'people:
Not by your owne instruction, nor by'th'matter
Which your heart promts you, but with fuch words
That are but rooted in your Tongue;
Though but Baffards, and Syllables
Of no allowance, to your bofomes truth.
Now, this no more difhones you at all,
Then to take in a Towne with gentle words,
Which else would put you to your fortune, and
The hazard of much blood.
I would difemble with my Nature, where
My Fortunes and my Friends at flake, requir'd
I should do fo in Honor. I am in this
Your Wife, your Sonne: These Senators, the Nobles, And you, will rather shew our general Lawes, How you can frowne, then spend a fawne upon 'em, For the inheritance of their louses, and safegard Of what that want might ruine.

Menen. Noble Lady,
Come goe with vs, speake faire: you may faile to, Not what is dangerous prefent, but the loffe Of what is past.

Volum. I pray thee now, my Sonne,
Goe to them, with this Bonnet in thy hand, And thus faire hauing fretch it (here be with them) Thy Knives buffing the ftones: for in fuch businesse Action is eloquence, and the eyes of th'ignorant More learned then the cares, waving thy head, Which often thus correcting thy Stout heart, Now humble as the ripet Mulberry,
That will not hold the handling: or fay to them,
Thou art therir Souldier, and being bred in broyles, Haft not the foft way, which thou doft confesse
Were fit for thee to vfe, as they to clayme, In asking their good lotions, but thou wilt frame Thy felfe (forfich) hereafter theirs fo faire,
As thou haft power and perfon.

Menen. This but done,
Euen as she speakes, why their hearts were yours:
For they have Pardons, being ask'd, as free,
As words to little purpofe.

Volum. Prythee now,
Goe, and be rul'd: although I know thou hadft rather Follow thine Enemy in a ferie Gulfe,
Then flatter him in a Bower.

Here is Cominius.

Com. I have beene i'th Market place: and Sir 'tis fit
You make strong partie, or defend your felve
By calmenefle, or by abfence all's in anger.

Menen. Only faire speach.

Com. I thinke 'twill feruce, if he can thereto frame his spirit.

Volum. He muft, and will:
Prythee now fay you will, and goe about it.

Corio. Muft I goe fhev them my vnbarb'd Scone?
Muft I with my bafe Tongue give to my Noble Heart
A Lye, that it muft beare well? I will do't
Yet were there but this fingle Plot, to loose
This Mould of Martris, they to duff fhould grinde it,
And throo' ait againft the Winde. Toth' Market place:
You haue put me now to fuch a part, which neuer
I fhall difcharge toth' Life.

Com. Come, come, wee le prompt you.

Volum. I prythee now sweet Son, as thou haft faid
My praife made thee firft a Souldier; fo
To haue my praife for this, perfome a part
Thou haft not done before.

Corio. Well, I muft do't:
Away my dispoifion, and poiffe me
Some Harlots spirit: my throat of Warre be turn'd,
Which quier'd with my Drumme into a Pipe,
Small as an Eunuch, or the Virginia voyce
That Babies lull a-fleepe: the fmites of Knaues
Tent in my cheeckes, and Schoole-boy's Teares take vp
The Glazes of my fight: A Beggars Tongue
Make move on through my Lipps, and my Arm'd knees
Who bow'd but in my Stirrup, bend like his
That hath receu'd an Almes. I will not do't,
Leafe I furceafe to honor mine owne truth,

And by my Bodies action, teach my Minde
A moft inherent Bafenefe.

Volum. At thy choice then:
To begge of thee, it is my more dif-honor,
Then thou of them. Come all to ruine, let Thy Mother rather feele thy Pride, then feare
Thy dangerous Stoutneffe: for I mocke at death
With as bigge heart as thou. Do as thou lift;
Thy Valiantneffe was mine, thou fuck'd it from me:
But owle thy Pride thy felve.

Corio. Pray be content:
Mother, I am going to the Market place:
Chide me no more. Ile Mountebanke their Loues,
Cogg their Hearts from them, and come home belou'd
Of all the Trades in Rome. Looke, I am going:
Commend me to my Wife, Ile returne Confuill,
Or neuer trut to what my Tongue can do
I'th way of Flattery further.

Volum. Do your will.

Com. Away, the Tribunes do attend you: arm your self
To answer mildely: for they are prepar'd
With Accusation, but you dare more strong
Then are vpon you yet.

Corio. The word is, Mildely. Pray you let vs go,
Let them accuse me by inuention: I
Will anfwer in mine Honor.

Menen. I, but mildely.

Corio. Well mildely be it then, Mildely. Exeunt

Enter Sicinius and Brutus.

Brut., In this point charge him home, that he affets
Tyrannicall power: If he euade vs there,
Inforce him with his enuy to the people,
And that the Spoile got on the Antias
Was ne're distributed. What, will he come?

Enter an Edile.

Edile. Hee's comming.

Brut. How accompanied?

Edile. With old Memenius, and thofe Senators
That alwaies fauour'd him.

Sic. I have you a Catalogue

Of all the Voices that we haue procur'd, fet downe by th'

Sic. Haue you collected them by Tribes?

Edile. I haue.

Sic. Affemble prefently the people hither:
And when they hear me faie, it fhall be so,
I'th right and strength a'th Commons: be it either
For death, for fine, or Banifhment, then let them
If I faie Fine, cry Fine; if Death, cry Death,
Insifting on the olde prerogative
And power i'th Truth a'th Caufe,

Edile. I fhall informe them.

Brut. And when fuch time they have begun to cry,
Let them not ceafe, but with a daine confus'd
Inforce the prefent Execution
Of what we chance to Sentence.

Edile. Very well.

Sic. Make them be strong, and ready for this hint
When we fhall hap to giu't them.

Brut. Go about it.

Put him to Choller flarie, he hath bene va'd
Euer to conquer, and to haue his worth
Of contradiction. Being once chaft, he cannot Be rein'd againe to Temperance, then he speakes

What's
What's in his heart, and that is there which lookes
With vs to breake his necke.

Enter Corioli,us, Menenius, and Cominio, with others.

Sici. Well, heere he comes.

Mene. Calmely, I do beeche you.

Corio. I, as an Hoftler, that fourth poorest peece
Will bear the Knaue by'th Volume:

Th'honord Goddes
Kepe Rome in safety, and the Chaires of Justice
Supplied with worthy men, plant love amoues
Through our large Temples with fhewes of peace
And not our streets with Warre.

1 Sen. Amen, Amen.

Mene. A Noble with.

Enter the Edile with the Plebeians.

Edile. Lift to your Tribunes. Audience:

Peace I say.

Corio. First hear me speake.

Bob Tri. Well, say: Peace hoo.

Corio. Shall I be charg'd no further then this present?

Must all determine hears?

Sici. I do demand,

If you submit you to the peoples voices,
Allow their Officers, and are content
To suffer lawfull Censure for such faults
As shall be proud upon you.

Corio. I am Content.

Mene. Lo Citizens, he fayes he is Content.
The warlike Service he ha's done, consider: Thinke
Vpon the wounds his body beares, which fhew
Like Graues i'th holy Church-yard.

Corio. Scratches with Briars, scarres to move
Laughter onely.

Mene. Consider further:

That when he speakes not like a Citizen,
You finde him like a Soldier: do not take
His rauower Actions for malicious sounds:
But as I say, such as become a Soldier,
Rather then envy you.

Com. Well, well, no more.

Corio. What is the matter,
That being past for Consull with full voyce:
I am so dihonour'd, that the very houre
You take it off againe.

Sici. Answer to vs.

Corio. Say then: 'tis true, I ought so

Sici. We charge you, that you haue contrib'd to take
From Rome all season'd Office, and to winde
Your selfe into a power tyrannical,
For which you are a Traitor to the people.

Corio. How? Traytor?

Corio. The fires i'th'lowest hell. Fould in the people:
Call me their Traitor, thou injurious Tribune.
Within thine eyes feate twenty thousand deaths
In thys hands clutcht: as many Millions in Thy lying tongue, both numbers. I would say
Thou lyest vnto thee, with a voice as free,
As I do praye the Gods.

Sici. Marke you this people?

All. To'th'Rockey, to'th'Rockey with him.

Sici. Peace:

We neede not put new matter to his charge:
What you have seene him do, and heard him speake:

Beating your Officers, cursing your felues,
Opposing Lawes with strokes, and heere defying
Those whose great power must try him.

Euen this so criminally, and in such capital kinde
Defeues th'extreamest death.

Bru. But since he hath feru'd well for Rome.

Corio. What do you prate of Seruice.

Bru. I talke of that, that know it.

Corio. You?

Mene. Is this the promise that you made your mother.

Com. Know, I pray you.

Corio. Ile know no further:

Let them pronounce the fierce Tarpeian death,
Vagabond exiling, Pleaing, pent to linger
But with a graine a day, I would not buy
Their mercie, at the price of one faire word,
Nor cheeke my Courage for what they can glue,

To haue't with faying, Good morrow.

Sici. For that he ha's

(As much as in him lies) from time to time
Emul' against the people: seeking meanes
To plucke away their power: as now at last,
Guen Hoftile strokes, and that not in the presence
Of dreaded Justice, but on the Minifters
That doth distribute it. In the name a'th'people,
And in the power of vs the Tribunes, vee
(Ex'n from this infant) banish him our Citie
In peril of precipitation
From off the Rocke Tarpeian, neuer more
To enter our Rome gates. I'th'Peoples name,
I say it shall bee fo.

All. It shall be fo, it shall be fo: let him away:

Hee's banish'd, and it shall be fo.

Com. Hear me my Matters, and my common friends.

Sici. He's sentenc'd: No more hearing.

Com. Let me speake:

I haue bene Confull, and can shew from Rome
Her Enemies markes vpon me. I do loue
My Countires good, with a respect'more tender,
More holy, and profound, then mine owne life,
My deere Wives effiminate, her wombes creafare,
And treasur of my Loynes: then if I would Speake that.

Sici. We know your drift Speake what?

Bru. There's no more to be fald, but he is banish'd

As Enemy to the people, and his Country.

It shall bee fo.

All. It shall be fo, it shall be fo.

Corio. You common cry of Curs, whose breath I hate,
As recke a'th'rotten Pennes: whose Loues I prize,
As the dead Carkaffes of vnburied men,
That do corrupt my Ayre: I banish you,
And heere remaine with your uncertainitie.
Let every feeble Rumor shake your hearts:
Your Enemies,with nodding of their Plumes
Fan you into dispaire: Haue the power hill
To banish your Defenders, till at length
Your ignorance (which findes not till it feeles,
Making but referuation of your foules,
Still your owne Poes) deliuer you
As moft abated Captives, to some Nation
That wonne you without blowes, despising
For you the City. Thus I turne my backe;
There is a world elsewhere.

Exeunt Corioli,us, Cominius, with Cumals.

They all fsto, and throw up their Caps.

Edile.
Of the warres surfetis, to goe rouse with one
That's yet vnbruis'd : bring me but out at gate.
Come my sweet wife, my dearest Mother, and
My Friends of Noble touch : when I am forth,
Bid me farewell, and finifie. I pray you come:
While I remaine above the ground, you shall Hear from me still, and newer of me ought
But what is like me formerly.

MENEN. That's worthily
As any care can heare. Come, let's not weepe,
If I could shake off but one yeuer yeares
From these old armes and legges, by the good Gods
I'd with thee, euyer foot.

Corio. Give me thy hand, come.

Exit the two Tribunes, Sicinius, and Brutus, with the Edile.

SICIN. Bid them all home, he's gone; we'll no further,
The Nobility are vexed, whom we fee haue fided
In his behalf.

BRUT. Now we haue shewne our power,
Let vs feeeme humbler after it is done,
Then when it was a doing.

SICIN. Bid them home: say their great enemy is gone,
And they, stand in their ancient strength.

BRUT. Dizimifie them home. Here comes his Mother.

Enter Volumnia, Virgilia, and Menenius.

SICIN. Let's not see her.

BRUT. Why?

SICIN. They say she's mad.

BRUT. They have tane note of vs: keep e in your way.

VOLUM. Oh y'are well met:
Th'hoorded plague a'th'Gods requit your love.

MENEN. Peace, peace, be not so loud.

VOLUM. If that I could for weeping, you shoud hear,
Nay, and you shold hear some. Will you be gone?

VIRG. You shall stay too: I would I had the power
To lay fo to my Husband.

SICIN. Are you mankinde?

VOLUM. I foole, is that a shame. Note but this Foole,
Was not a man my Father? Had't thou Foxhip
To banish him that strooke more blowes for Rome
Then thou haue spoken words.

SICIN. Oh bleseed Heauens!

VOLUM. Moe Noble blowes, then euery word of wife words.
And for Rome good, Ile tell thee what: yet goe:
Nay but thou shalt stay too: I would my Sonne
Were in Arabia, and thy Tribe before him,
His good Sword in his hand.

SICIN. What then?

VIRG. What then? Hee'd make an end of thy potestity

VOLUM. Baffarts, and all.

Good man, the Wounds that he does beare for Rome!

MENEN. Come, come, peace.

SICIN. I would he had continued to his Country
As he began, and not vnknit himself.

The Noble knot he made.

BRUT. I would he had.

VOLUM. I would he had? 'Twas you incens'd the rable.

CATS, that can judge as tely of his worth,
As I can of those Mysterles which heauen
Will not haue earth to know.

BRUT. Pray let's go.

VOLUM. Now pray sir get you gone.

You have done a brave deed: Ere you go, heare this:
As farre as doth the Capitoll exceede
The meanest house in Rome; so farre my Sonne
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

This Ladies Husband hearc; this (do you fice) Whom you have banish’d, does exceed you all.

"Brue. Well, well, wee’ll leave you.
Sicin. Why flay we to be baited
With one that wants her Wits.
Volumn. Take my Prayers with you.
I would the Gods had nothing else to do,
But to confirm my Curses. Could I meete ‘em
But once a day, it would vnclogge my heart
Of what lyes heavy too’t.
Mene. You have told them home,
And by my troth you have caufe: you’ll Sup with me.
Volumn. Angers my Meate: I fappe upon my felfe,
And fo flall fteer with Feeding: Come, let’s go,
Leave this faint-puling, and lament as I do,
In Anger, lams-like: Come, come, come.
Mene. Fie, fie, fie.
Exit.
Enter a Roman, and a Voice.

Rom. I know you well sir, and you know mee: your name I thinkes is Adrian.
Voice. It is fofir, truly I have forgot you.
Rom. I am a Roman, and my Service are as you are, against’em. Know you me yet.
Rom. The fame fir.
Voice. You had more Beard when I left faue you,
but your Faour is well appear’d by your Tongue.
This is the Newes in Rome: I have a Note from the Volcean fawe to finde you out there.
You have well faued mee a dayes Journey.
Rom. There hath beene in Rome itraunge Inffections: The people, againft the Senators, Patricians, and Nobles.
Vol. Hath bin; is it ended then? Our State thinkes not fo, they are in a moft warlike preparation, & hope to come upon them, in the heat of their diuision.
Rom. The maine blaze of it is past, but a fmall thing would make it flame againe. For the Nobles receyve fo to heart, the Banifhment of that worthy Corioli, that they are in a ripe aptneffe, to take al power from the people, and to plucke from them their Tribunes for ever. This lyes glowing I can tell you, and is almost mature for the violent breaking out.
Vol. Coriolius Banifh’d?
Rom. Banifh’d fir.
Vol. You will be welcome with this intelligence Nicanor.
Rom. The day ferves well for them now. I have heard it faide, the fittest time to corrupt a mans Wife, is when fhee’s faue out with her Husband. Your Noble Tullius Aufidius well appear well in these Warres, his great Oppofer Coriolius being now in no request of his country.
Voice. He cannot choose: I am moft fortunate, thus accidentally to encounter you. You have ended my Busineffe, and I will merrily accompany you home.
Rom. I shall betweene this and Supper, tell you moft strange things from Rome: all tending to the good of their Adueraries. Have you an Army ready fay you?
Vol. A moft Royall one: The Centurions, and their charges distinctly billetted already in the entertainment, and to be on foot at an hours warning.
Rom. I am joyfull to heare of their readiness, and am the man I thinkes, that fhall fet them in preuent Action. So fir, heartily well met, and moft glad of your Company.
Voice. You take my part from me fir, Ihave the moft caufe to be glad of yours.
Rom. Well, let vs go together. Exeunt.
Enter Coriozianus in meane Apparell, Diffguift, and muffed.
Corio. A goodly City is this Antium. Cityy,
’Tis I that made thy Widdowes: Many an heyre Of thefe faire Edifices lore my Warres
Haue I heard groane, and drop: Then know me not,
Leaf that thy Wives with Spins, and Boyes with flones
In puny Battell flay me. Save you fir.
Enter a Citizen.
Cit. And you.
Corio. Direc’t me, if it be your will, where great Auffi-fidius lyes: Is he in Antium?
Cit. He is, and Feasts the Nobles of the State, at his houfe this night.
Corio. Which is his houfe, befeech you?
Cit. This here be fore you.
Corio. Thanneke you fir, farewell. Exit Citizen.
Oh World, they flippery turns! Friends now falt worn,
Whofe double bonomes frames to weare one heart,
Whofe Houres, whose Bed, whose Mefale and Exercife
Are fitt together: who Twin (as twere)in Loue,
Unfeparables, shall within this houre,
On a defention of a Doit, breake out
To bittere Enmity: So fellefe Foes,
Whofe Paffions, and whofe Plots have broke their flEEP
To take the one the other, by fome chance,
Some tricke not worth an Egge, shall grow deere friends
And inter-lyne their yffues. So with me,
My Birth-place haue I, and my loues upon
This Enemie Towne: Ile enter, ifhe flay me
He does faire Iuflice: ifhe give me way,
Ile do his Country Service. Exit.
Musicke plays. Enter a Servifaman.

Enter another Servifaman.

Enter Coriolanus.
Corio. A goodly Hous:
The Feast fitnes well: but I appearr not like a Guett.
Enter the first Servifaman.

1 Ser. What would you haue Friend? whence are you? Here’s no place for you: Pray go to the doore?
Exit Corio. I haue deferued no better entertainment, in being Coriolius.
Enter second Servant.

2 Ser. Whence are you fir? Ha’s the Porter his eyes in his head, that he gues entrance to fuch Companions? Pray get you out.
Corio. Away.

2 Ser. Away? Get you away.
Corio. Now th’art troublesome.

2 Ser. Are you to braue: Ile haue you talkt with anon
Enter 3 Servifaman, the 1 meets him.

3 What Fellowes this?

1 A strange one as euere I look’d on: I cannot get him out o’th’houfe: Prythee call me my Master to him.
3 What have you to do here fellow? Pray you avoid the houfe.
Corio. Let me but fland, I will not hurt your Harth.
3 What are you?
Corio. A Gentleman.

3 A marvellous poore one.
Corio. True,yo I am.
3 Pray you poore Gentleman, take vp some other Sta- tion,
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

1. Here's a strange alteration?

2. By my hand, I had thought to have spoken him with a cudgel, and yet my minde gave me, his cloathes made a false report of him.

1. What an Arme he has, he turn'd me about with his finger and his thumb, as one would set vp a Top.

2. Nay, I knew by his face that there was some-thing in him. He had fi, a kind of face me thought, I cannot tell

Th'art ty'd, then in a word, I alfo am
Longer to liue moft wareis: and pretent
My throat to thee, and to thy Ancient Malice:
Which not to cut, would shew thee but a Foole,
Sinfull I have ever followed thee with hate,
Drawne Tunnels of Blood out of thy Countries breth,
And cannot liue but to thy flame, vnlffe
It be to do thee seruice.

A. Oh Martiius, Martius;
Each word thou haft spoke, thou hast weed from my heart
A roote of Ancient Envy. If Jupiter
Should from yond clowd speake diuine things,
And say 'tis true; I do not beleue them more
Then thee all-Noble Martius. Let me twine
Mine armes about that body, where against
My grated Ash an hundred times hath broke,
And can't the Moone with splineters: heere I sleep
The Anuile of my Sword, and do conteile
As hotly, and as Nobly with thy Lone,
As euer in Ambitious strength, I did
Contend against thy Valour. Know thou firft,
I lou'd the Maid I married: newer man
Sigh'd truer breath. But that I fee thee heere
Thou Noble thing, more dances my rapt heart,
Then when I firft my wedded Miftris saw
Bestride my Throhhold. Why, thou Mars I tell thee,
We haue a Power on foote: and I had purpofe
Once more to hew thy Target from thy Brawne,
Or loafe mine Arme for't: Thou haft beate mee out
Twelve feueral times, and I haue nightly since
Dreadt of encounters 'twixt thy felle and me:
We haue beene downe together in my deep,
Vnbuckling Helmes, fitting each others Throat,
And wak'd halfe dead with nothing. Worthy Martius,
Had we no other querrall els to Rome, but that Thoy art thence Banifh'd, we would mutter all
From twelue, to feuentie: and powring Warre
Into the bowels of vngrateful Rome,
Like a bold Flood o're-beate. Oh come, go in,
And take our Friendly Senators by'th'hands
Who now are fleere, taking their leaues of mee,
Who am prepar'd against your Territories,
Though not for Rome it felle.

C. You bleffe me Gods.

A. Therefore make up, Sir, if thou wilt have
The leading of thine owne Reuenges, take
Th'halfe of my Commißion, and fet downe
As beft thou art experience'd, fince thou know'ft
Thy Countries strength and weakneffe, thine owne waies
Whether to knocke against the Gates of Rome,
Or rudeely viſit them in parts remote,
To fright them, ere defroy. But come in,
Let me commend thee firft, to thofe that fhall
Say yea to thy defires. A thousand welcomes,
And more a Friend, then ere an Enemy,
Yet Martius that was much. Your hand: moft welcome.

Enter two of the Seruings.

Exit two of the Seruings.

1. Here's no place for you, pray you avoid: Come.

C. Follow your Function, go, and batten on colde bits. Pufhes him away from him.

3. What you will not? Prythee tell me Master what a strange Guest he is here.

2. And I shall enter. Exit second Seruingsman.

3. Where dwel'ft thou?

C. Under the Canopy.

3. Vnder the Canopy?

C. I.

3. Where's that?

C. 1th City of Kites and Crowes.

1. I'th City of Kites and Crowes? What an Affe it is, then thou dwel'ft with Dawes too?

C. No, I ferue not thy Master.

3. How fir? Do you meddle with my Master?

C. I, tis an honefter curie, then to meddle with thy Miftris: Thou prat'R, and prat'R, ferue with thy trencher: Hence, Beats him away.

Enter Auffidius with the Seruingsman.

A. Where is this Fellow?

3. Here fir, I haue beaten him like a dogge, but for disturbing the Lords within.

A. Whence com'ft thou? What wouldst? Thy name?
Why Speak'ft not? Speake man: What's thy name?

C. If Tailius not yet thou know'ft me, and seeing me, doft not thinke for the man I am, necceffitie commands me name my felfe.

A. What is thy name?

C. A name vnumuscall to the Volcians eares,
And harf in found to thine.

A. What is thy name?

C. Thou haft a Grim appearance, and thy Face
Beares a Command in't: Though thy Tackles torne,
Thou fhw'ft a Noble Veffell: What's thy name?

C. Prepare thy brow to frowne,know'ft ye me yet?

A. I know thee not? Thy Name?

C. My name is Caius Martius, who hath done
To thee particularly, and to all the Volces
Great hurt and Mifchief: thereto witnesse may
My Surname Coriolanus. The painfull Seruice,
The extreme Dangers, and the droppes of Blood
Shed for thy thanklesse Country, are requited:
But with that Surname, a good memorie
And witneffes of the Malice and DispleASURE
Which thou should'ft heare me, only that name remains.
The Cruelty and Enuy of the people,
Permitted by our daffard Nobles, who
Have all farreooke me, hath dewour'd the reft:
And suffer'd me by th'voyage of Slaves to be Ho'od out of Rome. Now this extremity,
Hath brought me to thy Harth, not out of Hope
(Mitake me not) to faue my life: for if
I had fear'd death, of all the Men I'be'World
I would have volded thee. But in meere fighnt
To be full quit of thofe my Banilhers,
Stand I before thee heere: Then if thou haft
A heart of wreake in thee, that wilt reuenge
Thine owne particular wrongs, and stop thofe maimes
Of thame scene through thy Country, fpeed thee fraught
And make my misfery fure thy turne: So vfe it,
That my reuengefull Seruices may proue
As Benefits to thee. For I will fight
Against my Cankred Country, with the Spleene
Of all the vnder Fiends. But if fo be,
Thou dar'ft not this, and that to proue more Fortunes tell how to tearme.
1 He had so looking as it were, would I were hang'd
but I thought there was more in him, then I could think.
2 So did I, I'll be sworne: He is simply the rarest man
i' th' world.
1 I think he is: but a greater soldier then he,
You wot one.
2 Who my Master?
1 Nay, it's no matter for that.
2 Worth fix on him.
1 Nay not so neither: but I take him to be the greater Souldier.
2 Faith looke you, one cannot tell how to say that for the Defence of a Towne, our General is excellent.
1 I, and for an assault too.

Enter the third Servant man.
3 Oh Slaves, I can tell you Newes, News you Rafcals
3 I would not be a Roman of all Nations; I had as lieue be a condemm'd man.
Both. Wherefore? Wherefore?
3 Why here's he that was wont to thwacke our General, Caius Martius.
1 Why do you say, thwacke our Generall?
3 I do not say thwacke our Generall, but he was always good enough for him
2 Come we are fellows and friends; he was euer too hard for him, I have heare him say so himselfe.
1 He was too hard for him directly, to say the Throth
'nt before Corioles, he scotch't him, and notcht him like a Carabinado,
2 And hee had bin Cannibly gien, hee might have boyld and eaten him too.
1 But more of thy Newes.
3 Why he is so made on heere within, as if hee were Son and Heire to Mars, set at vpper end o' th' Table: No quall askt him by any of the Senators, but they stand bald before him. Our General himselfe makes a Misfris of him, Sanctifies himselfe with's hand, and turns vp the white o' th' eye to his Discouer. But the bottome of the Newes is, our Generall is cut i' th'middle, & but one halfe of what he was yesterday. For the other ha's halfe, by the intreaty and graunt of the whole Table. He'll go he fayes, and folle the Porter of Rome Gates by th'eares. He will move all downe before him, and leave his puffage pou'd.
2 And he's as like to do't, as any man I can imagine.
3 Doo't? he will doo't: for look you sir, he has as many Friends as Enemies: which Friends fir as it were, durft not (look ye fir) shew themselues (as we terme it) his Friends, whilst he's in Direcitude.
1 Direcitude? What's that?
3 But when they shall see fir, his Creft vp againe, and the man in blood, they will out of their Burroughes (like Conies after Raine) and reunel all with him.
1 But when goes this forward:
3 To morrow, to day, prefently, you shall have the Drum frook vp this afternoone: 'Tis as it were a parcel of their Frayt, and to be executed ere they wipe their lips.
2 Why then wee shall have a flirling World againe:
This peace is nothing, but to ruft Iron, encreas Taylors, and breed Ballad-makers.
1 Let me haue Warre say I, it excedes peace as farre as day do's: night: It's sprightly walking, audible, and full of Vent. Peace, is a very Apoplexy, Lethargie, mull'd, deafe, sleep'y, infensible, a getter of more bafurd Children, then wares a defroyer of men.
2 'Tis fo, and as wares in some fort may be faide to be a Rauisher, fo it cannot be denied, but peace is a great maker of Cuckolds.
1 I, and it makes men hate one another.
3 Reaeon, because they then leffe needle one another:
The Warres for my money. I hope to see Romanes as cheape as Volcians. They are rising, they are rising.
Both. In, in, in, in. Exeunt

Sicin. We heare not of him, neither need we fear him,
His remedies are tame, the present peace,
And quietnesse of the people, which before
Were in wilde hury. Heere do we make his Friends
Blufh, that the world goes well: who rather had,
Though they themselfes did suffer by't, behold
Diffentent numbers pestring streets, then fee
Our Trade'men finging in their shops, and going
About their Functions friendly.

Enter Menenius.

Bru. We flood too't in good time. Is this Menenius?
Sicin. 'Tis he, 'tis he, & he is grown moft kind of late:
Haile Sir.
Mene. Haile to you both.

Sicin. Your Coriolanus is not much mist, but with his Friends: the Commonwealth doth stand, and so would do, were he more angry at it.
Mene. All's well, and might have bene much better,
if he could haue temperiz'd.
Sicin. Where is he, heare you?
Mene. Nay I heare nothing:
His Mother and his wife, heare nothing from him.

Enter three or four Citizens.

All. The Gods preferue you both.
Sicin. Gooden our Neighbours.
Bru. Gooden to you all, gooden to you all.
1 Our selues, our wives, and children, on our knees,
Are bound to pray for you both.
Sicin. Lieue, and thraue.
Bru. Farewell kinde Neighbours:
We wiht Coriolanus had lou'd us as we did.
All. Now the Gods kepe you.
Beth Tri. Farewell, farewell.
Sicin. This is a happier and more comely time,
Then when these Fellowes ran about the streets,
Crying Confussion.
Bru. Caius Martius was
A worthy Officer i' th' Warre, but Infolent,
O'recome with Pride, Ambitious,paft all thinking
Selfe-louing;
Sicin. And affecting one fol Previous Throne, without affect Mene. I think not so.
Sicin. We shold by this, to all our Lamention,
If he had gone forth Conful, found it fo.
Bru. The Gods haue well prevented it, and Rome
Sits safe and still, without him.

Enter an Edile.
Edile. Worthy Tribunes,
There is a Slave whom we have put in prizon,
Reports the Voles with two feuerall Powers
Are entred in the Roman Territories,
And with the deepest malice of the Warre,
Defroy, what lies before em.
Mene. 'Tis Auffidius,
Who hearing of our Martius Banishment,
Thrufts forth his horses againe into the world
Which were In-sell'd, when Martius flood for Rome,
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

The breath of Garlick-eaters.
Com. Hee'll shake your Rome about your eares.
Mene. As Hercules did shake downe Mellow Fruite:
You have made faire worke.
Bru. But is this true sir?
Com, I, and you'll looke pale
Before you finde it other. All the Regions
Do smilingly Reuolt, and who refuits
Are mock'd for valiant ignorance,
And perhps conftant Foolies: who is't can blame him?
Your Enemies and his, finde something in him.
Mene. We are all vndone, vnleffe
The Noble man haue mercy.
Com. Who shall ask it?
The Tribunes cannot doot for flame ; the people
Deferue such pitty of him, as the Wolfe
Doe's of the Shepheards: For his beft Friends, if they Should say be good to Rome, they charg'd him, even
As tho' should do that had deferu'd his hate,
And therein shew'd like Enemies.
Mr. Tis true, if he were putting to my houfe, the brand
That should consume it, I haue not the face
To say, befeech you caefe. You have made faire hands,
You and your Crafts, you have crafted faire.
Com. You have brought
A Trembling upon Rome, such as was never S'incapeable of helpe.
Tri. Say not, we brought it.
Mene. How? Was't we? We lou'd him,
But like Beasts, and Cowardly Nobles,
Gauce way vnto your Clutteres, who diho hoote
Him out o'th'Citty.
Com. But I feare
They'll roare him in againe. Tullus Auffidius,
The second name of men, obayes his points
As if he were his Officer : Diferation,
Is all the Policy, Strength, and Defence
That Rome can make against them.
Enter a Troope of Citizens.
Mene. Heere come the Clutteres.
And is Auffidius with him? You are they
That made the Ayre vnwholome, when you caft
Your flinking, greafe Caps, in hooting
At Coriolanus Exile. Now he's comming,]
And not a hair upon a Souldiers head
Which will not proue a whip : As many Coxcombes
As you throw Caps vp, will he tumble downe,
And pay you for your voyces. "Tis no matter,
If he could burne vs all into oue coale,
We haue deferu'd it.
Omnes. Faith, we haue fearfull Newes.
1 Cit. For mine owne part,
When I said banish him, I said 'twas pitty.
2. And fo did I.
3 And fo did I: and to say the truth,
so did very many of vs, that we did di one for the beft, and though wee willingly confused to his Banishment, yet it was against our will.
Com. Y'are goodly things, you Voyces.
Mene. You haue made good worke
You and your cry. Shal's to the Capittol?
Com. Oh! what clfe?
Sicin. Go Maffers get you home, be not dismaid,
These are a Side, that would be glad to have
This true, which they feeme to feare. Go home,
And shew no signe of Feare.
1 Cit.
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

Come let's away: when Caius Rome is thine, Thou art poor'rt of all; then shortly art thou mine.\textit{Exeunt}

\textbf{Actus Quintus.}

\textit{Enter Menenius, Cominius, Sicinius, Brutus, the two Tribunes, with others.}

\textbf{Menen.} No, Ile not go: you heare what he hath said Which was sometime his General: who loved him In a most deere particular. He call'd me Father: But what o' that? Go you that banish'd him A Mile before his Tent, fall downe, and kneel The way into his mercy: Nay, if he coy'd To heare Cominius speake, Ile keepe at home.

\textbf{Com.} He would not feeme to knowe me.

\textbf{Menen.} Do you heare that?

\textbf{Com.} Yet one time he did call me by my name: I vrg'd our old acquittance, and the drops That we haue bled together. \textit{Coriolanus} He would not answr too: Forbad all Names, He was a kinde of Nothing, Titleleffe, Till he had forg'd himselfe a name a'th'fire Of burning Rome.

\textbf{Com.} I minded him, how Royall 'twas to pardon When it was leffe expected. He replied It was a bare petition of a State To one whom they had punish'd.

\textbf{Menen.} Very well, could he say leffe.

\textbf{Com.} I offered to awaken his regard For's private Friends. His answr to me was He could not flay to picke them, in a pile Of noyfome mufly Chaffe. He said, 'twas folly For one poore graine or two, to leave vnburnt And flill to nofe th'offence.

\textbf{Menen.} For one poore graine or two? I am one of thofe: his Mother, Wife, his Childe, And this brave Fellow too: we are the Graines, You are the mufly Chaffe, and you are flmelt Above the Moone. We must be burnt for you.

\textbf{Sicini.} Nay, pray be patient: If you refuse your ayde In this so neuer-needed helpe, yet do not Vpbraid's with our diftreffe. But sure if you Would be your Countries Pleader, your good tongue More then the inftant Armic we can make Might ftrop our Couthryman.

\textbf{Men.} No: Ile not meddle.

\textbf{Sicini.} Pray you go to him.

\textbf{Men.} What fhould I do?

\textbf{Brau.} Onely make triall what your Loue can do, For Rome, towards \textit{Martius}.

\textbf{Men.} Well, and way that \textit{Martius} returne mee, As \textit{Cominius} is return'd, vnheard: what then? But as a difcontented Friend, greefe-shot With his vnkindneffe. Say't be fo?

\textbf{Sicini.} Yet your good will Muft haue that thankes from Rome, after the meafure As you intended well.

\textbf{Men.} Ile vnderfak't:

I thinke he'll heare me. Yet to bite his lip, And humme at good \textit{Cominius,} much vnhearts mee.
Sirra, thou Exeunt. Nay, but From thee. To glue or to forgive, but when we have stuff Thee Pipes, and thee Conveyances of our blood With Wine and Feeding, we have supped Soles Then in our Priest-like Fasts: therefore Ile watch him Till he be dieted to my request, And then Ile set upon him.

Brus. You know the very rode into his kindnesse, And cannot lose your way.

Men. Good faith Ile prove him, Speed how it will. I shall ere long, haue knowledge Of my successe. Exit.

Com. Hee'le neuer heare him.

Stein. Not.

Com. I tell you, he doe's fit in Gold, his eye Red as 'twould burne Rome: and his Injur[y The Gaoler to his pitty. I kneel'd before him, 'Twas very faintly he said Rife: dilumine me Thus with his speechlesse hand. What he would do He fent in writing after me: what he would not, Bind with an Oath to yeeld to his conditions: So that all hope is vaine, unlesse his Noble Mother, And his Wife, who (as I heare) meanes to sollicite him For mercy to his Country: therefore let's hence, And with our faire intreaties haft them on.

Enter Menenius to the Watch or Guard.

1. Wat. Stay: whence are you.

2. Wat. Stand, and go backe.

Me. You guard like men, 'tis well. But by your leave, I am an Officer of State, & come to speake with Coriolanus.

1. You may not passe, you must returne: our Generall will no more haere from thence.

2. You'll fee your Rome embrac'd with fire, before You'll speake with Coriolanus.

Men. Good my Friends, If you have heard your Generall talke of Rome, And of his Friends there, it is Lots to Blanke, My name hath touch't your ears: it is Menenius.

1. Be it fo, go back: the vertue of your name, Is not here to paifie.

Me. I tell thee Fellow, Thy Generall is my Lourer: I haue beene The book of his good Acts, whence men haue read His Fame vnparallell'd, happily amplifie; For I haue euer verified my Friends, (Of whom hee's cheefe) with all the fize that vertity Would without laping suffere: Nay, sometymes, Like to a Bowle vpon a suble ground I haue tumbled past the throw: and in his praffe Haue (almoft) flampt the Leaping. Therefore Fellow, I muft haue leave to passe.

1. Faith Sir, if you had told as many lies in his behalfe, as you haue vterted words in your owne, you shou'd not passe here: no, though it were as vertuous to lyse, as to live chafily. Therefore go backe.

Men. Prythee fellow, remember my name is Menenius, always faide amister on the party of your Generall.

2. Howfoever you haue bin his Lier, as you say you haue, I am one that telling true vnder him, muft say you cannot passe. Therefore go backe.

Men. Ha's he din'd can't thou tell? For I would not speake with him, till after dinner.

1. You are a Roman, are you?

Men. I am as thy Generall is.

1. Then you should hate Rome, as he do's. Can you, when you haue puft out your gates, the very Defender of them, and in a violent popular ignorance, giv'en your enemy your shield, thinke to front his reunions with the easie groanes of old women, the Virginall Palms of your daughters, or with the pasled interfichion of such a decay'd Dotant as you seems to be? Can you think to blow out the intended fire, your City is ready to flame in, with such weake breath as this? No, you are deceu'd, therefore backe to Rome, and prepare for your execution: you are condemn'd, our Generall has sworne you out of reprieve and pardon.

Men. Sirra, if thy Captaine knew I were heere, He would vie me with extimation.

1. Come, my Captaine knowes you not.

Men. I meane thy Generall.

Men. Nay but Fellow, Fellow.

Enter Coriolanus with Auffidius.

Corio. What's the matter?

Men. Now you Companion: Ile say an arrant for you: you shall know now that I am in extimation: you shall perceiue, that a Jacke gardant cannot office me from my Son Coriolanus, gueffe but my entertainment with him: if thou stand't not 'tis flate of hanging, or of some death more long in Speculorthip, and crueler in suffering, behold now prefently, and fwoond for what's to come vpon thee. The glorious Gods fit in hourly Synod about thy particular prosperiti, and loue thee no worfe then thy old Father Menenius do's. O my Son, my Son! thou art preparing fire for us: looke thee, here's water to quench it. I was hardly moused to come to thee: but being affuured none but my selfe could moue thee, I haue bene blowne out of your Gates with fighes: and coniure thee to pardon Rome, and thy petitionary Countrimen. The good Gods affwage thy wrath, and turne the dregs of it, vpon this Varlet here: This who like a blocke hath denied my acceffe to thee.

Corio. Away.

Men. How? Away?

Corio. Wife, Mother, Child, I know not. My affaires Are Seruanted to others: Though I owe My Reuenge properly, my remil lions lie In Volcan breeds. That we have bene familiar, In grate forgetfulness shall poison rather Then pitty: Note how much, therefore be gone. Mine care against your sutes, are stronger then Your gates against my force. Yet for I loved thee, Take this along, I write it for thy sake, And would haue sent it. Another word Menenius, I will not heare thee speake. This man Auffidius Was my belou'd in Rome: yet thou behold it.

Auffid. You keepe a contant temper.

Men. you keep the Guard and Menenius.

1. Now sir, is your name Menenius?

2. 'Tis a spell you fee of much power: You know the way home again.

1. Do you heare how wee are fent for keeping your greatness backe?

2. What caufe do you thinke I haue to fwoond?

Menen. I neither care for th'world, nor your Generall: for such things as you, I can scarce thinke ther's any,y'are so slight. He that hath a will to die by himselfe, feares it not.
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

not from another: Let your Generall do his wort. For you, bee that you are, long; and your mylery encreafe with your age. I say to you, as I was faid to, Away. Exit.
1 A Noble Fellow I warrant him.
2 The worthy Fellow is our General. He’s the Rock,
The Oak not to be winde-shaken. Exit Watch.

Enter Coriolanus and Aufidius.

Corio. We will before the walls of Rome to morrow
Set downe our Hoaft. My partner in this Action,
You must report to th’Volcan Lords, how plainly
I have borne this Bufeinesse.

AUF. Onely their ends you have respect’d,
Stop your eares against the general fuite of Rome.
Never admitted a priuat whisper, no not with fuch frends
That thought them sure of you.

Corio. This laft old man,
Whom with a crack’d heart I have fent to Rome,
Lou’d me, aboue the meafure of a Father,
Nay godded me indeed. Their late refuge
Was to fend him: for whom old Loue I haue
(Though I fhew’d fowrely to him) once more off’red
The firft Conditions which they fhould refufe,
And cannot now accept, to grace him onely,
That thought he could do more: A very little
I have yeeded too, Freth Embaffes, and Suftes,
Nor from the State, nor priuate friends hereafter
Will I lend ear to. Ha! what fhout is this? Shut within Shall I be tempted to infringe my vow
In the fame time ’tis made: I will not.

Enter Virgill. Volusnia, Valeria, Yong Martius, with Attendants.

My wife comes form’d, then the honour’d mould
Wherein this Trunk was fram’d, and in her hand
The Grandchild to her blood. But out affeftion,
All bond and priuilege of Nature breakt;
Let it be Vertuous to be Obflinate.
What is that Curt’fie worth? Or thofe Doues eyes,
Which can make Gods forforne? I melt, and am not
Of stronger earth then others: my Mother bowes,
As if Olympus to a Mole-hill fhow’d
In Supplication No’d: and my yong Boy
Hath an Afpeft of interceffion, which Great Nature cries, Deny not. Let the Voices
Plough Rome, and harrow Italy, Ile neuer
Be fuch a Golling to obey infinquit; but fland
As if a man were Author of himfelf, & knew no other kin
Virgil. My Lord and Husband.

These efe are not the fame I wore in Rome.

Virg. The sorrow that deliverus vs thang’d,
Makes you thinke fo.

Corio. Like a dull Actor now, I have forgot my part,
And I am out, even to a full Diigrace. Beft of my Flesh,
Forgive my Tyranny: but do not fay,
For that forgive our Romanes. O a kiffe
Long as my Exile, sweet as my Reuenge!
Now by the jealous Queene of Heauen, that kiffe
I caried from thee deare; and my true Lippe
Hath Virg’nd it ere fine. You Gods, I pray,
And the moft noble Mother of the world
Leave vnfaluted: Sinkde my knee I th’earth,
Of thy deepes duty, more impreffion fwear,
Then that of common Sonnes.

Volum. Oh fland vp bleft!
Whilft with no softer Cufhion then the Flint
I kneele before thee, and vnproperly
Shew duty as mitaken, all this while,

Betweene the Childe, and Parent.

Corio. What’s this? your knees to me?

To your Corrected Sonne?
Then let the Pibbles on the hungry beach
Fillop the Starres: Then, let the mutinous winde
Strike the proud Cедars ’gainft the fiery Sun:
Murd’ring Impoffibility, to make
What cannot be, flight worke.

Volum. Thou art my Warriour, I hope to frame thee
Do you know this Lady?

Corio. The Noble Sifter of Publilcola;
The Moone of Rome: Chaffe as the 16icle
That’s curdied by the Froft, from pureft Snow,
And hangs on Dians Temple: Deere Valeria.

Volum. This is a poore Epitome of yours,
Which by th’interpretation of full time,
May fhew like all your felfe.

Corio. The God of Soul’diers:
With the confent of supremee Ioue, informe
Thy thoughts with Noblenesse, that thou mayft proue
To flame vnvulnerable, and flicke i’th Warres
Like a great Sea-marke fhanding every flaw,
And faining those that eye thee.

Volum. Your knee, Sirrah.
Corio. That’s my brave Boy.

Volum. Euen he, your wife, this Ladie, and my felfe,
Are Sutors to you.

Corio. I bheeche you peace:
Or if you’d ask, remember this before;
The thing I have forworne to grant, may neuer
Be held by you denials. Do not bid me
Difmiife my Soldiers, or capitulate
Againe, with Rome’s Mechanickes. Tell me not Wherein I feeme vnnatural: Defire not t’alay
My Rages and Reuenges, with your colder reafons.

Volum. Oh no more, no more:
You haue faid you will not grant vs any thing:
For we haue nothing elfe to ask, but that
Which you deny already: yet we will ask,
That if you faile in our requeft, the blame
May hang vpon your hardneffe, therefore heare vs.

Corio. Auffi diuis, and you Volces marke, for wee’l
Heare nought from Rome in priuate. Your requêt?

Volum. Should we be filent & not fpake, our Raiment
And flate of Bodies would bewraye what life.
We have led fince thy Exile. Thine with thy felfe,
How more vnfortunate then all liuing women
Are we come hither; fince that thy fight, which fhould
Make our eies flow with joy, harts dance with comforts,
Contraines them wepe, and shake with feare & forow,
Making the Mother, wife, and Childe to fee,
The Sonne, the Husband, and the Father tearing
His Countries Bowels out; and to poore we Thine enmities moft capitall: Thou barr’lt vs
Our prayers to the Gods, which is a comfort
That all but we enjoy. For how can we?
Alas! how can we, for our Country pray?
Whereo we are bound, together with thy victorie;
Whereo we are bound: Alacke, or we must loofe
The Countrie our deere Nurfe, or elfe thy perfon
Our comfort in the Country. We must finde
An euident Calamy, though we had
Our wish, which fide fhould win. For either thou
Muft as a ForraineRecreant be led
With Manacles through our streets, or elfe
Triumphantly trede on thy Countries ruine,
And bear the Palme, for hauing bruely shed
Thy Wife and Childrens blood: For my selfe, Sonne,
I purpose not to waite on Fortune, till
These warres determine: If I cannot perswade thee,
Rather to shew a Noble grace to both parts,
Then seekes the end of one: thou shalt be sooner
March to assault thy Country, then to treaude
(Truft too's, thou shalt not) on thy Mothers wombe
That brought thee to this world.

Virg. I, and mine, that brought you forth this boy,
To keepe your name iluing to time.

Boy. A shall not tread on me: Ile run away
Till I am bigger, but then Ile fight.

Corio. Not of a womens tenderneffe to be,
Requires nor Childe, nor womans face to fee:
I haue faste too long.

Volum. Nay, go not from vs thus:
If it were so, that our request did tend
To face the Romans, thereby to destroy
The Volces whom you ferue, you might condemme vs
As paysonous of your Honour. No, our suitte
Is that you reconcile them: While the Volces
May fly, this mercy we haue shewed: the Romanes,
This we receu'd, and each in either side
Glu'e the Al-hallie to thee, and cry be Blefe
For making vp this peace. Thou know'st (great Sonne)
The end of Warres vncertaine: but this certaine,
That if thou conquer Rome, the benefit
Which thou shalt thereby reape, is such a name
Whose repetition will be dogg'd with Curles:
Whose Chronicle thus writ, The man was Noble,
But with his left Attempt, he vp'd it out:
Defroy'd his Country, and his name remains
To th'inuing Age, abhor'd. Speake to me Son:
Thou haft affected the fie frawnes of Honor,
To imitate the graces of the Gods.
To teere with Thunder the wide Cheakses a'th' Ayre,
And yet to change thy Sulphure with a Boulte
That shoul'd but rie an Oake. Why do't not speake?
Think't thou it Honourable for a Nobleman
Still to remember wrongs / Daughter, speake you:
He cares not for your weeping. Speake thou Boy,
Perhaps thy childlifneffe will move him more
Then can our Reafons. There's no man in the world
More bound to's Mother, yet heere he let's me prate
Like one that can not live in thy life, thyly
Shew'd thy deere Mother any courteffe,
When she (poore Hen) fund of no second brood,
Ha's clock'd thee to the Warren: and safelie home
Lozen with Honor. Say my Reque'ts vniu't,
And fparne me bacce: But, if it be not so
Thou art not honest, and the Gods will plague thee
That thou refrain't from me the Duty, which
To a Mothers part belongs. He turns away:
Down Ladies: let vs flame him with him without knees
To his fur-name Coriolanus longes more pride
Then pitty to our Prayers. Downe: an end,
This is the latt. So, we will home to Rome
And dye among our Neighbours: Nay, behal'dvs,
This Boy that cannot tell what he would haue,
But kneelees, and holds vp bands for fellowship,
Doc's reafon our Petition with more strength
Then thou haft to deny't. Come, let vago:
This Fellow had a Volcan to his Mother:
His Wife is in Coriules, and his Childe
Like him by chance: yet give vs our dispatch:

I am hauft vntill our City be afrre, & then Ile speake a little
Holds her by the band flent.

Corio. O Mother, Mother!
What haue you done? Behold, the Heauens do ope,
The Gods looke downe, and this vnnaturall Scene
They laugh at: Oh no, Mother, Mother! Oh!
You haue wonne a happy Victory to Rome.
But for your Sonne, beleuie it: Oh beleuie it,
Moft dangerously you haue with him preuaile'd,
If not moft mortall to him. But let it come:
Auffidius, though I cannot make true Warres,
Ile frame conuenient peace. Now good Auffidius,
Were you in my fecd, would you haue heard
A Mother leffel or granted leffe Auffidius?
Auff. I was mou'd withall.

Corio. I dare be sworne you were:
And fir, it is no little thing to make
Mine eyes to sweat compaifion. But (good fir)
What peace you'll make, aduife me: For my part,
Ile not to Rome, Ile backe with you, and pray you
Stand to me in this caufe. Oh Mother! Wife!
Auff. I am glad thou haft fet thy mercy, & thy Honor
At difference in thee: Out of that Ile worke
My felfe a former Fortune.

Corio. I by and by: But we will drinke together:
And you shall bearre
A better witneffe backe then words, which we
On like conditions, will haue Counter-feal'd.
Come enter with vs: Ladies you defire
To have a Temple built you: All the Swords
In Italy, and her Confederate Armies
Could not have made this peace.

Extent. Enter Memenius and Sicinius.
Sicin. What is done?
Mene. See you won'd Coin a'th Capitol, you'd corner
Sicini. Why what of that?
Mene. If it be poiffible for you to displace it with your little finger, there is some hope the Ladies of Rome,especially his Mother, may preuaile with him. But I say,there is no hope in't, our throats are tentenc'd, & flay vp pon execution.

Sicin. Is't poiffible, that so short a time can alter the condition of a man.
Mene. There is difference between a Grub & a Butterfly, yet your Butterfly was a Grub: this Martius, is growne from Man to Dragon: He has wings, he's more then a creeping thing.

Sicin. He lou'd his Mother deereely.
Mene. So did he mee: and he no more remembers his Mother now,then an eight yeares old horfe. The tartnesse of his face,fowres ripe Grapes. When he walkes, he mouses like an Engine, and the ground shrinke before his Treading. He is able to pierce a Corflet with his eye: Talks like a knell, and his hum is a Battery. He fits in his State, as a thing made for Alexander. What he bids bee done,is finift in his bidding. He wants nothing of a God but Eternity, and a Heuen to Throne in.
Sicin. Yes, mercy,if you report him truly.
Mene. I paint him in the Charaeter. Mark what mercy his Mother shall bring from him: There is no more that peace you'll make in him. He is in a male Tyger, that shall our poor City finde: and all this is long of you.
Sicin. The Gods be good vnto vs.
Mene. No, in such a cafe the Gods will not bee good unto vs. When we banish'd him, we refpeeted not them:
and he returning to breake our neckes, they refpeect not vs.

The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

Ms. Sir, if you'd faue your life, flye to your Houfe,
The Plebeians have got your Fellow Tribune,
And hale him vp and downe ; all swearing, if
The Roman Ladies bring not comfort home,
They'll gie him death by Inches.

Enter another Messenger.

Sicin. What's the News ?

Ms. What's the News ? (preuay'd,)
Ms. Good News, good news, the Ladies have
The Volcans are dilfed, and Martius gone :
A merrier day did never yet greet Rome,
No, not the expulſion of the Tarquins.
Sicin. Friend, art thou certaine this is true ?
It's most certaine.

Ms. As certaine as I know the Sun is fire :
Where have you lurk'd that you make doubt of it :
Ne're through an Arch fo hurried the bloune Tide,
As the recomforted through th'gates. Why harke you :
Trumpets, Hoboyes, Drums beare, altogether.
The Trumpets, Sack-buts, Palfriers, and Fifes,
Tabors, and Symboles, and the howling Romans;
Make the Sunne dance. Hearke you. A flout within Mene. This is good News:
I will go meete the Ladies. This Volumia,
Is worth of Confuls, Senators, Patricians,
A City full : Of Tribunes such as you,
A Sea and Land full : you have pray'd well to day :
This Morning, for ten thousand of your throates,
I'd not have given a doit. Harke, how they joy.

Sound still with the Shouts.

Sicin. First, the Gods bleffe you for your tydings :
Next, accept my thankefulneffe.

Ms. Sir, we haue all great caufe to give great thanks.
Sicin. They are neere the City.
Ms. Almost at point to enter.
Sicin. We'll meet them, and helpe the joy. Exeunt.

Enter two Senators, with Ladies, passing over the Stage, with other Lords.

Sen. Behold our Patronneffe, the life of Rome :
Call all your Tribes together, praife the Gods,
And make triumphant fires, flrew Flowers before them :
Vnfhoot the noife that Banifh'd Martius
Repeale him, with the welcome of his Mother :
Cry welcome Ladies, welcome.
All. Welcome Ladies, welcome.
A Flourifh with Drums & Trumpets.

Enter Tuflus Aufidius, with Attendants.

Auf. Go tell the Lords a'th'City, I am heere:
Delier them this Paper : having read it,
Bid them repayre to th'Market place, where I
Euen in theirs, and in the Commons cares
Will vouch the truth of it. Him I accufe :
The City Ports by this hath enter'd, and Intends t'appare before the People, hoping
To purge himfelfe with words. Dispatche.

Enter 3 or 4 Confirator of Aufidius Faction.
Moft Welcome.

1. Con. How is it with our Generall ?
Auf. Euen fo, as with a man by his owne Almes im-poyson'd, and with his Charity blame.
2. Con. Moft Noble Sir, if you do hold the fame intent
Wherein you wilht vs parties : We'll deliuer you
Of your great danger.

Auf. Sir, I cannot tell,

We must proceed as we do finde the People.

3. Con. The People will remaine uncertaine, whil's
' Twixt you there's difference : but the fall of either
Makes the Suruior heure of all.

Auf. I know it :
And my pretext to strike at him, admits
A good conftru&ion. I rais'd him, and I pawn'd
Mine Honor for his truth : who being fo heighten'd,
He watered his new Plants with dewes of Flatterey,
Seducing fo my Friends : and to this end,
He bow'd his Nature, neuer knowne before,
But to be rough, vnwayable, and free.

3. Conf. Sir, his floutneffe
When he did stand for Confull, which he loft
By lacke of flooping.

Auf. That I would haue spok'en of:
Being banift' for't, he came vnto my Harth,
Preented to my knife his Throat : I took him,
Made him loynt-feruant with me : Gave him way
In all his owne defires : Nay, let him chooſe
Out of my Files, his projekte, to accompliſh
My boft and freftheft men, feru'd his deſignements
In mine owne perfon : helpe to reape the fame
Which he did end all his ; and tooke some pride
To do my felle this wrong : Till at the laft
I feem'd his Follower, not Partner; and
He wadg'd me with his Countenance, as if I had bin Mercenary.

1. Con. So he did my Lord :
The Army marueyl'd at it, and in the laft,
When he had carrie Rome, and that we look'd
For no leffe Spolie, then Glory.

Auf. There was it :
For which my finewes shall be fretcht vpon him,
At a few drops of Womens rheume, which are
As cheape as Lyes; he fold the Blood and Labour
Of our great Aktion; therefore shall he dye,
And Ie renewe me in his fall. But hearke,

Drummes and Trumpets sound, with great founds of the people.

1. Con. Your Natiue Towne you enter'd like a Poite,
And had no welcomes home, but he returns
Splitting the Ayre with noyfe.

2. Con. And patient Foole,
Whole children he hath flaine, their bafe throats teare
With giving him glory.

3. Con. Therefore at your vantage,
Ere he expreffe himfelfe, or move the people
With what he would fay, let him feele your Sword:
Which we will fecond, when he lies alonę
After your way. His Tale pronounc'd, shall bury
His Reaſons, with his Body.

Auf. Say no more. Heree come the Lords,

All Lords. You are moft welcome home.

Auf. I haue not deferued it.
But worthy Lords, haue you with heed perufed
What I have written to you?

All. We haue.

1. Lord. And greeue to heare's:
What faults he made before the laft, I thinkke
Might haue found easie Fines : But there to end
Where he was to begin, and glue away
The benefit of our Leuies, anwering vs
With our owne charge : making a Treate, where
There was a yeelding; this admits no excufe.
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

Auf. He approaches, you shall heare him.
Enter Coriolanus marching with Drumme, and Colours. The Commoners being with him.

Corio. Haile Lords, I am return'd your Soultier: No more infcited with my Countre receiv'd. Then when I parted hence: but still fulfilling your great Command. You are to know, That prosperously I have attempted, and with bloody passage led your Warres, even to the gates of Rome: Our spoiles we have brought home. Doth more then counterpoize a full third part of the charges of the Action. We have made peace. With no leffe Honor to the Antiates. Then flame to th'Romaines. And we heere deliver SUBCRIB'd by 'th'Confuls, and Patricians, Together with the Seale a'th Senate, what we have compounded on.

Auf. Read it not Noble Lords, But tell the Traitor in the highest degree. He hath absu'd your Powers. Corio. I Traitor, Martius. Corio. Martius? Auf. I Martius, Caius Martius: Do'th thou thinke Ie grace thee with that Robbery, thy stolne name. Coriolanus in Coriules? You Lords and Heads a'th State, persifidiously He ha's betray'd your businesse, and given vp the Halfe of rotten Silke, neuer admittting COUNFAILE a'th warre: But at his Nurfe tears He wthin'd and ruad away your Victory, That Pages bluth'd at him, and men of heart. Look'd wond'ring each at others.

Corio. Hearst thou Mars? Auf. Name not the God, thou boy of Treas. Corio. Ha? Aufd. No more. Corio. Mesureclleff Lyar, thou haft made my heart Too great for what contains it. Boy? Oh Slaue, Pardon me Lords, 'tis the first time that euer I was forc'd to scoul'd. Your judgments my graue Lords Must glue this Curre the Lyce: and his owne Notion, Who weares my fripes impref on him, that Must beare my beating to his Graue, saile joyne To thurf the Lye vnto him.

1 Lord. Peace both, and heare me speake. Corio. Cut me to peeces Volces men and Lads, Staine all your edges on me. Boy, false Hound: If you have writ your Annales true, 'tis there, That like an Eagle in a Doue-coat, I Flatter'd your Volcians in Coriules.

Alone I did it, Boy.

Auf. Why Noble Lords, Will you be put in minde of his blinde Fortune, Which was your shame, by this vnholo Braggart? 'Fore your owne eyes, and eares?

All Conf.* Let him dye for't.

All People. Teare him to peeces, do it presently: He kill'd my Sonne, my daughter, he kill'd my Cofine Marcus, he kill'd my Father.

2 Lord. Peace hoe: no outrage, peace: The man is Noble, and his Fame folds in This Orbe o'th'earth: His laft offences to vs Shall haue Judicious hearing. Stand Auffidius, And trouble not the peace.

Corio. O that I had him, with fix Auffidiuss, or more: His Tribe, to vfe my lawfull Sword.

Auf. Insolent Villaine.

All Conf. Kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill him. Draw bat the Conspirators, and kills Martius, who failes, Auffidius stands on him.

3 Lord. Tread not vpon him Maffers, all be quiet, Put vp your Swords.

Auf. My Lords, When you shall know (as in this Rage Prouok'd by him, you cannot) the great danger Which this mans life diu owye you, you'll reioyce That he is thus cut off. Please it your Honours To call me to your Senate, Ie deliver My saile your loyall Servant, or endure Your heauieft Cenfure.

1 Lord. Beare from hence his body, And mourn e for him. Let him be regarded As the moft Noble Coarse, that euer Herald Did follow to his Vrne.

2 Lord. His owne impatience, Takes from Auffidius a great part of blame: Let's make the Beft of it.

Auf. My Rage is gone, And I am frucke with forrow. Take him vp: Helpe three a'th'cheefeft Soultiers, Ile be one. Beate thou the Drumme that it speake mournfully: Traile your steele Pikes. Though in this City hee Hath widowed, and vnchilded many a one, Which to this houre bewaile the Injury, Yet he shall have a Noble Memory. Affift.

Exeunt bearing the Body of Martius, A dead March sounded.

FINIS.
The Lamentable Tragedy of Titus Andronicus.

Actus Primus. Scene Prima.

Flourish. Enter the Tribunes and Senators aloft And then enter Saturninus and his Followers at one door, and Baisianus and his Followers at the other, with Drum & Colours.

Saturninus, Oble Patricians, Patrons of my right, Defend the justice of my Cause with Arms. And Country-men, my loving Followers, Please my Successful Title with your Swords. I was the first borne Sonne, that was the last That wore the Imperial Diadem of Rome: Then let my Fathers Honours live in me, Nor wrong mine Age with this indignitie. Baisianus. Romaines, Friends, Followers, Fauourers of my Right: If ever Baisianus, Cafarts Sonne, Were gracious in the eyes of Royall Rome, Keep then this passage to the Capitol: And suffer not Dihonour to approach Th'Imperial Seat to Vertue: consecrate To Justice, Continence, and Nobility: But let Defert in pure Election shine; And Romanes, fight for Freedome in your Choice.

Enter Marcus Andronicus aloft with the Crownes. Princes, that strive by Factions, and by Friends, Ambitiously for Rule and Empery: Know, that the people of Rome for whom we stand A speciall Party, have by Common voyce In Election for the Romane Emperie, Chosen Andronicus, Sur-named Vivos, For many good and great deferts to Rome. A Nobler man, a brauer Warriour, Lises not this day within the City Walles. He by the Senate is accited home, From weary Warres against the barbarous Gothes, That with his Sonnes (a terror to our Foes) Hath yeeld'd a Nation strong, train'd vp in Armes. Ten yeares are spent, since first he vndertook This Cause of Rome, and chastified with Armes Our Enemies pride. Fife times he hath return'd Bleeding to Rome, bearing his Valiant Sonnes In Coffins from the Field. And now at laft, laden with Honours Spoyles, Returns the good Andronicus to Rome, Renowned Titus, flourishing in Armes.

Let vs intreat, by Honour of his Name, Whom (worthily) you would have now succeede, And in the Capitol and Senates right, Whom you pretend to Honour and Adore, That you withdraw you, and abate your Strength, Dismisse your Followers, and as Suters should, Please your Deferts in Peace and Humblenesse. Saturnine. How fayre the Tribune speakes, To calm my thoughts. Bajia. Marcus Andronicus, so I do affe In thy yghtneth and Integrity: And I loue and Honor thee, and thine, Thy Noble Brother Titus, and his Sonnes, And Her (to whom my thoughts are humbled all) Gracious Lauinia, Romes rich Ornament, That I will heere dismisfe my louing Friends: And to my Fortunes, and the Peoples Fauour, Commit my Caufe in ballance to be weigh'd.

Exit Souldiers.

Saturnine. Friends, that have beene Thus forward in my Right, I thank you all, and heere Dismisse you all, And to the Loue and Fauour of my Countrie, Commit my Selfe, my Perfon, and the Caufe: Rome, be as iuft and gracius vnto me, As I am confident and kinde to thee. Open the Gates, and let me in. Bajia. Tribunes, and me, a poore Competitor. Flourish. They go vp into the Senat houfe.

Enter a Captaine. Cap. Romanes make way: the good Andronicus, Patron of Vertue, Romes best Champion, Successeful in the Battales that he fights, With Honour and with Fortune is return'd, From whence he circumscrib'd with his Sword, And brought to yoke the Enemies of Rome.

Sound Drummes and Trumpets. And then enter two of Titus Sonnes; After them, two men bearing a Coffin couered with black, then two other Sonnes. After them, Titus Andronicus, and then Tamora the Queene of Gothes, & her two Sonnes Chiron and Demetrius, with Aaron the Moore, and others, as many as can bee: They set downe the Coffins, and Titus speaks.

Andronicus. Halle Rome: Victorious in thy Mourning Weedes:

Loc, 659
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

Loe as the Barke that hath dischag'd his fraught,
Returns with precious lading to the Bay,
From whence at first the weigh'd her Anchorage:
Commeth Andronicus bound with Lawrell bowes,
To refalute his Country with his teares,
Tears of true joy for his returne to Rome,
Thou great defender of this Capitol,
Stand gracious to the Rites that we intend.
Romaines, of slue and twenty Valiant Sonnes,
Hafe of the number that King Priam had,
Behold the poore remains aliue and dead!
These that Suruine, let Rome reward with Loue:
These that I bring vnto their latter home,
With buriall amongst their Auncelors.

Heere Gothes have given me leave to sheath my Sword:
Titus vnkinde, and careless of thine owne,
Why suffer'st thou thy Sonnes vnburied yet,
To houer on the dreadful shore of Stix?
Make way to lay them by their Bretheren.

They open the Tombe.
There greete in silence as the dead are wont,
And sleepe in peace, slaine in your Countries warres:
O sacred receptacle of my loyes,
Sweet Cell of vertue and Nobilitie,
How many Sonnes of mine haft thou in store,
That thou wilt never render to me more?

Luc. Glie vs the proudest prisoner of the Gothes,
That we may hew his limbs, and on a pile
Ad manus fratrum, sacrifice his life:
Before this earthly prifon of their bones,
That fo the shadowes be not vnappeada,
Nor we disturb'd with prodigies on earth.

Tit. I glie him you, the Noblest that Suriuues,
The eldrest Son of this diffirred Queene.

Rom. Stay Romaine Bretheren, gracious Conqueror,
Victorious Titus, rue the teares I shed,
A Mothers teares in passion for her fonne:
And if thy Sonnes were euer deere to thee,
Oh thinke my fonnes to be as deere to mee.
Sufficeth not, that we are brought to Rome
To ablaze thy Triumphs, and returne
Captuie to thee, and to thy Romaine yoake,
But muft my Sonnes be slaughtred in the fireets,
For Valiant doings in their Countries caufe?
O! If for King and common-ewe,
Were piety in thine, it is in these:
Andronicus, slaine not thy Tombe with blood.
Wilt thou draw neere the nature of the Gods?
Draw neere them then in being mercifull.
Sweet mercy is Nobilitie true badge,
Thrice Noble Titus, spare my first born sonne.

Tit. Patient your selfe Madam, and pardon me.
These are the Brether, whom you Gothes beheld
Aliue and dead, and for their Bretheren slaine,
Religiously aske a sacrifice:
To this your sonne is markt, and die he muft,
T'appeale their groaning shadowes that are gone.

Luc. Away with him, and make a fire straight,
And with our swords vpon a pile of wood,
Let's hew his limbs till they be clean confum'd.

Exit Sonnes with Alarbus.

Tamo. O cruell irreligious piety.
Chi. Was euer Scythia halfe so barbarous?
Dem. Oppose me Scythia to ambitious Rome,

Alarbus goes to rest, and we furuise,
To tremble vnder Titus threatening lookes,
Then Madam fland resolu'd, but hope withall,
The felfe fame Gods that arm'd the Queene of Troy
With opportunitie of sharpe revenge.

Vpon the Thracian Tyrant in his Tent,
May fauour Tamora the Queene of Gothes,
(When Gothes were Gothes, and Tamora was Queene)
To quit the bloody woes vpon her foes.

Enter the Sonnes of Andronicus againe.

Luc. See Lord and Father, how we have perform'd
Our Romaine rightes, Alarbus limbs are loppt,
And intrans feed the sacrificing fire,
Whole smoke like in censie doth perfume the skie.
Remaineth nought but to interre our Brethren,
And with lowd Larums welcome them to Rome.

Tit. Let it be so, and let Andronicus
Make this his lastest farewell to their soules.

Fliouris.

Then Sound Trumpets, and lay the Coffins in the Tombe.
In peace and Honour reft you heere my Sonnes,
Romes readiest Champions, repose you heere in reft,
Secure from worldly chaunces and mishaps:
Heere lurks no Treason, heere no enuiu swels,
Heere grow no damned grudges, heere are no stormes,
No noyse, but slence and Eternall sleepe,
In peace and Honour reft you heere my Sonnes.

Enter Lavinia.

Lau. In peace and Honour, live Lord Titus long,
My Noble Lord and Father, live in Fame:
Loe at this Tombe my tributarie teares,
I render for my Bretherens Obsequies:
And at thy feete I kneele, with teares of joy
Shed on the earth for thy returne to Rome.
O bleffe me heere with thy victorious hand,
Whole Fortune Romes beft Citizens applau'd.

Tit. Kind Rome,
That haft thus louingly refer'd
The Cordiall of mine age to glad my hart,
Lavinia live, out-live thy Fathers dayes:
And Fames eternall date for vertues praiue.

Marc. Long live Lord Titus, my beloved brother,
Gracious Triumpfer in the eyes of Rome.

Tit. Thankes Gentle Tribune,
Noble brother Marcus.

Marc. Welcome! Nephews from succefull wars,
You that furuise and you that sleepe in Fame:
Faire Lords your Fortunes are all alike in all,
That in your Countries service drew your Swords.
But fafer Triumph is this Funerall Pompe,
That hath apir'd to Solons Happines,
And Triumphs ouer chance in honours bed.

Tit. Andronicus, the people of Rome,
Whole friend in iustice thou haft euer bene,
Send thee by me their Tribune and their truft,
This Palliament of white and spotlesse Hue,
And name thee in Eleccion for the Empire,
With thee our late deceased Emperours Sonnes:
Be Candidatus then, and put it on,
And helpe to set a head on headlesse Rome.

Tit. A better head her Glorious body fits,
Then his that shaketh for age and feeblenesse:

What
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

What should I  do this Robe and trouble you,
Be chosen with proclamations to day,
To morrow yield vp rul, resigne my life,
And let abroad new buffinice for you all.
Rome I have bene thy Souldier forty yeares,
And led my Countres strength succeefullly,
And buried one and twenty Valiant Sonnes,
Knighted in Field, flaine manfully in Armes,
In right and Seruice of their Noble Countrie:
Give me a flaffe of Honour for mine age,
But not a Scepter to controule the world,
Vpright he held it Lords, that held it last.

Mar. Titus, thou shalt obtaine and ask the Emperie.
Sat. Proud and ambitious Tribune can't thou tell?
Titus. Patience Prince Saturnius.
Sat. Romanies do me right.

Patricians draw your Swords, andsheath them not Till Saturnius be Romes Emperour:
Andronicus would thou wert flipp'd to hell,
Rather then rob me of the peoples harts.
Luc. Proud Saturnius, interrupter of the good
That Noble minded Titus meanes to thee.

Tit. Content thee Prince, I will restore to thee
The peoples harts, and weane them from themselues.
Bafs. Andronicus, I do not flatter thee
But Honour thee, and will doe till I die:
My Faction if thou strengthen with thy Friend?
I will most thankefull be, and thankes to men
Of Noble minde, is Honourable Meede.

Tit. People of Rome, and Noble Tribune sheere,
I aske your voyces and your Suffrages,
Will you beare them friendly on Andronicus?
Tribune. To gratifie the good Andronicus,
And Gratulate his safe returne to Rome,
The people will accept whom he admits.

Tit. Tribunes I thank you, and this fare I make,
That you Create your Emperours eldeft fonne,
Lord Saturnine, whose Vertues will I hope,
Reflect on Rome as Tytans Rayes on earth,
And ripen Iuifce in this Common-weale:
Then if you will elect by my advice,
Crowne him, and say: Long live our Emperour.

Mar. An. With Voyces and applauce of every fort,
Patricians and Plebeans we Create
Lord Saturnine Rome's Great Emperour.
And say, Long live our Emperour Saturnine.
Along Favouris till they came downe.

Satu. Titus Andronicus, for thy Favours done,
To vs in our Election this day,
I give thee thankes in part of thy Deoffs,
And will with Deeds requite thy gentleffe:
And for an Onfet Titus to advance
Thy Name, and Honorable Familie,
Launia will I make my Emprefle,
Rome's Royall Miftris, Miftris of my hart
And in the Sacred Potban her epoufe:
Tell me Andronicus doth this motion pleafe thee?

Tit. It doth my worthy Lord, and in this match,
I hold me Highly Honoured of your Grace,
And heere in fight of Rome, to Saturnine,
King and Commander of our Common-weale,
The Wide-worlds Emperour, do I Confercate,
My Sword, my Charit, and my Prisoners,
Preffents well Worthy Romes Imperiall Lord:
Receive them then, the Tribute that I owe,
Mine Honours Ensignes humbled at my feete.

Satu. Thankes Noble Titus, Father of my life,
How proud I am of thee, and of thy gifts
Rome shall record, and when I do forget
The leaf of these vnspakeable Deoffs,
Romans forget your Feadtie to me.

Tit. Now Madam are you prifoner to an Emperour,
To him that for you Honour and your State,
Will vie you Nobly and your followers.

Satu. A goodly Lady, trust me of the Huc
That I would choose, were I to choose a new:
Clere vp Faire Queene that cloudly countenance,
Though chance of warre
Hath wrought this change of cheere,
 Thou com't not to be made a forne in Rome:
Princeall shall be thy viage every way.
Reft on my word, and let not discontent
Daunt all your hopes: Madam he comforts you,
Can make your Greater then the Queene of Gothes?
Lauinia you are not displeat'd with this?

Lau. Not I my Lord, 6th true Nobilitie,
Warrants these words in Princely curtefie.

Sat. Thankes sweete Lauinia, Romans let vs goe:
Ransomflee heere we fet our Prifoners free,
Proclaime our Honors Lords with Trumpe and Drum.
Bafs. Lord Titus by your leave, this Maid is mine.
Tit. How sir? Are you in earneft then my Lord?
Bafs. I Noble Titus, and refolu'd withall,
To doe my felfe this reafon, and this right.

Marc. Suum cuiqueum, is our Romane Iuifce,
This Prince in Iuifce cazebeth but his owne.

Luc. And that he will and shall, if Lucius live.

Tit. Traytors auaunt, where is the Emperours Guard?
Trafon my Lord, Lauinia is fuprif'd.

Sat. Supriff'd, by whom?
Bafs. By him thatJuftly may
Beare his Betroth'd, from all the world away.

Muti. Brothers helpe to conuey her hence away,
And with my Sword Ile keepe this doore fafe.

Tit. Follow my Lord, and Ile foonne bring her backe.
Muf. My Lord you paffe not heere.

Tit. What villain Boy, bar'ft me my way in Rome?

Luc. My Lord you are vnleat, and more then fo,
In wrongfull quarrell, you have flaine your fon,
Nor thus Rites nor he are any fannes of mine,
My fannes would neuer fo dishonour me,
Traytor reftore Lauinia to the Emperour.

Luc. Dead if you will, but not to be his wife,
That is anotherz lawfull promif Loue.

Enter aloft the Emperour with Tamara and her two fonnes, and Aaron the Moore.

Empe. No Titus, no, the Emperour needs her not,
Nor her, nor thee, nor any of thy flocke:
Ile truft by Leifure him that mocks me once.
Thee neuer: nor thy Traytorous naughty fannes,
Confederates all, thus to dishonour me.
Was none in Rome to make a fale
But Saturnine? Full well Andronicus
Agree thefe Deeds, with that proud bragge of thine,
That faid't, I beg'd the Empire at thy hands.

Tit. O moniftrous, what reproachfull words are thefe?

Sat. But goe thy wayes, goe give that changing peace,
To him that flourifht for her with his Sword:
A Valiant fonne in-law thou fhai enlyk:
One,fit to bandy with thy lawleff Sonnes,

To
To ruffle in the Common-wealth of Rome.

\[ T m \]. These words are Razors to my wounded hart.

\[ Sat. \] And therefore loely Tamora Queene of Gothes, That like the flately Thebe mong't her Nimphants Doth over-shine the Gallant't Dames of R ome, If thou be pleafe'd with this my fadaine choyfe, Behold I choofe thee Tamora for my Bride, And will Create thee Empresse of Rome.

Speak Queene, of Gothes doth the Nation all my choyfe? And heere I fware by all the Romaine Gods, Sith Priests and Holy-water are so neere, And Tapers burne fo bright, and every thing In readines for Hymenous fand, I will not refolute the streets of Rome, Or clime my Pallace, till from forth this place, I leade efou'd my Bride along with me, \[ Tam. \] And heere in fight of heaven to Rome I fware, If Saturnine advance the Queene of Gothes, Shee will a Hand-maid be to his defires, A louing Nurse, a Mother to his youth.

\[ Saturn. \] Afend Faire Queene, Pantheone Lords, Your Noble Emperour and his louely Bride, Sent by the heacunes for Prince Saturnine, Whose wifedome hath her Fortune Conquered, There shall we Conflame our Spoufbl rites.

Exeunt omnes.

\[ Tm. \] I am not bid to waite vpon this Bride:

Titus when wer't thou wont to walke alone, Difhonoured thus and Challenged of wrongs?

Enter Marcus and Titus Sonnes.

\[ Mar. \] O Titus see! O see what thou haft done! In a bad quarrell, flaine a Vertuous fonne.

\[ Tit. \] No foolifh Tribune, no: No fonne of mine, Nor thou, nor thofe Confidrates in the deed, That hath difhonoured all our Family, Vnworthy brother, and vnworthy Sonnes.

\[ Luci. \] But let vs glue him buriaall as becomes: Glue eMutiua buriall with our Bretheren.

\[ Tit. \] Traytors away, he ref't not in this Tombe: This Monument fume hundred yeares hath flood, Which I have Sumptouously re-edified: Heere none but Souldiers, and R omes Seruitors, Repofe in Fame: None safely flaine in bruelles, Bury him where you can, he comes not heere.

\[ Mar. \] My Lord this is impietie in you, My Nephew eMutiua deeds do plead for him, He must be buried with his brethren.

Titus two Sonnes speakes.

And shall, or him we will accompany.

\[ Ti. \] And shall! What villaine was it fpake that word? Titus fones speakes. He that would vouch'd it in any place but heere.

\[ Tit. \] What would you bury him in my defpight?

\[ Mar. \] No Noble Titus, but intereat of thee, To pardon Mutius, and to bury him.

\[ Tit. \] Marcus, Euen thou haft stroke vpon my Creft, And with thefe Boyes mine Honour thou haft wounded, My foes I doe repete you everie one.

So trouble me no more, but get you gone.

2. Sonne. Not I tell Mutius bones be buried.

\[ Mar. \] Brother, for in that name doth nature plea'd.

\[ 2. Sonne. \] Father, and in that name doth nature speak.

\[ Tit. \] Speak thou no more if all the reft will speed.

\[ Mar. \] Renowned Titus more then halfe my foule.

Luc. Deare Father, foule and fubfance of vs all,

Mar. Suffer thy brother Marcus to interre

His Noble Nephew heere in vertues neft, That died in Honour and Launine's caufe.

Thou art a Romaine, be not barbarous:

The Grecian's word, if life did bury Aemus, That flew himfelfe: And Laertes fonne, Did graciously plead for his Funeralls:

Let not young Mutius then that was thy joy, Be bar'd his entrance heere.

\[ Tit. \] Rife Marcus,rife,

The difmal'ft day is this that ere I faw, To be difhonored by my Sonnes in Rome: Well,bury him,and bury me the next.

They put him in the Tombe.

Luc. There lie thy bones sweet Mutius with thy Till we with Trophies do adorn this Tombe. (friends

They all kneele and say.

No man fheat tears for Noble Mutius,

He liues in Fame, that di'd in vertues caufe.

Exit.

Mar. My Lord to flep out of these fudden dumps, How comes it that the subtle Queene of Gothes, Is of a fadaine thus aduan'd in Rome?

\[ Ti. \] I know not Marcus : but I know it is, (Whether by deuife or no) the heacuns can tell, Is she not then beholding to the man, That brought her for this high good turne fo farre? Yes, and will Nobly him remunerate.

Flourishs.

Enter the Emperor, Tamora, and her two fons, with the More at one doore. Enter at the other doore Bafianus and Launine with others.

Sat. So Bafianus,youe haue plaid your prize, God gie you joy fir of your Gallant Bride.

Baf. And you of yours my Lord: I fay no more, Nor with no lefle, and fo I take my leave.

Sat. Traytor,if Rome haue lawe, or we haue power, Thou and thy Faction flall repent this Rape.

Baf. Rape call you it my Lord, to ceafe my owne, My true betrothed Loue, and now my wife? But let the lawes of Rome determine all, Meane while I am poifaid of that mine.

Sat. 'Tis good fir : you are very short with vs, But if we live, weele be as sharpe with you.

Baf. My Lord, what I haue done as beft I may, Answere I muft, and shall do with my life, Oney thus much I gie your Grace to know, By all the duties that I owe to Rome, This Noble Gentleman Lord Titus heere, Is in opinion and in honour wrong'd, That in the refuge of Launine, With his owne hand did flay his youngeft Son, In zeale to you, and highly mou'd to wrath.

To be controll'd in that he frankly gaue: Receive him then to fauour Saturnine, That hath expr'ft himselfe in all his deeds, A Father and a friend to thee, and Rome.

\[ Tit. \] Prince Bafianus leve to pleate my Deeds, *Tit. Thou and thofe, that haue contrefourd me, Rome and the righteous heauens be my judge, How I haue lou'd and Honour'd Saturnine.

Tam. My worthy Lord if euer Tamora,
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

Were gracious in thofe Princely eyes of thine,
Then hear me speake indifferently for all:
And at my fute (Iweet) pardon what is paff.
Sasu. What Madam, be dinhonoured openly,
And safely put it vp without requenge?
Tam. Not fo my Lord,
The Gods of Rome for-fend,
I fhould be Authour to dinhonour you,
But on mine honour dare, I vndertake
For good Lord Titus innocence in all:
Whofe fury not diemblshed speakes his griefs:
Then at my fute looke graciously on him,
Loose not fo noble a friend on vaine suppose,
Nor with fowre looke afflict his gentle heart.
My Lord, be rul'd by me, be wonne at laft,
Diffemble all your griefs and difcontents,
You are but newly planted in your Throne,
Leafe then the people, and Patricians too,
Vpon a fuit furely take Titus part,
And fo fupplicant vs for ingratitude,
Which Rome repues to be a hainous finne.
Yeeld at intreats, and then let me alone:
Ile finde a day to mallice them all,
And race their faction, and their familie,
The cruelle Father, and his tray'r'rous fonnes,
To whom I fued for my deare fonnes life,
And make them know what 'tis to let a Queene,
Kneelee in the firecees, and beg for grace in vaine.
Come, come, sweet Emperour, (come Andronicus)
Take vp this good old man, and cheere the heart,
That dies in tempeft of thy angry growne.
King. Rife Titus, rife,
My Empeffie hath presaill'd.
Titus. I thank you Maieftie,
And her my Lord.
Thefe words, thefe lookees,
Infufe new life in me.
Tam. Titus, I am incorporate in Rome,
A Roman now adopted happily.
And must aduife the Emperour for his good,
This day all quarrels die Andronicus,
And let it be mine honour good my Lord,
That I have reconcil'd your friends and you.
For you Prince Bajfianus, I have paft
My word and promife to the Emperour,
That you will be more milde and truchable.
And fear not Lords:
And you Lauinia,
By my aduife all humbled on your knees,
You shall aske pardon of his Maieftie.
Sen. We doe,
And vow to heauen, and to his Highnes,
That what we did, was mildely, as we might,
Tending our fitters honour and our owne.
Mar. That on mine honour heere I do protest.
King. Away and talke not, trouble vs no more.
Tamora. Nay, nay,
Sweet Emperour, we muft all be friends,
The Tribune and his Nephews kneele for grace,
I will not be denied, sweet hart looke back.
King. Marcus,
For thy fake and thy brothers heere,
And at my louely Tamora's intreats,
I doe remit thefe young mens haynous faults.
Stand vp: Lauinia, though you left me like a churle,
I found a friend, and fure as death I fware.

I would not part a Batchellour from the right, Come, if the Emperours Court can feate two Brides, You are my guest Lauinia, and your friends: This day shall be a Loue-day Tamora.
Tit. To morrow and it pleafe your Maiestie, To hunt the Panther and the Hart with me, With hone and Hound, Weele glue your Grace Ben jour.

Actus Secunda.

Fleurifb. Enter Aaron alone.

Aren. Now climbeth Tamora Olympus toppe, Safe out of Fortunes shot, and fits aloft, Secure of Thunders crakke or lightning flash, Aduanct'd about pale waves in threatenning reach: As when the goldenSunne faules the morne, And hauing gitt the Ocean with his beames, Gallops the Zodiacke in his glistering Coach, And ouer-lookes the highest piering hills:
So, Tamora
Upon her wit doth earthly honour waite, And vertue floopes and trembles at her frowne.
Then Aaron arme thy hart, and fit thy thoughts, To mount aloft with thy Emperialis Misfris, And mount her pitch, whom thou in triumph long Haift prisoner held, fettered in amorous chaines, And fitter bound to Aaron's charming eyes,
Then is Prometheu at tide to Caucasus.
Away with flauifh weecies, and idle thoughts,
I will be bright and shine in Pearle and Gold, To waite vpon this new made Empreffe.
To waite faid I? To wanton with this Queene, This Goddeffe, this Semerimio, this Queene, This Syren, that will charm Romes Saturnine, And fee his shipwracke, and his Common weales.
Hollo, what forne is this?

Enter Chiron and Demetris brasning.

Dem. Chiron thy yeres wants wit, thy wit wants edge
And manners to intru'd where I am grac'd,
And may for ought thou know'st affected be.
Chi. Demetris, thou don't ouer-weene in all,
And fo in this, to beare mettowne with braues,
'Tis not the difference of a yeere or two.
Makes me leffe gracious, or thee more fortunate:
I am as able, and as fit, as thou,
To ferve, and to deferue my Misfris grace,
And that my fword vpon thee shall approue,
And plead my paffions for Lauinia's loue.
Aron, Club, clubs, thefe louers will not keep the peace.
Dem. Why Boy, although our mother (vnaduifed)
Gawe you a daunsing Rapier by your fide,
Are you fo delicate growne to threat your friends?
Goe too: have your Lath glued within your feath,
Till you know better how to handle it.
Chi. Meane while fir, with the little skill I have,
Full well fhall thou perceiue how much I dare.
Deme. I Boy, grow ye fo braue?
They drawe.
Aron. Why how now Lords?
So nere the Emperours Palace dare you draw,
And maintaine such a quarrell openly?
Full well I wote, the ground of all this grudge,
I would not for a million of Gold,
The caufe were knowne to them it most concerns.
Nor would your noble mother for much more
Be so dishonored in the Court of Rome:
For shame put vp.

Deme. Not I, till I have meat'd
My rapier in his bosome, and withall
Thrust thefe reproochfull speecches downe his throat,
That he hath breath'd in my dishonnour here.

Chi. For that I am prepare'd, and full resolv'd,
Foule spoken Coward;
That thundrlefhy with thy tongue,
And with thy weapon nothing dar'n performe.

Aron. A way I say.
Now by the Gods that warlike Gothes adore,
This pretty brabble will vndoo vs all:
Why Lords, and think ye not how dangerous
It is to set vp a Princes right?
What is Launia then become so loofe,
Or Bajianus so degenerate,
That for her like such quarrells may be broach't,
Without controullement, Luficke, or revenge?
Young Lords beware, and shoulde the Empresse know,
This diſcord ground, the muficke would not pleafe.

Chi. I care not I, knew she and all the world,
I loue Launia more then all the world.

Deme. Youngling,
Learne thou to make some meaner choife,
Launia is thine elder brothers hope.

Aron. Why are ye mad? Or know ye not in Rome,
How furious and impatient they be,
And cannot brooke Competitors in loue?
I tell you Lords, you doe but plot your deaths,
By this deuile.

Chi. Aaron, a thousand deaths would I propofe,
To acchiewe her whom I do loue.

Aron. To acchieue her, how?

Deme. We may make her do as she do fore strange?
Sche is a woman, therefore may be woold,
Sche is a woman, therefore may be wonne,
Sche is Launia therefore must be lou'd.
What man, more water gliadeth by the Mill
Then wots the Miller of, and easie it is
Of a cut loafe to feale a fhie we know:
Though Bajianus be the Emperours brother,
Better then he have worne Pulcan badge.

Aron. I, and as good as Saturnius may.

Deme. Then why should he dispaire that knowes to
With words, faire lookees, and liberalitie:
(court it
What hate not thou full often strucke a Doe,
And borne her clean? by the Keepers note?

Aron. Why then it feemes some certaine snatch or fo
Would ferue your turnes.

Chi. I fo the turne were ferued.

Aron. Thou haft hit it.

Aron. Would you had hit it too,
Then shoulde not we be tir'd with this adoo:
Why harke yee, harke yee, sud are you fuch fooles,
To square for this? Would it offend you then?

Chi. Faith not me.

Deme. Nor me, fo I were one.

Aron. For thame be friends, & ioyne for that you iar:
"Tis pollicle, and thatageme must dooe
That you affect, and fo must you refolue,
That what you cannot as you would atchieue,
You must perforce accomplish as you may:
Take this of me, Lucaee was not more chaft
Then this Launia, Bajianus love,
A speedier courfe this lingring languishment
Must we purse, and I have found the path:
My Lords, a solemn hunting is in hand,
There will the lowly Roman Ladies troope:
The Forrest walks are wide and fpacious,
And many vnrequited plots there are,
Fitted by kinde for rape and villainie:
Single you thither then this dainty Doe,
And flrike her home by force, if not by words:
This way or not at all, tran you in hope.
Come, come, our Empresse with her sacred wit
To villainie and vengeance confecrate,
Will we acquaint with all that we intend,
And the hall file our engines with aduife,
That will not suffer you to square your felues,
But to your wishes height advance you both.
The Emperours Court is like the house of Fame,
The pallece full of tongues, of eyes, of eares:
The Woods are ruthlefle, dreadfull, deafe, and dull:
There speake, and flrike braue Boys, & take your turnes.
There ferue your lufts, shadow'd from heavens eye,
And't resuell in Launia's Treasur.

Chi. Thy counfell Lauds smells of no cowardife.

Deme. Say faue not, till I finde the flame,
To coole this heat, a Charme to calme their fits,
Per Stigia per manes Vebor.

Exeunt.

Enter Titus Andronicus and bis three sones, making a noyse with bounds and bornes, and Marcus.

Th. The hunt is vp, the morn is bright and gray,
The fields are fragrant, and the Woods are greene,
Vncouple heere, and let vs make a bay,
And wake the Emperour, and his louelie Bride,
And rouze the Prince, and ring a hunters peale,
That all the Court may croo with the noyse.
Sonnes let it be your charge, as it is ours,
To attend the Emperours perfon carefully:
I haue bene troubled in my sleepe this night,
But dawning day new comfort hath inspier'd.

Winde Harues.
Here a cry of boundes, and windes bornes in a peales, then Enter Saturnius, Tamora, Bajianus, Launia, Chiron, Demerius, and their Attendants.

Th. Many good morrowes to your Maieftie,
I promis'd your Grace, a Hunters peale.
Sat. And you have rung it truly my Lords,
Somewhat to early for new married Ladies.
Bajt. Launia, how say you?
Lau. I say no:
I haue bene awake two houres and more.

Sat. Come on then, horse and Chariots letvs haue,
And to our sport: Madam, now shall ye see,
Our Romaine hunting.

Mar. I haue dogges my Lord,
Will rouze the proudeft Panther in the Chafe,
And clime the highest Pnomanty top.

Th. And I haue horse will follow where the game
Makes way, and runnes likes Swallowes ore. the plain

Deme. Chiron

614
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

Dem. Chiron we hunt not we, with Horfe nor Hound
But hope to plucke a dainty Doe to ground. Exeunt
Enter Aaron alone.

Ar. He that had wit, would thinke that I had none,
To bury so much Gold under a Tree,
And never afer to inherit it.
Let him that thinks of me to abate it,
Know that this Gold must come a stratageme,
Which cunningly effectted, will beget
A very excellent piece of villany,
And to repose sweet Gold for their vnreft.
That hauie their Almes out of the Empresse Cheff.
Enter Tamora to the Moore.

Tam. My louely Aaron,
Wherefore look't thou sad,
When everie thing doth make a Gleefull boaste?
The Birds chaunt melody on every bough,
The Snake lies rolled in the chearefull Sunne,
The greene leaves quier, with the cooling winde,
And make a cheker'd shadow on the ground:
Vnder their sweete shade, Aaron let vs sit,
And whil't the babling Eccho mock's the Hounds,
Replying thrilly to the well tun'd Horses,
As if a double hunt were heard at once,
Let vs fit downe, and mark theyr yelping noyfe:
And after conflict, such as was suppos'd,
The wandering Prince and Dido once enioy'd,
When with a happy forme they were supris'd,
And Curtaing'd with a Cown ailke-keeping Cae,
We may each wreathed in the others armes,
(Our pastimes done) poseff a Golden flumber,
Whiles Hounds and Horses, and sweete Melodious Birds
Be vs to vs, as is a Nurles Song
Of Lullabie, to bring her Babe asleepe.

Ar. Madame,
Though Venus gouerne your desire,
Saturne is Dominator over mine:
What signifieth my callous flandering eye,
My silence, and my Cloudy Melancholie,
My fleece of Woolly haire, that now vncurles,
Even as an Adder when she doth vnrowle
To do some fatal execution?
No Madam, these are no Veneriall signes,
Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand,
Blood, and reuenge, are Hammering in my head.
Harke Tamora, the Empresse of my Soule,
Which neuer hopes more heauen, then refts in thee,
This is the day of Doome for Bajfanus;
His Shakond mutt loose her tongue to day,
Thy Sonnes make Pillage of her Chaffity,
And wash their hands in Bajfanus blood.
Seft thou this Letter, take it vp I pray thee,
And give the King this fatall plotted Scrowle,
Now question me no more, we are ephi'd,
Here comes a parcel of our hopefull Booty,
Which dreads not yet their liues destruction.

Enter Bajfanus and Lauinia.

Tam. Ah my sweet Moore:
Sweeter to me then life.
Ar. No more great Empresse, Bajfanus comes,
Be croffe with him, and Ile goe fetch thy Sonnes
To backe thy quarrell what so e're they be.
Baj. Whom haue we here?
Romes Royall Empresse,
Vn furnisht of our well beeming troope?
Or is it Diaon habited like her,
Who hath abandoned her holy Groues,
To see the generall Huntting in this Forrest?
Tam. Sawcie controoler of our proue steps:
Had I the power, that some say Diaon had,
Thy Temples should be planted prentely.
With Hornes, as was Acteon, and the Hounds
Should drive vp his new transformed limbes,
Vnamnerly Intruder as thou art.
Lau. Vnder your patience gentle Empresse,
'Tis thought you have a goodly gift in Horning,
And to be doubted, that your Moore and you
Are angled forth to try experiments:
June theild your husband from his Hounds to day,
'Tis pitty they should take him for a Stag.
Bajf. Beleeue me Queen, your swarth Cymeron,
Doth make your Honour of his bodies Hue,
Spotted, deteeted, and abominable.
Why are you fequeefred from all your traine?
Dilmounted from your Snow-white goodly Steed,
And wandred hither to an obscure plot,
Accompanied with a barbarous Moore,
If soule defire had not conduc'ted you?
Lau. And being intercepted in your sport,
Great reaon that my Noble Lord, be rated
For Saucinnesse, I pray you let vs hence,
And let her ioy her Rauen coloured loue,
This valley fits the purpose paffing well.
Bajf. The King my Brother shal have notice of this.
Lau. I, for these sipes have made him noted long,
Good King, to be fo mightily abused.
Tamora. Why I haue patience to endure all this?
Enter Chiron and Demetrius.

Dem. How now deere Soueraigne
And our gracious Mother,
Why doth your Highnesse looke so pale and wan?
Tam. Haue I not reaon thinke you to looke pale.
These two haue tic'd me hither to this place,
A barren, deteeted vale you see it is.
The Trees though Sommer, yet forlorne and lean,
Ore come with Mofle, and balefull Mifelto.
Heere neuer shines the Sunne, heere nothing breeds,
Vnleffe the nightly Owle, or fatall Rauen:
And when they fheat us this abhorred pit,
They told me heere at dead time of the night,
A thousand Fiends, a thousand hiling Snakes,
Ten thousand swelling Toades, as many Vrchins,
Would make such fearefull and confudted cries,
As any mortall body bearing it,
Should fstrate fall mad, or elfe die suddenly.
No sooner had they told this hellish tale,
But fstrate they told me they would binde me heere,
Vnto the body of a difmall yew,
And leave me to this miserable death.
And then they call'd me foule Adulteresse,
Lafciuous Goth, and all the bitterest tarmes
That ever earie did heare to fuch effect.
And had you not by wondrous fortune come,
This vengence on me had they executed:
Reuenge it, as you love your Mothers life,
Or be ye not henceforth call'd my Children.

Dem. This is a witnesse that I am thy Sonne. ftab bim.
Chi. And this for me,
Strock home to fiew my strength.
Lau. I come Semeramis, nay Barbarous Tamora.

d d

For
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

For no name fits thy nature but thy owne.
Tam. Glie me thy poyndary, you shal know my boyes
Your Mothers hand shall right your Mothers wrong.

Deme. Stay Madam herre is more belongs to her,
First thrash the Corne, then after burne the straw:
This Minion flood upon her chafity,
Vpon her Nuptiall vow, her loyalty.
And with that painting hope,brues your Mighntiness,
And shal the carry this varto her grave?

Chi. And if she doe,
I would I were an Eunuch,
Drag hence her husband to some secret hole,
And make his dead Trunke-Pillow to our luft.
Tam. But when ye haue the hony we desire,
Let not this Wafe out-lie vs both to stinge.

Chir. I warrant you Madam we will make that sure:
Come Misfris, now perfore we will enjoy,
That nice-prefered honesty of yours.

Laui. Oh Tamora, thou bear'st a woman face.
Tam. I will not heare her speake, away with her.

Laui. Sweet Lords interst,her haue me but a word.

Deme. Litten faire Madam,let it be your glory
To see her teares, but your hart to them,
As vrelentling flint to drops of raine.

Laui. When did the Tigers young-ones teach the dam?
O doe not learne her wrath, she taught it thee,
The milke thon suck'ft from her did turne to Marble,
Euen at thy Teat thou had'ft thy Tyranny,
Yet every Mother breeds not Sonnes alike,
Do thou intreat her sheu a woman pity.

Chiro. What,
Would'thou haue me proue my selfe a bafard?
Laui. 'Tis true,
The Rauen doth not hatch a Larke,
Yet have I heard,Oh could I finde it now,
The Lion mou'd with pitty, dill indure
To have his Princely paws par'd all away.
Some fay, that Rauens foste forlorne children,
The whil't their owne birds famish in their nefts:
Oh be to me though thy hard hart fay no,
Nothing fo kind but something pitifull.

Tam. I know not what it means,away with her.
Laui. Oh let me teach thee for my Fathers sake,
That gauze thee life when well he might have flaine thee:
Be not obdurate,open thy dese eares.

Tam. Had'thou in perion wore offended me.
Euen for his sake am I pittileffe;
Remember Boyes I pourd'forth teares in vaine,
To gue your brother from the facrefice,
But fierce Andronicus would not relent,
Therefore away with her, and vfe her as you will,
The worfe to her, the better lou'd of me.

Laui. Oh Tamora,
Be call'd a gentile Queene,
And with thine owne hands kill me in this place,
For 'tis not life that I haue beg'd fo long,
Poore I was flaine, when Baffianus dy'd.

Tam. What beg'lt thou then ? fond woman let me go?

Laui. 'Tis present death I beg, and one thing more,
That womanhood denies my tongue to tell:
Oh keep me from their worie then killing luft,
And tumb me into some loathsome pit,
Where neuer mans eye may behold my body,
Doe this, and be a charitable murderer.

Tam. So should I rob my sweet Sonnes of their fee,
No let them sattifie their luft on thee.
Enter the Empeour, Aaron the Moore.

Sat. Along with me, Ile fee what hole is heere, And what he is that is now leapt into it. Say, who art thou that lately didst defend, Into this gaping hollow of the eart? Mar. The whippof fonne of old Andronicus, Brought hither in a most valuable house, To finde thy brother Boffianus dead.

Sat. My brother dead! I know thou dost but left, He and his Lady both are at the Lodge, Upon the North-side of this pleasant Chafe, 'Tis not an house since I left him there.

Mar. We know not where you left him all aline, But out alas, heere haue we found him dead.

Enter Tamora, Andronicus, and Lucius.

Tam. Where is my Lord the King? King. Heere Tamora, though griec'd with killing griefe, Wilt thou see thy brother Boffianus? King. Now to the bottome thou shalt search my wound, Poor Boffianus heere lies murthered.

Tam. Then all too late I bring this fatall writ, The complot of this timelesse Tragedie, And wonder greatly that mans face can fold, In pleading smilies such murderous Tyrannie.

She giee'th Saturnine a Letter.

Saturninus reads the Letter. And if we mieue to meete him banstomely, Sweet huntman, Boffianus'tis we meant, Doe thou so much as dig the grave for him, Thou know'rt our meaning, looke for thy reward Among the Nettles at the East end of the grave, Which over-flodes the mouth of that lame pit: Where we decreed to bury Boffianus, Doe this and purchaze vs thy laffing friends.

King. Oh Tamora, was ever heard the like? This is the pit, and this the Elder tree, Looke first, if you can finde the huntman out, That should have murthered Boffianus heere. Aron. My gracious Lord heere is the bag of Gold. King. Two of thy whelpeis, fell Curs of bloody kind Haue heere bereft my brother of his life: Sirs drag them from the pit vnto the prizon, Thiere let them bide vntill we have deu'd Some newer heard-of torteringe paine for them. Tam. What are they in this pit, Oh wondrous thing! How easiely murder is discouered?

Tit. High Empeour, vpon my feeble knee, Ibeg this boone, with tears, not lightly shed, That this fell fault of my accursed Sonnes, Accurfed, if the faults be proud in them. King. If it be proud? you see it is apparrant,
That could have better fowed then Pblolm.
Oh had the monster scene those Lilly hands,
Tremble like Aspf leaves uppon a Lute,
And make the silken frings delight to kiss them,
He would not then hauce toucht them for his life.
Or had he heard the heavenly Harmony,
Whic h that sweet tongwe hath made :
He would hauce drop his knife and fell asleep,
As Cerberus at the Thracian Poets feet.
Come, let us goe, and make thy father blinde,
For such a sight will blinde a fathers eye.
One hours flurne will drownne the fragrant meades,
What, will whole months of teares thy Fathers eyes?
Doe not draw backe, for we will mourne with thee:
Oh could our mourning safe thy mischief.  Exeunt

Actus Tertius.

Enter the Judges and Senators with Titus two fones bound, passing on the Stage to the place of execution, and Titus going before pleading.

Ti. Heare me graue fathers, noble Tribunes stay,
For pitty of mine age, whose youth was spent
In dangerous warres, whilst you securely slept:
For all my blood in Rome a great quarrell fled,
For all the frothy nights that I have watcht,
And for these bitter teares, which now you fee,
Filling the aged wrinkes in my checkes,
Be pittifull to my condemned Sonnes,
Whole soules is not corrupted as 'tis thought :
For two and twenty fones I never wept,
Because they died in honoura lyfet bed.

Andronicus lyeth downe, and the Judges passe by him.

Exeunt

For thefe, Tribunes, in the duft I write
My harts depe langour, and my fouses fad teares :
Let my teares flanch the earths drie appetite.
My fones sweet blood, will make it flame and bluthe:
O earth! I will be friend thee more with raine
That shall dillit from these two ancient ruines,
Then youthfull April flall with all his showres
In fummers drought; Ile drop vpone thee still,
In Winter with warme teares Ile melt the snow,
And keepe eternall fpire time on thy face,
So thou refufe to drinke my deare fones blood.

Enter Lucius, with his weapon drawn.

Oh reuerent Tribunes, oh gentle aged men,
Vnbinde my fones, reuerce the doome of death,
And let me say that never wept before
My teares are now preualing Oratours.

Lu. Oh noble father, you lament in vaine,
The Tribunes heare not, no man is by,
And you recount your forrowes to a fone.

Ti. Ah Lucius for thy brothers let me plead,
Graue Tribunes, once more I intreat of you.

Lu. My gracious Lord, no Tribune heares you speake.

Ti. Why 'tis no matter man, if they did heare
They would not marke me, oh if they did heare
They would not pitty me.
Therefore I tell my forrowes bottes to the stones.

Who though they cannot answere my diffreffe,
Yet in some fort they are better then the Tribunes,
For that they will not intercept my tale;
When I doe wepe, they humbly at my feete
Receive my teares and leeme to wepe with me,
And were they but attired in graue weedes,
Rome could afford no Tribune like to thefe.
A fone is as fott waxe,
Tribunes more hard then ftones:
Afone is filent, and offended not,
And Tribunes with their tongues doome men to death.
But wherefore stand't thou with thy weapon drawn?

Lu. To rescue my two brothers from their death,
For which attempt the Judges haue pronounced
My everlafting doome of banifhment.

Ti. O happy man, they have befriended thee:
Why foolifh Lucius, doft thou not perceive
That Rome is but a wildernes of Tigers?
Tigers muft pray, and Rome affords no prey
But me and mine: how happy art thou then,
From these deweouters to be banished?
But who comes with our brother Marcus heere?

Enter Marcus and Lauinia.

Mar. Titus, prepare thy noble eyes to wepe,
Or if not so, thy noble heart to breake:
I bring consumifg forrow to thine age.

Ti. Will it confume me? Let me fee it then.

Mar. This was thy daughter.

Ti. Why Marcus to the is.

Luc. Aye me this obiect kills me.

Ti. Faint-harted boy, arise and looke vpon her,
Speake Lauinia, what accursed hand
Hath made thee handleffe in thy Fathers fight?
What foole hath added water to the Sea?
Or bought a fagget to bright burning Troy?
My griefe was at the height before thou camst,
And now like Nyphus it dids aethounds begin:
Give me a fword, Ile chop off my hands too,
For they haue fought for Rome, and all in vaine:
And they haue nur't this woe,
In feeding life:
In booteleffe prayer haue they bene held vp,
And they have feru'd me to effectleffe vie.
Now all the feruice I require of them,
Is that the one will helpe to cut the other:
'Tis well Lauinia, that thou haft no hands,
For hands to do Rome feruice, is but vaine.

Luc. Speake gentle fider, who hath martyr'd thee?

Mar. O that delightfull engine of her thoughts,
That blab'd them with fuch pleasing eloquence,
Is torne from forth that pretty hollow cage,
Where like a sweet melodious bird it sung,
Sweat varied notes inchanting every ear.

Luci. Oh lay thou for her,
Who hath done this deed?

Marc. Oh thus I found her fraying in the Parke,
Seeking to hide herelfe as doth the Deare
That hath receiued some vnreuring wound.

Ti. It was my Deare,
And he that wounded her,
Hath hurt me more, then had he kild me dead:
For now I fland as one vpon a Rocke,
Inuiron'd with a wilderneffe of Sea.
Who marks the waxing tide,
Grow waue by waue,
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

Exeunt. My Lord the Emperour, Send thee this word, that if thou loue thy fonne, Let Marcus, Lucius, or thy felle old Titus, Or any one of you, chop off your hand, And fend it to the King: he for the fame, Will fend thee hither both thy fonnen alie, And that shall be the ranfome for their fault.

Tit. Oh gracious Empereour, oh gentle Aaron. Did euer Rauen finge fo like a Larke, That ghes fweet tydings of the Sunnes vprie? With all my heart, Ile fend the Empereour my hand, Good Aton wilt thou help to chop it off? Lu. Stay Father, for that noble hand of thine, That hath throwne downe fo many enemies, Shall not be fent: my hand will ferue the turne, My youth can better fpare my blood then you, And therefore mine flall faue my brothers lues. Mar. Which of your hands hath not defended Rome, And reard aloft the bloody Batlleaxe, Writing destrucion on the enemies Cattle? Oh none of both but are of high defert: My hand hath bin but idle, let it ferue To ranfome my two nephews from their death, Then haue I kept it to a worthy end. Moore. Nay come agree, whole hand shallgoe along For feare they die before their pardon come. Mar. My hand shall goe. Lu. By heauen it shall not goe. Ti. Sirs ftrive no more, fuch whithered hearbs as these Are meete for plucking vp, and therefore mine. Lu. Sweet Father, if I shall be thought thy fonne, Let me redeeme my brothers both from death. Mar. And for our fathers fakes, and mothers care, Now let me fwhel a brothers loue to thee. Ti. Agree betweene you, I will fare my hand. Lu. Then Ile goe fetch an Axe. Mar. But I will vfe the Axe. Exeunt Ti. Come hither Aaron, Ile deceuie them both, Lend me thy hand, and I will guie thee mine, Moore. If that be cal d deceit, I will be honett, And never whil I live deceuie men fo: But Ile deceuie you in another fort, And that you lye ere halfe an houre passe.

He cuts off Titus hand.

Enter Lucius and Marcus again.

Tit. Now say you frieke, what shall be, is difpatched: Good Aton give his Maielie me hand, Tell him, it was a hand that warded him From thouthand dangers: bid him bury it: More hath it merited: That let it haue, As for for my fonnen, fay I account of them, As jewels purchaft at an eafe price, And yet deere too, because I bought mine owne, Aton. I goe Andronicus, and for thy hand, Looke by and by to haue thy fonnen with thee: Their heads I meane: Oh how this villaney Doth fat me with the very thoughts of it. Let fooles do good, and faire men call for grace, Aton will haue his foule blace like his face. Exit. Ti. O heere I lift this one hand vp to heauen, And bow this feele ruine to the earth, If any power pittis wretched teares, To that I call: what wilt thou kneele with me? Doe then deare heart, for heauen shall heare our prayers, Or with our fighs weele breath the welkin dimme, And flaine the Sun with fogge as fometime cloudes, When they do hug him in their melting bowmes. *Mar. Oh brother speake with poftibilities, And do not breake into thefe deepe extrematnes.

Ti. Is not my forrow deeppe, having no bottome? Then
Then be my passions bottomelesse with them,

Mar. But yet let reason governo thy lament.

Titus. If there were reason for these miseries,
Then into limits could I binde my woes:

When heaven doth weep, doth not the earth oreflow?
If the winds rage, doth not the Sea wax mad,
Threatening the welkin with his big-fwolne face?
And wilt thou have a reason for this cole?
I am the Sea. Harke how her fighes doe flow:
Shee is the weeping welkin, I the earth:
Then must my Sea be moned with her fighes,
Then must my earth with her continual tears,
Become a deluge : overfow'd and drown'd:
For why, my bowsels cannot hide her woes,
But like a drunkard mist I vomit them:
Then give me leaue, for looers will have leaue,
To cafe their flamackes with their bitter tongues,

Enter a miffenger with two beads and a band.

Meff. Worthy Andronicus, ill art thou repaid,
For that good hand thou lentst the Emperor:
Heere are the heads of thy two noble fonnen.
And heere thy hand in come to thee fant backe:
Thy griefes, their spoers: Thy resolution mockt,
That woe is me to thinke upon thy woes,
More then remembrance of my fathers death.

Marc. Now let hot Aetna coole in Cicilie,
And be my heart an ever-burning hell:
These miseries are more then may be borne:
But sorrow flouted at, is double death.
Luc. Ah that this figh should make so deep a wound,
And yet detehe life not shrinke thereat:
That ever death should let life beare his name,
Where life hath no more interet but to breath.
Marc. Alas poore hart that kiffe is comfortlefe,
As frozen water to a flared snake.
Titus. When will this fearefull fliumber have an end?
Marc. Now farwell flatterie, die Andronicus,
Thou doft not flumber, see thy two sons heads,
Thy warlike hands, thy mangled daughter here:
Thy other baništ fonnen with this deere figh,
Strucke pale and bloodlefe, and thy brother,
Euen like a flone Image, cold and numme.
Ah now no more will I controule my griefes,
Rent of thy fluer haire, thy other hand
Gnawing with thy teeth, and be this dismall figh.
The cloing vp of our moift wretched eyes:
Now is a time to florne, why art thou fill?

Titus. Ha, ha, ha.
Marc. Why doft thou laugh? it fits not with this hour,
Ti. Why I have not another teare to fhed:
Befides, this sorrow is an enemy,
And would vfurpe vpon my watry eyes,
And make them blinde with tributarie teares.
Then which way shall I finde Reuenges Caue?
For these two heads doe feeme to speake to me,
And threat me, I shall never come to bliffe,
Till all these milchlefe be returned againe,
Euen in their throats that haue committed them.
Come let me fee what taske I haue to doe,
You banie people, circle me about,
That I may turne me to each one of you,
And sweare vnto my soule to right your wrongs.
The vow is made, come Brother take a head,

And in this hand the other will I beare.
And Lauinia thou shalt be employd in these things:
Bear eu thine hand sweet wench betweene thy teeth:
As for thee boy, goe get thee from my right,
Thou art an Exile, and thou must not stay,
Hie to the Gothes, and raife an army there,
And if you loue me, as I thinke you doe,
Let's kiffe and part, for we haue much to doe.

Exit Titus.

Manet Lucius.

Luc. Farewell Andronicus my noble Father:
The wofull man that euer liud in Rome;
Farewell proud Rome, til Lucius come againe,
Heloues his pledges deare then his life:
Farewell Lauinia my noble fitter,
O would thou wert as thou to fare haft beene,
But now, nor Lucius nor Lauinia lies
But in obliuion and hatefull grievances:
If Lucius lye, he will requit your wrongs,
And make proud Saturnine and his Empresse
Beg at the gates lies Tarquin and his Queene.
Now will I to the Gothes and raife a power,
To be reueng'd on Rome and Saturnine.

Exit Lucius

A Break.

Enter Andronicus, Marcus, Lauinia, and the Bey.

An. So, so, now fit, and looke you cate no more
Then will preferue luft fo much strength in vs
As will reuenge these bitter woes of ours.
Marcus vnknit that forrow-wresthen knot:
Thy Neece and I (poore Creatures) want our hands
And cannot paffionate our tenfold griefe,
With foulded Armes. This poore right hand of mine,
Is left to tirannize vpon my breath.
Who when my hart all mad with misery,
Beats in this hollow prifon of my flesh,
Then thus I thumpe it downe.
Thou Map of woe, that thus doft talk in figures,
When thy poore hart beats without ragius beating,
Thou canft not Arike it thus to make it still?
Wound it with firing girle, kil it with grones:
Or get some little knife betweene thy teeth,
And Iuft againft thy hart make thou a hole,
That all the teares that thy poore eyes let fall
May run into that finke, and foaking in,
Drowne the lamenting foole, in Sea faft teares.

Mar. Ty brother fy, teach her not thus to lay
Such violent hands vpon her tender life.

An. How now! Has forrow made thee doate already?

Why Marcus, no man should be mad but I:
What violent hands can she lay on her life:
Ah, wherefore doft thou vrghe the name of hands,
To bid Anecus tell the tale twice ore

How Troy was burnt, and he made miserable?
O handle not the theame, to talke of hands,
Leaft we remember still that we have none,
Fie, fie, how Frantiquely I square my talke
As if we should forget we had no hands:
If Marcus did not name the word of hands,
Come, lets fall to, and gentle girle eate this,
Here is no drinke? Harke Marcus what the fiales,
I can interpret all her martir'd fignes,
She fiales, the drincke no other drinke but teares
Brew'd with her forrow: meth'd vpon her cheeckes,

Speech-
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

Vnclefle complaynet, I will lerne thy thought:
In thy dumb action, will I be as perfect
As bagging Hermits in their holy prayers.
Thou shalt not fighte nor hold thy stumps to heaven,
Nor winke, nor nod, nor kneele, nor make a signe,
But I (of these) will wret a Alphabet,
And by still practice, lerne to know thy meaning.

Boy. Good grandfier leue these bitter deepse lament,
Make my Aunt merry, with some pleasing tale.

Mar. Alas, the tender boy in passion mou’d,
Doth wepe to fee his grandfiers heauenffe.

An. Peace tender Sapling, thou art made of teares,
And teares will quickly melt thy life away,

Marcus strikes the dph with a knife.

What doest thou frike at Marcus with knife.

Mar. At that that I haue kild my Lord, a Flys
An. Out on the murderers: thou killest my hart,
Mine eyes clo’d with view of Tirranie:
A deed of death done on the Innocent
Becoms not Titus broher: get thee gone,
I fee thou art not for my company.

Mar. Alas (my Lord) I haue but kild a file.

An. But? How: if that Flied had a father and mother?
How would he hang his flender glided wings
And buzz lamenting doings in the ayer,
Poore harmless Fly.

That with his pretty buzzy melody,
Came heere to make vs merry,
And thou haft kild him.

Mar. Pardon me sir,
it was a blacke illavoure’d Fly,
Like to the Empresse Moore, therefore I kilm him.

An. Oo oo,
Then pardon me for reprehending thee,
For thou haft done a Charitable deed:
Glue me thy knife, I will infrunt on him,
Flattering my selues, as if it were the Moore.
Come hither purpofely to poyson me.

There’s for thy felle, and thats for Samira: Ah Sirra,
Yet I think ye are not brought fo low,
But that betweene vs, we can kill a Fly.
That comes in likenesse of a Cole-blacke Moore.

Mar. Alas poore man, grieue ha’s fo wrought on him,
He takes falle shadowes, for true subfiances.

An. Come, take away: Lauinia, goe with me,
Ile to thy cloffet, and goe read with thee
Sad stories, chanced in the times of old.
Come boy, and goe with me, thy figh is young,
And thou shalt read, when mine begin to dazell. Exeunt

Actus Quartus.

Enter young Lucius and Lauinia running after him, and the Boy flies from her with his books under his arme.

Enter Titus and Marcus.

Boy. Helpe Grandfier helpe, my Aunt Lauinia,
Followes me every where I know not why.

Good VnCLE Marcus fee how swift the comes,
Alas sweet Aunt, I know not what you mean.

Mar. Stand by me Lucius, doe not feare thy Aunt.

Titus. She loues thee boy too well to doe thee harme
Boy. I when my father was in Rome the did.

Mar. What means my Neece Lauinia by thefe signes?

Ti. Fear not Lucius, somewhat doth the meane:
See Lucius fee, how much she makes of thee:
Some whether would the haue thee goe with her.
Ab boy, Cerialia neuer with more care
Read to her fonnes, then she hath read to thee,
Sweet Poetry, and Tullies Orator:
Canst thou not gesse wherefore she plies thee thus?

Boy. My Lord I know not I, nor can I gesse,

Vnffe some fit or frenzie do poifffe her:
For I have heard my Grandfier say full oft,
Extreme of griefes would make men mad.
And I have read that Hecuba of Troy,
Ran mad through forrow, that made me to feare,
Although my Lord, I know my noble Aunt,
Loues me as deare as ere my mother did,
And would not but in fury frit my youth,
Which made me downe to throw my booke, and file
Caffles perhaps, but pardon me sweet Aunt,
And Madam, if my VnCLE Marcus goe,
I will mofst willingly attend your Ladyhip.

Mar. Lucius I will.

Ti. How now Lauinia, Marcus what means this?

Some booke there is that she defires to fee,
Which is it grife of the? Open them boy,
But thou art deeper read and better skild,
Come and take choyfe of all my Library,
And fo beguile thy forrow, till the heauen
Reueale the dam’d contriver of this deed.
What booke?

Why lift he vp her armes in sequence thus?

Mar. I thinke she means that ther was more then one
Confedurate in the faft, I more there was:
Or elfe to heuen he haues them to revenge.

Ti. Lucius what booke is that she tooffeth fo?

Boy. Grandfier ’ts Oulds Metamorphos,

My mother gave me it.

Mar. For loue of her that’s gone,
Perhaps the did it from hearing therift.

Ti. Soft, fo buily the turnes the leaues,
Helpes her, what would she finde? Lauinia shall I read?

This is the tragicke tale of Philomen

And treates of Terus trefon and his rape,
And rape I feare was roote of thine annoy.

Mar. See brother fee, note how she quotes the leaues

Ti. Lauinia, wert thou thus furpris’d sweet grife, Raufhit and wrong’d as Philomena was?

Forc’d in the ruthless, vait, and gloomy woods?

See, fee, I fuch a place there is where we did hunt,
(O had we neuer, neuer hunted there)

Patern’d by that the Poet heere desribes,

By nature made for murtherers and for rapes.

Mar. O why should nature build so foule a den,

Vnffe the Gods delight in tragedies?

Ti. Gius signes sweet grife, for here is none but friends
What Romaine Lord it was durft do the deed?
Or funke not Saturnes, as Targuin erits,

That left the Campe to finne in Lucerce bed.

Mar. Sit downe sweet Neece, brother sit downe by me,

Apollo, Pallas, Iove, or Mercury,

Inpire me that I may this treston finde.
My Lord looke heere, looke heere Lauinia.

He writes his Name with his flaffe, and guides it with feste and mouth.

This fandie plot is plaine, guide if thou canst

Page 43
This after me, I have wrote my name,
Without the helpe of any hand at all.
Curst be that hart that forsc'ft vs to that shift :
Write thou good Neece, and heere display at laft,
What God will have discouered for reuenge,
Hearne guide thy pen to print thy forrowes plaine,
That we may know the Traytors and the truth.

See takes the sliaffe in her mouth, and guides it with her flumps and writes.

Tis. Oh doe ye read my Lord what she hath writs ?

Stuprum, Chiron, Demetrius.

Mar. What, what, the lustfull sonnes of Tamar.

Performers of this hainous bloody deed?

Ti. Magni Dominator poli,
Tam lentus audit seclera, tam lentus videt ?

Mar. Oh calme thee, gentle Lord : Although I know

There is enough written vpon this earth,
To stirre a mutiny in the mildest thoughts,
And arme the minds of infants to exclame.

My Lord kneele downe with me! Launia kneele,
And kneele sweet boy, the Romaine Hectors hope,
And fware with me, as with the wofull Feere
And father of that charful broome,
Lord Ianius Brutus fware for Lucerce rape,
That we will proconfute (by good adulit)
Mortall reuenge vpon these tratoruous Gothes,
And fee their blood, or die with this reproach.

Tis. Tis fure enough, and you know how.

But if you hunt these Beare-whelpes, then beware
The Dam will wake, and if the winde you once,
Shee's with the Lyon deeply still in league.
And lulls him whilst the palyeth on her backe,
And when he sleepeis will she do what she lift,
You are a young huntman Marcus, let it alone:
And come, I will goe get a leafe of brasse,
And with a Gad of fleeele will write these words,
And lay it by: the angry Northern winde
Will blow these fands like Sibels leaves abroad,
And wheres your lesson then. Boy what fay you ?

Boy. I fay my Lord, that if I were a man,
Their mothers bed-chamber should not be safe,
For these bad bond-men to the yoake of Rome.

Mar. I that's my boy, thy father hath full oft,
For his vngrateful full country done the like.

Boy. And Vnclle fo well, and if I liue,

Tis. Come goe with me into mine Armorie,
Lucius Ile fitt thee, and withall, my boy
Shall carry from me to the Empreffes sonnes,
Prelents that I intend to fend them both,
Come, come, thou'll do thy maffege, wilt thou not?

Boy. I with my dagger in their bosomes Grandfire:

Ti. No boy not fo, ile teach thee another course,
Launia come, Marcus looke to my house,
Lucius and Ile goe braue it at the Court,
I marry will we fir,and weele be waited on.

Exeunt.

Mar. O heauens! Can you heare a good man gone
And not relent, or not compaign him?

Marcus attend him in his extasie,
That hath more fears of forrow in his heart,
Then foe-men markes vpon his batters shield,
But yet fo luff, that he will not reuenge,
Reuenge the heauens for old Andronius.

Enter Aron, Chiron and Demetrius at one door and at another dore young Lucius and another, with a bundle of weapons, and verses writ vpon them.

Chb. Demetrius heereth the sonne of Lucius,
He hath some meffage to deliuer vs.

Aron. I some mad meffage from his mad Grandfather.

Boy. My Lords, with all the humblleneffe I may,
I greece your honours from Andronius,
And pray the Rame Gods confound you both.

Dem. Grameicle louely Lucius, what's the newest?
For villainie's marke with rape. May it pleafe you,
My Grandfire well adul'd hath fent by me,
The goodliest weapons of his adorzie,
To gratifie your honourable youth.

The hope of Rome, for so he bad me say :
And fo I do and with his gifts prefent
Your Lordships, when euer you have need,
You may be armed and appointed well,
And so I leave you both: like bloody villaines.

Exit Dem. What's heere? a scrolle, & written round about ?

Let's fee.

Integer vitae sejleriqve purus, non egit maury iaculis nec ar-
cus.

Chb. O'tis a verie in Horace, I know it well.
I read it in the Grammer long agoe.

Moore. I luff, a verie in Horace right, you haue it,

Now what a thing is that of a paffe?

Heer's no found left, the old man hath found their guilt,
And fends the weapons wrapt about with lines,
That wound beyound their feeling to the quick :
But were our wity EMPrefse well a foot,
She would applaude Andronius conceit.
But let her reft, in her unrest a while.

And now young Lords, wa's tonot a happy farrre
Led vs to Rome strangers, and more then fo;
Captuvs, to be aduanced to this height?
It did me good before the Pallace gate,
To braue the Tribune in his brothers hearing.

Dem. But me more good, to fee fo great a Lord
Bafely infinuate, and lend vs gifts.

Moore. Had he not reafon Lord Demetrius?
Did you not vfe his daughter very friendly?

Dem. I would we had a thoundand Rame Dames
At such a bay, by ture to fere our luff.

Chb. A charitable wish, and full of loue.

Moore. Heere lack's but you mother for to fay, Amen.

Chb. And that would the for twenty thoufand more.

Dem. Come, let vs go, and praty to all the Gods

For our beloved mother in her paines.

Moore. Pray to the deuils, the gods haue gien vs ouer.

Flourish.

Dem. Why do the Emperors trumpets flourifh thus?

Chb. Belike for joy the Emperour hath a fonne.

Dem. Soft, who comes heere?

Enter Nurfe with a blacke a Moore child.

Nur. Good morrow Lords:
O tell me, did you fee Aaron the Moore?

Aron. Well, more or leffe, or nere a whit at all,

Heere Aaron is, and what with Aaron now?

Nurfe. Oh gentle Aaron, we are all vndone,
Now helpe, or woe bethide thee euermore.

Aron. Why, what a catterwalling doft thou keeppe ?

What doft thou wrap and fumble in thine armes?

Nurfe. O that which I would hide from heauens eye,
Our Empreffes flame, andlatly Rumes digrace,
She is deliuered Lords, she is deliuered.

Aron To whom ?

Nurfe. I meane she is brought a bed ?

Aron. Wel God gie she her good reft,
And we will all subscribe to thy advice:
Sawe thou the child, so we may all be safe.

_Aron._ Then fit we downe and let vs all consult.
My sonne and I will have the winde of you:
Keepe there, now talke at pleasure of your safety.

_Deme._ How many women saw this childe of his?

_Aron._ Why so braue Lords, when we loyne in league
I am a Lambe: but if you braue the _Moore_,
The chafed Bore, the mountainie Lyonelle,
The Ocean swells not so as _Aaron_ rormes:
But fay againe, how many faw the childe?

_Nurfe._ Cornelius, the midwife, and my felle,
And none else but the deliuered Emprefs.

_Aron._ The Empresse, the Midwife, and your felle,
Two may keepe counsell, when the the third's away:
Goe to the Empresse, tell her this I said,
He kills her Weake, weake, lo cries a Pigge prepared to th'ipit.

_Deme._ What mean'ft thou _Aaron_?

Wherefore didn't thou this?

_Aron._ O Lord Sir, 'tis a deed of pollicie
Shall the fume to betray this guilt of our's:
A long tongu'd babling Gooffy! No Lords no:
And now be it knowne to you my full intent.
Not farre, _Aron_ my Country-man,
His wife but yeer night was brought to bed,
His childe is like to her, faire as you are:
Goe packe with him, and glue the mother gold,
And tell them both the circumstance of all,
And how by this their Childes shall be adaunc'd,
And be receuied for the Emperours heyre,
And subtrubted in the place of mine,
To calme this tempeft whirling in the Court,
And let the Emperour dandle him for his owne.
Harke ye Lords, ye fee I haue guen her phyficke,
And you must needs beflow her feruall,
The fields are neere, and you are gallant Groomes:
This done, fee that you take no longer daies
But send the Midwife presently to me.
The Midwife and the Nurfe well made away,
Then let the Ladies tattle what they pleafe.

_Chi._ _Aaron_ I fee thou wilt not tuff the ayre with fe
_Deme._ For this care of _Tamara_, (crets.
_Her felle, and hers are highly bound to thee._

_Exeunt._

_Aron._ Now to the Gothes, as swift as Swallow flies,
There to dipofe this treafure in mine armes,
And secretly to greete the Empreffes friends:
Come on you thick-lipt-flaue, Ile beare you hence,
For it is that you put vs to our thifts:
Ile make you feed on berries, and on rootes,
And feed on curds and whay, and fuckle the Goate,
And cabbin in a Cave, and bring you vp
To be a warriour, and command a Campe.

_Enter Titus, old Marcus, young Lucius_, _and other gentlemen _with bones, and Titus beares the arrows with _Letters on the end of them._

_Tit._ Come _Marcus_, come, kinmen this is the way.
Sir Boy let me fee your Archerie,
Looke yee draw home enough, and 'tis there fraught:
_Terras Afras religius_, be you remembred Marcus.
She's pure, she's frit, firs take you to your tooles,
You Cofens shall goe found the Ocean:
And caft your nets, haply you may find her in the Sea,
Yet ther's as little iutice as at Land:
No _Publius_ and _Sempronius_, you muft doe it,
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

'Tis you must dig with Mattocke, and with Spade, And pierce the inmost Center of the earth: Then when you come to Plutos Region, I pray you deliver him this petition, Tell him it is for Justice, and for Aide, And that it comes from old Andronicus, Shaken with Forrowes in Gratefull Rome. Ah Rome! Well, well, I made thee miserable, What time I threw the peoples suffrages On him that thus doth tyrannize ore me: Goe get you gone, and pray be carefull all, And leave you not a man of warre vnsearcht, This wicked Emperor may have shipt her hence, And kinmen then we may goe pipe for Justice. Marcus O'Publius is not this a heauie sake To fee thy Noble Vnkcle thus distract? Publi. Therefore my Lords it highly vs concernes, By day and night t'attend him carefully: And reede his humour kindly as we may, Till time beget some carefull remedie. Marcus Kinmen, his forrowes are past remedie. Ioyne with the Gothes, and with revolvingall warre, Take wreake on Rome for this ingratitude, And vengeance on the Traytor Saturnine. Tit. Publius how now? how now my Maisters? What haue you met with her? Publi. No my good Lord, but Pluto sends you word, If you will haue reuenge from hell you shall, Marrie for Justice he is so impol'd, He thinkes with loue in heauen, or some where else: So that perforce you must needs flay a time. Tit. He doth me wrong to feed me with delays, He diue into the burning Lake below, And pull out her of Acaron by the heales. Marcus we are but shrubs, no Cedars we, No big-bon'd men, fram'd of the Cyclops fize, But mettall Marcus, s Steele to the very backe, Yet wrung with wrongs more then our bace can beare: And fith there's no Justice in earth nor hell, We will follicte heauen, and moue the Gods. To send downe Justice for to wreake our wrongs: Come to this geare, you are a good Archer Marcus. He gies them the Arrows. Ad Ioan, that's for you: here ad Appollem, Ad Martem, that's for my selfe, Heere Boy to Pallas, here to Mercurie, To Saturnine, to Caius, not to Saturnine, You were as good to shoote against the winde. Too it Boy, Marcus lofe when I bid: Of my word, I have written to effect, Their's not a God left vnfollicited. Marcus Kinmen, shoot all your shafts into the Court, We will affliet the Emperor in his pride. Tit. Now Maisters draw, oh well said Lucius: Good Boy in Virgoes lap, give it Pallas. Marcus. My Lord, I aime a Mile beyond the Moone, Your letter is with Iupiter by this. Tit. Ha, ha, Publius, Publius, what hast thou done? See, see, thou hast shot off one of Taurus hornes. Marcus. This was the sport my Lord, when Publius shot, The Bull being gal'd, gave Aries such a knocke, That downe fell both the Rams horns in the Court, And who should finde them but the Empresse villaines: She laughd, and told the Moore he should not chooese But give them to his Maister for a present. Tit. Why there it goes, God give your Lordship ioie. Enter the Clowne with a basket and two Pigeons in it. Titus. News, news, from heauen, Marcus the poat is come. Sirrah, what tidings? haue you any letters? Shall I haue Justice, what sayes Iupiter? Clowne. Ho the Bibetmaker, he sayes that he hath taken them downe againe, for the man must not be hang'd till the next weeke. Tit. But what sayes Iupiter I ask thee? Clowne. Alas sir, I know not Iupiter: I never dranke with him in all my life. Tit. Why villain art not thou the Carrier? Clowne. I of my Pigeons sir, nothing else. Tit. Why, did it thou not come from heauen? Clowne. From heauen, alas sir, I never came there, God forbid I should be so bold, to preffe to heauen in my young dayes. Why I am going with my pigeons to the Tribunall Plebs, to take vp a matter of brawle, betwixt my Vnce, and one of the Empeirals men. Marcus. Why sir, that is as fit as can be ferue for your Oration, and let him deliver the Pigeons to the Empeiror from you. Tit. Tell mee, can you deliver an Oration to the Empeiror with a Grace? Clowne. Nay truely sir, I could never say grace in all my life. Tit. Sirrah come hither, make no more ado, But yee your Pigeons to the Empeiror, By me thou shalt have Justice at his hands. Hold, hold, meane while her's money for thy charges. Glue me pen and inke. Sirrah, can you with a Grace deliver a Supplication? Clown. Sir. Titus. Then here is a Supplication for you, and when you come to him, at the first approach you must kneele, then kisse his boote, then deliver vp your Pigeons, and then looke for your reward. Ie be at hand sir, fee you do it brauely. Clowne. I warrant you sir, let me alone. Tit. Sirrh haue thou a knife? Come let me see it. Heere Marcus, fold it in the Oration, For thou haft made it like an humble Suppliant: And when thou haft gien it the Empeiror, Knocke at my dore, and tell me what he sayes. Clowne. God be with you sir, I will. Exit. Tit. Come Marcus let vs goe, Publius follow me. Exeunt. Enter Empeiror and Empresse, and her two sons; the Empeiror brings the Arrows in his hand. that Titus shot at him. Satur. Why Lords, What wrongs are these? was euer seene An Empeiror in Rome thus ouerborne, Troubled, Confronted thus, and for the extent Of egall Justice, vs'd in such contempt? My Lords, you know the mightfull Gods, (how euer these disturbers of our peace Buzz in the peoples eares) then ought hath past, But euen with law against the willfull Sonses Of old Andro nicus. And what should it His Forrowes haue to overwhelm'd his wits, Shall we be thus afflickted in his weeds, His fits, his frenzie, and his bitterness? And now he writes to heauen for his redresse. See, heeres to Ioue, and this to Mercurie.
This to Apollo, this to the God of warre:
Sweet favours to flice about the streets of Rome:
What's this but Libelling against the Senate,
And blazoning our Injustice every where?
A goodly humour, is it not my Lords?
As who should say, in Rome no Injustice were.
But if I live, his fained exaties
Shall be no shelter to thofe outrage:
But he and his fhall know, that Injustice lives
In Saturninus health; ywhom if he fpeepe,
Hee'll fo awake, as he in fury fhall
Cut off the proud'ft Conspirator that lives.

Tam. My gracious Lord, my lovelye Saturnine,
Lord of my life, Commander of my thoughts,
Calme thee, and bear the faults of Titus age,
Th'effect of sorrow for his valiant Sonnes,
Whofe loffe hath p'ft'h him deeppe, and fcar'd his heart;
And rather comfort his diffretted plight,
Then profece the meaneft or the fleft.
For thofe contemptes. Why thus it fhall become High witted Tamora to glowe with all:
But Titus, I have taught thee to the quicke,
Thy life blood out: If Aaron now be wife,
Then is all safe, the Anchor's in the Port.

Enter Clowne.

How now good fellow, would'th thou speake with vs?
Clow. Yea forfooth, and your Mifterhip be Emperorial.
Tam. EmprefTe I am, but yonder fits the Emperor.
Clow. 'Tis he; God & Saint Stephen give you good den;
I haue brought you a Letter, & a couple of Pigion's heere.
He reads the Letter.

Satur. Goe take him away, and hang him prefently.
Clowne. How much money muft I haue?
Tam. Come firrah you muft be hang'd.
Clow. Hang'd? ber Lady, then I haue brought vp a neck to a faire end.

Satur. Depightfull and intollerable wrongs,
Shall I endure this monftrous villany?
I know from whence this fame deufe procedes:
May this be borne? As if his traitorous Sonnes,
That dy'd by law for murther of our Brother,
Haue by my meanes beene butcher'd wrongfully?
Goe dragge the villaine hither by the hairre,
Nor Age, nor Honour, shall faire priulidge:
For this proud mocke, Ile be thy fraughter man:
Sly frantick wretch, that holp'ft to make me great,
In hope thy felle should gooerne Rome and me.

Enter Nuntius Emilius.

Satur. What newes with thee Emilius?
Emil. Arme my Lord, Rome never had more caufe,
The Gothes haue gather'd head, and with a power
Of high refolued men, bent to the fpoyle
They hither march amaine, vnder conduct
Of Lucius, Sonne to old Andronicus:
Who threats in courfe of this reuenge to do
As much as euer Cortolanius did.

King. Is warlike Lucius Generall of the Gothes?
These tydings nip me, and I hang the head
As flowers with froit, or graffe beat downe with fторmes:
I, now begin our fourowes to approach,
'Tis he the common people loue fo much,
My felle hath ofte enoch feeld them fay,
(When I have walked like a private man)
That Lucius banifhement was wrongfully,
And they have wift that Lucius were their Emperor.

Tam. Why should you feare? Is not our City strong?

King. I, but the Citizens favour Lucius,
And will revolt from me, to succour him.

Tam. King, be thy thoughts Imperious like thy name.
Is the Sunne dim'd, that Gnaus do fkie in it?
The Eagle affures little Birds to finge,
And is not carefull what they meane thereby,
Knowing that with the shadow of his wings,
He can at pleafure flint their melodie.
Even fo mayeft thou, the giddy men of Rome,
Then cheare thy spirit, for know thou Emperor,
I will enchant the old Andronicus,
With words more fweet, and yet more dangerous
Then baifes to fifh, or hony flabkes to fpeepe,
When as the one is wounded with the baite,
The other rotted with delicious foode.

King. But he will not entreat his Sonne for vs.

Tam. If Tamora entreat him, then he will,
For I can smooth and fill his aged eare,
With golden promifles, that were his heart
Almoft impregnable, his old eares deafe,
Yet fhould both eare and heart obey my tongue.
Goe thou before to our Embaffadour,
Say, that the Emperor requests a parly
Of warlike Lucius, and appoint the meeting.

King. Emilius do this meffeage Honourably,
And if he fland in Hofgate for his fafety,
Bid him demand what pledge will pleafe him beft.

Emili. Your bidding fhall I do effectually.

Tam. Now will I to that old Andronicus,
And temper him with all the Art I haue,
To plucke proud Lucius from the warlike Gothes.
And now fweet Emperor be blithe againe,
And bury all thy feare in my defuies.

Satur. Then goe fucceffantly and plead for him.

Actus Quintus.

Flouris. Enter Lucius with an Army of Gothes, with Drum and Souldiers.

Luc. Approved warriours, and my faithfull Friends,
I haue receiv'd Letters from great Rome,
Which signifie what hate they bear their Emperor,
And how defirous of our fight they are.
Therefore great Lords, be as your Titles witneffe,
Imperious and impatient of your wrongs,
And wherein Rome hath done you any feathe,
Let him make treble fatisfacon.

Goth. Brave flipe, fprung from the Great Andronicus,
Whose name was once our terror, now our comfort,
Whose high exploits, and honourable Deeds,
Ingratefull Rome requites with foule contempt:
Behold in vs, weele follow where thou lead'ft,
Like hinging Bees in hotteft Sommers day,
Led by their Maifer to the flowerd fields,
And be aueng'd on curfed Tamora:
And as he fayth, fo fay we all with him.

Luc. I humbly thanke him, and I thanke you all.
But who comes heere, led by a luyft Goth?

Enter a Goth leading of Aaron with bis child in bis armes.

Goth. Renowned Lucius, from our troops I fрайd,
To gaze upon a ruinous Monafterie,

And
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

And as I earnestly did fixe mine eye
Upon the wafted building, sudainely
I heard a child cry vnderneath a wall:
I made vnto the noyse, when loone I heard,
The crying babe control’d with this discourse:
Peace Tawny faue, halfe me, and halfe thy Dam,
Did not thy Hue bewray whole brat thou art?
Had nature set thee, but thy Mothers looke,
Villaine thou mightst haue bene an Emperour,
But where the Bull and Cow are both milk-white,
They never do beget a cole-blacke-Calf:
Peace, villaine peace, euen thus he rates the babe,
For I muft beare thee to a truthy Goth,
Who when he knowes thou art the Empresse babe,
Will hold thee dearely for thy Mothers fake,
With this, my weapon drawne I ruft my vp him,
Surpriz’d him sudainely, and brought him hither
To vfe, as you think neecedfull of the man.

Luci.  Oh worthy Goth, this is the incarnate deuill,
That rob’d Andronicus of his good hand:
This is the Pearl that plea’d your Empresse eye,
And beare’s the Baue Fruit of his burning luft.
Say wall-e’y’d faue, whether’st thou convay
This growing Image of thy fiend-like face?
Why doft not speake? what deafe? Not a word?
A halter Souldiers, hang him on this Tree,
And by his fide his Fruite of Bastardie.

Aron. Touch not the Boy, he is of Royall blood.
Luci. Too like the Syre for euer being good.
First hang the Child that he may fee it fprall,
A fight to vexe the Fathers foule withall.

Aron. Get me a Ladder Luciua, faue the Childe,
And beare it from me to the Empresse:
If thou do this, Ile thow thee wondrous things,
That highely may advantage thee to heare;
If thou wilt not, befal what may befal,
Ile speake no more: but vengeance rot you all.

Luci. Say on, and if it pleafe me which thou speake’st,
Thy child shall live, and I will fee it Nourifht.

Aron. And if it pleafe thee? why affure thee Lucius,
’Twill vexe thy foule to heare what I shall speake:
For I muft talke of Murthers, Rapes, and Maftiacres,
Acts of Blace-night, abominable Deeds,
Complots of Milchife, Treafton, Villanies
Ruthfull to heare, yet pitiffouly preform’d,
And this shall all be buried by my death,
Vnleffe thou speare to me my Childe shall live.

Luci. Tell on thy minde,
I say thy Childe shall live.

Luci. Sware that he shall, and then I will begin,
Thou beleueth not God,
That gранted, how can’t thou beleue an oath?
Aron. What if I do not, as indeed I do not,
Yet for I know thou art Religious,
And haft a thing within thee, called Conscience,
With twenty Popish trickes and Ceremonies,
Which I have see frome carefull to obserue:
Therefore I vrg thy oath, for that I know
An Idoet holds his Bauble for a God,
And kepeth his bauble by which by that God he sweares,
To that Ile vrg him: therefore thou shalt vow
By that same God, what God so erie be it
That thou adoreft, and haft in reuerence,
To faue my Boy, to nourifh and bring him vp,
Ore else I will difcouer nought to thee.

Luci. Euen by my God I sware to to thee I will,
Aron. Frit know thou,
I beget him on the Empresse.

Luci. Oh moft Infatiate luxurious woman!

Aron. Tut Lucius, this was but a deed of Charite,
Toothat which thou haile heare of me anon,
’Twas her two Sonnehs that the Baffianus,
They cut thry Sifers tongue, and rauifh’d her,
And cut her hands off, and trim’d her as thou law’ft.

Luci. Oh detestable villaine!

Call’t thou that Trimming?

Aron. Why she was wafted, and cut, and trim’d,
And ’twas trim’d fport for them that had the doing of it.

Luci. Oh barbarous beaftly villaines like thy felfe!

Aron. Indeede, I was their Tutor to instruct them,
That Codding spirit had they from their Mother,
As fure a Card as euer wonne the Set.
That bloody minde I thinkke they learn’d of me,
As true a Dog as euer fought at head.
Well, let my Deeds be witnesse of my worth:
I trau’n thy Brethren to that guelffall hole,
Where the dead Corps of Baffianus lay:
I wrote the Letter, that thy Father found,
And hid the Gold within the Letter mention’d.
Confedera with the Queene, and her two Sonnes,
And what not done, that thou haue caufe to rue,
Wherein I had no stroke of Milchifte in it.

I play’d the Cheater for thy Fathers hand,
And when I had it, drew my fele apart,
And almoft broke my heart with extreme laughter.
I pried me through the Creucie of a Wall,
When for his hand, he had his two Sonnes heads,
Beheld his teares, and laughe’d fo hartely,
That both mine eyes were raine like to his:
And when I told the Empresse of this fport,
She founded almoft at my pleafing tale,
And for my tydings, gave me twenty kifles.

God. What canst thou say all this, and never blushe?

Aron. I, like a backe Dogge, as the faying is.

Luci. Art thou not forry for thefe hainous deeds?

Aron. I, that I had not done a thoufand more:
Euen now I curfe the day, and yet I thinke
Fewe come within fewe compaff of my curfe,
Wherein I did not fome Notorious ill,
As kill a man, or elle defufe his death,
Rauifh a Maid, or plot the way to do it,
Accufe fome Innocent, and forfware my felfe,
And what not, that thoy might haue the paffing,
Make poore mens Cartell breake their neckes,
Set fire on Barnes and Haylackes in the night,
And bid the Owners quench them with the teares:
Oft haue I dig’d vp dead men from their graues,
And fet them upright at their deere Friends doore,
Euen when their forrowes almoft was forget,
And on their kinnes, as on the Barke of Trees,
Haue with my knife carued in Romaine Letters,
Let not your forrow die, though I am dead,
Tut, I have done a thoufand dreadfull things
As willingly, as one would kill a Fly,
And nothing greesse me hartily indeede,
But that I cannot doe ten thoufand more.

Luci. Bring downe the diuell, for he must not die
So sweet a death as hanging prefently.

Aron. If there be diuels, would I were a diuell,
To liue and burne in everlafting fire,
So I might haue your company in hell,

But
But to torment you with my bitter tongue.

Luci. Sirs stop his mouth, & let him speake no more.

Enter Emilius.

Goth. My Lord, there is a Messenger from Rome
Defires to be admitted to your presence.

Luc. Let him come neere.

Welcome Emilius, what the newes from Rome ?

Emi. Lord Luciu, and you Princes of the Gothes,
The Romaine Emperour greets you all by me,
And for he vnderstandes you are in Armes,
He caues a parly at your Fathers house.

Welcome to demand your Hoffages,
And they shall be immediately delvered.

Goth. What faves our General ?

Luc. Emilius, let the Emperour glue his pledges
Vnto my Father, and my Uncle Marcus,
Flourish.

And we will come : march away.

Enter Tamora, and her two Sons disguised.

Tam. Thus in this strange and sad Habilliament,
I will encounter with Andronicus.

And say, I am Revenge sent from Aelow,
To be with him and right his hainous wrongs:
Knocke at his fudy where they fay he keepes,
To ruminate strange plots of dire Revenge,
Tell him Revenge is come to be with him,
And worke confusion on his Enemies.

They knocke and Titus opens his fudy door.

Tit. Who doth molle my Contemplation?

Is it your tricke to make me ope the drear,
That fo my fad decrees may fife away,
And all my fuidy be to no effect?

You are deceiu'd, for what I meane to do,
See heere in bloody lines I have fet done:

And what is written shall be executed.

Tam. Titus, I am come to talke with thee,

Tit. No a word : how can I grace my talke,
Wanting a hand to give it action,
Thou haft the ods of me, therefore no more.

Tam. If thou did'ft know me,
Thou would'ft talke with me.

Tit. I am not mad, I know thee well enow,
Witnesse this wretched flump,
Witnesse theif crimson lines,
Witnesse theif Trenches made by griefe and care,
Witnesse theif daying, and heauie night,
Witnesse all sorrow, that I know thee well.

For our proud Emprefle, Mighty Tamora :
Is not thy comming for my other hand?

Tam. Know thou fad man, I am not Tamora,
She is thy Enemy, and I thy Friend,
I am Revenge sent from th' infernal Kingdom,
To eafe the gnawing Vulture of the mind,
By working weakefull vengeance on my Foes :
Come downe and welcome me to this worlds light,
Confere with me of Murder and of Death,
Ther's not a hollow Cause or lurking place,
No Vaft obscurny, or Mifly vale,
Where bloody Murther or deteiled Rape,
Can couche for fear, but I will finde them out,
And in their ears tell them my dreadfull name,
Revenge, which makes the foule offenders quafe.

Tit. Art thou Revenge? and art thou bent to me,
To be a torment to mine Enemies?

Tam. I am, therefore come downe and welcome me.

Tit. Doe me some seruice ere I come to thee :
Looe bythy fide where Rape and Murder stands,
Now give some furance that thou art Revenge,
Stab them, or teare them on thy Chariot wheeles,
And then Ile come and be thy Waggoner,
And whirle along with thee about the Globes.

Prouide thee two proper Falfries, as blanke as let,
To hale thy veryfull Waggon swift away,
And finde out Murder in their guilty cares.

And when thy Car is laden with their heads,
I will dismount, and by the Waggon wheele,
Trot like a Seruile footeman all day long,
Even from Eptons rising in the East,

Vntill his very downesfall in the Sea.

And day by day Ile do this heauy task,

So thou destroy Rape and Murder there.

Tam. There are my Minifters, and come with me.

Tit. Are them thy Minifters, what are they call'd ?

Tam. Rape and Murder, therefore called So,

Cause they take vengeance of fuch kind of men.

Tit. Good Lord how like the Empreffes Sons they are,
And you the Empreff : But we worldly men,
Have miserable mad mishaking eyes.

Oh sweet Revenge, now do I come to thee,

And if one armes imbracement will content thee,
I will imbrace thee in it by and by.

Tam. This cloing with him, fits his Lunacie,

What ere I forge to feeke his braine-ficke fits,
Do you vphold, and maintaine in your speeches,
For now he firmly takes me for Revenge,

And being Credulous in this mad thought,
Ile make him fend for Lucius his Sonne,

And whil'lt I a Banquet hold him fure,
Ile find some cunning prafifie out of hand
To flatter and defperfe the giddle Gothes,
Or at the leafe make them his Enemies :

See heere he comes, and I must play my theame.

Tit. Long haue I bene forborne, and all for thee,

Welcome dread Fury to my woefull house,
Rapine and Murther, you are welcome too,

How like the Empreff and her Sonnes you are,

Well are you fitted, had you but a Moore,

Could not all hell afford you fuch a deuil?

For well I wote the Empreff neuer wags;

But in her company there is a Moore,
And would you repreffent our Queene aright
It were contenuent you had fuch a deuil :

But welcome as you are, what shall we doe ?

Tam. What would'ft thou haue vs doe Andronicus ?

Dem. Shew me a Murtherer, Ile deale with him.

Chu. Shew me a Villain that hath done a Rape,

And I am fent to be reueng'd on him.

Tam. Shew me a thoundand that have done thee wrong,
And Ile be reuenged on them all.

Tit. Looke round about the wicked streets of Rome,

And when thou fin'd it a man that's like thy felfe,

Good Murder flab him, hee's a Murtherer.

Goe thou with him, and when it is thy hap
To finde another that is like to thee,

Good Rapine flab him, he is a Rapiner.

Go thou with them, and in the Emperours Court,

There is a Queene attended by a Moore,

Well maift thou know her by thy owne proportion,

For vp and downe the doth reemble thee.

I pray thee doe on them fome violent death,

They have bene violent to me and mine.
Tam. Well haft thou lefson'd vs, this shall we do. But would it please thee good Andronicus, To fend for Lucius thy thriche Valiant Sonne, Who leads towards Rome a Band of Warlike Gothes, And bid him come and Banquet at thy house. When he is here, even at thy Solemnne Feast, I will bring in the Emprefs and her Sonnes, The Empreuer himfelfe, and all thy Foes, And at thy mercy shall they floop, and kneele, And on them fhall thou eafe, thy angry heart: What fakes Andronicus to this deulfe?

Enter Marcus.

Tit. Marcus my Brother, 'tis sad Titus calls, Go gentle Marcus to thy Nephew Lucius, Thou shalt enquire him out among the Gothes, Bid him repair to me, and bring with him Some of the chiefest Princes of the Gothes, Bid him encampe his Souldiers where they are, Tell him the Emperour, and the Emprefs too, Feasts at my house, and he shall Feast with them, This do thou for my love, and do let him, As he regards his aged Fathers love:

Mar. This will I do, and where returne againe.

Tam. Now will I hence about thy businesfe, And take my Minifters along with me.

Tit. Nay, nay, let Rape and Murder play with me, Or els Ile call my Brother backe againe, And clreau to no reuenge but Lucius.

Tam. What say you Boyes, will you bide with him, Whiles I goe tell my Lord the Emperour, How I have gouern'd our determined left? Yeeld to his Humour, smooth and speake him faire, And tarry with him till I turne againe.

Tit. I know them all, though they suppose me mad, And will ore-reach them in their owne deuifes, A payre of cursed hell-bounds and their Dam.

Dem. Madam depart at pleafure, leave vs here.

Tam. Farewell Andronicus, reuenge now goes

To lay a compot to betray thy Foes.

Tit. I know thou doo'st, and sweet reuenge farewell.

Chi. Tell vs old man, how fhall we be imploy'd?

Tit. Tut, I have worke enough for you to doe,

Publius come hither, Caius, and Valentine.

Pub. What is your will?

Tit. Know you thefe two?

Pub. The Empreffe Sonnes I take them, Chiron, Demetrius.

Titus. Fie Publius, fie, thou art too much decke'd, the one is Murder, Rape is the others name, And therefore bind them gentle Publius, Caius, and Valentine, lay hands on them, Oft haue you heard me with for such an houser, And now I find it, therefore bind them sure,

Chi. Villaines forbeare, we are the Empreffe Sonnes.

Pub. And therefore do we, what we are commanded. Stop clofe their mouthes, let them not speake a word, Is he fure bound, looke that you binde them fait.

Enter Titus Andronicus with a knife, and Lauinia with a Bafon.

Tit. Come, come Lauinia, looke, thy Foes are bound, Sirs flop their mouthes, let them not speake to me, But let them heare what carefull words I ytter.
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

51

Hath ordained to an Honourable end,
For Peace, for Loxenfor, for League, and good to Rome:
Please you therefor draw,nice and take your places.
Satur. Marcus will, Hobbes.
A table brought in.
Enter Titus like a Cook, placing the meat on the table, and Launia with a Katie under her face.

Titus. Welcome my gracious Lord,
Welcome Dread Queene,
Welcome ye Warlike Gothes, welcome Lucius,
And welcome all: although the cheere be poore,
'Twill fill your stomacks, please you eat of it.
Sat. Why art thou thus attire'd Andronicus?
Tit. Because I would be sure to have all well,
To entertain your Highness, and your Empresse.
Tam. We are beholding to you good Andronicus?
Tit. And if your Highness knew my heart, you were:
My Lord the Emperour resolue me this,
Was it well done of rath Virginian,
To flay his daughter with his own right hand,
Because she was enfor't, stain'd, and deflow'd?
Satur. It was Andronicus,
Tit. Your reason,Mighty Lord?
Sat. Because the Gentiel, should not furuine her shame,
And by her presence still renew his forrowes.
Tit. A reason mighty, strong, and effectuall,
A pattern, preffident, and liuely warrant,
For me (moff wretched) to performe the like:
Die, die, Launia, and thy shame with thee,
And with thy shame, thy Fathers forrow die.

If kidneys.

Sat. What haif done, vnnaturall and vnkinde?
Tit. Kill'd her for whom my teares have made me blind.
I am as wofull as Virginian was,
And have a thousand times more caufe then he.
Sat. What was the rauifh? tell who did the deed,
Tit. Wilt please you eat,
Wilt please your Highness feed?
Tam. Why haft thou flaine thine only Daughter?
Titus. Not I, 'twas Chiron and Demetrius,
They raufht her, and cut away her tongue,
And they, 'twas they, that did her all this wrong.
Sat. Why there they are both, baked in that Pie,
Whereof their Mother daintly hath fed,
Eating the flesh that she herself hath bred.
'tis true, 'tis true, witnesse my kniues sharpe point.
He slays the Empresse.

Satur. Die frantick wretch, for this accursed deed.
Luc. Can the Sonnes eye, behold his Father bleed?
There's meede for meede, death for a deadly deed.
Mar. You fad fac'd men, people and Sonnes of Rome,
By vprores feu't d like a flight of Fowle,
Scattered by windes and high tempestuous gusts:
Oh let me teach you how, to knit again
This caftted Corn, into one mutual sheafe,
These broken limbs againe into one body.
Goth. Let Rome herfelfe be bane vnto herfelfe,
And she whom mightie kingdome curfew too,
Like a forlorne and desperat caftaway,
Doe shamefull execution on her felfe.
But if my frolic signes and chaps of age,
Graue witnesse of true experience,
Cannot induce you to attend my words,
Speake Romes deere friend, as' erfit our Aunclefor,
When with his solenne tongue he did discourse
To lone-ficke Didoes fad attending eares,
The glory of that basefull burning night,
When subtille Greekes surpize'd King Priamus Troy:
Tell vs what bynum hath bewicht our cares,
Or who hath brought the fatal engine in,
That givs our Troy, our Rome the cruel wound.
My heart is not compact of flint nor fleche,
Nor can I vter all our bitter griefe,
But floods of teares will drowne my Oration,
And break my very vttrance, even in the time
When it should move you to attend me moft,
Lending your kind hand Commiseration,
Here is a Captaine, let him tell the tale,
Your hearts will throb and weep to hear him speake.
Luc. This Noble Auditory, be it knowne to you,
That cursed Chiron and Demetrius
Were they that murdred our Emperours Brother,
And they it were that rauifh'd our Sifer,
For their fell faults our Brothers were beheaded,
Our Fathers teares defpif'd, and bafe confus'd,
Of that true hand that fought Romans quarrell out,
And sent her enemies vnto the graue.
Lately, my selfe vnkindly banished,
The gates shut on me, and turn'd weeping out,
To beg reliefe among Romes Enemies,
Who drownd'd their emnity in my true teares,
And op'd their armes to imbrace me as a Friend:
And I am turned forth, be it knowne to you,
That have preferu'd her welfare in my blood,
And from her bofome took this true Enemies point,
Sheathing the fleche in my aduentorous body.

Alas you know, I am no Vaunter I,
My scars can witnesse, dumbe although they are,
That my report is soft and full of truth:
But soft, me thinkes I do digresse too much,
Cying my worthlesse praise: Oh pardon me,
For when no Friends are by, men prate themselues,
Marc. Now is my turne to speake: Behold this Child,
Of this was Tamora deliuere'd,
The issue of an Irreligious Moore,
Chief Architect and plotter of these woes,
The Villaine is alive in Titus house,
And as he is, to witnesse this true Enemies point,
Now judge what course had Titus to revenge
These wrongs, vnspokeable pat patience,
Or more then any living man could beare,
Now you have heard the truth, what say you Romaines?
Have we done ought amiss? shew us wherein,
And from the place where you behold vs now,
The poore remainder of Andronicus,
Will hand in hand all headlong caft vs downe,
And on the ragged stones beat forth our brains,
And make a mutuall clofure of our house:
Speake Romaines speake, and if you say we shall,
Loe hand in hand, Lucius and I will fall.
Emil. Come come, thou reuerent man of Rome,
And bring our Emperour gently in thy hand,
Lucius our Emperour for all I know,
The common voyce do cry it shall be so.
Marc. Lucius, all hail Romes Royall Emperour,
Goe, goe into old Titus forrowfull house,
And hither hale that misbelieuing Moore,
To be adiug'd dome direfull slaughtering death,
As punishment for his most wicked life.
Lucius all hail to Romes gracious Gouernour.

4 N
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

Luc. Thankes gentle Romanes, may I gowerne so,
To heale Romes harms, and wipe away her woe.
But gentle people, give me ayme a-while,
For Nature puts me to a heaue taske:
Stand all aloofe, but Vnckle drawe you neere,
To shed obsequious teares vpon this Trunke:
Oh take this warme kiffe on thy pale cold lips,
These forrowfull drops vpon thy bloud-flaine face,
The lafte true Duties of thy Noble Sonne.

Mar. Teare for teare, and louing kiffe for kiffe,
Thy Brother Marcus tenders on thy Lips:
O were the summe of these that I should pay
Countleffe, and infinit, yet would I pay them.

Luc. Come hither Boy, come, come, and learne of vs
To melt in howres: thy Grandfire lou’d thee well:
Many a time he danc’d thee on his knee:
Sung thee asleepe, his Louing Breft, thy Pillow:
Many a matter hath he told to thee,
Mette, and agreeing with thine Infancie:
In that respect then, like a louing Childe,
Shed yet some small drops from thy tender Spring,
Because kinde Nature doth require it so:
Friends, should affociate Friends, in Greefe and Wo.
Bid him farwell, commit him to the Graue,
Do him that kindnesse, and take leaue of him.

Boy. O Grandfire, Grandfire: even with all my heart
Would I were Dead, so you did Lieu againe,
O Lord, I cannot speake to him for weeping,
My teares will choke me, if I ope my mouth.

Romans. You had Andronic, have done with woes,
Glue sentence on this execrable Wretch,
That hath beene breeder of these dire euents.

Luc. Set him breft deepe in earth, and famish him:
There let him fland, and raue, and cry for foode:
If any one releues, or pitties him,
For the offence, he dye. This is our doome:
Some flye, to see him faftned in the earth.

Aaron. O why should wrath be mute, & Fury dumbe?
I am no Baby I, that with base Prayers
I should repent the Euils I have done.
Ten thousand worfe, then ever yet I did,
Would I performe if I might haue my will:
If one good Deed in all my life I did,
I do repent it from my very Soule.

Lucius. Some louing Friends conuey the Emp.hence,
And give him buriall in his Fathers graue,
My Father, and Lauinia, shall forthwith
Be cloed in our Houholds Monument:
As for that heynous Tyger Tamora,
No Funerall Rite, nor man in mournfull Weeds:
No mournfull Bell shall ring her Buriall:
But throw her soure to Beasts and Birds of prey:
Her life was Beasts-like, and devoud of pitty,
And being fo, shall have like want of pitty.
See Iustice done on Aaron that damn’d Moore,
From whom, our heaue happes had their beginning:
Then afterwards, to Order well the State,
That like Euent, may ne’re it Ruinate.

Exeunt omnes.

FINIS.
Enter Sampfon and Gregory, with Swords and Bucklers, of the House of Capulet.

Sampfon.

Regory: A my word wee'lt not carry coales.
Greg: Nor, for then we should be Colliers.
Samp. I mean, if wee be in choller, we'll draw.
Greg. I, While you live, draw your necke out o' th Collar.
Samp. I strike quickly, being mou'd.
Greg. But thou art not quickly mou'd to strike.
Samp. A dogge of the house of Montague, moues me.
Greg. To moue, is to stir: and to be valiant, is to stand.
Therefore, if thou art mou'd, thou runst away.
Samp. A dogge of that house shall moue me to stand.
I will take the wall of any Man or Maid of Montagues.
Greg. That shewes thee a weake slau'e, for the wea-gest goes to the wall.
Samp. True, and therefore women being the weaker Vessels, are ever thrust to the wall: therefore I will push Montague men from the wall, and thrust his Maides to the wall.
Greg. The quarrel is betwene our Maisters, and vs.
Samp. 'Tis all one, I will shew my selfe a tyrant: when I have fought with the men, I will bee ciuill with the Maids, and cut off their heads.
Greg. The heads of the Maids?
Samp.1, the heads of the Maids, or their Maiden-heads,
Take it in what fence thou wilt.
Greg. They must take it fence, that feele it.
Samp. Me they shall feele while I am able to stand:
And 'tis knowne I am a pretty peece of Reh.
Greg. 'Tis well thou art not Flish: If thou hadst, thou hadst beene poore John. Draw thy Toole, here comes of the Houfe of the Montagues.
Enter two other Scouringmen.
Sam. My naked weapon is out: quarrel, I will back thee.
Sam. Fear me not.
Gre. No marrow: I feare thee.
Sam. Let vs take the Law of our sides: let them begin.
Gr. I will frown as I passe by, & let he take it as they lift
Sam. Nay, as they dare. I will bite my Thumb at them, which is a disgrace to them, if they beare it.
Gre. Do you bite your Thumbe at vs fir?
Sam. I do bite my Thumbe, fir.
Gre. Do you bite your Thumbe at vs, fir?
Sam. Is the Law of our side, if I say I?
Gre. No.
Sam. No fir, I do not bite my Thumbe at you fir: but I bite my Thumbe fir.
Greg. Do you quarrell fir?
Abra. Quarrell fir? no fir.
Sam. If you do fir, I am for you, I ferue as good a man
Greg. Say better: there comes one of my masters kinsmen.
Samp. Yes, better.
Abra. You Lye.
Samp. Draw if you be men. Gregory, remember thy washing blow.
They Fight.
Ben. Part Foole, put vp your Swords, you know not what you do.
Enter Tibalt.
Tyb. What art thou drawne, among these heartleffe
Hindes? Turne thee Benovio, looke upn thy death.
Ben. I do but keepe the peace, put vp thy Sword,
Or manage it to part these men with me.
Tyb. What draw, and talke of peace? I hate the word
As I hate hell, all Montagues, and thee:
Haue at thee Coward.
Fights.
Enter three or foure Citizens with Clubs.
Off. Clubs, Bils, and Partitions, strike, beat them down
Downe with the Capuletts, downe with the Montagues.
Enter old Capulet in his Gowne, and his wife.
Cap. What noife is this? Glue me my long Sword ho.
Wife. A crutch, a crutch: why call you for a Sword?
Cap. My Sword I say; Old Montague is come,
And flourishes his Blade in fiptight of me.
Enter old Montague, & his wife.
Mont. Thou villaine Capulet. Hold me not, let me go.
Wife. Thou shalt not fir a foote to seeke a Foe.
Enter Prince & Squale, with his Traine.
Prince. Rebellious Subiects, Enemies to peace,
Prophaners of this Neighbor-staine Steele,
Will they not heare? What hooe, you Men, you Beasts,
That quench the fire of your pernicious Rage,
With purple Fountaines ifling from your Veines:
On paine of Torture, from thofe bloody hands
Throw your mis temper'd Weapons to the ground,
And heare the Sentence of your moued Prince.
Three cuill Broyles, bred of an Ayery word,
By thee old Capulet and Montague,
Have three disurb'd the quiet of our streets,
And made Verona's ancient Citizens
Caf by their Graue befeeming Ornaments,
To wield old Partizans, in hands as old,

Cankred
The Tragedie of Romeo and Juliet.

Cankred with peace, to part your Cankred hate, If euer you disturbe our streets againe, Your liues shall pay the forfeit of the peace. For this time all the rest depart away: You Capulet shall goe along with me, And Mountague come you this afternoone, To know our Fathers pleasure in this cafe: To old Free-towne, our common judgement place: Once more on paine of death, all men depart. Exeunt.

Moun. Who let this auncient quarrell new abroach? Speake Nephew, were you by, when it began? Ben. Heere were the servants of your aduersarie, And yours close fighting ere I did approach, I drew to part them, in the infant came The fiery Tribes, with his fword prepar'd, Which as he breath'd defiance to my eares, He fwoon about his head, and cut the windes, Who nothing hurt withall, hit him in fcorne. While we were enterchanging thrfts and blowes, Came more and more, and fought on part and part, Till the Prince came, who parted either part. Wife. O where is Romeo, lau you him to day? Right glad am I, he was not at this fray. Ben. Madam, an hour before the worhipht Sun Peer'd forth the golden window of the East, A troubled mind, that changeable fouthward, Where underneathe the groue of Sycamour, That Well-ward rooteth from this City side: So earely walking did I fee your Sonne: Towards him I made, but he was ware of me, And stole into the couer of the wood, Measuring his affections by my owne, Which then most fought, wher most might not be found: Be one too many by my weary felfe, Purfued my Honour, not purfuing his And gladly fhunnd, who gladly fled from me. Moun. Many a morning hath he there beene fenee, With teares augmenting the fresh mornings dew, Adding to cloudes, more cloudes with his deep eies, But all fo clofe, and without all fpace, Should in the farthest East begin to draw The fadie Curtaines from Aurora bed, Away from light fteales home my heavy Sonne, And priuate in his Chamber pennes himfelfe, Shuts vp his windows, lockes fairo day-light out, And makes himfelfe an artificiall night: Blanke and portendous muff this humour proue, Vnleffe good counfel may the caufe remove.

Ben. My Noble Vnclc doo you know the caufe? Moun. I neither know it, nor can learn of him. Ben. Have you importun'd him by any means? Moun. Both by my felfe and many others Friends, But he his owne affections counselleth, Is to himfelfe (I will not fay howe) But to himfelfe fo secret and fo clofe, So farr from founding and discouery, As is the bud bit with an enuious worme, Ere he can fpread his sweete leaves to the ayre, Or dedicate his beauty to the fame, Could we but learne from whence his forrowes grow, We would as willingly give cure, as know. Enter Romeo.

Ben. Good morrow Cousin. Rom. Is the day fo young? Ben. But new strooke nine. Rom. Aye me, fad hours seems long: Was that my Father that went henceto falt? Ben. It was: what fadnes lengths Romeos hours? Re. Not hanging that, which hauing, makes them short Ben. In love. Romeo. Out. Ben. Of love. Rom. Out of her favour where I am in love. Ben. Alas that love to gentle in his view, Should be fo tyrannous and rough in proofe. Rom. Alas that love, whose view is muffed still, Should without eyes, fee path-ways to his will: Where shall we dine? O me: what fray was heere? Yet tell me not, for I have heard it all: Heere's much to do with hate, but more with loue: Why then, O brawling loue, O louing hate, O any thing, of nothing firft creath: O heaeue lightneffe, ferious vanity, Mifhapen Chaos of walffeing formes, Feather of lead, bright fmoake, cold fire, fickes health, Still waking sleepe, that is not what it is: This loue feele f, that feele no loue in this. Doeft thou not laugh? Ben. No Coze, I rather weepo. Rom. Good heart, at what? Ben. At thy good hearts oppofition. Griefes of mine owne litel heaue in my brift, Which thou wilt propagate to haue it preat With more of thine, this loue that thou haft showne, Both adde more griefe, to too much of mine owne. Loue, is a fmoake made with the fume of fighes, Being purg'd, a fire fparkling in Louers eyes, Being vext, a Sea nourfith with louing teares, With what is elfe? a madneffe, moft difcret, A choking gait, and a preferuing fweet: Farewell my Coze. Ben. Soft I will goe along. And if you leaue me fo, you do me wrong. Rom. Tut I have loft my felfe, I am not here, This is not Rome, hee's fome other where. Ben. Tell me in fadneffe, who is that you loue? Rom. What shall I grone and tell thee? Ben. Grone, why no: but sadly tell me who. Ry. A ficke man in fadneffe makes his will: A word ill vrge'd to one that is fo ill: In fadneffe Cozin, I do loue a woman. Ben. I aym'd fo near, when I fappof'd you lou'd. Rom. A right good marke man, and thee's fairo I loue. Ben. A right fairo marke, sire Coze, is fonned hit. Rom. Well in that hit you miselle, heel not be hit With Cupids arrow, the hath Diana wit: And in frong prooue of chaftity well arm'd: From loues weake childifh Bow, the liues vnchard'm. Shee will not fay the fiece of loueing tearmes, Nor bid th'incounter of affailing eyes. Nor open her lap to Saint's-seduucing Gold: O she is rich in beautie, onely poor, That when she dies, with beautie dies her flore. Ben. Then she hath worned, that she will fill ilue chaft? Rom. She hath, and in that fparing make huge wait? For beauty feru'd with her feuerity, Cuts beauty off from all potteritie.
She is too faire, too wifew: fely too faire,
To merit bliffe by making me dispaire:
She hath forsworne to love, and in that vow
Do I live dead, that live to tell it now.

Ben. Be rul'd by me, forget to think of her.
Rom. O teach me how I shou'd forget to thinke.

Ben. By givin' libertie vnto thine eyes,
Examine her beauties.

Re. Tis the way to cal her (exquit) in quection more,
These happy maskes that kiffe faire Ladies brows,
Being blacke, puts vs in mind they hide the faire:
He that is frooken blind, cannot forget
The precious treasure of his eye-fight loft:
Shew me a Miftrefse that is paffing faire,
What doth her beauty ferue but as a note,
Where I may read who paft that paffing faire.

Farewell thou can't not teach me to forget,

Ben. Ile psy that doctrine, or else die in debt.

Exeunt

Enter Capulet, Countie Parke, and the Clowne.

Cap. Montague is bound as well as I,
In penality alike, and 'tis not hard I thinke,
For men to keep the peace.

Par. Of Honourable reckoning are you both,
And pitie 'tis you liu'd at odds fo long;
But now my Lord, what fay you to my fute?

Cap. But faying ore what I have faid before,
My Child is yet a stranger in the world,
Shee hath not feene the change of fourteen yeares,
Let two more Summers wither in their pride,
Ere we may thinke her ripe to be a Bride.

Par. Younger then she, are happy mothers made.

Cap. And too foone man'd are tho'fo earely made:
Earth hath swallowed all my hopes but she,
Shee's the hopefull Lady of my earth:
But wooe her gentle Parke get her heart,
My will to her content, is but a part,
And shee agree, within her scope of choice,
Lyes my content, and faire according voice:
This night I hold an old accustom'd Featt,
Whereeto I have invinted many aGuest,
Such as I oue, and you among the store,
One more, most welcome makes my number more:
At my poor house, looke to behold this night,
Earth-treading starres, that make darke heauen light,
Such comfort as do lufty young men feele,
When well apparel'd Aprill on the heele
Of limping Winter treads, even fuch delight
Among frefh Fenell buds shall you this night
Inherit at my house: heare all, all fee:
And like her moife, whose meritt moife shall be:
Which one more veiw, of many, mine being one,
May stand in number, though in reckning none.
Come, goe with me: goe firall trude about,
Through faire Verona, find tho'fe perfons out,
Whoe names are written there, and to them fay,
My houfe and welcome, on their pleafure fay.

Exit.

Ser. Find them out whose names are written. Heere it is written, that the Shoemaker should meddle with his Yard, and the Taylor with his Lat, the Fisher with his Penfill, and the Painter with his Nets. But I am fent to find those perfons whose names are write, & can never find what names the writing perfon hath here writ!(I muft to the learned) in good time.

Enter Benvolio, and Romeo.

Ben. Tut man, one fire burns out anothers burning,
One paine is lefned by anothers anguish:

Turne giddie, and be holpe by backward turning:
One defperate greefe, cures with anothers laughiue:
Take thou some new infection to the eye,
And the rank poyfon of the old wil die.

Rom. Your Plantain leaf is excellent for that.

Ben. For what I pray thee?

Rom. For your broken thin.

Ben. Why Rome art thou mad?

Rom. Not mad, but bound more then a mad man is:
Shut vp in priuyn, kept without my foode,
Whipt and tormented: and Godden good fellow,
Ser. Goddigoden, I pray fir can you read?
Rom. I mine owne fortune in my miferie.

Ser. Perhaps you haue learn'd it without booke:
But I pray can you read any thing you fee?

Rom. If, I'll know the Letters and the Language.

Ser. Ye fay honestly, reit you merry.

Rom. Stay fellow, I can read.

He reads the Letter.

S Eigneur Martino, and his wife and daughter: County An-Sjelme and his beautifull fylfers: the Lady widow of Otrut-Sjelme, Seigneur Placentio, and his lovely Neieces: Mercutio and his brother Valentine: mine uncle Capulet his wife and daughters: my faire niece Rosalijne, Luiza Seigneur Valenti, & his Cajen Tybalt: Lucio and the liney Helma.

A faire assemblie, whither should they come?

Rom. Whither? to fupper?

Ser. To our houfe.

Rom. Whose houfe?

Ser. My Maitfers.

Rom. Indeed I should have askt you that before.

Ser. Now Ile tell you without asking. My maifters is the great rich Capulet, and if you be not of the houfe of Mountague I pray come and cru a cup, of wine. Reft you merry.

Ben. At this fame auncient Feast of Capietsus
Sups the faire Rosalijne, whom thou soue loves:
With all the admired Beauties of Verona,
Go thither and with vnattainted eye,
Compare her face with fome that I shall show,
And I will make thee thinke thy Swans a Crow.

Rom. When the devout religion of mine eye
Maintaines fuch felfhood, then turne teares to fire:
And thefe who often drown'd could never die,
Transparet Heretiques be burnt for liers.
One fairer then my loue: the all-feeing Sun
Nere faw her match, since fir the world begun.

Ben. Tut, you faw her faire, none else being by,
Herfelfe po'y'd with herfelfe in either eye:
But in that Chriftall feales, let there be waid,
Your Ladies loue againft fome other Maid
That I will show you, fhining at this Featt,
And she fhew flant shell, well, that now theues beft.

Rom. Ile goe along, no fuch fight to be fhowne,
But to rejoyce in splendor of mine owne.

Enter Capulet's Wife and Nurse.

Wife Nurse wher's my daughter? call her forth to me.

Nurse. Now by my Maidenhead, at twelve yeares old
I bad her come, what Lamb what Ladi-bird, God forbid,
Where's this Girls? what Iliet?

Enter Iliet.

Iliet. How now, who calls?

Nur. Your Mother.

Iliet. Madam I am heere, what is your will?

Wife. This is the matter: Nurse giue leaue awhile, we muft

The Tragedie of Romeo and Juliet.

must talke in secret. Nurfe come backe againe, I have remembered me, thou'rt heare our counsell. Thou knowest my daughter's of a pretty age.

Nurfe. Faith I can tell her age vnto an houre.
Wife. Shee's not fourteenne.
Nurfe. Ile lay fourteene of my teeth,
And yet to my teene be it fpoken,
I haue but foure, thec' is not fourteenne.
How long is it now to Lammas tide?

Wife. A fortnight and odduy days.

Nurfe. Even or odd, of all daies in the yeare come Lammas Eue at night shal she be fourteene. Sufian & she, God rest all Christian soules, were of an age. Well Sufian is with God, she was too good for me. But as I said, on Lammas Eue at night shal she be fourteenne, that shal the marie, I remember it well. "Tis since the Earth-quake now eleven yeares, and she was wan'd I neuer shall forget it, of all the daies of the yeare, vpon that day: for I had then laid Worme-wood to my Dogg fitting in the Sunne vnder the Doucheweall, my Lord and you were then at Mantua, nay I doe beare a braine. But as I said, when it did taft the clothe, the niple of my Dugge, and felt it bitter, pretty foole, to fee it teacle, and fall out with the Dugge, Shake quoth the Doue-houfe, 'twas no neede I trow to bid mee trudge: and since that time it is a eleuen yeare, for then she could stand alone, bay blit' roode she could haue runne, & walded all shal: for euen the day before the broke her brow, & then my Husband God be with his soule, a was a merrie man, tooke vp the Child, yea quoth hee, doest thou fall vp yon thy face? thou wilt fall backward when thou haft more wit, wilt thou not Iule? And by my holy-dam, the pretty wretch lefte crying, & said I: to fee now how a Left shall come about. I warrant, & I shall liue a thousand yeares, I neuer should forget it: wilt thou not Iulet quoth he? and pretty foole it flinted, and said I.

Old La. Nough of this, I pray thee hold thy peace.

Nurfe. Yes Madam,yet I cannot chufe but laugh, to thinke it shoulde leave crying, & say I: and yet I warrant it had vp it brow, a bmonte as big as a young Cockrels stone? A perilous knock, and it cryed bitterly. Yea quoth my husband, fall'ft vp thy face, thou wilt fall backward when thou commet to age: wilt thou not Iule? It flintedand said I.

Iule. And flint thou too, I pray thee Nurfe,say I.

Nur. Peace have I done:God marke thee too his grace thou waft the prettieest Babe that ere I nurst, and I might lie to fee thee married once, I haue my will.

Old La. Marry that marry is the very theame
I came to talke of, tell me daughter Iulet,
How stands thy disposition to be Married?

Iuli. It is an houre that I dreame not of.

Nur. An houre, were not I thine onely Nurfe, I would say thou hadst covert wifedome from thy teat.

Old La. Well thinke of marriage now,yonner then you Heere in Verona, Ladies of effeeme,
Are made already Mothers. By my count
I was your Mother, much vpon these yeares
That you are now a Maide, thus then in briefe: The valiant Paris feakes you for his loue.

Nurfe. A man young Lady, Lady, such a man as all the world, is it now to a man of was, or a woman.

Old La. Verona Summer hath not such a flower.

Nurfe. Nay hee's a flower,infaith a very flower.

Old La: What say you, can you loue the Gentleman? This night you shal behold him at our Feast,

Read ore the volume of young Paris face, And find delight, writ there with Beauties pen: Examine every feuerall liniament, And fee how one another lends content: And what obcur'd in this faire volume lies, Find written in the Margent of his eyes. The precious Book of Loue, this vnbond Louer, To Beautifie him, oneely lacks a Couer. The faire liues in the Sea, and 'tis much pride For faire without, the faire within to hide: That Booke in manies eyes doth darke the glory, That in Gold clapes,Lockes in the Golden storie: So shal you sharre all that he doth possesse, By having him, making your felle no lefte.

Nurfe. No lefte,nay bigger:women grow by men.

Old La. Speake briefly, can you like of Paris loue?

Iuli. Ile looke to like,if looking liking moue. But no more deepe will I endart mine eye,
Then your content giues strength to make fuye.

Enter a Serving man.

Ser. Madam, the guests are come, supper seru'd vp you cal'd, my young Lady askt for, the Nurfe cur't in the Pantery, and every thing in extremity: I must hence to wait, I befeech you follow straight.

Exit.

Mo. We follow thee, Iulet, the Countie flaries.

Nurfe. Goe Gyrie, fecke happie nights to happy daies.

Exeunt.

Enter Romeo,Mercutio,Brezullio,with fies or fexe other Maskers, Torch-bearers.

Rom. What shall this speche be spoke for our excuse? Or shall we on with out Apologie?

Ben. The date is out of such proulixetye, Weele haue no Cupid,hood wintk with a skarfe, Bearing a Tartars painted Bow of lath, Skaring the Ladies like a Crow-keeper. But let them meare vs by what they will. Weele meare them a Meare, and be gone.

Rom. Give me a Torch, I am not for this ambling. Being but heay I will beare the light.

Mer. Nay gentle Rome, we must haue you dance. Rom. Not I beleue me,you haue dancing shoes With nimble soles, I haue a soale of Lead So stakkes me to the ground, I cannot moue.

Mer. You are a Louer,borrow Cupids wings, And foare with them above a common bound.

Rom. I am too forme enpearced with his shaft, To foare with his light feathers,and to bound: I cannot bound a pitch above dull woe, Under loues heauy buthen doe I finke.

Hora. And to finke in it should you barthen loute, Too great oppreccion for a tender thing.

Rom. Is loue a tender thing? It is too rough, Too rude, too boyterous, and it pricks like thorne.

Mer. If loue be rough with you, be rough with loue, Prickle loue for pricking, and you beat loue downe, Give me a Cafe to put my vilage in,
A Vifor for a Vifor, what care I
What curious eye doth quote deformitie:
Here are the Beetle-browes shall bluflh for me.

Ben. Come knocke and enter, and no sooner in, But euer man betake him to his legs.

Rom. A Torch for me, let want the light of heart Tickle the fencellefie rubes with their hecles: For I am prouer'd with a Grandier Pharse, Ile be a Candle-holder and looke on,
The game was nere so faire, and I am done.

Mer. Tut,
We Cap. Exeunt.

That making gallops Hafelnut, the they plaits another lops ners Breaches, necke, breath Gnat, which is the Fairies and then the dreames of them, when which makes dainty, She He swears that Cornes: am I come neare ye now? Welcome Gentlemen, I have beene the day. That I have worn a Vifor, and could tell A whispering tale in a faire Ladies ear: Such as would please: 'tis gone, 'tis gone, 'tis gone, You are welcome Gentlemen, come Musitians play: Muficke plaises: and the dance. A Hall, Hall, glue roome, and foote it Girles, More light you knaues, and turne the Tables vp: And quench the fire, the Roome is growne too hot. Ah sirrah, this vanlook for sport comes well: Nay fit, nay fit, good Cosin Capuler, For you and I are past our dauncing dales: How long 'tis now since left your selfe and I Were in a Maske? 2. Capu. Berlady thirty yeares. 1. Capu. What man: 'tis not so much, 'tis not so much, 'Tis since the Nuptiall of Lucrezia, Come Pentycost so quickly as it will, Some fine and twenty yeares, and then we Maskt. 2. Cap. 'Tis more, 'tis more, his Sonne is elder sir: His Sonne is thirty. 3. Cap. Will you telle me that? His Sonne was but a Ward two yeares agoe. Rom. What Ladie is that which doth inrich the hand Of yonder Knight? Sir. I know not sir.

Rom. O the doth teach the Torches to burne bright: It seemes she hangs upon the cheeke of night, As a rich Jewel in an Æthiops eare: Beauty too rich for vfe, for earth too deare: So shewes a Snowy Dune troopinc with Crowes, As yonder Lady ore her felowes shewes: The measure done, Ie watch her place of fland, And touching hers, make blessed my rude hand.
Did my heart loue till now, forswear it fight,
For I neuer saw true Beauty till this night.

Tib. Therefore by his Heart, shoulde he be a Mountague.
Fetch me my Rapier, Boy, what dares the Flawe.

Come hither couer'd with an antique face,
To seeke and scorne at our Solemnity?

Now by the flocke and Honour of my kin,
To strike him dead I hold it not a fin.

Cap. Why how now knyfman,
Wherefore scorne you fo?

Tib. Uncle this is a Mountague, our foe:
A Villaine that is hither come in spight,
To scorne at our Solemnity this night.

Cap. Young Romeo is it?

Tib. 'Tis he, that Villaine Romeo.

Cap. Content thee gentle Cos, let him alone,
A beares him like a portly Gentleman:
And to say truth, Verona brags of him,
To be a vertuous and well govern'd youth:
I would not for the wealth of all the towne,
Here in my house do him dispaagement:
Therfore be patient, take no note of him,
It is my will, the which if thou respext,
Shew a faire prefence, and put off thee frownes,
An ill befeeming feemblance for a Fealt.

Tib. It fits when fuch a Villaine is a guest,
Ile not endure him.

Cap. He shall be endur'd.

What goes there, Boy, I fay he shall, go too,
Am I the Maifter here or you? go too,
Youle not endure him, God shall mend my foule,
Youle make a Mutiny among the Guests?
You will fct cocke a hoope, youle be the man.

Tib. Why Uncle, 'tis a thame.

Cap. Go too, go too,
You are a fawcy Boy, 'ftho indeed?
This tricke may chance to fcauth you, I know what,
You must contrary me, marry 'tis time.

Well fald my hearts, you are a Princox, goe,
Be quiet, or more light, more light for thame,
Ile make you quiet. What, chearely my hearts.

Tib. Patience perforce, with wilfull choler meeting,
Makes my fleale fomeble in their different greeting:
I will withdraw, but this intrution fhall
Now freamg fweet, conceal to bitter gall.

Rom. If I prophane with my vnworthie hand,
This holy shrine, the gentle fin is this,
My lips to blushing Pilgrims did ready fand,
To smooth that rough touch, with a tender kifie.

Iul. Good Pilgryme,
You do wrong your hand too much,
Which mannerly deuotion fhewes in this,
For Saints have hands, that Pilgrims hands do tuch,
And palme to palme, is holy Palmers kifie.

Rom. Have not Saints lips, and holy Palmers too?
Iul. I Pilgrim, lips that they muft vfe in prayer.
Rom. O then deare Saint, let lips do what hands do,
They pray(grant thou) leafe faith turne to dispaire.

Iul. Saints do not moue,
Though grant for prayers fake.
Rom. Then moue not while my prayers effect I take:
Thus from my lips, by thine my fin is pur'd.

Iul. Then have my lips the fin that they have tooke.
Rom. Sin from my lips? O trefpaftie sweetely vrg'd:
Give me my fin againe.

Iul. You kifie by th'booke.

Nur. Madam your Mother croues a word with you.
Rom. What is her Mother?

Her Mother is the Lady of the houfe,
And a good Lady, and a wife, and Vertuous,
I Nur't her Daughter that you talke withall:
I tell you, he that can lay hold of her,
Shall have the chincks.

Rom. Is the a Capulet?

O deare account! My life is my foes debt.

Ben. Away, be gone, the sport is at the beft.
Rom. I fo I fear, the more is my vnreit.

Cap. Nay Gentlemen prepare not to be gone,
We have a trifling foolish Banquet towards:
Is it e'ne fo? why then I thanke you all.
I thanke you honest Gentlemen, good night:
More Torches here come on, then let's to bed.

Ah sirrah, by my fale it waxes late,
Ile to my reft.

Iuli. Come hither Nurfe,
What is yond Gentleman?

Nur. 'Tis The Sonne and Heire of old Tybervio.
Iuli. What's he that now is going out of doore?

Nur. Marrie that I thinke be young Petruckio.

Iuli. What's he that follows here that would not dance?
Nur. I know not.
Iuli. Go ask his names if he be married,
My graue is like to be my wedded bed.

Nur. His name is Romeo and a Mountague,
The onely Sonne of your great Enemie.

Iuli. My onely Loue sprung from my onely hate,
Too early fene, vnknowne, and knowne too late,
Prodigious birth of Loue it is to me,
That I must loue a loathed Enemie.

Nur. What's this? what's this?
Iuli. A rime, I learne eu'en now
Of one I dan't withall.

Nur. Anon, anon:
Come let's away, the strangers all are gone.

Exeunt.

Chorus.
Now old defire doth in his death bed lie,
And yong affefion gaps to be his Heire,
That faire, for which Loue gron'd for and would die,
With tender Juliet matcht, is now not faire.

Now Romeo is beloued, and Loues againe,
A like bewitched by the chearfe of lookes:
But to his foe fuppos'd he must complaine,
And he theale Loues sweete baft from fearrefull hooke:
Being held a foe, he may not have aceffe
To breath fuch vozes as Louers vie to fware,
And she as much in Loue, her meanes much leffe,
To meete her new Beloued any where:
But paflion lends them Power, time, meanes to meete,
Temp'ring extremities with extreme sweete.

Enter Rometo.

Rom. Can I goe forward when my heart is here?
Turne backe dull earth, and find thy Center out.

Enter Banuolio, with Mercury.

Ben. Romeo, my Cozen Romeo, Romeo.

Mer. He is wife,
And on my life hath flone him home to bed.

Ben. He ran this way and leapt this Orchard wall.

Call good Mercury:
Nay, Ile conjure too.
The Tragedie of Romeo and Iuliet.

59

Mer. Romeo, Humours, Madman, Paffion, Louer,
Appeare thou in the likeness of a figh,
Speak to one rime, and I am satisfied:
Cry me but ay me, Prouant, but Loue and day,
Speak to my godchild Venus one faire word,
One Nickname for her purblind Sonne and her,
Young Abraham Capitl he that fto fo true,
When King Capet was lost the beggar Maid,
He heareth not, he fiddleth not, he moanth ot,
The Ape is dead, I must confine him,
I confine thee by Rejafines bright eyes,
By her High forehead, and her Scarlet lip,
By her Fine foote, Straight leg, and Quiuering thigh,
And the Demeanes, that there Afaidant lie,
That in thy likenefe thou apeare to vs.
Ben. And if he heare thee thou wilt anger him.
Mer. This cannot anger him, t'would anger him
To raife a fpirit in his Mistrefle circle,
Of some strange nature, letting it fand
Till she had laid it, and confined it downe,
That were some fpirit.
My invocation is faire and honest, & in his Miftris name,
I confine oney but to raife vp him.
Ben. Come, he hath hid himfelfe amonge these Trees
To be conforted with the Humerous night:
Blind is his Loue, and beft beats the darke.
Mer. If Loue be blind, Loue cannot hit the marke,
Now will he fit vnder a Medler tree,
And with his Miftrifle were that kind of Fruite,
As Maides call Medlers when they laugh alone,
O Romeo that the were, O that the were
An open, or thou a Poprin Peare,
Romeo goodnight, Ie to my Truckle bed,
This Field-bed is to cold for me to sleepe,
Come shall we go?
Ben. Go then, for 'tis in vaine to fceke him here
That meanes not to be found.

Exeunt.

Rom. He leafes at Scarres that neuer felt a wound,
But foft, what light through yonder window breaks?
It is the Eaf, and Iuliet is the Sunne,
Arife faire Sun and kill the envious Moone,
Who is already ficke and pale with griefe,
That thou her Maid art far more faire then fie:
Be not her Maid since she is envious,
Her Vehil Ily is but ficke and greene,
And none but fools do wearre it, call it off:
It is my Lady, O it is my Loue, O that the knew the were,
She fpeakes, yet the fayes nothing, what of that?
Her eye discouerres, I will anfwer it:
I am too bold 'tis not to me she fpeakes:
Two of the faireft flares in all the Heauen,
Hauing some buneftle do entreat her eyes,
To twinkile in their Spheres till they returne.
What if her eyes were there, they in her head,
The brightneffe of her chekke would shame those flares,
As day-light doth a Lampe, her eye in heauen,
Would through the ayrie Region fame bright,
That Birds would finge, and thinke it were not night:
See how the heanes her chekke vpon her hand.
O that I were a Glowe vpon that hand,
That I might touch that chekke.

Iul. Ay me.

Rom. She fpeakes.
Oh fpeake againe bright Angell, for thou art
As glorious s this night being ore my head,
As is a winged meffenger of heauen!

Vnto the white vpturned wondring eyes
Of mortalls that fall backe to gaze on him,
When he befriends the lazie puffing Cloudes,
And falleth vpon the boforme of the ayre.

Iul. O Romeo, Romeo, wherefore art thou Romeo?
Denie thy Father and refufe thy name:
Or if thou wilt not, be but tworne my Loue,
And lie no longer be a Capulet.
Rom. Shall I heare more, or shall I fpeake at this?

Iul. 'Tis but thy name that is my Enemy:
Thou art thy felie, though not a Montague,
What's Montague? it is nor hand nor foote,
Nor arme nor face, O be fame other name
Belonging to a man.

What? in a names that which we call a Roce;
By any other word would smell as sweete,
So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd,
Retaine that deare perfection which he owes,
Without that name Romeo, doffe thy name,
And for thy name which is no part of thee,
Take all my felfe.

Rom. I take thee at thy word:
Call me but Loue, and Ile be new baptiz'd,
Hence forth I neuer will be Romeo.

Iul. What man art thou, that thus befcreen'd in night
So fumbleft on my counfell?

Rom. By a name, I know not how to tell thee who I am:
My name deare Saint, is hatefull to my felfe,
Because it is an Enemy to thee,
Had I it written, I would teare the word.

Iul. My ears have yet not drunke a hundred words
Of thy tongues vterting, yet I know the found.
Art thou not Romeo, and a Montague?

Rom. Neither faire Maid, if either thee dilike.

Iul. How can't thou hither.
Tell me, and wherefore?
The Orchard walls are high, and hard to climb,
And the place death, confidering who thou art,
If any of my kinmen find thee here,
Rom. With Loues light wings
Did I ore-perch thofe Walls,
For ftony limits cannot hold Loue out,
And what Loue can do, that dares Loue attempt:
Therefore thy kinmen are no flop to me,

Iul. If they do fle thee, they will murther thee.

Rom. Alacke there lies more petril in thine eye,
Then twenty of their Swords, looke thou but sweete,
And I am proveed against their enmity.

Iul. I would not for the world they faw thee here.
Rom. I have nights cloaque to hide me from their eyes
And but thou love me, let them finde me here,
My life were better ended by their hate,
Then death proroged wanting of thy Loue.

Iul. By whose direction found'th thou out this place?

Rom. By Loue that frift did prompt me to enquire,
He lent me counfell, and I lent him eyes,
I am no Pyiot, yet wrt thou as far
As that vall-threare-waftet with the fartheft Sea,
I should adventure for fuch Marchandife.

Iul. Thou knowest the maske of night is on my face,
Elfe would a Maiden blufh bneat my chekke,
For that which thou haft heard me fpeake to night,
Faine would I dwell on forme, faine, faine, denie
What I have fpeake, but farewell Complement,
Doeft thou Loue? I know thou wilt fay 1,
And I will take thy word, yet if thou swear'st,
Thou maist profal fatte: at Louers perjuries
They say love laught, oh gentle Romeo,
If thou dost Loue, pronounce it faithfully:
Or if thou thinkest I am too quickly wonne,
Ile frowne and be peruerse, and say thee nay,
So thou wilt wone: But else not for the world.
In true faire Muntague I am too fond:
And therefore thou maist thinke my behaviour,
But trust me Gentleman, Ile proue more true,
Then those that have cosyng to be strange,
I should have beene more strange, I must confesse,
But that thou ouer heard't ere I was ware
My true Loues passion, therefore pardon me,
And not impute this yeelnding to light Loue,
Which the darke night hath fo defoudered.
Rom. Lady, by yonder Moore I vow,
That dews with filuer all thee Fruite tree tops.
Iul. O fweare not by the Moore, th'incon cant Moone,
That monethly changes in her circled Orbe,
Leaft thou thy Loue proue like wife variable.
Rom. What shall I fweare by?
Iul. Do not fweare at all:
O rith thou wilt fweare by thy gravitious felfe,
Which is the God of my Idolatry,
And Ile beleue thee.
Rom. If my hearts deare loue.
Iul. Well do not fweare, although I joy in thee:
I hauo no joy of this contract to night,
It is too rath, too vnaduis'd: too sudden,
Too like the lightning which doth ceale to be
Ere, one can say, it lightens, Sweete good night:
This bud of Loue by Summers ripening breath,
May proue a beautious Flower when next we meete:
Goodnight, goodnight, as sweete repose and rest,
Come to thy heart, as that within my brest.
Rom. O wilt thou leave me so vnatisfied?
Iul. What satisfaction can't thou have to night?
Ro. Th'exchage of thy Loues faithfull vow for mine.
Iul. I gaue thee mine before thou diid'n request it:
And yet I would it were to glue againe.
Rom. Would'th thou withdrawit,
For what purpole Loue?
Iul. But to be franke and glue it thee againe,
And yet I wish but for the thing I hauo,
My bounty is as boundifie as the Sea,
My Loue as deepe, the more I glue to thee
The more I hauo, for both are Infinite
I heare some noyse within deare Loue adue:
Anon good Nurfe, sweet Muntague be true:
Stay but alitile, I will come againe.
Rom. O blested bleffed night, I am afeard
Being in night, all this is but a dreame,
Too flattering sweet to be subfiantiall.
Iul. Three words deare Romeo,
And goodnight indeed,
If that thy bent of Loue be Honourable,
Thy purpole marriage, fende me word to morrow,
By one that Ile procure to come to thee,
Where and what time thou wilt performe the right,
And all my Fortunes at thy foote Ile lay,
And follow thee my Lord throughout the world.
Rom. So trieue my foule.
Iul. A thousand times goodnight.
Rom. A thousand times the worse to want thy light,
Loue goes toward Loue as school-boyes fro thir books
But Loue fro Loue, towards schoole with haueie looke.
Enter Juliet against.
Iul. Hift Romeo hift: O for a Falkners voice,
To lure this Tassell gentle bacce again.
Bondage is hoarfe, and may not speake aloud,
Elfe would I teare the Caeue where Eecho lies,
And make her ayrie tongue more hoarfe,then
With repetition of my Romeo.
Rom. It is my foule that calls vnpon my name,
How filuer sweet, found Louers tongues by night,
Like sofeft Muficke to attending ears.
Rom. My Neece.
Iul. What a clock to morrow
Shall I fend to thee?
Rom. By the houre of nine.
Iul. I will not faile, 'tis twenty yeares till then,
I haue forgot why I did call thee bacce.
Rom. Let me stand here till thee remember me.
Iul. I shall forget, to have thee still stand there,
Remembering how I Loue thy company.
Rom. And Ile still play, to have thee still forget,
Forgetting any other home but this.
Iul. 'Tis almost morning, I would have thee gone,
And yet no further then a wantons Bird,
That let's it hop a little from his hand,
Like a poore prifoner in his twisted Gyues,
And with a fullen thred plucks it bacce againe,
So louing Jalous of his liberty.
Rom. I would I were thy Bird.
Iul. Sweet so would I,
Yet I shoule kill thee with much cherishing:
Good night, good night.
Rom. Parting is such sweete sorrow,
That I shall fay goodnight, till it be morrow.
Iul. Sleepe well vpon thine eyes, peace in thy breth.
Rom. Would I were sleepe and peace fo sweer to reth,
The gray ey'd morne finibles on the frowning night,
Checking the Eaferne Cloudes with streakes of light,
And darkneffe flecke'd like a dronkard recles,
From forth daies pathway, made by Titans wheelles.
Hence will I to my ghosly Fries closse Cell,
His helpe to craue, and my deare hap to tell.
Exit.
Enter Friar alone with a basket.
Fri. The grey ey'd morne finibles on the frowning night,
Chexcking the Eaferne Cloudes with streakes of light:
And fleckled darkneffe like a dronkard reles,
From forth daies path, and Titans burning wheelles:
Now ere the Sun advance his burning eyne,
The day to cheere, and nights danke dew to dry,
I must all this Ofer Cage of ours,
With balefull weedes, and precious lufced flowers,
The earth that's Natures mother, is her Tombe,
What is her burying graue that is her wombe:
And from her wombe children of divers kind
The Tragedie of Romeo and Juliet.

We fucking on her natural bosome find:
Many for many vertues excellent:
None but for some, and yet all different.

Omicle is the fullpowerfull grace that lies
In Plants,Hearts,stones, and their true qualities:
For nought so vile, that on the earth doth live,
But to the earth some special good doth glue:
Nor ought so good, but itsain'd from that faire vie,
Revolts from true birth,abusing on abuse.

Vertue it felde turns vice being misapplied,
And vice sometime by action dignified.

Enter Romeo.
Within the infant rin'd of this weake flower,
Poyson hath residence, and medicin power:
For this being feml, with that part cherches each part,
Being tafted flayes all fences with the heart.

Two such oppossed Kings encampe them full,
In man as well as Hearbes, grace and rude will:
And where the worfer is predominant;
Full soone the Canker death eates vp that Plant.

R. Good morrow Father.

Fri. Benedicte.

What early tongue so sweet saluteth me?
Young Sonne, it argues a dislimpered head,
So soone to bid goodmorrow to thy bed;
Care keepes his watch in every old mans eye,
And where Care lodges, sleepe will never lye:
But where vnbrused youth with vnftuft braine
Doth couch his lims, there.goleen sleepe doth raigne;
Therefore thy earlineffe doth me affure,
Thou art vprou'd with some diftemprature;
Or if not fo, then here I hit it right.

Our Rome hath not beene in bed to night.
R. That laft is true, the sweeter rett was mine.

Fri. God pardon fin:waft thou with Rosaline?
R. With Rosaline, my ghostly Father? No,
I haue forgot that name, and that names woe.

Fri. That's my good Son, but wher haft thou bin then?
R. Ile tell thee ere thou aske it me ajen:
I haue beene feasting with mine enemie,
Where on a sudden one hath wounded me,
That's by me wounded:both our remedies
Within thy helpe and holy philifice lies:
I beare no hatred,blessed mafsfor loe
My interceflion likewise reads my foe.

Fri. Be plaine good Son,ref homely in thy drift,
Riding confeffion,finds but riding thrift.

R. Then plainly know my hearts deare Loue is fet,
On the faire daughter of rich Capulet:
As mine on her,fo hers is fet on mine;
And all combin'd,saue what thou must combine
By holy marriage: when and where, and how,
We met, we woed, and made exchange of vow:
Ile tell thee as we paff, but this I pray,
That thou conuent to marrie vs to day.

Fri. Holy S. Francis,what a change is here?
Is Rosaline that thou didst Loue so deare
So soone forfaken? young mens Loue then lies
Not truely in their hearts, but in their eyes.

Iefu Maria,what a deal of urine
Hath waft thy fellow cheekes for Rosaline?
How much falt water throwen away in waft,
To feafon Loue that of it doth not call.
The Sun not yet thy fighes,from heavens clearnes,
Thy old grones yet ringing in my auncient cares:
Lo here vpon thy cheeke the flaine doth fit,
Of an olde tearre that is not wafted off yet,
If ere thou waft thy felfe, and these woees thine,
Thou and these woees, were all for Rosaline.

And art thou chang'd?pronounce this sentence then,
Women may fall, when there's no strength in men.

Rom. Thou chid'st me oft for louing Rosaline.

Fri. For doting,not for louing pupil mine.

Rom. And bad'd me bury Loue.

Fri. Not in a grave,
To lay one in, another out to haue.
Rom. I pray thee chide me not,her I Loue now
Doth grace for grace, and Loue for Loue allow:
The other did not fo.

Fri. O the knew well,
Thy Loue did read by rote, that could not spell:
But come young waueler, come goe with me,
In one respect, Ie thy affistant be:
For this alliance may fo happy proue,
To turne your houles tuncor to pure Loue.

Rom. O let vs hence, I stand on fudden haft.

Fri. Wifely and flow, they fumble that run falt.

Exit

Enter Benwilio and Mercutio.

Mer. Where the deu le shoulde this Rome be? came he not home to night?

Ben. Not to his Fathers, I spake with his man.

Mer. Why that fame pale hard-harted wench, that Rosaline torments him fo, that he will fure run mad.

Ben. Tibalt, the kinfans to old Capulet, hath sent a Letter to his Fathers houfe.

Mer. A challenge on my life.

Ben. Rome will anfwer it.

Mer. Any man that can write, may anfwer a Letter.

Ben. Nay, he will anfwer the Letters Mafter how he dares, being dared.

Mer. Alas poor Rome, he is already dead fab'd with a white wenchakes blacke eye, runne through the eare with a Loue fong, the very pinne of his heart, cleft with the blind Bowe-boyes but-foft, and is he a man to encounter Tybalt?

Ben. Why what is Tybalt?

Mer. More then Prince of Cats. Oh hee's the Courageous Captaine of Complements: he fights as you fing prickfong, keeps time, dilance, and proportion, he rets his minum, one, two, and the third in your bosom the very butcher of a silk burton, a Dualift, a Dualift: a Gentleman of the very firft houfe of the firft and fcond caufe; ah the immortal Paffado, the Punto reuero, the Hay.

Ben. The what?

Mer. The Pox of fuch antique lifing affiding phanacies, the newers newers of accent: Iefu a very good blade, a very tall man, a very good whore. Why is not this a lamentable thing Grandifire, that we should be thus affiliated with these strange flies: these fashion Mongers, thes parde-mee's, who fande fo much on the new form, that they cannot fit at cafe on the old bench. O their bones, their bones.

Enter Rome.

Mer. Without his Roe, like a dried Heron, O fles, fles, how art thou fhiptied? Now is he for the numbers that Petrarch flowed in: Laura to his Lady, was a kitchen wench,marrie she had a better Loue to berime her: Didow a dowdie, Clopeatra a Gipie, Hellen and Here, hildings and Harlts: Tisbie a gray eie or fo, but not to the purpose. Signior Rome, Bon tour, there's a French falutation to your ff

French
French flop: you gave vs the the counterfeit fairly last night.

_Romeo._ Good morrow to you both, what counterfeit did I give you?

_Mer._ The flip fur, the flip, can you not conceive?

_Rom._ Pardon Mercutio, my buxiness was great, and in such a cafe as mine, a man may freaine curtefe.

_Mer._ That's as much as to fay, such a cafe as yours constrains a man to bow in the hams.

_Rom._ Meaning to curfe.

_Mer._ Thou haft moft kindly hit it.

_Rom._ A moft curtefe expedition.

_Mer._ Nay, I am the very pinck of curtefe.

_Rom._ Pinkie for flower.

_Rom._ Right.

_Rom._ Why then is my Pump well flrow'd.

_Mer._ Sure wit, follow me this leaf, now till thou haft
worne out thy Pump, that when the fingle fole of it is worne, the leaf may remaine after the wearing, foie-fingular.

_Rom._ O sngle fol'd leaf,

Soly fingular for the singleneffe.

_Mer._ Come betweene vs good Benulio, my wits faints.

_Rom._ Swits and spurs,

Swits and spurs, or Ile crie a match.

_Mer._ Nay, if our wits run the Wild-Goofe chafe, I am done: For thou haft more of the Wild-Goofe in one of thy wits, then I am sure I haue in my whole fife. Was
I with you there for the Goofe?

_Rom._ Thou waft neuer with mee for any thing, when thou waft not there for the Goofe.

_Mer._ I will bite thee by the care for that left.

_Rom._ Nay good Goofe bite not.

_Mer._ Thy wit is a very Bitter-tweeting,
It is a moft harpe fawce.

_Rom._ And is it not well feru'd into a Sweet-Goofe?

_Mer._ Oh here's a wit of Cheurell, that stretches from an ync narrow, to an eell broad.

_Rom._ I fretch it out for that word, broad, which added to the Goofe, proues thee farre and wide, abrod Goofe.

_Mer._ Why is not this better now, then groining for Loue, now art thou fociable, now art thou _Romeo_ now art thou what thou art, by Art as well as by Nature, for this driuelling Loue is like a great Naturall, that runs lolling vp and downe to bid his bable in a hole.

_Ben._ So the Goofe.

_Mer._ Thou defir'ft me to ftop in my tale againft the Ben. Thou would'ft elfe haue made thy tale large, (hair.

_Rom._ O art thou deceiu'd, I would haue made it short, or I was come to the whole depth of my tale, and meant indeed to occuipie the argument no longer.

_Enter Nurse and her man._

_Rom._ Here's goodly gearre.

_A fayle; a fayle._

_Mer._ Two, two a Shirt and a Smocke.

_Nur._ Peter?

_Peter._ Anon.

_Nur._ My Fan Peter?

_Mer._ Good Peter to hide her face?

For her Fans the fairer face?

_Nur._ God ye good morrow Gentlemen.

_Mer._ God ye gooden faire Gentlemewan.

_Nur._ Is it gooden?

_Mer._ 'Tis no lefte I tell you: for the bawdy hand of the Dyall is now upon the pricke of Noone.

_Nur._ Out upon yous what a man are you?

_Rom._ One Gentlewoman,

That God hath made, himselfe to mar.

_Nur._ By my troth it is fai'd, for himelfe to, mar qua-
t hat Gentlemen, can any of you tel me where I may find the youn_ Romeo?_

_Romeo._ I can tell you: but young _Romeo_ will be older when you haue found him, then he was when you sought him: I am the youngest of that name, for fault of a worfe.

_Nur._ You fay well.

_Mer._ Yeas is the worft well,*

Very well tooke: _I_ faith, wilfully, wisely.

_Nur._ If you be he fir,

I defire some confidence with you?

_Ben._ She will enidine him to some Supper.

_Mer._ A baud, a baud, a baud. So ho.

_Rom._ What haft thou found?

_Mer._ No Hare fir, vnleffe a Hare fir in a Lenten pie,
thats something stale and hoare ere it be fpent.

An old Hare hoare, and an old Hare hoare is very good meat in Lent.

But a Hare that is hoare is too much for a score, when it
hoares ere it be fpent,

_Romeo_ will you come to your Fathers? Weele to dinner thither.

_Rom._ I will follow you.

_Mer._ Farewell auncient Lady:

Farewell Lady, Lady, Lady.

_Exit._ Mercutio, Benulio.

_Nur._ I pray you fir, what fawcie Merchant was this that was to full of his roperie?

_Rom._ A Gentleman Nurse, that loues to heare himfelfe talk, and will fpoke more in a minute, then he will fland to in a Moneth.

_Nur._ And a speake any thing againft me, Ile take him
downe, & a were lufter then he is, and twenteife such lackes:
and if I cannot, Ile finde thofe that shall: fcruiuie knaue,
I am none of his fturt-gils, I am none of his skaines mates, and thou muft fland by too and suffer euery knaue to vie me at his pleafure.

_Pet._ I faw no man fee you at his pleafure: if I had, my weapon should quickly have beene out, I warrant you, dare draw affonne as another man, if I fee occaion in a good quarrell, and the law on my fide.

_Nur._ Now afore God, I am fo vext, that every part about my quivers, skurvy knaue: pray you fay a word: and as I told you, my young Lady bid me enquire you out, what I fhe bid me fay, I will keepe to my felfe: but firft let me tell ye, if ye should leade her in a fooles paradise, as they fay, it were a very groffe kind of behavourage, as they fay:
for the Gentlewoman is yong: & therefore, if you should deale double with her, truely it were an ill thing to be offered to any Gentlewoman, and very weake dealing.

_Nur._ Nurse commend me to thy Lady and Miftreff, I proftect unto thee.

_Nur._ Good heart, and yet I will tell her as much:

_Lord, Lord_ she will be a loyfull woman.

_Rom._ What wilt thou tell her Nurse? thou doeff not marke me?

_Nur._ I will tell her fir, that you do protest, which as I take it, is a Gentleman-like offer. (afternoon)

_Rom._ Bid her deuife some means to come to thirft this
And there she fhall at _Frie Lawrence_ Cell
Befhru'd and married: here is for thy paines.

_Nur._ No truly fir not a penny.

_Rom._ Go too, I fay you fhall.
The Tragedie of Romeo and Juliët.

Nur. This afternoone sir? well she shall be there.
Rô. And stay thou good Nurfe behind the Abbey wall,
Within this houre my man shall be with thee,
And bring thee Cords made like a tackled faire,
Which to the high top gallant of my joy,
Muff be my conuoy in the secret night.
Farewell, be true and Ie quite thy paines:
Farewell, commend me to thy Miftris.
Nur. Now God in heauen bleffe thee:harke you sir,
Rom. What fhit thou my dear Nurfe?
Nurfe. If your man secret, did you nere heare fay two may kepe counfell putting one away.
Rô. Warrant thee my man as true as fleele.
Nur. Well sir, my Miftris is the sweeteft Lady, Lord,
Lord, when 'twas a little prating thing. O there is a Noble man in Towne one Paris, that would faine lay knife aboard: but the good soule had as leeue a fee Toade,a very Toade as fee him: I anger her fometime, and tell her that Paris is the proper man, but Ile warrant you, when I fay fo, thee lookes as pale as any clouit in the verfai world.
Doth not Romefarie and Romeo begin both with a letter?
Rom. I Nurfe, what of that? Both with an R
Nur. A Nurfe, the dogname. R. is for the no,
I know it begins with fome other letters and the hath the prettieft fententious of it, of you and Romefarie, that it would do you good to hear it.
Rom. Commend me to thy Lady.
Nur. I a thoufand times, Peter?
Enter Juliët.
Jü. The clocke froke nine, when I did fend the Nurfe,
In halfe an houre she promifeed to returne,
Perchance he cannot meete him:that's not fo:
Oh she is lame, Loues Heralds should be thoughts,
Which ten times fatter glides then the Sunnes beames,
Driving backe shadowes over lowring hils.
Therefore do nimble Pinion'd Doues draw Loue,
And therefore hath the wind-swift Capid wings:
Now is the Sun vpon the highmoft hill
Of this daiies journee, and from nine till twelve,
I three long houres, yet fie is not come.
Had the affections and warme youthfull blood,
She would be as swift in motion as a ball,
My words would bandy her to my sweete Loue,
And his to me, but old folkes,
Many faine as they were dead,
Vnwindie,flow, heauy, and pale as lead.

Enter Nurfe.
O God he comes, O hony Nurfe what newes?
Haft thou met with him? lend thy man away.

Nur. Peter stay at the gate.
Jü. Now good sweete Nurfe:
O Lord, why lookeft thou fad?
Though newes, be fad, yet tell them merrily.
If good thou flam't the musick of sweete newes,
By playing it to me, with fo fower a face.
Nur. I am a weary, give me leue awhile.
Fie how my bones ake, what a launt haue I had?
Jü. I would thou had't my bones, and I thy newes:
Nay come I pray thee speake,good good Nurfe speake.
Nur. I ef? what ha? can you not fay a while?
Do you not fee that I am out of breath?
Jü. How art thou out of breath, when thou haft breathed
To fay to me, that thou art out of breath?
The excuse that thou doft make in this delay,
Is longer then the tale thou doft excuse.
Is thy newes good or bad? anfwere to that,
Say either, and Ile fay the circumsance:
Let me be fatisfi'd, if good or bad?
Nur. Well, you have made a simple choice, you know not how to chufe a man: Romeo, no not he though his face be better then any mans, yet his legs excels all mens, and for a hand, and a foote, and a body, though they be not to be talkt on, yet they are paff compare: he is not the flower of curtefe, but Ile warrant him as gentle a Lambe: go thy waies wench, true God, What have you dint' at home?
Jü. No nobut all this this did I know before
What faiies he of our marriage? what of that?
Nur. Lord how my head akes, what a head haue I?
It beates as it would fall in twenty pecce.
My backe a tother fide: to my backe, my backe:
Befhwre your heart for fending me about
To catch my death with ianting vp and downe.
Jü. I faith: I am forrie that thou art fo well.
Sweet iweet, sweet Nurfe, tell me what faiies my Loue?
Nur. Your Loue faiies like an honeft Gentleman,
And a courteous, and a kind, and a handfome,
And I warrant it vertuous: where is your Mother?
Jü. Where is my Mother?
Why she is within, where shoule she be?
How odly thou rep'rt: it
Your Loue faiies like an honeft Gentleman:
Where is your Mother?
Nur. O Gods Lady deare,
Are you fo hotmarrie come vp I tow,
Is this the Poultis for my aking bones?
Henceforward do your meffages your felfe.
Jü. Here's fuch a coile, come what faiies Romeo?
Nur. Haue you got leue to go to thift to day?
Jü. I haue,
Nur. Then high you hence to Frier Laurence Cell,
There faiies a Husband to make you a wife:
Now comes the wanton bloud vp in your cheekes,
The'lle be in Scarlet fhrait at any newes:
Hie you to Church, I muft an other way,
To fetch a Ladder by the which your Loue
Muft clime a birds neft Soone when it is darke:
I am the drudge, and toile in your delight:
But you shall beare the burthen foone at night.
Go Ile to dinner, hie you to the Cell.
Jü. He to high Fortune, honeft Nurfe, farewell. Exeunt.

Enter Frier and Romeo.
Fri. So fmile the heauen vpon this holy aët,
That after houres, with forrow chide vs not.
Rom. Amen, amen, but come what forrow can,
It cannot counteruaiile the exchange of joy
That one fhort minute gives me in her fight:
Do thou but clofe our hands with holy words,
Then Loue-deouering death do what he dare,
It is inough. I may but call her mine.
Fri. Thife violent delights haue violent endes,
And in their triumphlie like fire and powder,
Which as they kiffe confume. The sweeteft honey
Is loathome in his owne delicioufness,
And in the faffe confoundes the appetite.
Therefore Loue moderatly, long Loue doth fo,
Too swift arrives as tardie as too flow.

Enter Juliët.
Here comes the Lady. Oh fo light a foot
Will vne were out the euerlafting flint,
ff2
A Lover may bestride the Goatsfours,
That ydes in the wanton Summer ayre,
And yet not fall, so light is vanity.
  Iul. Good even to my ghostly Confessor.
  Fri. Romeo shall thanke thee Daugther for vs both.
  Iul. As much to him,elle in his thanks too much.
  Fri. Ah Iuliet,if the measure of thy joy
Be heapt like mine, and that thy skill be more
To blazon it, then sweeten with thy breath
This neighbour ayre, and let rich musickes tongue,
Vnfold the imagin'd happinesse that both
Receive in either, by this deare encounter.
  Iul. Conceit more rich in matter then in words,
Brags of his subsistance,not of Ornament :
They are but beggers that can count their worth,
But my true Loue is growned to such such excelle,
I cannot sum vp some of halfe my wealth.
  Fri.Come,come with me,.& we will make short worke,
For by your leaves,you shall not stay alone,
Till holy Church incorporate two in one.
  Enter Mercutio,Benuolio,and men.
  Ben. I pray thee good Mercutio let's retire,
The day is hot, the Capuletts abroad.
And if we meet, we shall not ecape a brawle,for now these hot dayes, is the mad blood stirring.
  Mer. Thou art like one of these fellows,that when he enters the confines of a Tauerne,claps me his Sword vpon the Table, and fayes, God fend me no need of thee: and by the operation of the second cup,drawes him on the Drawer, when indeed there is no need.
  Ben. Am I like such a Fellow ?
  Mer. Come,come,thou art as hot a Iacke in thy mood, as any in Italie : and assioone moued to be moodie, and af-
foone moodie to be mou'd.
  Ben. And what too?
  Mer. Nay, and there were two such, we shoude have none shortly,for one would kill the other:thou, why thou wilt quarrel with a man that hath a haire more, or a haire leffe in his beard,then thou haft:thou wilt quarrel with a man for cracking Nuts, hauing no other reason, but because thou haft haefell eyes: what eye, but such an eye, would spie out such a quarrell? thy head is as full of quarrels, as an eggge is full of meat, and yet thy head hath bin beaten as addle as an eggge for quarrelling:thou haft quarrell'd with a man for coiffing in the street, because he ha hath wakened thy Dog that hath laine aleepe in the Sun:Did'ft thou not fall out with a Tailor for wearing his new Doublet before Esfer ? with another,for tying his new shoes with old Riban, and yet thou wilt Tutor me from quarrell-
ing?
  Ben. And I were fo apt to quarrel as thou art,any man should buy the Fee-simplice of my life, for an houre and a quarter.
  Mer. The Fee-simpile ? O simple.
  Enter Tybalt,Petruchio ,and others.
  Ben. By my head here comes the Capuletts.
  Mer. By my heele I care not.
  Tyb. Follow me clofe,for I will speake to them.
Gentlemen,Good den,aword with one of you.
  Mer. And but one word with one of vs:couple it with something,make it a word and a blow.
  Tib. If you find me apt enoough to that fir, and you will give me occaion.
  Mercu. Could you not take some occaion without giving?
  Tib. Mercutio thou confort'ft with Romeo.
  Mer. Confort what doft thou make vs Minifrels? & thou make Minifrels of vs, looke to heare nothing but dif-
cords:there's my fiddleftick,heere's that shall make you dance. Come confort.
  Ben. We talk here in the publike haunt of men :
Either withdraw vnto some priuate place,
Or reft quies call of your greeneaces:
Or else depart, here all eles gaze on vs.
  Mer. Mens eyes were made to looke, and let them gaze.
I will not budge for no mans pleature I.

Enter Romeo.
  Tib. Well peace be with you fir, here comes my man.
  Mer. But Ile be hang'd if ir he were my Luery :
Marry go before to field,beele be your follower,
Your worship in that fene, may call him man.
  Tib. Romeo, the loue I heare thee, can afford
No better terme then this: Thou art a Villaine,
  Rom. Tibalt; the reafon that I have to loue thee,
Both much excuse the appertaining rage
To such a greeeting: Villaine am I none :
Therefore farewell, I fee thou know'ft me not.
  Tib. Boy,thishall not excue the injuries
That thou haft done me,therefore turne and draw.
  Rom. I do protest I neuer inuir'd thee,
But lou'd thee better then thou can't deuise :
Till thou shalt know the reafon of my loue,
And fo good Capulet, which name I tender
As dearly as my owne,be satisfied.
  Mer. O calme,dishonourable, vile submiffion :
Alla stucabo carries it away.
  Tybalt, you Rat-catcher,will you walke ?
  Tib. What woulds thou haue with me ?
  Mer. Good King of Cats,nothing but one of your nine lives,that I meane to make bold withall, and as you shal vs me hereafter dry beate the rest of the eight. Will you pluck your Sword out of his Pilcher by the eares ? Make haft,leat mine be about your eares ere it be out.
  Tib. I am for you,
  Rom. Gentle Mercuito,put thy Rapier vp.
  Mer. Come fir,your Paffado.
  Rom. Draw Benuolio,beat downe their weapons :
Gentlemen,for shame forbeare this outrage,
  Tybalt,Mercuito, the Prince expressly hath Forbidden bandyng in Verona streetes.
Hold Tybalt,good Mercuito,

Exit Tybalt.
  Mer. I am hurt.
A plague a both the Houses, I am sped:
Is he gone and hath nothing ?
  Ben. What art thou hurt ?
  Mer. I,La scratch, a scratch,marry 'tis inough,
Where is my Page?go Villaine fetch a Surgeon.
  Rom. Courage man, the hurt cannot be much.
  Mer. No :'tis not so deepe as a well, nor so wide as a Church doore, but 'tis inough, 'twill serue : aske for me to morow,and you shall find me a graue man, I am pepper'd
I warrant for this world : a plague a both your houes.
What, a Dog, a Rat, a Mouse, a Cat to starcke a man to death : a Braggart, a Rogue, a Villaine, that fights by the booke of Arithmeticke, why the deu'e came you between vs ? I was hurt for your terme.
  Rom. I thought all for the bet.
  Mer. Helpe me into some houe Benuolio,
Or I shall fainta plague a both your houes.
They have made wormes meat of me,
The Tragedie of Romeo and Julliet

I have it, and soundly to your Houses. Exit.

Rom. This Gentleman the Princes neere Alie,
My very Friend hath got his mortall hurt
In my behalf, my reputation flain'd
With Tybalt's flander, Tybalt that an houre
Hath beene my Cozin: O Sweet Julliet,
Thy Beauty hath made me Effeminate,
And in my temper sofine Valours fleele.

Enter Benwoio.

Ben. O Romeo, Romeo, brave Mercutio's is dead,
That Gallant spirit hath aspir'd the Cloudes,
Which too vntimely here did fcorne the earth.

Rom. This daies blace Fate, on mo daies doth depend,
This but begins, the wothers must end.

Enter Tybalt.

Ben. Here comes the Furious Tybalt backe againe.

Rom. He gon in triumph, and Mercutio finde
Away to heaven restfulie Lutetie,
And fire and Fury, be my conduct now.
Now Tybalt take the Villaine backe againe
That late thou gau't me, for Mercutio foule
Is but a little way aboove our heads,
Staying for thine to keepe him companie:
Either thou or I, or both, must goe withhim.

Tib. Thou wretched Boy that didst confort him here,
Shalt with him hence.

Rom. This shall determine that.

Ben. Rome, away be gone?

The Citizens are up, and Tybalt flaine,
Stand not amaz'd, the Prince will Doome thee death
If thou art takehence, be gone, away.

Rom. O! Iam Fortunes foole.
Ben. Why doft thou stay?

Enter Citizens.

Cit. Which way ran he that kild Mercutio?

Tiibalt that Murtherer, which way ran he?

Ben. There lies that Tybalt.
Cit. Vp for go with me:

I charge thee in the Princes names obey.

Enter Prince, old Montague, Capulet, their

And all.

Prin. Where are the vile beginners of this Fray?

Ben. O Noble Prince, I can discouer all

The vnluckie Mannage of this fatal brall:
There lies the man flaine by young Romeo,
That fiew thy kinman braue Mercutio.

Cap. Wi. Tybalt, my Cozin? O my Brothers Child,
O Prince, O Cozin, Husband, O the blood is fpild
Of my deare kinman,Prince as thou art true,
For blood of ours, shed bloud of Montague.

O Cozin, Cozin.

Prin. Benwoio, who began this Fray?

Ben. Tybalt here flaine, whom Romeo's hand did flay,
Romeo that spoke him faire, bid him bethinke
How nice the Quarrell was, and Verg'd withall
Your high displeasure: all this vttred.

With gentle breath, calme looke, knees humbly bow'd
Could not take truce with the vnruyloe fpleene
Of Tybalt's desie to peace, but that he Tilted
With Peircing fleele at bold Mercutio's breast,
Who all as hot, turnes deadly point to point,
And with a Martiall fcorne, with one hand beates
Cold death aside, and with the other fends
It back to Tybalt, whose dexterity

Retorts it: Romeo he cries aloud,
Hold Friends, Friends part, and twixt his tongue,
His aged arme,beats downe their fatal points,
And twitt them rufhes, vnderneath whose arme,
An enious thrift from Tybalt the life
Of stout Mercutio, and then Tybalt fled.

But by and by comes backe to Romeo,
Who had but newly entertained Reuenge;
And too't they goe like lightning, for ere I
Could draw to part them, was stout Tybalt flaine:
And as he fell, did Romeo turne and flies:
This is the trut,h or let Benwoio die.

Cap. Wi. He is a kinman to the Montague,
Affection makes him fall, he speakes not true:
Some twenty of them fought in this blacke strife,
And all those twenty could but kill one life.
I beg for lufftice, which thou Prince must give:
Romeo flew Tybalt, Romeo must not line.

Prin. Romeo saw him, he flew Mercutio,
Who now the price of his deare blood doth owe.

Cap. Not Romeo Prince, he was Mercutio Friend,
His fault concludes, but what the law should end,
The life of Tybalt.

Prin. And for that offence,
Immediately we doe exile him hence:
I have an interrest in your hearts proceeding:
My blood for your rude brawles doth lie a bleeding.
But Ie Amerce you with so strong a fine,
That you shall all repent the losse of mine.
It will be deafe to pleading and excesses,
Nor tears, nor prayers shall purchase our abuses.
Therefore vse none, let Romeo hence in haft,
Else when he is found, that house is his left.
Beare hence this body, and attend our will:
Mercy not Murders, pardoning those that kill.

Enter Iuliet alone.

Iul. Gallop space, you fiery footed freedes,
Towards Phoebus lodging, such a Wagoner
As Phaeton would whip you to the weft,
And bring in Cloudie night immediately.

Sprd thy clofe Curtaine Love-performing night,
That run-awayes eyes may wincke, and Romeo
Leape to these arms, vntalkt of and vnscene,
Lovers can fee to doe their Amorous rights,
And by their owne Beauties: or if Loue be blind,
It belt agrees with night: come ciuill night,
Thou fober futed Marron all in blacke,
And leanne me how to looze a winning match,
Plaid for a paire of finlefe Maidenhoods,
Hood my vnman'd blood baying in my Cheekes;
With thy Blacke mantle, till strange Loue grow bold,
Think e true Loue acted fimple modell:
Come night, come Romeo, come thou day in day,
For thou wilt lie upn the wings of night
Whiter then new Snow upon a Rauens backe:
Come gentle night, come louing blacke brow'd night.
Give me my Romeo, and when I shall die,
Take him and cut him out in little ifares,
And he will make the Face of heauen fo fine,
That all the world will be in Loue with night,
And pay no worship to the Garish Sun.
O I haue bought the Mansion of a Loue,
Butnot poiffit it, and though I am fould,
Not yet enjoy'd, fo tedious is this day,
As is the night before some Feithfull.
Ah where's my man? give me some Aqua-vitæ?
Th ese griefes, these woees, these forrowes make me old:
Shame come to Romeo.

Iul. Bliffter'd be thy tongue
For such a wilde, he was not borne to shame:
Vpon his brow flame is ahain'd to fit;
For 'tis a throne where Honour may be Crown'd
Sole Monarch of the vnierenfull earth:
O what a beast was I to childe him?

Nur. Will you speake well of him,
That kill'd your Cozen?

Iul. Shall I speake ill of him that is my husband?
Ah poore my Lord, what tongue shall smooth thy name,
When I thy three hours wife have mangled it.
But wherefore Villaine didn't thou kill my Cozin?
That Villaine Cozin would haue kill'd my husband:
Backe foolish tears, backe to thy natuere spring,
Your tributarie drops belong to woe,
Which you miftaking offer up to ioy:
My husband lues that Tybalt would haue flame,
And Tybalt dead that would haue flame my husband:
All this is comfort, wherefore weepe I then?
Some words the deader Tybalt doth wondre then Tybalt's death
That murdered me, I would forget it feine,
But oh, it prestes to my memory,
Like damnd guilty deedes to finner's minds,
Tybalt is dead and Rome banished:
That banished, that one word banished,
Hath flame ten thousand Tybalt's Tybalt's death
Was woe inough if it had ended there:
Or if wower woe delights in fellowship,
And needly will be rankt with other griefes,
Why followed not when she said Tybalt dead,
Thy Father or thy Mother, nay or both,
Which moderne lamentation might haue mou'd.
But which a rare-ward following Tybalt's death
Rome is banished to speake that word,
Is Father, Mother, Tybalt, Rome, Iuliet,
All flame, all dead: Rome is banished,
There is no end, no limit, measure, bound,
In that words death, no words can that woe found.
Where is my Father and my Mother Nurfe?

Nur. Weeping and wannouring Tybalt Coarse,
Will you go to them? I will bring you thether.

Iul. Waish they his wounds with tears:mine shal be spent
When theirs are drie for Romeo's banishment.

Vpt take those Cordes, poor ropes you are beguill'd,
Both you and I for Romeo is exild:
He made you for a high-way to my bed,
But I a Maid, die Maiden widowed.
Come Cord, come Nurfe, Ile to my wedding bed,
And death not Romeo; take my Maiden head.

Nur. He to your Chamber, Ile find Romeo
To comfort you, I wot well where he is:
Harke ye your Romeo will be heere at night,
Ile to him, he is hid at Lawrence Cell.

Iul. O find him, fieue this Ring to my true Knight,
And bid him come, to take his left farewell.

Enter Friar and Romeee.

Fri. Romeo come forth,
Come forth thou fearfull man,
Affliction is enamor'd of thy parts:
And thou art wedded to calamitie.

Rom. Father what newes?
Then mightest thou speake,
Thou mightest thou teare thy hayre,
And fall upon the ground as I doe now,
Taking the measure of an vmade graue.

Enter Nurfe, and knockes.

Fri. Arife one knockes,
Good Romeo hide thy felfe.

Rom. Not I,
Vnnieffe the breath of Hartficke groanes
Mift-like infold me from the fearch of eyes.

Fri. Knocke.

Run to my fluyd: by and by, Gods will
What fimpfleffe is this: I come, I come.

Who knockes fo hard?
Whence come you? what's your will?

Enter Nurfe.

Nur. Let me come in,
And you shall know my errand:
I come from Lady Juliet.

Fri. Welcome then.

Nur. O holy Friar, O tell me holy Friar,
Where's my Ladies Lord? where's Romeo?

Fri. There on the ground,
With his owne teares made drunke.

Nur. O he is eu'en in my Miftrefle cafe,
Inuft in her cafe. O wooffull fimpathy:
Pittious predicament, even fo lies she,
Blubbring and weeping, weeping and blubbringe,
Stand vp, ftand vp, and you be a man,
For Juliet's fake, for her fake rife and ftand:
Why shold you fall into fo deepe an O.

Rom. Nurfe.

Nur. Ah fir, ah fir, deaths end of all.

Rom. Speak'st thou of Juliet? how is it with her?
Doth not the thinke me an old Murtherer,
Now I haue flain'd the Childhood of our Ioy,
With blood remoued, but little from her owne?
Where is she? and how doth she? and what fayes
My concealf Lord to our concealf Loue?

Nur. Oh she fayes nothing fir, but weeps and weeps,
And now fals on her bed, and then farts vp,
And Tybalt calls, and then on Romeo cries,
And then downe falls again.

Ro. As if that name fholt from the dead leuell of a Gun,
Did murder her, as that names curfed hand
Mundred her kinman. Oh tell me Friar, tell me,
In what vile part of this Anatome
Doth my name lodge? Tell me, that I may facke
The hateful Manion.

Fri. Hold thy deperate hand:
Art thou a man? thy forme cries out thou art:
Thy teares are womanish, thy wild acts denote
The vnreasonable Furie of a beaft.
Vnfeemely woman, in a feeming man,
And ill befeeming beaft in feeming both,
Thou haft amazed me. By my holy order,
I thought thy dispoftion better temper'd.
Haft thou flaine Tybalt? wilt thou flay thy felfe?
And flay thy Lady, that in thy life lies,
By doing dammed hate upon thy felfe?

Why rayl'ft thou on thy birth? the heaven and earth?

The Tragedie of Romeo and Juliet.
Since birth, and heaven and earth, all three do meete
In thee at once, which thou at once wouldst looke.
Fie, fie, thou ham't thy shape, thy louse, thy wit,
Which like a Viser upon'd in all:
And v'lt none in that true vie indeed,
Which should bedecke thy shape, thy louse, thy wit:
Thy Noble shape, is but a forme of waxe,
Digressing from the Valour of a man,
Thy deare Loue fworne but hollow periurie,
Killing that Loue which thou hait vow'd to cherish.
Thy wit, that Ornament, to shape and Loue,
Mishapen in the condicion of them both:
Like powder in a skilleffe Soulshiers flake,
Is set a fire by thine owne ignorance,
And thou didstembreth with thine owne defence.
What, rowse thee man, thy Juliet is alie,
For whose deare fake thou waft but lately dead.
There art thou happy, Tybalt would kill thee,
But thou didst never Tybalt, there art thou happie.
The law that threatened death became thy Friend,
And turn'd it to exile, there art thou happy.
A packe or bleeding light vpon thy backe,
Hapinesse Courts thee in her beat array,
But like a misshapen and fallen witch,
Thou puttest vp thy Fortune and thy Loue:
Take heed, take heed, for such die miserable.
Goe get thee to thy Loue as was decreed,
Ascend her Chamber, hence and comfort her:
But looke thou day not till the watch be fet,
For then thou canst not passe to Mantua,
Where thou shalt liue till we can finde a time
To blaze your marriage, reconcile your Friends,
Beg pardon of thy Prince, and call thee backe,
With twenty hundred thoufand times more joy
Then thou went'rt forth in lamentation.
Goe before Nurse, commend me to thy Lady,
And bid her haften all the house to bed,
Which heavy sorrow makes them apt vnto
Romeo is comming.

Nur. O Lord, I could haue staid here all night,
To heare good counsell:oh what learning is!
My Lord Ile tell my Lady you will come.
Rom. Do fo, and bid my Sweete prepare to chide.
Nur. Heere fir, a King the bid me give you fir:
Hie you, make haft, for it growes very late.
Rom. How well my comfort is reu'd by this.
Fri. Go hence,
Goodnight, and here stands all your fiate:
Either be gone before the watch be fet,
Or by the breath of day dilig'd from hence,
Soloure in Mantua, Ile find out your man,
And he shall signifie from time to time.
Every good hap to you, that chances heere:
Give me thy hand, 'tis late, farewell, goodnight.
Rom. But that a joy paft joy, calls out on me,
It were a griefe, so brieve to part with thee: Farewell,

Exeunt.

Enter old Capulet, his Wife and Paris.

Cap. Things haue faile out fir so vnluckily,
That we have had no time to moue our Daughter:
Looke you, the Lou'd her kinman Tybalt dearely,
And fo did I. Well, we were borne to die:
'Tis very late, she'll not come downe to night:
I promife you, but for your company.
I would haue bin a bed an houre agoe.

Par. These times of wo, afford no times to wooe:
Madam goodnight, commend me to your Daughter.
Lady. I will, and know her mind early to morrow,
To night, she is mewed vp to her heauinifie.

Cap. Sir Paris, I will make a desperate tender
Of my Childes lousie: I thinke she will be rul'd
In all refpects by me: nay more, I doubt it not.
 Wife, go you to her ere you go to bed,
Acquaint her here, of my Sonne Paris Loue,
And bid her,marke you me, on Wendiday next,
But soft, what day is this?

Par. Monday my Lord.

Cap. Monday, ha ha: well Wendiday is too soone,
A Thursday let it bee: Thursday tell her,
She shall be married to this Noble Earle:
Will you be ready? do you like this haft?
Weele keepe no great adoe, a Friend or two,
For harke you, Tybalt being faile fo late,
It may be thought we held him carelessly,
Being our kinman, if we require much:
Therefore weele have some halfe a dozen Friends,
And there an end. But what say you to Thursday?

Paris. My Lord,
I would that Thursday were to morrow.
Cap. Well, get you gone, a Thursday, be it then:
Go you to Juliet ere you go to bed,
Prepare her wife, against this wedding day.
Farewell my Lord, light to my Chamber hoa,
Afore me, it is fo late, that we may call ir early by and by,
Goodnight.

Exeunt.

Enter Romeo and Juliets aloft.

Jul. Wilt thou be gone? It is not yet neere day:
It was the Nightingale, and not the Larke,
That pier'd the fearfull hollow of thine ear,
Nightly the fings on yond Pomgranet tree,
Bleeue me Loue, it was the Nightingale.

Rom. It was the Larke the Herauld of the Morn:
No Nightingale, looke you Loue what envious fivre.
Do lace the feuering Cloudes in yonder Eaft:
Nights Candles are burnt out, and Icond day
Stands tipto on the middle Mountains tops,
I must be gone, and live, or flay and die.

Jul. Yond light is not daylight, I know it I:
It is some Meteor that the Sun exhales,
To be to thee this night a Torch-bearer,
And light thee on thy way to Mantua.
Therefore fay thou, yet thou need'st not to be gone,
Rom. Let me be tane, let me be put to death,
I am content, fo thou wilt have it fo.
Ile fay you gray is not the mornings eye,
'Tis but the pale reflexe of Cynthis brow.
Nor that is not Larke whose noates do beate
The vauity heauen fo high aboute our heads,
I haue more care to flay,then will to go:
Come death and welcome, Juliet wills it fo.
How if my foule, let talke, it is not day.

Jul. It is, it is, hee hence be gone away:
It is the Larke that fings fo out of tune,
Straining harsh Difords, and vnplesing Sharpe's.
Some fay the Larke makes Wheate Diuision;
This doth not fo: for the diuideth vs.
Some fay, the Larke and loathed Toad change eyes,
O now I would they had chang'd voyces too:

Since
Since arme from arme that voyce doth vs affray,
Hunting thence hence, with Hunt f-vp to the day,
O now be gone, more light and itli ght growes.
Rom. More light & light, more darke & darke our woes.

Enter Madam and Nurse.

Nur. Madam.

Iul. Nurse.

Nur. Your Lady Mother is comming to your chamber.
The day is broke, be wary, looke about.
Iul. Then window let day in, and let life out.
Rom. Farewell, farewell, one kiffe and lile defend.
Iul. Art thou gone for Loue, Lord, ay Husband, Friend,
I muft heare from thee every day in the houre,
For in a minute there are many dayes,
O by this count I shall be much in yeares,
Ere I againe behold my Romeo.

Rom. Farewell:
I will omit no opportunitie,
That may consey my greetings Loue, to thee.
Iul. O thinketh thou we shall ever meet againe?
Rom. I doubt it not, and all these woes shall ferue
For sweet discourses in our time to come.

Iuliet. O God! I haue an ill Diuining foule,
Me thinkes I fee thee now, thou art so lowe,
As one dead in the bottome of a Tombe,
Either my eye-fight faileth, or thou look't pale.
Rom. And trust me Loue, in my eye so do you:
Drie forrowes, thinkes our blood. Adue, adue.

Exit.

Iul. O Fortune, Fortune, all men call thee fickle,
If thou art fickle, what doft thou with him
That is renound for faith? be fickle Fortune:
For then I hope thou wilt not keepe him long,
But send him backe.

Enter Mother.

Lad. Ho Daughter, are you vp?
Iul. Who lift that calls? Is it my Lady Mother.
Is the not downe so late, or vp so early?
What vnaccusom'd caufe procurers her hither?

Lad. Why how now Iuliet?
Iul. Madam I am not well.
Lad. Faine meeting for your Cozins death
What wilt thou wath him from his graue with teares?
And if thou coul'd, thou coul'd not make him line:
Therefore have done, some griefe shewes much of Loue,
But much of griefe, shewes still some want of wit.
Iul. Yet let me weape, for such a feeling loffe.

Lad. So shall you feel the loffe, but not the Friend
Which you wepe for.

Iul. Feeling to the loffe,
I cannot chufe but euer weape the Friend.
La. Well Girle, thou weepest not so much for his death,
As that the Villaine liues which slaughter'd him.
Iul. What Villaine, Madam?

Lad. That fame Villaine Romeo.

Iul. Villaine and he, be many Miles affunder:
God pardon, I doe with all my heart:
And yet no man like he,doth griewe my heart.

Lad. That is because the Traitor liues.

Iul. I Madam from the reach of these my hands:
Would none but I might venge my Cozins death.

Lad. We will have vengeance for it, feare thou not.
Then weepe no more, Ile tend to one in Mantua,
Where that same banift Run-agate doth liue,
Shall give him such an vnaccusom'd dram,
That he shal soone keepe Tybalt company:
And then I hope thou wilt be satisfied.

Iul. Indeed I never shall be satisfied
With Romeo, till I behold him, Dead.
Is my poor heart so for a kinship vext:
Madam if you could find out but a man
To beare a poyson, I would temper it;
That Romeo shou'd vpon receit thereof,
Soone fleee in quiet. O how my heart abhors
To heare him nam'd, and cannot come to him,
To wraek the Loue I bore my Cozin,
Vpon his body that hath slaughter'd him.

Mo. Find thou the meanes, and Ile find such a man.
But now Ile tell thee joyfull tidings Gyroke.
Iul. And joy comes well, in such a needy time,
What are they, befethce your Ladyship?
Iul. Well, well, thou haft a carefull Father Child?
One who to put thee from thy heauineffe,
Hath forted out a fudden day of joy,
That thou expectes not, nor I lookt not for.
Iul. Madam in happy time, what day is this?
Mo. Marry my Child, early next Thursday morne,
The gallant, young, and Noble Gentleman,
The Countie Parise at Saint Peters Church,
Shall happily make thee a joyfull Bride.

Iul. Now by Saint Peters Church, and Peter too,
He shall not make me there a joyfull Bride.
I wonder at this haft, that I must weare
Ere he that should be Husband comes to woe:
I pray you tell my Lord and Father Madam,
I will not marrie yet, and when I doe, I sweare
It shallbe Romeo, whom you know I hate
Rather then Parise. These are newes indeed.
Mo. Here comes your Father, tell him so your felfe,
And see how he will take it at your hands.

Enter Capulet and Nurse.

Cap. When the Sun set, the earth doth drizzle daw,
But for the Sunlet of my Brothers Sonne,
It raienes downright.
How now? A Conduit Gyroke, what fill in teares
Euermore entred in one little body?
Thou counterfaits a Barke, a Sea, a Wind:
For fill thy eyes, which I may call the Sea,
Do ebe and flow with teares, the Barke thy body is Sayling in this falt floud, the windes thy fighes,
Who raging with the teares and they with them,
Without a fudden calme will ouer fet
Thy tempete tossed body. How now wife?
Hawe you delivered to her our decree?
Iul. 1 fr;
But she will none, she gues you thankes,
I would the foole were married to her graue.
Cap. Soft, take me with you, take me with you wife,
How, will the none? doth the not giue vs thankes?
Is she not proud? doth she not count her blet,
Unworthy as she is, that we have wrought
So worthy a Gentleman, to be her Bridgewome

Iul. Not proud you have,
But thankfull that you have:
Proud can I never be of what I have,
But thankfull even for hate, that is meant Loue.

Cap. How now?
How now? Choup Logicke? what is this?
Proud, and I thanke you; and I thanke you not.
Thanke me no thankinges, nor proud me no prouds,
But fettle your fine loijts 'gainft Thursday next,
To go with Paris to Saint Peters Church:
Or I will drag thee, on a Hurde thither.
Out you greene fickle,se carion, out you baggage,
You tallow face.

Lady. Fie, fie, what are you mad?

Jtd. Good Father, I beseech you on my knees
Heare me with patience, but to speake a word.

Fa. Hang thee young baggage, disobeident wretch,
I telle thee what, get thee to Church a Thursday,
Or neuer after looke me in the face.

Speake not, reply not, do not answeer me.
My fingers itch, wife: we scarce thought vs blest,
That God had lent vs but this onely Child,
But now I see this one is one too much,
And that we have a curf in hauing her:

Out on her Hilding,

Nur. God in heaven bleffe her,

You are too blame my Lord to rate her so.

Fa. And why my Lady wifedome?hold your tongue,
Good Prudence, in matter with your gossip go.

Nur. I speake no treafon,
Father, O Godigoden,
May not one speake?

Fa. Peace you mumbling foole,
Vtter your grauitie ore a Golips bowles
For here we need it not.

La. You are too hot.

Fa. Gods bread, it makes me mad:
Day, night, houre, ride, time, worke, play,
Alone in company, fill my care hath bin
To hauue her match, and hauing now provided
A Gentleman of Noble Parentage,
Of faire Deemenes, Youthfull, and Nobly Allied,
Stuft as they say with Honourable parts,
Proportion'd as ones thought would with a man,
And then to have a wretched puling foole,
A whining mammet, in her Fortunes tender,
To anfwer, lle not wed, I cannot Loue:

I am too young, I prays you pardon me.
But, and you will not wed, lie pardon you.

Graze where you will, you shall not house with me:

Looke too, this is not, I do not vie to left.
Thurday is neere, lay hand on heart, adultery,
And you be mine, lle give you to my Friend:
And you be not, hang, beg, straue, die in the streets,
For by my foule, lle nere acknowledge thee,
Nor what is mine shall neuer do thee good:

Truft too, bethinke you, lle not be forsworne.

Exit.

Jul. Is there no pittie sitting in the Cloudes,
That fees into the bottome of my griefe?
O sweet my Mother caft me not away,
Delay this marriage, for a month, a weeke,
Or if you do, make the Bridal bed
In that dim Monument where Tybalt lies.

M stealing to not to me, for lle not speake a word,
Do as thou wilt, for I have done with thee.

Exit.

Jul. O God!

Nurfe, how shall this be prevented?

My Husband is on earth, my faith in heauen,
How shall that faith returne again to earth,
Vnleffe that Husband fend it me from heauen,
By leaving earth? Comfort me, counfale me:
Hacke, alacke, that heauen shoulde praefle stratagems
Vpon fo foft a fubieft as my felle.

What faith thou? hath thou not a word of joy?
Some comfort Nurfe.

Nur. Faith here it is, Romeo is banified, and all the world to nothing,
That he dares nere come backe to challenge you:
Or if he do, it needs must be by stealth.
Then since the cafe so standes as now it doth,
I thinke it best you married with the Countie,
O here's a Louely Gentleman:

Romeo a dight-clout to him: an Eagle Madam
Hath not golfgreeno, fo quicke, fo faire an eye
As Paris hath, behow your very heart,
I thinke you are happy in this second match,
For it excels your firftor if it did not,
Your firft is dead, or 'twere as good he were,
As living here and you no wife of him.

Jtd. Speakeft thou from thy heart?

Nur. And from my foule too,
Or else behowre them both.

Jtd. Amen.

Nur. What?

Jtd. Well, thou haft comforted me maruellous much,
Go in, and tell my Lady I am gone,
Hauing difplea'd my Father, to Lawrence Cell,
To make confeffion, and to be aboluf'd.

Nur. Marrie I will, and this is wisely done.

Jtd. Auncient damnation, O most wicked fiend!
It is more fin to withe me thus forworne,
Or to difpraise my Lord with that fame tongue
Which the hath praified him with above compare,
So many thousand times? Go Counfelior,
Thou and my boforme henchforth shall be twaine:
Ile to the Frier to know his remedi,
If all else faile, my fife haue power to die.

Exeunt.

Enter Frier and Countie Paris.

Fri. On Thursday firth the time is very short.

Par. My Father Capulet will haue it fo,
And I am nothing flow to flack his haft.

Fri. You fay you do not know the Ladies mind?

Vneeun is the course, I like it not.

Par. Immoderately she weepes for Tybalt death,
And therefore haue I left you, if you love,
For Venus smiles not in a house of teares.

Now fir, her Father counts it dangerous
That she doth give her forrow so much fWay:
And in his wifedome, hafts our marriage,
To stop the inundation of her teares,
Which too much minded by her felle alone,
May be put from her by societie.

Now doo you know the reafon of this haft?

Fri. I would I knew not why it should be flow'd.

Looke fir, here comes the Lady towards my Cell.

Enter Juliet.

Par. Happily met, my Lady and my wife.

Jtd. That may be fir, when I may be a wife.

Par. That may be, but I muft be Loue, on Thursday next.

Jtd. What muft be flall be.

Fri. That's a certaine text.

Par. Come you to make confeffion to this Father?

Jtd. To anfwer that, I should confesse to you.

Par. Do not denying to him, that you Loue me.

Jtd. I will confesse to you that I Loue him.

Par. So will ye, I am sure that you Loue me.

Jtd. If I do fo, it will be of more price,
Benig spoke behind your backe, then to your face.

Par. Poor foule, thy face is much abuf'd with teares.
The Tragedy of Romeo and Juliet.

Iul. The teares haue got small victorie by that:
For it was bad enough before their sight.
Pa. Thou wrong'st it more then teares with that report.
Iul. That is no flaunder sir, which is a truth,
And what I spake, I spake it to thy face.
Par. Thy face is mine, and thou haft flaunder'd it.
Iul. It may be so, for it is not mine owne.
Are you at leisure, Holy Father now,
Or shall I come to you at evening Maffe?
Fri. My leasure ferues me peniue daughter now.
My Lord you must intreat the time alone.
Par. Godhelie : I should disturbe Devotion,
Iuliet, on Thursday early will I rowe ye,
Till then adore, and keepe this holy kisse. Exit Paris.
Iul. O flust the doore, and when thou hast done so,
Come wepe with me, past hope, past care, past helpe.
Fri. O Iuliet, I alreadie know thy grieue,
It streaumes me past the compact of my wits:
I heare thou muft and nothing may prorogue it,
On Thursday next be married to this Countie.
Iul. Tell me not Frier that thou hearest of this,
Vnlesse thou tell mehow I may prevent it:
If in thy wifedome, thou cannot give no helpe,
Do thou but call my refolution wife,
And with his knife, Ile helpe it presently.
God fordoyn my heart, and Romeo, thou our hands,
And ere this hand by thee this fellow plaid:
Shall be the Labell to another Deede,
Or my true heart with treacherous reuolt,
Tune to another, this shall flay them both:
Therefore out of thy long expetien'tt time,
Give me some prefent counsell, or behold
Twix'tmy extreames and me, this bloody knife
Shall play the vmarpe, arbitrating that,
Which the commision of thy yeares and art,
Could to no issue of true honour bring:
Be not fo long to speak, I long to die,
If what thou speakest, speake not of remedy.
Fri. Hold Daughter, I doe spee a kind of hope,
Which craues as desperate as an extermate:
As that is desperate which we would prevent.
If rather then to marrie Countie Paru
Thou haft the strenght of will to flay thy selfe,
Then is it likelie thou wilt vntake
A thinglike death to chide away this flame,
That coues'ft with death himselfe, to scape fro it:
And if thou dar'ft, Ile give thee relie.
Iul. Oh bid meeleepe, rather then marrie Paru,
From of the Battlements of any Tower,
Or walke in theeuil wales, or bid me lurke
Where Serpents are : chaine me with roaring Beares
Or hide me nightly in a Charnell house,
Orecouer'd quite with dead mens eating bones,
With rockie thankes and yellow chapp'ft foults:
Or bid me go into a new made grave,
And hide me with a dead man in his grave,
Things that to heare them told, haue made me tremble,
And I will doe it without feare or doubt,
To liue an vnmarried wife to my sweet Loue.
Fri. Hold then: goe home, be merrie, giue content,
To marrie Paru : wensday is to morrow,
To morrow night looke that thou lie alone,
Let not thy Nurse lie with thee in thy Chamber:
Take thou this Violi being then in bed,
And this distilling liquor drinke thou off,
When prefently through all thy veins shall run,
A cold and drowzie humour: for no pulse
Shall keepe his natue progreffe, but furcease:
No warmth, no breath shall tellifie thou liuesst,
The Rofes in thy lips and cheeckes shall fade
To many athes, the eyes windowes fall
Like death when he shut vp the day of life:
Each part depru'd of supple government,
Shall flye and starke, and cold appeare like death,
And in this borrowed likenesse of shrunkes death
Thou shalt continue two and forty houres,
And then awake, as from a pleasent fleec.
Now when the Bridegroome in the morning comes,
'To rowe thee from thy bed, there art thou dead:
Then as the manner of our country is,
In thy best Robes vncoeur'd on the Beere,
Be borne to buriall in thy kindred graves.
Thou shalt be borne to that fame ancient vault,
Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie,
In the meane time against thou shalt awake,
Shall Rome by my Letters know our drift,
And hither shall he come, and that very night
Shall Rome beare thee hence to Mantua.
And this shall free thee from this present flame,
If no inconfant toy nor womanish feare,
Abate thy valour in the actinge.
Iul. Give me, give me, O tell not me of care.
Fri. Hold get you gone, be strong and prosperous:
In this refolue, Ile lend a Frier with speec
To Mantua with my Letters to thy Lord.
Iu. Loue giue me strenght,
And strenght shall helpe afford:
Farewell deare father. Exit

Enter Father Capulet, Mother, Nurse, and
Serving men, two or three.

Cap. So many guestes invite as here are writ,
Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning Cookes.
Ser. You shall have none ill sir, for Ile trie if they can lick their fingers:
Cap. How canst thou trie them so?
Ser. Marrie sir, 'tis an ill Cooke that cannot lick his owne fingers: therefore he that cannot lick his fingers goes not with me.
Cap. Go be gone, we shall be much vnfruitfull for this
That is my Daughter gone to Friar Lawrence?
Nur. I forsooth.
Cap. Well he may chance to do some good on her,
A peeuile felle-wild harlotry it is.

Enter Iuliet.

Nur. See where she comes from thrift
With merrie lookes.
Cap. How now my headstrong,
Where haue you bin gagging?
Iul. Where I haue learnt me to repent the sin
Of disobedient opposition:
To you and your besheets, and am enioyn'd
By holy Lawrence, to fall prostrate here,
To beg your pardon: pardon I beseech you,
Henceforward I am euers ru'd by you.
Cap. Send for the Countie, goe tell him of this,
I leue this knot knot vp to morrow morning.
Iul. I met the youthfull Lord at Lawrence Cell,
And gave him what became Loue I might,
Not repeting ore the bounds of modestie.
Cap. Why I am glad on't, this is well, (and vp,

This
This is as 'tis should be, let me see the County:
I marrie go I say, and fetch him hither.
Now afor God, this reueren'd holy Friar,
All our whole Cittie is much bound to him.

Tis now neere night.

Enter Juliet and Nurse.

I. I those attires are best, but gentle Nurse
I pray thee leave me to my felse to night:
For I have need of many Oryfons,
To moue the heauens to smyle vpon my flate,
Which well thou know'st, is croffe and full of fin.

Nurse.

Ms. What are you busie ho? need you my help?
I. No Madam, we haue cul'd fuch necessaries
As are behouefull for our flate to morrow:
So pleaue you, let me now be left alone;
And let the Nurse this night fit vp with you,
For I am sure, you have your hands full all,
In this so fudden bufineffe.

Ms. Goodnight.
Get thee to bed and rest, for thu hast need.

Exeunt.

I. Farewell:
God knowes when we shall meete againe.
I haue a faint cold feare thrills through my veins,
That almoft freezes vp the heate of fire:
Ile call them backe againe to comfort me.
Nurse, what shoul she dore here?
My dismall Scene, I needs must act alone:
Come Viall, what if this mixture do not worke at all?
Shall I be married then to morrow morning?
No, no, this shall forbid it.
Lye thou there,
What if it be a poyfon which the Frier
Subtilly hath minified to haue me dead,
Leaft in this marriage he should be dishonour'd,
Because he married me before to Rome?
I feare it is, and yet me thinkes it should not,
For he hath all beene tried a holy man.
How, if when I am laid into the Tome,
I wake before the time that Rome
Come to redeeme me?  There's a fearefull point:
Shall I not then be flipt in the Vault?
To whose foule mouth no healthhome ayre breaths in,
And there die brangled ere my Rome comes.
Or if I live, is it not very like,
The horrible conceit of death and night,
Together with the terror of the place,
As in a Vaulte, an ancient receptacle,

Where for these many hundred yeeres the bones
Of all my buried Auncestors are packt,
Where bloody Tybals, yet but greene in earth,
Lies seeping in his shrow'd, where as they say,
At some hours in the night, Spirits refor:
Alacke, alacke, is it not like that I
So early waking, what with loathsome fiends,
And shrikes like Mandrakes torne out of the earth,
That liuing mortalls hearing them, run mad.
O if I wake, shall I not be driu'd,
Insolued with all those hideous feares,
And madly play with my forefatheres inlays?
And plucke the mangled Tybals from his shrow'd?
And in this rape, with some great kinfmen bones,
As (with a club) daft out my desperate braines.
O looke, I thinkes I see my Cozins Ghost,
Seeking out Rome that did spit his body
Vpon my Rapiers point: flay Tybals, flay;
Romeo, Romeo, Romeo, here's drinke: I drinke to thee.

Enter Lady of the house, and Nurse.

Lady. Hold,
Take these keys, and fetch more spices Nurse.

Nur. They call for Dates and Quinces in the Pastrie.

Enter old Capulet.

Cap. Come, flir, flir, flir,
The second Cocke hath Crow'd,
The Currphew Bell hath rung, 'tis three a clock:
Looke to the bakte meates, good Angelica,
Spare not for cost.

Nur. Go you Cot-queane, go,
Get you to bed, faith youle be sicke to morrow
For this nights watching.

Cap. No not a whit: what? I haue watcht ere now
All night for leffe caufe, and nere beene sicke.
La. I you haue bin a Moufe-hunt in your time,
But I will watch you from such watching now.

Exit Lady and Nurse.

Cap. A lealous head, a lealous head,
Now fellow, what there?

Enter three or foure with fisits, and logs, and baskets.

Fel. Things for the Cooke fir, but I know not what.

Cap. Make haft, make haft, sirrah, fetch drier Loggs.
Call Peter, he will shew thee where they are.

Fel. I haue a head fir, that will find out logs,
And neuer trouble Peter for the matter.

Cap. Maffe and well fald, a merrie horfon, ha,
Thou shalt be loggerhead, good Father, tis day.

Play Mufick.
The Countie will be here with Mufickke fraight,
For so he faid he would, I hear him neere,
Nurse, wife, what ho? what Nurse I fay?

Enter Nurse.

Go waken Juliet, go and trim her vp,
Ile go and chat with Paré: he, make haft,
Make haft, the Bridegroome, he is come already
Make haft I fay.

Why Lambe, why Lady, fie you sluggaged,
Why Loue I fay? Madam, sweet heart: why Bride?
What not a word? You take your penworths now.
Sleepe for a weke, for the next night I warrant
The Countie Paré hath fet vp his reft,
That you shall reft but little, God forgive me:
Marrie and Amen: how found is she a sleepe?
The Tragedie of Romeo and Juliet.

I must needs wake her: Madam, Madam, Madam, I let the Countie take thee out of thy bed. Heele fright you vp yfaith. Will it not be? What dreft, and in your clothes, and downe againe? I must needs wake you: Lady, Lady, Lady? Ali, alas, helpe, helpe, my Ladies dead, Oh weladay, that euer I was borne, Some Aqua-vite ho, my Lord, my Lady?

Ms. What noife is here? Enter Mother.

Nur. O lamentable day.

Ms. What is the matter?

Nur. Look, looke, oh heauie day.

Ms. O me, O me, my Child; my onely life: Reuive, looke vp, or I will die with thee: Helpe, helpe, call helpe.

Enter Father.

Fa. For shame bring Juliet forth, her Lord is come.

Nur. Shee's dead: deceas'd, shee's dead: alacke the day.

M. Alacke the day, shee's dead, shee's dead, shee's dead.

Fa. Ha? Let me fee herout alsa shee's cold, Her blood is feted and her lyoents are fife: Life and thefe lips have long beene sep'rat ed:

Death lies on her like an vntimely froft

Vpon the sweete t flower of all the field.

Nur. O Lamentable day!

Ms. O wofull time.

Fa. Death that hath tane her hence to make me waile, Ties vp my tongue, and will not let me speake.

Enter Friar and the Countie.

Fri. Come, is the Bride ready to go to Church?

Fa. Ready to go, but neuer to returne. O Sonne, the night before thy wedding day, Hath death laine with thy wife: there shee lies, Flower as the was, deflowred by him. Death is my Sonne in law, death is my Heire, My Daughter he hath wedded. I will die, And leaue him all life living, all is deaths.

Fa. Haue I thought long to fee this mornings face, And doth it give me such a fight as this?

Ms. Accur'ft, vnhappie, wretched hatefull day, Most miserable houre, that ere time faw In lafting labour of his Pilgrimage. But one, poore one, one poore and louing Child, But one thing to rejoicke and solace in, And cruell death hath catcht it from my fight.

Nur. O wo, O wofull, wofull, wofull day, Most lamentable day, most wofull day, That euer, euer, I did yet behold. O day, O day, O hatefull day, Neuer was feene so blacke a day as this:

O wofull day, O wofull day.

Fat. Despise'd, distressed, hated, marti'd, kill'd, Uncomfortable time, why can't thou now To murther, murther our solemnitie?

O Child, O Child; my foule, and not my Child, Dead art thou, alacke my Child is dead, And with my Child, my joyes are buried.

Fri. Peace ho for shame, confusions: Care, liues not In these confusions, heauen and your selle, Had part in this faire Maud, now heauen hath all, And all the better is it for the Maid: Your part in her, you could not keepe from death, But heauen keeps his part in eternall life:
The moft you sought was her promotion, For twas your heauen, shee shouldn't be aduan't, And weepe ye now, seeing she is aduan't?

Aboue the Cloudes, as high as Heauen it selfe? O in this loue, you loue your Child so ill, That you run mad, seeing that she is well: Shee's not well married, that liues married long, But shee's best married, that dies married young.

Drie vp your teares, and sticke your Rosemarie On this faire Coarfe, and as the cufome is, And in her beef array beare her to Church: For though some Nature bids all vs lament, Yet Natures teares are Resons meritam.

Fa. All things that we ordained Feltiuall, Turne from their office to blacke Funerall: Our instrumens to melancholy Bells, Our wedding cheare, to a sad burall Feast: Our sollemne Hymnes, to fullen Dyrges change: Our Bri dall flowers ferue for a buried Coarfe: And all things change them to the contrarje.

Fri. Sir go you in; and Madam, go with him, And go sir Paris, every one prepare To follow this faire Coarfe vnto her graine: The heauens do loure vpon you, for some ill: Mowe them no more, by crolfing their high will.

Exit.

Mu. Faith we may put vp our Pipes and be gone.

Nur. Honest goodfellows: Ah vh vp, put vp, For well you know, this is a princely cafe.

Mu. I by my troth, the cafe may be amended.

Enter Peter.

Pet. Mufitions, oh Mufitions,

Hearts eafe, hearts eafe,

Q, and you will haue me liue, play hearts eafe.

Mu. Why hearts eafe;

Pet. O Mufitions,

Becaufe my heart it felle pales, my heart is full.

Mu. Not a dump we, 'tis no time to play now.

Pet. You will not then?

Mu. No.

Pet. I will then give it you foundly.

Mu. What will you giue vs?

Pet. No money on my faith, but the gleeke.

I will giue you the Miniftrell.

Mu. Then will I giue you the Seringue creature.

Peter. Then will I laie the seruing Creatures Dagar on your pate. I will carie no Crochets, Ile Re you, Ile Fa you, do you note me?

Mu. And you Re vs, and Fa vs, you Note vs.

2.M. Pray you put vp your Dagger, And put out your wit, Then haue at you with my wit.

Peter. I will drie-beate you with an yron wit, And put vp your yron Dagger.

Anfwer me like men:

When griping griefes the heart doth wound, then Mufckewith her filuer found.

Why filuer found? why Mufckee with her filuer found? what fay you Simon Cattin?

Mu. Mary fir, because filuer hath a sweet found.

Pet. Prateff, what fay you Hugh Reheke?

2.M. I say filuer found, because Mufcions found for fil-

Mu. What a pestilent kame is this same?

M. Hang him Jacke, come weele in here, tarrie for the Mourners, and stay dinner.

\[ Exit. \]

Rom. If I may truft the flattering truth of sleepe,
My dreams preface forme Joyfull news at hand:
My bofomes lift lightly in his throne:
And all thisan day an vccutom'd spirit,
Lifts me above the ground with cheerefull thoughts.
I dreamt my Lady came and found me dead,
(Strange dreame that glues a dead man leave to thinke,)
And breaeth'd such life with kiffe's in my lips,
That I reuie'd and was an Empourer.
Ah me, how sweet is lowe it selfe posset,
When but lowe shadows are so rich in joy.

\[ Enter Romeo's man. \]

Newes from Verona, how now Balbuzar?
Doft thou not bring me Letters from the Frier?
How doth my Lady? Is my Father well?
How doth my Lady Juliet? that I aske againe,
For nothing can be ill, if she be well.

Man. Then she is well, and nothing can be ill.
Her body sleepest in Capel's Monument,
And her immortal part with Angels live,
I faw her laid low in her kindreds Vaulet,
And prefently tooke Pofte to tell it you:
O pardon me for bringing thefe ill newes,
Since you did leave it for my office Sir.

Rom. Is it euen fo?
Then I denye you Starres.
Thou knowest my lodging, get me inke and paper,
And hire Pott-Horfe, I will hence to night.

Man. I do beseech you Sir, have patience:
Your looke's are pale and wild, and do import
Some misaduenture.

Rom. Thio, thou art deceu'd,
Leave me, and do the thing I bid thee do.
Haft thou no Letters to me from the Frier?

Man. No my good Lord.

\[ Exit Man. \]

Rom. Mo matter: Get thee gone,
And hyre those Horfe's, Ile be with thee straight.
Well Juliet, I will lie with thee to night:
Let's fee for meane: O milchfieoe thou art swift,
To enter in the thoughts of desperate men:
I do remember an Appothecarie,
And here abouts dwell, which late I noted
In tattred weeds, with overwelling browes,
Culling of Simples, meager were his looke's,
Sharpe miferie had wore him to thebones:
And in his needie chop a Tortoyrs hung,
An Allegrer fluft, and other skins
Of ill shap'd fishes, and abouts his selleus,
A beggerly account of empiute boxes,
Greene earthen pots, Bladders, and mufte feedes;
Remnants of packthred, and old cakes of Roses
Were thinly flattered, to make vp a shew.
Noting this penury, to my selfe I fayd,
An if a man did need a pooyfon now,
While fale is perfetl death in Mantua,
Here liues a Cauffie wretch would fell it him.
O this fame thought did but fore-run my need,
And this fame needie man must fell it me.

As I remember, this should be the houfe,
Being holy day, the beggers chop is shut.

\[ Enter Appothecarie. \]

App. Who call's so low'd?

Rom. Come hither man, I fee that thou art poore,
Hold, there is fortie Ducets, let me haue
A dram of pooyfon, fuch foone speeding geare,
As will diffperfe it felfe through all the veines,
That the life-wearie-taker may fall dead,
And that the Trunke may be difcharg'd of breath,
As violently, as haffle powder fier'd
Doth hurry from the fatall Canons wonbe.

App. Such mortall drugs I haue, but Mantuas law
Is death to any he, that vtters them.

Rom. Art thou fo bare and full of wretchedneffe,
And fear't to die? famine is in thy cheeckes,
Need and opreffion farueth in thy eyes,
Contempt and beggary hangs upon thy backe i
The world is not thy friend, nor the worlds law:
The world affords no law to make thee rich.
Then be not poore, but breake it, and take this.

App. My pouerty, but not my will confents.

Rom. I pray thy poorty, and not thy will.

App. Put this in any liquid thing you will
And drinke it off, and if you had the strenght
Of twenty men, it would dispatch you straight.

Rom. There's thy Gold,
Worfe pooyfon to mens foules,
Doing more murther in this loathsome world,
Then these poore compounds that thou maift not f ell.
I fell thee pooyfon, thou haft fold me none,
Farewell, buy food, and get thy felfe in fleth.
Come Cordiall, and not pooyfon, go with me
To Juliets graue, for there mutt I vfe thee.

\[ Exeunt. \]

Enter Frier John to Frier Lawrence.

John. Holy Francisfian Frier, Brother, ho?

Enter Frier Lawrence.

Law. This fame should be the voice of Frier John.
Welcome from Mantua, what faies Rome?
Or if his mind be wrtie, give me his Letter.

John. Going to find a bare-foote Brother out,
One of our order to affociate me,
Here in this Citie visiting the sick,
And finding him, the Searchers of the Towne
Suspeeting that we both were in a houfe
Where the infectious peffilence did raigne,
Seal'd vp the doores, and would not let vs forth,
So that my fped to Mantua there was fai'd

Law. Who bare my Letter then to Rome?

John. I could not fend it, here it is againe,
Nor get a meffenger to bring it thee,
So fearefull were they of infection.

Law. Vnhappie Fortune: by my Brotherhood
The Letter was not nice, but full of charge,
Of deare impor, and the negleeting it
May do much danger: Frier John go hence,
Get me an Iron Crow, and bring it straight
Vnto my Cell.

John. Brother Ile go and bring it thee.

Law. Now muft I to the Monument alone,
Within this three houres will faire Juliets wake,
Shee will beforth me much that Rome
Hath had no notice of these accidents:
But I will write againe to Mantua,

Par. Give me th' Torch Boy, hence and fland aloft,
Yet put it out, for I would not be seene:
Vnder yond young Trees lay thee all along,
Holding thy eare clofe to the hollow ground,
So shall no foot vpon the Churchyard tread,
Being loofe, vnfirm with digging vp of Graues,
But thou shalt heare it: whifie then to me,
As signall that thou hearst some thing approach,
Give me thofe flowers. Do as I bid thee, go.

Page. I am almoft afraid to fland alone
Here in the Churchyard, yet I will adventure.
Pa. Sweet Flower with flowers thy Bridall bed I strew:
O woe, thy Canopie is dufft and flones,
Which with sweet water nightly I will dewe,
Or wanting that, with teares defili'd by mones;
The obfequies that I for thee will keepe,
Nightly shall be, to strew thy graue, and weep.

Whifie Boy.
The Boy gives warning, something doth approach,
What curfed foot wanders this wayes to night,
To croffe my obsequies, and true lovers right?
What with a Torch? Muffle me night a while.

Enter Romeo, and Peter.

Rom. Give me that Mattocke, & the wounding Iron,
Hold take this Letter, early in the morning
See thou deliver it to my Lord and Father,
Give me the light; vpon thy life I charge thee,
What ere thou heare'rt or seeft, fland aloof,
And do not interrupt me in my courfe.
Why I defend into this bed of death,
Is partly to behold my Ladies face:
But chiefly to take thence from her dead finger,
A precious Pifer, and his inents I must vie,
In deare employment, therefore hence be gone:
But if thou leaues not returne to prie
In what I further shal intend to do,
By heauen I will thee thee Joynt by Joynt,
And strew this hungry Churchyard with thy limbs:
The time, and my intents are fauege widers:
More fierce and more inexorabe farre,
Then empite Tygers, or the roaring Sea.

Pet. I will be gone fir, and not troth e you
Ro. So shalt thou shew me friendhip: take thou that,
Live and be prosperous, and farewell good fellow.
Pet. For all this fame, Ile hide me here about,
His looks doth make me doubt.

Rom. Thou defeatable mawe, thou wombe of death,
Gorg'd with the deareft morflle of the earth:
Thus I enforce thy rotten Lawes to open,
And in despight, Ile cram thee with more food.

Par. This is that banifiht haughtie Mountague,
That murmurd my Loues Cozin; with which grieue,
It is suppoed the faire Creature died,
And here is come to do some villanous flame
To the dead bodies: I will apprehend him.
Stop th' unhawled toyle, vile Mountague:
Can vengeance be purfued further then death?
Condemned vallaine, I do apprehend thee.
Obey and go with me, for thou muft die,

---

Rom. I muft indeed, and therefore came I hither:
Good gentle youth, tempt not a desperat man,
Fie & hence and leave me, thinke vpon thofe gone,
Let them affright thee. I befeech thee Youth,
Put not an other fin vpon my head,
By vring me to furie. O be gone,
By heauen I loue thee better then my selfe,
For I come hither arm'd against my selfe:
Stay not, do be gone, I, and hereafter lay,
A mad mans mercy bid thee run away.

Par. I do defire th' commifleration,
And apprehend thee for a Fellow here.
Ro. Wilt thou prouoke me? Then haue at thee Boy.
Pet. O Lord they flight, I will go call the Watch.
Pa. O I am flaine, if thou be mercifull,
Open the Tomb, lay me with Juliet.

Rom. In faith I will, let me perufe this face:
Mercutius kinman, Noble Countie Paris,
What said my man, when my betoffed foule
Did not attend him as we rode? I thinke
He told me Paris should have married Juliet.
Said he not fo? Or did I dreame it fo?
Or am I mad, hearing him talke of Juliet,
To thinke it was fo? O give me thy hand,
One, writ with me in fowre misfortunes booke.
Ile burie thee in a triumphant graue,
A Graue, O no, a Lanthouse the Aung'htred Youth:
For here lies Juliet, and her beaute makes
This Vault a feafling preffence full of light.
Death lie thou there, by a dead man inter'd.
How oft when men are at the point of death,
Hau e they beene merrie? Which their Keepers call
A lightning before death? Oh how may I
Call this a lightning? O my Loue, my Wife,
Death that hath fuctk the honey of thy breath,
Hath no power yet vpon thy Beautie:
Thou are not conquer'd: Beauties enigne yet
Is Crymon in thy lips, and in thy cheakes,
And Deaths pale flaggs is not advanced there.
Tybalt, Jy't thou there in thy bloody sheet?
O what more fauour can I do to thee.
Then with that hand that cut thy youth in twaine,
To funder his that was thy enemy?
Forgive me Cozen. Ah deare Juliet:
Why art thou yet fo faire? I will beleeue,
Shall I beleeue, that vnsubstantiall death is amorous?
And that the leane abhorred Moniter keepes
Thee here in darke to be his Paramour?
For feare of that, I still will lay with thee,
And never from this Palace of dyne night.
Depart againe: come lie thou in my armes,
Here's to thy health, wher eere thou tumbleft in.
O true Appothecarie!

Thy drugs are quicke. Thus with a kiffe I die.
Depart againe: here, here will I remaine,
With Wormes that are thy Chambermaids: O here
Will I fet vp my eyeerlafting reft:
And shake the yoke of inaupicious flares
From this world-wearied flesh: Eyes looke your laft:
Armes take your laft embrace: And lips, O you
The doores of breath, feale with a righteous kiffe
A dateleffe bargain to ingrossing death:
Come bitter conduit, come vnfaourey guide,
Thou desperat Pilot: now at once run on
The daunting Rocks, thy Sea-fickie ware Barks:
Here's to my Loue. O true Appothecary:

---
The Tragedie of Romeo and Iuliet.

Thy drags are quicke. Thus with a kiffe I die.

Enter Friar with Lamborne, Crow, and Spade.

Fri. St. Francis be my speed, how oft to night
Haue my old feet flumbred at graues? Who's there?

Man. Here's one, a Friend, & one that knowes you well.

Fri. Bliffe be vpon you. Tell me good my Friend
What Torch is yond that vainely lends his light
To grubs, and eyelesse Sculles? As I dicerne,
It burneth in the Capel Monument.

Man. It doth so holy firr,
And there's my Master, one that you love.

Fri. Who 0 is it?

Man. Romeo.

Fri. How long hath he bin there?

Man. Full halfe an hour.

Fri. Go with me to the Vault.

Man. I dare not Sir.

My Master knowes but I am gone hence,
And fearfully did menace me with death,
If I did stay to looke on his entents.

Fri. Stay, then Ile go alone, feares comes vpon me.

O much I feare some ill vnlucklie thing.

Man. As I did sleepe vnder this young tree here,
I dreamt my Master and another fought,
And that my Maifer flew him.

Fri. Romeo.

Alacke,alacke, what blood is this which flaines
The flony entrance of this Sepulcher?

What meane these Masterlesse, and garrie Swords
To Ie diccolour'd by this place of peace?

Romeo, oh pale: who else? what Paris too?

And sleepe in blood? Ah what an vn kind houre
Is guiltie of this lamentable chance?

The Lady flirs.

Iul. O comfortable Friar, where's my Lord?
I do remember well where I should be;
And there I am, where is my Romeo?

Fri. I heare some noyse Lady, come from that neft
Of death, contagion, and vnnaturall sleepe,
A greater power then we can contradic;

Hath thwarted our entents, come, come away,
Thy husband in thy bofome there lies dead:
And Paris too:come Ile dipowe of thee,
Among a Sifterhood of holy Nunnes:
Stay not to quetion, for the watch is comming.
Come, go good Iuliet, I dare no longer stay.

Exit. Iul. Go get thee hence, for I will not away,
What's here? A cup clos'd in my true lo: es hand?
Poyfon I see hath bin his timeleffe end
O churle, drinke all! and left no friendly drop,
To helpe me after, I will kiffe thy lips,
Happie some poyfon yet doth hang on them,
To make me die with a refortative.

Thy lips are warme.

Enter Boy and Watch.

Atch. Lead Boy, which way?

Iul. Yea noife?

Then Ile be briefe. O happy Dagger.
'Tis in thy sheath, there rulf and let me die Kils berfelfe.

Boy. This is the place,
There where the Torch doth burne
Watch. The ground is bloody,
Search about the Churchyard.

Go some of you, who ere you find attach.
Pittifull fight, here lies the Countie flaine,
And Iuliet bleeding, warme and newly dead

Who here hath laine these two days buried.
Go tell the Prince, runne to the Capulets,
Raffe vp the Mountagues, some others search,
We fee the ground whereon these woes do lye,
But the true ground of all these piteous woes,
We cannot without circumstance defcry.

Enter Romeo's man.

Watch. Here's Romeo's man,
We found him in the Churchyard.

Con. Hold him in safety, till the Prince come hither.

Enter Friar, and another Watchman.

2 Wat. Here is a Friar that trembles, fighes, and weepes
We tooke this Mattocke and this Spade from him,
As he was comming from this Church-yard fide.

Con. A great fupfition, flay the Friar too.

Enter the Prince.

Prin. What misadventur is so early vp,
That calls our perfon from our mornings ref?

Enter Capulet and his Wife.

Cap. What should it be that they so shrike abroad?

Wife. O the people in the streete cite Romeo,
Some Iuliet, and some Paris, and all runne
With open mouth to ouercry toward monument.

Pri. What fearie is this which fiartles in your eares?

Wat. Soueraigne, here lies the Countie Paris flaine,
And Romeo dead, and Iuliet dead before,

Warme and new kil'd.

Prin. Search,
Seeke, and know how, this foule murder comes.

Wat. Here is a Friar, and Slaughter'd Romeo man,
With Instrumts vpon them fit to open
These dead mens Tomes.

Cap. O heauen!
O wife looke how our Daughter bleedes!
This Dagger hath mistaine, for loe his houfe
Is empty on the backe of Mountague,
And is mifheared in my Daughters bofome.

Wife. O me, this fight of death, is as a Bell
That warnes my old age to a Sepulcher.

Enter Mountague.

Pri. Come Mountague, for thou art early vp
To fee thy Sonne and Heire, now early downe.

Moun. Als my liege, my wife is dead to night,
Griefe of my Sonnes exile hath flopt her breath:
What further woe conspires againft my age?

Prin. Lookes and thou shalt fee.

Moun. O thou vnaught, what manners in is this,
To preffe before thy Father to a graue?

Prin. Seale vp the mouth of outre ge for a while,
Till we can cleare these ambiguities,
And know their spring, their head, their true descant,
And then will I be generall of your woes,
And lead you euen to deathmeane time forbeare,
And let mischance be flaeue to patience,
Bring forth the parties of fupfition.

Fri. I am the greatef,able to doe leaff,
Yet most suspeeted as the time and place
DOTH make against me of this direfull muther:
And heere I fland both to impeach and purge
My fefe condemned, and my fefe excus'd.

Prin. Then lay at once, what thou doit know in this?

Fri. I will be briefe, for my short date of breath
Is not fo long as is a tedious tale
Romeo there dead, was husband to that Iuliet,
And she there dead, that's Romeo faithfull wife:
The Tragedie of Romeo and Julliet.

I married them, and their solemn marriage day
Was Tybalt's Doomesday: whose untimely death
Banish'd the new-made Bridegroome from this Citie:
For whom (and not for Tybalt) Julliet pine.
You, to remove that siege of Greeke from her,
Betroth'd, and would have married her perforce
To Countie Paris. Then comes she to me,
And (with wilde looks) bid me deuife some meanes
To rid her from this second Marriage,
Or in my Cell there would she kill her selfe.
Then gane I her (to Tutor'd by my Art)
A sleeping Potion, which fo tooke effect
As I intended, for it wrought on her
The forme of death. Meane time, I writ to Romeo,
That he should hither come, as this dyre night,
To helpe to take her from her borrowed grave,
Being the time the Potions force should cease.
But he which bore my Letter, Frier John,
Was stay'd by accident; and yesternight
Return'd my Letter backe. Then all alone,
At the prefixed houre of her wakings,
Came I to take her from her Kindreds vault,
Meaning to keepe her cloesly at my Cell,
Till I conueniently could send to Romeo.
But when I came (from Minute ere the time
Of her awaking) heere untimely lay
The Noble Paris, and true Romeo dead.
Shue wakes, and I intreated her come forth,
And beare this worke of Heauen, with patience:
But then, a noyse did carre me from the Tombe,
And she (too desperat) would not go with me,
But (as it feemes) did violence on her selfe.
All this I know, and to the Marriage her Nurse is priye:
And if ought in this mischafere by my fault,
Let my old life be sacrific'd, some houre before the time,
Vnto the rigour of feuerest Law.

Prin. We still haue knowne thee for a Holy man.
Where's Romeo's man? What can he say to this?
Boy. I brought my Master newes of Julliet death,
And then in poste he came from Mantua.
To this same place, to this same Monument.
This Letter he early bid me gie his Father,
And threatened me with death, going in the Vault,
If I departed not, and left him there.

Prin. Give me the Letter, I will look on it.
Where is the Counties Page that rais'd the Watch?
Sirra, what made your Master in this place?
Page. He came with flowres to strew his Ladies grave,
And bid me stand aloofe, and so I did:
Anon comes one with light to ope the Tombe,
And by and by my Master drew on him,
And then I ran away to call the Watch.

Prin. This Letter doth make good the Friers words,
Their course of Loues, the tydings of her death:
And heere he writes, that he did buy a potson
Of a poore Pothecarie, and therewithall
Came to this Vault to dye, and lye with Julliet.
Where be these Enemies? Capulet, Montague,
See what a scource is laide upon your hate,
That Heauen finds meane to kill you ioynes with Loue;
And I, for winking at your difcordes too,
Haue loft a brace of Knifemen: All are punisht'd.

Cap. O Brother Montague, give me thy hand,
This is my Daughters loynure, for no more
Can I demand.

Mawn. But I can gie thee more:
For I will raise her Statue in pure Gold,
That whilsts Verona by that name is knowne,
There shall no figure at that Rate be set,
As that of True and Faithfull Julliet.

Cap. As rich shall Romeo by his Lady ly,
Poore sacrificers of our enmity.

Prin. A glooming peace this morning with it brings,
The Sunne for sorrow will not shew his head;
Go hence, to haue more talke of these sad things,
Some shall be pardon'd, and some punish'd.
For neuer was a Storie of more Wo,
Then this of Julliet, and her Romeo.

FINIS.

Enter Poet, Painter, Jeweller, Merchant, and Mercer, at several doors.

Poet.

Ood day Sir.

Pain. I am glad y'are well.

Poet. I have not seen you long, how goes the World?

Pain. It weares fir, as it growes.

Poet. I that's well knowne:

But what particular Rarite? What strange

Which manifold record not matches: fee

Magicke of Bounty, all these spirits thy power

Hath conjur'd to attend.

I know the Merchant.

Pain. I know them both: th'others a Jeweller.

Mrs. O 'tis a worthy Lord.

Mrs. Nay that's most fixt.

Mr. A most incomparable man, breath'd as it were,

To an vyntreable and continuance goodnesse:

He paffes.

Mrs. I have a Jewell heere.

Mrs. O pray let's fee't. For the Lord Timon; fit?

Jewel. If he will touch the effimate. But for that——

Poet. When we for recompence haue prais'd the vild,

It staines the glory in that happy Verfe,

Which aptly rings the good.

Mrs. 'Tis a good forme.

Jewel. And rich: heere is a Water looke ye.

Pain. You are rapt fir, in some worke, some Dedication to the great Lord.

Poet. A thing flit idly from me.

Our Poesie is as a Gowne, which vfa

From whence 'tis nourish'd: the fire i'th Flint

Shewes not, till it be strooke: our gentle flame

Prouokes it selfe, and like the currant fyres

Each bound it chafes. What haue you there?

Pain. A Picture fir: when comes your Bookie forth?

Poet. Vpon the heeles of my presentment fir.

Let's fee your peece.

Pain. 'Tis a good Peece.

Poet. So 'tis, this comes off well, and excellent.

Pain. Indifferent.

Poet. Admirable: how this grace

Speakes his owne standing: what a mentall power

This eye shootes forth? How bigge imagination

Mouses in this Lip, to th'dumbnesse of the gefature,

One might interpret.

Pain. It is a pretty mocking of the life:

Heere is a touch: let it good?

Poet. I will say of it,

It Tutors Nature, Artificial stiffe

Lies in these touches, liuerier then life,

Enter certaine Senators.

Pain. How this Lord is followed.

Poet. The Senators of Athens, happy men.

Pain. Looke mee.

Poe. You fee this confudence, this great flood of visitors,

I have in this rough worke, shap'd out a man

Whom this beneath world doth embrace and hugge

With amplest entertainment: My free drift

Hails not particularly, but mouses it selfe

In a wide Sea of wax, no leuell'd malice

Infests one comma in the course I hold,

But flies an Eagle flight, bold, and forth on,

Leaving no Trace behind.

Pain. How shall I understand you?

Poet. I will vnbout to you.

You fee how all Conditions, how all Minds,

As well of glib and slipp'ry Creatures, as

Of Graue and autere qualitie, tender downe

Their services to Lord Timon: his large Fortune,

Vpon his good and gracious Nature hanging,

Subdues and properties to his loue and tendance

All sorts of hearties yea, from the glasse-fac'd Flatterer

To Apemantus, that few things loues better

Then to abhorre himselfe; eu'n shee drops downe

The knee before him, and returns in peace

Most rich in Timons nod.

Pain. I saw them speake together.

Poet. Sir, I have vpon a high and pleasant hill

Feign'd Fortune to be thron'd.

The Bafe o'th Mount

Is rank'd with all deserts, all kinde of Natures

That labour on the bosome of this Sphere,

To propagate their states; among't them all,

Whose eyes are on this Soueraigne Lady fixt,

One do I perfonate of Lord Timons frame,

Whom Fortune with her ivory hand wafts to her,

Whose prouent grace, to prouent flaues and servants

Translate his Riualls.

Pain. 'Tis concey'd, to scope

This Throne, this Fortune, and this Hill me thinkes

With
With one man becken'd from the rest below,
Bowing his head against the steepy Mount
To climbe his happiness, would be well exprest
In our Condition.

Pest. Nay Sir, but heare me on:
All those which were his Felllowes but of late,
Some better then his valew; on the moment
Follow his frides, his Lobbies fill with tendance,
Raine Sacrificall whisperings in his care,
Make Sacred euen his flYROp, and through him
Drink the free Ayre.

Pain. I marry, what of these?

Pest. When Fortune in her shift and change of mood
Spurnes downe her late beloued; all his Dependants
Which labourd after him to the Mountaines to,
Euen on their knees and hand, let him fit downe,
Not one accompanying his declining foot.

Pain. Tis common:
A thousand morall Paintings I can fhw,
That shall demonstrate these quickie blowes of Fortunes,
More pregnantly then words. Yet you do well,
To fhw Lord Timon, that meane eyes have feene
The foot above the head.

Trumpets sound.
Enter Lord Timon, addressing himselfe curteously to every Sitter.

Tim. Imprison'd is he, say you?

Mef. I my good Lord, five Talents is his debt,
His meane moft short, his Creditors moft straites;
Your Honourable Letter he defires
To Those haue fhat him vp, which failing,
Periods his comfort.

Tim. Noble Ventidius well:
I am not of that Feather, to flake off
My Friend when he muft neede me, I do know him
A Gentleman, that well deferves a helpe,
Whether he haue. I lef the debt, and free him.
Mef. Your Lordship enourgez him.

Tim. Commend me to him, I will fend his ransome,
And being enfranchized bid him come to me;
'Tis not enoue to helpe the Feeble vp,
But to support him after. Fare you well.

Mef. All happiness to your Honor. Exit.

Enter an old Athenian.

Oldm. Lord Timon, hearre me speake.

Tim. Freely good Father.

Oldm. Thou haft a Seruant nam'd Lucilius.

Tim. I haue fo: What of him?

Oldm. Moft Noble Timon, call the man before thee.

Tim. Attend he here, or no? Lucilius.

Luc. Heere at your Lordships servisue.

Oldm. This Fellow heere, L. Timon, this thy Creature,
By night frequents my house. I am a man
That from my firth have beene inclin'd to thrift,
And my eftate deferves an Heyre more rai'd;
Then one which holds a Trencher.

Tim. Well: what further?

Old. One only Daughter have I, no Kin elfe,
On whom I may confere what I have got:
The Maid is faire, a'th'youngest for a Bride,
And I haue bred her at my decrret coit
In Qualities of the beft. This man of thine
Attempts her loue: I prythee (Noble Lord)

Joyne with me to forbid him her refort,
My felfe haue spoke in vaine.

Tim. The man is honeft.

Oldm. Therefore he will be Timon,
His honeftly rewards him in it felfe,
It muft not beare my Daughter.

Tim. Does she loue him?

Oldm. She is yong and apt:
Our owne precedent passions do instruct vs
What leuities in youth.

Tim. Loue you the Maid?

Luc. I my good Lord, and the accepts of it.

Oldm. If in her Marriage my confeint be missing,
I call the Gods to witnesse, I will choose
Mine heyre from forth the Beggers of the world,
And disposeffe her all.

Tim. How shall she be endowed,
If she be mated with an equal Husband?

Oldm. Three Talents on the present; in future, all.

Tim. This Gentleman of mine
Hath feru'd me long:
To build his Fortune, I will ftraine a little,
For 'tis a Bond in men. Glue him thy Daughter,
What you bellow, in him I lef counterpoize,
And make him weigh with her.

Oldm. Moft Noble Lord,
Pawme me to this your Honour, she is his.

Tim. My hand to thee,
Mine Honour on my promise.

Luc. Humbly I thank ye your Lordship, neuer may
That flate or Fortune fall into my keeping,
Which is not owed to you.

Pest. Vouchsafe my Labour,
And long lieve your Lordship.

Tim. I thank you, you shall hearre from me anon:
Go not away. What haue you there, my Friend?

Pain. A peec of Painting, which I do beenech
Your Lordship to accept.

Tim. Painting is welcome.

The Painting is almost the Natural man:
For fince Difhonour Traffickes with mens Nature,
He is but out-side: Thofe Penf'lid Figures are
Euen fuch as they glue out; I like your worke,
And you fhall finde I like it; Waite attendance
Till you hearre further from me.

Tim. Well fare you Gentleman: give me your hand,
We muft needs dine together; fir your Jewell
Hath suffered vnder praise.

Iewel. What my Lord, dispraise?

Tim. A meere faclaty of Commendations,
If I shoulde pay you for't as 'tis extoldt,
It would vnclaw me quite.

Iewel. My Lord, 'tis rated
As thofe which fell would give: but you well know,
Things of like valew differing in the Owners,
Are prized by their Masters. Beleu'the deere Lord,
You mend the Jewell by the wearing it.

Tim. Well mock'd.
Enter Apermannus.

Mer. No my good Lord, he speakes 'common toong
Which all men speake with him.

Tim. Looke who comes heere, will you be chid?

Iewel. We'll beare with your Lordship.

Mer. Hee'l spare none.

Tim. Good morrow to thee,

Gentle Apermannus.
Timon of Athens.

Ape. Till I be gentle, stay thou for thy good morrow. When thou art Timon dogge, and these Knaues honest.
Tim. Why dost thou call them Knaues, thou know'st them not?
Ape. Are they not Athenians?
Tim. Yes.
Ape. Then I repent not.
Tim. Thou know'st I do, I call's thee by thy name.
Ape. Thou art proud Apemantis?
Tim. Of nothing so much, as that I am not like Timon.
Ape. Whether art going?
Tim. To knocke out an honest Athenian braines.
Ape. That's a deed thou'rt dye for.
Ape. Right, if doing nothing be death by th'Law.
Tim. How lik'st thou this picture Apemantis?
Ape. The best, for the innocencie.
Tim. Wrought he not well that painted it.
Ape. He wrought better that made the Painter, and yet he's but a filthy peece of worke.
Pain. Y'are a Dogge.
Ape. Thy Mothers of my generation: what's she, if I be a Dogge?
Tim. Wilt dine with me Apemantis?
Ape. No: I eate not Lords.
Tim. And thou shouldest, thou'st anger Ladies.
Ape. O they eate Lords;
So they come by great bellies.
Tim. That's a lafcluous apprehension.
Ape. So, thou apprehend'st it.
Take it for thy labour.
Tim. How doth thou like this Jewell, Apemantis?
Ape. Not so well as plain-dealing, which will not catt
a man a Doit.
Tim. What do'st thou thinke 'tis worth?
Ape. Not worth my thinking.

How now Poet?
Poet. How now Philosopher?
Ape. Thou lyest.
Poet. Art not one?
Ape. Yes.
Poet. Then I lye not.
Ape. Art not a Poet?
Poet. Yes.
Ape. Then thou lyest:
Looke in thy laft worke, where thou haft fegin'd him a worthy Fellow.
Poet. That's not feign'd, he is so.
Ape. Yes he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee for thy labour. He that loves to be flattered, is worthy o' th'flatterer.
Heauen's, that I were a Lord.
Tim. What wouldst do then Apemantis?
Ape. E'ne as Apemantis does now, hate a Lord with my heart.
Tim. What thy selfe?
Ape. I.
Tim. Wherefore?
Ape. That I had no angry wit to be a Lord.
Art not thou a Merchant?
Mer. 1 Apemantis.
Ape. Traffick confound thee, if the Gods will not.
Mer. If Traffick do it, the Gods do it.
Ape. Traffickers thy God, & thy God confound thee.
Trumpet sounds. Enter a Messenger.
Tim. What Trumpets that?
Mes. 'Tis Alcibiades, and some twenty Horse.

All of Companion ship.
Tim. Pray entertaine them, gue them guide to vs.
You must needs dine with me; go not you hence
Till I haue thankt you: when dinners done
Shew me this piece, I am joyfull of your fights.
Enter Alcibiades with the rest.
Most welcome Sir.
Ape. So, fo; their Aches contraet, and fterue your fupple ioynts: that there should bee small loue amongeth these sweet Knaues, and all this Curtefe. The ftraine of mams bred out into Baboon and Monkey.
Ape. Sir, you have faud my longing, and I feed
Most hungerly on your fight.
Tim. Right welcome Sir:
Ere we depart, we'll share a bounteous time
In different pleasures.
Pray you let vs in.

Enter two Lords.
1.Lord What time a day is't Apemantis?
Ape. Time to be honest.
1 That time serues fell.
Ape. The moft accursed thou that flill omit it.
2 Thou art going to Lord Timon Feat.
Ape. I, to fee meate fill Knaues, and Wine heat fools.
2 Farthee well, farthee well.
Ape. Thou art a Foole to bid me farewell twice.
2 Why Apemantis?
Ape. Should't have kept one to thy selfe, for I meane to gue thee none.
1 Hang thy selfe.
Ape. No I will do nothing at thy bidding:
Make thy requesets to thy Friend.
2 Away vnpeaceable Dogge,
Or Ile spurne thee hence.
Ape. I will flye like a dogge, the heele a th'Affe.
1 Hee's oppofite to humanity.
Comes shall we in,
And tale Lord Timon bounte: he out-goes
The vertue heart of kindneffe.
2 He powres it out: Etius the God of Gold
Is but his Steward: no meede but he repays
Sewn-fold aboue it felpe: No guift to him,
But breeds the gier a returne: exceeding
All vfe of quittance.
1 The Nobleft minde he carries,
That ever govern'd man.
2 Long may he lieue in Fortunes. Shall we in?
Ile keepe you Company.

Exeunt.

Hoboyes playing loud Musick.

A great Banquet faw'd in: and then, Enter Lord Timon, the States, the Athenian Lords, Ventigius which Timon re-deed from prifon. Then comes dropping after all Apem-antus discontentedly like himself.

Ventigius. Moft honoured Timon,
It hath pleas'd the Gods to remember my Fathers age,
And call him to long peace:
He is gone happy, and has left me rich:
Then, as in gratefull Vertue I am bound
To your free heart, I do returne those Talents
Doubled with thankes and feruice, from whose helpe
I deris'd libertie.
Tim. O by no meanes,
Honeft Ventigius: You mistake my loue,
I gave
Alcibiades, your hearts in the field now.

Alc. My heart is euer at your seruice, my Lord,
Tim. You had rather be at a breakfaste of Enemies, then a dinner of Friends.

Alc. So they were bleeding new my Lord, there's no meat like 'em, I could wish my best friend at such a Feast.

Aper. Would all those Flatterers were thine Enemies then, that then thou might'lt kill 'em: & bid me to 'em.

1. Lord. Might we but have that happinesse my Lord, that you would once vse our hearts, whereby we might expresse some part of our zeal, we should think our felues for euer perfect.

Timon. Oh no doubt to my good Friends, but the Gods themselfes have prouided that I shall haue much helpe from you: how had you beene my Friends els. Why haue you that charitable title from thousands? Did not you chiefly belong to my heart? I haue told more of you to my selfe, then you can with modestie speake in your owne behalfe. And thus farre I confirme you. Oh you Gods(thinke I,)what need we haue any Friends; if we should here haue need of 'em? They were the moft needlesse Creatures living; should we here vse for 'em? And would moft refellible wweete Instrumets hung vp in Cafes,that keeps there founds to themselfes. Why I haue often with my selfe poorer, that I might come neerer to you: we are borne to do benef- fits. And what better or properer can we call our owne, then the riches of our Friends? Oh what a pretious comfor'tis, to have so many like Brothers commanding one anotheres Fortunes. Oh loyes, e'ne made away er't can be borne: mine eies cannot hold out waterme thinks, to forget their Faults. I drink to you.

Aper. Thou weep'lt to make them drinke, Timon.

2. Lord. Joy had the like concepotion in our eies,
And at that instant, like a babe sprung vp.

Aper. Ho, ho; I laugh to thinke that babe a baftard.

3. Lord. I promife you my Lord you mow'd me much.

Aper. Much.

Sound Tucket. Enter the Maskers of Amazoners with Lutes in their bands, dauncing and playing.

Tim. What means that Trumpe? How now?

Enter Servant.

Ser. Please you my Lord, there are certaine Ladies most defirous of admittance.

Tim. Ladies? what are their wis?

Ser. There comes with them a fore-runner my Lord, which beares that office, to signifie their pleasures.

Tim. I pray let them be admitted.

Enter Cupid with the Mask of Ladies.

Cap. Hailie to thee worthy Timon and to all that of his Bountyes taffe: the five beft Seneceas knowle the their Patron, and come freely to gratulate thy plentious bosome.
There taft, touch all, pleas'd from thy Table rife :
They onely now come but to Feast thine eies.

Tim. They're welcome all, let 'em haue kind admittance,Musick make their welcome.

Lac. You see my Lord, how ample y'are belou'd.

Aper. Hoyday!

What a sweepe of vanitie comes this way.

They daunce? They are madwomen.

883
Like Madness is the glory of this life,
As this pompe flowers to a little slyle and roote.
We make our felues Fools, to disport our felues,
And spend our Flatteries, to drinke those men,
Vpon whose Age we voyde it vp agen
With poysonous Spight and Emuy.
Who liues, that's not depraved, or depraues;
Who dyes, that beares not one spurne to their graues
Of their Friends guift:
I shoulde fear, thofe that dance before me now,
Would one day flampe vpon me: 'Tis bene done,
Men shunt their doores against a setting Sunne.

Enter a third Servant.
How now? What news?
3.Ser. Pleafe you my Lord, that honourable Gentleman Lord Lucullus, entreats your company to morrow, to hunt with him, and ha’s fent your Honour two brace of Grey-hounds.
Tim. Ile hunt with him,
And let them be receiu’d, not without faire Reward.
Fla. What will this come to?
He commands vs to prouide, and giue great giufts,
and all out of an empty Coffier:
Nor will he know his Purse, or yeeld me this,
To shew him what a Begger his heart is,
Being of no power to make his wishes good.
His promises fyfe fo beyond his flate,
That what he speakes is all in debt, he owes for eu'ry word:
He is fo kinde,that he now payes intert for't;
His Land’s put to their Bookes. Well, would I were Gently put out of Office, before I were forc’d out:
Happier is he that has no friend to feede,
Then luch that do e'ne Enemies exceede.
I bleed inwardly for my Lord.
Exit
Tim. You do your felues much wrong,
You bate too much of your owne merits.
Heere my Lord,a triffe of our Love.
2.Lord. With more the common thankes
I will receyue it.
3.Lord. O he's the very foule of Bounty.
Tim. And now I remember my Lord,you gaue good words the other day of a Bay Courier I rod on. Tis yours because you lik'd it.
1.L. Oh, I beeche you pardon mee, my Lord, in that.
Tim. You may take my word my Lord: I know no man can juftly praiue, but what he does affect. I weighe my Friends affection with mine owne: Ile tell you true,
Ile call to you.
All Lor. O none so welcome.
Tim. I take all, and your feuerall vifitations
So kinde to heart, I'me not enough to giue:
Me thinkes, I could deale King's coms to my Friends,
And nere be wareie. Alehbiades,
Thou art a Soldiour, therefore fildome rich,
It comes in Charitie to thee: for all thy liuing
Is mong't the dead : and all the Lands thou haft
Lye in a pitchet field.
Alc. I, desil'd Land, my Lord.
1.Lord. We are fo vertuously bound.
Tim. And so am I to you.
2.Lord. So infinitely endeer'd.
Tim. All to you. Lights, more Lights.
1.Lord. The beft of Happiness, Honor, and Fortunes
Keepe with you Lord Timon.
Tim. Ready for his Friends.
Exeunt Lords
Aper. What a coiles beere, fcruing of beckes, and lutting tout of bummies. I doubt whether their Legges be worth the summes that are giuen for 'em.
Friendships full of dregges,
Me thinkes falshe hearts, shoud neuer have found legges.
Thus honest Fools lay out their wealth on Curtfies.
Tim. Now Apermanius (if thou wert not fullen)
I would be good to thee.
Aper. No, Ile nothing; for if I should be brib'd too, there would be none left to raile vponthee, and then thou would finne the faster. Thou gui'st fo long Timon (I feare me) thou wilt give away thy felfe in paper shortly.
What needs thef Feasts, pompses, and Vaine-glories?

Tim.
Timon of Athens.

Tim. Nay, and you begin to raile on Societie once, I am sworne not to give regard to you. Farewell, & come with better Muffieke.

Aper. So: Thou wilt not heare mee now, thou shalt not then. Ile locke thy heauen from thee:
Oh that mens eares should be
To Counsell deafe, but not to Flatterie.

Enter a Senator.

Sen. And late fine thousand: to Varro and to Isidore
He owes nine thousand, besides my former summe,
Which makes it fine and twenty. Still in motion
Of raging watesr: It cannot hold, it will not.

If I want Gold, flexe but a beggers Dogge,
And give it Timon, why the Dogge coines Gold.
If I would sell my Horfe, and buy twenty moe
Better then he; why give my Horfe to Timon.

Ask nothing, give it him, it Foles me straight
And able Horfes: No Porter at his gate,
But rather one that smiles, and still inutes
All that paffe by. It cannot hold, no reafon
Can found his flute in safety. Capitus hoa,
Capillus 1 lay.

Enter Capitus.

Ca. Heere sir, what is your pleafure.
Sen. Get on your cloake, & haft you to Lord Timon,
Importune him for my Moneyes, be not craft
With flight denial; nor then fling'd, when Commend me to your Mafter, and the Cap
Plays in the right hand, thus: but tell him,
My Vfes cry to me; I muft serue my turne
Out of mine owne, his days and times are past,
And my relieves on his fракted dates
Haue fmit my credit. I love, and honour him,
But muft not breake my backe, to heale his finger.
Immediate are my needs, and my relieves
Muft not be toit and turn'd to me in words,
But finde fupply immediate. Get you gone,
Put on a moft importunate aspe,cl
A village demand: for I do care
When ever Feather fickes in his owne wing,
Lord Timon will be left a naked gull;
Which flates now a Phaenix, get you gone.

Ca. I go fir.
Sen. I go fir?
Take the Bonds along with you,
And haue the dates in. Come.

Ca. I will Sir.
Sen. Go.

Enter Steward, with many bills in his hand.

Stew. No care, no flop, fo fenfeleffe of expence,
That he will neither know how to maintaine it,
Nor ceafe his flow of Riot. Takes no accompt
How things go from him, nor refume no care
Of what is to continue: neuer minde,
Was to be fo vnwife, to be fo kinde.
What fhall be done, he will not heare, till felle:
I muft be round with him, now he comes from hunting.
Fye, fie, fie, fie.

Enter Capitus, Isidore, and Varro.

Cap. Would we were all difcharg'd.
Var. I fare it.
Cap. Heere comes the Lord.

Enter Timon, and his Train.

Tim. So soone as dinners done, we'll forth againe
My Alcibiades. With me, what is your will?

Cap. My Lord, heere is a note of certaine dues.
Tim. Dues? whence are you?

Cap. Of Athens heere, my Lord.
Tim. Go to my Steward.

Cap. Pleafe it your Lordship, he hath put me off
To the Succifion of newe dayes this moneth:
My Maftor is awak'd by great Occafion,
To call vpon his owne, and humbly prayes you,
That with your other Noble parts, you'll fuite,
In giving him his right.

Tim. Mine honest Friend,
I prythee but repare to me next morning.

Cap. Nay, good my Lord.
Tim. Containe thy felfe, good Friend.

Var. One Varroes feruant, my good Lord.

Ifid. From Isidore, he humbly prayes your speedy payment.

Cap. If you did know my Lord, my Masters wants.

Var. 'Twas due on forftyre my Lord, fixe weeke,
and paft.

If. Your Steward puts me off my Lord, and I
Am sent expressly to your Lordship.

Tim. Glie me breath:
I do befeech you good my Lords keepe on,
Ile waite vpon you infantly. Come hither: pray you
How goes the world, that I am thus encountered
With clamorous demands of debt, broken Bonds,
And the detention of long fince due debts
Againft my Honor?

Stew. Pleafe you Gentlemen,
The time is vnagreeable to this bufinesse:
Your importunacie cesse, till after dinner,
That I may make his Lordship vnderland
Wherefore you are not paid.

Tim. Do fo my Friends, see them well entertain'd.

Stew. Pray draw neere.

Enter Apemantix and Foole.

Capb. Stay, stay, here comes the Foole with Apem-tius, let's ha some sport with 'em.

Var. Hang him, he'll abufe vs.

Ifid. A plague vpon him dogge.

Var. How doft Foole?

Ape. Doft Dialogue with thy shadow?

Var. I speake not to thee.

Ape. No 'tis to thy felle. Come away.

If. There's the Foole hangs on your bacce already.

Ape. No thou stand't fingle, th'art not on him yet.

Cap. Where's the Foole now?

Ape. He laft ask'd the queftion. Poore Rogues, and Vfurers men, Bauds betweene Gold and want.

Al. What are we Apemantius?

Ape. Aeffs.

All. Why?

Ape. That you ask me what you are, & do not know your felues. Speake to 'em Foole.

Foole. How do you Gentlemen?

Al. Gramercies good Foole:

How does your Misfirs?
Timon of Athens.

Fool. She's e'ne setting on water to seall'd such Chickens as you are. Would we could see you at Corinth.

Ape. Good, Gramercy.

Enter Page.

Fool. Looke you, here comes my Masters Page.

Doost thou Apermanus?

Ape. Would I had a Rod in my mouth, that I might anwer thee profitably.

Boy. Prythee Apermanus read me the supercripti

Page. No.

Ape. There will little Learning dye then that day thou art hang'd. This is to Lord Timon, this to Alciadios. Go thou was't borne a Baitard, and thou's dye a Bawd.

Page. Thou was't whelp a Dogge, and thou shalt famish a Dogges death.

Answer not, I am gone. Exit

Fool. E'ne so thou out-runft Grace,

Fool. I will go with you to Lord Timon.

Fool. Will you leave me there?

Ape. If Timon stay at home.

You three serue three Vfurers?

All. I would they seru'd vs.

Fool. So would I:

As good a tricke as euer Hangman seru'd Theefe.

Fool. Are you three Vfurers men?

All. I Foole.

Fool. I think no Vfurer, but ha's a Foole to his Seruant. My Miftris is one, and I am a Foole: when men come to borrow of your Masters, they approach falsy, and go away merry; but they enter my Masters houfe merrily, and go away falsy. The reason of this?

Var. I could render one.

Ape. Do it then, that we may account thee a Whoremaster, and a Knaue, which notwithstanding thou shalt be no leffe esteemed.

Varro. What is a Whoremaster Foole?

Fool. A Foole in good cloathes, and something like thee. 'Tis a spirit, sometime t'appeares like a Lord, sometime like a Lawyer, sometime like a Philosopher, with two fones moe then's artificall one. Hee is verie often like a Knight; and generally, in all shapes that man goes vp and downe in, from fourescore to thirteen, this spirit walkes in.

Var. Thou art not altogether a Foole.

Fool. Nor thou altogether a Wife man,

As much foolerie as I haue, so much wit thou lack't.

Ape. That anwer might have become Apermanus.

All. Aside, aside, heere comes Lord Timon.

Enter Timon and Steward.

Ape. Come with me(Fool)e come.

Fool. I do not always follow Louer, leder Brother, and Woman, sometime the Philosopher.

Stew. Pray you walk e'neere,

Ile speake with you anon.

Exeunt.

Tim. You make me me ruelle wherefore ere this time

Had you not fully laide my mate before me,

That I might so haue rated my expence

As I had leaue of means.

Stew. You would not heare me:

At many leyfures I propoce.

Tim. Go too:

Perchance some single vantages you tooke,

When my indiposition put you backe,

And that vnaptneffe made your minifter

Thus to excue your selfe.

Stew. O my good Lord,

At many times I brought in my accompts,

Laid them before you, you would throw them off,

And say you found them in mine honestie,

When for some trifling prentent you haue bid me

Returne so much, I haue sfooke my head, and wept:

Yea 'gainft th'Authoritie of manners, pray'd you

To hold your hand more close: I did indure

Not fildome, nor no flight checkes, when I haue

Prompted you in the ebbe of your estate,

And your great flowe of debts; my lou'd Lord,

Though you heare now (too late) yet nowes a time,

The greateft of your hauing, lackes a halfe,

To pay your prentent debts.

Tim. Let all my Land be fold.

Stew. 'Tis all engag'd, some forfeyted and gone,

And what remains will hardly stop the mouth

Of prentent dues; the future comes apace:

What shall defend the interim, and at length

How goes our reck'ning?

Tim. To Lacedemon did my Land extend.

Stew. O my good Lord, the world is but a word,

Were it all yours, to glue it in a breath,

How quickly were it gone.

Tim. You tell me true.

Stew. If you suspect my Husbandry or Falhhood,

Call me before th'exaleft Auditors,

And let me on the profe.

So the Gods bleffe me,

When all our Offices haue bene oppreft

With riotous Feeders, when our Vaults haue wept

With drunken fulph of Wine; when every room

Hath blaze'd with Lights, and braid with Minfrelie,

I haue retir'd me to a wafteful cocke,

And let mine eyes at flow.

Tim. Prythee no more.

Stew. Heauens, haue I said, the bounty of this Lord:

How many prodigall bits haue Slaves and Pezants

This night enluggted: who is not Timons,

What heart, head, sword, force, meanes, but is L. Timons:

Great Timon, Noble, Worthy, Royall Timon:

Ah, when the meanes are gone, that buy this praife,

The breath is gone, whereof this praife is made:

Fealt won, faft loft; one cloud of Winter howeres,

These flyes are cought.

Tim. Come feren me no further.

No villainous bounty yet hath paft my heart;

Vnwisely, not ignorly haue I gien.

Why doft thou weepe, canst thou the conscience lacke,

To thinkne I shall lacke friends: fecure thy heart,

If I would broach the waffles of my love,

And try the argument of hearts, by borrowing,

Men, and mens fortunes could I frankly vfe

As I can bid thee speake.

Ste. Affurance bleffe your thoughts.

Tim. And in some fort thefe wants of mine are crown'd,

That I account them bleslings. For by thefe

Shall I trie Friends. You shall perceiue

How you mistake my Fortunes:

I am waileth in my Friends.

Within there, Flavius, Seralius?
Enter three Servants.

Ser. My Lord, my Lord.

Tim. I will dispatch you fearefully.

You to Lord Lucius, to Lord Lucullus you, I hunted with his Honor to day; you to Sempronius; commend me to their loves; and I am proud say, that my occasions have found time to vfe 'em toward a supply of mony: let the request be fifty Talents.

Flam. As you haue said, my Lord.

Tim. Go you fir to the Senators;

Of whom, even to the States beft health; I haue Defer'd this Hearing: bid 'em fend o'th'infant.

A thousand Talents to me.

Ser. I have beene bold

(For that I knew it the moft general way.)

To them, to vfe your Signer, and your Name.

But they do shake their heads, and I am heere.

No richer in returne.

Tim. Is't true? Can't be?

Sew. They answer in a joyant and corporate voice,

That now they are at fall, want Treateure cannot

Do what they would, are forre: you are Honourable,

But yet they could haue wight, they know not,

Something hath beene amiffe: a Noble Nature

May catch a wrench; would all were well; is pitty,

And fo intending other ferious matters,

After difafeful lookes; and these hard Fradions

With certaine halfe-caps, and cold mowing nods,

They froze me into Silence.

Tim. You Gods reward them:

Prythee man looke cheerelly. Thefe old Fellowes

Hauie their ingratitude in them Hereditary:

Their blood is cak'd, 'tis cold, it silldome flowes,

'Tis lacke of kindely warmth, they are not kinde;

And Nature, as it grows againe toward earth,

Is fhalion'd for thejourney, dull and heavy.

Go to Denidius (prythe be not fast,

Thou art true, and honof: Ingeniously I speake,

No blame belongs to thee.)\text{\footnotesize{\textsuperscript{1}\textsuperscript{2}}} Denidius lately Buried his Father, by whose death hee's depp'd

Into a great efate: When he was poore,

Imprifon'd, and in fcarfity of Friends,

I cleer'd him with fие Talents: Greet him from me,

Bid him suppose, some good necefly

Touches his Friend, which caues to be remembred

With those fие Talents; that had, giue'c thee Fellowes

To whom 'tis infant due. Neu'r speake,or thine, That Timons fortunes mong his Friends can finke.

Sew. I would I could not thine it:

That thought is Bounties Fee;

Being free it feele, it thinkes all others fo.

Flaminius waiting to speake with a Lord from his Maffer, enters a fervant to him.

Ser. I haue told my Lord of you, he is comming down to you.

Flam. I thanke you Sir.

Enter Lucullus.

Ser. Here's my Lord.

Luc. One of Lord Timons men? A Guift I warrant

Why this hits right: I dreampt of a Siluer [Bofon & Ewere to night.

Flaminius, honest Flaminius, you are verie re glectively welcome fir. Fill me some Wine. And how does that Honourable, Compleat, Free-hearted Gentman of Athens, thy very bountifull good Lord and Maffer?

Flam. His health is well fir.

Luc. I am right glad that his health is well fir: and what haft thou there under thy Cloake, pretty Flaminius?

Flam. Faith, nothing but an empty box Sir, which in my Lords behalfe, I come to intreat your Honor to sup ply: who hauing great and infant occasion to vfe firie Talents, hath fend to your Lordship to furnih him: nothing doubting your prefent affilience therein.

Luc. La, la, la, la: Nothing doubting faries hee? Alas good Lord, a Noble Gentleman 'tis, if he would not keep it good a house. Many a time and often I ha din'd with him, and told him on't, and come againe to fupper to him of purpose, to haue him fend leffe, and yet he wold embrace no counsell, take no warning by my comming, every man has his fault, and honefly is his. I ha told him on't, but I could nere get him from't.

Enter Servant with Wines.

Ser. Please your Lordship, heere is the Wine.

Luc. Flaminius, I haue noted thee always wise.

Heere's to thee.

Flam. Your Lordship fpeakes your pleasure.

Luc. I have obserued thee always for a towardle prompt spirit, glue thee thy due, and one that knowes what belongs to refuing, and can't vfe the time well, if the time vfe thee well. Good parts in thee; get you gone fir rah. Draw nearer honest Flaminius. Thy Lords a bountifull Gentleman, but thou art wife, and thou know't well enough (although thou corn't to me) that this is no time to lend money, epeciallly vpon bare friendhippe without fecuritie. Here's three Solidares for thee, good Boy winke at me, and fay thou faw't mee not. Fare thee well.

Flam. Is't poiffible the world should fo much differ,

And we aliele that liued? Fly damned bafeneffe

To him that worships thee.

Luc. Ha? Now I fee thou art a Foole, and fit for thy Maffer.

Flam. May thee add to the number y may fcall thee:

Let moulen Coine be thy damnation,

Thou difeale of a friend, and not himfelfe:

Has friendhiph fuch a faint and milkie heart,

It turns in leffe then two nighths? O you Gods!

I feele my Mafter's passion. This Slave vnto his Honor,

Has my Lords meate in him:

Why shoul'd it thrive, and turne to Nutriment,

When he is turn'd to payfon?

O may Difafe only worke upon't:

And when he's ficker to death,let not that part of Nature

Which my Lord payd for, be of any power

To expell fickneffe, but prolong his hower.

Enter Lucius, with three strangers.

Luc. Who the Lord Timon? He is my very good friend and an Honourable Gentleman.

1 We know him for no leffe, though we are but strangers to him. But I can tell you one thing my Lord, and which I hear from common rumours, now Lord Timon's happe howres are done and paife, and his eftate shrinks from him.

Lucius. Fye no, doe not beleue it: hee cannot want for money.

2 But beleue you this my Lord, that not long agoe, one of his men was with the Lord Lucullus, to borrow fo many Talents, nay vrg'd extremly for't, and shewed what what necessity belong'd too't, and yet was deny'de.
Luc. How?
2. I tell you, deny'de my Lord.
Luc. What a strange case was that? Now before the Gods I am afraid'm on't. Deni'd that honourable man?
There was verie little Honour shew'd in't. For my owne part, I must needs confesse, I have received some small kindnesses from him, as Moaney, Plate, Jewels, and such like Trifles; nothing comparing to his; yet had he mis-stoake him, and sent to me, I should ne're have denied his Occasion to so many Talents.

Enter Seruilius.

Seru. See, by good hap yonders my Lord, I have swet to fee his Honor. My Honor'd Lord
Lucil. Seruilius? You are kindely met sir. Farthewell, commend me to thy Honourable vertuous Lord, my very exquisite Friend.

Seru. May it please your Honour, my Lord hath sent-

Luc. Ha? what ha's he sent? I am so much endeereed to that Lord; hee's ever senden: how shall I thank him think't thou? And what has he sent now?

Seru. Has onely sent his present Occasion now my Lord: requering your Lordship to supply his infant vfe with so many Talents.

Lucil. I know his Lordship is but merry with me,
He cannot want fifty five hundred Talents.

Seru. But in the mean time he wants leffe my Lord.
If his occasion were not vertuous,
I shou'd not vrg it halfe so faithfully.

Luc. Doft thou speake seriouly Seruilius?

Seru. Upon my soule 'tis true Sir.

Luc. What a wicked Best was I to disfurnish my self against such a good time, when I might ha shewn my felfe Honourable? How vnluckily it happen'd, that I shold Purchase the day before for a little part, and vndo a great deale of Honour? Seruilius, now before the Gods I am not able to do (the more bea't I say) I was sending to vfe
Lord Timon my selfe, thefe Gentlemen can witneffe; but I would not for the wealth of Athens I had done't now.
Commend me bountifullly to his good Lordship, and I hope his Honor will conceive the fairest of me, because I haue no power to be kinde. And tell him this from me,
I count it one of my greates affiduidies say, that I cannot pleasure such an Honourable Gentleman. Good Seruilius, will you befriend mee so farre, as to vfe mine owne words to him?

Lucil. Ile looke you out a good turne Seruilius.

True as you saied, Timon is shrunkindeindeed,
And he that's once deny'de, will hardly speede. Exit.

1. Do you obserue this Hoftilius?
2. I, to well.
3. Why this is the worlds foule,
And luft of the same pece
Is ery Flatters sprot: who can call him his Friend
That dips in the same dish? For in my knowing
Timon has bin this Lords Father,
And kept his credit with his purfe:
Supported his estatte, say Timon money
Has paid his men their wages. He ne're drinkes,
But Timons Silver treads vpon his Lip,
And yet, oh see the monfroundse of man,
When he looks out in an vngratefull shape;
He does deny him (in respe't of his)

What charitable men afford to Beggars.
3 Religion grones at it.
For mine owne part, I neuer tasted Timon in my life
Nor came any of his bounties over me,
To marke me for his Friend. Yet I protest,
For his right Noble minde, illutrious Vertue,
And Honourable Carriage,
Had his necessity made vfe of me,
I would haue put my wealth into Donation,
And the beft halfe should haue return'd to him,
So much I love his heart: But I perceiue,
Men must learne now with pitty to dis pense,
For Policy fits above Confidence.

Enter a third servant with Sempronius, another of Timons Friends.

Semp. Must he needs trouble me in't? Hum.
'Boe all others?
He might haue tried Lord Lucius, or Lucullus,
And now Venidgius is wealthy too,
Whom he redeem'd from prison. All these Owes their estates vnto him,
Ser. My Lord,
They haue all bin touch'd, and found Bafe-Mettle,
For they haue all denied him.

Semp. How? Haue theydeny'de him?
Has Venidgius and Lucullus deny'de him,
And does he fend to me? 'Three? Hum?
It shewes but little love, or judgement in him.
Must I be his last Refuge? His Friends (like Physicians
Thev, gee him ouer: Must I take th' Cure vpon me?
Has much disfarg'd me in't, I'me angry at him,
That might have knowne my place. I see no fenfe fort,
But his Occasions might have wound me first:
For in my confience, I was the first man
That ere receu'd guilt from him.
And does he thinke so backwards of me now,
That Ile requite it laft? No:
So it may proue an Argument of Laughter
To th'reft, and 'mongr Lords be thought a Foole:
I'de rather then the worth of thrice the fumme,
Had fend to me first, but for my minde false:
I'de fuch a courage to do him good. But now returne,
And with their faint reply, this answer ioyn:
Who bates mine Honor, shall not know my Coyne. Exit Ser. Excellent: Your Lordships a goodly Villain: the duell knew not what he did, when hee made man Politick; he crossed himselfe by't: and I cannot thinkes, but in the end, the Villanies of man will fet him cleere.
How fairely this Lord firues to appeare foule? Takes Vertuous Copies to be wicked: like thofe, that vnder hotte ardent zeale, would fet whole Realmes on fire, of such a nature is his politike love.
This was my Lords belt hope, now all are fied
Saue onely the Gods. Now his Friends are dead,
Doores that were ne're acquainted with their Wards
Many a bounteous yeare, must he implo'd
Now to guard fur'e their Mafter:
And this is all a liberall course allows,
Who cannot keepe his wealth, must keep his houfe.Exit.
Tit. The like to you kindes Varro.
Hort. Lucius, what do we meet together?
Luci. I, and I think one businesse do's command vs all.
For mine is money.
Tit. So is theirs, and ours.
Enter Philius.
Luci. And sir Philius too.
Phili. Good day at once.
Luci. Welcome good Brother.
What do you thinkke the houres?
Phili. Labouring for Nine.
Luci. So much?
Phili. Is not my Lord seene yet?
Luci. Not yet.
Phili. I wonder on't, he was wont to shine at feaues.
Luci. I, but the daies are waxt shorter with him:
You must consider, that a Prodigall course
Is like the Sunnes, but not like his recoverable, I feare:
'Tis deepest Winter in Lord Timons purse, that is:
One may reache deep enough, and yet finde little.
Phili. I am of your feare, for that.
Tit. Ile shew you how t'obferue a strange event:
Your Lord sends now for Money?
Hort. Moft true, he doe's.
Tit. And he weares jewels now of Timons guift,
For which I waite for money.
Hort. It is against my heart.
Luci. Mark how strange it showes,
Timons in this, should pay more then he owes:
And e'ne as if your Lord should weare rich jewels,
And send for money for 'em.
Hort. I'me weary of this Charge,
The Gods can witness:
I know my Lord hath spent of Timons wealth,
And now Ingratitude, makes it worse then theft.
Varro. Yes, mine's three thousand Crownes:
What's yours?
Luci. Fiue thousand mine.
Varro. 'Tis much depee, and it should, seem by th'yme
Your Masters confidence was aboue mine,
Elle surely his had equal'd.

Enter Flaminius.
Tit. One of Lord Timons men.
Luci. Flaminius? Sir, a word: Pray is my Lord ready to come forth?
Flam. No, indeed he is not.
Tit. We attend his Lordship: pray signifie so much.
Flam. I need not tell him, that he knowes you are too
Enter Steward in a Cloake, muffled. (diligent.
Luci. Ha: is not that his Steward muffled so?
He goes away in a Cloak: Call him, call him.
Tit. Do you heare, sir?
2.Varro. By your licence, sir.
Stew. What do ye ask of me, my Friend.
Tit. We waite for certaine Money heare, sir.
Stew. I, if Money were as certaine as your waiting,
'Twere sure enough.
Why then prefer'd you not your summes and Billes
When your fals Masters eate of my Lords meat?
Then they could smile, and fawe vpon his debts,
And take downe th'Intreft into their glut'rous Mawes.
You do your fulses but wrong, to firre me vp,
Let me paffe quietly:
Beleeue't, my Lord and I have made an end,
I have no more to reckon, he to spend.
Luci. I, but this answer will not ferue.
Enter three Senators at one door, Alcibiades meeting them, with Attendants.

1. Sen. My Lord, you have my voyage, too’t.

The faults Bloody:
’Tis necessary he should dye:
Nothing imboldens sinne so much, as Mercy.

2. Mofi true; the Law shall bruife ‘em.

Alt. Honor, health, and compassion to the Senate.

1. No, Captaine.

Alt. I am an humble Sutor to your Vertues;
For pitty is the vertue of the Law,
And none but Tyrants vie it cruelly.
It pleases time and Fortune to lye heauie.
Vpon a Friend of mine, who in hot blood
Hath stept into the Law: which is past depth
To those that (without heede) do plunge into’t.

He is a Man (lettting his Fate aside) of comely Vertues,
Nor did he foyle the fact with Cowardice,
(And Honour in him, which byues out his fault)
But with a Noble Fury, and faire spirt,
Seeing his Reputation touch’d to death,
He did oppoe his Foe:
And with such fober and vannoted passion
He did behoove his anger ere twas spent,
As if he had but proud on Argument.

1. Sen. You vndergo too striit a Paradox,
Struing to make an vgly deed looke faire:
Your words have tooke such paines, as if they labord
To bring Man-slaughter into forme, and set Quarrelling
Vpon the head of Valour; which indeede
Is Valour mif-begot, and came into the world,
When Seels, and Faclions were newly borne.
Here’s truly Valiant, that can wisely luffer
The wond that man can breath,
And make his Wrongs, his Out-sides,
To weare them like his Rayment, carelesly,
And ne’re preferre his injuries to his heart,
To bring it into danger.
If Wrongs be euilles, and inforse vs kill,
What Folly ’tis, to hazard life for Ill.

Alct. My Lord.

1. Sen. You cannot make groffe sinnes looke cleare,
To reuenge is no Valour, but to beare.

Alt. My Lords, then vnder favoure, pardon me,
If I speake like a Captaine.

Why do fond men expose themselues to Battell,
And not endure all threats? Sleepe vpnot,
And let the Foes quicly cut their Throats
Without repugnancy? If there be Such Valour in the bearing, what make wee Abroad? Why then, Women are more valiant
That stay at home, if Bearing carry it:
And the Affe, more Captaine then the Lyon?
The fellow loaden with Irons, wifer then then the Judge?
If Wifedome be in suffering, Oh my Lords,
As you are great, be pitifully Good,
Who cannot condemne raffineffe in cold blood?
To Kill, I grant, is sinnes extremeft Guilt,
But in defence, by Mercy, ’tis moft iuft.
To be in Anger, is impietie:
But who is Man, that is not Angrie,
Weigh but the Crime with this.

Alt. In vaine?
His seruice done at Lacedemon, and Bizantium,
Were a sufficient bribier for his life.

1. What’s that?

Alt. Why say my Lords ha’s done faire seruice,
And slaine in fight many of your enemies:
How full of valour did he beare himselfe
In the late Confid, and made plentious wounds?

2. He has made too much plenty with him:
He’s a sworn Riator, he has a sinne
That often drowns him, and takes his valour prisoner.
If there were no Foes, that were enough
To overcome him. In that Beautifull furie,
He has bin knowne to commit outrages,
And cherifh Faclions. ’Tis inferre’d to vs,
His dayes are foule, and his drinke dangerous.

1. He dies.

Alt. Hard fate: he might have dyed in warre.

My Lords, if not for any parts in him,
Though his right arme might purchase his owne time,
And be in debt to none: yet more to move you,
Take my deferts to his, and joyne ’em both.
And for I know, your reuerend Ages lone Security,
Ie pawne my Victories, all my Honour to you
Vpon his good returns.
If by this Crime, he owes the Law his life,
Why let the Warre receiue’t in valiant Gore,
For Law is striit; and Warre is nothing more.

1. We are for Law, he dyes, vrg it no more
On height of our dileasure: Friend, or Brother,
He forfeits his owne blood, that spilless another.

Alt. Muft it be fo? It muft not bee:
My Lords, I do befeech you know mee.

2. How?

Alt. Call me to your remembrances.

3. What.

Alt. I cannot think but your Age has forgot me,
It could not else be, I shoule prove fo base,
To fue and be denyed such common Grace.
My wounds ake at you.

1. Do you dare our anger?
’Tis in few words, but fpacious in effect:
We banifh thee for euer.

Alt. Banifh me?
Banifh your dotage, banifh vfurie,
That makes the Senate vgly.

1. If after two dayes shine, Athens containes thee,
Attend our weightier Judgement.
And not to swell our Spirit,
He shall be executed prefently.

Alt. Now the Gods keepe you old enough,
That you may live
Onely in bone, that none may looke on you.
I’m worfe then mad: I haue kept backe their Foes
While they haue told their Money, and let out
Their Coine vpon large intereft. I my selfe,
Rich onely in large hurts. All thofe,for this?
Is this the Balfome, that the vfuring Senat
Powres into Captaines wounds? Banifhment.
It comes not ill: I hate not to be banifht,
It is a caufe worthy my Spleene and Furie,
That I may strike at Athens. Ile cheere vp
My discontented Troopes, and lay for hearts;
’Tis Honour with moft Lands to be at ods,
Souldiers should brooke as little wrongs as Gods.

Exit. Enter
Enter divers Friends at several doors.

1 The good time of day to you, sir.
2 I also wish it to you: I think this Honorable Lord did but try vs this other day.
3 Upon that were my thoughts tying when wee encountered. I hope it is not so low with him as he made it seeme in the triall of his feueral Friends.
4 It should not be, by the perfwation of his new Fealing.
5 I should think so. He hath sent mee an earnest inquiring, which many of my near occasions did urge mee to put off: but he hath conur'd mee beyond them, and I must needs appeare.
6 In like manner was I in debt to my importunate business, but he would not hear my excuse. I am forc'd, when he sent to borrow of mee, that my Prouision was out.
7 I am sicke of that greefe too, as I understand how all things go.
8 Every man heares so: what would he have borrowed of you?
9 A thousand Peeces.
10 A thousand Peeces?
11 What of you?
12 He sent to me sir—Here he comes.

Enter Timon and Attendants.

Tim. With all my heart Gentlemen both; and how fare you?
1 Enter at the best, hearing well of your Lordship.
2 The Swallow followes not Summer more willing, then we your Lordship.
3 Nor more willingly leaves Winter, such Summer Birds are men. Gentlemen, our dinner will not recom pense this long stay; Feast your ears with the Musicke awhile: If they will fare so heartily o'th'Trumpets found: we shall too promptly.
4 I hope it remains not unkindly with your Lordship, that I return'd you an empty Messenger.
5 O sir, let it not trouble you.
6 My Noble Lord.
7 Ah my good Friend, what cheere?

The Banquet brought in.

Tim. Think not on't, sir.
2 If you had entertain'd two hours before.
3 Let it notumber your better remembrance.

Come bring in all together.

2 All courer'd Dishes.
1 Royall Cheare, I warrant you.
3 Doubt not that, if money and the season can yield it
4 How do you? What's the news?
3 Alciobides is banish'd: hear you of it?
5 How? Why? How?

Enter Timon.

Tim. My worthy Friends, will you draw neere?
3 Heere! sir.
4 Tell ye more anon. Here's a Noble feast toward
2 This is the old man still.
3 Wilt hold? Wilt hold?
4 It do's: but time will, and so.

3 I do conceive.

Tim. Each man to his flooole, with that spurre as hee would to the lip of his Misfri's your dyet shall bee in all places alike. Make not a Citie Feast of it, to let the meat coole, ere we can agree upon the first place. Sit,sit.

The Gods require our Thankes.

You great Benefactors, sprinkle our Society with Thankfulness. For your own guifts, make your felues praid: But referre fill to give, leafe your Deities be defijsed. Lend to each man enough, that one need not lend to another. For were your Godbeads to borrow of men, men would forfeake the Gods. Make the Meane be beloved, more then the Man that gives it. Let no Assembly of Twenty, be without a score of Villaines. If there sit twelve Women at the Table, let a dozen of them bee as they are. The rest of your Fies, O Gods, the Senators of Athens, together with the common llege of People, what is amisse in them, you Gods, make justifiable for defeution. For these my present Friends, as they are to mee nothing, so in nothing bleffe them, and to nothing are they welcome.

Vncover Dogges, and lap.

Some speak. What do's his Lordship mean?
2 Some other. I know not.

Timon. May you a better Feast never behold
You knot of Mouth-Friends; Smoke, & lukewarm water
Is your perfection. This is Timons life,
Who fuckle and fpangled you with Flatteries,
Washes it off, and sprinkles in your faces
Your reeking villany. Like loath'd, and long
Most smiling, smooth, detested Parafites.

Curteous Deftroyers, affable Wolves, meek Beares:
You Fools of Fortune, Trencher-friends, Times Flyes,
Cap and knee-Slaves, vapours, and Minute Jackes.
Of Man and Beast, the infinite Maladie
Cruft you quite o're. What do'st thou go?
Soft, take thy Phylucke firft; thou too, and thou:
Stay I will lend thee money, borrow none.
What! All in Motion? Henceforth be no Feast,
Whereat a Villaine's not a welcome Guest.
Borne houfe, finke Athens, henceforth hated be
Of Timon Man, and all Humarty.

Enter the Senators, with other Lords.

1 How now, my Lords?
2 Know you the quality of Lord Timons fury?
3 Puft, did you see my Cap?
4 I haue loft my Gowne.
5 He's but a mad Lord, & nought but humors swaies him. He gauie me a lewell th'o'ther day, and now hee has beate it out of my hat.

Did you see my Iewell?
2 Did you see my Cap.
3 Heere'tis.
4 Heere lies my Gowne.
5 Let's make no stay.
6 Lord Timons mad.
7 I feel't upon my bones.
4 One day he giues vs Diamonds, next day flies.

Excuss the Senators.

Enter Timon.

Tim. Let me looke backe upon thee, O thou Wall
That girdles in those Wolves, due in the earth,
And hence not Athens. Matrons, turne incontinent,
Obedience payle in Children: Slaves and Fools
Timon of Athens.

Plucke the graue wrinkled Senate from the Bench,
And minister in their needes, to generall Filthes.
Conuert o' th' Infant greene Virginity,
Don't in your Parents eyes. Bankrupts, hold fast
Rather then render backe; out with your Knives,
And cut your Trutersthroates. Bound Servants, fleale,
Large-handed Robbers your graue Materst are,
And pill by Law. Malde, to thy Masters bed,
Thy Miftris is o' th'Brothell. Some of sixteen,
Plucke the lyn'd Crutch from thy old limping Sire,
With it, beaste out his Braines. Piety, and Fear
Religion to the Gods, Peace, Iustice, Truth,
Domeflickes aw, Night-teft, and Neighbour-hood,
Infruccion, Manners, Mysteries, and Trades,
Degrees, Obferuations, Customes, and Lawes,
Decline to your confounding contraries.
And yet Confusion live: Plagues incident to men,
Your potent and infectious Fearors, heape
On Athens ripe for stroke. Thou cold Scatista,
Cripple our Senatos, that their limbs may halt
As lamely as their Manners. Luft, and Libertie
Creepe in the Minde and Marrowes of our youth,
That gaine the fireame of Vertue they may firee,
And drunwe themselfes in Riots. Inches, Blaines,
Sowe all th' Athenian bofomes, and their crop
Be generall Leprofe: Breath, infcet breath,
That their Society (as their Friendship) may
Be mearly poifon. Nothing Ile beare from thee
But nakedneffe, thou detetable Towne,
Take thou that too, with multiplying Bannes:
Timon will to the Woods, where he shall finde
Th'vnkinded Feaft, more kinder then Mankinde.
The Gods confound (heare me you good Gods all)
Th' Athenians both within and out that Wall:
And graunt as Timon growes, his hate may grow
To the whole race of Mankinde, high and low.
Amen. Exit.

Enter Steward with two or three Servants.

1 Heare you M Steward, where's our Mafter?
Are we vndone, cast off, nothing remaining?
Stew. Alack my Fellowes, what shold I say to you?
Let me be recorded by the righteous Gods,
I am as poore as you.
1 Such a Houfe broke?
So Noble a Master faire, all gone, and not
One Friend to take his Fortune by the arme, and Go along with him.
2 As we do turne our backes
From our Companion, thowne into his graue,
So his Familiars to his buried Fortunes
Slinke all away, leave their faffe vowes with him
Like empty purfes pikt; and his poore selfe
A dedicated Beggar to the Ayre,
With his difafe, of all fhunn'd poorty,
Walkes like contempt alone. More of our Fellowes.

Enter other Servants.

Stew. All broken Implements of a ruin'd house.
3 Yet do our hearts weare Timons Livery,
That see I by our Faces: we are Fellowes still,
Seruing alike in forrow: Leaked is our Barke,
And we poore Mates, flind on the dying Decke,
Hearing the Surges threat: we must all part
Into this Sea of Ayre.
Stew. Good Fellowes all,
The latest of my wealth I leare amongift you.
Where euer we shall meete, for Timons fakke,
Let's yet be Fellowes. Let's faake our heads, and say
As 'twere a Knell vnto our Master Fortunes,
We haue fene better dayes. Let each take fome:
Nay put out all your hands: Not one word more,
Thus part we rich in forrow, parting poore.

Embrace and part feuerall wayes.
Oh the fierce wretchedneffe that Glory brings vs!
Who would not wish to be from wealth exempt;
Since Riches point to Mifery and Contempt;
Who would be fo mock'd with Glory, or to lieue
But in a Dreame of Friendship,
To haue his pompe, and all that state compounds,
But onely painted like his varnifht Friends:
Poore honest Lord, brought lowe by his owne heart,
Vndone by Goodneffe: Strange vanuflall blood,
When mans worth finne is, He do's too much Good.
Who then dares to be halfe fo kinde agen?
For Bounty that makes Gods, do flill marre Men.
My deere Lord, blest to be moft accurft,
Rich onely to be wretched; thy great Fortunes
Are made thy cheefe Affliotions. Alas (kinde Lord)
Hee's flung in Rage from this ingrateful Seate
Of monftrous Friends:
Nor ha's he with him to supply his life,
Or that which can command it:
He follow and enquire him out.
Ile euer ferue his minde, with my belf will,
Whilt I have Gold, Ile be his Steward fille.

Enter Timon in the woods.

Tim. O blessed breeding Sun, draw from the earth
Rotten humidity: below thy Sifters Orbe
Infect the ayre. Twin'd Brothers of one wombe,
Whose procreation, refinement, and birth,
Scarce is diuidant; touch them with feuerall fortunes,
The greater scornees the leffer. Not Nature
To whom all fores lay fiege) can beare great Fortune
But by contempt of Nature.
Raffe me this Begger, and deny't that Lord,
The Senators shall beare contempt Hereditary,
The Begger Natue Honor.
It is the Paflour Lards, the Brothers fides,
The want that makes him leaue: who dares? who dares
In puritie of Manhood fiand vpright
And fay, this mans a Flatterer. If one be,
So are they all: for euerie grize of Fortune
Is smooth'd by that below. The Learned pate
Duckes to the Golden Foole. All's oblique:
There's nothing leuell in our curfed Natures
But direft villanie. Therefore be abhor'd,
All Feasts, Societies, and Thronges of men.
His semblable, yea himselfe Timo, disclains
Deftruction phang mankinde: Earth yeeld me Rootes,
Who feekes for better of thee, fawce his pallate
With thy moft operant Poyfon. What is here?
Gold? Yellow, glittering, precious Gold?
No Gods, I am no idle Votarift,
Roots you cleere Heauens. Thus much of this will make
Blace, white; fowle, faire; wrong, right;
Safe, Noble; Old, young; Coward, valiant.
Ha! you Gods! why this? what this, you Gods? why this
Will hugge your Priests and Servants from your fides:
Plucke fiout mens pillowe from below their heads.
This
Enter Alcibiades with Drumme and Fife in warlike manner, and Phrynia and Timandra.

Alc. What art thou there? speake.
Tim. A Beast as thou art. The Canker gnaw thy hart
For shewing me against the eyes of Man.
Alc. What is thy name? Is man so hateful to thee, that art thou a man?
Tim. I am Alcibiad, and hate Mankinde.
Alc. For thy part, I do with what wert a dogge, that I might love thee something.
Alc. I know thee well;
But in thy Fortunes and unlearn'd, and strange,
Tim. I know thee too, and more then that I know thee.
Alc. I do not desire to know. Follow thy Drumme,
With many blood paint the ground Gules, Gules:
Religious Cannons, cieull Lawes are cruel,
Then what should warre be? This fell whore of thine,
Hath in more deftruction then thy Sword,
For all her Cherubin looke.
Phrin. Thy lips rot off.
Tim. I will not kiff thee, then the rot returns
To thine owne lippe againe.
Alc. How came the Noble Timon to this change?
Tim. As the Moore doth, by wanting light to gaze:
But there in it I could not like the Moore,
There were no Sunties to borrow of.
Alc. Noble Timon, what friendship may I do thee?
Tim. None, but to maintaine my opinion.
Alc. What is it Timon?
Tim. Promise me Friendship, but performe none.
If thou wilt not promise, the Gods plague thee, for thou art a man: if thou doft performe, confound thee, for thou art a man.
Alc. I have heard in some fort of thy Miseries.
Tim. Thou saw'ft them when I had prosperity.
Alc. I feem them now, then was a blest time.
Tim. As thine is now, held with a brace of Harlots.
Timon. Is this thy Athenian Minion, whom the world
Voic'd so regardfully?
Tim. Art thou Timon?
Timon. Yes.
Tim. Be a whore still, thou lovest thee not that vse thee, give them devises, leaving with thee their Luft. Make vse of thy falt hours, seafon the fluxes for Tubbes and Bathes, bring downe Rose-cheekt youth to the Fubift, and the Diet.
Timon. Hang thee Monfter.
Alc. Pardon him sweet Timon; for his wits
Are drown'd and loft in his Calamities.

I have but little Gold of late, braue Timon,
The want whereof, doth dayly make reuolt
In my penurious Band. I have heard and greeu'd
How curfed Athens, and mindelesse of thy worth,
Forgetting thy great deeds, when Neighbour flates
But for thy Sword and Fortune trod vpom them.
Tim. I prythe beate thy Drum; and get thee gone.
Alc. I am thy Friend, and pitie thee deere Timon.
Tim. How doest thou pitie him whom y doft troble,
I had rather be alone.
Alc. Why fare thee well:
Here is some Gold for thee.
Tim. Keep it, I cannot eate it.
Alc. When I have laid proud Athens on a heape.
Tim. Warr'ft thou gainst Athens.
Alc. 1 Timon, and have caufe.
Tim. The Gods confound them all in thy Conqueft,
And thee after, when thou haft Conquer'd.
Alc. Why me, Timon?
Tim. That by killing of Villaines
Thou was't borne to conquer my Country.
Put vp thy Gold. Go on, heeres Gold, go on;
As be a Planetary plague, when Ioue
Will o're some high-Vic'd City, hang his poyson
In the sicke ayre: let not thy sword skip one:
Pittie not honour'd Age for his white Beard,
He is an Villrer. Strike me the counterfet Matron,
It is her habite onely, that is honest,
Her felfe's a Bawd. Let not the Virgins cheyke
Make soft thy trenchant Sword: for those Milke pappes
That through the window Barne bore at mens eyes,
Are not within the Leaf of pitty wret,
But set them down horrible Traitors.Spare not the Babe
Whose dimple, smiles from Fools exhaust their mercy;
Thinkie it a Baffard, whom the Oracle
Hath doubtfully pronounced, the throat shall cut,
And mince it fans remorse. Swear against Obiects,
Put Armour on thine eares, and on thine eyes,
Whose proves, no yels of Mothers, Mades, nor Babes,
Nor light of Priests in holy Veiments bleeding,
Shall pierce a lot. There's Gold to pay thy Souldiers,
Make large confusion: and thy fury spent.
Confounded be thy felis. Speake not, be gone.
Alc. Haft thou Gold yet, Ie take the Gold thou giu'st me, not all thy Counsell.
Tim. Doft thou or doft thou not, Heauens curfe vpon thee.

Bob. Glue vs some Gold good Timon, haft y? more?
Tim. Enough to make a Whore forweare her Trade,
And to make Whores, a Bawd. Hold vp you Shuts
Your Aprons mountant: you are not Othable,
Although I know you'll sweare, terribly sweare
Into strong fludders, and to heavenly Aues
Th'immortale Gods that heare you.Spare you Oathes:
Ie truit to your Conditions, be whores fill.
And he whose pious breath seekes to concert you,
Be strong in Whore, allure him, burne him vp,
Let your close fire predominate his smike,
And be no turne-costs: yet may your paines fix months
Be quite contrary, And Thatch
Your poor thin Roofes with burthens of the dead,
(Some that were hang'd) no matter:
Weare them, betray with them; Whore fill,
Paint till a horre may myre vpon your face:
A pox of wrinkles.

Bob. Well, more Gold, what then?
Beleeue't that wee'd do any thing for Gold.

Tim. Confumptions fowre
In hollow bones of man, strike their sharpe shinnes,
And marre mens spurring. Cracke the Lawyers voyce,
That he may never more fake Title pleade;
Nor found his Quilletts shrilly : Hoare the Flamen,
That scold'd against the quality of flax,
And not beleeues himselfe. Downe with the Nose,
Downe with it flat, take the Bridge quite away
Of him, that his particular to foresee
(bald Smels from the generall weale. Make curld'pate Ruffians
And let the viccarr'd Braggards of the Warre
Derive some paine from you. Plague all,
That your Activity may defeat and quell
The foure of all Ere&ion. There's more Gold.
Do you damne others, and let this damne you,
And ditches graue you all.

Ape. More counfell with more Money, bounteous Timon.

Tim. More whore, more Mischeafe firth, I have gi-ven you earneft.

Ape. Strike vp the Drum towards Athens, farewell

Timon : if I thrive well, I lea vift hee againe.

Tim. If I hope well, I leue neuer fee thee more.

Ape. I leu vifhed thee haarme.

Tim. Yes, thou fpok'ft well of me.

Ape. Call'ft thou that harme?

Tim. Men dayly finde it. Get thee away,
And take thy Beagles with thee.

Ape. We be offend him, strike. Exeunt.

Tim. That Nature being fickle of mans vnkindneffe
Should yet be hungry : Common Mother, thou
Whoe wome vonmeasureable, and infinite breft
Teemes and feeds all : whose selfefame Mettle
Whereof thy proud Childe (arrogant man) is puft,
Engenders the blacke Toad, and Ader brewer,
The gilded Newt, and eyeleffe venom'd Worme,
With all th'abhorred Births below Griffe Heauen,
Whereon Hyperions quickeing fire doth brine :
Yeeld him, who all the humane Sonnes do hate,
From forth th'abundant bofore, one poore roote:
Enfere thy Fertile and Conceptious wome,
Let it no more bring out ingratefull man.
Goe great with Tygers, Dragons, Wolves, and Bears,
Teeme with new Monsters, whom thy vpward face
Hath to the Marbled Manion all aboe
Neuer prefent'd. O, a Root, deare thankes
Dry vp thy Marrowes, Vines, and Plough-torne Leas,
Whereof ingratefull man with Licourifh draughts
And Morfels Vnfealous, greate his pure minde,
That from it all Consideration flippes——

Enter Apemantus.

More man ? Plague, plague.

Ape. I was direc'd hither. Men report,
Thou doft auct and auct my Manners, and doft vie them.

Tim. 'Tis then, becaufe thou doft not keepe a dogge
Whom I would imitate. Confumption catch thee.

Ape. This is in thee a Nature but infected,
A poore vnmanly Melancholy sprung
From change of future. Why this Spade? this place?
This Slawe-like Habit, and thefe lookes of Care?
This Flatterers yet ware Silke, drinke Wine, eye soft,
Hugge their diffeas'd Perfumes, and haue forgot
That ever Timon was, Shame not thefe Woods,
By putting on the cunning of a Carper.
Be thou a Flatterer now, and fecke to thrive

By that which ha's vndone thee; hinde thy knee,
And let his very breath whom thou'lt obserue
Blow off thy Cap : praiseth his moft vicious straine,
And call it excellent : thou waif told thus:
Thou gau'th thine eares (like Tapers, that bad welcom)
To Knaues, and all approchers: 'Tis moft iuft
That thou turne Raflcall, had'ft thou wealth againe,
Raflcas should haue'. Do not assume my likenesse.

Tim. Were I like thee, I'de throw away my felie.

Ape. Thou haft caft away thy felie, being like thy self
A Madman so long, now a Fool : what think'ft
That the bleake ayre, thy boisterous Chamberlaine
Will put thy skirt on warme? Will these moyd Trees,
That haue out-lied the Eagle, page thy heele.
And skip when thou point't out? Will the cold brooke
Candied with Ice, Cawdle thy Morning taste
To cure thy o're-nights furfe? Call the Creatures,
Whole naked Natures lye in all the spight
Of wrekefull Heauen, whose bare vnhoufed Trunkes,
To the conflituing Elements expos'd
Anwfer meere Nature : bid them flatter thee.
O thou fialt finde.

Tim. A Foole of thee : depart.

Ape. I loue thee better now, then ere I did.

Tim. I hate thee worfe.

Ape. Why?

Tim. Thou flatter'ft misery.

Ape. I flatter not, but say thou art a Caytiffe.

Tim. Why do'ft thou fluke me out?

Ape. To vex thee.

Tim. Always a Villaines Office, or a Fooles.

Doft pleafe thy felie in't?

Ape. 1.

Tim. What, a Knaue too?

Ape. If thou did'ft put this fowre cold habi on
To catigflate thy pride, 'twere well : but thou
Doft it enraged: Thou'di'ft Courtier be againe
Wert thou not Beggar : willing misery
Out-lies: Incertaine pompe, is crown'd before:
The one is filling fill, neuer compleat:
The other, at high wish : beer flate Contentleffe,
Hath a diftra&ted and moft wretched being,
Worfe then the worft, Content.

Thou shoul'dit defire to dye, being miferable.

Tim. Not by his breath, that is more miferable.

Thou art a Slave, whom Fortunes tender arme
With favour neuer claspt: but bred a Dogge.
Had'ft thou like vs from our firft swath proceeded,
The sweet degrees that this breve world affords,
To fuch as may the paffiue drugges of it
Freely command'it : thou would'ft haue plung'd thy felie
In general' Riot, melted downe thys youth
In different beds of Luft, and neuer learn'd
The Ie precepts of reprefe", but followed
The Sugred game before thee. But my felie,
Who had the world as my Confectionarie,
The mouthes, the tongues, the eyes, and hearts of men,
At duty more then I could frame employment ;
That numberlesse vpon me flucke, as leaes
Do on the Oske, haue with one Winters brush
Fall from their boughes, and left me open, bare,
For every fsorte that blows, I to beare this,
That neuer knew but better, is some burther:
Thy Nature, did commence in fufferance, Time
Hath made thee hard in't. Why should'lt y hate Men?
They never flatter'd thee. What haft thou gien?
Timon of Athens.

If thou wilt curse; thy Father (that poore ragge)
Muff be thy Subiect: who in spight put ruffes
To some thee-Begger, and compounded thee,
Poore Rogue, hereditary. Hence, be gone,
If thou hadst not bene borne the worke of men,
Thou hadst bene a Knowe and Flatterer.

Ape. Art thou proud yet?
Tim. I, that I am not thee.
Ape. I, that I was no Prodigall.
Tim. I, that I am one now.

Were all the wealth I haue shut vp in thee,
I'll give thee leaque to hang it. Get thee gone:
That the whole life of Athenes were in this,
Thus would I eate it.

Ape. Heere, I will mend thy Feast.
Tim. First mend thy company, take away thy selfe.
Ape. So I shall mend mine owne, by th' lacke of thine
Tim. 'Tis not well mended do, it is but botchet;
If not, I would it were.
Ape. What wouldst thou have to Athens?
Tim. Thee thinner in a whirlwind: if thou wilt,
Tell them there I haue Gold, looke, so I haue.
Ape. Heere is no vfe for Gold.
Tim. The best, and truest:
For heere it fleapes, and do's no hyred harme.
Ape. Where lyest a nights Timon?
Tim. Yonder th'o aboue me.
Where feed'st thou a-dayes Apemantus?
Ape. Where my stomacke findes meate, or rather where I eate it.
Tim. Would poynon were obedienc, & knew my mind
Ape. Where wouldst thou send it?
Tim. To fawe thy difies.
Ape. The middle of Humanity thou never knewest, but the extremitie of both ends. When thou wait in thy Gilt, and thy Perfume, they mockt thee for too much Curiositie: in thy Ragges thou know'st none, but art desips'd for the contrary. There's a medler for thee, eate it.
Ape. Do'st hate a Medler?
Tim. I, though it looke like thee.
Ape. And th'hadst hated Medlers sooner, y' should haue love thy felte better now. What man didst thou ever know vntruth, that was beloued after his meanes?
Tim. Who without thoes meanes thou talk't of, di'dst thou ever know belou'd?
Ape. My selfe.
Tim. I vnderstand thee: thou hadst' somes meanes to keepe a Dogge.

Apem. What things in the world canst thou nearest compare to thy Flatters?
Tim. Women nearest, but men: men are the things themselves. What wouldst thou do with the world A-perantus, if it lay in thy power?
Ape. Give it the Beasts, to be rid of the men.
Tim. Wouldst thou haue thy selfe fall in the confusion of men, and remaine a Beast with the Beasts.

Ape. I Timon.

Tim. A beaftly Ambition, which the Godsse grant thee t'taine to. If thou wert the Lyon, the Fox would beguile thee: if thou wert the Lambe, the Fexe would cathe thee: if thou wert the Fox, the Lion would subiect thee, when peradventure thou wert accus'd by the Afe :
If thou wert the Afe, thy dulness would torment thee ;
and still thou liu'dst but as a Breakaft to the Wolfe. If thou wert the Wolfe, thy greedinesse would affict thee, & oft thou shouldst hazard thy life for thy dinner. Wert thou the Unicorn, pride and wrath would confound thee, and make shine owne selfe the conquest of thy fury.
Wert thou a Beare, thou wouldst' be kill'd by the Horfe:
wert thou a Horfe, thou wouldst' be fear'd by the Leopard: wert thou a Leopard, thou wert Germane to the Lion, and the spottes of thy Kindred, were luors on thy life. All thy safety were remotion, and thy defence ab-fence. What Beaf could'th bee, that were not subject to a Beaf: and what a Beaf art thou already, that feeld not thy losse in transformation.
Ape. If thou couldst please me
With speaking to me, thou might'rt
Have hit vp on it here.
The Commonwealth of Athenes, is become A Forrest of Beasts.

Tim. How ha's the Afe broke the wall, that thou art out of the Citie.
Ape. Yonder comes a Poet and a Painter:
The plague of Company light upon thee:
I will seare to catch it, and give way.
When I know not what else to do,
Ile see thee again.
Tim. When there is nothing living but thee,
Thou shalt be welcome.
I had rather be a Beggers Dogge,
'Then Apemantus.

Ape. Thou art the Cap
Of all the Fooles alio.
Tim. Would thou wert cleane enough
To spit vpon.
Ape. A plague on thee,
Thou art too bad to cure.
Tim. All Villaines
That do stand by thee, are pure.
Ape. There is no Leprofe,
But what thou speak't.
Tim. If I name thee, Ile beate thee;
But I should infect my hands.
Ape. I would my tongue
Could rot them off.
Tim. Away thou issue of a mangie dogge,
Choller does kill me,
That thou art alio, I swoon to see thee.
Ape. Would thou wouldst' burft.
Tim. Away thou tedious Rogue, I am forry I shall lose a flone by thee,
Ape. Beast.
Tim. Slave.
Ape. Toad.
Tim. Rogue,Rogue,Rogue.

I am fickle of this false world, and will lose nothing
But even the meere necessities vpon's:
Then Timon presently prepare thy graue :
Lye where the light Fome of the Sea may beate
Thy graue stone dayly, make thine Epitaph,
That death in me, at others lines may laugh.
O thou sweete King-killer, and deare divorce
Twixt naturall Sunne and fire: thou bright defiler
Of Himmens purest bed, thou valiant Mars,
Thou euer, yong,fresh, loved, and delicate woer,
Whose blufh doth thaw the confecrated Snow
That ies on Dian lap,
Thou vifible God,
That fouldreft clofe Impossibilities,
And mak'th them kifi: that speake'th with erie Tongue

Enter the Banditti.

1 Where should he have this Gold? It is some poor Fragment, some slender Ort of his remainder: the meere want of Gold, and the falling from of his Friends, drove him into this Melancholy.

2 It is nois'd He hath a maffe of Treasure.

3 Let us make the affer your, if he care not for't, he will suply vs easilly: if he couderfully refuse it, how shall's get it?

2 True: for he beares it not about him:

'Tis hid.

1 Is not this hee?

All. Where?

2 'Tis his description.

3 He? I know him.

All. Save thee Timon.

Tim. Now Theeues.

All. Soldiers, not Theeues.

Tim. Both too, and womens Sonnes.

All. We are not Theeues, but men

That much do want.

Tim. Your greatest want is, you want much of meat:

Why should you want? Behold, the Earth hath Rootes: Within this Mile breake forth a hundred Springs: The Oakes beare Maft, the Briars Scarlet Heps, The bounteous Hufwife Nature, on each bush, Lays her full Meffe before you. Want? why Want?

1 We cannot liue on Grape, on Berries, Water, As Beasts, and Birds, and Filies.

Tim. Nor on the Beasts themselves, the Birds & Filies, You must eate men. Yet thankes I must you con, That you are Theeues proffest: that you worke not In hoiler flapes: For there is boundless Theefe In limited Professions. Rafcall Theeues Heere's Gold. Go, sucke the suftle blood o'th'Grape, Till the high Feauer feeth your blood to froth, And fo escape hanging. Truft not the Phyfian," His Antidotes are poyson, and he flayes Moe then you Rob: Take wealth, and liues together, Do Villaine do, since you protest to doo't. Like Workemen, Ile example you with Theeuary:

The Sunnes a Theefe, and with his great attraction Robbes the vafte Sea. The Moones an arrant Theefe, And her pale fire, the snatches from the Sunne, The Sea a Theefe, whose liquid Surge, refolues The Moone into Salt teares. The Earth'sa Theefe, That feeds and breeds by a compofure fHONE.

From gen'rall excrement : each thing's a Theefe.

The Lawes, your curbe and whip, in their rough power

Ha's vncheck'd Theefe. Love not your felues, away, Rob one another, there's more Gold, cut throates, All that you meete are Theeues: to Athens go, Breake open shoppes, nothing can you feeale But Theeues do looke it: feeale leffe, for this I gueue, And Gold confound you howfoere: Amen.

3 Has almoft charm'd me from my Profession, by per- wading me to it.

'Tis in the malice of mankinde, that he thus aduizes vs not to have vs thrive in our mystery.

2 Ile beleuee him as an Enemy, And give over my Trade.

1 Let vs first fee peace in Athens, there is no time fo miserable, but a man may be true.

Enter the Steward to Timon.

Stew. Oh you Gods!

Is you'd defpi'd and ruinous man my Lord?

Full of decay and fayling? Oh Monument And wonder of good deeds, euilly beforw'd!

What an alteration of Honor has defp't wants made? What wilder thing vpwn the earth, then Friends, Who can bring Nobleft minds, to bafer ends.

How rarely does it meete with this times guife, When man was wifiht to loye his Enemies:

Grant I may ever loue, and rather woo Thoefe that would milcheffe me, then thofe that doo. Has caught me in his eye, I will prefent my honeft grieve into him; and as my Lord, fill ferue him with my life.

My deereft Malfier.

Tim. Away: what art thou?

Stew. Have you forgot me, Sir?

Tim. Why doft aske that? I have forgot all men. Then, if thou grunt'lt, th'art a man.

I have forgot thee.

Stew. An honeft poor fervant of yours.

Tim. Then I know thee not:

I never had honeft man about me, I all I kept were Knaues, to ferue in meate to Villaines.

Stew. The Gods are witneffe,

Neu'r did poore Steward ware a truer greefe For his vnDONE Lord, then mine eyes for you.

Tim. What, doft thou wepe?

Come neerer, then I love thee Because thou art a woman, and difclaim't Flinty mankinde: whole eyes do never glee, But throw Lufet and Laughter: pittie's sleeping: Strange times y wepe with laughing, not with weeping.

Stew. I begge of you to know me, good my Lord, T'accept my greefe, and whil't this poore wealth lafts, To entertaine me as your Steward still.

Tim. Had I a Steward

So true, so lut, and now fo comfortable? It almost turns my dangerous Nature wilde. Let me behold thy face: Surely, this man Was borne of woman.

Forgue my generall, and excepte the rafheffe You perpetuall fober Gods. I do proclame One honeft man: Mitfake me not, but one:

No more I pray, and hee's a Steward.

How faire would I have hated all mankinde, And thou redeem't thy felue. But all faue thee, I fell with Curfes.

Me thinkes thou art more honeft now, then wife:

For, by oppressing and betraying mee,
Timon of Athens.

 Thou might’st have sooner got another Service: For many fo arrive at second Masters, Upon their first Lords necke. But tell me true, (For I must euer doubt, though ne’re fo sure) Is not thy kindnesse subtle, couetous, If not a Vifying kindnesse, and as rich men deale Guifs, Expeçting in returne twenty for one? Stew. No my most worthy Master, in whose brest Doubt, and suspect (as alas) are plac’d too late: You should have feared false times, when you did Feast. Suspect still comes, where an eftate is left. That which I shew, Heauen knowes, is merelie Loue, Dute, and Zeale, to your unmatcht minde; Care of your Food and Luing, and beleue it, My most Honour’d Lord, For any benefitt that points to mee, Either in hope, or preferent, I’d echange For this one wish, that you had power and benefitt To requite me, by making rich your selfe. Tim. Looke thee, ’tis fo: thou singly honest man, Heere take: the Gods out of my miferie Ha’s lent thee Treasure. Go, line rich and happy, But thus condition’d: Thou shalt build from men: Hate all, curfe all, shew Charity to none, But let the famifi flesh slide from the Bone, Ere thou releue the Begger. Glue to dogges What thou lent to men. Let Prifons swallow ’em, Debs witter ’em to nothing, be men like blasted woods, And may Diffæses lick vp their false bloods, And fo farewell, and thrice. Stew. O let me stay, and comfort you, my Master. Tim. If thou hast’t Curses Stay not: flye, whil’s thou art blest and free: Ne’re fee thou man, and let me ne’re fee thee. Exit

 Enter Poet, and Painter.

 Pain. As I tooke note of the place, it cannot be farre where he abides. Poet. What’s to be thought of him? Does So looking hold for true, That hee’s to fall of Gold? Painter. Certaine. Alciibiades reports it: Phriniça and Timandyle Had Gold of him. He likewise enrich’d Poor stragling Souliers, with great quantity. ’Tis saide, he gave vnto his Steward A mighty summe. Poet. Then this breaking of his, Ha’s beene but a Try for his Friends? Painter. Nothing else: You shall fee him a Palme in Athens againe, And flourish with the highest: Therefore, ’tis not amiss, we tender our loues To him, in this suppos’d diffire of his: It will shew honestly in vs, And is very likely, to load our purposes With what they trauaille for, If it be a luft and true report, that goes Of his huming. Poet. What have you now To present vnto him? Painter. Nothing at this time But my Visitation: onely I will promise him An excellent Peece. Poet. I must ferue him so too; Tell him of an intent that’s comming toward him.

 Painter. Good as the beft. Promising, is the verie Ayre o’tl’Time; It opens the eyes of Expectation. Performance, is euer the duller for his acte, And but in the plainer and simpler kindes of people, The deede of Saying is quites out of vfe. To Promife, is most Courtly and fashionable; Performance, is a kinde of Will or Teftament Which argues a great ficknesse in his judgement That makes it.

 Enter Timon from his Cause.

 Timon. Excellent Workman, Thou canst not paint a man so badde As is thy selfe. Poet. I am thinking What I shall say I haue promis’d for him: It must be a perforating of himself: A Satyre against the loftnesse of Prosperity, With a Difcoueries of the infinite Flatteries That follow youth and opulencie. Timon. Must thou needs Stand for a Villaine in thine owne Worke? Wilt thou whine owne faults in other men? Do so, I haue Gold for thee. Poet. Nay let’s feeke him. Then do we finne against our owne eftate, When we may profit meete, and come too late. Painter. True: When the day ferues before blacke-corner’d night; Finde what thou want’st, by free and offer’d light. Come.

 Tim. Ile meete you at the turne: What a Gods Gold, that he is worship’d In a bafer Temple, then where Swine feede? ’Tis thou that rigg’lt the Barke, and plow’ft the Fome, Setleft admired reverence in a Slaue, To thee be worship’d, and thy Saints for aye: Be crown’d with Plagues, that thee alone obay. Fit I meet them. Poet. Haile worthy Timon. Pain. Our late Noble Master. Timon. Haue I once liu’d To fee two honest men? Poet. Sir: Having often of your open Bounty tafted, Hearing you were retyr’d, your Friends falle off, Whose thankelesse Natures (O abhorred Spirts) Not all the Whippes of Heauen, are large enough, What, to you, Whose Starre-like Noblenesse gaine life and influence To their whole being? I am rapt, and cannot couer Themouftrous bulks of this Ingratitude With any fize of words. Timon. Let it go, Naked men may fee’t the better: You that are honest, by being what you are, Make them best feene, and Knowne. Pain. He, and my selfe Haue travailed in the great showre of your guifts, And sweetly felt it. Timon. I, you are honest man. Painter. We are lither come To offer you our seruice. Timon. Most honest men:

 Why
Why how shall I require you? Can you cate Roots, and drink cold water, no?

Tim. Y'are honest men, Y'haue heard that I haue Gold, I am sure you haue, speake truth, y'are honest men.

Pain. So it is said my Noble Lord, but therefore Came not my Friend, nor I.

Tim. Good honest men: Thou draw'rt a counterfett Beft in all Athens, th'art indeed the beft, Thou counterfett'rt most likely.

Pain. So, so, my Lord.

Tim. E'ne so fir as I say. And for thy fiction, Why thy Verfe swells with fluffe so fine and smooth, That thou art eu'n Natural in thine Art. But for all this (my honest Natur'd friends) I must needs say you have a little fault, Marry 'tis not monstrous in you, neither wish I You take much paines to mend.

Bob. Do we, my Lord? Tim. I, and you heare him cogge,
See him dissemble,
Know his groffe patchery, love him, feede him, Keeepe in your bosome, yet remaine affur'd That he's a made-vp-Villaine.

Pain. I know none such, my Lord.

Poe. Nor I.

Tim. Looke you, I love you well, I'l give you Gold Rid me thefe Villaines from your companies; Hang them, or flab them, drowne them in a draught, Confound them by some courfe, and come to me, I'l give you Gold enough.

Bob. Name them my Lord, let's know them.

Tim. You that way, and you this: But two in Company: Each man a part, all fingle, and alone, Yet an arch Villaine keeps him company: If where thou art, two Villaines shall not be, Come not neere him, if thou would'nt not recide But where one Villaine is, then him abandon. Hence, packe, there's Gold, you came for Gold ye flaues: You have worke for me; there's payment, hence, You are an Alcumiift, make Gold of that:

Out Rafcall dogges.

Enter Steward, and two Senators.

Stew. It is vain that you would speake with Timon: For he is fet so onely to himselfe, That nothing but himselfe, which looks like man, Is friendly with him.

1 Sen. Bring vs to his Caeue. It is our part and promife to th'Athenians To speake with Timon.

2 Sen. At all times alike Men are not still the fame: twas Time and Greefes

That fram'd him thus. Time with his fairer hand, Offering the Fortunes of his former dayes, The former man may make him: bring vs to him And chanc'd it as it may.

Stew. Here is his Caeue: Peace and content be here. Lord Timon, Timon, Look out, and speake to Friends: Th'Athenians By two of their most reverend Senate greet thee: Speake to them Noble Timon.

Enter Timon out of his Caeue.

Tim. Thou Sunne that comforts burne, I Speake and be hang'd: For each true word, a bliffer, and each falfe Be as a Cantherizing to the root o'th Tongue, Confuming it with speaking.

Worthy Timon.

Tim. Of none but such as you, And you of Timon.

1 The Senators of Athens, greet thee Timon. Timon. I thankes them, And would send them backe the plague, Could I but catch it for them.

O forget What we are forry for our felues in thee: The Senators, with one confent of loue, Intreate thee backe to Athens, who haue thought On speciall Dignities, which vacant yse For thy best vs, and wearing.

2 They confesse Toward thee, forgetfulnesse too generall groffe; Which now the publike Body, which doth fildome Play the re-canter, feeling in it felfe A lacke of Timons ayde, hath fince withall Of it owne fall, refraining ayde to Timon, And fend forth vs, to make their forrowed render, Together, with a recompence more fruitfull Then their offence can weigh downe by the Dramme, I eu'n fuch heapes and summes of Loue and Wealth, As shal to thee blot out, what wronges were theirs, And write in thee the figures of their loue, Euer to read them thine.

Tim. You witch me in it; Surprize me to the very brinke of teares; Lend me a Foole's heart, and a womans eyes, And Ile beward thee these comforts, worthy Senators. Therefore fo pleafe thee to returne with us, And of our Athens, thine and ours to take The Captainship, thou shalt be met with thankes, Allowed with abolute power, and th'good name Liewe with Authoritie: fo foone we shall drive backe Of Alcibiades th'approches wild, Who like a Bore too fugaue, doth root vp His Countries peace.

2 And fakes his threatening Sword Against the walle of Athens.

1 Therefore Timon.

Tim. Well fir, I will: therefore I will fir thus: If Alcibiades kill my Crountrymen, Let Alcibiades know this of Timon, That Timon cares not. But if he fakke faire Athens, And take our goodly aged men by'th'Beards, Giving our holy Virgins to the thaine Of contumelious, beaftly, mad-brain'd ware: Then let him know, and tell him Timon speaks it,
In pity of our aged, and our youth,
I cannot choose but tell him that I care not,
And let him tak’t at worst: For their Knives care not,
While you have threats to answer. For my selfe,
There’s not a whistle, in th’vnruly Campe,
But I do prize it at my lour, before
The reuerends Throat in Athens. So I leave you
To the protection of the prosperous Gods,
As Theeues to Keepers.

Sew. Stay not, all’s in vaine.

Tim. Why I was writing of my Epitaph,
It will be seene to morrow. My long lickniffe
Of Health, and Louing, now begins to mend,
And nothing brings me all things. Go, live still,
Be Alcibiades your plague; you his,
And last so long enough.

1 We speake in vaine.

Tim. But yet I loue my Country, and am not
One that rejoices in the common warcke,
As common bruute doth put it.

1 That’s well spake.

Tim. Command me to my loving Countreymen
In their applauding gates.

Tim. Command me to them,
And tell them, that to ease them of their griefes,
Their fears of Hottile strokes, their Aches losses,
Their pangs of Loue, with other incident throwes
That Natures fragile Vessell doth sustaine
In lifes uncertaine voyage, I will some kindnes do them,
Ile teach them to prevent wilde Alcibiades wrath.

I like this well, he will returne againe.

Tim. I haue a Tree which growes heere in my Clofe,
That mine owne vie incites me to cut downe,
And shortly mutt I tell it. Tell my Friends,
Tell Athens, in the sequence of degree,
From high to low throughout, that who so please
To stop Affliction, let him take his hafe;
Come hither ere my Tree hath felt the Axe,
And hang himselfe. I pray you do my greeting.

Sew. Trouble him no further, thus you shall finde him.

Tim. Come not to me againe, but fay to Athens,
Timon hath made his euerlaiing Mansion
Vpon the Beached Verge of the salt Flood,
Who once a day with his embossed Froth
The turbulent Surge shall cower; thither come,
And let my grave-flone be your Oracle:
Lippes, let foure words go by, and Language end:
What is amiffe, Plague and Infecion madd
Graues onely be men workes, and Death their gaine;
Sunne, hide thy Beames, Timon hath done his Raigne.

Exit Timon.

1 His discontentes are vnremoueably coupled to Nature.
2 Our hope in him is dead: let vs returne,
And straine what other meanes is left unto vs
In our deere perill.
1 It requires swift foot.

Enter two other Senators, with a Messenger.

1 Thou haft painfully discouer’d: are his Files
As full as thy report?

Msf. I haue spoke the leaft.
Besides his expedition promises present approach.
2 We stand much hazard, if they bring not Timon.
Msf. I met a Currier, one mine ancient Friend,
Whom though in generall part we were opprest,
Yet our old lour made a particular force,
And made vs speake like Friends. This man was riding
From Alcibiades to Timons Cave,
With Letters of intreaty, which imported
His Fellowship I th’caufe against your City,
In part for his fake mould.

Enter the other Senators.
1 Heere come our Brothers.
3 No talke of Timon, nothing of him expect,
The Enemies Drumme is heard, and fearefull scouring
Doth choake the ayre with dust: In, and prepare,
Ours is the fall I feare, our Foes the Snare.

Enter a Soldier in the Woods seeking Timon.
Sol. By all description this shoulde be the place.
Whose heere? Speake haue. No answre? What is this?
Timon is dead, who hath out-stretcht his span,
Some Beate read this: There do’s not liue a Man,
Dead sure, and this his Graue, what’s on this Tomb,
I cannot read: the CharaCter Ie take with wax,
Our Captaine hath in every Figure skill:
An ag’d Interpreter, though yong in days:
Before proud Athens hee’s fet downe by this,
Whose fall the marke of his Ambition is.

Exit.

Trumpets sound. Enter Alcibiades with his Powers before Athens.

Alc. Sound to this Coward, and lasciuious Towne,
Our terrible approach.

Sounds a Parly.
The Senators appear upon the wall.
Till now you haue gone on, and fill’d the time
With all Licentious measure, making your wille
The scope of Juflice. Till now, my felle and fuch
As flept within the shadow of your power
Hauy wander’d with our trauerft Armes, and breath’d
Our sufferrance vainly: Now the time is flufh,
When crouching Marrow in the bearer strong
Cries (of it felle) no more: Now breathlesse wrong,
Shall fit and pant in your great Chaires of eafe,
And purifie Infolence shall breake his winde
With feare and horrid flight.

1 Sen. Noble, and young:
When thy first greeues were but a meere conceit,
Ere thou had’t power, or we had caufe of feare,
We fent to thee, to give thy rages Balm,
To wipe out your Ingratitude, with Loues
Above their quantitie.
2 So did we woe
Transformed Timon, to our Citties lour
By humble Meffage, and by promit meanes:
We were not all vnkinde, nor all defence
The common stroke of warre.
1 Thofe walles of ours,
Were not erected by their hands, from whom
You haue receu’d your greeues: Nor are they fuch,
That these great Towres, Trophees, & Schools fold fall
For private faults in them.
2 Nor are they living

Who
Timon of Athens.

Who were the motives that you first went out,
(Shame that they wanted, cunning in excess)
Hath broke their hearts. March, Noble Lord,
Into our City with thy Banners spread,
By decimation and a tyed death;
If thy Reuenge hunger for that Food
Which Nature loathes, take thou the deflin'd tenth,
And by the hazard of the spotted dye,
Let dye the spotted.

1 All have not offended:
For those that were, it is not square to take
On those that are, Reuenge: Crimes, like Lands
Are not inherited, then dear Countryman,
Bring in thy ranks, but leave without thy rage,
Spare thy Athenian Cradle, and those Kin
Which in the bluster of thy wrath must fall
With those that have offended, like a Shepheard,
Approach the Fold, and cull th'infected forth,
But kill not altogether.

2 What thou wilt,
Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile,
Then hew too', with thy Sword.

1 Set but thy foot
Against our rampyr'd gates, and they shall ope:
So thou wilt fend thy gentle heart before,
To say thou not enter Friendly.

2 Throw thy Gloue,
Or any Token of thine Honour else,
That thou wilt vie the wars as thy redresse,
And not as our Confusion: All thy Powers
Shall make their harbour in our Towne, till wee
Have feal'd thy full desire.

Alc. Then there's my Gloue,
Defend and open your uncharged Ports.

Those Enemies of Timon's, and mine owne
Whom you your felues shall set out for reprofe,
Fall and no more; and to atone your feares
With my more Noble meaning, not a man
Shall paffe his quarter, or offend the flame
Of Regular Iustice in your Citties bounds,
But shall be remedied to your publique Lawes
At heaviest answer.

Both. 'Tis most Nobly spoken.
Alc. Descend, and keep thee words.
Enter a Messenger.

Mes. My Noble Generall, Timon is dead,
Entomb'd vpon the very hemme o'th'Sea,
And on his Grauestone, this Inscription which
With wax I brought away: whose soft Impression
Interprets for my poore ignorance.

Alcibiades reads the Epitaph.
Here lies a wretched Course, by wretched Soul bereft,
Seek not my names: A Plague consume you, wicked Cattifs left:
Here lay I Timon, who alone, all living men did hate,
Passe by, and curse thy fill, but passe and say not here thy gate.
These well express in thee thy latter spirits:
Though thou abhor'dst in vs our humane griefes,
Scorn'dst our Braines flow, and those our droplets, which
From niggard Nature fall; yet Rich Conceit
Taught thee to make vast Neptune weep for aye
On thy low Graue, on faults forgiuen. Dead
Is Noble Timon, of whose Memorie
Hereafter more. Bring me into your Cittie,
And I will vie the Oiue, with my Sword:
Make war breed peace; make peace flint war,make each
Prescribe to other, as each others Leach.
Let our Drummes strike.

Ence: home you idle Creatures, get you home; Is this a Holiday? What, know you not (Being Mechanicall) you ought not walke Upon a labouring day, without the Signe Of your Profession? Speake, what Trade art thou? Cob. Why Sir, a Carpenter. Mur. Where is thy Leather Apron, and thy Rule? What dost thou with thy best Apparrell on? You sir, what Trade are you? Cobl. Truely Sir, in respect of a fine Workman, I am but as you would say, a Cobler. Mur. But what Trade art thou? Anfwere me diretly. Cob. A Trade Sir, that I hope I may vfe, with a safe Confcience, which is indeed Sir, a Mender of bad soules. Fla. What Trade thou knaue? Thou naughty knaue, what Trade? Cob. Nay I beseech you Sir, be not out with me: yet if you be out Sir, I can mend you. Mur. What mean fatisfoue by that? Mend mee, thou fawcy Fellow? Cob. Why sir, Cobble you. Fla. Thou art a Cobler, art thou? Cob. Truly Sir, all that I live by, is with the Aule: I meddle with no Tradesmans matters, nor womens matters; but withal I am indeed Sir, a Surgeon to old shoes; when they are in great danger, I recouer them. As proper men as euer trod vpon Neats Leather, have gone vp on my handy-worke. Fla. But wherefore art not in thy Shop to day? Why do'th thou lead thee men about the streets? Cob. Truly Sir, to wear out their shoes, to get my felfe into more worke. But indeede Sir, we make Holy-day to fee Cæsar, and to rejoice in his Triumph. Mur. Wherefore rejoicye? What Conquest brings he home? What Tributaries follow him to Rome, To grace in Captive bonds his Chariot Wheels? You Blockes, you ftones, you worfe then fenflefe things: O you hard hearts, you cruell men of Rome, Knew you not Pompey many a time and oft? Have you clim'd vp to Walles and Battlements, To Torews and Windows? Yea, to Chimney tops, Your Infants in your Armes, and there have fate The long day, with patient expectation,

To fee great Pompey passe the streets of Rome: And when you saw his Chariot but appeare, Haue you not made an Vniuerfal houre, That Tyber trembled vnderneath her bankes To hear the replication of your sounds, Made in her Concaue Shores? And do you now put on your beft attyre? And do you now cull out a Holyday? And do you now fhew Flowers in his way, That comes in Triumph ouer Pompeys blood? Be gone, Runne to your houfes, fall vpon your knees, Pray to the Gods to intermit the plague That needs must light on this Ingratitude. Fla. Go, go, good Countrymen, and for this fault Assemble all the poore men of your fort; Draw them to Tyber bankes, and weep your teares Into the Channell, till the loweft fireame Do kiffe the moft exalted Shores of all. Exeunt all the Commoners.

See where their baseft mettle be not mou'd, The vanith tongue-tyed in their guiltinefse Go you downe that way towards the Capitol, This way will I: Difrobe the Images, If you do finde them deckt with Ceremonies. Mur. May we do fo? You know it is the Feaft of Lupercall. Fla. It is no matter, let no Images Be hung with Cæfars Trophees: Ile about, And drue away the Vulfur from the streets; So do you too, where you perceiue them thicke. These growing Feathers, pluckt from Cæfars wing, Will make him flye an ordinary pitch, Who else would foare above the view of men, And keepe vs all in fereul feareneffe. Exeunt

The Tragedie of Julius Cæsar.

And since you know, you cannot see your selfe.
So well as by Reflection; I your Glafe,
Will modestly discover to your selfe.
That of your selfe, which you yet know not of.
And be not enlazed on me, gentle Brutus:
Were I a common Laughter, or did you.
To fale with ordinary Oathes my loue,
To every new Proteffer : if you know,
That I do fawne on men, and hugge them hard,
And after scandal them: Or if you know,
That I professe my felfe in Banquetting.
To all the Rout, then hold me dangerous.

Flourish, and Stout.

Brutus. What means this Showting?
I do feare, the People choose Cæsar
For their King.

Cæfis. I, do you feare it?
Then muft I thinke you would not haue it fo.

Brutus. I would not Cæfis, yet I loue him well:
But wherefore do you hold me heere fo long?
What is it, that you would impart to me?
If it be ought toward the generall good,
Set Honor in one eye, and Death in the other,
And I will louke on both indifferently:
For let the Gods fo fped mee, as I loue
The name of Honor, more then I feare death.

Caffis. I know that vertue to be in you Brutus,
As well as I do know your outward favour.
Well, Honor is the subiect of my Story:
I cannot tell, what you and other men
Thinke of this life: But for my single felfe,
I had as liefe not be, as liue to be.
In awe of such a Thing, as I my felfe.
I was borne free as Cæsar, fo were you,
We both haue fed as well, and we can both
Endure the Winters cold, as well as hee.
For once, upon a Rawe and Gullie day,
The troubled Tyber, chafing with her Shores,
Cæfar faide to me, Darft thou Cæfar now
Leape in with me into this heavy Flood,
And swim to yonder Point? From the word,
Accourted as I was, I plunged in,
And bad him follow: fo indeed he did.
The Torrent roar’d, and we did buffet it
With lufy Sinewes, throwing it aside,
And steming it with hearts of Controverfie.
But ere we could arriue the Point propos’d,
Cæfar criе, Helpe me Cæfis, or I finke.
I as Eneas, our great Ancestor,
Did from the Flames of Troy, upon his shoulder
The old Amblyes beare] fo, from the waues of Tyber.
Did I the tyred Cæfar: And this Man,
Is now become a God, and Cæfis is
A wretched Creature, and must bend his body,
If Cæfar carelessly but nod on him.
He had a Feauer when he was in Spaine,
And when the Fit was on him, I did marke
How he did shake: Tis true, this God did shake,
His Coward lippes did from their colour flye,
And that fame Eye, whose bend doth awe the World,
Did loue his Lufbre: I did heare him groane:
I, and that Tongue of his, that bad the Romans
Marke him, and write his Speeches in their Bookes,
Alas, it cried, Glue me some drinke Titinius,
As a sike Girl : Ye Gods, it doth amaze me,
A man of such a feeble temper should
So get the start of the Maileflickke world,
And beare the Palme alone.

Brutus. Another generall shout ?
I do beleue, that thefe applauses are
For some new Honors, that are heap'd on Cæsar.
Cæfi. Why man, he doth befride the narrow world
Like a Colofius, and we petty men
Walse vnder his huge legges, and peep about
To finde our felues dishonourable Graues.

Ant. As thou doft Antony : he heares no Muficke ;
Seldom he smiles, and smiles in fuch a fort
As if he mock'd himfelfe, and scorn'd his spirit
That could be mou'd to smile at any thing.
Such men as he, be neuer at hearts eafe,
Whiles they behold a greater then themfelves,
And therefore are they very dangeroues.
I rather tell thee what is to be fear'd,
Then what I feare : for always I am Cæsar.
Come on my right hand, for this eare is deafe,
And tell me truely, what thou think'st of him.

Cæfi. You pull'd me by the cloake, what you speake with me ?

Brut. I Caius, tell vs what hath chanc'd to day
That Cæsar lookes fo fad.

Cæfi. Why you were with him, were you not ?

Brut. I should not then aske Caius what had chanc'd.

Cæfi. Why there was a Crowne offer'd him ; & being offer'd him, he put it by with the backe of his hand thus,
and then the people fell a fouting.

Brut. What was the fecond noyfe for ?

Cæfi. They fhou'd thrice : what was the laft cry for ?

Brut. Why for that too.

Cæfi. Was the Crowne offer'd him thrice ?

Cæfi. I marry was't, and hee put it by thrice, euerie time gentler then other ; and at euerie putting by, mine honneft Neighbours fhouted.

Cæfi. Who offer'd him the Crowne ?

Cæfi. Why Antony.

Brut. Tell vs the manner of it, gentle Caius.

Caius. I can as well bee hang'd as tell the manner of it: It was meere Foolerie, I did not marke it. I fawe

Mark Antony offer him a Crowne, yet 'twas not a Crowne neyther, 'twas one of thefe Coronets : and as I told you, hee put it by once : but for all that, to my thinkings, he would faine haue had it. Then hee offer'd it to him againe : then hee put it by againe : but to my thinking, he was very loath to lay his fingers off it. And then he offer'd it the third time ; hee put it the third time by,
and ftil as hee refus'd it, the rabbemble howted, and clap'd their chopt hands, and threw uppe their sweate Night-capes, and vterted fuch a deale of flinking breath, becaufe Cæsar refus'd the Crowne, that it had (almoft) choak'd Cæsar: for hee fwooned, and fell downe at it : And for mine owne part, I durft not laugh, for feare of opening my Lippes, and receyuing the bad Ayre.

Enter Cæfar and his Traine.
The Tragedie of Julius Caesar.

Cæs. But sooth I pray you, what, did Cæsar swound? Cæs. He fell downe in the Market-place, and foam'd at mouth, and was speechleſs. Brut. "Tis very like he hath the Falling fickneſſe. Cæs. No, Cæsar hath it not: but you, and I, And honest Cassius, we have the Falling fickneſſe. Cæs. I know not what you meane by that, but I am sure Cæsar fell downe. If the tag-rage people did not clap him, and hisſe him, according as he pleas'd, and dis-pleas'd them, as they vſe to doe the Players in the Theatre, I am no true man. Brut. What said he, when he came unto himselfe? Cæs. Marry, before he fell downe, when he perceiued the common Hear'd was glad he refus'd the Crowne, he pluckt me ope his Doublet, and offer'd them his Throat to cut: and I had beene a man of any Occupation, if I would not have taken him at a word; I would I might goe to Hell among the Rogues, and so hee fell. When he came to himselfe againe, hee said, If hee had done, or faid any thing amiffe, he defir'd their Worship to think it was his inſpirite. Three or foure Wenches where I stood, cried, Alaffe good Soule, and forgeue him with all their hearts: But there's no heed to be taken of them; if Cæsar had stab'd their Mothers, they would have done no leſſe. Brut. And after that, he came thus fad away. Cæs. I. Cæf. Did Cicero fay any thing? Cæf. I, he spoke Grecke. Cæf. To what effect? Cæf. Nay, and I tell you that, Ile ne're looke you i' th' face againe. But thoſe that vnderſtood him, smil'd at one another, and ſhooke their heads: but for mine owne part, it was Grecke to me. I could tell you more newes too: Murrellius and Flavius, for pulling Scarffes off Cæfars Images, are put to silence. Fare you well. There was more Foolerie yet, if I could remem-ber it.

Cæf. Will you suppe with me to Night, Cassius? Cæs. No, I am promis'd forth. Cæf. Will you Dine with me to morrow? Cæs. Yf I be alie, and your minde hold, and your Dinner worth the eating. Cæf. Good, I will expect you. Cæs. Doe fo: farewell both. Exit. Brut. What a blunt fellow is this gowne to be? He was quick Mettle, when he went to Schoole. Cæf. So is he now, in execution Of any bold, or Noble Enterprise, How-euer he puts on this tardie forme: This Rudereffe is a Sawce to his good Wit, Which giveth men homackle to difguſt his words With better Appetite. Brut. And fo it is: For this time I will leave you: To morrow, if you pleafe to speake with me, I will come home to you: or if you will, Come home to me, and I will wait for you. Cæf. I will doe fo: till then, thinke of the World. Exit Brutus.

If I were Brutus now, and he were Cæfius, He should not humor me. I will this Night, In euerau Hands, in at his Wayes throw, As if they came from euerau Citizens, Writings, all tending to the great opinion That Rome holds of his Name: wherein obscurely Cæfars Ambition shall be glanced at. And after this, let Cæfar feast him fure, For wee will shake him, or worfe dayes endure. Exit.

Thunder, and Lightning. Enter Cassius, and Cicero.

Circ. Good even, Cæsarius: brought you Cæsar home? Why are you breathleſſe, and why fcare you fo? Cass. Are not you mou'd, when all the fway of Earth Shakes, like a thing vnfirm? O Cicerus, I haue feene Temprefs, when the fcowling Winds Haue ri'd the knottie Oakes, and I haue feene Th'ambitious Ocean {w}ell, and rage, and foame, To be exaltd with the threatening Clouds: But neuer till to Night, neuer till now, Did I goe through a Temptft-dropping-fire. Byther there is a Ciuffl ifire in Heauen, Or elfe the World, too fawcie with the Gods, Incenfes them to fend deftruction.

Cir. Why, faw you any thing more wonderful? Cas. A common flay, you know him well by light, Held vp his left Hand, which did flame and burne Like twentie Torches, {f}o'd; and yet his Hand, Not fenſible of fire, remain'd vnforc'd. Besides, I ha'nt fince put vp my Sword, Against the Capitol I met a Lyon, Who glaz'd vpon me, and went furly by, Without annoying me. And there were dawne Vpon a heape, a hundred galſy Women, Transformed with their feare, who fware, they faw Men, all in fire, walke vp and downe the freetes. And yesterda, the Bird of Night did fit, Even at Noon-price, vpon the Market place, Howling, and fhrkeing. When thefe Prodigies Doe fo coniouſly meet, let not men fay, These are their Reafons, they are Naturall: For I beleue, they are portentous things Vnto the Clymate, that they point vpon.

Cir. Indeed, it is a strange-dispoſed time: But men may contrue things after their fashion, Cleanse from the purpofe of the things themſelves. Comes Cæzar to the Capitol to morrow? Cas. He doth: for he did bid Antonio Send word to you, he would be there to morrow. Cir. Good-night then, Cassius: This difturbed Sky is not to walke in. Cass. Farewell Cicerus. Exit Cicero.

Enter Cæfarius.

The Tragedie of Julius Caesar.

For my part, I have walk'd about the streets, Submitting me vnto the perillous Night; And thus unbraced, Cask., as you see, Haue bar'd my Bofome to the Thunder-stone: And when the crofe blew Lightening seem'd to open The Breit of Heauen, I did preuent my selue Even in the aynne, and very flashe of it. (uens? Cask. But wherefore did you so much tempt the Hea-It is the part of men, to feare and tremble, When the moft mightie Gods, by tokens send Such dreadfull Heraulds, to aftenish vs.

Caffi. You are dull, Cask. And though sparks of Life, that should be in a Roman, You doe want, or else you vfe not. You looke pale, and gaze, and put on feare, And caft your selue in wonder, To see the strange impatience of the Heauens: But if you would consider the true caufe, Why all these Fires, why all these gliding Ghosts, Why Birds and Beasts, from qualitie and kinde, Why Old men, Fools, and Children calculate, Why all these things change from their Ordinance, Their Natures, and pre-formed Faculties, To monstrous qualitie; why you shall finde, That Heauen hath infused them with these Spirits, To make them Instruments of feare, and warning, Vnto some monstrous State.

Now could I (Cask) name to thee a man, Most like this dreadfull Night, That Thunders, Lightens, opens Graues, and roares, As doth the Lyon in the Capitol: A man no mightier then thy selue, or me, In perfonall action; yet prodigious groane, And fearfull, as these strange eruptions are. Cask. 'Tis Caesar that you meanes:

Is it not, Caffius?

Caffi. Let it be who it is: for Romans now Haue Thewes, and Limbes, like to their Anccestors; But woe the while, our Fathers minde are dead, And we are gouern'd with our Mothers spirits, Our yoke, and sufferysh, fhe as Womanish. Cask. Indeed, they say, the Senators to morrow Meane to establishe Caius as a King: And he shall weare his Crowne by Sea, and Land, In every place, faue here in Italy.

Caffi. I know where I will weare this Dagger then; Caffius from Bondage will deliver Caius:

Therein, yee Gods, you make the weake most strong; Therein, yee Gods, you Tyrants doe defeat. Nor Stonie Tower, nor Walls of beaten Brasse, Nor ayre-leffe Dungeon, nor ftrong Linke of Iron, Can be retentive to the strength of spirit: But life being weare of these worldly Barres, Neuer lacks power to difmiff it felfe. If I know this, know all the World besides, That part of Tyrannic that I doe beeare, I can flake off at pleasure. Thunder still.

Cask. So can I:

So every Bond-man in his owne hand bares The power to cancel his Captivitie. Caffi. And why should Caius be a Tyrant then?

Poore man, I know he would not be a Wolfe, But that he sees the Romans are but Sheepe: He were no Lyon, were not Romans Hinde. Tho' that with hafe will make a mighty fire, Begin it with weake Strawes. What trash is Rome?
Enter Brutus in his Orchard.

Brut. What Lucius, ho? I cannot, by the progress of the Morn, Glue gueffe how neere to day.—Lucius, I say? I would it were my fault to sleepe so soundly. When Lucius, when? awake, I say: what Lucius? Enter Lucius.

Brut. It must be by his death; and for my part, I know no pernonall caufe, to pinne at him, But for the general, He would be crown'd: How that might change his nature, there's the question? It is the bright day, that brings forth the Adder, And that causes warie walking: Crowne him that, And then I grant we put a Sting in him, That at his will he may doe danger with. Th'abufe of Greatnede, is, when it dis-apoynes Remorse from Power: And to speake truth of Caesar, I have not knowne, when his Affections sway'd More then his Reafon. But 'tis a common proofe, That Lowlynesse is young Ambitions Ladder, Whereto the Climber vpward turns his Face: But when he once attaines the vmpost Round, He then vnto the Ladder turns his Backe, Lookes in the Clouds,formeing the bafe degrees By which he did attend: so Caesar may ; Then leaft he may, preuent. And since the Quarrell Will bear no colour, for the thing he is, Fashion it thus: that what he is, augmented, Would runne to thee, and these extremeties: And therefore think him as a Serpents egge, Which hatch'd, would as his kinde grow milkieious; And kill him in the shell.

Enter Lucius.

Luc. The Taper burneth in your Clofet, Sir: Searching the Window for a Flitt, I found This Paper, thus feal'd vp, and I am sure It did not lyee there when I went to Bed. Gues him the Letter.

Brut. Get you to Bed againe, it is not day: Is not to morrow (Boy) the fritf of March? Luc. I know not, Sir. Brut. Looke in the Calender, and bring me word. Luc. I will, Sir. Exit.

Brut. The exhalations, whizzing in the ayre, Glue so much light, that I may reade by them. Opens the Letter, and reads.

'Brutus thou sleepe'st? awake, and see thy selfe: Shall Rome, &c. speake, strike, redresse. Brutus, thou sleepe'st awake: awake. Such infigations haue beene often dropt, Where I haue toke them vp: Shall Rome, &c. Thus muft I piece it out: Shall Rome fland under one mans aye? What Rome? My Ancestors did from the freeters of Rome The Tarquin drive, when he was call'd a King. Speake, strike, redresse. Am I entreated

To speake, and strike? O Rome, I make thee promis, If the redresse will follow, thou receiueft Thy full Petition at the hand of Brutus.

Enter Lucius.

Luc. Sir, March is waited fiftenee dayes. Knocke within.

Brut. 'Tis good. Go to the Gate, fome body knockes: Since Caffius firft did whet me against Caesar, I have not flept. Betweene the acning of a dreadfull thing, And the firft motion, all the Interim is Like a Phantaffme, or a hideous Dreame: The Genius, and the mortall Infruments Are then in counsell; and the fate of a man, Like to a little Kingdom, suffers then The nature of an Insurrection.

Enter Lucius.

Luc. Sir, 'tis your brother Caffius at the Doore, Who doth desire to fee you.

Brut. Is he alone? Luc. No, Sir, there are moe with him. Brut. Doe you know them? Luc. No, Sir, their Hats are pluckt about their Eares, And halfe their Faces buried in their Cloakes, That by no meanes I may discover them, By any mark of favour. Brut. Let'em enter: They are the Facion. O Conspiracie, Sham'ft thou to shew thy dangrous Brow by Night, When euills are moft free? O then, by day Where wilt thou finde a Cauerne darcke enough, To maske thy, monftrous Vifage? Seek none Conspiracie, Hide it in Smiles, and Affabilitie: For if thou path thy natiaue faimblance on, Not Erebus it felde were dimme enough, To hide thee from preuetion.

Enter the Conspirators, Caffius, Cask, Decius, Cinna, Metellus, and Trebonius.

Caff. I thynke we are too bold vpon your Reft: Good morrow Brutus, doe we trouble you? Brut. I haue beene vp this howre, awake all Night: Know I thefe men, that come along with you? Caff. Yes, euery man of them: and no man here But honors you: and euery one doth wish, You had but that opinion of your felfe, Which euery Noble Roman beares of you. This is Trebonius.

Brut. He is welcome hither. Caff. This, Decius Brutus. Brut. He is welcome too. Caff. This, Cask; this, Cinna; and this, Metellus. Cymb. Brut. They are all welcome. What watchfull Cares doe interpofe themselues Betwixt your Eyes, and Night?

Caff. Shall I entreat a word? They whisper. Decius. Here eyes the Eaft: doth not the Day breake here? Cask. No. Cin. O, pardon, Sir, it doth; and you grey Lines, That fret the Clouds, are Messengers of Day. Cask. You shal confesse, that you are both decei'd: Heere, as I point my Sword, the Sunne arises, Which is a great way growing on the South,
The Tragedie of Julius Caesar.

Weighing the youthfull Season of the yeares. Some two moneths hence, wp higher toward the North He first presents his fire, and the high East Stands as the Capitoll, directly here.
Bru. Gie me your hands all ouer, one by one. Cæf. And let vs sweare our Resolution.
Bru. No, not an Oath: if not the Face of men, The sufferance of our Soules, the times Abufe; If these be Motives weake, breake off betimes, And every man hence, to his idle bed: So let high-fighted-Tyranny range on, Till each man drop by Lottery. But if these (As I am sure they do) beare fire enough To kindle Cowards, and to Steele with valour The melting Spirits of women. Then Countrymen, What neede we any furrer, but our owne caufe, To pricke vs to redrefse? What other Bond, Then secret Romans, that haue fpoke the word, And will not palter? And what other Oath, Then Honesty to Honesty ingag'd, That this shall be, or we will fall for it. Sweene Priests and Cowards, and men Cauleous Old feeble Carrians, and fuch suffering Soules That welcome wrongs: Vnto bad caufes, sweare Such Creatures as men doubt; but do not flaine The even vertue of our Enterprise, Nor th'infuppreflue Mettle of our Spirits, To thinke, that or our Caufe, our Performance Did neede an Oath. When every drop of blood That every Roman bears, and Nobly bears Is guilty of a feueller Baffardie, If he do breake the smalllef: Particle Of any promife that hath past from him. Cæf. But what of Cicero? Shall we found him? I think he will fland very strong with vs.
Caft. Let vs not leave him out.
Cyn. No, by no meanes.
Mette. O let vs haue him, for his Siluer haires Will purchase vs a good opinion: And buy mens voyces, to commend our deeds: It shall prove, his Judgement do'd our hands, Our youths, and wildeneffe, shall no wht appeare, But all be buried in his Gravitty.
Bru. O name him not; let vs not breake with him, For he will neuver follow any thing That other men begin.
Cæf. Then leave him out.
Caft. Indeed, he is not fit.
Decius. Shall no man elfe be toucht, but onely Cæsar? Cæf. Decius well vrg'd: I thinke it is not meet, Marky Antony, fo well belou'd of Cæfar, Should out-liue Cæfar, we shall finde of him A fhrew'd Contriver. And you know, his meanes If he improuce them, may well flretch fo farre As to annoy vs all: which to preuent, Let Antony and Cæfar fall together.
Bru. Our coufe will fee too bloody, Caius Caius, To cut the Head off, and then hacke the Limbes: Like Wrath in death, and Enuy afterwards: For Antony, is but a Limbe of Cæsar.
Let's be Sacrificers, but not Butchers Caius: We all fland vp againft the fpirit of Cæfar, And in the Spirit of men, there is no blood: O that we then could come by Cæfars Spirit, And not difmember Cæfar! But (alas) Cæfar muft bleed for it. And gentle Friends,
Let's kill him Boldly, but not Wrathfully: Let's curse him, as a Diuell, for the Gods, Not hew him as a Caraffe fit for Hounds; And let our Hearts, as subtle Mafers do, Stirre wp their Servants to an acte of Rage, And after feeme to chide 'em. This fhall make Our purpose Neeceffary, and not Emious. Which fo appearing to the common eyes, We fhall be call'd Purgers, not Murderers. And for Mark Antony, thinke not of him: For he can do no more then Cæfars Arme, When Cæfar head is off.
Cæf. Yet I feare him, For in the ingrafted loue he bears to Cæfar.
Bru. Alas,good Caius, do not thinke of him: If he loue Cæfar, all that he can do Is to himfelfe; take thought, and dye for Cæfar, And that were much he should: for he is gien To sports, to wildeneffe, and much company.
Trebl. There is no feare in him; let him not dye, For he will blie, and laugh at this heereafter.
Clocke strikes.
Bru. Peace, count the Clocke.
Cæf. The Clocke hath fricke three.
Trebl. 'Tis time to part.
Caff. But it is doubtfull yet, Whether Cæfar will come forth to day, or no: For he is Superitious growne of late, Quite from the maine Opinion he held once, Of Fantasie, of Dreames, and Ceremonies: It may be, theye apperant Prodiges, The vnaccustom'd Terror of this night, And the perwifion of his Augurer, May hold him from the Capitoll to day.
Decius. Neuer feare that: If he be fo resolvd, I can ore-fway him: For he loues to heare, That Vnicornes may be betray'd with Trees, And Beares with Glaffes, Elephants with Holes, Lyons with Toyes, and men with Flatterers. But, when I tell him, he hates Flatterers, He fayes, he does; being then moft flattered. Let me worke: For I can gie his humour the true bent; And I will bring him to the Capitoll.
Cæf. Nay, we will all of vs, be there to fetch him.
Bru. By the eighte hour, is that the vtermoft?
Cyn. Be that the vtermoft, and faile not then.
Met. Caius Ligarius doth beare Cæfar hard, Who rated him for speaking well of Pompey; I wonder none of you have thought of him.
Bru. Now good Metellus go along by him: He loues me well, and I haue gien him Resons, Send him but righte, and Ie faction him.
Cæf. The morning comes vpon's: Wec'll leave you Bruttus, And Friends difperfe your felues; but all remember What you haue said, and shew your felues true Romans.
Bru. Good Gentlemen, looke fresh and merrily, Let not our lookes put on our purpofes, But beare it as our Roman Actors do, With vnty'd Spirits, and formal Confiance, And fo good morrow to you every one.
Exeunt.
Manet Brutus.
Boy : Lucius : Faint alleepe! It is no matter, Enjoy the hone-heauy-Dew of Slumber: Thou haft no Figures, nor no Fantasie,
Which busy care draws, in the braines of men;
Therefore thou slept'st, as I found.

Enter Portia.

Por. Brutus, my Lord,

Bru. Portia: What mean ye? wherfore rise you now?

It is not for your health, thus to commit
Your weake condition, to the raw cold morning.

Por. Nor for yours neither. Y'haue vngently Brutus
Stole from my bed: and yeternight at Supper
You sodainly arose, and walk'd about,
Musing, and fighting, with your armes a-croffe:
And when I ask'd you what the matter was,
You flar'd upon me, with vngentle looks.
I vrg'd you further, then you scratch'd your head,
And too impatiently flampt with your foote:
Yet I infisted, yet you answer'd not,
But with an angry wafter of your hand
Gaue signe for me to leave you: So I did,
Fearing to strengthen that impatient
Which seem'd too much inkindled; and withall,
Hoping it was but an effect of Humor,
Which sometime hath his howre with every man.
It will not let you eate, nor talke, nor sleepe;
And could it worke so much vpon your shape,
As it hath much preuay'd on your Condition,
I should not know you Brutus. Deare my Lord,
Make me acquainted with your cause of griefe.

Bru. I am not well in health, and that is all.

Por. Brutus is wife, and were he not in health,
He would embrace the meanes to come by it.

Bru. Why so I do: good Portia go to bed.

Por. Is Brutus fickle? And is it Phyical?
To walke vnbraced, and fuxe vp the humour.
Of the danke Morning? What, is Brutus fickle?
And will he feale out of his whollome bed
To dare the vile contagion of the Night?
And tempt the Rhewmy, and vnpurged Ayre,
To add vn to hit fickleffe? No my Brutus,
You have the fickleffe within your minde,
Which by the Right and Vertue of my place
I ought to know of: And vp on my knees,
I charme you, by my once commended Beauty,
By all your vowe of Loue, and that great Vow
Which did incorporate and make vs one,
That you vnfold to me, your selfe; your halfe.
Why you are heaue: and what men to night
Haue had refort to you: for heere haue beene
Some fixe or feuen, who did hide their faces
Euen from darkneffe.

Bru. Kneele not gentile Portia.

Por. I should not neede, if you were gentile Brutus.
Within the Bond of Marriage, tell me Brutus,
Is it excepted, I should know no Secrets
That appertaine to you? Am I your Selfe,
But as it were in fort, or limitation?
To keepe with you at Meales, comfort your Bed,
And talke to you sometimes? Dwell I but in the Suburbs
Of your good pleasure? If it be no more,
Portia is Brutus Harlot, not his Wife.

Bru. You are my true and honourable Wife,
As deere to me, as are the ruddy droppes
That visit my sad heart.

Por. If this were true, then shou'd I know this secret.
I graunte I am a Woman; but withall,
A Woman that Lord Brutus tooke to Wife:
I graunte I am a Woman; but withall,

A Woman well reputed: Cato's Daughter.

Think me, I am no stronger then my Sex
Being so Father'd, and so Husbanded?

Tell me your Counsells, I will not dicloze 'em:
I haue made strong prooves of my Confiunce,
Guing my selfe a voluntary wound
Heere in the Thigh: Can I beare that with patience,
And not my Husbands Secrets?

Bru. O ye Gods!

Render me worthy of this Noble Wife.

Knocke.

Bruke, harke, one knockes: Portia go in a while,
And by and by thy bodome shall partake
The secrets of my Heart.

All my engagements, I will continue to thee,
All the Charractery of my sad browes:
Leaue me with haft.

Enter Lucius and Ligarius.

Lucius, who's that knockes.

Luc. Heere is a fickle man that would speake with you.

Bru. Caius Ligarius, that Metellus spake of.

Boy, stand aside. Caius Ligarius, how is?

Cai. Vouchsafe good morrow from a feeble tongue.

Bru. O what a time haue you chose out brave Caius.

To weare a Kercheif? Would you were not ficke.

Cai. I am not fickle, if Brutus haue in hand
Any expoit worthy the name of Honor.

Bru. Such an exploit haue I in hand Ligarius,
Had you a healthfull care to heare of it.

Cai. By all the Gods that Romans bow before,
I heere didcarr my fickleffe. Soule of Rome,
Braue Sonne, deriu'd from Honourable Loines,
Thou like an Exorcift, haft conur'd vp
My mortified Spirit. Now bid me runne,
And I will trieue with things imposible.
Yea get the better of them. What's to do?

Bru. A piece of worke,
That will make fickle men whole.

Cai. But I am not some Whole, that we must make fickle?

Bru. That must we alfo. What is it my Caius,
I shall vnfold to thee, as we are going,
To whom it must be done.

Cai. Set on your foote,
And with a heart new fir'd, I follow you,
To do I know not what: but it sufficeth.
That Brutus leads me on.

Bru. Follow me then.

Thunder & Lightning.

Enter Julius Caesar in his Night-gowne.

Caesar. Nor Heavens, nor Earth,
Haue beene at peace to night:
Thrice hath Calpurnia, in her sleepe cried out,
Helpe, ho: They murther Caesar. Who's within?

Enter a Serevant.

Ser. My Lord.

Caef. Go bid the Priests do present Sacrifice,
And bring me their opinions of Successe.

Ser. I will my Lord.

Exit

Enter Calpurnia.

Cal. What mean you Caesar? Think you to walk forth?

You shall not fyrre out of your house to day.

Caef. Caesar shall forth; the things that threaten'd me,
Ne're look'd but on my backe: When they shall fee
The face of Caesar, they are vanisht.
The Tragedy of Julius Caesar.

Calp. Caesar, I never bird on Ceremonies, Yet now they fright me: There is one within, Besides the thing we have heard and seen, Recounts most horrid fights seene by the Watch. A Lionneffe hath whelped in the streets, And Graues have yawn’d, and yeelded vp their dead; Fierce fiery Warriors fight vp on the Clouds, In Banke’s and Squadrons, and right forme of Warre Which drie’d blood vp on the Captill: Tho the noife of Battell hurtled in the Ayre: Horrides do neigh, and dying men did groane, And Ghofts did shrike and siquele about the streets.

O Caesar, thes things are beyond all vfe, And I do feare them.

Cæf. What can be auoyed
Whole end is purpo’d by the mighty Gods? Yet Caesar shall go forth: for these Predictions Are to the world in generall, as to Caesar.

Calp. When Beggers dye, there are no Comets seen, The Heauens themelues blaze forth the death of Princes Cæf. Cowards dye many times before their deaths, The vallant never taste of death but once: Of all the Wonders that I yet have heard, It feverne to most strange that men should fear, Seeing that death, a necessary end Will come, when it will come.

Enter a Servant.

What say the Augurers?
Ser. They would not have you to firsre forth to day. Plucking the intrails of an Offering forth, They could not finde a heart within the beast.

Cæf. The Gods do this in flame of Cowardice: Caesar should be a Beast without a heart. If he should play at home to day for feare: No Caesar shall not; Danger knowes full well That Caesar is more dangerous then he. We heare two Lyons litter’d in one day, And the elder and more terible, And Caesar shall go forth.

Calp. Alas my Lord, Your wifedom is comfum’d in confidence: Do not go forth to day: Call it my feare, That keepes you in the house, and not your owne. We’ll lend Mark Antony to the Senate house, And he shall fay, you are not well to day: Let me upon my knee, preualle in this.

Cæf. Mark Antony shall fay I am not well, And for thy humor, I will play at home.

Enter Decius.

Here’s Decius Brutus, he shall tell them fo.

Deci. Caesar, all haile: Good mormor worthy Caesar, I come to fetch you to the Senate house. Cæf. And you are come in very happy time, To beare my greeting to the Senators, And tell them that I will not come to day: Cannot, is false: and that I dare not, falser: I will not come to day, tell them fo Decius. Calp. Say he is fickle.

Cæf. Shall Caesar lend a Lye? Haue I in Conquest stretcht mine Arme so farre, To be afrard’ to tell Gray-heards the truth:

Decius, go tell them, Caesar will not come.

Deci. Most mighty Caesar, let me know some caufe, Left I be laught at when I tell them fo.

Cæf. The caufe is in my Will, I will not come, That is enough to satisfie the Senate.

But for your private satisfaction, Because I love you, I will let you know. Calpurnia heere my wife, thayes me at home: She dreampt to night, she saw my Statue, Which like a Fountain, with an hundred spouts Did run pure blood: and many lusty Romans Came smiling, & did bathe their hands in it: And these does the apply, for warnings and portents, And euils imminent; and on her knee Hath begg’d, that I will play at home to day.

Deci. This Drame is all amis interpreted, It was a vision, faire and fortunate: Your Statue spouting blood in many pipes, In which so many spilling Romans bath’d, Signifies, that from you great Rome shall sucke Reuling blood, and that great men shall preffe For Tinctures, Staines, Reliques, and Cogniscence. This by Calpurnia’s Drame is signified.

Cæf. And this way have you well expounded it.

Deci. I have, when you have heard what I can say:

And know it now, the Senate haue concluded To give this day, a Crowne to mighty Caesar. If you shall send them word you will not come, Their minds may change. Besides, it were a mocke. Apt to be render’d, for some one to say, Break vp the Senate, till another time: When Caesars wife shall meet with better Dreams. If Caesar hide himselfe, shall they not whisper Loe Caesar is affraid?

Pardon me Caesar, for my deere deere louse To your proceeding, bids me tell you this: And reafon to my louse is lable.

Cæf. How foolish do your fears feeme now Calpurnia? I am abashed I did yeeld to them. Glue me my Robe, for I will go.

Enter Brutus, Ligarius, Metellus, Cæsari, Trebonius, Cynna, and Publius.

And looke where Publius is come to fetch me. Pub. Good morrow Caesar.

Cæf. Welcome Publius.

What Brutus, are you fill’d so early too? Good morrow Cæsari: Caius Ligarius, Cæsars was ne’er so much your enemy, As that same Ague which hath made you lean.

What is’t a Clockke?

Bro. Caesar, tis trucken eight.

Cæf. I thank you for your paines and curtefie.

Enter Antony.

See, Antony that Reuel a long a-nights Is notwithstanding vpon. Good morrow Antony. Ant. So to moft Noble Caesar.

Cæf. Bid them prepare within: I am too blame to be thus waited for.

Now Cynna, now Metellus: what Trebonius, I haue an hours talke in flore for you: Remember that you call on me to day: Be neere me, that I may remember you.

Treb. Caesar I will: and fo neere will I be, That your best Friends shall with I had beene further.

Cæf,Good Friends go in, and taste some wine with me And we (like Friends) will straight way go together.

Bro. That evy like is not the same, O Caesar, The heart of Brutus earns to thynke upon. Exeunt

Enter Artemidorus.

Cæsari, beware of Brutus, take heed of Cæsari; come not neere.
neere Cæsars, haue an eye to Cynna, truft not Trebonius, marke well Metellus Cymber, Decius Brutus lous thee not: Thou haft wrong'd Gaius Ligarius. There is but one minde in all these men, and it is bent against Cæsar: If thou haft not Immortal, looke about you: Security gives way to Conspiracie. The mighty Gods defend thee.

Thy Louer, Artemidorus.

Here will I stand, till Cæsar passe along,
And as a Sutor will I glue him this:
My heart laments, that Vertue cannot live
Out of the teeth of Emulation.
If thou reade this, O Cæsar, thou mayest live;
If not, the Fates with Traitors do continue.

Enter Portia and Lucius.

Per. I prythee Boy, run to the Senate-house,
Stay not to anfwer me, but get thee gone.
Why doest thou flay?

Luc. To know my errand Madam.

Per. I wou'd have had thee there and heere aген
Ere I can tell thee what thou shouldest do there:
O Conflagrance, be strong vpon my fide,
Set a huge Mountain tw'weene my Heart and Tongue:
I haue a mans minde, but a womans might:
How hard it is for women to keepe counsell,
Art thou heere yet?

Luc. Madam, what should I do?
Run to the Capitol, and nothing else?
And fo returne to you, and nothing else?

Per. Yes, bring me word Boy, if thy Lord look well,
For he went sickly forth: and take good note
What Cæsar doth, what Sutors preffe to him.
Hearke Boy, what noyfe is that?

Luc. I heare none Madam.

Per. Prythee lift bien:
I heard a bafling Rumor like a Fray,
And the winde brings it from the Capitol.

Luc. Sooth Madam, I heare nothing.

Enter the Sootbfayer.

Per. Come hither Fellow, which way haft thou bin?

Sooth. At mine owne house, good Lady.

Per. What is a clocke?

Sooth. About the ninth houre Lady.

Per. Is Cæsar in the Capitol?

Sooth. Madam not yet, I go to take my fland,
To fee him passe on to the Capitol.

Per. Thou haft some fuite to Cæsar, haft thou not?
Sooth. That I haue Lady, if it will please Cæsar
To be fo good to Cæsar, as to heare me:
I shall befeech him to befride himfelfe.

Per. Why know'lt thou any harme's intended to wards him?

Sooth. None that I know will be,
Much that I feare may chance:
Good morrow to you: heere the street is narrow:
The throng that follows Cæsar at the heele,
Of Senators, of Prayers, common Sutors,
Will crowd a feeble man (almost) to death:
Ile get me to a place more voyd, and there
Speake to great Cæsar as he comes along.

Exit Per.

I must go in:

Aye me! How weake a thing
The heart of woman is? O Brutus,
The Heavens speed thee in thine enterprize.
Sure the Boy heard me: Brutus hath a fuite
That Cæsar will not grant. O, I grow faint:
Run Lucius, and commend me to my Lord,

Say I am merry; Come to me againe,
And bring me word what he doth fay to thee.

Exeunt.

Actus Tertius.

Flourish.

Enter Cæsar, Brutus, Caius, Caska, Decius, Metellius, Tre- bonius, Cynna, Antony, Lepidus, Artemidorus, Pub- lius, and the Sootbfayer.

Cæsar. The Idee of March are come.
Sooth. I Cæsar, but not gone.

Art. Hailie Cæsar: Read this Scedule.
Deci. Trebonius doth defire you to ore-read
(At your beft leytrue) this his humble fuite.

Art. O Cæsar, reade mine first; for mine's a fuite
That touches Cæsar neerer. Read it great Cæsar.

Cæs. What touches vs our felle, Shall be laft fcer'd.

Art. Delay not Cæsar, read it inflantly.

Cæs. What is the fellow mad?

Pub. Sirra, glue place.

Caius. What, vrgue you your Petitions in the street?
Come to the Capitol.

Popul. I wish your enterprize to day may thrive.

Caius. What enterprize Popillius?

Popil. Fare you well.

Bru. What faid Popillius Lena?

Caius. He would to day our enterprize might thrive:
I feare our purpoфе is dicouer'd.

Bru. Looke how he makes to Cæfar marke him.

Caius. Cæsars be fodore, for we feare prevention.

Brutus. What shall be done? If this be knowne,

Caius or Cæsar neuer shall turne backe,
For I will flay my felle.

Bru. Caius be continent:

Popil. Lena speaks not of our purpoſes,
For looke he fimiles, and Cæsar doth not change.

Caius. Trebonius knowes his time: for look you Brutus
He draws Mark Antony out of the way.

Deci. Where is Metellus Cymber, let him go,
And presently preferre his fuite to Cæsar.

Bru. He is addref: prefte neere, and fecond him.

Caius. Caska, you are the firft that reares your hand.

Cæs. Are we all ready? What is now amiffe,

That Cæsar and his Senate muft redreffe?

Metel. Moft high, moft mighty, and moft puifant Cæsar
Metellus Cymber throws before thy Seate

An humble heart.

Cæs. I muft preuent thee Cymber:

Thfe couchings, and thfe lowly courtesies
Might fire the blood of ordinary men,
And turne pre-Ordinance, and firft Decreе;
Into the lane of Children. Be not fond,
To thinke that Cæfar beares fuch Rebell blood
That will be thaw'd from the true quality

With that which melteth Fools, I meane sweet words,
Low-crooked-curteies, and bafe Spaniell fawning:

Thy Brother by decreе is banished:
If thou doeft bend, and pray, and fawne for him,
I furne thee like a Curre out of my way:

Know, Cæsar doth not wrong, nor without caufe
Will he be satisfied.

Metel. Is there no voyce more worthy then my owne, To
To found more sweetly in great Caesar's care,
For the repealing of my banish'd Brother?
Bru. I like thy hand, but not in flattery Caesar:
Deferring thee, that Publius Cymber may
Have an immediate freedom of repeale.
Ccej. What Brutus?
Caffi. Pardon Caesar; Caesar pardon:
As lowe as to thy foot doth Cæsius fall,
To begge infranchisement for Publius Cymber.
Cæj. I could be well mou'd; if I were as you,
If I could pray to moue, Prayers would moue me:
But I am constant as the Northern Starré,
Of whose true fxe, and refting quality,
There is no fellow in the Firmament.
The Skies are painted with vnnumbred spakres, They are all Fire, and euer one doth shine:
But, there's but one in all doth hold his place.
So, in the World; 'Tis furnish'd well with Men, And Men are Fleth and Blood, and appreheñue; Yet in the number, I do know but One That vnaffayleable holds on his Ranke, Vnshak'd of Motion: and that I am he, Let me a little shew it, even in this: That I was constant Cymber should be banish'd, And constant do remaine to keepe him fo.
Cinna. O Caesar.
Cæj. Hencé: wilt thou lift vp Olympus?
Decius. Great Caesar.
Cæj. Doth not Brutus bootlesse kneele?
Cæk. Speake hands for me.
They flab Caesar.
Cæf. Et tu Brutus?——Then fall Caesar. Dyæs
Cin. Liberty, Freedom; Tyranny is dead, Run hence, proclame, cry it about the Streets.
Caffi. Some to the common Pulpits, and cry out Liberty, Freedom, and Enfranchisement,
Bru. People and Senators, be not affrighted:
Fly not, stand still: Ambitions debt is paid.
Cæk. Go to the Pulpit Brutus.
Dec. And Caesar too.
Bru. Where's Publius?
Cæs. Here, quite confounded with this mutiny.
Met. So that together, leat some Friend of Cæsars Should chance——
Bru. Talk not of standing. Publius good cheer,
There is no harme intended to your person, Nor to no Roman else: so tell them Publius.
Caffi. And leave us Publius, leat that the people Rushing on vs, shoul do your Age some mischiefe.
Bru. Do so, and let no man abide this deede, But we the Doers.
Enter Trebonius,
Caffi. Where is Antony?
Trebi. Fled to his Houfe amaz'd:
Men, Wises, and Children, flare, cry out, and run, As it were Doomefday.
Bru. Fates, we will know your pleafures:
That we shall dye we know, 'tis but the time
And drawing dayes out, that men stand vpon.
Cæk. Why he that cuts off twenty yeares of life, Cuts off so many yeares of fearing death.
'Bru. Grant that, and then is Death a Benefit:
So are we Cæsars Friends, that haue abridg'd
His time of fearing death. Stoope Romans, stoope, And let vs bathe our hands in Cæsars blood
Vp to the Elbowes, and beflace our Swords:
Then walke we forth, euen to the Market place,
And wauring our red Weapons o' re our heads, Let's all cry Peace, Freedom, and Liberty.
Caffi. Stoop then, and waife. How many Ages hence Shall this our lofty Scene be act'd over,
In State vnborne, and Accents yet vnknowne?
Bru. How many times shall Caesar bleed in sport,
That now on Pompeyes Bafis lye along,
No worthier then the duit?
Caffi. So oft as that shall be,
So often shall the knot of vs be call'd,
The Men that gae their Country liberty,
Dec. What, shall we forthe?
Caffi. I,every man away.
Brutus shall leade, and we will grace his hecles
With the most bolded, and beft hearts of Rome.
Enter a Servant.
Ser. Thus Brutus did my Master bid me kneele; Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall downe, And being proflrate, thus he bad me say:
Brutus is Noble, Wife, Valiant, and Honeste;
Cæfar was Mighty, Bold, Royall, and Louing;
Say, I loue Brutus, and I honour him;
Say, I fear'd Cæfar, honour'd him, and lou'd him. If Brutus will vouchsafe, that Antony
May safely come to him, and be relou'd
How Cæfar hath defuer'd to dye in death,
Mark Antony, shall not loue Cæsar dead
So well as Brutus living; but will follow
The Fortunes and Affayres of Noble Brutus,
Thorough the hazards of this vntrod State,
With all true Faith. So fayes my Master Antony.
Bru. Thy Master is a Wife and Valiant Romane,
I neuer thought him worfe:
Tell him, so pleafe him come vnto this place
He shall be fatis'd: and by my Honor
Depart vntouch'd.
Ser. Ile fetch him presently. Exit Servant.
Bru. I know that we shall haue him well to Friend.
Caffi. I wish we may: But yet haue I a minde
That feares him much: and my mutting still Falles threfly to the purpose.
Enter Antony,
Bru. But here comes Antony:
Welcome Mark Antony.
Ant. O mighty Cæsar! Dost thou lye fo lowe?
Are all thy Conquests,Glories,Triumphes,Spoiles,
Shrunke to this little Meafure? Fare thee well.
I know not Gentlemen what you intend,
Who elfe must be let blood, who elfe is ranke:
If I my felfe, there is no hour fo fit
As Cæsars deaths houre; nor no Instrument
Of halfe that worth, as thoile your Swords; made rich
With the most Noble blood of all this World.
I do befeech you, if you beare me hard,
Now, whil't your purpled hands do recke and fmoake,
Fulfill your pleafure. Liue a thousand yeeres,
I shall not finde my felfe fo apt to dye.
No place will pleafe me fo, no meane of death,
As here by Cæfar, and by you cut off,
The Choice and Mafter Spirits of this Age.
Bru. O Antony! Begge not your death of vs:
Though now we must appeare bloody and cruel,
As by our hands, and this our present Acte
You fee we do: Yet fee you but our hands,
And
And this, the bleeding business they have done:
Our hearts you see not, they are pittiful:
And pitty to the general wrong of Rome,
As fire dries out fire, so pitty, pitty.

Hath done this deed on Caesar. For your part,
To you, our Swords have leaden points Mark Antony:
Our Armes in strength of malice, and our Hearts
Of Brothers tender, do receive you in,
With all kindes lone, good thoughts, and reverence.

Caff. Your voice shall be as strong as any mans,
In the dispoothing of new Dignities.

Bru. Only be patient, till we have appear'd
The Multitude, beseide themselfes with fear,
And then, we will deliver you the cause,
Why I, that did love Caesar when I stroke him,
Have thus proceeded.

Ant. I doubt not of your Wifedom:
Let each man render me his bloody hand.
First Marcus Brutus will I shake with you;
Next Caius Caffius do I take your hand,
Now Decius Brutus yours; now yours Metellus;
Yours Cinna; and my valiant Caike, yours.

Though laft, not least in lone, yours good Trebonius,
Gentlemen all: Alas, what shall I say,
My credit now stands on such slippery ground,
That one of two bad wayes you must conceit me,
Either a Coward, or a Flatterer.

That I did love thee Caesar, O 'tis true:
If then thy Spirit looke upon vs now,
Shall it not greeue thee dearer then thy death,
To fee thy Antony making his peace,
Shaking the bloody fingers of thy Foes?

Moft Noble, in the presence of thy Coarfe,
Had I as many eyes, as thou haft wounds,
Weeping as fast as they streame forth thy blood,
It would make me better, then to close
In tearmes of Friendship with thine enemies.

Pardon me Julius, heere was't thou bay'd braue Hart,
Heere did't thou fall,and heere thy Hunters stand
Sign'd in thy Spoyle and Obelisk'd in thy Lethee.
O World! thou waft the Forreft to this Hart,
And this indeed, O World, the Hart of thee.
How like a Deere, broken by many Princes,
Doft thou heere lye?

Caff. Mark Antony.

Ant. Pardon me Caius Caffius:
The Enemies of Caesar, shall say this:
Then, in a Friend, it is cold Modeftie,
Caffi. I blame you not for prailing Caesar so,
But what compact meanes you to haue with vs?
Will you be prick'd in number of our Friends,
Or shall we on, and not depend on you?
Ant. Therefore I tooke your hands, but was indeed
Sway'd from the point, by looking downe on Caesar.

Friends am I with you all, and love you all,
Vpon this hope, that you shall give me Reaons,
Why, and wherein, Caesar was dangerous.

Bru. Or else were this a fausse Speech:
Our Reaons are so full of good regard,
That were you Antony, the Sonne of Caesar,
You should be satisfied.

Ant. That's all I seek,
And am moreouer futor, that I may
Produce his body to the Market-place,
And in the Pulpit as becomes a Friend,
Speake in the Order of his Funerall.

Bru. You shall Mark Antony.

Caffi. Brumus, a word with you:
You know not what you do; Do not confent
That Antony speake in his Funerall:
Know you how much the people may bee mou'd
By that which he will vteer.

Bru. By your pardon:
I will my selfe into the Pulpit fitst,
And shew the reason of our Ceasar's death.
What Antony shall speake, I will protest
He speakes by leave, and by permission:
And that we are contented Ceasar shall
Have all true Rites, and lawfull Ceremonies.

It shall advantage more, then do vs wrong.

Caffi. I know not what may fall, I like it not.

Bru. Mark Antony, heere take you Ceasar body:

You shall not in your Funerall speech blame vs,
But speake all good you can devise of Ceasar,
And lay you doun't by our permission:
Elle shall you not have any hand at all
About his Funerall. And you shall speake
In the fame Pulpit whereto I am going,
After my speech is ended.

Ant. Be it so:

But I do defire no more.

Bru. Prepare the body then, and follow vs.

Exeunt. Mark Antony.

O pardon me, thou bleeding piece of Earth:
That I am meekc and gentle with these Butchers.

Thou art the Ruines of the Noblest man
That ever liued in the Tide of Times.

Woe to the hand that shed this costly Blood.

Over thy wounds, now do I Prophefie,
(Which like dumbe mouthes do ope their Ruby lips,
To begge the voice and vterance of my Tongue)

A Curfe shall light upon the limbs of men;

Domellick Fury, and fierce Cruell Lawfull,

Shall cumber all the parts of Italy;

Blood and deftruction shall be so in vfe,

As the dreadfull Obelisk'd in thy Lethee.

That Mothers shall but smile, when they behold
Their Infants quartered with the hands of Warre:

All pitty chock'd with cutome of fell deeds,
And Ceasar Spirit ranging for Reuenge,
With Acte by his fide,come hot from Hell,

Shall in these Confines, with a Monarkes voyce,

Cry hauecke, and let slip the Dogges of Warre,

That this foule deed, shall smell above the earth

With Carrion men, groaning for Buriall.

Enter Octavius's Servant.

You ferue Octavius Ceasar, do you not?

Ser. I do Mark Antony.

Ant. Ceasar did write for him to come to Rome.

Ser. He did receive his Letters, and is comming,
And bid me lay to you by word of mouth:

O Ceasar!

Ant. Thy heart is bigge: get thee a-part and wepe:

Paffion I fee is catching from mine eyes,

Seeing those Beads of sorrow stand in thine;

Began to water. Is thy Mafter comming?

Ser. He lies to night within feuen Leagues of Rome.

Ant. Poft backe with speed,
And tell him what hath chanc'd:

Here is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome,

No Rome of safety for Octavius yet,

Hie hence, and tell him so. Yet flay a-while,

Thou
Enter Brutus and goes into the Pulpit, and Cassius, with the Plebeians.

Pls. We will be satisfied: let us be satisfied.

Brus. Then follow me, and give me Audience friends.

Cassius go you into the other freet, and part the Numbers: Those that will hear me speak, let 'em stay here; Those that will follow Cassius, go with him. And publick Reafons shall be rendered Of Cæsar's death. 1. Pls. I will hear Brutus speak. 2. I will hear Cassius, and compare their Reafons, When feverally we hear them rendred. 3. The Noble Brutus is ascended: Silence. Brutus. Be patient till the last. Romans, Country-men, and Louers, hear mee for my caufe, and be silent, that you may heare. Believe me for mine Honor, and have respect to mine Honor, that you may believe. Cenfure me in your Wifedom, and awake your Senfes, that you may the better Judge. If there bee any in this Assemble, any deere Friend or Cæsars, to him I say, that Brutus loue to Cæsar, was no leffe then his. If then, that Friend demand, why Brutus rofe against Caesar, this is my answere: Not that I lou'd Cæsar leffe, but that I lou'd Rome more. Had you rather Cæsar were living, and dye all Slaves, then that Cæsar were dead, to live all Free-men? As Cæsar lou'd mee, I wepe for him; as he was Fortunate, I rejoynce at it; as he was Valiant, I honour him: But, as he was Ambitious, I flew him. There is Terrors, for his Loue: Joy, for his Fortune: Honor, for his Valour: and Death, for his Ambition. Who is heere tosafe, that would be a Bondman? If any, speake, for him haue I offended. Who is heere fo rude, that would not be a Roman? If any, speake, for him haue I offended. Who is heere fo vile, that will not loue his Country? If any, speake, for him haue I offended. I pause for a Reply. All. None Brutus, none.

Brutus. Then none haue I offended. I haue done no more to Cæsar, then you shall do to Brutus. The Queftion of his death, is inrolld in the Capitol: His Glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy; nor his offences enforced, for which he suffered death. Enter Mark Antony, with Cæsars body.

Heere comes his Body, mournd by Mark Antony, who though he had no hand in his death, shall receive the benefit of his dying, a place in the Commonwealth, as which of you shall not. With this I depart, that as I flew my best Louer for the good of Rome, I have the fame Dager for my selue, when it shall please my Country to need my death. All. Llie Brutus, lzie, lzie. 1. Bring him with Triumph home vnto his house. 2. Give him a Statue with his Ancestors. 3. Let him be Cæsar. 4. Cæsars better parts, Shall be Crown'd in Brutus. 1. Wee'l bring him to his House, With Showts and Clamors. Brutus. My Country-men. 2. Peace, silence, Brutus speaks. Peace ho. Brutus. Good Countrymen, let me depart alone, And (for my sake) stay heere with Antony: Do grace to Cæsar's Corpses, and grace his Speech Tending to Cæsars Glories, which Mark Antony (By our permission) is allow'd to make. I do intreat you, not a man depart, Save I alone, till Antony have spoke. Exit Brutus. For Brutus fake, I am beholding to you. 4. What does he say of Brutus? 3. He fayes, for Brutus fake. He ffinds himselfe beholding to vs all. "Twere best he speake no harme of Brutus heere? 1. This Cæsar was a Tyrant. 3. Nay that's certaine: We are blest that Rome is rid of him. 2. Peace, let us heare what Antony can fay. Anthony. You gentle Romans. All. Peace ho, let us heare him. Anthony. Friends, Romans, Countrymen, lend me your ears: I come to bury Cæsar, not to praise him: The euill that men doe, lies after them, The good is oft entered with their bones, So let it bee with Cæsar. The Noble Brutus, Hath told you Cæsar was Ambitious: If it were fo, it was a greuous Fault, And greuously hath Cæsar anwer'd it. Heere, vnder leaue of Brutus, and the rest (For Brutus is an Honourable man, So are they all, all Honourable men) Come I to speake in Cæsars Generall. He was my Friend, faithfull, and liue to me; But Cæsar fayes, he was Ambitious, And Brutus is an Honourable man. He hath brought many Captives home to Rome, Whosee Ranzomes, did the generall Coffers fill: Did this in Cæsar seeme Ambitious? When that the poore haue cryde, Cæsar hath wept: Ambition should be made of fierner stuffe, Yet Brutus fayes, he was Ambitious: And Brutus is an Honourable man: You all did feé, that on the Lupercal, I thrice profected him a Kingly Crowne, Which he did thrice refufe: Was this Ambition? Yet Brutus fayes, he was Ambitious: And sure he is an Honourable man. I speake not to disprove what Brutus spoke, But heere I am, to speake what I do know; You all did loue him once, not without caufe, What caufe with-holds you then, to mourn for him? O Judgement! thou are fled to brutifh Beasts, And Men haue loit their Reafon. Beare with me, My heartis in the Coffin there with Cæsar, And I musf pawfe, till it come backe to me. 1. Me thinkes there is much reafon in his sayings. 2. If thou consider rightly of the matter, Cæfar ha's had great wrong: (his place. 3. Has hee Masters? I feare there will a worse come in 1 1 4 Marke
The Tragedie of Julius Cæsar.

4. Mark'd ye his words? he would not take by Crown,
Therefore 'tis certaine, he was not Ambitious.
1. If it be found so, some will deere abide it.
2. Poore foule, his eyes are red as fire with weeping.
3. There's not a Nobler man in Rome then Antony.
4. Now marke him, he begins againe to speake.

Ant. But yesterday, the word of Cæfar might:
Hauz stood against the World: Now lies he there,
And none fo poore to do him reverence.
O Maisters! If I were diffus'd to flire
Your hearts and mindes to Mutiny and Rage,
I shold do Brutus wrong, and Cæcours wrong:
Who (you all know) are Honourable men.
I will not do them wrong: I rather choose
To wrong the dead, to wrong my felfe and you,
Then I will wrong such Honourable men.
But heere's a Parchment, with the Seal of Cæfar,
I found it in his Cloffe, tis his Will:
Let but the Commons heare this Testament:
(Which pardon me) I do not meane to reade,
And they would go and kiffe dead Cæcours wounds,
And dip their Napkins in his Sacred Blood;
Yea, begge a halfe of him for Morality,
And dying, mention it within their Willes,
Bequeathing it as a rich Legacie
Vnto their issue.

4. Wee'll heare the Will, reade it Marke Antony.
All. The Will, the Will; we will heare Cæcours Will.
Ant. Haue patience gentle Friends, I must not read it.
It is not mee you know how Cæfar lou'd you:
You are not Wood, you are not Stones, but men:
And being men, hearing the Will of Cæfar,
It will inflame you, it will make you mad:
'Tis good you know not that you are his Heires,
For if you should, O what would come of it?
4. Read the Will, wee'll heare it Antony:
You shall reade vs the Will, Cæcours Will.

Ant. Will you be Patient? Will you stay a-while?
I haue o're-shot my felfe to tell you of it,
I fear I wrong the Honourable men,
Whose Daggers haue flabb'd Cæfar: I do feare it.
4. They were Traitors: Honourable men?
All. The Will, the Testament.
2 They were Villaines, Murderers: the Will, read the Will.

Ant. You will compell me then to read the Will:
Then make a Ring about the Corpes of Cæfar,
And let me shew you him that made the Will:
Shall I defend? And will you glue me leaue?
All. Come dowe.
2. Defend.
3. You shall haue leaue.
4 A Ring, stand round.
1 Stand from the Hearfe, stand from the Body.
2 Roome for Antony, most Noble Antony.
Ant. Nay preffe not fo upon me, stand farre off.
All. Stand backe: roome, beare backe.
Ant. If you have teares, prepare to fhed them now.
You all do know this Mantie, I remember
The firft time eu'r Cæfar put it on,
'Twas on a Sumners Evening in his Tent,
That day he commaunded the Nordy.
Looke, in this place ran Cæfours Daggers through:
See what a rent the enious Cucke made:
Through this, the wel-beloved Brutus flabb'd,
And as he pluck'd his curfed Steele away:
Marke how the blood of Cæfar followed it,
As rushing out of doores, to be resolu'd
If Brutus to vnkindly knock'd, or no:
For Brutus, as you know, was Cæcours Angel.
Judge, O you Gods, how deeplex Cæfar lou'd him:
This was the moft vnkindt cut of all.
For when the Noble Cæfar faw him flab,
Ingratitude, more ftrong then Traitors arms,
Quite vanquish'd him: then burn'd his Mighty heart,
And in his Mantle, muffling vp his face,
Euen at the Bafe of Pompeys Statue
(Which all the while ran blood) great Cæfar fell.
O what a fall was there, my Countrymen?
Then I and you, and all of vs fell downe,
Will the bloody Treafon flourish'd ouer vs.
O now you weeppe, and I perceiue you feele
The dint of pitty: These are gracious droppes.
Kinde Soules, what weeppe you, when you but behold
Our Cæfours Vexture wounded? Looke you heere,
Heere is Hymelfe, marr'd as you fee with Traitors.
1. O pitteous speectacle!
2. O Noble Cæfar!
3. O wofull day!
4. O Traitors, Villaines!
1. O moft bloody sight!
2. We will be reueng'd: Reuenge
About, feeke, burne, fire, kill, flay,
Let not a Traitor live.

1. Peace there, heare the Noble Antony.
2. Wee'll heare him, wee'll follow him, wee'll dy with him.
(you vp)

Ant. Good Friends, sweet Friends, let me not firre
To fuch a fadaine Flood of Mutiny:
They that haue done this Deede, are honourable.
What privite greeyes they haue, alas I know not,
That made them do it: They are Wife, and Honourable,
And will no doubt with Reafons anwer you.
I come not (Friends) to fteale away your hearts,
I am no Orator, as Brutus is;
But (as you know me all) a plaine blunt man
That loue my Friend, and that they know full well,
That gaue me publike leaue to speake of him:
For I haue neyther writ nor words, nor worth,
Adition, nor Vtterance, nor the power of Speech,
To firre mens Blood. I onely speake right on:
I tell you that, which you your felues do know,
Shew you sweet Cæfars wounds, poor poor dum mouths
And bid them speake for me: But were I Brutus,
And Brutus Antony, there were an Antony
Would ruffle vp your Sprits, and put a Tongue
In euery Wound of Cæfar, that should moue
The ftones of Rome, to rife and Mutiny.

All. Wee'll Mutiny.
1. Wee'll burne the house of Brutus.
3. Away then, come, feeke the Conspirators.
Ant. Yet heare me Countrymen, yet heare me speake
All. Peace hoe, heare Antony, moft Noble Antony.
Ant. Why Friends, you go to do you know not what:
Wherein hath Cæfar thus deferu'd your louses
Alas you know not, I must tell you then:
You haue forgot the Will I told you of.
All. Moft true, the Will, let's lay and heare the Wil.
Ant. Heere is the Will, and under Cæfars Seale:
To every Roman Citizen he gius,
To every feuellaman, feventy five Drachmaes.

2. Plc.
2 Ple. Most Noble Caesar, wee'll revenge his death.
3 Ple. O Royall Caesar.
Ant. Heare me with patience.
All. Peace hoe
Ant. Moreover, he hath left you all his Walkes,
His private Arboris, and new-planted Orchards,
On this side Tyber, he hath left them you,
And to your heyres for ever : common pleasures
To walke abroad, and recreate your selves.
Heere was a Caesar: when comes such another?
1 Ple. Neuer, neuer: come, away, away:
Wee'll burne his body in the holy place,
And with the Branda fire the Traitors houes.
Take vp the body.
2 Ple. Go fetch fire.
3 Ple. Plucke downe Benches.
Ant. Now let it worke: Milcheefe thou art a-foot,
Take thou what courfe thou wilt.
How now Fellow? Enter Servant.
Ser. Sir, Octavius is already come to Rome.
Ant. Where is hee?
Ser. He and Lepidus are at Cesars houfe.
Ant. And either will I straight, to visit him:
He comes upon a with. Fortune is merry,
And in this mood will glue vs any thing.
Ser. I heard him say, Brutus and Cassius
Are rid like Madmen through the Gates of Rome.
Ant. Belike they have some notice of the people
How I had moused them. Bring me to Octavius. Exit
Enter Cinna the Poet, and after him the Plebeians.

Cinna. I dreamt to night, that I did feast with Caesar,
And things vnluckily charge my Fantasie:
I haue no will to wander forth of doores,
Yet something leads me forth.
1. What is your name?
2. Whether are you going?
3. Where do you dwell?
4. Are you a married man, or a Batchelor?
2. Anfwier every man directly.
1. I, and freely.
4. I, and wilfully.
3. I, and truly, you were best.
Cinna. What is my name? Whether am I going? Where do I dwell? Am I a married man, or a Batchellour? Then to anfwier every man, directly and freely, wilfully and truly:
freely I say, I am a Batcheller.
2. That's as much as to say, they are fools that marrie:
you'll bear me a bang for that. I fear: proceed directly.
Cinna. Directly I am going to Cesars Funerall.
1. As a Friend, or an Enemy?
Cinna. As a friend.
2. That matter is anfwiered directly.
4. For your dwelling: freely.
Cinna. Freely, I dwell by the Capitoll.
3. Your name directly.
Cinna. Truly, my name is Cinna.
1. Teare him to pieces, he's a Conspirator.
Cinna. I am Cinna the Poet, I am Cinna the Poet.
4. Teare him for his bad verfes, teare him for his bad Verfes.

Cin. I am not Cinna the Conspirator.
4. It is no matter, his name's Cinna, plucke but his name out of his heart, and turne him going.
3. Teare him, tear him; Come Brands hoe, Firebrands:
to Brutus, to Cassius, burne all. Some to Decius Houfe, and fome to Cæsars; fome to Ligarius: Away, go.
Exit all the Plebeians.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Antony, Octavius, and Lepidus.
Ant. Thee many then shall die, their names are prickt.
Octa. Your Brother too must dye:content you Lepidus?
Lep. I do content.
Octa. Prick me downe Antony.
Lep. Upon condition Publius shall not live,
Who is your Sifters fonne, Mark Antony.
Ant. He shall not live: looke, with a spot I dam him.
But Lepidus, go you to Cesars houfe:
Fetch the Will bither, and we shall determine
How to cut off fome charge in Legacies.
Lep. What? shall I finde you here?
Octa. Or here, or at the Capitoll.
Ant. This is a flight vnmeritable man,
Meet to be sent on Errands: is it fit
The three-fold World diuided, he should stand,
One of the three to share it?
Octa. So you thought him,
And tooke his voyce who should be prickt to dye
In our blanke Sentence and Profcription.
Ant. Octavius, I have feeen more dayes then you,
And though we lay these Honours on this man,
To eafe our felues of diuers fland'rous loads,
He shall but bear them, as the Asfe beares Gold,
To groane and fet under the Buisneffe,
Either led or driuen, as we point the way:
And hauing brought our Treasure, where we will,
Then take we downe his Load, and turne him off
(like to the empty Asfe) to shake his cares,
And graze in Commons.
Octa. You may do your will:
But hee's a tried, and valiant Souldier.
Ant. So is my Hurle Octavius, and for that I do appoint him floure of Prouender.
It is a Creature that I teach to fight,
To winde, to flop, to run directly on:
His corporall Motion, govern'd by my Spirit,
And in some tafe, is Lepidus but fo:
He must be taught, and train'd, and bid go forth:
A barren Spiritual Fellow; one that feeds
On Obieets, Arts, and Imitations.
Which out of viue, and flial'de by other men.
Begin his fashion. Do not talke of him,
But as a property: and now Octavius,
Liten great things. Brutus and Cassius
Are leuying Powers; We must straignt make head:
Therefore let our Alliance be combind,
Our beft Friends made, our meanes streight,
And let vs presently go fit in Counsell,
How couer tafes may be bent dicilest's:
And open Perils sureft anfwered.
Octa. Let vs do fo: for we are at the flake,

And
The Tragedie of Julius Caesar

And bayed about with many Enemies,
And some that smile haue in their hearts I feare
Millions of Mifcheefe.

Exeunt

_Drum. Enter Brutus, Lucullus, and the Army._ Titiarius _and Pindarus meet them._

_Bru. Stand ho._

_Lucil._ Glue the word ho, and Stand.

_Bru. What now Lucullus, is Caffius neere ?
_Lucil._ He is at hand, and Pindarus is come
To do you salutation from his Master.

_Bru. He greets me well. Your Master Pindarus
In his owne change, or by ill Officers,
Hath given me some worthy cause to wish
Things done, ydone : But if he be at hand
I shall be satisfied._

_Pin._ I do not doubt
But that my Noble Master will appeare
Such as he is, full of regard, and Honour.

_Bru. He is not doubted. A word Lucullus
How he receiu'd you : let me be refoolu'd._

_Lucil._ With courtefe, and with respect enough,
But not with such familiar iniances,
Nor with such free and friendly Conference
As he hath v'd of old.

_Bru. Thou haft describ'd
A hot Friend, cooling : Euer note Lucullus,
When Loue begins to sicken and decay
It vfeth an enforced Ceremony.

There are no trickes, in plaine and simple Faith :
But hallowd men, like Horfes hot at hand,
Make gallant fiew, and promife of their Mettle :

Low March within.

But when they should endure the bloody Sperience
They fall their Creftes, and like deceitfull Iades Sink in the Triaill. Comes his Army on?

_Lucil._ They mean this night in Sardis to be quarter'd:
The greater part, the Horfe in generall
Are come with Caffius.

_Enter Caffius and his Powers._

_Bru._ Hearke, he is arriu'd:
March gently on to meete him.

_Caffi._ Stand ho.

_Bru._ Stand ho, speake the word along.

Stand,

_Caffi._ Stand.

_Bru._ Stand.

_Caffi._ Moft Noble Brother, you haue done me wrong.
_Bru. I judge you God's, wrong I mine Enemies?
And if not fo, how should I wrong a Brother.

_Caffi._ Brutus, this sober forme of yours, hides wrongs,
And when you do them——

_Brut. Caffius, be content,
Speak your griefes softly, I do know you well.
Before the eyes of both our Armies here
(Which should perceiue nothing but Loue from vs)
Let vs not wrangle. Bid them move awaie :
Then in my Tent Caffius enlarge your Griefes,
And I will give you Audience.

_Caffi._ Pindarus,
Bid our Commanders leaue their Charges off
A little from this ground.

_Bru. Lucullus, do you the like, and let no man
Come to our Tent, till we have done our Conference.
Let Lucius and Titiarius guard our door._

_Exeunt

_Caffi._ That you haue wrong'd me, doth appear in this:
You haue condemn'd, and noted Lucius Pella
For taking Bribes heere of the Sardians ;
Wherein my Letters, praying on his fide,
Because I knew the man was flighted off.

_Bru._ You wrong'd your selfe to write in such a cafe.

_Caffi._ In such a time as this, it is not meet
That every nice offence should beare his Comment.

_Bru._ Let me tell you Caffius, you your selfe
Are much condemn'd to have an itching Palme,
To fell, and Mark your Offices for Gold
To Vnderfuerers.

_Caffi._ I, an itching Palme ?
You know that you are Brutus that speakes this,
Or by the Gods, this speech were elfe your laft.

_Bru._ The name of Caffius Honors this corruption,
And Chafficement doth therefore hide his head.

_Caffi._ Chafficement?

_Bru._ Remember March, the Ides of March remeber :
Did not great Iulius bleed for Iuflice fake ?
What Villains touch'd his body, that did flab,
And not for Iuflice ? What Shall one of Vs,
That flrucke the Formot man of all this World,
But for supporting Robbers : shall we now,
Contaminate our fingers, with bafe Bribes ?
And fell the mighty SPace of our large Honors
For so much traff, as may be grafted thus:
I had rather be a Dogge, and bay the Moone,
Then such a Roman.

_Caffi._ Brutus, baite not me,
Ile not indure it : you forget your selfe
To henge me in. I am a Soullier, I,
Older in practice, Abler then your selfe
To make Conditions.

_Bru._ Go too : you are not Caffius.

_Caffi._ I am.

_Bru._ I fay, you are not.

_Caff._ Vrge me no more, I shall forget my felle:
Have minde vpon your health : Tempt me no farther.

_Bru._ Away flight man.

_Caffi._ Is't posibill ?

_Bru._ Heare me, for I will speake.

Must I glue way, and roome to your rash Choller ?
Shall I be frighted, when a Madman faires ?

_Caffi._ O ye Gods, ye Gods, Muft I endure all this?

_Bru._ All this ? I more : Fret till your proud hart break.
Go shew your Slaves how Chollerick ye are,
And make your Bondmen tremble. Muft I bouge ?
Muft I obferue you ? Muft I fland and crouch
Under your Teffie Humour ? By the Gods,
You shall digeft the Venom of your Spheene
Though it do Split you. For, from this day forth,
He vfe you for my Mirth, yes for my Laughter
When you are Wafph.

_Caffi._ Is it come to this?

_Bru._ You fay, you are a better Soullier :
Let it appeare fo; make your vaunting true,
And it shall pleafe me well. For mine owne part,
I shall be glad to learne of Noble men.

_Caffi._ You wrong me evey way:
You wrong me Brutus :
I faide, an Elder Soullier, not a Better.
Did I faie Better ?

_Bru._ If you did, I care not.

_Caffi._ When Cefar liv'd, he durft not thus haue mou'd

_Brut._ Peace, peace, you durft not fo haue tempted him.

_Caffi._
The Tragedie of Julius Caesar.

C affi. I durst not.
Bru. No.
C affi. What durst not tempt him?
Bru. For your life you durst not.
C affi. Do not presume too much upon my Louse, I may do that I shall be forry for.
Bru. You have done that you should be forry for.

There is no terror Caffius in your threats:
For I am Arm'd do strong in Honesty,
That they passe by me, as the idle winde,
Which I respect not. I did fend to you
For certaine summes of Gold, which you deny'd me,
For I can raise no money by vile meanes:
By Heauen, I had rather Conine my Heart,
And drop my blood for Drachmaes, then to wring
From the hard hands of Peazants, their vile trash
By any indirecction. I did fend
To you for Gold to pay my Legions,
Which you deny'd me: was that done like Caffius?
Should I have anwer'd Caius Caffius so?
When Marcus Brutus grows so Courteous,
To locke such Rafcall Counters from his Friends,
Be ready Gods with all your Thunder-bolts,
Dash him to peeces.
C affi. I deny'd you not.
Bru. You did.
C affi. I did not. He was but a Foose
That brought my answer back.Bruces hath ru'd my hart:
A Friend should beare his Friends infirmities,
But Brutus makes mine greater then they are.
Bru. I do not, till you practicem on me.
C affi. You love me not.
Bru. I do not like your faults.
Caffi. A friendly eye could never fee such faults.
Bru. A Flatterer would not, though they do appeare
As huge as high Olympus.

C affi. Come Antony, and yong Othalias come,
Revenge your felues alone on Caffiius,
For Caffius is a weerry of the World:
Hated by one he loues, brau'd by his Brother,
Check'd like a bondman, all his faults obser'd,
Set in a Neddace, learn'd and con'd by roate
To cafe into my Teeth. O I could weep
My Spirit from mine eyes. There is my Dagger,
And heere my naked Breast: Within a Heart
Deerer then Pluto's Mine, Richer then Gold:
If that thou bee't a Roman, take it foorth.
I that deny'd thee Gold, will give my Heart:
Strike as thou didst at Caffar: For I know,
When thou didst hate him worth, 'tis he lovd him better
Then ever thou lov'dt Caffius.
Bru. Sheath your Dagger:
Be angry when you will, it shall haue scope:
Do what you will, Disheron, shall be Humour.
O Caffius, you are yoaked with a Lambe,
That carrieth Anger, as the Flint beares fire,
Who much infOrced, dethews a haffie Sparke,
And straitel is cold agen.
Caffi. Hath Caffius liu'd
To be but Mirth and Laughter to his Brutus,
When greefe and blood ill temper'd, vexeth him?
Bru. When I spoke that, I was ill temper'd too.
Caffi. Do you confesse so much? Give me your hand.
Bru. And my heart too.
Caffi. O Brutus! Brutus! Brutus!
Bru. What's the matter?
Early to morrow will we rife, and hence.

Enter Lucius.

Bru. Lucius my Gowne; farewell good Messala,
Good night Titinius: Noble, Noble Cassius,
Good night, and good reposè.

Caffi. O my deere Brother;
This was an ill beginning of the night:
Neuer come such diuision 'tweene our foules :
Let it not Brutus.

Enter Lucius with the Gowne.

Bru. Every thing is well.

Caffi. Good night my Lord.

Bru. Good night good Brother.

Tit. Messa. Good night Lord Brutus.

Bru. Farwell every one.

Gue me the Gowne. Where is thy Instrument ?

Luc. Heere in the Tent.

Bru. What, thou speake'ft drowzily?

Poore knaue I blame thee not, thou art ore-watch'd.

Call Claudio, and some other of my men,
Ile haue them sleepe on Cushions in my Tent.

Luc. Varres, and Claudio.

Enter Varres and Claudio.

Var. Calls my Lord ?

Bru. I pray you first, lye in my Tent and sleepe,
It may be I shall raise you by and by,
On businesse to my Brother Cannis.

Var. So pleasse you, we will stand,
And watch your pleasure.

Bru. I will it not haue it fo: Lye downe good sirs,
It may be I shall otherwise bethinke me.

Looke Lucius, heere's the booke I sought for fo :
I put it in the pocket of my Gowne.

Luc. I was sure your Lordship did not giue it me.

Bru. Bearre with me good Boy, I am much forgetfull.

Canst thou hold vp thy heauie eyes a-while,
And touch thy Instrument a straine or two.

Luc. I my Lord, an't please you.

Bru. It does my Boy.
I trouble thee too much, but thou art willing.

Luc. It is my duty Sir.

Bru. I shoul not urge thy duty past thy might,
I know yong bloods looke for a time of reft.

Luc. I haue slept my Lord already.

Bru. It was well done, and thou shalt sleepe againe:
I will not hold thee long. If I do sleeue,
I will be good to thee.

Mufickes, and a Song.

This is a sleepey Tune: O Mur'drous slumber !
Layef thou thy Leaden Mace vpon my Boy,
That plays thee Mufickes? Gentle knaue good night:
I will not do thee so much wrong to wake thee:
If thou doe'ft nod, thou brake'ft thy Instrument,
Ile take it from thee, and (good Boy) good night.

Let me fee, let mee fee; is not the Lefue turn'd downe
Where I left reading ? Heere it is I thinke.

Enter the Ghost of Cæsar.

How ill this Taper burns. Ha ! Who comes heere ?
I think it is the weakeffe of mine eyes
That shapes this monstruous Apparition.
It comes vpon me: Art thou any thing?
Art thou some God, some Angel, or some Diuell,
That mak'ft my blood cold, and my hair to stare ?
Speake to me, what thou art.

Ghost. Thy eul! Spirit Brutus?

Bru. Why com'rst thou ?
The Tragedie of Julius Caesar.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Olesam, Antony, and their Army.

Olesam. Now Antony, our hopes are answered, You said the Enemy would not come downe, But keepe the Hills and vpper Regions: It proues not so: their battayles are at hand, They meane to warne vs at Philippes heere: Answering before we do demand of them. Ant. Olesam, leade your Battayle softly on Vpon the left hand of the even Field. Olesam. Vpon the right hand I, keepe thou the left. Ant. Why do you crose me in this exigent. Olesam. I do not crose you: but I will do fo. March.

Drum. Enter Brutus, Cassius, & their Army.

Brutus. They stand, and would haue parley. Cassius. Stand fast Titinius, we must out and talke. Olesam. Mark Antony, shall we give signe of Battayle? Ant. No Cæsar, we will answer on their Charge. Make forth, the Generals would haue some words. Olesam. Stirre not untill the Signall. Brutus. Words before blowes? is it so Countrymen? Olesam. Not that we lose words better, as you do. Brutus. Good words are better then bad strokes Olesam. An In your bad strokes Brutus, you guue good words Witnese the hole you made in Cæsars heart, Crying long liue, Haile Cæsar. Cassius. Antony, The posture of your blowes are yet vnknowne; But for your words, they rob the Hibla Bees, And leave them Hony-leffe. Ant. Not stings elfe too. Brutus. O yes, and soundlesse too: For you haue foine their buzzing Antony, And very wisely threat before you fling. Ant. Villains; you did not fo, when your vile daggers Hackt one another in the sides of Cæsar: You fhevd your teethes like Apes, And fawn’d like Hounds, And bow’d like Bondmen, kifing Cæsars feete; Whil’t damned Cæsars, like a Currre, behind Strooke Cæsar on the necke. O you Flatterers. Cassius. Flatterers? Now Brutus thanke your felse, This tongue had not offended fo to day, If Cassius might have ru’d. Olesam. Come, come, the caufe, If arguing make vs fweat, The prooue of it will turne to redder drops: Looke, I draw a Sword against Conspirators, When thinke you that the Sword goes vp againe? Neuer till Cæsars three and thirtie wounds Be well aueng’d; or till another Cæsar Have added slaughter to the Sword of Traitors. Brutus. Cæsar, thou canft not dye by Traitors hands, Vnlesse thou bring’st them with thee. Olesam. So I hope: I was not borne to dye on Brutus Sword. Brutus. O if thou wer’t the Nobleft of thy Straine, Yong-man, thou could’st not dye more honourable. Cassius. A peeulsh School-boy, worthlesse of fuch Honor Ioynd with a Masker, and a Reueller. Ant. Old Cassius still. Olesam. Come Antony away: Defiance Traitors, hurle we in your teeth. If you dare fight to day, come to the Field: If not, when you have fomackes. Exit Olesam, Antony, and Army Cassius. Why now blow winde, swell Billow, And winne Barke: The Storme is vp, and all is on the hazard. Brutus. Ho Lucillius, heare, a word with you. Lucillius and Maffala stand forth. Lucius. My Lord. Maffala. Maffala. Cassius. What fayes my Generall? Cassius. Maffala, this is my Birth-day: as this very day Was Cassius borne. Give me thy hand Maffala: Be thou my witnese, that againft my will (As Pompey was) I am compris’d to fet Vpon one Battall all our Liberties. You know, that I held Epicurus strong, And his Opinion: Now I change my minde, And partly credit things that do prefrage. Comming from Sardio, on our former Ensigne Two mighty Eagles fell, and there they pearch’d, Gorging and feeding from our Soldiers hands, Who
Who to Phileippi heere comforted vs:
This Morning are they fled away, and gone,
And in their deeds, do Raens, Crowes, and Kites
Fly ere our heads, and downward looke on vs.
As we were ficklely prey; their shadowes seeme
A Canopy most fatal, under which
Our Army lies, ready to give vp the Ghost.
Caffi. Believe not fo.
Caffi. I but believe it partly,
For I am fresh of spirit, and resolvd
To meete all perils, very constantly.
Br. Even so Lucilius.
Caffi. Now most Noble Bratus,
The Gods to day fand friendly, that we may
Louers in peace, leade on our dayes to age.
But since the affayres of men refts fill uncertaine,
Let's reason with the worst that may befal.
If we doe loose this Battale, then is this
The very laft time we shall speake together:
What are you then determined to do?
Br. Even by the rule of that Philosophy,
By which I did blame Cato, for the death
Which he did give himselfe, I know not how:
But I do finde it Cowardly, and vile,
For feare of what might fall, fo to prevent
The time of life, arming my felle with patience,
To day the prouidence of some high Powers,
That governs vs below.
Caffi. Then, if we loose this Battale,
You are contented to be led in Triumph
Thow the streets of Rome.
Br. No Caffius, no:
Thinke not thou Noble Romane,
That euer Bratus will go bound to Rome,
He bears too great a minde. But this fame day
Mult end that worke, the Ides of March begun.
And whether we shall meete againe, I know not:
Therefore our everlasting farewell take:
For euer, and for euer, farewell Caffius,
If we do meete againe, why we shall finile;
If not, why then this parting was well made.
Caffi. For euer, farewell Bratus:
If we do meete againe, we'll finile indeede;
If not, 'tis true, this parting was well made.
Br. Why then leade on. O that a man might know
The end of this days businesse were it come:
But it sufficeth, that the day will end,
And then the end is knowne. Come ho, away.
Exeunt.

Alarum. Enter Bratus and Messala.

Br. Ride, ride Messala, ride and give these Billes
Vnto the Legions, on the other side.

Lord Alarum.
Let them set on at once: for I perceiue
But cold demeanor in Otho's will:
And fome men push them the overthrow:
Ride, ride Messala, let them all come downe.

Exeunt.

Alarums. Enter Caffius and Titinius.

Caffi. O looke Titinius, looke, the Villaines flye:
My felle have to mine owne turn'd Enemy:
This Ensigne heere of mine was turning backe,
I flew the Coward, and did take it from him.
Titinius. O Caffius, Bratus gave the word too early,
The Tragedie of Julius Caesar.

So in his red blood Casius day is set. The Sunne of Rome is set. Our day is gone, Clowds, Dewes, and Dangers come; our deeds are done: Miftrut of my succeffe hath done this deed. Miffa. Miftrut of good succeffe hath done this deed. O hatefull Error, Melancholies Childe: Why don't thou shew to the apt thoughts of men The things that are not? O Error fooe concey'd, Thou never com't vnto a happy byrth, But kil't the Mother that engendred thee. Tit. What Pindarussels? Where art thou Pindarussels? Miffa. Seekhe him Titinius, whilst I go to meet The Noble Brutus, thruffling this report Into his ears; I may fay thruffling it: For piercing Steele, and Darts inuenomend, Shall be as welcome to the ears of Brutus, As tydings of this fight. Tit. Hye you Miffa, And I will seeke for Pindarussels the while: Why did'th thou send me forth braue Casius? Did I not meet thy Friends, and did not they Put on my Browes this wreath of Victorie, And bid me glue it thee? Did'th thou not heare their Alas, thou haft misconstrued every thing. (flows? But hold thee, take this Garland on thy Brow, Thy Brutus bid me glue it thee, and I Will do his bidding. Brutus, come apace, And see how I regarded Caius Casius: By your leave Gods: This is a Romans part, Come Caius Sword, and finde Titinius hart. Dies

Alarum. Enter Brutus, Miffa, young Cato, Strato, Volumnius, and Lucillius. Brutus. Where, where Miffa, doth his body lye? Miffa. Loe yonder, and Titinius mourning it. Brutus. Titinius face is upvward. Cat. He is flaine. Brutus. O Iulius Caesar, thou art mighty yet, Thy Spirit walks abroad, and turnses our Swords In oure proper Entrailes. Cato. Brute Titinius, Looke where he have not crown'd dead Caius. Brutus. Are yet two Romans living such as these? The laft of all the Romans, far thee well: It is impoffible, that euer Rome Should breed thy fellow.Friends I owe me teares To this dead man, then you all fee me pay. I flall finde time, Casius: I flall finde time. Come thereafter, and to Tharthus fend his body, His Funerals shall not be in our Campe, Leaff it difcomforth vs. Lucillius come, And come young Cato, let vs to the Field, Labio and Flavius fet our Battailes on: 'Tis three a clocke, and Romans yet ere night, We shall try Fortune in a fecond fight. Exeunt.

Alarum. Enter Brutus, Miffa, Cato, Lucillius, and Flavius. Brutus. Yet Country-men: O yet, hold vp your heads. Cato. What Baffard doth not? Who will go with me? I will proclaim my name about the Field. I am the Sonne of Marcus Cato, hoe. A Foe to Tyrants, and my Countries Friend. I am the Sonne of Marcus Cato, hoe. Enter Souldiers, and fight. And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, I, Brutus my Countries Friend: Know me for Brutus. Luc. O yong and Noble Cato, art thou downe? Why now thou dyest, as brauely as Titinius, And may'be honour'd, being Cato's Sonne. Sold. Yeyeld, or thou dyest. Luc. Onely I yeeld to dye: There is so much, that thou wilt kill me straight: Kill Brutus, and be honour'd in his death. Sold. We must not: a Noble Prifoner.

Enter Antony.

2. Sold. Roomes hoes: tell Antony, Brutus is tane. 1 Sold. Ite tell thee newes. Here comes the Generall, Brutus is tane, Brutus is tane my Lord. Ant. Where is he? Luc. Safe Antony, Brutus is safe enough: I dare affure thee, that no Enemy Shall euer take alive the Noble Brutus: The Gods defend him from so great a flame, When you do finde him, or alue, or dead, He will be found like Brutus, like himselfe. Ant. This is not Brutus friend, but I affure you, A prize no leffe in worth; keepe this man safe, Glue him all kindnesse. I had rather have Such men my Friends, then Enemies. Go on, And fee where Brutus be alive or dead, And bring vs word, vnto Oculanius Tent: How every thing is chanc'd. Exeunt.

Enter Brutus, Dardanius, Clitus, Strato, and Volumnius.

The Tragedie of Julius Cæsar.

Cly. Fly, flye my Lord, there is no tarrying here.

Bru. Farewell to you, and you, and you Voluminius.

Strato, thou hast bin all this while asleeps.

Farewell to thee, to Strato, Countrymen:

My heart doth joy, that yet in all my life,
I found no man, but he was true to me.

I shall have glory by this looking day
More than Octavius, and Mark Antony,

By this vile Conquest shall attaine vnto

So fare you well at once, for Brutus tongue

Hath almost ended his liues History:

Night hangs vpon mine eyes, my Bones would rest,
That haue but labour'd, to attaine this houre.

Alarum. Cry within, Flye, flye, flye, flye.

Cly. Fly my Lord, flye.

Bru. Hence: I will follow:

I pray thee Strato, stay thou by thy Lord,

Thou art a Fellow of a good repect:

Thy life hath had some finatch of Honor in it,
Hold then my Sword, and turne away thy face,
While I do run vp on it. Wilt thou Strato?

Strato. Give me your hand first. Fare you wel my Lord.

Bru. Farewell good Strato, - Cæsar, now be still,
I kill'd not thee with halfe so good a will.

Dye.

Oæa. What man is that?

Messæ. My Masters man. Strato, where is thy Master?

Strato. Free from the Bondage you are in Messala,
The Conquerors can but make a fire of him:
For Brutus onely overcame himselfe,
And no man else hath Honor by his death.

Lucil. So Brutus should be found, I thank thee Brutus

That thou hast proud Lucullus saying true,

Oæa. All that fer'd Brutus, I will entertaine them.

Fellow, wilt thou beftow thy time with me?

Strato. If Messala will preferre me to you.

Oæa. Do fo, good Messala.

Messæ. How dyed my Master Strato?

Strato. I held the Sword, and he did run on it.

Messè. Octavius, then take him to follow thee,

That did the latest seruice to my Master.

Ant. This was the Noblest Roman of them all:
All the Conspirators faue onely hee,
Did that they did, in enuy of great Cæsar:
He, onely in a generall honest thought,

And common good to all, made one of them.
His life was gentle, and the Elements

So mix't in him, that Nature might stand vp,

And pay to all the world; This was a man.

Oæa. According to his Vertue, let vs vs him

Withall Respect, and Rites of Buriall.
Within my Tent his bones to night shall ly,

Most like a Souldier ordered Honourably:

So call the Field to rest, and let's away,

To part the glories of this happy day. Exeunt omnes.

FINIS.
THE TRAGEDIE OF MACBETH.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Thunder and Lightning. Enter three Witches.

1. W. Hen shall we three meet againe?
2. When the Hurley-burley's done,
3. That will be ere the set of Sunne.

2. Vpon the Heath.
3. There to meet with Macbeth.
1. I come, Gray-Malkin.
All. Padock calls anon: faire is foule, and foule is faire.
Houre through the fogge and fithie ayre.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

ALARUM within. Enter King Malcolm, Donalbaine, Lenox, with attendants, meeting a bleeding Captaine.

King. What bloody man is that? he can report, As freemeth by his plight, of the Reuolt The newtest rate.

Mal. This is the Serieant, Who like a good and hardie Souldier fought 'Gainst my Captuittie: Halle braue friend; Say to the King, the knowledge of the Broyle, As thou didst leave it.

Cap. Doubtfull it ftood,
As two spent Swimmers, that doe cling together, And choseke their Art: The mercelife Macdowald (Worthie to be a Rebell, for to that The multiplying Villanies of Nature Doe (warne vpon him) from the Westerne Isles Of Kernes and Gallowgroffles is supply'd, And Fortune on his damned Querry smiling, Shew'd like a Rebbels Wbroe: but all's too wakfe:
For braue Macbeth (well hee deffers that Name) Difsayning Fortune, with his brandifht Steele, Which fmoak'd with bloody execution (Like Valours Minion) car'd out his paffage, Till hee fac'd the Slauae:
Which neu'r shooke hands, nor bad farwell to him, Till he vnfeam'd him from the Naue toth' Chops, And fix'd his Head vpon our Battlemenes.

King. O valiant Cousin, worthy Gentleman.
Cap. As whence the Sunne 'gins his refelution, Shipwracking Stormes, and direfull Thunder:
So from that Spring, whence comfort feem'd to come, Discomfit mowells: Marke King of Scotland, marke, No sooner Justice had, with Valour arm'd, Compell'd thefe skipping Kerne to truft their heels,
But the Norweyan Lord, surveying vantage, With furbusht Armes, and new supplyes of men,
Began a fresh affault.

King. Dismay not this our Captaines, Macbeth and Banquo?
Cap. Yes, as Sparrowes, Eagles;
Or the Hare, the Lyon:
If I say footh, I must report they were As Cannons ouer-charg'd with double Cracks,
So they doubly redoubled strokes vpon the Foe:
Except they meant to bathe in reeking Wounds,
Or memorize another Golgotha,
I cannot tell: but I am faint,
My Gaffes cry for helpe.

King. So well thy words become thee, as thy wounds,
They imack of Honor both: Goe get him Surgeons.

Enter Rosse and Angus.

Who comes here?

Mal. The worthy Than of Rosse.

Lenox. What a haue lookest through his eyes?

So should he looke, that feemes to speake things strange.

Roffe. God faue the King.

King. Whence can't thou, worthy Than?

Roffe. From Fiffe, great King,

Where the Norweyan Banners flowt the Skie,
And fanno our people cold.

Norway himselfe, with terrible numbers,
Affifted by that moft difloyall Traytor,
The Than of Cawdor, began a difmall Conflict,
Till that Ballona's Bridegroome, lapt in prooff,
Confronted him with self-comparifons, Point against Point, rebellious Arme 'gainft Arme,
Curbing his lauisf spirit: and to conclude,
The Victorie fell on vs.

King. Great happeffife.

Roffe. That now, Sweno, the Norweyan King,

Craues composition:
Nor would we deigne him burial of his men,
Till hee disburfed, at Saint Colnes yneh,
Ten thousand Dollars, to our generall vfe.

King. No.
The Tragedy of Macbeth.

Scena Tertia.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

1. Where haft thou seen, Sister?
2. Killing Swine.
3. Sister, where thou?
1. A Sylors Wife had Chestnuts in her Lappe, And mouncht, & mouncht, & mouncht:
   Glue me, quoth I.
Aroyn the Witch, the rumpe-fed Ryonon cries.
Her Husband's to Aleppo gone, Mafter o'th Tiger:
But in a Synne Ile thither sail ye,
And like a Rat without a taile, Ile doe, Ile doe, and Ile doe.
2. Ilue ghee thee a Winde.
1. Th'art kinde.
3. And I another.
1. I my selfe haue all the other,
And the very Ports they blow,
All the Quarters that they know,
I'th Ship-mans Card.
Ile drewe him driest as Hay:
Sleepe shall neyther Night nor Day
Hang vpon his Pant-houfe Lid:
He shall live a man forbid:
Wearie Sea'nights, nine times nine,
Shall he dwindle, peake, and pine:
Though his Barke cannot be loof,
Yet it shall be Tempest-toft.
Looke what I haue.
2. Shew me, shew me.
1. Here I haue a Pilots Thumbe,
Wrackt, as homeward he did come.
3. A Drumme, a Drumme:
Macbeth doth come.
All. The weyward Sifters, hand in hand,
Potters of the Sea and Land,
Thus doe goe, about, about,
Thrice to thine, and thrice to mine,
And thrice againe, to make vp nine.
Peace, the Charme's wound vp.

Enter Macbeth and Banquo.

Mac. So foule and faire a day I haue not seene.
Banq. How farre is't call'd to Soris? What are these, So wither'd, and so wilde in their a'tyre,
That looke not like th'Inhabitants o'th'Earth,
And yet are on't? Looke you, or are you aught
That man may question? you feeme to undersand me,
By each at once her choppee finger laying
Vpon her skinnie Lips: you should be Women,
And yet your Beards forbid me to interprete
That you are fo.

Mac. Speake if you can: what are you?
1. All haile Macbeth, haile to thee Thane of Glamis.
2. All haile Macbeth, haile to thee Thane of Cawdor.
3. All haile Macbeth, that shalt be King hereafter.
Banq. Good Sir, why doe you start, and feeme to feare Things that doe found to faire? I'th name of truth Are ye fantastical, or that indeed Which outwardly ye shew? My Noble Partner You greet with preight Grace, and great predicion Of Noble having, and of Royall hope,
That he femees wrapt withall: to me you speake not.
If you can looke into the Seedes of Time,
And say, which Graine will grow, and which will not,
Speake then to me, who neither begge, nor feare Your fawors, nor your hate.
1. Hayle.
2. Hayle.
3. Hayle.
1. Leffer then Macbeth, and greater.
2. Not fo happy, yet much happier.
3. Thou shalt get Kings, though thou be none:
So all haile Macbeth, and Banquo.
1. Banquo, and Macbeth, all haile.

Mac. Stay you imperfed Speakers, tell me more:
By Sinet's death, I know I am Thane of Glamis,
But how, of Cawdor? the Thane of Cawdor lives
A prosperous Gentleman: And to be King,
Stands not within the prospect of beleere,
No more then to be Cawdor.
Say howe that Graine will grow and why
Vpon this blasted Heath you fop our way
With such Propheticke greeting?
Speake, I charge you.

Witches vanishe.

Banq. The Earth hath bubbles, as the Water ha's,
And thefe are of them: whither are they vanishe'd?
Mac. Into the Ayre: and what feem'd corporall,
Melted, as breath into the Winde.
Would they had stay'd.
Banq. Were fuch things here, as we doe speake about?
Or haue we eaten on the infaine Root,
That takes the Reafon Prisoner?
Mac. Your Children shall be Kings.
Banq. You shall be King.

Mac. And Thane of Cawdor too: went it not fo?
Banq. Tho'felfe-fame tune, and words: who's here?

Enter Raffe and Angus.

Raffe. The King hath happily receiued'd, Macbeth,
The newes of thy successe: and when he reade
Thy perfonall Venture in the Rebels fight,
His Wonders and his Prayses doe contenue,
Which should be thine, or his: elenc'd with that,
In viewing o're the reft o'th'felfe-fame day,
He findes thee in the flout Norvwegian Ranks,
Nothing afoard of what thy felse didt make
Strange Images of death, as thick as Tale
Can poft with poft, and every one did beare
Thy prayses in his Kingdomes great defence,
And powr'd them downe before him.

Ang. We are fent,
To glue thee from our Royall Mafter thanks,
Onely to harold thee into his fight,
Not pay thee.

Raffe. And for an earnest of a greater Honor,
He bad me from him, call thee Thane of Cawdor :

In
The Tragedie of Macbeth.

In which addition, haile most worthy Thane, For it is thine.

Banq. What, can the Deuill speake true?

Macb. The Thane of Cawdor liues:
Why doe you dreffe me in borrowed Robes?

Ang. Who was the Thane,liues yet,
But ynder heauie Judgement beares that Life,
Which he deferves to loose.

Whether he was combin'd with thofe of Norway,
Or did lyne the Rebell with hidden helpe,
And vantage; or that both he labourd
In his Countrieys wracke, I know not:
But Treafons Capitall, confef's, and proud,'d,
Haue ouerthrown me.

Macb. Glamys, and Thane of Cawdor:
The greatest is behinde. Thankes for your pains.

Doe you not hope your Children shall be Kings,
When thofe that gaue the Thane of Cawdor to me,
Promis'd no leffe to them.

Banq. That trusted home,
Might yet enkindle you vnto the Crowne,
Befides the Thane of Cawdor. But 'tis strange:
And offtentimes, to winne vs to our harme,
The Infrumens of Darkneffe tell vs Truths,
Winne vs with honeft Trifles, to betray's
In deepeft confequence.

Coulifs, a word, I pray you.

Macb. Two Truths are told,
As happy Prologues to the dwelling Act
Of the imperiall Thame. I thanke you Gentlemens:
This supernaturall folliciting
Cannot be ill; cannot be good.
If ill? why hath it giuen me earnest of succeffe,
Commencing in a Truth? I am Thane of Cawdor.
If good? why doe I yeeld to that fuggelion,
Whole horrid Image doth vnfixe my Heire,
And make my feated Heart knock at my Ribbes,
Against the vfe of Nature? Prefsent Feares.

Are leffe then horrible Imaginings:
My Thought, whole Murther yet is but fantaffical,
Shakes to my fingle flate of Man,
That Function is thondred in furnife,
And nothing is, but what is not.

Banq. Looke how our Partner's rapt.

Macb. If Chance will haue me King,
Why Chance may Crowne me,
Without my firre.

Banq. New Honors come vpon him
Like our ftrange Garments, cleave not to their mould,
But with the aid of vie.

Macb. Come what come may,
Time, and the Horrour, runs through the roughest Day.

Banq. Worthy Macbeth, wee stay vpon your ley-ure.

Macb. Give me your favoure:
My dull Braine was wrouht with things forgotten.
Kinde Gentlemens, your paines are registred,
Where every day I turne the Leaf,
To reade them.

Let vs toward the King: thinke vpon
What hath chanc'd: and at more time,
The Interim hauing weighd it, let vs speake
Our free Hearts each to other.

Banq. Very gladly.

Macb. Till then enough:
Come friends. Exeunt.
Shake my fell purpose, nor keepe peace betweene
Th’effed, and hit. Come to my Womans Breifs,
And take my Milke for Gall, you murther’ring Minifters,
Where-euer, in your fightlesse Substances,
You wait on Natures Mischiefe. Come thick Night,
And pall thee in the dunnet fmoake of Heil,
That my keene Knife fee not the Wound it makes,
Nor Heauen peep through the Blanket of the darke,
To cry, hold,hold.,  Enter Macbeth.
Great Glamys, worthy Cawdor,
Greater then both, by the all-haile hereafter,
This ignorant prent, and I feele now
The future in the infant.

Macb. My dearest Loue,
Duncan comes here to Night.
Lady. And when goes hence?
Macb. To morrow, as he purposeth.
Lady. O neuer,
Shall Sunne that Morrow fee.
Your Face, my Thane, is as a Booke, where men
May reade strange matters, to beguile the time.
Looke like the time, beare welcome in your Eye,
Your Hand, your Tongue: looke like th’innocent flower,
But be the Serpent vnder’t. He that’s comming,
Muf’t be provied for: and you shall put
This Nights great Busifneffe into my dispacht,
Which shall to all our Nights, and Dayes to come,
Gleue solely soueraine sway, and Mafterdome.

Macb. We will speake further.
Lady. Onely looke vp cleare:
To alter favor, euer is to feare:
Leau all the reft to me.  Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Hoboys, and Torches. Enter King, Malcolme,
Donalbaine, Banque, Lenox, Macduff,
Roffe, Angus, and Attendants.

King. This Caffie hath a pheasant feat,
The ayre nimbly and sweettly recommends it selfe
Vnto our gentle fences.

Banq. This Guett of the Summer,
The Temple-haunting Barlet does approue,
By his loued Manifory, that the Hauens breath
Smells woowingly here: no lutty frrize,
Buttrice, nor Coigne of Vantange, but this Bird
Hath made his pendent Bed, and procreant Cradle,
Where they muft breed, and haunt: I haue obferv’d
The ayre is delicate.

Enter Lady.

King. See, fee, our honor’d Hostes:
The Loue that fowles vs, fometime is our trouble,
Which fll we thanke as Loue. Herein I teach you,
How you fhall bid God-eye’d vs for your paines,
And thanke vs for your trouble.

Lady. All our fervice,
In every point twice done, and then done double,
Were poore, and flinge Busifneffe, to contend
Agains thes Honor deep, and broard,
Werethre with your Maielfie loads our Houfe:
For thes of old, and the late Dignittes,
Heap’d vp to them, we reft our Ermites.

King. Where’s 724
The Tragedie of Macbeth.

King. Where's the Thane of Cawdor?
We court him at the heeles, and had a purpose
To be his Purveyor: But he rides well,
And his great Love (sharpe as his Spurre)hath holp him
To his home before vs: Faire and Noble Hoftesse
We are your guest to night.
La. Your Servants euer,
Haue theirs, themselfes, and what is theirs in compt,
To make their Audit at your Hoftesse pleasure,
Still to returne your owne.
King. Give me your hand:
Conduckt me to mine Hoft we loue him highly,
And shall continue, our Graves towards him.
By your leaue Hoftesse.

---

Scena Septima.

He-boyes. Torches.

Enter a Seruer, and divers Servants with Diptes and Seruice.

Over the Stage. Then enter Macbeth.

Macb. If it were done, when 'tis done, then 'twere well,
It were done quickly: If 'tis Affimation
Could trammell vp the Confese, and catch
With his furrace, Success: that but this blow
Might be the be all, and the end all. Heere,
But heere, vpon this Banke and Schoole of time,
Wee'd lume the life to come. But in these Cafes,
We fill haue judgement heere, that we but teach
Bloody Instrucons, which being taught, returne
To plague th'inuentor, This euen-handed Juflice
Commends th'Ingreduence of our poyfon'd Challice
To our owne lips. Hee's heere in double truft;
First, as I am his Kinman, and his Subject,
Strong both against the Deed: Then, as his Hoft,
Who should against his Munther shuvt the doore,
Not beare the knife my selfe. Besides, this Duncan
Hath borne his Facultes fo meke; hath bin
So cleere in his great Office, that his Vertues
Will please like Angels, Trumpet-tongu'd against
The deepe damnation of his taking off:
And Pitty, like a naked New-borne-Babe,
Striding the blatt, or Haueuns Cherubin, hors'd
Vpon the fightleffe Curriors of the Ayre,
Shall blow the horrid dewd in evey eye,
That teares shall drowning the winde.
I haue no Spurre
To pricke the fides of my intent, but onely
Vaulting Ambition, which ore-leape it felfe,
And falles on th'other. Enter Lady.

How now? What News?
La. He hath almoft fumpt why haue you left the chamber?

Mac. Hath he ask'd for me?
La. Know you not, he ha's?

Mac. We will proceed no further in this Buinesse:
He hath Honour'd me of late, and I haue bought
Golden Opinions from all forts of people,
Which would be worne now in their neweft glofe,
Not caft aside fo soone.
La. Was the hope drunke,
Wherein you drest your felle? Hath it flept fince?
And wakes it now to looke fo greene, and pale,
At what it did fo freely? From this time,
Such I account thy loue. Art thou afferd
To be the faile in thine owne Aét, and Valour,
As thou art in defire? Would't thou haue that

Which thou esteem't the Ornament of Life,
And live a Coward in thine owne Esteeme?
Letting I dare not, wait vpon I would,
Like the poor Cat i'th'Addage.

Macb. Prythee peace:
I dare do all that may become a man,
Who dares no more, is none.
La. What Beast was'then
That made you breake this enterprize to me?
When you durft do it, then you were a man:
And to be more then what you were, you would
Be fo much more the man. Nor time, nor place
Did then adhure, and yet you would make both:
They haue made themfelves, and that their fittiefe now
Do's vnmake you. I haue guen Sucke, and know
How tender 'tis to loue the Babe that milkes me,
I would, while it was fmyling in my Face,
Haue pluckt my Nipple from his Bonellefe Gummies,
And daft the Braines out, had I fo fwerne
As you haue done to this.

Macb. If we should faile?

Lady. We faile?

But screw your courage to the flicking place,
And wee'l not fayle: when Duncan is alfeep,
(Wheroeto the rather shall his dayes hard journey Soundly invite him) his two Chamberlaines
Will I with Wine, and Waffle, fo communie,
That Memorie, the Warder of the Braine,
Shall be a Fume, and the Recept of Reafon
A Lymbecke onely: when in Swinghe fleepe,
Their drenchd Natures eyes as in a Death,
What cannot you and I performe vpon
Th'vnguarded Duncan? What not put vpon
His fplunge Opinions? who shall bear the guilt
Of our great quell.

Macb. Bring forth Men-Children onely:
For thy undaunted Mettle shoulde compose
Nothing but Males. Will it not be receu'd,
When we haue mark'd with blood those fleepie two
Of his owne Chamber, and vs'd their very Daggers,
That they haue don't?

Lady. Who dares receiue it other,
As we shall make our Griefes and Clamor rore,
Vpon his Death?

Macb. I am fettled, and bend vp
Each corporall Agent to this terrible Feat.
Away, and mock the time with faireft show,
Falié Face must hide what the falle Heart doth know.

---

Aétus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Banquo, and Fleance, with a Torch before him.

Banq. How goes the Night, Boy?
Fleance. The Moone is downe: I haue not heard the Clock.

Banq. And she goes downe at Twelue.
Fleance. I take't, 'tis later, Sir.

Banq. Hold, take my Sword:

There's Husbandry in Heauen,
Their Candles are all out: take thee that too.

m m 2 A
The Tragedie of Macbeth.

136

A haue Summons yse like Lead vpon me,
And yet I would not sleepe:
Merrifull Powers, refraine in me the cursed thoughts
That Nature giues way to in repofe.

Enter Macbeth, and a Servant with a Torch.

Gie me my Sword: who's there?

Macb. A Friend.

Ban. What Sir, not yet at rest? the Kings a bed.
He hath beene in vnuill! Pleasure,
And sient forth great Largefeü to your Offices.
This Diamond he grettes your Wife withall,
By the name of moft kind Hopeffe,
And shut vp in measureless content.

Mac. Being vnprepar'd,
Our will became the seruant to defeet,
Which else should free have wrought.
Ban. All's well.
I dreamt laft Night of the three wayerd Sifters:
To you they haue shew'd some truth.

Macb. I thinke not of them:
Yet when we can entreat an hour to serue,
We would speake in some words vpon that Busineffe,
If you would graunt the time.

Ban. At your kind'ft leasure.

Macb. If you shall cleaue to my content,
When 'tis, it shall make Honor for you.

Ban. So I lofe none,
In seeking to augment it, but still keepe
My Bofome franchis'd, and Allengeance cleare,
I shall be counfai'd.

Macb. Good repofe the while.

Ban. Thankes Sirs; the like to you. Exit Banque.

Macb. Goe bid thy Miftreffe, when my drinke is ready,
She strike vpon the Bell. Get thee to bed. Exit.

Is this a Dagger, which I fee before me,
The Handle toward my Hand? come, let me clutch thee:
I haue thee not, and yet I see thee still.
Art thou not fatal Vifion, fenfible
To feeling, as to fight? or art thou but
A Dagger of the Minde, a falfe Creation,
Proceding from the heat-oppreffed Braine?
I fee thee yet, in forme as palpable,
As this which now I draw.
Thou marshall'me the way that I was going,
And such an Instrument I was to vfe.
Mine Eyes are made the fooles o' th'other Sense,
Or else worth all the reft: I see thee still;
And on thy Blade, and Dudgeon, Gouts of Blood,
Which was no bofore. There's no such thing:
It is the bloody Busineffe, which informs
Thus to mine Eyes. Now o' the one halfe World
Nature feemes dead, and wicked Dreames abuse
The Curtain'sleepe: Witchcraft cerebrates
Pale Heccat Offrings: and wither'd Murthere,
Alarum'd by his Centinell, the Wolfe,
Whoe howle's his Watch, thus with his healthly pace,
With Tarquins rauifhing fides, towardes his designe
Moues like a Ghost. Thou fowre and firme-fet Earth
Heare not my steps, which they may walke, for feare
Thy very fones prate of my where-about,
And take the prefent horror from the time,
Which now futes with it. Whiles I threat, he lifies:
Words to the heat of deedes too cold breath giues.

A Bell ringes.

I goe, and it is done: the Bell inuite me.
Heare it not, Duncan, for it is a Knell,
That fummons thee to Heauen, or to Hell. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Lady.

La. That which hath made the drunk hath made me bold:
What hath quench'd them, hath giuen me fire.
Heare, peace: it was the Owle that fhirke'd,
The fatten Bell-man, which giues the fem't good-night.
He is about it, the Doores are open:
And the efuerfed Groomes doe mock their charge
With Snores. I have drugg'd their Poffets,
That Death and Nature doe contend about them,
Whether they live, or dye.

Enter Macbeth.

Macb. Who's there? what hoa?
Lady. Alack, I am afraid they haue awk'd,
And 'ts not done: that attempt, and not the deed;
Confounds vs; heareke: I lay'd their Daggers ready,
He could not maffe 'em. Had he not relemibed
My Father as he fleep't, I had don't.
My Husband?

Macb. I haue done the deed:
Didst thou not heare a noyfe?
Lady. I heard the Owle fchream, and the Crickets cry.
Did not you fpeake?

Macb. When?

Lady. Now.

Macb. As I defended?

Lady. I.

Macb. Heareke, who yees i'th'fecond Chamber?

Lady. "Donalbiaine.

Mac. This is a forry fight.

Lady. A foolish thought, to fay a forry fight.

Mac. There's one did laugh in's fleep,
And one cry'd Murthere, that they did wake each other:
I fround, and heard them: But they did fay their Prayers,
And addreft them againe to fleep.

Lady. There are two lodg'd together.

Macb. One cry'd God bleffe vs, and Amen the other,
As they had fene me with thefe Hangmans hands:
Liftning their feare, I could not fay Amen,
When they did fay God bleffe vs.

Lady. Confider it not fo deeply.

Macb. But wherefore could not I pronounce Amen?
I had moft need of Bleffing, and Amen ftruck in my throat.

Lady. These deeds mift not be thought
After thefes wayes: fo, it will make vs mad.

Macb. Me thought I heard a voyce cry, Sleep no more:

Macb. does murthere Sleepe, the innocent Sleepe,
Sleepe that knits vp the rauel'd Sleeue of Care,
The death of each dayes Life, fore Labors Bath,
Balm of hurt Minded, great Natures fecond Courfe,
Chiefs nourifher in Life's Fefl.

Lady. What doe you mean?

Macb. Still it cry'd, Sleepe no more to all the Houfe:

Macb. hath murthere'd Sleepe, and therefore Cander
Shall sleepe no more: Macbeth shall sleepe no more.

Lady. Who was it, that thus cry'd? why worthy Thane,
You doe vaend your Noble strength, to thinke
So braine-fickly of things; Goet some Water,
Enter Macduff, and Lenox.

Macd. Was it so late, friend, ere you went to Bed, That you doe lye so late?
Port. Faith Sir, we were carowning till the second Cock: And Drink, Sir, is a great provoker of three things.
Macd. What three things does Drink, especially provoke?
Port. Marry, Sir, Nose-painting, Sleep, and Vrine. Lecherie, Sir, it provokes, and vnprovokes it provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance. Therefore much Drink may be said to be an Equiuocator with Lecherie: it makes him, and it marres him; it fets him on, and it takes him off; it perfwades him, and dif-heartens him; makes him faund too, and not found too: in conclusion, equiuocates him in a sleepe, and giving him the Lye, leaves him.
Macd. I beleue, Drink gave thee the Lye last Night.
Port. That it did, Sir, the very Throst on me: but I requited him for his Lye, and I (I thinke) being too strong for him, though he tooke vp my Legges sometime, yet I made a Shift to caft him.

Enter Macbeth.

Macd. Is thy Master firling?
Our knocking ha's awak'd him: here he comes.
Lenox. Good morrow, Noble Sir.
Macb. Good morrow both.
Macd. Is the King firling, worthy Thane?
Macb. Not yet.
Macd. He did command me to call timely on him, I have almost flipt the hour.
Ma b. Ile bring you to him.
Macd. I know this is a joyfull trouble to you: But yet 'tis one.
Macb. The labour we delight in, Phyicks paine:
This is the Doore.
Macd. Ile make fo bold to call, for 'tis my limited service.

Exit Macduff.
Lenox. Goes the King hence to day?
Macd. He does: he did appoint fo.
Lenox. The Night ha's been vntruly:
Where we lay, our Chimneys were blowne downe,
And (as they fay) lamentings heard i'th'Ayre Strange Schremes of Death,
And Prophecying, with Accents terrible,
Of dyre Combultion, and confus'd Events,
New hatch'd toth' wofull time
The obfure Bird clamor'd thelie-long Night.
Some fay, the Earth was feuorous,
And did flake.
Macb. 'Twas a rough Night.
Lenox. My young remembrance cannot paralle
A fellow to it.

Enter Macduff.

Macd. O horror, horror, horror,
Tongue nor Heart cannot conceive, nor name thec.
Macb. and Lenox. What's the matter?
Macd. Confusion now hath made his Master-peece:
Moft facrefigious Murther hath broke ope
The Lords anointed Temple, and folle thence
The Life o'th Building.
Macb. What it's you fay, the Life?
Lenox. Meane you the Maifiefe?
Macd. Approch the Chamber, and destroy your fight
With a new Gargon. Doe not bid me speake:

m m 3
See, and then speak your felues: awake, awake,
Exeunt Macbeth and Lenox.

Ring the Alarum Bell: Murther, and Treason,
Banquo, and Donalbain: Malcolm awake,
Shake off this Downey flepe, Deaths counterfeit,
And looke on Death it selfe: vp, vp, and see
The great Doomes Image: Malcolm, Banquo,
As from your Graues rife vp, and walke like Sprights,
To countenance this horror. Ring the Bell.
Bell rings. Enter Lady.

Lady. What's the Buineife?
That such a hideous Trumpet calls to parley
The sleepers of the House? speake, speake.

Macd. O gentle Lady,
'Tis not for you to heare what I can speake:
The repetition in a Womans eare,
Would murther as it fell.

Enter Banquo.
O Banquo, Banquo, Our Royall Masters mother'd.
Lady. Woe, alas:
What, in our Houfe?
Ban. Too cruel, any where.
Dear Duff, I prythee contradict thy selfe,
And fay, it is not fo.

Enter Macbeth, Lenox, and Raffoe.

Macb. Had I but dy'd an houre before this chance,
I had liu'd a bleffed time: for from this inftant,
There's nothing ferior in Mortalitie:
All is but Toyes: Renowne and Grace is dead,
The Wine of Life is drawne, and the meere Lees
Is left this Vault, to brag of.

Enter Malcolm and Donalbaine.

Donal. What is amiffe?
Macb. You are, and doe know't:
The Spring, the Head, the Fountaine of your Blood
Is ftopt, the very Source of it is ftopt.

Macd. Your Royall Father's mother'd.
Mal. Oh, by whom?
Lenox. Thofe of his Chamber, as it feem'd,had done:
Their Hands and Faces were all badg'd with blood,
So were their Daggers, which vnwp'd, we found
Upon their Pillowes; they flar'd, and were diftracted,
No mans Life was to be trufted with them.

Macb. O, yet I doe repent me of my furie,
That I did kill them.

Macd. Wherefore did you fo?
Donal. Who can be wife, amaz'd, temp'rate, & furious,
Loyall, and Neutrall, in a moment? No man:
Th'expedition of my violent Loue
Out-run the pawer, Reafon. Here lay Duncan,
His Silver kinne, lac'd with his Golden Blood,
And his gath'd Stabs, look'd like a Breach in Nature,
For Ruines waftfull entrance: there the Murtherers,
Steep'd in the Colours of their Trade; their Daggers
Vnmannerly breech'd with gore: who could refraine,
That had a heart to loue; and in that heart,
Courage, to make's loue knowne?

Lady. Helpe me hence, hoa.

Macd. Look to the Lady
Mal. Why doe we hold our tongues,
That moft may clayme this argument for ours?

Donal. What should be fpoken here,

Where our Fate hid in an augure hole,
May ruft, and feize vs? Let's away,
Our Tearles are not yet brend'

Mal. Nor our strong Sorrow
Upon the foot of Motion.
Banq. Looke to the Lady:
And when we have our naked Frailties hid,
That fuffer in expofure; let vs meet,
And queftion this moft bloody piece of worke,
To know it further. Fears and scruples shake vs:
In the great Hand of God I fland; and thence,
Against the vnjudg'd pretence, I fight
Of Trefonous Mallice.

Macd. And fo doe I.
All. So all.

Macb. Let's briefly put on manly readinesse,
And meet i'th' Hall together.

All. Well contented. Exeunt.

Mac. What will you doe?
Let's not confort with them:
To fiew an vnfelt Sorrow, is an Office
Which the false man do's eafe;
Ile to England.

Don. To Ireland, I:
Our seperated fortunes fhall keepe vs both the fayer:
Where we are, there's Daggers in mens Smiles;
The neere in blood, the nearer bloody.

Mac. This murtherous Shaft that's fhot,
Hath not yet lighted,and our fafte way,
Is to avoid the ayme. Therefore to Hore,
And let vs not be daintie of leave-taking,
But shift away: there's warrant in that Theft,
Which flaines it felfe, when there's no mercie left.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Raffe, with an Old man.

Old man. Threescore and ten I can remember well,
Within the Volume of which Time, I haue feene
Houres dreadful, and things strange: but this fore Night
Hath trifled former knowings.

Raffe. Ha, good Father,
Thou feelst the Heauens, as troubled with mans Aet,
Threatens his bloody Stage: byrh' Clock 'tis Day,
And yet darke Night ftrangles the travailing Lampe :
In't Nights predominance, or the Days flame,
That Darknefe does the face of Earth intomb,
When liuing Light fhou'd kiffe it?

Old man. 'Tis unnatural,
Euen like the deed that's done: On Tuesday laft,
A Fauicon towning in her pride of place,
Was by a Mowifying Owle hawk'd at, and kill'd.

Raffe. And Duncauns Horfes,
( A thing moft strange, and certaine)
Beauteous, and Swift, the Minions of their Race,
Turn'd wilde in nature,broke their ftails, flong out,
Contending 'gainf Obedience, as they would Make Warre with Mankinde.

Old man. 'Tis fay'd, they eate each other.

Raffe. They did fo:
The Tragedy of Macbeth.

To th’amazement of mine eyes that look’d vp on’t.

Enter Macduff.

Here cometh the good Macduff.

How goes the world Sir, now?

Mac. Why fee you not?

Roff. Is’t known who did this more then bloody deed?

Mac. Thosethat Macbeth hath slaine.

Roff. Alas the day,

What good could they pretend?

Mac. They were subborned,

Malcolm, and Donalbain the Kings two Sonnes

Are flowne away and fled, which puts vp on them

Supposition of the deed.

Roff. Gainst Nature full,

Thristleff Ambition, that will rauen vp

Thine owne liues means : Then ’tis most like,

The Soueraignty will fall vp on Macbeth.

Mac. He is already nam’d, and gone to Scone

To be inueited.

Roff. Where is Duncan body?

Mac. Carried to Colmekill,

The Sacred Store-house of his Predecessors,

And Guardian of their Bones.

Roff. Will you to Scone?

Mac. No Cofin, Ile to Pife.

Roff. Well, I will thither.

Mac. Well may you fee things wel done there: Adieu

Leaft our old Robes fit easier then our new.

Roff. Farewell, Father.

Old M. Gods benyfon go with you, and with those

That would make good of bad, and Friends of Foes.

Exeunt omnes.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Banquo.

Banq. Thou haft it now, King, Cawdor, Glamis, all,

As the weyward Women promis’d, and I fear

Thou play’dst most lowly for’t: yet it was faide

It should not stand in thy Potestie.

But that my selfe should be the Roote, and Father

Of many Kings. If there come truth from them,

As ypon thee Macbeth, their Speeches shine,

Why by the verities on thee made good,

May they not be my Oracles as well,

And let me vp in hope. But huff, no more.

Senit founded. Enter Macbeth as King, Lady Lenox,

Roffe, Lords, and Attendants.

Mac. Here’s our chiefe Guett.

La. If he had beene forgotten,

It had bene as a gap in our great Feast,

And all-thing vnbecoming.

Macb. To night we hold a solemnne Supper fir,

And Ile requite your presence.

Banq. Let your Highnesse

Command ypon me, to the which my duties

Are with a moft indissoluble tye

For euer knit.

Macb. Ride you this afternoone?

Banq. My good Lord.

Macb. We should have else desir’d your good aduice

(Which fill hath been both graue, and prosperous)

In this dayes Counsell: but wee’d take to morrow.

Is’t farre you ride?

Banq. As farre, my Lord, as will fill vp the time

‘Twixt this, and Supper. Goe not my Horfe the better,

I must become a borrower of the Night,

For a darke hour, or twaine.

Macb. Falle not our Feast.

Banq. My Lord, I will not.

Macb. We hear our bloody Cozen’s are beftow’d

In England, and in Ireland, not confesing

Their cruel Parriside, filling their hearers

With strange Inuention. But of that to morrow,

When therewithall, we shall haue cause of State,

Cruing vs ionty: Hye you to Horfe:

Adieu, till you returne at Night.

Goes Pleasance with you?

Banq. I, my good Lord: our time does call vp’n’s.

Macb. I with your Horfes swift, and sure of foot:

And so I doe commend you to their backs.

Farwell. Exit Banquo.

Let every man be master of his time,

Till feuen at Night, to make Societie.

The sweeter welcome:

We will keepe our felle till Supper time alone:

While then, God be with you.

Exeunt Lords.

Sirlha, with you: Attend those men

Our pleasure?

Servant. They are, my Lord, without the Pallace.

Gat. Exit Servant.

To be thus, is nothing, but to be safely thus:

Our fears in Banquo sticke depee.

And in his Royaltie of Nature reignes that

Which would be fear’d. ’Tis much he dares,

And to that dauntleff temper of his Minde,

He hath a Wifdome, that doth guide his Valour,

To act in safetie. There is none but he,

Whose being I doe fear: and vnder him,

My Genius is rebuk’d, as it is fill

Mark Antoniues was by Cesar. He chid the Sifters,

When first they put the Name of King vp on me,

And bad them speake to him. Then Prophet-like,

They hay’d him Father to a Line of Kings.

Vpon my Head they plac’d a fruitfulle Crowne,

And put a barren Scepter in my Gripe,

Thence to be wrencht with an vnlineall Hand,

No Sonne of mine suceeding: if it be so,

For Banquo’s Iffue have I fil’d my Minde,

For them, the gracious Duncan have I murther’d,

Put Rancours in the Veffell of my Peace

Onely for them, and mine eternall Jewell

Guen to the common Enemye of Man,

To make them Kings, the Seedes of Banquo Kings,

Rather then so, come Fate into the Lyft,

And champion me to th’vttterance.

Who’s there?

Enter Servant, and two Murthkeres.

Now goe to the Doore, and stay there till we call.

Exit Servant.

Was it not yesterday we spoke together?

Murthb. It was, to pleae your Highnesse.

Macb. Well then,

Now have you confider’d of my speeches:

Know.
Know, that it was he; in the times past,
Which held you fo vnder fortune,
Which you thought had been our innocent ielfe.
This I made good to you, in our last conference,
Paft in probation with you:
How you were borne in hand, how croft:
The I infruments: who wrought with them:
And all things elfe, that might
To halfe a Soule, and to a Motion craz'd, Say, Thus did Banquo.
1. Murtb. You made it knowne to vs.

Mab. I did so:
And went further, which is now
Our point of second meeting.
Do you finde your patience fo predominant,
In your nature, that you can let this goe?
Are you fo Gospel'd, to pray for this good man,
And for his Iffue, whose heauie hand
Hath bow'd you to the Graue, and begger'd
Yours for ever?
1. Murtb. We are men, my Liege.

Mab. I, in the Catalogue ye goe for men,
As Hounds, and Greyhounds, Mungrs, Spaniels, Curres,
Showges, Water-Kugs, and Demy-Wolues are cleft
All by the Name of D Negroes: the valued file
Distinguishes the swift, the flow, the subtle,
The Houfe-keeper, the Hunter, every one
According to the gift, which bounteous Nature
Hath in him clos'd: whereby he does receive
Particular addition, from the Bill,
That writes them all alike: and fo of men.
Now, if you have a flalion in the file,
Not i'th' worft ranke of Manhood, say't,
And I will put that Businelle in your Bofomes,
Whose execution takes your Enemy off,
Grapples you to the heart; and loue of vs,
Who weare our Health but fickly in his Life,
Which in his Death were perfect.
2. Murtb. I am one, my Liege,
Whom the vile Blowes and Buffets of the World
Hath fo incens'd, that I am reckelleffe what I doe,
To fpite the World.
1. Murtb. And I another,
So weare with Difaffters, tugg'd with Fortune,
That I would fet my Life on any Chance,
To mend it, or be rid on't.

Mab. Both of you know Banquo was your Enemy.
Murtb. True, my Lord.

Mab. So is he mine: and in fuch bloody distance,
That every minute of his being, thrufts
Against my neer'it Life: and though I could
With bare-face'd power, sweep him from my fight,
And bid my will aoucth it; yet I muft not,
For certaine friends that are both his, and mine,
Whose loues I may not drop, but wayle his fall,
Who I my felfe fruck downe: and thence it is,
That I to your affiance doe make loue,
Masking the Businelle from the common Eye,
For fundry weightie Reafons.
2. Murtb. We fhall, my Lord,
Performe what you command vs.
1. Murtb. Though our Lives--

Mab. Your Spirits shine through you.
Within this houre, at moft,
I will advize you where to plant your felles,
Acquaint you with the perfit Spy o' th' time,

The moment on't, for't muft be done to Night,
And something from the Pallace: alwaies thought,
That I require a cleareneffe; and with him,
To leave no Rubs nor Botches in the Worke:
Flams, his Sonne, that keeps him companie,
Whose abfence is no leffe materiall to me,
Then is his Fathers, muft embrace the fate
Of that darke houre: refolve your felles apart,
Ile come to you anon.

Murtb. We are recoll'd, my Lord.

Mab. Ile call upon you fraight: abide within,
It is concluded: Banquo, thy Soules flight,
If it finde Heauen, muft finde it out to Night. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Macbeths Lady, and a Servant.

Lady. Is Banquo gone from Court?

Servant. 1, Madame, but returns againe to Night.

Lady. Say to the King, I would attend his leuyre,
For a few words.

Servant. Madame, I will. Exit.

Lady. Nought's had, all's spent,
Where our defire is got without content:
"Tis faifer, to be that which we defroy,
Then by deftruction dwell in doubtfull joy.

Enter Macbeth.

How now, my Lord, why do you keepe alone?
Of forryeft Fancies your Companions making,
Ving those Thoughts, which shou'd indeed have dy'd
With them they thinke on'things without all remedie
Should be without regard: what's done, is done.

Mab. We haue forsook'd the Snake, not kill'd it:
Shee's clofe, and be her felfe, whilest our poor Mallic
Remaines in danger of her former Tooth.

But let the frame of things dis-joynt,
Both the Worlds fuffer,

Erre we will eate our Mesle in feare, and flepe
In the afflication of these terrible Dreams,
That shake vs Nightly: better be with the dead,
Whom we, to gayne our peace, haue fent to peace,
Then on the torture of the Minde to lye
In reflete extafie.

Duncane is in his Graue:
After Lifes fitfull Feuer, he flepees well,
Treasfon ha's done his worft: nor Steele, nor Poyfon,
Mallic domelique, forraine Leue, nothing,
Can touch him further.

Lady. Come on:
Gentle my Lord, flecke o're your rugged Lookes,
Be bright and louiall among your Gueffes to Night.

Mab. So fhall I Love, and fo I pray be you:
Let your remembrance apply to Banquo,

Preffent him Eminence, both with Eye and Tongue:
Unafe the while, that wee muft laue
Our Honors in thefe flattering fireames,
And make our Faces Vizards to our Hearts,
Difguifing what they are,

Lady. You muft meare this.

Mab. O, full of Scorpions is my Minde, deare Wife:
Thou know'st, that Banquo and his Fleams live.

Lady. But
Lady. But in them, Natures Cupples is not eterne.

Macb. There's comfort yet, they are affiable.

Then be thou iouand: ere the Bat hath flowne
His Cloyter'd flight, ere to black Ileccats summons
The thond-borne Beetle, with his drowise huma,
Hath rung Nights yawning Peale,
There shall be done a deed of dreadfull note.

Lady. What's to be done?

Macb. Be innocent of the knowledge, dearest Chuck,
Till thou applaud the deed: Come, feeling Night,
Skarfe vp the tender Eye of pittifull Day,
And with thy bloody and insifible Hand
Cancell and tear to pieces that great Bond,
Which keepes me pale. Light thickens,
And the Crow makes Wing toth' Rookie Wood:
Good things of Day begin to droope, and droffe,
Whiles Nights black Agents to their Prey's doe rowse.
Thou marnuel't at my words: but hold thee still,
Things bad begun, make strong themfelves by ill:
So prythee goe with me.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter three Murtherers.

1. But who did bid thee ioynce with vs?
2. Macbets.
3. He needs not our mifttrus, since he delivers
Our Offices, and what we hauce to doe,
To the direction iift.
1. Then flaund with vs:
The Weft yet gimmers with some frawkes of Day.
Now fpurres the late Traveller space,
To gayne the timely Iinne, end neere approaches
The fubtue of our Watch.
3. Hearke, I heare Horfes.
Banquo within. Glue vs a Light there, hoa.
2. Then 'tis hee:
The reft, that are within the note of exepdation,
Alreaie are i' th'Court.
1. His Horfes goe about.
3. Almost a mile: but he does vifually,
So all men doe, from hence toth' Pafface Gate
Make it his Walkie.

Enter Banque and Fleans, with a Torch.

2. A Light, a Light.
3. 'Tis bee.
1. Stand too't.
Ban. It will be Rayne to Night.
1. Let it come downe.
Ban. O, Trecherie!
Flye good Fleans, flye, flye, flye,
Thou may't ftrong revenge. O Slaue!
3. Who did froke out the Light?
1. Was't not the way?
3. There's but one downe: the Sonne is fled.
2. We have loft
Befte halfe of our Affaire,
1. Well, let's away, and fay how much is done.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Banquet prepar'd. Enter Macbets, Lady, RoUe, Lenox, Lords, and Attendants.

Macb. You know your owne degrees, fit downe:
At firft and laft, the hearty welcome.
Lords. Thankes to your Maiesty.
Macb. Our felle will mingle with Society,
And play the humble Hoft:
Our Hofteffe keeps her State, but in beft time
We will require her welcome.
La. Pronounce it for me Sir, to all our Friends,
For my heart fpeakes, they are welcome.

Enter firf Murtherer.

Macb. See they encounter thee with their harts thanks
Both fides are even: heere Ile fit i' th'mid'ft,
Be large in mirth, anon wee'ld drink a Meafure
The Table round. There's blood upon thy face.
Mur. 'Tis Banquo's then.
Macb. 'Tis better thee without, then he within.
Is he dispatch'd?
Mur. My Lord his throat is cut, that I did for him.
Mac. Thou art the beft o' th'Cut-throats,
Yet hee's good that did the like for Fleans;
If thou did'ft it, thou art the Non-parcell.
Mur. Moft Royall Sir
Fleans is fpap'd.
Macb. Then comes my Fit againe:
I had elfe beene perfect;
Whole as the Marble, founded as the Rocke,
As broad, and generally, as the cafing Ayre:
But now I am cabin'd, cribb'd, confin'd, bound in"
To fawcy doubts, and feares. But Banquo's fale?
Mur. I, my good Lord: fale in a ditch he bides,
With twenty trench'd gashes on his head;
The leaff a Death to Nature.
Macb. Thankes for that:
There the growne Serpent lyes, the worme that's fleg
Hath Nature that in time will Venom bred,
No teeth for th'prefent. Get thee gone, to morrow
We'll heare our felues againe.

Exit Murtherer.

Lady. My Royall Lord,
You do not give the Cheere, the Feast is fold
That is not often vouch'd, while 'tis a making:
'Tis giuen, with welcome: to fende were beft at home:
From thence, the fauce to meate is Ceremony,
Meeting were bare without it.

Enter the Ghost of Banquo, and sits in Macbets place.

Macb. Sweet Remembrancer:
Now good digestion waite on Appetite,
And health on both.
Lenox. May't please your Highneffe fit.
Macb. Here had we now our Countries Honor,roof'd,
Were the grac'd perfon of our Banquo prefent:
Who, may I rather challenge for vnkindneffe,
Then pitty for Mifchance.
RoUe. His abfence (Sir)
Layes blame vpon his promife. Pleaf't your Highneffe
To grace vs with your Royall Company?

Macb.
The Tragedie of Macbeth.

Macb. The Table's full.
Lenox. Here is a place refer'd Sir.
Macb. Where?
Lenox. Here my good Lord.
What is't that moves your Highness?
Macb. Which of you have done this?
Lords. What, my good Lord?
Macb. Thou canst not say I did it: never shake Thy guilty locks at me.
Roff. Gentlemen rise, his Highness is not well.
Lady. Sit worthy Friends: my Lord is often thus,
And hath beene from his youth. Pray you keepe Seat,
The fit is momentary, upon a thought
He will againe be well. If much you note him
You shall offend him, and extend his Passion, Feed, and regard him not. Are you a man?
Macb. I, and a bold one, that dare looke on that
Which might appal the Diuell.
La. O proper stuffe:
This is the very painting of your feare:
This is the Ayre-drawne-Dagger which you said
Led you to Duncan. O, these flaws and flarts (Impotors to true feare) would well become
A woman's story, at a Winters fire
Authoriz'd by her Grandam: shame it felts,
Why do you make such faces? When all's done
You looke but on a foole.
Macb. Prythee see there:
Behold, looke, loe, how fay you:
Why what care I, if thou canst nod, speake too.
If Charnell house, and our Graues must fend
Those that we bury, backe; our Monuments
Shall be the Mawes of Kytes.
La. What! quite vnmann'd in folly.
Macb. If I stand heere, I faw him
La. Fie for shame.
Macb. Blood hath bene shed ere now, 'tis old time
Ere humane Statute pur'd the gentle Weale:
I, and since too, Murthers have bene perform'd
Too terrible for the eare. The times has bene,
That when the Braines were out, the man would dye,
And there an end: But now they rife againe
With twenty mortall murthers on their crownes,
And puffs vs from our foolees. This is more strange
Then fuch a murther is.
La. My worthy Lord
Your Noble Friends do lacke you.
Macb. I do forget:
Do not mudge at me my most worthy Friends,
I have a strange infirmity, which is nothing
To thef that know me. Come, loue and health to all,
Then lle fit downe: Give me fome Wine, fill full:
Enter Goff.
I drinke to th'generall loy o'th'whole Table,
And to our deere Friend [Banquo, whom we mish:
Would he were heere: to all, and him we thirft,
And all to all.
Lords. Our duties, and the pledge.
Mac. Auant, & quit my fight, let the earth hide thee:
Thy bones are marrowlesse, thy blood is cold hide
Thou haft no speculation in thofe eyes
Which thou doft gare with.
La. Thinke of this good Peeres!
But as a thing of Custome: 'Tis no other,
Oney it spoylest the pleasure of the time.
Macb. What man dare, I dare:
Approach thou like the rugged Russian Beare,
The arm'd Rhinoceros, or th'Hircan Tiger,
Take any shape but that, and my firme Nerues
Shall neuer tremble. Or be alius againe,
And dare me to the Defart with thy Sword:
If trembling I inhabit then, protest mee
The Baby of a Gitle. Hence horrible shadow,
Verreall mock'y hence. Why fo, being gone
I am a man againe: pray you fit still.
La. You have displace'd the mirth,
Broke the good meeting, with most admir'd disorder.
Macb. Can such things be,
And overcome vs like a Summers Clowd,
Without our speciall wonder! You make me strange
Euen to the disposition that I owe,
When now I thinke you can behold fuch fights,
And keepe the naturall Rubie of your Cheekes,
When mine is blanch'd with feare.
Roff. What fights, my Lord?
La. I pray you speake not: he growes worse & worse
Question enrages him: at once, goodnight.
Stand not vpon the order of your going,
But go at once.
Len. Good night, and better health
Attend his Malesfty.
La. A kinde goodnight to all.
Macb. It will have blood they fay:
Blood will have Blood:
Stones have bene knowne to move, & Trees to speake:
Augures, and vnderflood Relations, haue
By Maggot Pyes, & Choughes, & Rookes brought forth
The fecre't man of Blood. What is the night?
La. Almost at oddes with morning, which is which.
Macb. How fay'th thou that Macduff denies his perfon
At our great bidding?
La. Did you fend to him Sir?
Macb. I heare it by the way: But I will fende
There's not a one of them but in his house
I keepe a Servant Feed. I will to morrow
(And betimes I will) to the wayard Sifters.
More fhall they speake: for now I am bent to know
By the worft meanes, the worft, for mine owne good,
All caufes fhall give way. I am in blood
Stept in fo farre, that should I wade no more,
Returning were as tedious as go ore:
Strange things I have in head, that wile to hand,
Which mist be act[t], ere they may be fcaund.
La. You lacke the feafon of all Nature's, sleepe.
Macb. Come, wee'l to sleepe: My strange & fell-abufe
Is the iniurate feare, that wants hard vfe:
We are yet but yong indeed.
Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches, meeting
Hecat.

1. Why how now Hecat, you looke angrily?
Hecat. Have I not reafon (Geldams) as you are?
Sawc, and ouer-bold, how did you dare
To Trade, and Traffick with Macbeth,
In Riddles, and Affaires of death;
And the Misfiris of your Charmes,
The close contriver of all harms,
Was never call'd to beare my part,
Of shew the glory of our Art?
And which is worse, all you have done
Hath bene but for a wayward Sonne,
Spightfull, and wrathfull, who (as others do)
Loues for his owne ends, not for you.
But make amends now: Get you gone,
And at the pit of Acheron
Meet me i'm the Morning: thither he
Will come, to know his Deftinie.
Your Vessel, and your Spels prouide,
Your Charmes, and every thing befide;
I am for th'Ayre: This night Ie fpend
Vnto a difmal, and a Fatall end.
Great buinifhe muft be wrought ere Noone.
Vpon the Corner of the Moone
There hangs a vap'rous drop, profound,
Ile catch it ere it come to ground;
And that diffil'd by Magicke flights,
Shall raife fuch Artificiall Spights,
As by the ftrength of their illuion,
Shall draw him on to his Confufion.
He fhall fparne Fat, fcorne Death, and beare
His hopes 'boue Wifedom, Grace, and Fear:
And you all know, Security
Is Mortals cheeffe Enemie.

_Mufick: and a Song._
Heare, I am call'd: my little Spirit fee
Sits in a Foggy cloud, and ftaies for me,
Sing within. Come away, come away, &c.

_Aegeus Quartus. Scena Prima._

Enter Lenox, and another Lord.

_Lenox._ My former Speeches,
Haue but hit your Thoughts
Which can interpret farther: Onely I fay
Things haue bin strangely borne. The gracious Duncan
Was pittied of Macbeth: marry he was dead:
And the right valiant Banquo walk'd too late,
Whom you may fay (if't pleafe you) Flans kill'd,
For Flans red: Men muft not walke too late.
Who cannot want the thought, how monftrous
It was for Malcomes, and for Donalbane
To kill their gracious Father? Damned Fad, How
It did greeue Macbeth? Did he not ftraight
In pious rage, the two delinquent teare,
That were the Slaves of drinke, and thrallles of fleep?
Was not that Nobly done? I, and widly too:
For 'twould haue anger'd any heart aliue
To heare the men deny't. So that I fay,
He ha's borne all things well, and I do thinke,
That had he Duncans Sonnes vnder his Key,
(As, and't pleafe Heaven he shall not) they fhould finde
What twere to kill a Father: So fhould Flans.
But peace; for from broad words, and caufe he fay'd
His preffen ce at the Tyrants Fcaft, I heare
Maccuffe lues in disgrace. Sir, can you tell
Where he defeows himselves?

Lord._ The Sonnes of Duncane
(From whom this Tyrant holds the due of Birth)
Liuies in the English Court, and recey'd
Of the moft Pious Edward, with fuch grace,
That the maleuolence of Fortune, nothing
Takes from his high refpe&.
Thither Maccuffe
Is gone, to pray the Holy King, vpon his ayd
To wake Northumberland, and warlike Seyward,
That by the helpe of thefe (with him above)
To ratifie the Worke) we may againe
Glue to our Tables meete, fleece to our Nights:
Free from our Feasts, and Banquets bloody kniues;
Do faithfull Homage, and receive free Honors,
All which we pine for now. And this report
Hath fo exasperate their King, that hee
Prepares for some attempt of Warre.

_Len._ Sent he to Maccuffe?

Lord._ He did; and with an absolute Sir, not I
The clowdy Meffinger turns me his backe,
And hums; as who should fay, you'll rue the time
That clogs me with this Anwer.

_Lenox._ And that we'll might
Aduife him to a Caution, t'hold what difance
His wifedom can prouide. Some holy Angell
Flye to the Court of England, and vnfold
His Meffage ere he come, that a swift ftreching
May foone returne to this our fuffering Country,
Vnder a hand accur'd.

Lord._ Ile fend my Prayers with him.

Exeunt.
Laugh to scorn
The powre of man : For none of woman borne
Shall harme Macbeth.

Mac. Then liue Macduff,what need I feare of thee?
But yet Ie make assurance : double sure,
And take a Bond of Fate : thou shalt not liue,
That I may tale pale-hearted Feare, it lies ;
And sleepe in spight of Thunder.

3 Appar. A Child crowned, with a Tree in his hand.
What is this, that riles like the issue of a King,
And weares upon his Baby-brow, the round
And top of Soueraignty?

All. Liften, but speake not too't.

3 Appar. Be Lyon meted, proud, and take no care:
Who chafes, who frets, or where Conspirers are :
Macbeth shall neuer vanquish'd be, untill
Great Byram Wood, to high Dunfmane Hill
Shall come against him.

Descend.

Macb. That will never bee :
Who can imprisfe the Forrest, bid the Tree
Vanish his earth-bound Root? Sweet boadments,good :
Rebellious dead, rife neuer till the Wood
Of Byram rife, and our high plac'd Macbeth
Shall liue the Leafe of Nature,pay his breath
To time, and mortall Cusome. Yet my Hart
Throbs to know one thing: Tell me, if your Art
Can tell fo much: Shall Banquo's liffe euer
Reigne in this Kingdome?

All. Seeke to know no more.

Macb. I will be satisfied. Deny me this,
And an eternal Curse fall on you: Let me know,]
Why finkes that Caldron & what noise is this? Hoboyes
1 Shew. 2. Shew. 3. Shew.

All. Shew his Eyes, and greeue his Hart,
Come like shadowes, fo depart.

A Stay of eight Kings, and Banquo last, with a glasse in his hand.

Macb. Thou art too like the Spirit of Banquo: Down:
Thy Crowne do's ltere mine Eye-bals. And thy haire
Thou other Gold-bound-brow, is like the first:
A third, is like the former. Filthy Haggis,
Why do you shew me this?—A fourth? Start eyes !
What will the Line stretch out to'th cracke of Doome ?
Another yet? A feuanchet? Ile see no more :
And yet the eight appeares, who beares a glasse,
Which flues me many more : and some I fee,
That two-fold Balles, and treble Scepters carry.
Horrible sight: Now I fee 'tis true,
For the Blood-bolter'd Banquo smiles upon me,
And points at them for his. What is this so?
1 Sir, all this is so. But why
Stands Macbeth thus amazedly?
Come Siftres, cheere we vp his fprights,
And shew the best of our delights.
Ile Charme the Ayre to glue a found,
While you performe your Antique round :
That this great King may kindly fay,
Our duties, did his welcome pay.
Thy Beeches Dance, and vanish.

Macb. Where are they? Gone?
Let this pertinous hour,
Stand aye accurd in the Kalender.
Come in, without there.

Lenox. What's your Graces will.

Macb.
The Tragedie of Macbeth.

Macb. Saw you the Weyward Sisters?
Lenox. No my Lord.
Macb. Came they not by you?
Lenox. No indeed my Lord.
Macb. Infeected be the Ayre whereon they ride, And damned all those that trust them. I did hear The galloping of Horrie. Who was' by? Len. 'Tis two or three my Lord, that bring you word:
Macduff is fled to England.
Macb. Fled to England?
Len. I, my good Lord.
Macb. Time, thou anticipat'st my dread exploits:
The flighty purpole neuer is o're-tooke Vnlees the deed go with it. From this moment, The very fireflings of my heart shall be The fireflings of my hand. And euen now To Crown my thoughts with Afe: be it thought & done:
The Castle of Macduff, I will surprize, Seize upon Fifte; glue to th'dedge o'th'Sword His wife, his Babes, and all unfortunat Soules That trace him in his Line. No boating like a Foole, This deed I do, before this purpose coole, But no more fights. Where are thefe Gentlemen? Come bring me where they are.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Macduffes Wife, her Son, and Raffie.

Wife. What had he done, to make him fly the Land?
Raffie. You must haue patience Madam.
Wife. He had none:
His flight was madneffe: when our Actions do not,
Our fears do make vs Traitors.
Raffie. You know not
Whether it was his wifedome, or his feare.
Wife. Wifedome? to leave his wife, to leave his Babes, His Monfaige, and his Titles, in a place
From whence himselfe do's flye? He loues vs not, He wants the natural touch. For the poore Wren (The moft diminutive of Birds) will fight, Her yong ones in her Neft, against the Owle: All is the Feare, and nothing is the Loue; As little is the Wifedome, where the flight So runnes against all reafon.
Raffie. My deereft Cowz,
I pray you schoole your felfe. But for your Husband, He is Noble, Wife, Indicious, and beft knowes The fits o'th'Season. I dare not speake much further, But cruell are the times, when we are Traitors And do not know your fales: when we hold Rumor From what we feare, yet know not what we feare, But floate vpon a wilde and violent Sea Each way, and moue. I take my leaue of you: Shall not be long but Ile be heere againe: Things at the worste will ceafe, or els climb vpward, To what they were before. My pretty Cofine, Blessing vpon you.
Wife. Father'd he is,
And yet hee's Father-leffe.
Raffie. I am fo much a Foole,should I stay longer It would be my diigrace, and your discomfort. I take my leaue at once.

Exit Raffie.

Wife. Sirra, your Fathers dead, And what will you do now? How will you live?
Son. As Birds do Mother.
Wife. What with Wormes, and Flyes?
Son. With what I get I meane, and so do they.
Wife. Poore Bird,
Thou'dt neuer Feare the Net, nor Lime,
The Pitfall, nor the Gin.
Son. Why should I Mother?
Poore Birds they are not set for:
My Father is not dead for all your sayings.
Wife. Yes,he is dead:
How wilt thou do for a Father?
Son. Nay how will you do for a Husband?
Wife. Why I can buy me twenty at any Market.
Son. Then you'l by 'em to fell againe.
Wife. Thou speake'st withall thy wit,
And yet I'faith with wit enough for thee.
Son. Was my Father a Traitor, Mother? Wife. I, that he was.
Son. What is a Traitor?
Wife. Why one that sweares, and lyes.
Son. And be all Traitors, that do fo.
Wife. Every one that do's fo, is a Traitor,
And muft be hang'd.
Son. And muft they all be hang'd, that sweare and lye?
Wife. Every one.
Son. Who muft hang them?
Wife. Why, the honeft men.
Son. Then the Liars and Swearers are Fools: for there are Lyars and Swearers know, to beate the honeft men, and hang vp them.
Wife. Now God helpe thee, poore Monkie: But how wilt thou do for a Father?
Son. If he were dead, you'd weepe for him: if you would not, it were a good signe, that I should quickly have a new Father.
Wife. Poore prattler, how thou talk'it?
Enter a Messenger.

Mys-Blesse you faire Dame: I am not to you known, Though in your hate of Honor I am perfect; I doubt some danger do's approach you nerelor.
If you will take a homely mans advisce,
Be not found here: Hence with your little ones To fright you thus. Me thinkes I am too saugue: To do worfe to you, were fell Cruelty,
Which is too nie your perfon. Heaven preferue you, I dare abide no longer.

Exit Messenger.

Wife. Whether should I flye?
I haue done no harme. But I remember now I am in this earthly world: where to do harme Is often laudable, to do good sometyme Accounted dangerous folly. Why then ( alas) Do I put vp that womanly defence, To say I have done no harme? What are thes faces?

Enter Murhberes.

Mur. Where is your Husband?
Wife. I hope in no place so vnlandified, Where such as thou may'ft finde him.
Mur. He's a Traitor.
Son. Thou ly'st thou flagge-eare'd Villaine.
Mur. What you Egge?
Yong fry of Treachery?
Son. He ha's kill'd me Mother,
Run away I pray you.

Exit crying Murhber.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Malcolm and Macduff.

Mal. Let vs seeke out some defolate shade, & there Weepe our sad bosome empty.

Macd. Let vs rather
Hold fast the mortal Sword: & like good men,
Befride our downfall Birthdome: each new Morne,
New Widdowes howe, new Orphans cry, new foroues
Strike heauen on the face, that it refounds
As if it felt with Scotland, and yell’d out
Like Syllable of Dolour.

Mal. What I beleue, Ile waite;
What know, beleue; & what I can redrefe,
As I shall finde the time to friend: I wil.
What you haue spoke, it may be fo perchance.
This Tyrant, whole fole name blifters our tongues,
Was once thought honest: you haue how’d him well,
He hath not touch’d you yet. I am yong, but something
You may diferne of him through me, and wifedome
To offer vp a weake, poore innocent Lambe
T’appafe an angry God.

Macd. I am not treacherous.

Mal. But Macbeth is.
A good and vertuous Nature may recolle
In an Imperiall charge. But I shall crave your pardon:
That which you are, my thoughts cannot tranfpoze;
Angels are brightfull, though the brighteft fell.
Though all things foule, would wear the bows of grace
Yet Grace muft fill looke fo.

Macd. I haue loft my Hopes.

Mal. Perchance euen there
Where I did finde my doubts.
Why in that rawneffe left you Wife, and Childe?
Those precious Motuies, those strong knots of Love,
Without leave-taking. I prave you,
Let not my Jealousies, be your Diuonors,
But mine owne Safeties: you may be rightly luft,
What euer I hafl thinke.

Macd. Bleed, bleed poore Country,
Great Tyrann, lay thou thy basse fure,
For goodneffe dare not check thee: wear y thy wrongs,
The Tilde, is affair’d. Far thee well Lord,
I would not be the Villaine that thou think’st,
For the whole Space that’s in the Tyrants Graife,
And the rich Eft to boot.

Mal. Be not offended
I speake not as in absolute fear of you:
I think we our Country finkes beneath the yoke,
It weepes, it bleedeth, and each new day a gash
Is added to her wounds. I thinke withall,
There would be hands uplifted in my right:
And heere from gracious England haue I offer
Of googly thousands. But for all this,
When I shall treader upon the Tyrants head,
Or weare it on my Sword; yet my poore Country
Shall haue more vices then it had before,
More fitter, and more fundry ways then euer,
By him that shall succeede.

Macd. What should he be?

Mal. It is my felle I meant: in whom I know
All the particulars of Vice fo grafted,
That when they shall be open’d, blacke Macbeth
Will feeme as pure as Snow, and the poore State
Efterne him as a Lambe, being compar’d
With my confineleffe harms.

Macd. Not in the Legions
Of horrid Hell, can come a Divil more damn’d
In euils, to top Macbeth.

Mal. I grant him Bloody,
Luxurious, Avaricious, false, Deceitfull,
Sodaine, Malicious, trumming of every finne
That ha’s a name. But there’s no bottome, none
In my Voluptuouneffe: Your Wifes, your Daughters,
Your Matrons, and your Maides, could not fill vp
The Cefterne of my Luft, and my Defire
All continent Impediments would ore-beare
That did oppofe my will. Better Macbeth,
Then fuch an one to reigne.

Macd. Boundleffe intemperance
In Nature is a Tyranny: It hath beene
Th’vn timely empying of the happy Throne,
And fall of many Kings. But feare not yet
To take vpon you what is yours: you may Connay your pleasures in a fpacious plenty,
And yet feene cold. The time you may fo hoofdinke:
We haue willing Dames enow: there cannot be
That Vulture in you, to devour fo many
As will to Greatneffe dedicate themſelves,
Finding it fo inclinde.

Mal. With this, there growes
In my moft ill-compos’d Affeccion, fuch
A fanchleffe Avarice, that were I King,
I fhould cut off the Nobles for their Lands,
Defire his Jewels, and this others Houfe,
And my more-hauing, would be as a Sawce
To make me hunger more, that I fhould forge
Quarrels vnjuft against the Good and Loyall,
Defoying them for wealth.

Macd. This Avarice
flickes deeper: growes with more pernicious root
Then Summer-feeming Luft: and it hath bin
The Sword of our flaine Kings: yet do not feare,
Scotland hath Foyfons, to fill vp your will
Of your meere Owne. All thefe are portable,
With other Graces weigh’d.

Mal. But I haue none. The King-becoming Graces,
As Juflice, Verity, Temp’rance, Stableneffe,
Bounty, Perfeuerance, Mercy, Lowlineffe,
Devoution, Patience, Courage, Fortitude,
I haue no rellifh of them, but abound
In the diufion of each feuerall Crime,
Acting it many wayes. Nay, had I powre, I fhould
Poure the sweet Milke of Concord, into Hell,
Vprore the vniuerfal peace, confound
All vnity on earth.

Macd. O Scotland, Scotland.

Mal. If such a one be fit to gouerne, speake:
I am as I haue spoken.

Mac. Fit to gouern? No not to liue. O Natiō miferāble!
With an untitled Tyrant, bloody Sceptred,
When thall thou fee thy wholsome dayes againe?
Since that the trueft Iffue of thy Throne
By his owne Interdictiō stands accult,
And do’s blasphe me his breed? Thy Royall Father
Was a moft Sainted-King: the Queene that bore thee,
Oftener upon her knees, then on her feet,
Dy’d euerday the liu’d. Fare thee well.
The Tragedie of Macbeth.

A Moderne extaife: The Deadmans knell,
Is there scared ask’d for who, and good mens liues
Expire before the Flowers in their Caps,
Dying, or ere they ficken.

Macd. Oh Relation; too nice, and yet too true.
Mal. What’s the newell griefe?
Roffe. That of an hours age, doth hiffe the speaker,
Each minute teemes a new one.

Macd. How do’s my Wife?
Roffe. Why well.

Macd. And all my Children?
Roffe. Well too.

Macd. The Tyrant ha’s not batter’d at their peace?
Roffe. No, they were wel at peace, when I did leave ’em

Macd. Be not a niggard of your speech: How go’t?
Roffe. When I came hither to transport the Tydings
Which I have heavily borne; there ran a Rumour
Of many worthy Fellowes, that were out.

Which was to my beleefe witnesst the rather,
For that I saw the Tyrants Power a-foot.
Now is the time of helpe: your eye in Scotland
Would create Solidours, make our women fight,
To doffe their dire diffrettes.

Mal. Bee’t their comfort
We are comming thither: Gracious England hath Lent vs good Seyward, and ten thousand men,
An older, and a better Souldier, none
That Chriftendome glues out.
Roffe. Would I could anfwer
This comfort with the like. But I have words
That would be howl’d out in the defert ayre,
Where hearing shoult not latch them.

Macd. What concerne they,
The generall caufe, or is it a Fee-griefe
Due to some single breft?
Roffe. No minde that’s honest
But in it shares fome woe, though the maine part
Pertaines to you alone.

Macd. If it be mine
Keepe it not from me, quickly let me haue it.
Roffe. Let not your eares difpife my tongue for euer,
Which shall poffede them with the heauelst found
That euer yet they heard.

Macd. Humh : I gaffe at it.
Roffe. Your Caffe is surpriz’d: your Wife, and Babes
Sauagely flaughter’d: To relate the manner
Were on the Quarry of thefe murther’d Deere
To add the death of you.

Malc. Mercifull Heauen:
What man, ne’re pull your hat vpon your browes:
Gluze forrow words; the griefe that do’s not fpake,
Whispers the o’re-fraught heart, and bids it brake.

Macd. My Children too?
Rc. Wife, Children, Servants, all that could be found.
Macd. And I must be from thence? My wife kill’d too?
Roffe. I have faid.
Malc. Be comforted.
Let’s make vs Med’cines of our great Revenge,
To cure this deadly greffe.

Malc. He ha’s no Children. All my pretty ones?
Did you fay All? Oh Hell–Kite! All?
What, All my pretty Chickens, and their Damme
At one fell fwoope?
Malc. Difpnite it like a man.

Macd. I shall do fo:

N n 2
But I must also feel it as a man;
I cannot but remember such things were
That were most precious to me: Did heaven look on,
And would not take their part? Sinfull Macduff,
They were all stove for thee: Naught that I am,
Not for their owne demerit, but for mine
Fell slaughter on their foules: Heaven reft them now.
Mal. Be this the Whetstone of your fword, let griefe
Convert to anger: blunt not the heart, enrage it.
Macd. O I could play the woman with mine eyes,
And Braggart with my tongue. But gentle Heauens,
Cut short all intermission: Front to Front,
Bring thou this Fiend of Scotland, and my selfe
Within my Swords length set him, if he scape
Heauen forgive him too.
Mal. This time this manly:
Come go we to the King, our Power is ready,
Our lacke is nothing but our leaue. Macbeth
Is ripe for shaking, and the Powres aboue
Put on their Instruments: Receiue what cheere you may,
The Night is long, that never finds the Day. Exeunt

Auctus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter a Doctor of Physick, and a Waying
Gentlewoman.
Doct. I have too Nights watch'd with you, but can perceive no truth in your report. When was it shee last walk'd?
Gent. Since his Maiesty went into the Field, I haue feene her rife from her bed, throw her Night-Gown vp-on her, vnlooke her Clofett, take forth paper, foldie it, write vpon't, read it, afterwards Seale it, and againe
returne to bed; yet all this while in a moft fast sleepe.
Doct. A great perturbation in Nature, to receyue at one the benefit of sleep, and do the effects of waking.
In this flumby agitation, beides her walking, and other actual performances, what (at any time) haue you heard
she say?
Gent. That Sir, which I will not report after her.
Doct. You may to me, and 'tis moft meet you should.
Gent. Neither to you, nor any one, hauing no witnesse to conforme my speech. Enter Lady, with a Taper.
Lo you, heere she comes: This is her very guife, and vp on my life fait allecepe: obserue her, stand close.
Doct. How came she by that light?
Gent. Why it flowd by her: she ha's light by her continuall, 'tis her command.
Doct. You see her eyes are open.
Gent. I but their fenfe are flut.
Doct. What is it she do's now?
Looke how she rubbes her hands.
Gent. It is an accustom'd action with her, to seeme thawing her hands: I haue knowne her c'tuine in is a quarter of an houre.
Lad. Yet heere's a spot.
Doct. Hearke, she speakes, I will fet done what comes from her, to satisfie my remembrance the more strongly.
La. Out damned spot!: out I say. One: Two: Why them 'tis time to doo't: Hell is murky. Fye, my Lord, fie, as Soldier, and after'd what need we fear? who knowes it, when none can call our powre to accompte: yet who would haue thought the olde man to haue had so much blood in him.
Doct. Do you marke that?
Lad. The Thane of Fife, had a wife: where is she now?
What will thefe hands ne're be cleane? No more o'that my Lord, no more o'that: you marre all with this starting.
Doct. Go too, go too:
You haue knowane what you should not.
Gent. She ha's spoke what shee should not, I am sure of that: Heauen knowes what she ha's knowe.
La. Here's the smell of the blood still: all the perfumes of Aramia will not sweeten this little hand.
Oh, oh, oh.
Doct. What a sigh is there? The hart is sorely charg'd.
Gent. I would not haue such a heart in my bosome, for the dignity of the whole body.
Doct. Well, well, well.
Gent. Pray God it be fir.
Doct. This disease is beyond my prafifie; yet I haue knowne thofe which haue walkt in their sleep, who haue died hollie in their beds.
Lad. Wash your hands, put on your Night-Gowne, looke not so pale: I tell you yet againe Bawgüs's buried,
he cannot come out on's graue.
Doct. Euen so?
Lad. To bed, to bed: there's knocking at the gate:
Come, come, come, come, glue me your hand: What's done, cannot be vndone. To bed, to bed, to bed.
Exit Lady.

Scena Secunda.

Drum and Colours. Enter Menteab, Cathnes,
Angus, Lenox, Soldiers.

Ment. The English powre is neere, led on by Malcolm,
His Vnkle Seyward, and the good Macduff,
Reuenges burne in them: for their deere caufes
Would to the bleeding, and the grim Alarme
Excite the mortified man.
Ang. Neere Byrnan wood
Shall we well meet them, way that are they comming.
Cath. Who knowes if Donalbane be with his brother?
Len. For certaine Sir, he is not: I haue a File
Of all the Gentry; there is Seyward's Sonne,
And many vnruflle youths, that euen now
Protest their firft of Manhood.
Ment. What do's the Tyrant.
Cath. Great Dunfinane he strongly Fortifies:
Some fay hee's mad; Others, that leffer hate him,
Do call it valiant Fury, but for certaine

Scena Tertia.

Enter Macbeth, Doctor, and Attendants.

Macb. Bring me no more Reports, let them flye all:
Till Byrnan wood remoue to Dunfinane,
I cannot taint with Fear. What's the Boy Malcolme?
Was he not borne of woman? The Spirits that know
All mortall Consequences, haue pronouc'd me thus:
Fear not Macbeth, no man that's borne of woman
Shall ere haue power upon thee. Then flye false Thanes,
And mingle with the English Epichres,
The minde I sway by, and the heart I base,
Shall never fage with doubt, nor shake with feare.

Enter Servant.

The diuell damme thee blacke, thou cream-fac'd Loone
Where got'th thou that Goofe-looke.
Ser. There is ten thousand.
Macb. Geefe Villaine?
Ser. Souldiers Sir.

Macb. Go pricke thy face, and ouer-red thy feare
Thou Lilly-luer'd Boy. What Souldiers, Patch?
Death of thy Soule, thou Linnen cheekes of thine
Are Counsafeiers to feare. What Soldiers Why-face?
Ser. The English Force, so pleaue you.
Macb. Take thy face hence. Seyton, I am sick at hart,
When I behold : Seyton, I say, this pufh
Will cheere me euere, or dif-eate me now.
I haue lu'd long enough : my way of life
Is faine into the Sear, the yellow Leaf;
And that which shou'd accompany Old-Age,
As Honor, Loue, Obedience, Troopes of Friends,
I muft not looke to have : but in their fleed,
Curfes, not lowd but deepes, Mouth-honor, breath
Which the poore heart would faine deny, and dare not.
Seyton?

Enter Seyton.

Sey. What's your gracious pleafure?
Macb. What Newes more?
Sey. All is confirm'd my Lord, which was reported.
Macb. Ile fight, till from my bones, my fleth be hackt.

Scena Quarta.

Drum and Colours. Enter Malcolm, Seyward, Macduff, Seywards Sons, Mentor, Cawneye, Angus, and Soldiers Marching.

Malc. Cofins, I hope the dayes are neere at hand
That Chambers will be fée.
Ment. We doubt it nothing.
Seyw. What wood is this before vs?
Ment. The wood of Binnane.
Malc. Let euery Souldier hew him dowe a Bough,
And beart before him, thereby fhall we shadow
The numbers of our Hoafe, and make difcouery
Erre in report of vs.
Soll. It fhall be done.
Seyw. We learne no other, but the confident Tyrant
Keepes still in Dunfinane, and will indure
Our letting downe before.
Malc. "Tis his maine hope:
For where there is advantadge to be gien,
Both more and leffe haue gien him the Resolt,
And none ferue with him, but constrained things,
Whofe hearts are abfent too.

The Tragedie of Macbeth.
Industrious Soul'diership.

Scena Quinque.

Enter Macbeth, Seyton, & Soul'diers, with
Drum and Colours.

Macb. Hang out our Banners on the outward walls,
The Cry is still, they come: our Cabbles strength
Will laugh a Sledge to scorn: Heere let them lye,
Till Famine and the Ague eate them vp:
Were they not for'rd with those that should be ours,
We might have met them darefull, heard to hear,
And beat them backward home. What is that noyle?

A Cry within of Women.

Sey. It is the cry of wemen, my good Lord.

Macb. I have almost forgot the taste of Feares:
The time ha's beene, my fences would have cool'd
To heare a Night-shrieke, and my Fell of haire
Would at a dimflall Treatife rowze, and fflire
As life were in't. I have hauft full with horrors,
Direnfe familiar to my flaughterous thoughts
Cannot once flart me. Wherefore was that cry?

Sey. The Queene (my Lord) is dead.

Macb. She should have dy'de hereafter;
There would beene a time for fuch a word:
To morrow, and to morrow, and to morrow,
Creepes in this petty pace from day to day,
To the laft Syllable of Recorded time:
And all our yeardenes, haue lighted Fooles
The way to dyfus death. Out, out, breefe Candle,
Life's but a walking Shadow, a poore Player,
That flruts and frets his houre vpon the Stage,
And then is heard no more. It is a Tale
Told by an Idoet, full of sound and fury
Signifying nothing. Enter a Miffenger.

Thou com'ft to vfe thy Tongue: thy Story quickly.

Macb. Gracious my Lord, I should report that which I fay I faw,
But know not how to do't.

Macb. Well, fay fir.

Mef. As I did fland my watch vpon the Hill
I look'd toward Byrnanes, and anon me thought
The Wood began to move.

Macb. Lyar, and Slaue.

Mef. Let me endure your wrath, it's be not fo:
Within this three Mile may you fee it comming.
I fay, a mowing Groane.

Macb. If thou fpeak'ft fhilfe,
Vpon the next Tree fhall thou hang aliae
Till Famine cling thee: If thy fpeech be footh,
I care not if thou doft for me as much.
I pull in Resolution, and begin
To doubt th'Equivoication of the Fiend,
That lies like truth. Fear not, till Byrnanes Wood
Do come to Dunfinane, and now a Wood

Scena Sexa.

Enter Malcolm, Seyward, Macduff, and their Army, with Boughes.

Mal. Now neere enough:
Your leau Skreenes throw downe,
And fhew like thofe you are: You (worthy Vakle)
Shall with my Cofin your right Noble Sonne
Leade our firft Battell. Worthy Macduff, and wee
Shall take vpon's what elfe remains to do,
According to our order.

Sey. Fare you well:
Do we but finde the Tyrants power to night,
Let vs be beaten, if we cannot fight.

Macd. Make all our Trumpets fpeak, give the all breath
Thofe clamorous Harbingers of Blood, & Death. Exeunt
Alarums continued.

Macb. They have tied me to a flake, I cannot fley,
But Beare-like I muft figh the coure. What's he
That was not borne of Woman? Such a one
Am I to feare, or none.

Enter young Seyward.

Y. Sey. What is thy name?

Macb. Thou'lt be afraid to hear it.

Y. Sey. No: though thou call'ft thy fether name
Then any is in hell.

Macb. My name's Macbeth.

Y. Sey. The duller himfelfe could not pronounce a Title
More hafefull to mine ear.

Macb. No: nor more fearefull.

Y. Sey. Thou lyefht abhorred Tyrant, with my Sword
Ie proue the lye thou fpeak'ft.

Fight, and young Seyward fhine.

Macb. Thou was't borne of woman;
But Swords I fmile at, Weapons laugh to fcorne,
Brandifh'd by man that's of a Woman borne. Exit.

Alarums. Enter Macduff.

Macd. That way the noise is: Tyrant fhew thy face,
If thou beft fhine, and with no froke of mine,
My Wife and Childrens Ghosts will haunt me fll:
I cannot frike at wrethed Kernes, whose armes
Are byr'd to haere their Staues; either thou Macbeth,
Or elfe my Sword with an unabated edge
I fhew againe vnneeded. There thou fhould't be,
By this great clatter, one of greateft note

Seem's

Comes toward Dunfinane. Arme, Arme, and out,
If this which he auouches, do's appeare,
There is no flying hence, nor tarrying here.
I'ginne to be a-weary of the Sun,
And with th'elate oth' world were now vndon.
Ring the Alarum Bell, blow Winde, come wrak'se,
At leat we'll dye with Harneffe on our backe. Exeunt

Scena Septima.

Enter Macbeth.

Macb. They have tied me to a flake, I cannot fley,
But Beare-like I muft figh the coure. What's he
That was not borne of Woman? Such a one
Am I to feare, or none.

Enter young Seyward.

Y. Sey. What is thy name?

Macb. Thou'lt be afraid to hear it.

Y. Sey. No: though thou call'ft thy fether name
Then any is in hell.

Macb. My name's Macbeth.

Y. Sey. The duller himfelfe could not pronounce a Title
More hafefull to mine ear.

Macb. No: nor more fearefull.

Y. Sey. Thou lyefht abhorred Tyrant, with my Sword
Ie proue the lye thou fpeak'ft.

Fight, and young Seyward fhine.

Macb. Thou was't born of woman;
But Swords I fmile at, Weapons laugh to fcorne,
Brandifh'd by man that's of a Woman borne. Exit.

Alarums. Enter Macduff.

Macd. That way the noise is: Tyrant fhew thy face,
If thou beft fhine, and with no froke of mine,
My Wife and Childrens Ghosts will haunt me fll:
I cannot frike at wrethed Kernes, whose armes
Are byr'd to haere their Staues; either thou Macbeth,
Or elfe my Sword with an unabated edge
I fhew againe vnneeded. There thou fhould't be,
By this great clatter, one of greateft note

The Tragedie of Macbeth.

Enter Malcolme and Seyward.

Sey. This way my Lord, the Castles gently rendred: The Tyrants people, on both sides do fight, The Noble Thanes do bravely in the Warre, The day almost it selfe professe yours, And little is to do.

Mal. We haue met with Foze That strike beside vs.

Macb. Why should I play the Roman Foole, and dye On mine owne sword? whiles I see live, the gathes Do better vpon them.

Enter Macduff.

Mact. Turne Hell-hound, turne.

Macb. Of all men else I haue avoyded thee: But get thee backe, my soule is too much charg'd With blood of thine already.

Mact. I haue no words, My voice is in my Sword, thou bloodier Villaine Then teares can glue thee out. Fight: Alarum Macb. Thou hoofest labour, As eafe may'th thou the intrenchant Ayre With thy keene Sword, I must not make me bleed: Let fall thy blade on vulnerable Crefts, I heare a charmed Life, which must not yeld To one of woman borne.

Mact. Difpaire thy Charme, And let the Angell whom thou still haft seru'd Tell thee, Macduff was from his Mothers womb Vntimely ript.

Macb. Accursed be that tongue that tells mee so; For it hath Cowd my better part of man: And be thefe Jugling Fiends no more beelude', That palter with vs in a double fence, That keepe the word of promife to our care, And breakes it to our hope. Ie, as fight with thee.

Mact. Then yeld thee Coward, And liue to be the shew, and gaze o'th time. Wee'l have thee, as our rarer Monsters are Painted vpon a pole, and vnder-writ, Heere may you fee the Tyrant.

Macb. I will not yeld To kisse the ground before young Malcolmes feet, And to be baided with the Rabbles curfe. Though Byrmane wood be come to Dunfinane, And thou oppo'st, being of no woman borne, Yet I will try the last. Before my body, I throw my warlike Shield: Lay on Macduff, And damnd be him, that first cries hold, enough.

Exeunt fighting. Alarums.

Enter Figbing, and Macbeth slaine.

Retreat, and Flourish. Enter with Drumme and Colours, Malcolme, Seyward, Roffe, Thanes, & Soldiers.

Mal. I would the Friends we mifie, were safe arriu'd.

Sey. Some must go off: and yet by thefe I see, So great a day as this is cheapely bought.

Mal. Macduff is missing, and your Noble Sonne.

Roffe. Your fon my Lord, ha's paid a fouldiers debt, He onely liu'd but till he was a man, The which no fooner had his Prowesse confirm'd In the vanishing station where he fought, But like a man he dy'd.

Sey. Then he is dead?

Roffe. I, and brought off the field: you cause of sorrow Muft not be measur'd by his worth, for then It hath no end.

Sey. Had he his hurts before?

Roffe. I, on the Front.

Sey. Why then, Gods Soldier be he; Had I as many Sonnes, as I haue haires, I would not with them to a fairer death: And fo his Knell is knoll'd.

Mal. Hee's worth more forrow, And that Ie spend for him.

Sey. He's worth no more, They say he parted well, and paied his score, And fo God be with him. Here comes newer comfort. Enter Macduff, with Macbeth head.

Macb. Haile King, for so thou art. Behold where stand The Wurpers curved head: the time is free: I fee thee compact with thy Kingdomes Pearle, That speake my salutation in their minds: Whole voyces I desire alowe with mine. Haile King of Scotland.

All. Haile King of Scotland. Flourish.

Mal. We shall not spend a large expence of time, Before we reckon with your feueraill loues, And make vs eu'n with you. My Thanes and Kinman Henceforth be Earles, the first that euer Scotland In such an Honor nam'd: What's more to do, Which would be planted newly with the time, As calling home our exil'd Friends abroad, That fled the Snares of watchfull Tyranny, Producing forth the cruell Ministers Of this dead Butcher, and his Fiend-like Queene; Who (as 'tis thought) by felfe and violent hands, Took of her life. This, and what needfull else That call's vpon vs, by the Grace of Grace, We will performe in measure, time, and place: So thankes to all at once, and to each one, Whom we inuite, to fee vs Crown'd at Scone.

Flourish. Exeunt Omnes.

FINIS.
Enter Barnardo and Francisco two Sentinels.

Barnardo,
Why, ho! is't ho? Francisco, is't ho?
Fran. Nay answer me; Stand & unfold your selfs.
Bar. Long live the King.
Fran. Barnardo?
Bar. He.
Fran. You come most carefully upon your hour.
Bar. 'Tis now struck twelve, get thee to bed Francisco.
Fran. For this relieved much thanks: 'Tis bitter cold, And I am sick at heart.
Bar. Have you had quiet Guard?
Fran. Not a Mouse stirring.
Bar. Well, goodnight. If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus, the Rivals of my Watch, bid them make hault.
Enter Horatio and Marcellus.
Fran. I think I hear them. Stand: who's there?
Hor. Friends to this ground.
Mar. And Leige-men to the Dane.
Fran. Glue you good night.
Mar. O farewell honest Soldier, who hath reliev'd you?
Fra. Barnardo ha's my place: give you goodnight.

Exit Fran.

Mar. Holla Barnardo.
Bar. Say, what is Horatio there?
Hor. A peace of him.
Bar. Welcome Horatio, welcome good Marcellus.
Mar. What, ha's this thing appear'd againe to night?
Bar. I have fene nothing.
Mar. Horatio fares, 'tis but our Fantasie,
And will not let beleefe take hold of him
Touching this dreadful sight, twice fenee of vs,
Therefore I have intreated him along
With vs, to watch the minutes of this Night,
That if againe this Apparition come,
He may approze our eyes, and speake to it.
Hor. Tuff, tuff, 'twill not appeare.
Bar. Sit downe a-while,
And let vs once againe affaile your cares,
That are so fortified against our Story,
What we two Nights haue fenee,
Hor. Well, sit we downe,
And let vs heare Barnardo speake of this.
Barn. Last night of all,
When yond fame Starre that's Westward from the Pole
Had made his course t'llume that part of Heauen
Where now it burns, Marcellus and my selfe,
The Bell then beating one.
Mar. Peace, break thee off:
Enter the Ghost.
Look whither it comes again.
Barn. In the same figure, like the King that's dead.
Mar. Thou art a Scholler; speake to it Horatio.
Barn. Looks it not like the King? Marke it Horatio.
Hor. Most like: It harrowes me with fear & wonder.
Barn. It would be spoke too.
Mar. Queftion it Horatio.
Hor. What art thou that viarpt this time of night,
Together with that Faire and Warlike forme
In which the Malefly of buried Denmarke
Did sometymes march: By Heauen I charge thee speake.
Mar. It is offended.
Barn. See, it falkes away.
Hor. Stay: fpeake; fpeake: I Charge thee, fpeake.
Exit the Ghost.
Mar. 'Tis gone, and will not answer.
Barn. How now Horatio? You tremble & look pale:
Is not this something more then Fantasie?
What thinke you on't?
Hor. Before my God, I might not this beleue
Without the fensible and true auouch
Of mine owne eyes.
Mar. Is it not like the King?
Hor. As thou art to thy selfe,
Such was the very Armour he had on,
When th'Ambitious Norway combatted:
So frown'd he once, when in an angry parle
He smot the fleded Pollax on the Ice.
'Tis strange.
Mar. Thus twice before, and iuft at this dead house,
With Martall falkes, hath he gone by our Watch.
Hor. In what particular thought to work, I know not:
But in the groffe and scope of my Opinion,
This boades fome strange erruption to our State.
Mar. Good now fit downe, & tell me he that knowes
Why this fame strieff and moft obferuant Watch,
So nightly toyes the subjeft of the Land,
And why fuch dayly Caf't of Brazon Cannon
And Forraigne Mart for Implements of warre:
Why fuch imprefte of Ship-wrights, whose foer Taskes
Do's not diuide the Sunday from the weeke,
What might be toward, that this fweaty hail
Doth make the Night ioynt-Labourer with the day:
Who is't that can informe me?
Hor. That can I,
At
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

At least the whisper goes thus: Our last King, Whose Image even but now appear'd to vs, Was (as you know) by Fortinbras of Norway, (Thereto pricked on by a most emulous Pride) Did to the Comate. In which, our Valiant Hamlet, (For so this fide of our knowne world esteem'd him) Did play this Fortinbras, who by a Seal'd Compait, Ratified by Law, and Heraldrie, Did forfeite (with his life) all those his Lands Which he fhow faw'd on, to the Conqueror: Against the which, a Moity competent Was gaged by our King: which had return'd To the Inheritance of Fortinbras, Had he bin Vanquisher, as by the fame Cou'nant And carriage of the Article designe, His fell to Hamlet. Now fir, young Fortinbras, Of vnimprou'd Mettle, hot and full, Hath in the Banner of Norway, here and there, Shark'd vp, a Lift of Landleffe Refolutes, For Fodee and Diet, to some Empire That hath a flomacke in't: which is no other (And it doth well appeare unto our State.) But to re, the Shower of vs by strong hand And terne's Compulatifs, those forefald Lands So by his Father loft: and this (I take it) Is the maine Motive of our Preparations, The Source of this our Watch, and the cheefe head Of this poft-haft, and Romage in the Land. Enter Ghost again.

But let, behold: Loe, where it comes againe: I'le croffe it, though it blaffe me. Stay Illusion: If thou hast any found, or we of Voyce, Speake to me. If there be any good thing to be done, That may to thee do ease, and grace to me; speake to me. If thou art pray to the Countries Fate (Which happily foreknowing may sayoyd) Oh speake. Or, if thou haft vp-hoarded in thy life Extorted Titure in the wombe of Earth, (For which, they say, you Spirits oft walke in death) Speake of it. Stay, and speake. Stop it Marcellus. Mar. Shall I strike at it with my Partizan? Hor. Do, if it will not fland. Barn. 'Tis heere. Hor. 'Tis heere. Mar. 'Tis gone. Exit Ghost.

We do it wrong, being fo Malefical To offer it the fiew of Violence, For it is as the Ayre, invulnerable, And our vaine blowes, malicious Mockery. Barn. It was about to speake, when the Cocke crew. Hor. And then it flarte, like a guilty thing Upon a hearfull Summons. I have hearde, The Cocke that is the Trumpet to the day, Doth with his lofty and thrill-foundeing Throat Awake the God of Day: and at his warning, Whether in Sea, or Fire, in Earth, or Ayre, The extraagant, and erring Spirit, lyes To his Confine. And of the truth herein, This present Obiect made probation. Mar. It faded on the crowne of the Cocke. Some sayes, that euer 'gainst that Seafon comes Wherein our Saviour's Birth is celebrated, The Bird of Dawning fingeth all night long: And then (they say) no Spirit can walke abroad, The nights are wholome, then no Planets strike, No Faery talkes, nor Witch hath power to Charme:

So hallow'd, and so gracious is the time. Hor. So haue I heard, and do in part beleue it. But looke, the Morne in Ruffet mantle clad, Walkes o're the dew of you high Eastern Hill, Breake we our Watch vp, and by my aduice Let vs impart what we haue seene to night: Vnto young Hamlet. For uppon my life, This Spirit dumb to vs, will speake to him: Do you content we shall acquaint him with it, As needfull in our Loues, firtting our Duty? Mar. Let do't I pray, and I this morning know Where we shall finde him most conveniently. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Claudius King of Denmarke, Gertrude the Queen, Hamlet, Polonius, Laertes, and his Sifer Ophelia, Lords Attendant.

King. Though yet of Hamlet our deere Brothers death The memory be greene: and that it vs befitted To beare our hearts in greefe, and our whole Kindome To be contracted in one brow of woe: Yet fo farre hath Diſcretion fought with Nature, That we with wifheit forrow thinke on him, Together with remembrance of our felues. Therefore our fometimes Sifer, now our Queen, Th'Imperiall Inuyntrefe of this warlike State, Haue we, as 'twere, with a defeated joy, With one Afpicious, and one Dropping eye, With mirth in Funerall, and with Dirge in Marriage, In equall Scale weighing Delight and Dole Taken to Wife; nor haue we herein barr'd Your better Wifedomes, which haue freely gone With this affaire along, for all our Thankes. Now followes, that you know young Fortinbras, Holding a weake suppoſall of our worth: Or thinking by our late deere Brothers death, Our State to be disloynt, and out of Frame, Colleauged with the dreame of his Advantage; He hath not lay'd to peffer vs with Meffage, Importing the forrender of those Lands Loft by his Father: with all Bonds of Law To our most valiant Brother. So much for him. Enter Voltemand and Cornelius.

Now for our selfe, and for this time of meeting Thus much the buſinesse is. We haue here writ To Norway, Vncle of young Fortinbras, Who Impotent and Bedrid, fearfully heares Of this his Nephews purpoſe, to suppreffe His further gate hereine. In that the Leuries, The Lift, and full proportions are all made Out of his subiect: and we heere dispatch You good Cornelius, and you Voltemand, For bearing of this greeting to old Norway, Giving to you no further perfonall power, To buſinesse with the King, more then the scope Of these dilated Articles allow: Farewell and let your haft commend your duty. Vol. In that, and all things, will we fhw our duty. King. We doubt it nothing, heartily farewell. Exit Voltemand and Cornelius.

And now Laertes, what's the newes with you?
You told us of some suite. What is’t Leartes?
You cannot speake of Realon to the Dane,
And looke your voyce. What would’t thou beg Leartes,
That shall not be my offer, not thy asking?
The Head is not more Naive to the Heart,
The Hand more Instrumentall to the Mouth,
Then is the Throne of Denmarke to thy Father.
What would’t thou have Leartes?
Laer. Dread my Lord,
Your leave and favour to returne to France,
From whence, though willingly I came to Denmarke
To shew my duty in your Coronation,
Yet now I must confess, that duty done,
My thoughts and wishes bend againe towards France,
And bow them to your gracious leave and pardon.
King. Have you your Fathers leave?
What sayes Poloniou?
Pol. He hath my Lord:
I do beseech you give him leave to go.
King. Take thy faire hourre Leartes, time be thine,
And thy best graces Ipend it at thy will:
But now my Cofin Hamlet, and my Sonne?
Ham. A little more then kin, and leffe then kinde.
King. How is it that the Clouds still hang on you?
Ham. Not so my Lord, I am too much ith Sun.
Queen. Good Hamlet cast thy lightly colour off,
And let thine eye looke like a Friend on Denmarke.
Do not for euer with thy yeyled lids
Seeke for thy Noble Father in the dust;
Thou know’st ’tis common, all that liues must dye,
Paffing through Nature, to Eternity.
Ham. I Madam, it is common.
Queen. If it be;
Why seemis it so particular with thee.
Ham. Seemis Madam? Nay, it is: I know not Seemis:
’Tis not alone my Inky Cloake (good Mother)
Nor Cusomyne suites of solemnle Blacke,
Nor windy vapour of forc’d breath,
No, nor the fruitfull Riuers in the flood,
Nor the delected hauour of the Village,
Together with all Formes, Moons, shewes of Griefe,
That can denote me truly. These indeed Seeme,
For they are actions that a man might play:
But I have that Within, which paffeth fow;
These, but the Trappings, and the Srites of wo.
King. ’Tis sweet and commendable
In your Nature Hamlet,
To give these mourning duties to your Father:
But you must know, your Father loath a Father,
That Father loath, loath his, and the Suruiuer bound
In filial Obligation, for some terme
To do obsequious Sorrow. But to perfeuer
In obinate Condolement, is a course
Of impious ribbournesse. ’Tis vmanly greefe,
It shewes a will most incorrect to Heauen,
A Heart vnfortified, a Minde impatient,
An Understanding simple, and vnchoold:
For, what we know must be, and is as common
As any the moft vulgar thing to fence,
Why should we in our pectuil Opposition
Take it to heart? Yee, ’tis a fault to Heauen,
A fault against the Dead, a fault to Nature,
To Reasou moft absurd, whose common Theame
Is death of Fathers, and who fill hath cried,
From the first Coarfe till he that dyed to day,
This must be fo. We pray you throw to earth
This vnpreualing woe, and the ot vs
As of a Father; For let the wo take note,
You are the moft immediate to Throne,
And with no leffe Nobility of Ly.
Then that which deereft Father sees his Sonne,
Do I impart towards you. For ye intent
In going backe to Schoole in Wittenberg,
It is moft retrograde to our desire:
And we beseech you, bend you to reigne
Heree in the cheere and comfort of owne,
Our cheefeft Courtier Cofin, and our Son.
Rq. Let not thy Mother lose her Prans Hamlet:
I prythee fly with vs, go not to Wittenr:
Ham. I shall in all my best
Obey you Madam.
King. Why ’tis a louing, and a faire Rey,
Be as our selfe in Denmarke. Madam con,
This gentle and vnforc’d accord of Hamlet
Sits smiling to my heart: in grace whereof,
No iicond health that Denmarke drinks toay,
But the great Cannon to the Clouds shal teli
And the Kings Roche, the Heauens shal bruigate
Repeaking earthly Thunder. Come away.
Exeunt
Mater Hamlet.
Ham. Oh that he was not so hold Fledge, would cull,
Thaw, and resolue it felse into a Dew:
Or that the Euerlalng had not fixt
His Cannon ’gainst Selfe—slaughter. O God, O God
How weary, fale, flat, and vnprofitable
Seemes to me all the vses of this world?
Fie on’t? Oh fie, fie, ’tis an vnweeded Garden
That growes to Seed: Things rank, and groffe in Nature
Possele it meerly. That it should come to this:
But two months dead: Nay, not so much: not two,
So excellant a King, that was to this
Hiperion to a Satyre: fo louing to my Mother,
That he might not beteene the winde of heauen
Vifht her face too roughly. Heauen and Earth
Must I remember: why should I hang on him,
As if encreas of Appetite had growne
By what it fed on: and yet within a month?
Let me not thinke on’t: Fraftly, thy name is woman.
A little Month, or ere those choses were old,
With which she followed my poore Fathers body
Like Nioe, all tears. Why fie, even fie.
(O Heauen! A beast that wants discoure of Reason
Would have mounr’d longer) married with mine Vnkle,
My Fathers Brother: but no more like my Father,
Then I to Hercules. Within a Moneth?
Ere yet the falt of moft vnrighteous Teares
Had left the fludding of her gauded eyes,
She married. O moft wicked Speed, to poft
With such dexterity to Incecuous fleets:
It is not, nor it cannot come to good.
But breake my heart, for I must hold my tongue.

Enter Horatio, Barnard, and Marcellus.

Her. Haile to your Lordship.
Ham. I am glad to fee you well:
Horatio, or I do forget my felfe.
Her. The fame my Lord,
And your poore Servaunt euer.
Ham. Sit by my good friend,
Ile change that name with you:
And what make you from Wittenberg Horatio?

Mar-
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

Marcellus.

Mar. My good Lord.

Ham. I am very glad to see you: good even Sir.

But what in faith make you from Wittemberge?

Hor. A truant disposition, good my Lord.

Ham. I would not have your Enemy say so;

Nor shall you doe mine ear that violence,

To make it truer of your owne report

Against your selfe, I know you are no Truant:

But what is your affaire in Elfenour?

Wilt teach you to drink deep, ere you depart.

Hor. My Lord, I came to see your Fathers Funerall.

Ham. I pray thee doe not mock me (fellow Student)

I think it was to see my Mothers Wedding.

Hor. Indeed my Lord, it followed hard upon

Did coldly furnish forth the Marriage Tables;

Would I had met my dearest foe in heauen,

Ere I had ever feene that day Horatio.

My father, me thinks I see my father,

Hor. Oh where my Lord?

Ham. In my minds eye (Horatio)

Hor. I saw him once; he was a goodly King.

Ham. He was a man, take him for all in all:

I shall not look upon his like again.

Hor. My Lord, I think I saw him yesternight.

Ham. Saw? Who?

Hor. My Lord, the King your Father.

Ham. The King my Father?

Hor. Season your admiration for a while

With an attent ear; till I may deliver

Vpon the wittnesse of these Gentlemen,

This maruell to you.

Ham. For Haueans loue let me hear.

Hor. Two nights together, had these Gentlemen

Marcellus and Barnardo) on their Watch

In the dead waft and middle of the night

Beene thus encountered. A figure like your Father,

Arm'd at all points exactly, Cap a Pe.

Appeares before them, and with somellemne march

Goes slow and flately: By them thrice he walkt,

By their oppreft and feare-surprized eyes,

Within his Truncheons length; whilft they beheld

Almost to Jelty with the Aét of feare,

Stand dumb and speake not to him. This to me

In dreadful feerecie impart they did,

And with them the third Night kept the Watch,

Whereas they had deliver'd both in time,

Forme of the thing; each word made true and good,

The Apparition comes. I knew your Father;

These hands are not more like.

Ham. But where was this?

Mar. My Lord, vpon the platforme where we watcht.

Ham. Did you not speake to it?

Hor. My Lord, I did;

But anfwered made it none: yet once me thought

It lifted vp it head, and did addrefsse

It felfe to motion, like as it would speake:

But even then, the Morning Cocke crew lowd;

And at the found it thrunke in halfe away,

And vanilfit from our fight.

Ham. Tis very strange.

Hor. As I doe liue my honour Lord 'tis true;

And we did thinke it wrat downe in our duty

To let you know of it.

Ham. Indeed, indeed Sirs; but this troubles me.

Hold you the watch to Night?

Botb. We doe my Lord.

Ham. Arm'd, say you?

Botb. Arm'd, my Lord.

Ham. From top to toe?

Botb. My Lord, from head to foote.

Ham. Then faw you not his face?

Hor. O yes, my Lord, he wore his Bexuer vp.

Ham. What, lookt he frowningly?

Hor. A countenance more in forrow then in anger.

Ham. Pale, or red?

Hor. Nay very pale.

Ham. And fixt his eyes vpon you?

Hor. Moft continually.

Ham. I would I had beene there.

Hor. It would have much amaz'd you.

Ham. Very like, very like: flaid it long?

(dred.

Hor. While one with moderate haft might tell a hun-

All. Longer, longer.

Hor. Not when I saw't.

Ham. His Beard was grify; no.

Hor. It was, as I haue feene it in his life,

A Sable Siluer'd.

Ham. Ile watch to Night; perchance 'twill wake a-

Hor. I warrant you it will.

Ham. If it assume my noble Fathers perfon,

Ile speake to it, though Hell it felte should gape

And bid me hold my peace. I pray you all;

If you haue hitherto conceald this fight;

Let it bee treble in your silence flill:

And whatfoever els shall hap to night,

Give it an vnderstanding but no tongue;

I will requite your loues: so, fare ye well:

Vpon the Platforme twixt eleuen and twelue,

Ile vift you.

All. Our duty to your Honour. Exeunt.

Ham. Your loue, as mine to you; farewell.

My Fathers Spirit in Armes? All is not well:

I doubt some foule play: would the Night were come;

'Till then fit flill my foule; foule deeds will rife,

Though all the earth orewhelm them to mens cies. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Laertes and Opheilia.

Laur. My necesariest are imbarke't; Farewell:

And Sifter, as the Winds glue Benefit,

And Conuoy is affiuent; doe not fleepe,

But let me hear from you.

Opbel. Do you doubt that?

Laur. For Hamlet, and the trilling of his fauours,

Hold it a fashion and a toy in Bloud.

A Violet in the youth of Primy Nature;

Froward, not permanent; sweet not laffing

The fulmination of a minute! No more.

Opbel. No more but fo.

Laur. Thinke it no more:

For nature creffant does not grow alone,

In thewes and Bulke; but as his Temple waxes,

The inward feruice of the Minde and Soule

Growes wide withall. Perhaps he loues you now,

And now no foyle nor cautell doth befmerch

The vertue of his feare: but you must feare

His
His greatnesse weigh'd, his will is not his owne;
For hee himselfe is subiect to his Birth:
Hee may not, as vnusuall persons doe,
Carue for himselfe; for, on his choyce depends
The fanciety and health of the weale State.
And therefore muft his choyce be circumscrib'd
Vnto the voyce and yeelding of that Body,
Whereof he is the Head. Then if he fayes he loues you,
It fits your wisedome fo farre to beleevethat it;
As he in his peculiar Sect and force
May giue his faying deed: which is no further,
Then the maie voyce of Demark goes withall.
Then weigh what loffe your Honour may sufaine,
If with too credent care you lift his Songs;
Or lofe your Heart; or your chaff Treaure open
To his vnmaffred importunity.
Feare it Ophelia,feare it my deare Sifer,
And keepe within the reare of your Affection;
Out of the hot and danger of Difire.
The chari{ft} Mald is Prodigall enough,
If the vnmaske her beauty to the Moone:
Vertue it felle s{capes} not calumnious strokes;
The Canker Galls, the Infants of the Spring
Too oft before the buttons be fel{clo'd},
And in the Morne and liquid dew of Youth,
Contagious blastments are most imminent.
Be wary then, beft safety lies in feare;
Youth to it felle rebels, though none else neere.
Opbe. I shall th'effect of this good Leffon keepe,
As watchmen to my heart: but good my Brother
Doe not as some vngraftuous Paftors doe,
Shew me the {eepe}e and thorny way to Heauen;
Whil{f}ift like a puft and recklesse Libertine
Himselfe, the Primrofe path of daili{ance} treads,
And reaks not his owne rede.
Lae. Oh, feare me not.
Enter Polonius.
I stay too long; but here my Father comes:
A double bleffing is a double grace;
Occa{f}ion smil{es} vpon a second leave.
Polon. Yet heere Laertes? Aboord, aboord for shame,
The winde fits in the shoulder of your faile,
And you are fad for there: my bleffing with you;
And thefe few Precepts in thy memory,
See thou Chara{c}ter. Glue thy thoughts no tongue,
Nor any vnproportion'd thought his Act:
Be thou familiar; but by no meanes vulgar:
The friends thou haft, and their adoption tride,
Grapple them to thy Soule, with hoopes of Steele:
But doe not dill thy pame, with entertainment
Of each vnha{c}ht; vnfl{e}dgd Comrade. Beware
Of entrance to a quarrel: but being in
Be{r}t{h} that th'opposed may beware of thee.
Giu{e} every man thine ear{b}ut few thy voyce;
Take each mans cens{u}rebut referre thy judgement:
Cofly th habi{t} as thy purfe can buy;
But not expret in fancie rich, not gawdier:
For the Apparell oft proclaims the man.
And they in France of the best ranck and fation,
Are of a moft felec{t} and generous chieff in that.
Neither a borrower,nor a lender be;
For lone oft lofes both it felle and friend:
And borrowing duls the edge of Husbandry.
This above all, to thine owne {f}elle be true:
And it mu{t} f{u}l{l}ow, as the Night the Day,
Thou canft not then be felle to any man.

Farewell: my Bleffing fea{f}on this in thee.
Laer. Moft humbly doe I take my leaue, my Lord.
Polon. The time inuiter you, goe, your seruants tend.
Laer. Farewell Ophelia, and remember well
What I haue faid to you.
Opbe. Tis in my memory lockt,
And you your felle fhall keepe the key of it.
Lae. Farewell.
exit Laer.
Polon. What left Ophelia he hath faid to you?
Opbe. So pleafe you, somthing touching the L. Hamlet.
Polon. Marry, well bethought:
Tis told me he hath very oft of late
Guen private time to you; and you your felle
Hau{e} of your audience beene moft free and bounteous.
If it be fo, as to tis put on me;
And that in way of caution: I muft tell you,
You doe not vnder{t}and your felle fo clee{r}ely,
As it behoves my Daughter, and your Honour.
What is betweene you, giue me vp the truth?
Opbe. He hath my Lord of late, made many tenders
Of his affe{ci}on to me.
Polon. Affection, pul. You fpake like a greene Girle,
Vnfit{f}ed in fuch perilous Circumference.
Does hee believe his tenders, as you call them?
Opbe. I do not know, my Lord, what I {h}ould {t}hink.
Polon. Marry Ie teach you; thynke your felle a Baby,
That you have tanke his tenders for true pay,
Which are not flarting. Tender your felle more dearly;
Or not to crack the winde of the poore Phrafe,
Roaming it thus, you'll tender me a foole.
Opbe. My Lord, he hath importun'd me with loue,
In honourable fa{h}ion.
Polon. I, fa{h}ion you may call it, go too, go too.
Opbe. And hath ghu{n} countenance to his speech,
My Lord, with all the vowes of Heauen.
Polon. I, Springs to catch Woodcocks. I doe know
When the Bloud burnes, how Prodigall the Soule
Gius the tongue voyce: thefe blazes, Daughtuer,
Giuing more light then heate; extinct in both,
Euen in their promife, as it is a making;
You muft not take for fire. For this time Daughtuer,
Be somewhat scanter of your Maiden prefence;
Set your entremets at a higher rate,
Then a command to parley. For Lord Hamlet,
Beeleue so much in him, that he is young;
And with a larger tether may he walke,
Then may be giuen you. In few, Ophelia;
Doe not beleue his voyces; for they are Broakers,
Not of the eye, which their Inuentments show:
But meere implorators of vnHoly Sutes,
Breathing like fanchifled and pious bonds,
The better to beguile. This is for all:
I would not, in plaine tearems, from this time forth,
Hau{e} you fo flander any moment leuire,
As to giue words or talke with the Lord Hamlet:
Looke too't, I charge you; come your waues.
Opbe. I shall obey my Lord. Exeunt.

Enter Hamlet, Horatio, Marcellus.
Ham. The Ayre bites shrewdly: is it very cold?
Hor. It is a nipping and an eager ayre.
Ham. What howeuer now?
Hor. I thinke it lacks of twelve.
Mar. No, it is throke.
(fesfon,
Hor. Indeed I heard it not: then it drawes neere the Wherein the Spirit held his wont to walke.
What
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

What does this meane my Lord? (roufe,
Ham. The King doth wake to night, and takes his Keeps waffels and the swaggering vp'spring reeles,
And as he dreines his draughts of Renifh downe,
The kettle Drum and Trumpet thus bray out
The triumph of his Pledge.
Horat. Is it a cusforme?
Ham. I marry it;
And to my mind, though I am natuie here,
And to the manner borne: It is a Cusforme
More honour'd in the breach, then the obseruanee.
Enter Gloft.
Hor. Looke my Lord, it comes.
Ham. Angles and Minifiers of Grace defend vs:
Be thou a Spirit of health, or Goblin damn'd,
Bring with thee ayres from Heaven, or blinds from Hell,
Be thy euents wicked or charitable,
Thou com'st in such a questionable shape
That I will speake to thee. Ile call thee Hamlet,
King,Father,Royall Dane : Oh,oh,answer me,
Let me not burft in Ignorance; but tell
Why thy Canoniz'd bones Hearfed in death,
Haue burft their cerments, why the Sepulcher
Wherein we faw thee quietly ennur'd,
Hath op'd his ponderous and Marble lawes,
To caft thee vp againe? What may this meane?
That thou dead Corrie againe in compleat fteele,
Reuiftis thus the glimpses of the Moone,
Making Night hidious! And we foules of Nature,
So horridly to shakke our diuision
With thoughts beyond thee; reaches of our Soules,
Say, why is this? Wherefore? what should we doe?
Gloft beckons Hamlet.
Hor. It beckons you to goe away with it,
As if some imparted did deire
To you alone.
Mar. Looke with what courteous action
It wafts you to a more removed ground:
But doe not goe with it.
Hor. No, by no meanes.
Ham. It will not speake: then will I follow it.
Hor. Doe not my Lord,
Ham. Why, what should be the feare?
I doe not fet my life at a pins fee;
And for my Soule,what can it doe to that?
Being a thing immortal as it felle:
It waues me forth againe;Ile follow it.
Hor. What if it tempt you toward the Floud my Lord?
Or to the dreadful Sonnet of the Cliffe,
That beetles o're his bafe into the Sea,
And there affumes some other horrible forme,
Which might deprue your Souerainty of Reafon,
And dr:w you into madneffe think of it?
Ham. It wafts me still: goe on, Ile follow thee.
Mar. You shall not goe my Lord,
Ham. Hold off your hand.
Hor. Be rul'd,you shall not goe.
Ham. My fate cries out,
And makes each petty Artire in this body,
As hardy as the Nemian Lions nere:
Still am I cal'd? Vhand me Gentlemen:
By Heau'n,Ile make a Ghost of him that lets me:
I fay away, goe on, Ile follow thee.

Exeunt Gloft & Hamlet.
Hor. He waies deeper with imagination.
Mar. Let's follow;'tis not fit thus to obey him.

Hor. Haue after, to what ifwue will this come?
Mar. Something is rotten in the State of Denmarke.
Hor. Heaven will direct it.

Exeunt (her.
Ham. Where wilt thou lead me? speak; Ile go no fur-
Gbo. Marke me.
Ham. I will.
Gbo. My hower is almost come,
When I to sulphorous and tormenting Flames
Muft render vp my felle.
Ham. Alas poore Gloft.
Gbo. Pitty me not, but lend thy serius hearing
To what I shall vnfold.
Ham. Speake, I am bound to heare.
Gbo. So art thou to reuenge, when thou shalt heare.
Ham. What?
Gbo. I am thy Fathers Spirit,
Doom'd for a certaine terme to walke the night;
And for the day confin'd to faft in Fiers,
Till the foule crimes done in my dayes of Nature
Are burnt and purg'd away? But that I am forbid
To tell the secrets of my Prifon-Houfe;
I could a Tale vnfold, whose lighteft word
Would harrow vp thy foule, freeze thy young blood,
Make thy two eyes like Starres, ftrart from their Spheres,
Thy knobty and combined locks to part,
And each particular hair to fland an end,
Like Quilles vpone the freftfull Porpentine:
But this eternall blaffen must not be
To eares of flesh and bloud; lift Hamlet, oh lift,
If thou di/dt euer thy deare Father loue.
Ham. Oh Heauen!
Gbo. Reuenge his foule and moft vnnatural Murther.
Ham. Murther?
Gbofr. Murther moft foule, as in the beft it is;
But this moft foule,frange, and vnnatural.
Ham. Haft, haft me to know it,
That with wings as swift
As meditation,or the thoughts of Loue,
May sweepe to my Reuenge.
Gbof. I finde thee apt,
Dilfer and thoule?thou be then the fat weede
That rots it felle in eafe, on Lethe Wharfe,
Would\'st thou not firre in this. Now Hamlet heare:
I\'t is gien out, that feeping in mine Orchard,
A Serpent rung me: Io the whole care of Denmarke,
Is by a forged proceffe of my death
Rankly abus\'d: But know thou Noble youth,
The Serpent that did dripe thy Fathers life,
Now weares his Crowne.
Ham. O my Propheticke foule: mine Vncle?
Gboft. I that inceftuous, that adulterate Beast? With witchcraft of his wits, hath Traitorous guifts.
Oh wicked Wit,and Gifts, that haue the power
So to seduce? Won to to this shamefull Luft
The will of my moft feeming vertuous Queene:
Oh Hamlet, what a falling off was there,
From me, whose loue was of that dignity,
That it went hand in hand, euin with the Vow
I made to her in Marriage; and to decline
Vpon a wretch, whose Natural gifts were poore
To thofe of mine. But Vrue, as it neuer will be moued,
Though Lewndiffe court it in a shape of Heauen:
So Luft, though to a radiant Angell link'd,
Will fate it felle in a Celestialbed,& prey on Garbage.
O o
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

But soft, me thinkes I fent the Mornings Ayre;
Briefe let me be: Sleeping within mine Orchard,
My cufome aways in the afternoone;
Upon my cufome howere thy Uncle fole
With ioyce of curfed Hebenon in a Violl,
And in the Porches of mine eares did pour
The leperous Difillment; whose effeet
Holds fuch an emnity with bloud of Man,
That twift as Quick-filer, it courfes through
The natural Gates and Allies of the Body;
And with a fodaline vigour it doth poffeet
And curd, like Aygre droppings into Milke,
The thin and wholffome bloud: fof did it mine;
And a moft infant Tetter bak'd about,
Moft Lazar-like, with vile and loathffome cruf,
All my smooth Body.

Thus was I, sleeping, by a Brothers hand,
Of Life, of Crowne, and Queene at once dispacht;
Cut off even in the Bioffomes of my Sinne,
Vnhouzzled, disappointed, vnanelled,
No reckoning made, but fent to my account
With all my imperfections on my head;
Oh horribile, Oh horribile, moft horribile:
If thou haft nature in thee bear it not;
Let not the Royall Bed of Denmarke be
A Couch for Luxury and damned Inceft.
But howsoever thou pursuest this AQ;
Taint not thy mind, nor let thy Soule contribute
Against thy Mother oughst, leave her to heauen,
And to those Thernes that in her bosome lodge;
To pricke and thing her. Fare thee well at once;
The Glow-worme showes the Matine to be neere,
And reins to pale his vneffectual Fire:
Adue,adue, Hamlet: remember me. Exit.

Ham. Oh all you hoft of Heauen! Oh Earth; what els?
And all I couple Hell? Oh fie: hold my heart;
And you my finnewes, grow not infant Old;
But beare me fifWy: Remember thee?
I, thou poore Ghost, while memory holds a feate
In this diadated Globe: Remember thee?
Yes, from the Table of my Memory,
I le wipe away all triaull Fond Records,
All fawes of Bookes, all forms, all prefures paft,
That youth and obfervatton coppied there;
And thy Commandment all alone fhall liue
Within the Booke and Volume of my Braine,
Vnmixt with bafer matter; yes, yes, by Heauen:
Oh moft pernicious woman!
Oh Villaine, Villaine, filming damned Villaine!
My Tables, my Table: meet it is I fet it downe,
That one may smile, and smile and be a Villaine;
At leaft I'm fure it may be fo in Denmarke;
So Vnckle there you are, now to my word;
It is: Adue, Adue, Remember me: I have (worn't.

Hor. & Mar.within. My Lord, my Lord.

Enter Horatio and Marcellus.

Mar. Lord Hamlet.

Hor. Heauen secure him.

Mar. So be it.

Hor. Illo, ho, ho, my Lord.

Ham. Illo, ho, ho, boy; come bird, come.

Mar. How if't my Noble Lord?

Hor. What newes, my Lord?

Ham. Oh wonderfull!

Hor. Good my Lord tell it.

Ham. No you'll reueale it.
The youth you breath of guilty, be affir'd
He cloes with you in this conquence:
Good sir, or fo, or friend, or Gentleman.
According to the Phrafe and the Addition,
Of man and Country.
Reynol. Very good my Lord.
Polon. And then Sir does he this?
He does: what was I about to say?
I was about to say somthing: where did I leave?
Reynol. At cloes in the conquence:
At friend, or fo, and Gentleman.
Polon. At cloes in the conquence, I marry,
He cloes with you thus. I know the Gentleman,
I fav him yesterday, or tother day;
Or then or then, with fuch and fuch; and as you say,
There was he gaming, there o'retooke in's Roufe,
There falling out at Tennis; or perchance,
I fav him enter fuch ahoufe of falle;
Videlice, a Brothell, or fo forth. See you now;
Your baiit of faifhhood, takes this Cape of truth;
And thus doe we of wifedom and of reach
With windleffe, and with affiles of Bias,
By indiretions finde directions out:
So by my former Lecture and advice
Shall you my Sonne; you haue me, haue you not?
Reynol. My Lord I haue.
Polon. God buy you; fare you well.
Reynol. Good my Lord.
Polon. Obfere his inclination in your felfe.
Reynol. I shall my Lord.
Polon. And let him ply his Muficke.
Reynol. Well, my Lord. Exit.

Enter Opheilia.

Polon. Farewell:
How now Opheilia, what's the matter?
Ophe. Alas my Lord, I have beene fo affrighted.
Polon. With what, in the name of Hauean?
Ophe. My Lord, as I was fowing in my Chamber,
Lord Hamlet with his doublet all vnbrac'd,
No hat upon his head, his flockings fould,
Vngartred, and downe glued to his Anckle,
Pate as his shirt, his knees knocking each other,
And with a looke fo pitous in purport,
As if he had been looke out of hell,
To speake of horrors: he comes before me.
Polon. Mad for thy Loue?
Ophe. My Lord, I doe not know: but truly I do feare it.
Polon. What said he?
Ophe. He tooke me by the writ, and held me hard;
Then goes he to the length of all his arme;
And with his other hand thus o're his brow,
He fials to fuch perulf of my face,
As he would draw it. Long faid he fo,
At laft, a little shaking of mine Arme:
And thrice his head thus wauing vp and downe;
He rai'd a figh, fo pittious and profound,
That it did feeme to flatter all his bulke,
And end his being. That done, he lets me goe,
And with his head ouer his shoulders turn'd,
He feem'd to finde his way without his eyes,
For out adores he went without their help;
And to the laft, bended their light on me.
Polon. Goe with me, I will goe feke the King,
This is the very exaftie of Loue,
Whose violent property foredoes it felfe,
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

And leads the will to deperate Undertakings,
As oft as any passion under Heauen,
That does afflict our Natures. I am forrie,
What haue you gien him any hard words of late?
Ophe. No my good Lord : but as you did command,
I did repel his Letters, and deny'd
His access to me.

Pol. That hath made him mad.
I am forrie that with better speed and judgement
I had not quoted him. I feare he did but trifie,
And meant to wracke thee : but beflrew my jealoufie :
It feemes it is as proper to our Age,
To caft beyond our felves in our Opinions,
As it is common for the yonger fort
To lacke discretion. Come, go we to the King,
This must be knowne, w being kept clofe might mouse
More greefe to hide, then hate to vttre loue. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter King, Queen, Rosencrance, and Guldenfarne Camalys.

King. Welcome deere Rosencrance and Guldenfarne.
Moreouer, that we much did long to see you,
The neede we haue to vfe you, did prouoke
Our haffie fending. Something haue you heard
Of Hamlet's transformation : fo I call it,
Since not th'exterior, nor the inward man
Refembles that it was. What it should bee
More then his Fathers deaths, that thus hath put him
So much from th'underfanding of himselfe,
I cannot deeme of. I intreat you both,
That being of fo young dayes brought vp with him :
And fince fo Neighbour'd to his youth, and humour,
That you vouchsafe your rett heere in our Court
Some little time : fo by your Companies
To draw him on to pleafures, and to gather
So much as from Occasions you may gaine,
That open'd lies within our remedie.

Qu. Good Gentlemen, he hath much talk'd of you,
And fare I am, two men there are not luing,
To whom he more adheres. If it will pleafe you
To fhev vs fo much Gentry, and good will,
As to expend your time with vs a-while,
For the supply and profit of our Hope,
Your Vifitation shall receive such thankes
As fits a Kings remembrance.

Rosn. Both your Maiesties
Might by the Soueraigne power you have of vs,
Put your dread pleafures, more into Command
Then to Entreatie.

Gult. We both obey,
And here giue vp our felues, in the full bent,
To lay our Servises freely at your feetes,
To be commanded.

King. Thankes Rosencrance, and gentle Guldenfarne.

Qu. Thankes Guldenfarne and gentle Rosencrance.

And I befeeche you instantly to visit
My too much changed Sonne.
Go some of ye,
And bring the Gentlemen where Hamlet is.

Gult. Heauens make our presence and our praefiies
Pleafant and helpfull to him. Exit.

Queen. Amen.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. Th'Ambaffadors from Norway, my good Lord,
Are joyfully return'd.

King. Thou haft haft bin the Father of good News.
Pol. Haue I, my Lord ? Affure you, my good Liege,
I hold my dutie, as I hold my Soule,
Both to my God, one to my gracious King :
And I do thinke, or elle this braine of mine
Hunts not the traile of Police, fo fure
As I haue vs'd to do: that I have found
The very caufe of Hamlets Lunacie.

King. Oh speake of that, that I do long to heare.

Pol. Glue firt admittance to th'Ambaffadors,
My Newses shall be the Newses to that great Feaft.

King. Thy felfe do grace to them, and bring them in.
He tells me my sweet Queene, that he hath found
The head and fourfe of all your Sonnes difterm.
Qu. I doubt it is no other, but the maine,
His Fathers death, and our o're-halyf Marriage.

Enter Polonius, Voluntand, and Cornelia.

King. Well, we hall fift him. Welcome good Friends:
Say Voluntand, what from our Brother Norway ?

Vol. Most faire return of Greetings, and Defires.
Vpon our firt, he fent out to fupprefe
His Nephewes Leuyes, which to him appear'd
To be a preparation 'gainft the Poleak :
But better look'd into, he truly found
It was againft your Highneffe, whereat grieved,
That fo his Sickneffe, Age, and Impotence
Was faiely borne in hand, fends out Arrefts
On Perimbrus, which he (in ftrength) obeyes,
Receipts rebuke from Norway: and in fine,
Makes Vow before his Vakle, neuer more
To glue th'afay of Armes againft your Maietie.
Whereon old Norway, overcom with ioy,
Gius him three thoufand Crownes in Annuall Fee,
And his Commiffion to impoy thofe Soldiers
So leued as before, againft the Poleak :
With an intrety herein further fhewne,
That it might pleafe you to glue quiet paffe
Through your Dominions,for his Enterpize,
On fuch regards of safety and allowance,
As therein are fet downe.

King. It likes vs well:
And at our more confider'd time we' ll read,
Anfwer, and thinke vpon this Bufeffe.
Meane time we thank you, for your well-tooke Labour.
Go to your reft, at night we'll Feast together.
Moft welcome home.

Exit Ambaff.

Pol. This bufeffe is very well ended.
My Liege, and Madam, to expoſulate
What Maietie fhoule be, what Dutie is,
Why day is day ; night, night ; and time is time.
Were nothing but to waffe Night, Day, and Time.
Therefore, fince Breuitie is the Soule of Wit,
And tediousneffe, the limbs and outward flourihes,
I will be breefe. Your Noble Sonne is mad :
Mad call I it ; for to define true Maietie,
What is't, but to be nothing elfe but mad.
But let that go.

Qu. More matter, with leffe Art.

Pol. Madam, I fwear I vfe no Art at all :
That he is mad, 'tis true : 'Tis true 'tis pittie,
And pittie it is true: A foolifh figure,
But farewell it : for I will vfe no Art.
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

In the Lobby.

Qu. So he ha’s indeed.
Pol. At such a time Ile loose my Daughter to him, Be you and I behinde an Arras then, Marke the encounter : If he love her not, And be not from his reason false thereon ; Let me be no Affiant for a State, And keepe a Farme and Carters. King. We will try it.

Enter Hamlet reading on a Booke.

Qu. But looke where sadly the poore wretch Comes reading.
Pol. Away I do befeech you, both away, Ile board him presently.

King. Well, God-a-mercy.
Pol. Do you know me, my Lord?
Ham. Excellent, excellent well: y’are a Fismonger.
Pol. Not I my Lord.
Ham. Then I would you were so honest a man.
Pol. Honest, my Lord?
Ham. I fir, to be honest as this world goes, is to bee one man pick’d out of two thousand.
Pol. That’s very true, my Lord.

Ham. For if the Sun breede Magots in a dead dogge, being a good kiffig Carrion—
Have you a daughter?

Pol. I haue my Lord.

Ham. Let her not walke i’th’Sunne: Conception is a blessing, but not as your daughter may conceive. Friend looke too’t.

Pol. How fay you by that? Still harping on my daughter: yet he knew me not at first; he faid I was a Fismonger: he is farre gone, farre gone: and truly in my youth, I suffred much extremity for loue: very neere this. Ile speake to him againe. What do you read my Lord?

Ham. Words, words, words.
Pol. What is the matter, my Lord?

Ham. Betweene who?

Pol. I meane the matter you mean, my Lord.

Ham. Slanders Sir : for the Satyricall flaué faies here, that old men haue gray Beards: that their faces are wrinkled: their eyes purging thicke Amber, or Plum-Tree Gummé : and that they have a plentiful locke of Wit, together with weake Hammers. All which Sir, though I most powerfully, and potently beleue; yet I holde it not Honeflie to haue it thus fet downe: For you your selue Sir, should be old as I am, if like a Crab you could go backward.

Pol. Though this be madnesse,
Yet thar is Method in’t: will you walke Out of the ayre my Lord?

Ham. Into my Graue?

Pol. Indeed that is out o’th’Ayre: How pregnant (sometimes) his Replies are?

A Happineffe,
That often Madneffe hits on,
Which Reason and Sanitie could not
So prosperously be deliuer’d of.
I will leave him,
And sodainely controue the meanes of meeting
Betweene him, and my daughter.
My Honourable Lord, I will most humbly
Take my leaué of you.
Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Rosn. God save you Sir,

Guild. Mine honour’d Lord?

Rosn. My most deare Lord?

Ham. My excellent good friends? How do’st thou

Guildenstern? Oh, Rosencrantz! good Lads: How doe ye both?

Rosn. As the indifferent Children of the earth.

Guild. Happy, in that we are not ouer-happy: on Fortunes Cap, we are not the very Button.

Ham. Nor the Soxels of her Shoo?

Rosn. Neither my Lord.

Ham. Then you live about her waife, or in the middle of her fauour?

Guil. Faith, her privates, we.

Ham. In the secret parts of Fortune? Oh, moft true: she is a Strumpet. What’s the newes?

Rosn. None my Lord; but that the World’s grown newen.

Ham. Then is Doomsday neere: But your newes is not true. Let me question more in particular: what have you my good friends, deferred at the hands of Fortune, that she sends you to Prifon hither?

Guil. Prifon, my Lord?

Ham. Denmark’s a Prifon.

Rosn. Then is the World one.

Ham. A goodly one, in which there are many Confines, Wards, and Dungeons; Denmark being one o’th’ worst.

Rosn. We thinkne not so my Lord,

Ham. Why then ’tis none to you; for there is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so: to me it is a prifon.

Rosn. Why then your Ambition makes it one: ’tis too narrow for your minde.

Ham. O God, I could be bounded in a nutshell, and count my selfe a King of infinite space; were it not that I have bad dreams.

Guil. Which dreams indeed are Ambition: for the very subftance of the Ambitious, is meere the shadow of a Dreame.

Ham. A dreame it selfe is but a shadow.

Rosn. Truely, and I hold Ambition of so ayry and light a quality, that it is but a shadowe shadow.

Ham. Then are our Beggars bodies; and our Monarchs and out-fretch’t Heroes the Beggars Shadows: shall wee to th’ Court: for, by my fey I cannot reason?

Both. We’ll wait vpon you.

Ham. No such matter. I will not fort you with the rest of my servants: for to speake to you like an honeft man: I am most dreadfully attened; but in the beaten way of friendship. What make you at Elftonover?

Rosn. To visit you my Lord, no other occasion.

Ham. Beggir that I am, I am even poore in thanks; but I thank you: and for dear friends my thanks are too deare a halfpenny; were you not fent for? Is it your owne inclining? Is it a free visitation? Come, deal lyftly with me: come, come; say speake.

Guil. What should we say my Lord?

Ham. Why any thing. But to the purpose; you were sent for; and there is a kinde confession in your lookes; which your modeities have not craft enough to color, I know the good King & Queene haue fent for you.

Rosn. To what end my Lord?

Ham. That you must teach me: but let mee contrue you by the rights of our fellowship, by the confonacy of our youth, by the Obligation of our euer-preferred love, and by what more deare, a better propofer could charge you withall; be euen and direct with me, whether you were fent for or no.

Rosn. What say you?

Ham. Nay then I have an eye of you if you love me hold not off.

Guil. My Lord, we were fent for.

Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation present your discovery of your secrerie to the King and Queenenmoht no feather, I haue of late, but wherefore I know not, loft all my mirth, forgonc all custome of exercise; and indeed, it goes so heavenly with my disposition; that this goodly frame the Earth, feemes to me a sterill Promontory; this most excellent Canopy the Ayre, look you, this braue ore-hanging, this Majesticall Roofe, fretted with golden fire: why, it appears no other thing to me, then a foule and pelting conflagration of vapours. What a piece of worke is a man! how Noble in Reason? how infinite in faculty? in forme and moving how expresse and admirable? in Action, how like, an Angel? in apprehension, how like a God? the beauty of the world, the Parragon of Animals; and yet to me, what is this Quinteness of Duf? Man delights not me; no, nor Woman neither; though by your smiling you feeme to fay fo.

Rosn. My Lord, there was no such stuffe in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did you laugh, when I said, Man delights not me?

Rosn. To thinke, my Lord, if you delight not in Man, what Lenton entertainment the Players shall receiv from you: wee coated them on the way, and hither are they comming to offer you Seruice.

Ham. He that plays the King shall be welcome; his Malefity shall haue Tribute of mee: the adventurnous Knight shal vse his Foyle and Target: the Lauer shall not figh gratis, the humorous man shal end his part in peace: the Clowne shal make those laugh whole lungs are tickled a’th’ fere: and the Lady shal lay her minde freely; or the blanke Verse shal halt for’; what Players are they?

Rosn. Euen thofe you were wont to take delight in the Tragedians of the City.

Ham. How chanceth it they travaille? their reffence both in reputation and profit was better both ways.

Rosn. I thinke their Inhibition comes by the meanes of the late Innuation?

Ham. Doe they hold the fame estimation they did when I was in the City? Are they fo follow’d?

Rosn. No indeed, they are not.

Ham. How comes it? doe they grow rufiy?

Rosn. Nay, their endeavoure keeps in the wonted pace; but there is Sir an ayrie of Children, little Yales, that crie out on the top of question; and are moft tyrranically clap for’; these are now the

The which he loud passinge well.

Pol. Still on my Daughter.

Ham. Am I not the right old Iephta?

Polon. If you call me Iephta my Lord, I have a daughter that I love passinge well.

Ham. Nay that followes not.

Polon. What followes then, my Lord?

Ha. Why, As by lot, God wot: and then you know, If came to passe, as most like it was; The first rowe of the Pons Channon will shew you more. For looke where my Abridgements come,

Enter foure or fife Players.

Y'are welcome Malfers, welcome all. I am glad to fee thee well: Welcome good Friends. O my olde Friend? Thy face is valiant since I saw thee last: Com'ft thou to hearde me in Denmarke? What, my yong Lady and Miftris? Byladdy your Ladylip is neerer Heaven then when I saw you last, by the altitude of a Choppine. Pray God your voice like a peecce of vncurrant Gold be not crack'd within the ring. Matters, you are all welcome: wee'le e'ne to't like French Faulconers, file at any thing we fee: wee'le haue a Speech straight. Come glie vs a taft of your quality: come, a passionate speech.

1. Play. What speech, my Lord?

Ham. I heard thee speake me a speech once, but it was never Acted: or if it was, not aboue once, for the Play I remember pleade not the Million, twas Caiarme to the General: but it was (as I receiued it, and others, whose judgement in such matters, crie in the top of mine) an excellent Play; well digested in the Scenes, set downe with as much modellie, as cunning. I remember one faid, there was no Sallets in the lines, to make the matter fauoury; nor no matter in the phrase, that might indite the Author of affectionate, but cal'd it an honest method. One cheefe Speech in it, I cheefely lou'd, 'twas Acces's Tale to Dido, and thereabout of it especiallie, where he speakes of Prians slaughter. If it lie in your memory, begin at this Line, let me fee, let me fee: The rugged Pyrrhus like th'Hyrcanian Beall. It is not so: it begins with Pyrrhus The rugged Pyrrhus, he whoble Sable Armes Blacke as his purpose, did the night re semble. When he lay couched in the Onousous Horfes, Harsh now this dread and blacke Complexion Ihear'd With Heraldy more difmal: Head to foote Now is he to take Guilles, horrdivly Trick'd With blood of Fathers, Mothers, Daughters, Sonnes, Bak'd and impafted with the parching streets, That lend a tyrannous, and dammed light To their vilde Murthers, roafted in wrath and fire, And thus or're-fixed with coagulate gore, VVith eyes like Carbuncles, the hellish Pyrrhus Old Grandire Priaem feakes.

Pol. Fore God,my Lord, well spoken, with good accept, and good difcretion.

1. Player. Anon he finds him, Striking too short at Greekes. His antick Sword, Rebellious to his Arme, ies where it failes Repugnant to command: vnequal match, Pyrrhus at Priaem dieus, in Rage strikes wide: But with the whiffe and winde of his fell Sword, Th'vnnnerued Father fail. Then feneleffe Ililum, Seeming to feele his blow, with flaming top Stoopes to his Bace, and with a hideous crafh Takes prisoner Pyrrhus ear. For loe, his Sword Which was declining on the Milkie head Of Reuerend Priaem, feem'd I thin' Ayre to flieke:

The Tragedie of Hamlet.

A scene of Hamlet, where Hamlet is reflecting on his father's death and the circumstances surrounding it. The text includes speeches by Hamlet, Polonius, and other characters, reflecting on themes of vengeance, sanity, and the nature of madness.

Refn. Good my Lord.

Ham. I fo, God buy'e: Now I am alone.

Oh what a Rogue and Pefant flaue am I? Is it not monftrous that this Player heere, But in a Fixion, in a dreame of Paflion, Could force his foule fo to his whole conceit, That from her working, all his vifage warm'd; Teares in his eyes, deftraction in's Aspect, A broken voice, and his whole Function fuiting With Formes, to his Conceit? And all for nothing? For Hecuba?

What's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba, That he fhould wepe for her? What would he doe, Had he the Motive and the Cue for paflion That I haue? He would drown the Stage with tears, And cleane the genera earle with horrid speech: Make mad the guilty, and apale the free, Confound the ignorant, and amaze indeed, The very faculty of Eyes and Eares. Yet I, A dull and muddy-meled Raffall, peake Like John a-dreames, urnpregnant of my caufe, And can fay nothing: No, not for a King, Vpon whole property, and moft deere life, A damned defeate was made. Am I a Coward? Who calls me Villaine? breaks my pate a-croffe? Pluckes off my Beard, and blowes it in my face? T wasteis me by'th'Nofe? gives me the Lye 'th' Throat, As deepe as to the Lungs? Who does me this? Ha! Why I fhould take it: for it cannot be, But I am Pigeon-Liuer'd, and lacke Gall To make Oppreffion bitter, or ere this, I fhould have fatted all the Region Kites With this Slaues Offall, bloudy: a Bawdy villain, Remorfelefe, Treacherous, Letcherous, kindles villain! Oh Vengeance!

Whofe? What an Affe am I? I fure, this is moft braue, That I, the Sonne of the Deere murthered, Prompted to my Reuenge by Heauen, and Hell, Muft (like a Whore) take my heart with words, And fall a Curfing like a very Drab, A Scullion? Fye vpon't: Foh. About my Braine. I haue heard, that guilty Creatures fittting at a Play, Haue by the very cunning of the Scene, Bene frokeo fo to the foule, that prefently They have proclain'd their Malefactions. For Munther, though it haue no tongue, will speake With moft myrraculous Organ. Ile haue thefe Players, Play fomthing like the murder of my Father, Before mine Vnkle. Ile obferue his lookes, He tent him to the quicke: If he but blench I know my courfe. The Spirit that I haue feene May be the Diuell, and the Diuell hath power T'afsume a pleaing shape, yea and perhaps Out of my Weaknesse, and my Melancholly, As he is very potant with fuch Spirits, Abufes me to damne me. Ile haue grounds More Relatife then this: The Play's the thing, Wherein Ile catch the Confiance of the King.

The Tragedie of Hamlet.

With turbulent and dangerous Lunacy.

"Refl. He do confeffe he feeles himfelfe distraeted,
But from what caufe he will by no meanes speake.

"Guil. Nor do we finde him forward to be founded,
But with a crafty Madneffe keeps afofe:
When we would bring him on to some Confeflion
Of his true flate.

"Qu. Did he receive you weel?

"Refl. Moft like a Gentleman.

"Guil. But with much forcing of his difpoftion.

"Refl. Niggard of queftion, but of our demands
Moft free in his reply.

"Qu. Did you affay him to any paftime?

"Refl. Madam, it fo fell out, that certaine Players
We ore-wrought on the way: of thefe we told him,
And there did feme in him a kinde of joy
To heare of it: They are about the Court,
And (as I think) they have already order
This night to play before him.

"Pol. 'Tis moft true:
And he befeech'd me to intreate your Maiefties
To heare, and fee the matter.

"King. With all my heart, and it doth much content me
To heare him fo inclin'd. Good Gentlemen,
Gie him a further edge, and drive his purpofe on
To thefe delights.

"Refl. We fhall my Lord. "Exeunt.

"King. Sweet Gurtrude, leave vs too,
For we have closely tent for Hamlet hither,
That he, as were by accident, may there
Affign Opelia. Her Father, and my felfe lawfull fpirits
Will beftow our felves, that feeing vnfeene
We may of their encounter frankly judge,
And gather by him, as he is behaued,
If't be th'affiftion of his loue, or no.
That thus he suffers for.

"Qu. I fhall obey you,
And for your part Opelia, I do with
That your good Beauties be the happy caufe
Of Hamlet wildneffe: fo fhall I hope your Vertues
Will bring him to his wonted way again,
To both your Honors.

"Opbe. My Madam, I with it may.

"Pol. Opelia, walke you heere. Gracious fo please ye
We will beftow our felves: Reade on this booke,
That fhew of such an exercife may colour
Your lonelinesse. We are oft too blame in this,
'Tis too much proud', that with Deuotions vifage,
And pious Action, we do forge o're
The diuell himfelfe.

"King. Oh 'tis true:
How smart a laff that speech doth glue my Confefion?
The Harlots Cheefe beautied with plain'ting Art
Is not more vglie to the thing that helps it,
Then is my deede, to my moft painted word.
Oh beanie burthen!

Enter Hamlet.

"Ham. To be, or not to be, that is the Queftion:
Whether 'tis Nobler in the minde to suffer
The Slings and Arrowe of outrageous Fortune,
Or to take Armes againft a Sea of troubles,
And by oppofing end them: to dye, to fleepe
No more: and by a fleepe, to fay we end
The Heart-ake, and the thoufand Naturall Shocks
That Fleth is heyre too? 'Tis a conffumption
Deoughtly to be with'd. 'To dye to fleepe,
To fleepe, perchance to Dreaume; I, there's the rub,
For in that fleepe of death, what dreams may come,
When we have shuffled off this mortal coile,
Muit glue vs pawfe. There's the refpeft
That makes Calamity of fo long life:
For who would beare the Whips and Scornes of time,
The Oppreffors wrong, the poore mans Cantemplem,
The pangs of dispriz'd Loue, the La wees delay,
The ilouneft of Office, and the Spurnes
That patient merit of the vnworthy takes,
When he himfelfe might his Quietus make
With a bare Bodkin? Who would thefe Fardles beare
To grunt and fweat vnder a weary life,
But that the dread of fomething after death,
The vndifcouerd Countrie, from whose Borne
No Traueller returns, Puzels the will,
And makes vs rather beare those illes we have,
Then flye to others that we know not of.
Thus Confience does make Cowards of vs all,
And thus the Natufe heav of Resolution
Is fickled o're, with the pale caft of Thought,
And enterprizes of great pith and moment,
With this regard their Currants turne away,
And loofe the name of Action. Soft you now,
The faire Opelia? Nimph, in th' Orizons
Be all my finnes remembred.

"Opbe. Good my Lord,
How does your Honor for this many a day?

"Ham. I humbly thank you: well, well, well.

"Opbe. My Lord, I haue Remembrances of yours,
That I haue longed long to re-deliver.
I pray you now, receive them.

"Ham. No, no, I never gaue you ought.

"Opbe. My honor'd Lord, I know right well you did,
And with them words of fo sweet breath compos'd,
As made the things more rich, then perfume left:
Take these againe, for to the Noble minde
Rich gifts wax poore, when givens prove vnkinde.
There my Lord.

"Ham. Ha, ha: Are you honest?

"Opbe. My Madam.

"Ham. Are you faire?

"Opbe. What means your Lordship?

"Ham. That if you be honest and faire, your Honesty should admit no discourfe to your Beautie.

"Opbe. Could Beautie my Lord, haue better Comerce then your Honifie?

"Ham. I trulie: for the power of Beautie, will fonner transforme Honifie from what it is, to a Bawd, then the force of Honifie can translate Beautie into his likenefle.
This was sometime a Paradox, but now the time giues it
profe, I did loue you once.

"Opbe. Indeed my Lord, you made me beleue fo.

"Ham. You should not haue beleued me. For vertue cannot fo innoculate our old fockes, but we shall relifh of it. I loued you not.

"Opbe. I was the more deuced.

"Ham. Get thee to a Nunnerie. Why would'ft thou be a breeder of Sinners? I am my felfe indiffernt honeft, but yet I could accuse me of fuch things, that it were better my Mother had not borne me. I am very proud, revengeful, Ambitious, with more offences at my becke, then I haue thoughts to put them in imagination, to give them flape, or time to aile them in. What should fuch

Enter Hamlet, and two or three of the Players.

Ham. Spake the Speech I pray you, as I pronounce'd it to you trippingly on the Tongue: But if you mouth it, as many of your Players do, I had as lye the Town-Cryer had spoke my Lines: Nor do not saw the Ayre too much your hand thus, but vfe all gently; for in the verie Torrent, Tempeft, and (as I may fay) the Whirlie-winde of Paffion, you muft acquire and beget a Temperance that may giue it Smoothneffe. O it offendes mee to the Soule, to fee a robusitious Peri-wig-pated Fellow, teare a Paffion to tatters, to verie ragges, to split the eares of the Groundlings: who (for the moft part) are capable of nothing, but inexplicable dumbェ thews, & noise: I could have such a Fellow whipt for o're-doing Teremtant: it out-Heomed Hero. Pray you avoid it.

Player. I warrant your Honor.

Ham. Be not too tame myther: but let your owne Differece by your Tutor. Sute the Action to the Word, the Word to the Action, with this speciall observance: That you ore-flot not the modellie of Nature: for any thing so ouer-done, is frote the purpose of Playing, whole end both at the firft and now, was, and is, to hold as twer the Mirrour vp to Nature; to fhew Vertue owne Feature, Scorne her owne Image, and the verie Age and Bodie of the Time, his forme and preffure. Now, this ouer-done, or come tardie off, though it make the vnkill full laugh, cannot but make the Judicious greefe; The ceniture of the which One, muft in your allowance o're-way a whole Theater of Others. O, there bee Players that I have feene Play, and heard others prathe, and that highly (not to speake it prophane) that neyther hauing the accent of Chriftians, nor the gate of Chriftian, Pagan, or Norman, haue fo brutted and bellowed, that I have thought some of Natures lourney-men had made men, and not made them well, they imitated Humanity so abominably.

Play. I hope we haue reform'd that indifferentely with vs, Sir.

Ham. O reforme it altogether. And let those that play your Clowns, fpake no more then is fette downe for them. For the be of them, that will themfelves laugh, to fet on some quantitie of barren Speculators to laugh too, though in the meantime, fome neceffary Quefition of the Play be then to be confidered: that's Villanous, & fhews a moft pitifull Ambition in the Fools that vfe it. Go make you readie.

Exit Players.

Enter Polonius, Raphirance, and Guildenfemne.

How now my Lord, Will the King heare this piece of Worke?

Pol. And the Queene too, and that prefently.

Ham. Bid the Players make haft. Exit Polonius.

Will you two helpe to haften them?

Botb. We will my Lord. Exeunt.

Enter Horatio.

Ham. What hoa, Horatio?

Hora. Heere fweet Lord, at your Seruice.

Ham. Horatio, thou art eene as luft a man As ere my Conuersation coap'd withall.

Hora. O my deere Lord.

Ham. Nay, do not thinke I flatter: For what advancement may I hope from thee, That no Reuennew haft, but thy good spirits

No, let the Candied tongue, like aburd pompe,
And crooke the pregnant Hindges of the knee,
Where threat may follow faining? Doft thou hearre,
Since my deere Soule was Miftirs of my choyse,
And could of men diftinguısh, her election
Hath feal’d thee for her felle. For thou haft bene
As one in fuffering all, that fuffers nothing,
A man that Fortunes buffets, and Rewards
Hath ‘tane with equall Thankes. And bleft are thoe,
Whole Blood and Judgement are fo well co-mingled,
That they are not a Pipe for Fortunes finger,
To found what flop she piafe. Give me that man,
That is not Paffions Slaine, and I will weare him
In my hearts Core; I, in my Heart of heart,
As I do thee. Something too much of this.
There is a Play to night before the King,
One Scene of it comes neere the Circumfance
Which I have told thee, of my Fathers death.
I prythee, when thou feel’st that Acte a-foot,
Even with the verie Comment of my Soule

The Tragedie of Hamlet.

In neither ought, or in extremity: Now what my loute is, proofe hath made you know, And as my loute is fixt, my Feare is fo.

King. Faith I must leave thee Looke, and shortly too: My operant Powers my Functions leave to do: And thou shalt live in this faire world behinde, Honour’d, belo’d, and haply, one as kinde. For Husband shalt thou——

Bap. Oh confound the reft: Such Looke, must needs be Treatfon in my bref: In fecond Husband, let me be affur’d, None wed the fecond, who but kill’d the first.

Ham. Wormwood, Wormwood.

Bap. The influence that second Marriage moue, Are hafe respects of Thrift, but none of Looke. A fecond time, I kill my Husband dead, When fecond Husband kiffes me in Bed.

King. I do beleue you. Think what now you speak: But what we do determine, oft we breske: Purpofe is but the flave to Memorie, Of violent Birth, but poore validitie: Which now like Fruite vnripe fliekes on the Tree, But fall vnfrucht, when they mellow bee. Mofit necessari ’ts, that we forget To pay our felues, what to our felues is debt: What to our felues in passion we propofe, The paffion ending, doth the paffion lofe. The violence of other Greefe or Ioy, Their owne emaillors with thefeules deftroy: Where Ioy mort Reuels, Greefe doth mort lament; Greefe loves, Ioy greeues on flender accident. This world is not for aye, nor ’ts not frange That euen our Louses should with our Fortunes change. For ’ts a queftion left vs yet to proue, Whether Louse lead Fortune, or elfe Fortune Louse. The great man downe, you marke his favourites flies, The poore aduanc’d, makes Friends of Enemies: And hitherto doth Louse on Fortune tend, For who not needs, fhall neuer lacke a Frend: And who in want a hollow Friend doth try, Direclty feasons him his Enemy. But orderly to end, where I began, Our Willes and Fates do fo contrary run, That our Deuices fill are ouerthrowne, Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our owne. So think thou wilt no fecond Husband wed. But die thy thoughts, when thy firt Lord is dead.

Bap. Nor Earth to gife me food, nor Heauen light, Sport and repofe locke from me day and night: Each oppofite that blankes the face of Ioy, Meet what I would have well, and it deftroy: Both heere, and hence, pufhing me glaffing frite, If once a Widdow, ever I be Wife.

Ham. If the Iould break it now.

King. ’Ts deeplie frworne: Sweet, leave me heere a while, My spirit grow dull, and faigne I would beguile The tedious day with Steele.

Qu. Steele roche thy Braine, Steele And neuer come milchance betweene vs twaine.

Ham. Madam, how like you this Play?

Qu. The Lady protests to much me thinkes.

Ham. Oh but thefe’ll keep her word.

King. Have you heard the Argument, is there no Ofence in’t?

Ham. No, no, they do but left, ptayfon in left, no Offence ith’world.

King. What do you call the Play?

Ham. The Moufe-trap: Marry how? Tropically: This Play is the Image of a murder done in Vienna: Ges- nago is the Dukes name, his wife Baptifia: you shall fee anone: ’tis a knauiff piece of worke: But what o’that? Your Maiestie, and wee that haue free foules, it touches vs not: let the gull lade winch:our withers are vnrun.

Enter Lucianus.

This is one Lucianus nephew to the King.

Ophe. You are a good Chorus, my Lord.

Ham. I could interpret betweene you and your louse: if I could see the Puppets dailyng.

Ophe. You are keene my Lord, you are keene.

Ham. It would cost you a groaning, to take off my edge.

Ophe. Still better and worfe.

Ham. So you mistake Husbands.

Begin Murderer, Pox, leave thy damnable Faces, and begin. Come, the croaking Rauen doth bellow for Re- unce.

Lucian. Thoughts blacke, hands apt, Druggs fit, and Time agreeing: Confederate fealon, elfe, no Creature feeing: Thou mixture ranke, of Midnight Weeds collected, With Heears Ban, thrice bllaff, thrice infefted, Thy naturally Magicke, and dire propertietye, On wholsome life, vfure immediately.

Powers the ptayfon in his ears.

Ham. He poyson him ith’Garden for’s estate: His name’s Gesnago: the Story is extant and writ in choyce

Italian. You shall fee anon how the Murtherer gets the louse of Gesnago: wife.

Ophe. The King rises.

Ham. What, frighted with false fire.

Qu. How faires my Lord?

Pol. Giue o’re the Play.

King. Giue me some Light. Away.

Al. Lights, Lights, Lights. Exeunt

Manet Hamlet & Horatio.

Ham. Why let the frucken Deere go wepee, The Hart vngalled play: For some mout watch, while some mout sleepe; So runnes the world away. Would not this Sir, and a Forrest of Feathers, if the reft of my Fortunes turne Turke with me; with two Provinziall Rifes on ye rac’d Shooes, get me a Fellowship in a crife of Players fir.

Hor. Halfe a share.

Ham. A whole one I, For thou doft know: Oh Damon dear, This Realme didmanted was of Ioue himselfe, And now reignes heere.

A vere vere Palocke.

Horo. You might haue Rim’d.

Ham. Oh good Horatio, Ite take the Ghosts word for a thousand pound. Did’t perceiue?

Horo. Verie well my Lord.

Ham. Vpon the talke of the poysoning?

Horo. I did verie well note him.

Enter Rejencrance and Guildenfierne.

Ham. Oh, ha? Come some Muicke. Come y Recorder: For if the King like not the Comedie,

Why then belike he likes it not perdie.

Come some Muicke.

Gild. Good my Lord, vouchsafe me a word with you.

Ham.
Ham. Sir, a whole History.

Guild. The King, Sir.

Ham. I sir, what of him?

Guild. Is in his retirements, marvellous distemper'd.

Ham. With drinke Sir?

Guild. No my Lord, rather with choller.

Ham. Your wifedom should shew it felle more richer, to signifie this to his Doct.or: for to me to put him to his Purgation, would perhaps plunde him into farre more Choller.

Guild. Good my Lord put your difcourse into some frame, and start not fo wildly from my affayre.

Ham. I am tame Sir, pronounce.

Guild. The Queene your Mother, in moft great afili-ation of spirit, hath sent me to you.

Ham. You are welcome.

Guild. Nay, good my Lord, this courtesye is not of the right breed. If it fhall pleafe you to make me a who-fome anfwer, I will do your Mothers command'ment:

if not, your pardon, and my returne fhall bee the end of my Bufineffe.

Ham. Sir, I cannot.

Guild. What, my Lord?

Ham. Make you a whofome anfwer: my wits dif-

eas'd. But fir, fuch anfwers as I can make, you fhal command: or rather you fay, my Mother: therefore no more but to the matter. My Mother you fay.

Rofn. Then thus the fayes: your behavior hath froke her into amazement, and admiration.

Ham. Oh wonderfull Sonne, that can fo affoñih a

Mother. But is there no sequell at the heels of this Mothers admiration?

Rofn. She defires to fpeeke with you in her Clofet, er ye go to bed.

Ham. We fhall obey, were fie ten times our Mother.

Haue you any further Trade with vs?

Rofn. My Lord, you once did loue me.

Ham. So do I fiff, by thefe pickers and ftealers.

Rofn. Good my Lord, what is your caufe of diftemper? You do freely barre the doore of your owne Liber-

tie, if you deny your griefes to your Friend.

Ham. Sir I lacke Advancemen.

Rofn. How can that be, when you have the voyce of the King himfelf, for your Succeffion in Denmarke?

Ham. I but while the gracie grows, the Prouerbe is something mufty.

Enter one with a Recorder.

O the Recorder. Let me fee, to withdraw with you, why do you go about to recouer the winde of mee, as if you would drive me into a toyle?

Guild. O my Lord, if my Dutie be too bold, my loue too vnnatural.

Ham. I do not well vnderstand that. Will you play

vpon this Pipe?

Guild. My Lord, I cannot.

Ham. I pray you.

Guild. Beleeue me, I cannot.

Ham. I do befeech you.

Guild. I know no touch of it, my Lord.

Ham. 'Tis as eafe as lying: govern thefe Ventiges with your finger and thumbe, give it breath with your mouth, and it will difcourse moft excellent Muficke.

Looke you, there are the ftoppes.

Guild. But thefe cannot I command to any vterrance of hermony, I have not the skill.

Ham. Why looke you now, how vnworthy a thing you make of me: you would play vpon mee; you would feeme to know my Ropes: you would pluck out the heart of my Mytery; you would found mee from my loweft

Note, to the top of my Compafl:e and there is much Muficke, excellent Voice, in this little Organe, yet cannot you make it. Why do you thinke, that I am easier to bee plaid on, then a Pipe? Call me what Instrument you will, though you can fret me, you cannot play vpon me. God baffe you Sir.

Enter Polonius.

Polon. My Lord the Queene would speake with you, and prefently.

Ham. Do you fee that Cloud? that's almoft in shape like a Camell.

Polon, By'th'Mild, and it's like a Camell indeed.

Ham. Me thinkes it is like a Weazell.

Polon. It is back'd like a Weazell.

Ham. Or like a Whale?

Polon. Verie like a Whale.

Ham. Then will I come to my Mother, by and by:

They fool me to the top of my bent.

I will come by and by.

Polon. I will fay fo.

Exit. Ham. By and by, is eafily faid. Leave me Friends;

'Tis now the verie witching time of night,

When Churclyards yawn, and Hell it felle breaths out

Contagion to this world. Now could I drink hot blood,

And do fuch bitter buifnes as the day

Would queake to looke on. Soft now, to my Mother:

Oh Heart, loofe not thy Nature; let not euer

The Soule of Nero, enter this firme bosome:

Let me be cruell, not vnnatural,

I will fpeeke Daggers to her, but vfe none:

My Tongue and Soule in this be Hypocrites.

How in my words fomeuer he be fent,

To give them Seales, neuer my Soule confernt.

Enter King, Regenerance, and Guildenferne.

King. I like him not, nor stands it late with vs, to let his madneffe range. Therefore prepare you,

I your Commiffion will forthwith dispatch,

And he to England fhall along with you:

The terms of our eflate, may not endure

Hazard fo dangerous as doth hourly grow

Out of his Lunacies.

Guild. We will our fclues prouide:

Moft holie and Religious feare it is

To keepe thofe many many bodies fafe

That live and feeke vpon your Maiestie.

Rofn. The fingle

And pecullar life is bound

With all the Strength and Armour of the minde,

To keepe it felle from noyance: but much more,

That Spirit, vpon whose Spirit depends and refts

The lues of many, the caufe of Maiestie

Dies not alone; but like a Gulfe doth draw

What's neere it, with it. It is a maflie wheele

Fixt on the Somnet of the highest Mount,

To whose huge Spokes, ten thousand leffer things

Are mortiz'd and adiay'd: which when it falles,

Each fmall annexement, pettie confequence

Attends the boiftrous Ruine. Neuer alone

Did the King figh, but with a general groan.

King. Arme you, I pray you to this speede Voyage;

For we will Petters put vpon this fear,

Which
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

When he is drunke asleepe: or in his Rage,
Or in th'incestuous pleasure of his bed,
At gaming, swearing, or about some acte
That he's no reliif of Saluation in't,
Then trip him, that his heels may kicke at Heauen,
And that his Soule may be as damn'd and blacke
As Hell, whereto it goes. My Mother flayes,
This Phylfick be but prolongs thy sickly dayes.
Exit.

King. My words flye vp, my thoughts remain below,
Words without thoughts, newer to Heauen go.
Exit.

Enter Quene and Polonius.

Pol. He will come straight:
Looke you lay home to him,
Tell him his pranks have been too broad to bear with,
And that your Grace hath free'd, and floode betwene
Much heate, and him. Ile silence you e'ene heere:
Pray you be round with him.

Ham. within. Mother, mother, mother.

Qu. Ile warrant you, feare me not.
Withdraw, I hear ye him comming.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Now Mother, what's the matter?

Qu. Hamlet, thou haft thy Father much offended.

Ham. Mother, you haue my Father much offended.

Qu. Come, come, you affwer with an idle tongue.

Ham. Go, go, you question with an idle tongue.

Qu. Why how now Hamlet?

Ham. Whats the matter now?

Qu. Have you forgot me?

Ham. No by the Rood, not fo:
You are the Queene, your Husbands Brothers wife,
But would you were not fo. You are my Mother.

Qu. Nay, then Ile fet those to you that can speake.

Ham. Come, come, and fitt you downe, you shall not boudge:
You go not till I fet you vp a glaffe,
Where you may fee the inmoft part of you?

Qu. What wilt thou do? thou wilt not murther me?

Helpe, helpe, haue, helpe.

Pol. What haue, helpe, helpe, helpe:

Ham. How now, a Rat? dead for a Ducate, dead.

Pol. Oh I am flaine.

Killes Polon ins.

Qu. Oh me, what haft thou done?

Ham. Nay I know not, is it the King?

Qu. Oh what a raft, and bloody deed is this?

Ham. A bloody deed, almost as bad good Mother,
As kill a King, and marrie with his Brother.

Qu. As kill a King?

Ham. I Lady, twas my word,
Thou wretched, raft, intruding foolie farewell,
I took thee for thy Better, take thy Fortune,
Thou find'lt to be too bufe, is some danger.
Leaue wringing of your hands, peace, fit you downe,
And let me wring your heart, for I shall
If it be made of penetrable fluffe;
If damned Custome haue not braz'd it fo,
That it is proffes and bulwarke against Senfe.

Qu. What haue I done, that thou darst wag thy tong, in noife for rude against me?

Ham. Such an Act
That blurs the grace and bluft of Modestie,
Cals Vertue Hypocrite, takes off the Roofe
From the faire forehead of an innocent loue,
And makes a blifter there. Makes marriage vowes
As falfe as Diuers Oathes. Oh such a deed,
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

As from the body of Contraotion pluckes
The very soule, and sweete Religion makes
A rapitie of words. Heavens face doth glow,
Yea this solidity and compound masse,
With trulufffull visage as against the doome,
Is thought-ficke at the aét.

Qu. Aye me; what acht, that roares so lowd, & thunders in the Index.

Ham. Looke heere upon this Picture, and on this,
The counterfet preffentment of two Brothers:
See what a grace was feated on his Brow,
Hyperions curles, the front of Ioue himselfe,
An eye like Mars, to threaten or command
A Station, like the Herald Mercurie
New lighted on a heauen-killing hill:
A Combination, and a forme indeed,
Where every God did feeme to fett his Seale,
To give the world affurance of a man.
This was your Husband. Looke you now what follows.
Heere is your Husband, like a Mildewed eare
Blowing his whollum breath. Haue you eyes?
Could you on this faire Mountaine leave to feed,
And batten on this Moore? Ha? Haue you eyes?
You cannot call it Ioue: For to your age,
The hee-day in the blood is tame, it's humble,
And waites upon the judgement: and what judgement
Would step from this, to this? What diuell was't,
That thus hath couenfled you at hoodman-blinde?
O Shame! where is thy Bluth? Rebellious Hell,
If thou canft mutine in a Matrons bones,
To flaming youth, let Vertue be as waxe,
And melt in her owne fire. Proclaime no flame,
When the compulfiue Ardure gives the charge,
Since Froft it felfe, as actuely doth burne,
As Reafon panders Will.

Qu. O Hamlet, speake no more.

Thou turn't mine eyes into my very soule,
And there I fee such blacke and grained spots,
As will not frowne their Tinct.

Ham. Nay, but to live
In the ranke fweat of an enfeamed bed,
Stew'd in Corruption; honying and making loue
Ouer the naftie Stye.

Qu. Oh speake to me, no more,
These words like Daggers enter in mine eares.
No more sweet Hamlet.

Ham. A Murderer, and a Villaine:
A Slave, that is not twentieth patt the tyrhe
Of your precedent Lord. A vice of Kings,
A Cutpurie of the Empire and the Rule.
That from a shelfe, the precious Diadem ftole,
And put it in his Pocket.

Qu. No more.

Enter Ghost.

Ham. A King of shreds and patches.
Sawe me; and houer o're me with your wings
You heauenly Guards. What would you gracious figure?

Qu. Alas he's mad.

Ham. Do you not come your tardy Sonne to chide,
That laps't in Time and Paffion, lets go by Th'important acting of your dread command? Oh lay.

Ghost. Do not forget: this Visitation
Is but to whet thy almoft blunted purpose.
But looke, Amaization on thy Mother fits;
O step betweene her, and her fighting Souls,
Conceit in weakest bodies, strongest worke.

Speake to her Hamlet.

Ham. How is it with you Lady?

Qu. Alas, how is't with you?

That you bend your eye on vacancie,
And with their corporall ayre do hold difcourfe.
Forth at your eyes, your spirits wildly peep:
And as the sleeping Soldiours in th'Alarne,
Your bedded haire, like life in excrements,
Start vp, and fland an end, Oh gentle Sonne,
Vpon the heate and flame of thy diftemper
Sprinkle coole patience. Whereon do you looke?

Ham. On him, on him: look you how pale he glares,
His forme and caufe coniyon'd, preaching to stones,
Would make them capaable. Do not looke vpon me,
Leave with this pitieous action you conceitt
My flerne effects: then what I have to do,
Will want true colour; teares perchance for blood.

Qu. To who do you speake this?

Ham. Do you see nothing there?

Qu. Nothing at all, yet all that is I see.

Ham. Nor did you nothing heare?

Qu. No, nothing but our felues.

Ham. Why look you there: looke how it steals away
My Father in his habite, as he liued,
Looke where he goes even now out at the Portall. Exit.

Qu. This is the very coynage of your Braine,
This bodileffe Creation extasie is very cunning in.

Ham. Extasie?

My Pulfe as yours doth temperately keep time,
And makes as healthfull Muficke. It is not madneffe
That I have vterred; bring me to the Teft
And I the matter will re-word: which madneffe
Would gamboll from. Mother, for loue of Grace,
Lay not a flattering Vncition to your soule,
That not your trespaflie, but my madneffe speakes:
It will but skin and filme the Vlcerous place,
Whil'ft ranke Corruption mining all within,
Infects vntoone. Confielle your felfe to Heaven,
Repent what's past, anoyd what is to come,
And do not fpped the Compoft or the Weedes,
To make them ranke. Furge me this my Vertue,
For in the fatneffe of this purifie times,
Vertue it felfe, of Vice muft pardon begge,
Yea courb, and woe, for leaue to do him good.

Qu. Oh Hamlet,

Thou haft cleft my heart in twaine.

Ham. O throw away the worser part of it,
And lice the purer with the other halfe.

Good night, but go not to mine Vnkles bed,
Affume a Vertue, if you have it not, refraine to night,
And that fhall lend a kinde of easineffe
To the next abstinence. Once more goodnight,
And when you are defourof to be blefst,
Ille bleffing begge of you. For this fame Lord,
I do repent: but heauen hath pleas'd it fo,
To punifh me with this, and this with me,
That I muft be their Scourge and Minifter.
I will beftow him, and will anfwer well
The death I gave him: fo againe, good night.
I muft be cruel, onely to be kinde;
Thus bad begins, and worfe remains behinde.

Qu. What shall I do?

Ham. Not this by no meanees that I bid you do:
Let the blunt King tempt you againe to bed,
Pinch Wanton on your cheeke, call you his Moufe,
And let him for a paire of reechie kiffes,

Or
The Tragedy of Hamlet.

Or palleting in your necke with his damn’d Fingers,
Make you to rauel all this matter out,
That I essentiell am not in madneffe,
But made in craft.  *Twere good you let him know,
For who that’s but a Queene, faire, sober, wise,
Would from a Paddocke, from a Bat, a Gibbe,
Such deere concerning hide,  Who would do fo,
No in defght of Senec and Secrecie,
Vnpegge the Basket on the houfes top :
Let the Birds fye, and like the famous Ape
To try Conclusions in the Basket, creepe
And breake your owne necke downe.
Qu. Be thou affur’d, if words be made of breath,
And breath of life:  I have no life to breath
What thou haft faide to me.

Ham. I must to England, you know that ?
Qu. Alacke I had forgot:  *Tis fo concluded on.

Ham. This man fhall let me packing:
Ile luige the Guts into the Neighbor roome,
Mother goodnight.  Indeede this Counsellor
Is now moft fill, molt secreft, and moft graue,
Who was in life, a foolish pratting Knaupe.
Come fir, to draw toward an end with you.
Good night Mother.

Exit Hamlet tugging in Polonius.  Enter King.

King. There’s matters in these sighes.
These profound heaues
You muft tranflate;  *Tis fit we vnderstand them.
Where is your Sonne ?

Qu. Ah my good Lord, what haue I feene to night?

King. What Gertrude?  How do’s Hamlet?

Qu. Mad as the Seas, and winde, when both contend
Which is the Mightier, in his lawleffe fit
Behinde the Arras, hearing something firre,
He whips his Rapier out, and cries a Rat, a Rat,
And in his brainifh apprehension kills
The vnfeene good old man.

King. Oh heavy deed :  It had bin fo with vs had we beene there :  His Liberty is full of threats to all,
To you your felfe, to vs, to every one.
Alas, how shall this bloody deede be anfwered ?
It will be laide to vs, whose prouidence
Should have kept fhort, refrain’d, and out of haunt,
This mad young man.  But fo much was our love,
We would not vnderstand what was moft fit,
But like the Owner of a foule diffeafe,
To keepe it from divulging, let’s it feede
Even on the pith of life.  Where is he gone ?

Qu. To draw apart the body he hath kild,
O’re whom his very madneffe like fome Oare
Among a Million of Mettels bafe
Shewes it felfe pure.  He weepes for what is done.

King. Oh Gertrude, come away :
The Sun no fooner fhall the Mountaines touch,
But we will fhip him hence, and this vile deed,
We muft with all our Maiesty and Skill
Both countenance, and excufe.  Enter Roj. & Guild.

Ho Guildenferrn :
Friends both go thine you with some further ayde :  Hamlet in madneffe hath Polonius flaine,
And from his Mother Cloffens hath he drag’d him.
Go fecke him out, speake faire, and bring the body
Into the Chappell.  I pray you haft in this.  Exit Gent.

Come Gertrude, we’ll call vp our wifeft friends,

To let them know both what we meant to do,
And what’s vn timely done.  Oh come away,
My foule is full of difcord and difmay.  Exeunt.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Safely flowed.

Gentlemen within.  Hamlet, Lord Hamlet.
Ham. What noife?  Who calls on Hamlet ?
Oh heere they come.  Enter Roj. and Guildenferrn.
Ro. What haue you done my Lord with the dead body ?
Ham. Compounded it with duft, whereto ’tis Kinne.
Rofin. Tell vs where ’tis, that we may take it thence,
And beare it to the Chappell.
Ham. Do not beleue it.
Rofin. Beleue what?
Ham. That I can keepe your counsell, and not mine owne.
Befides, to be demanded of a Spundance, what reapplication should be made by the Sonne of a King.
Rofin. Take you me for a Spundance, my Lord?
Ham. I fir, that fokes vp the Kings Countenance, his Rewards, his Authorities (but fuch Officers do the King beft feruice in the end.  He keepe them like an Ape in the corner of his iaw, first mouth’d to be laft swallowed, when he needes what you have glean’d, it is but fqueez-
ing you, and Spundance you fhall be dry againe.
Rofin. I vnderfand you not my Lord.

Ham. I am glad of it:  a knaifh speech sleepes in a foolifh ear.

Rofin. My Lord, you muft tell vs where the body is,
and go with vs to the King.

Ham. The body is with the King, but the King is not with the body.  The King, is a thing ———

Guild. A thing my Lord ?
Ham. Of nothing:  bring me to him, hide Fox, and all after.

Enter King.

King. I haue fent to fecke him, and to fip the bodie :
How dangerous is it that this man goes loofe:
Yet muft not we put the frong Law on him:
Hee’s loued of the diftracted multitude,
Who like not in their judgement, but their eyes:
And where *tis fo, th’Offenders scourge is weigh’d
But neerer the offence :  to bear all smooth, and euen,
This foddaine fending him away, muft feeme
Deliberate paufe, difeases desperate growne,
By desperate appliance are releueed,
Or not at all.  Enter Rosincane.

Ham. How now?  What hath befalne ?

Rofin. Where the dead body is befowt’d my Lord,
We cannot get from him.

King. But where is he ?

Rofin. Without my Lord, guarded to know your pleasure.

King. Bring him before vs.

Enter Hamlet and Guildenferrn.

King. Now Hamlet, where’s Polonius ?

Ham. At Supper.

King. At Supper?  Where ?

Ham. Not where he eats, but where he is eaten, a certaine concouation of wormses are e’ne at him.  Your worm is your onely Emperor for diet.  We fat all creatures elfe to fat vs, and we fat our felfe for Magots.  Your fat King, and your leanes Beger is but variable ferulce to difhes,
but to one Table that’s the end.

King. What doft thou mean by this?  } Ham.

762
Ham. Nothing but to shew you how a King may go a Progreffe through the guts of a Beggar.

King. Where is Polonius.

Ham. In heaven, tend thinther to see. If your Meffenger finde him not there, feeke him i' th other place your selfe : but indeed, if you finde him not this moneth, you shal nose him as you go vp the flaires into the Lobby.

King. Go seeke him there.

Ham. He will stay till ye come.

K. Hamlet, this deed of thine, for thine especiall safety Which we do tender, as we dearly greeue For that which thou haft done, must tend thee hence With fierce Quickness. Therefore prepare thy selfe, The Barke is readie, and the winde at helpe, Th'Associates tend, and every thing at bent

For England.

Ham. For England?

King. I Hamlet.

Ham. Good.

King. So is it, if thou knowest our purposes.

Ham. I see a Cherube that sees him : but come, for England. Farewell deere Mother.

King. Thy louing Father Hamlet.

Hamlet. My Mother : Father and Mother is man and wife : man & wife is one flesh, and so my mother.

Come, for England. Exit

King. Follow him at foote, Tempt him with speed aboard : Delay it not, Ile haue him hence to night. Away, for every thing is Seal'd and done That else leanes on th'Affaire, pray you make haft. And England, if my loue thou holdft at ought, As my great power thereof may glue thee femele, Since yet thy Caticrize lookes raw and red After the Danish Sword, and thy free awe Payes homage to vs ; thou maist not coldly set Our Souereigne Proceffe, which imports at full By Letters conjuring to that effect

The preuent death of Hamlet. Do it England, For like the Hectick in my blood he rages, And thou mutt cure me : Till I know 'tis done, How ere my happes, my joyes were ne're begun.

Enter Fortinbras with an Armee.

For. Go Captaine, from me greet the Danish King,

Tell him that by his licence, Fortinbras

Claims the conueyance of a promis'd March

Ouer his Kingdome. You know the Rendevous : If that his Maiestie would outh with vs, We shall expresse our dutie in his eye,

And let him know fo.

Cap. I will do't, my Lord.

For. Go safely on.

Enter Queen and Horatio.

Q. I will not speake with her.

Her. She is importunate, indeed distraéf, her mood will needs be pitted.

Q. What would the hauie?

Her. She speakes much of her Father; faites the heares

There's tricks i'th'world, and hemis, and beats her heart,

Spurnes enuiously at Strawes, speakes things in doubt,

That carry but halfe femele: Her speech is nothing,

Yet the vnshaped vfe of it doth moue

The hearers to Collection; they ayme at it,

And both the words vp fit to their owne thoughts,

Which as her winkes, and nodds, and gefures yeeld them,

Indeed would make one thinke there would be thought,

Though nothing sure, yet much vnhaupply.

Q. 'Twere good thee were spoken with,

For he may shew dangerous concluues

In ill breeding minds. Let her come in.

To my fickle foule(as finnes true Nature is)

Each toy fenes Prologue, to some great amiffe,

So full of Artefie lealoufie is guilt,

It spill's it felse, in fearing to be spilt.

Enter Ophelia diftraied.

Oph. Where is the beautefeoue Maiesty of Denmark.

Q. How now Ophelia?

Oph. How fonndil your true love know from another one?

By bis Cocke bat and faffe, and bis Sandal foone.

Q. Alas sweet Lady: what imports this Song?

Oph. Say you? Nay pray you marke. He's dead and gone Lady, be's dead and gone,

At bis bead a graffe-grene Turfe, at bis beete a stone.

Enter King.

Q. Nay but Ophelia.

Oph. Pray you marke.

White bis Shrow'd as the Mountain Snow.

Q. Alas, looke heere my Lord.

Oph. Larded with sweet flowers:

Which bewept to the graue did not go,

With true-loue flowres.

King. How do ye, pretty Lady?

Oph. Well, God diald you. They say the Owle was a Bakers daughter. Lord, wee know what we are, but know not what we may be. God be at your Table.

King. Conceit upon her Father.

Oph. Pray you let's haue no words of this: but when they ask you what it meanes, faie you this :

To morrow is S. Valentine's day, all in the morning betime,

And I a Maid at your Window, to be your Valentine. Then vp be rofe, & don't bis clothes, & dust the chamber dore, Let in the Maid, that out a Maid, never departed more.

King. Pretty Ophelia.

Oph. Indeed a? without an oath Ile make an end ont.

By gis, and by S. Charity, Alacke, and fie for shame :

Tong men will don't, if they come too,

By Cocke they are too blame.

Quoth he before you tumbled me,

You promis'd me to Wed;

So would I ha done by yonder Sunne,

And thou badst not come to my bed.

King. How long hath the bin this?

Oph. I hope all will be well. We muft bee patient, but I cannot choofe but wepe, to thinke they shoule lay him i'th'cold ground : My brother shal knowe of it, and fo I thank you for your good counsell. Come, my, Coach: Goodnight Ladies: Goodnight sweet Ladies: Goodnight, goodnight.

Exit.

King. Follow her clofe,

Glue her good watch I pray you:

Oh this is the poyloum of deepce greefe, it spriens

All from her Fathers death. Oh Gertrude, Gertrude,

When forrowes comes, they come not sngle spies,

But in Battaliaes. First, her Father flaine,

Next your Sonne gone, and he moft violent Author

Of his owne iuft remoue : the people muddied,

Thicke and vwholome in their thoughts, and whisper.

For good Polonius death ; and we have done but greenly

In hugger mugger to interhe him. Poore Ophelia

Divided from her felse, and her faire Judgement,
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

Without the which we are Pictures, or meere Beasts.
Left, and as much containing as all thefe,
Her Brother is in secret come from France,
Keeps on his wonder, keeps himselfe in clouds,
And wants not Buzzeirs to infect his eare.
With peitlent Speeches of his Fathers death,
Where in necelitie of matter Beggard,
Will nothing fickle our persons to Arraigne
In eare and eare. O my deere Gertrude, this,
Like to a murthering Peece in many places,
Gives me superfluous death. A Noise within.
Enter a Messinger.

Qu. Alacke, what noyle is this?

King. Where are my Switners? Let them guard the doore. What is the matter?

Maj. Save your felfe, my Lord.
The Ocean (peuer-peeing of his Life) Eates not the Flats with more impititious hate Then young Laertes, in a Riotous head, Ore-bearers your Officers, the rabble call him Lord, And as the world were now but to begin, Antiquity forgot, Culfome not knowne, The Ratifiers and props of euery word, They cry choose we? Laertes shall be King, Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it to the clouds, Laertes shall be King, Laertes King.

Qu. How cheerfully on the falf Trallie they cry, Oh this is Counter you falf Danifh Dogges, Noise within. Enter Laertes.

King. The doores are broke.

Laer. Where is the King, firs? Stand you all without.

All. No, let’s come in.

Laer. I pray you giue me leave. I. We will, we will. Laer. I thanke you: Kepe the doore.

Oh thou vilde King, giue me my Father.

Qu. Calmely good Laertes.

Laer. That drop of blood, that calmes Proclaims me Ballard: Cries Cuckold to my Father, brands the Harlot Even here between the chaft vnfireched brow Of my true Mother.

King. What is the caufe Laertes, That thy Rebellion lookes fo Gyant-like? Let him go Gertrude: Do not feare our perfon: There’s fuch Diviney doth hede a King, That Trafion can but pepe to what it would, Acts little of his will. Tell me Laertes, Why thou art thus Incenfit? Let him go Gertrude. Speake man.

King. Let him demand his fill.

Laer. How came he dead? Ile not be Juggel’d with.

To hell Allegance: Vowe, to the blackeft diuell. Confidence and Grace, to the profoundeft Pit. I dare Damnation: to this point I fland, That both the worlds I giue to negligence, Let come what comes: onely Ile be reueng’d Moft throughly for my Father.

King. Who shall fay you?

Laer. My Will, not all the world, And for my meanes, Ile husband them fo well, They fhall go farre with little.

King. Good Laertes:

If you defire to know the certainitie Of your deere Fathers death, if writ in your reuenge, That Soup-flake you will draw both Friend and Foe, Winner and Loofer.

Laer. None but his Enemies.

King. Will you know them then.

La. To his good Friends, thus wide I lie ope my Armes: And like the kinde Life-ren’d’ring Politician, Repaft them with my blood.

King. Why now you speake Like a good Childre, and a true Gentleman. That I am guilte of your Fathers death, And am moft fenlibe in greefe for it, It fhall as leuell to your Judgement pierce As day do’s to your eye.

A noise within. Let her come in.
Enter Ophelia.

Laer. How now? what noile is that? Oh heate dreie vp my Braines, teares feuen times falt, Burne out the Sence and Vertue of mine eye. By Heauen, thy madneffe fhall be payed by weight, Toll our Scale turns the beame. Oh Rofe of May, Deere Maid, kinde Sifer, sweet Ophelia: Oh Heauens, is’t poiffible, a yong Maids wits, Should be as mortall as an old mans life? Nature is fine in Love, and where ’tis fine, It fends fome preciouf infance of it felle After the thing it loues.

Oph. They love him bare fac’d on the Bear, Hey non nony, nony, hey nony:

And on his grave rains many a tear,

Fare you well my Dane.

Laer. Had’t thou thy wits, and did’ft perfwade Reuenge, it could not monse thus.

Oph. You must finge downe a-downe, and you call him a-downe-a. Oh, how the wheele becomes it? It is the falf Steward that roble his masters daughter.

Laer. This n’tings more then matter.

Oph. There’s Rolemary, that’s for Remembrance. Pray love remember: and there is Paconies, that’s for Thoughts.

Oph. There’s Fennell for you, and Columbines: ther’s Rew for you, and heere’s some for me. Wee may call it Herbe-Grace a Sundaeis: Oh you must weare your Rew with a difference. There’s a Dayle, I would give you some Violets, but they wither’d all when my Father dy’d: They fay, he made a good end;

For bonny sweet Robin & all my joy.

Laer. Thought, and Affiffion, Paffion, Hell it felle:

She turns to Faouir, and to pretinefse.

Oph. And will be not come againe,

And will be not come againe:

No, no, be is dead, go to thy Death-bed,

He never wil come againe.

His Beard as white as Snow,

All Flaxen was his Pole:

He is gone, be is gone, and we cast away mone,

Gramercy on bis Soule.

And of all Christiante Soules, I pray God.

God buy ye.

Oph. And will be not come againe,

And will be not come againe:

No, no, be is dead, go to thy Death-bed,

He never wil come againe.

His Beard as white as Snow,

All Flaxen was his Pole:

He is gone, be is gone, and we cast away mone,

Gramercy on bis Soule.

Laer. Do you fee this, you Gods?

King. Laertes, I muft common with your greefe, Or you deny me right: go but apart, |Make Make choice of whom your wifest Friends you will,
And they shall heare and judge 'twixt you and me;
If by direc'tion but Cold will hand
They finde vs touch'd, we will our Kingdome gie,
Our Crowne, our Life, and all that we call Ours
To you in satisfaction. But if not,
Be you content to lend your patience to vs,
And we shall loyntly labour with your soule
To glue it due content.

Exeunt

Lae'r. Let this be so:
His meanes of death, his obscure burlial
No Tropepe, Sword, nor Hatchment o're his bones,
No Noble rites, nor formall ostentation,
Cry to be heard, as 'were from Heauen to Earth,
That I must cal in question,

King. So you shall:
And where this'offence is, let the great Axe fall.
I pray you go with me.

Enter Horatio, with an Attendant.

Hor. What are they that would speake with me?

Ser. Saylors sir, they say they haue Letters for you.

Hor. Let them come in,
I do not know from what part of the world
I shoud be greetid, if not from Lord Hamlet.

Enter Saylor.

Say. God bleffe you Sir,

Hor. Let him bleeve thee too.

Say. Hee sayl Sir, and 'rt pleafe him. There's a Letter for you Sir: It comes from th'Ambasfladors that was bound for England, if your name be Horatio, as I am let

To know it is.

Reads the Letter.

Horatio, When thou shalt haue overlook'd this, give these Fellows some meanes to the King: They have Letters for him. Ere we were two daies old at Sea, a Pryate of very Warlike appointment gaue us Chase. Finding our felues too flew of Saile, we put on a compelling Valour. In the Grapple, I boarded them: On the instant they got clear of our Shippe, so I alone became their Prifoner. They have dealt with me, like Theues of Mercy, but they know what they did. I am to use a good turne for them... Let the King haue the Letters I haue jent, and repair th'o me with as much baft as thou wouldst five death. I haue words to speake in thy ear, will make thee dumbe, yet are they much too light for the bore of the Matter.
These good Fellows will bring thee where I am. Reforncance and Guldenferte, hold their course for England. Of them
I haue much to tell thee, Farewell.

He that thou knowest, thine,

Hamlet.

Comme, I will give you way for these your Letters,
And do't the speedier, that you may direct me
To him from whom you brought them.

Exit

Enter King and Laertes.

King. Now must your confidence my acquittance feal,
And you must put me in your heart for Friend,
Sith you haue heard, and with a knowing ear,
That he which hath your Noble Father flaine,
Purfried my life.

Ea'er. It well appears. But tell me,
Why you proceeded not against these feates,
So crimefull, and so Capital in Nature,
As by your Safety, Wildenafil, all things else,
You mainly were thir'd up?

King. O for two speeciall Reasons,
Which may to you (perhaps) feeme much vnsinoned,
And yeet to me they are strong. The Queen his Mother,
Lies almost by his lookes: and for my selfe,
My Vertue or my Plague, be it either which,
She's so conjunctive to my life and soule;
That as the Starre mowe not but in his Sphere,
I could not but by her. The other Motiue,
Why to a publike count I might not go,1
Is the great lour the generall gender bearne him,
Who dipp'd all his Faults in their affectiion,
Would like the Spring that turneth Wood to Stone,
Conuerst his Gyues to Graces. So that my Arrows
Too slightlly timbred for fo loud a Winde,
Would haue reruered to my Bow againe,
And not where I had arnd them.

Lae'r. And so haue I a Noble Father lost,
A Sifter driven into desperate tearmes,
Who was(if praifes may go backe againe)
Stood Challenger on mount of all the Age
For her perfections. But my reuenge will come.

King. Breake not your speeles for that,
You must not thinke
That we are made of tuffe, so flat, and dull,
That we can let our Beard be hooke with danger,
And thinke it patime. You shortly shall hear more,
I lou'd your Father, and we loue our Selfe,
And that I hope will teach you to imagine——

Enter a Meffenger.

How now? What Newes?

Mesf. Letters my Lord from Hamlet. This to your Maiestie: this to the Queene.

King. From Hamlet? Who brought them?

Mesf. Saylors my Lord they say, I faw them not:

They were given me by Claudis, he receiu'd them,

King. Laertes you shall hear them:

Leue vs. Exit Meffenger.

High and Mighty, you shall know I am yet naked on your Kingdom. To morrow shall I begge leave to see your Kingly Eyes. When I shall (after asking your Pardon thereunto) re-com't to Occasions of my fadeine, and more strainge returns.

Hamlet.

What should this meane? Are all the rest come backe?
Or is it some abuse? Or no such thing?

Lae'r. Know you the hand?

Kin. 'TisHamlet's Charaer, naked and in a Postscript here he fayes alone : Can you aduife me?

Lae'r. I'm loit in it my Lord; but let him come,
It warmes the very ficknesse in my heart,
That I shall liue and tell him to his teeth;
Thus diddeth tou.

Kin. If it be fo Laertes, as how should it be fo:
How otherwise will you be rul'd by me?

Lae'r. If you so not o'rerule me to a peace.

Kin. To thine owne peace: if he be now return'd,
As checking at his Voyage,and that he meanes
No more to vndertake it; I will worke him
To an exploit now-ripe in my Deuice,
Vnder the which he shall not chooze but fall;
And for his death no winde of blame shall breath,
But even his Mother shall vnharge the practice,
And call it accident: Some two Months hence
Here was a Gentleman of Normandy,
I'ue feene my selfe, and er'd against the French,
And they ran well on Horfebacke; but this Gallant

Had
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

Had witchcraft in't; he grew into his Seat,
And to such wondrous doing brought his Horse,
As had he beene encorps't and demy-Natur'd
With the braue Beaff, so farre he pait my thought,
That I in forgery of shapes and trickes,
Come short of what he did.

_Laer._ A Norman was't?

_Kin._ A Norman.

_Laer._ Vpon my life Lamound.

_Kin._ The very same.

_Laer._ I know him well, he is the Brooch indeed,
And Iemme of all our Nation.

_Kin._ Hee mad confession of you,
And gave you such a Maisterly report,
For Art and exercise in your defence;
And for your Raper most specially,
That he cryed out, 'twould be a fight indeed,
If one could match you Sir. This report of his
Did Hamlet so envenom with his Eady,
That he could nothing doe but with and begge,
Your lowaine comming ore to play with him;
Now out of this.

_Laer._ Why out of this, my Lord?

_Kin. Laertes_ was your Father deare to you?

Or are you like the painting of a sorrow,
A face without a heart?

_Laer._ Why ask ye this?

_Kin._ Not that I thinke you did not love your Father,
But that I know Love is begun by Time:
And that I fee in passages of proofs,
Time qualifies the sparkes and fire of it:
_Hamlet_ comes backe: what would you vntake,
To shew your selfe your Fathers sonne indeed,
More then in words?

_Laer._ To cut his throat I'ch Church.

_Kin._ No place indeed shoulde murder Sancturize;
Revenge shoulde have no bounds: but good _Laertes_
Will you doe this, keepe close within your Chamber,
_Hamlet_ return'd, shall know you are home:
Wee'l put on thofe shall praze your excellence,
And let a double vamsh in the fame
The Frenchman gae me, bring you in fine together,
And wager on your heads,he being remifte,
Moft generous, and free from all contriving,
Will not perufe the Foiles? So that with eafe,
Or with a little shuffling, you may choose
A Sword vnbaied, and in a passe of practice,
Requit him for your Father.

_Laer._ I will doot,
And for that purpose Ile anoint my Sword:
I bought an _Vaclion_ of a Mountebanke
So mortall, I but dipt a knife in it,
Where it draws blood, no Cataplaime fo rare,
Collected from all Simplex that havee Vertue
Vnder the Moone, can faue the thing from death,
That is but fraerch withall: Ile touch my point,
With this contagion, that if I call him slightly,
I may be death.

_Kin._ Let's further thinke of this,
Weigh what convenience both of time and meanes
May fit vs to our shape, if this shoulde faile;
And that our drift looke through our bad performance,
'Twere better not affaied; therefore this _Proiect_
Should have a backe or secon, that might hold,
If this shoulde blast in proffes: Soft, let me fee
We'll make a solene wager on your commings,

I ha't: when in your motion you are hot and dry,
As make your bowts more violent to the end,
And that he eats for drinkes, Ie haue prepar'd him
A Challis for the nonsse wherose but fippings,
If he by chance escape your venome'd thuck,
Our purpose may hold there; how sweet Queene.

_Enter Queene._

_Queen._ One woe doth tread upon another heele,
So fast they'll follow: your Sifter's drown'd _Laertes_.

_Laer._ Drown'd! O where?

_Queen._ There is a Willow growes allant a Brooke,
That shewes his hore leaves in the glaffie streame:
There with fantatificke Garlands did she come,
Of Crow-flowers, Nettles, Dayflies, and long Purlpes,
That liberal Sheeredes give a groffer name;
But our cold Maids doe Dead Mens Fingers call them:
There on the pendant bouges, her Coronet weeds
Clambrsing to hang; an enuious fluer broke,
When downe the woody Trophies, and her selfe,
Fell in the weeping Brooke, her clothes fpred wide,
And Mermaid-like, a while they bore her vp,
Which time she chaunted snatches of old tunes,
As one incapable of her owne diitrefe,
Or like a creature Nature, and indeed
Vnto that Element: but long it could not be,
Till that her garments, heavy with her drinke,
Pul'd the pootre wretch from her melodious buy,
To muddie death.

_Laer._ Alas the, is she drown'd?

_Queen._ Drown'd, drown'd.

_Laer._ Too much of water haft thou pource _Ophelia_,
And therefore I forbid my teares: but yet
It is our tricke, Nature her custome holds,
Let shame say what it will; when these are gone
The woman will be out: Adee my Lord,
I haue a speech of fire, that saine would blawe,
But that this folly doubtes it.

Exit.

_Kin._ Let's follow, _Gertrude_:

How much I had to doe to calme his rage?
Now feare I this will glue it start againe;
Therefore let's follow.

_Exit._

_Enter two Clowens._

_Clow._ Is she to bee buried in Christian buriall, that willfully feekes her owne salvation?

_Other._ I tell thee shee is, and therefore make her grave straight, the Crowner hath fate on her, and finds it Christian buriall.

_Clo._ How can that be, vnleff she drowned her selfe in her owne defence?

_Other._ Why 'tis found fo.

_Clo._ It muft be _Se offendendo_, it cannot bee else: for heere lies the point; If I drowne my selfe wittingly, it argues an _Aet_: and an _Aet_ hath three branches. It is an _Aet_ to doe and to performe; argall the drown'd _her_ selfe wittingly.

_Other._ Nay but heare you Goodman Deluer.

_Clow._ Glue me leave; heere lies the water; good: heere flandes the man; good: If the man goe to this water and drowne himselfe; it is will he nill he, he goes; marke you that? But if the water come to him & drowne him; hee drownes not himselfe. Argall, hee that is not guilty of his owne death, shortens not his owne life.

_Other._ But is this law?

_Clo._ I marry is't; _Crowners Quelt Law_.

_Other._
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

Oth. Will you ha the truth on't: if this had not beene a Gentlewoman, shee should have beene buried out of Christian Buriall.

Clo. Why there thou say'rt. And the more pitty that great folk should have countenance in this world to drowne or hang themselues, more then their even Christian. Come, my Spade; there is no ancient Gentleman, but Gardiners, Ditchers and Graue-makers; they hold vp Adams Profession.

Oth. Was he a Gentleman?

Clo. He was the first that euer bore Armes.

Oth. Why he had none.

Clo. What, art' a Heathen? how doft thou understand the Scripture? the Scripture fayes Adam dig'd; could hee digge without Armes? IJe put another que-tion to thee; if thou anfwerest me not to the purpofe, con-ffe thine felfe.

Oth. Go too.

Clo. What is he that builds stronger then either the Mafon, the Shipwright, or the Carpenter?

Oth. The Gallowes maker; for that Frame outrifes a thousand Tenants.

Clo. I like thy wit well in good faith, the Gallowes does well; but how does it well? it does well to thofe that doe ill: now, thou doft ill to say the Gallowes is built stronger then the Church: Argall, the Gallowes may doe well to thee. Too't againe, Come.

Oth. Who builds stronger then a Mafon, a Ship-

wright, or a Carpenter?

Clo. I, tell me that, and vnvoake.

Oth. Marry, now I can tell.

Clo. Too't.

Oth. Maffe, I cannot tell.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio a furre off.

Clo. Cudgell thine braines no more about it; for your dullaffe will not mend his pace with beating: and when you are ask't this quetion next, say a Graue-maker: the Houfes that he makes, lafts till Doomesday: go, get thee to Taubgan, fetch me a roupe of Liquor.

Sings.

In youth when I did louie, did loue,
me thought it was very sweete:
To contract 0 the time for a my beoune,
O me thought there was nothing better.

Ham. Ha! this fellow no feeling of his buineffe; that he fings at Graue-making?

Hor. Cuftome hath made it in him a property of eafineffe.

Ham. 'Tis e'en fo; the hand of little Employment hath the dartier fenfe.

Clowne sings.

But Age with his feeling feeps bath caufed me in his clutch:
And bath fhipped me intill the Land,
as if I had never beene fuch.

Ham. That Scull had a tongue in it, and could fing once: how the knave bowes it to th' grown, as if it were Caines law-bone, that did the firft murther: It might be the Pate of a Politician which this Affe o're Offices: one that could circumvent God, might it not?

Hor. It might, my Lord.

Ham. Or of a Courtier, which could fay, Good Morrow sweet Lord: how doft thou, good Lord? this might be my Lord fuch a one, that prai'd my Lord fuch a ones Horfe, when he meant to begge it; might it not?

Hor. I, my Lord.

Ham. Why ee'n fo: and now my Lady Wormes, Chaplefle, and knockt about the Mazar and a Sextons Spade; here's fine Resolution, if wee had the tricke to fee't. Did thee bones coft no more the breeding, but to play at Loggetts with'em? mine ake to thinke on't.

Clowne sings.

A Pickaxe and a Spade, a Spade.
for and a fervowing-Sheets:
O a Pit of Clay for to be made,
for such a Guest is meete.

Ham. There's another: why might not that bee the Scull of of a Lawyer? where be his Quiddits now? his

Quiletts? his Cafes? his Tenures, and his Tricks? why doe's heuffer this rude knave now to knocke him about the Sconce with a dirty Shouell, and will not tell him of his Action of Battery? hum. This fellow might be in's time a great buyer of Land, with his Statutes, his Recog-nizances, his Fines, his double Vouchers, his Recoveries:

Is this the fine of his Fines, and the recovery of his Recoveries, to haue his fine Pate full of fine Dirt? will his Vouchers vouch him no more of his Purchaes, and double ones too, then the length and breadth of a pare of Indentures? the very Conveyances of his Lands will hardly lye in this Boxe; and muft the Inheritor himfelfe have no more? ha?

Hor. Not a lot more, my Lord.

Ham. Is not Parchment made of Sheep-skinnes?

Hor. 1 my Lord, and of Cuhe-skinnes too.

Ham. They are Sheepe and Calues that seek out affu-rance in that. I will speake to this fellow: whole Graue's this Sir?

Clo. Mine Sir:

O a Pit of Clay for to be made,
for such a Guest is meete.

Ham. I thinke it be thine indeedfor thou lieft in't.

Clo. You lye out on't Sir, and therefore it is not yours:
for my part, I doe not lye in't; and yet it is mine.

Ham. Thou doft lye in't, to be in't and fay 'tis thine:
'tis for the dead, not for the quicke, therefore thou lyeft.

Clo. 'Tis a quicke lye Sir, 'twill away againe from me to you.

Ham. What man doft thou digge it for?

Clo. For no man Sir.

Ham. What woman then?

Clo. For none neither.

Ham. Who is to be buried in't?

Clo. One that was a woman Sir; but reft her Soule, shee's dead.

Ham. How abolute the knawe is? wee muft speake by the Carde, or equiuocation will vn doe vs : by the Lord Horatie, thefe three yeares I have taken note of it, the Age is growne fo picked, that the toe of the Pefant comes fo neere the heelis of our Courtier, hee galls his Kibe. How long haft thou been a Graue-maker?

Clo. Of all the daysie 1th yeare, I came too't that day that our late King Hamlet o'recame Partinbras.

Ham. How long is that fince?

Clo. Cannot you tell that? every foole can tell that:
It was the very day, that young Hamlet was borne, hee that was mad, and fent into England.

Ham. I marry, why was he fent into England?

Clo. Why, becaufe he was mad; hee shall recover his wits there; or if he do not, it's no great matter there.

Ham.
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

Ham. Why?

Clo. 'Twill not be seen in him, there the men are as mad as he.

Ham. How came he mad?

Clo. Very strangely they say.

Ham. How strangely?

Clo. Faith 'e're with loofing his wits.

Ham. Upon what ground?

Clo. Why here in Denmark: I have bin fixteene heere, man and Boy thirty yeares.

Ham. How long will a man lie 'ith' earth ere he rot?

Clo. Ifaith, if he be not rotten before he die(as we have many pocky Coarfe now adays, that will karke hold the laying in) he will last you some eight yeares, or nine yeares. A Tanner will last you nine yeare e.

Ham. Why he, more then another?

Clo. Why sir, his hide is so tan'd with his Trade, that he will keep out water a great while. And your water, is a fore Decayer of your horfon dead body. Here a Scull now: this Scull, has laine in the earth three & twenty yeares.

Ham. Whose was it?

Clo. A whoreofon mad Fellows was it;

Whose doe you thinke it was?

Ham. Nay, I know not.

Clo. A pleffence on him for a mad Rogue, a pou'd a Flaggon of Renih on my head once. This fame Scull Sir, this fame Scull fir, was Toricky Scull, the Kings Ieffer.

Ham. This?

Clo. E'en e'that.

Ham. Let me fee. Alas poor Yorick, I knew him Horatio, a fellow of infinite Ieft, of most excellent fancy, he hath borne me on his backe a thousand times: And how abborred my Imagination is, my gorg rifes at it. Heere hung those lipps, that I haue knift I know not how off. VVhere be your libes now? Your Gambiaes? Your Songs? Your flashes of Merriment that were wont to set the Table on a Rore? No one now to mock your own leerings? Quite chopefaine? Now get you to my Ladies Chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thicke, to this faueur the muff come. Make her laugh at that: pry-thee Horatio tell me one thing.

Hor. What's that my Lord?

Ham. Doft thou thinke Alexander lookt o'th'fashion 'tis heare?

Hor. E'en fo.

Ham. And smelt fo? Puh.

Hor. E'en fo, my Lord.

Ham. To what base vses we may returne Horatio. Why may not Imagination trace the Noble duft of Alexander, till he find it flomping a bunghole.

Hor. 'Twere to consider: to curiously to consider fo.

Ham. No faith, not a lot. But to follow himether with modellie enough, & likehood to lead it; as thus. Alexander died : Alexander was buried: Alexander returneth into duft; the duft is earth; of earth we make Lome, and why of that Lome (whereeto he was converred) might they not flomp a Beere-barrell? Imperial! Coarfe,dead and turn'd to clay, Might flop a hole to keepe the winde awaie. Oh, that that earth, which kept the world in awe, Should patch a Wall,expell the winters flaw. But soft, but soft, aside; here comes the King.

Enter King, Queene, Laertes, and a Coffin, with Lords attendant.

The Queene, the Courriers. Who is that they follow, And with such maimed rites? This doth betoken The Coarfe they follow, did with dispater hand, Forso do it owne life; twice the one Effare, Couch we a while, and mark.

Laer. What Cerimony else?

Ham. That is Laertes, a very Noble youth: Marke.

Laer. What Cerimony else?

Priest. Her Obsequies have bin as farre inlarg'd. As we haue warrantis, her death was doubtfull, And but that great Command, o're-fwaies the order, She should in ground vunfaflidied haue lodg'd,

Till the laft Trumpet. For charitable praler, Shardes, Flintes, and Peebles, should be throue on her: Yet heere she is allowed her Virgin Rites, Her Maiden firewments, and the bringing home Of Bell and Burial.

Laer. Muft there no more be done?

Priest. No more be done:

We should prophane the seruice of the dead, To sing fage Regium, and fuch reft to her

As to peace-parted Soules.

Laer. Lay her 'ith' earth,

And from her faire and vnpolluted flied,

May Violets spring. I tell thee(thurifh Priest)

A Mininftring Angell shall my Sifer be,

When thou leeft bowling?

Ham. What, the faire Ophelia?

Queene. Sweets, to the sweet farewell.

I hop'd thou shou'd haue bin my Hamlets wife:

I thought thy Bride-bed to haue deckt(sweet Maid)

And not t'hauе firew'd thy Graue.

Laer. Oh terrible woer,

Fall ten times trebble, on that curfed head

Whofe wicked deed, thy most Ingenious fence

Depriu'd thee of. Hold off the earth a while,

Till I haue caught her once more in mine armes:

Leaps in the graue.

Now pyle thy duft,vpon the quickes, and dead,

Till of this flat a Mountaine you have made,

To o're top old Petron, or the skylsh head

Of blew Olympus.

Ham. What is he, whose griefes

Beares such an Emphaticke? whose whole phrase of Sorrow

Conioye the wandring Starres, and makes them stand

Like wonder-wounded hearers? This is I,

Hamlet the Dane.

Laer. The deuil take thy soule.

Ham. Thou prai'ft not well.

I prythee take thy fingers from my throat;

Sir though I am not Spleenatue, and rath,

Yet haue I something in me dangerous,

Which let thy wifeneffe feare. Away thy hand.

King. Pluck them afunder.

Que. Hamlet, Hamlet.

Gen. Good my Lord be quiet.

Ham. Why I will fight with him vpon this Theme,

Vntill my eielche will no-longer wag.

Que. Oh my Sonne, what Theame?

Ham. I lou'd Ophelia: fortie thousand Brothers

Could not(with all there quantitie of Loue)

Make vp my summe. What wilt thou do for her

King. Oh he is mad Laertes,

Que. For loue of God forbearre him.

Ham. Come howe me what thou'lt doe.

Woo't wepe? Woo't fight? Woo't teare thy felfe?

Woo'drinke vp &eile, eat a Crocodile?
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

Ile don't. Doft thou come heere to whine; To outface me with leaping in her Graue? Be buried quickie with her, and so will I. And if thou prate of Mountains; let them throw Millions of Akeres on vs ; till our ground Singing his pate against the burning Zone, Make Ofme like a wart. Nay, and thoul't mouth, Ile rant as well as thou.

Kin. This is meere Madneffe: And thus awhile the fit will worke on him: Anon as patient as the female Doe, When that her golden Cuplet are diclos'd; His silence will fit drooping.

Ham. Heare ye Sir: What is the reason that you vfe me thus? I loud' you euer; but it is no matter; Let Hercules himselfe doe what he may, The Cat will Mew, and Dogge will have his day. Exit.

Kin. I pray you good Horatio wait vpon him, Strengthen you patience in our last nights speech, We'll put the matter to the present path: Good Gertrude fet some watch over your Sonne, This Graue shall have a lueling Monument: An house of quiet shortly we fe; Till then, in patience our proceeding be;

Enter Hamlet and Horatio.

Ham. So much for this Sir; now let me fee the other, You doe remember all the Circumstance.

Hor. Remember it my Lord?

Ham. Sir, in my heart there was a kinde of fighting, That would not let me sleepe; me thought I lay Worfe then the mutines in the Bilboes, rashly, (And praise be rafhneffe for it;) let vs know, Our indifferencet sometimes ferues vs well, When our deare plots do paule, and that should teach vs, There's a Diuinity that shapes our ends, Rough-hem them how we will.

Hor. That is moft certaine.

Ham. Vp from my Cabin My sea-gowne scart about me in the darke, Crop'd I to finde out them ; had my defire, Finger'd their Packet, and in fine, withdrew To mine owne roome againe, making fo bold, (My feares forgetting manners) to vnfeale Their grand Commiffion, where I found Horatio, Oh royall knauey: An exact command, Larded with many feuerall forts of reason; Importing Danmarks health, and Englands too, With hoo, fuch Bugges and Goblins in my life; That on the superize no leafeure bated, No not to stay the grinding of the Axe, My head shoul be struck off.

Hor. Ift possible?

Ham. Here's the Commiffion, read it at more leyure: But wilt thou heare me how I did proceed?

Hor. I beseech you.

Ham. Being thus benetted round with Villaines, Ere I could make a Prologue to my braines, They had begun the Play. I fate me downe, Denis'd a new Commiffion, wrote it faire, I once did hold it as our Statifes doe, A baseneffe to write faire; and laboured much How to forget that learning: but Sir now, It did me Yeomans feruice: wilt thou know The effects of what I wrote?

Hor. I, good my Lord.

Ham. An earnest Coniuration from the King, As England was his faithfill Tributary; As loeue betweene them, as the Palm should flourish, As Peace should fill her wheaten Garland weare, And fland a Comma t'weene their amities, And many fich like Affis of great charge, That on the view and know of these Contents, Without debatement further, more or leffe, He should the bearers put to sodaine death, Not thriuie time allowed.

Hor. How was this feald?

Ham. Why, even in that was Heaven ordain; I had my fathers Signet in my Purfe, Which was the Modell of that Danifh Scale: Folded the Writ vp in forme of the other, Subscrib'd it, gau't th'impreffion, plac't it Safely, The changeling neuer knowne: Now, the next day Was our Sea Fight, and what to this was fement, Thou know'rt already.

Hor. So Gudlenfence and Rofenrance, go too't.

Ham. Why man, they did make loue to this employment They are not neere my Confience; their debate Doth by their owne infination grow: 'Tis dangerous, when the bafer nature comes Betweenee the paffe, and fell incensed points Of mighty opposites.

Hor. Why, what a King is this?

Ham. Does it not, think't thee, stand me now vpon He that hath kill'd my King, and whor'd my Mother, Popt in betweene th'election and my hopes, Throwne out his Angle for my proper life, And with fuch coxenenage, is't not perfect confience, To quit him with this arme? And it's not to be dam'd To let this Canker of our nature come

In further euill.

Hor. It muft be shortly knowne to him from England What is the issue of the businesse there.

Ham. It will be short, The interim's mine, and a mans life's no more Then to say one: but I am very farre good Horatio, That to Laertes I forgot my felfe; For by the image of my Caule, I fee The Portraiture of his; Ilc count his favours: But fure the brauery of his griefe did put me Into a Towrings paffion.

Hor. Peace, who comes heere?

Enter young Ofricke. (marke.

Ofr. Your Lordship is right welcome back to Den-

Ham. I humberly thank you Sir, doft know this waterfile?

Hor. No my good Lord.

Ham. Thy fate is the more gracious; for 'tis a vice to know him: he hath much Land, and fertile; let a Beatt be Lord of Beafts, and his Crib shall stand at the Kings Meffe; 'tis a Chowgh; but as I saw fpacious in the polleffion of dirt.

Ofr. Sweet Lord, if your friendship were at leyure, I should impart a thing to you from his Maffeley.

Ham. I will receive it with all diligence of spirit; put your Bonet to his right vfe, 'tis for the head.

Ofr. I thanke your Lordship, 'tis very hot.

Ham. No, beleue mee 'tis very cold, the winde is Northerly.

Ofr. It is indifferent cold my Lord indeed.

Ham. Me thinkes it is very fouldry, and hot for my Complexion.

Ofricke.
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

Ofr. Exceedingly, my Lord, it is very fowry, as twere I cannot tell how: but my Lord, his Maiestie bad me signifie to you, that he ha's laid a great wager on your head:

Sir, this is the matter.

Ham. I beseech you remember.
Ofr. Nay, in good faith, for mine ease in good faith:
Sir, you are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is at his weapon.

Ham. What's his weapon?
Ofr. Rapier and dagger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons; but well.
Ofr. The fir King ha's wag'd with him six Barbary Horses, against the which he impon'd as I take it, fixe French Rapiers and Poniards, with their auffling, as Girdele, Hangers or fo: three of the Carriages imploy'd are very deare to fancy, very resploute to the hils, most delicate carriages, and of very liberall conceit.

Ham. What call you the Carriages?
Ofr. The Carriages Sir, are the hangers.

Ham. The phrase would bee more Germaine to the matter: if we could carry Cannon by our sides; I would it might be Hangers till then; but on fixe Barbary Horses against fixe French Swords: their auffling, and three liberall conceived Carriages, that's the French but a'gainst the Danish: why is this impom'd as you call it?

Ofr. The King Sir, hath laid that in a dozen parables betweene you and him, hee shall not exceed you three hits; he hath one twelue for mine, and that would come to immediate tryall, if your Lordship would vouchsafe the Anfwere.

Ham. How if I anfwere no?
Ofr. I meane my Lord, the opposition of your perfon in tryall.

Ham. Sir, I will walke heere in the Hall; if it pleafe his Maiestie, 'tis the breathing time of day with me; let the Foylees be brought, the Gentlemans willing, and the King hold his purpofe; I will win for him if I can: if not, Ie gaine nothing but my shame, and the odde hits.

Ofr. Shall I redeliver you ez'ne fo?

Ham. To this effect Sir, after what flourish your nature will.

Ofr. I commend my duty to your Lordship.
Ham. Yours, yours; hee does well to commend it himfelfe, there are no tongues else for'tongue.

Hor. This Lapwing runs away with the shell on his head.

Ham. He did Complie with his Dugge before hee fucked it: thus had he and mine more of the fame Beauty that I know the droffe age dotes on; only got the tune of the time, and outward habite of encounter, a kind of yefty collection, which carries them through & through the mouf and winnowed opinion; and doe but blow them to their tryalls: the Bubbles are out.

Hor. You will lofe this wager, my Lord.

Ham. I doe not thinke so, since he went into France, I have beene in continuall practive; I hall winne at the oddes: but thou wouldest not thinke how all here abou't my heart: but it is no matter.

Hor. Nay, good my Lord.

Ham. It is but foolery; but it is such a kind of gain-giuing as would perhaps trouble a woman.

Hor. If your minde dislike any thing, obey: I will fore-tall their repair hither, and say you are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit, we defe Augury; there's a speciall Providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 'tis not to come: if it bee not to come, it will bee now: if it be not now; yet it will come; the readiness is all, since no man ha's ought of what he leaues. What is't to leauue betimes?

Enter King, Queene, Laertes and Lords, with other Attendaants with Foylees, and Gauntlets, a Table and Flagons of Wine on it.

Kin. Come Hamlet, come, and take this hand from me.

Ham, Give me your pardon Sir, I've done you wrong, But pardon as you are a Gentleman.

This preface knowes, And you must needs have heard how I am punifh'd With fore diftraction? What I have done That might your nature honour, and exception Roughly awake, I heere proclaime was madneffe: Was't Hamlet wrong'd Laertes? Neuer Hamlet.

If Hamlet from himfelfe be tane away: And when he's not himfelfe, do's wrong Laertes, Then Hamlet does it not, Hamlet denies it:

Who does it then? His Madneffe? If't be fo, Hamlet is of the FaCion that is wrong'd, His madneffe is poore Hamlet's Enemy.

Sir, in this Audience, Let my declaifning from a purpof'd eulii,

Free me fo farre in your most generous thoughts, That I have shot mine Arrow o're the houfe, And hurt my Mother.

Laer. I am satisfied in Nature, Whose moteu in this cafe shoul'd fire me moft To my Reuenge. But in my termes of Honor I fland aloofe, and will no reconcilement, Till by some elder Matters of knowne Honor, I have a voyce, and preifent of peace To kepe my name vnorg'd. But till that time, I do receiue your offer'd loue like loue, And will not wrong it.

Ham. I do embrace it frely, And will this Brothers wager frankly play.

Give vs the Foylees: Come on.

Laer. Come one for me.

Ham. Ile be your foyle Laertes, in mine ignorance,

Your Skill shall like a Stirre i'th'darkest night,
Sticke firy off,indeed.

Laer. You mocke me Sir.

Ham. No by this hand.

King. Give them the Foylees yong Ofrick,

Coufen Hamlet, you know the wager.

Ham. Verie well my Lord,

Your Grace hath laide the oddes a'th'weaker side.

King. I do not fear it, I have teene you both!

But since he is better'd, we have therefore oddes.

Laer. This is too heavy, Let me see another.

Ham. This likes me well,

These Foylees haue all a length. Prepare to play.
Ofrick. I my good Lord.

King. Set me the Stopes of wine vpon that Table:
If Hamlet give the firft, or fecound hit,
Or quit in anfwere of the third exchange,
Let all the Battlements their Ordinance fire,
The King shal drinke to Hamlets better breath,
And in the Cup an union shal he throw Richer then that, which foure succeuis Kings
In Denmarke Crownes haue worn.
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

Ham. Give me the Cup, and let the Kettle to the Trumpets speake, The Trumpet to the Cannoner without, The Cannons to the Heauens, the Heauen to Earth, Now the King drinks to Hamlet. Come, begin, And you the Judges bare a wary eye.

Ham. Come on fir.
Lear. Come on fir.

Lair. Come on fir.
Ham. Come on fir.
Lair. Come on fir.
Ham. Ile play this bout first, let by a-while.

Come: Another hit; what fay you?
Lear. A touch, a touch, I do confefs.
King. Our Sonne shall win.
Qu. He's fat, and scant of breath.

Heere's a Napkin, rub thy browes,
The Queene Carowies to thy fortune, Hamlet.
Ham. Good Madam.
King. Gertrude, do not drinke.
Lear. I will my Lord.

I pray you pardon me.
King. It is the poiſon'd Cup, it is too late.
Ham. I dare not drinke yet Madam, By and by.
Qu. Come, let me wipe thy face.
Lear. My Lord, Ile hit him now.
King. I do not think'e.
Lear. And yet 'tis almost 'gainft my conscience.

Ham. Come for the third.

Lear. you but daily,
I pray you passe with your beft violence,
I am affa'nd you make a wanton of me.
Lear. Say you fo? Come on.

Qu. Nothing neither way.
Lear. Huace at you now.

In scuffling they change Rapiers.

King. Part them, they are incens'd.
Ham. Nay come, againe.
Qu. Looke to the Queene there hoa.
Hor. They bleed on both sides. How is't my Lord?

Qu. How is't Larret?
Lear. Why as a Woodcooke
To mine Sprindge, Quircie,
I am iuyly kill'd with mine owne Treacherie.

Ham. How does the Queene?

King. She fountains to hear them bleede.
Qu. No, no, the drinke, the drinke.
Oh my deere Hamlet, the drinke, the drinke,
I am poiſon'd.

Ham. Oh Villany! How? Let the doore be lock'd.
Treacherie, feekte it out.
Lear. It is here Hamlet.

Hamlet, thou art flaine,
No Medicine in the world can do thee good.
In thee, there is not halfe an houre of life; The Treacherous Instrument is in thy hand, Vnbated and envenom'd: the foule prattle: Hath turn'd it felfe on me. Lo'e, heere I lye, Neuer to rife againe: Thy Mothers poiſon'd:

I can no more, the King, the King's too blame.

Ham. The point envenom'd too,
Then venome to thy worke.

Hurs the King.

All. Traefon, Traefon.

King. O yet defende me Friends, I am but hurt.

Ham. Heere thou inceffuous, murdrous, Damned Dane,

Drinke off this Potion: Is thy Vnion heere?
Follow my Mother.

Lear. He is iuyly ferd'd.
It is a poiyfon temp'red by himselfe:
Exchange foraignese with me, Noble Hamlet;
Mine and my Fathers death come not vpon thee,
Nor thine on me.

Ham. Heauen make thee free of it, I follow thee.
I am dead Horatio, wretched Queene adiew,
You that looke pale, and tremble at this chance,
That are but Motes or audience to this acte:
Had I but time (as this fell Sergeant death
Is frick'd in his Areeft) oh I could tell you.
But let it be: Horatio, I am dead,
Thou liu'ft, report me and my caules right
To the vnfatisfied.

Hor. Neuer beleue it.
I am more an Antike Roman then a Dane:
Heere's yet some Liquor left.

Ham. As th'art a man, give me the Cup.
Let go, by Heauen Ile haue't.
Oh good Horatio, what a wounded name,
(Things standing thus vnknowne) shall lie behind me.
If thou did't euer hold me in thy heart,
Absent thee from felicitie awhile,
And in this harf world draw thy breath in paine,
To tell my Storie.

March afarre off, and sboot within.

What warlike noyfe is this?

Enter Officie.

Off. Yong Fortinbras, with conquest come fro Poland
To th' Ambassadors of England giues this warlike volly.

Ham. 0 I dye Horatio:
The potent poiyfon quite ore-crowes my spirit,
I cannot lie to heare the Newes from England,
But I do prophesie th'elecution lights
On Fortinbras, he ha's my dying voyce,
So tell him with the occurrents more and leffe,
Which haue follicted. The reft is silence. O, o, o.

Dyes Hora. Now cracke a Noble heart:
Goodnight sweet Prince,
And flights of Angels sing thee to thy reft,
Why do's the Drumme come hither?

Enter Fortinbras and English Ambassadors,with Drumme,
Colours, and Attendants.

Fortin. Where is this figh?
Hor. What is it ye would fee;
If ought of wo, or wonder, ceaue your search.
For. His querry cries on hauocke. Oh proud death,
What feas is toward in thine eternall Cell,
That thou fo many Princes, at a hoote,
So bloodily hauocke.

Amb. The fight is dismall,
And our affairs from England come too late,
The cares are fenfeleffe that shoulde giue vs hearing,
To tell him his commandment is fulfull'd,

771
That

That Reşincrance and Guildenførne are dead:
Where should we haue our thankes?
Hor. Not from his mouth,
Had it th'abilitie of life to thanke you:
He neuer gaue command'ment for their death.
But since fo lumpe ypon this bloodie question,
You from the Polake warres, and you from England
Are heere arrived. Giue order that thefe bodies
High on a stage be placed to the view,
And let me speake to th'yet vnknowing world,
How these things came about. So shall you heare
Of carnall, bloudie, and vnnaturall a<sils,
Of accidental judgements, casuall slaughters
Of death's put on by cunning, and forc'd caufe,
And in this vphot, purpos’es mittooke,
Falne on the Inuentors heads. All this can I
Truly deliuer.
For. Let vs haft to heare it,
And call the Noblest to the Audience.
For me, with sorrow, I embrace my Fortune,
I haue some Rites of memory in this Kingdome,

Which are ro claime, my vantage doth
Inuite me,
Hor. Of that I shall haue alwayes caufe to speake,
And from his mouth
Whose voyage will draw on more:
But let this fame be prefently perform’d,
Euen whiles mens minde are wilde,
Left more mishance
On plots, and errors happen.
For. Let foure Captaines
Beare Hamlet like a Soldier to the Stage,
For he was likely, had he bene put on
To haue prou’d moft royally:
And for his paflage,
The Soul’diours Musick, and the rites of Warre
Speake loudly for him.
Take vp the body; Such a fight as this Becomes the Field, but heere fhewes much amis.
Go, bid the Soul'diers shoot:
Exeunt Marching: after the which, a Peale of Ordenance are shot off.

FINIS.
Enter Kent, Gloucester, and Edmond.

Kent.
Thought the King had more affected the Duke of Albany, then Cornwall.

Glo. It did alwayes seeke fo to vs: But now in the diuision of the Kingdom, it appeares not which of the Dukes hee valeues most; for qualities are fo weight'd, that curiosity in neither, can make choise of eithers moiety.

Kent. Is not this your Son, my Lord?

Glo. His breeding Sir, hath bin at my charge. I haue fo often blu'd to acknowledge him, that now I am braz'd too.

Kent. I cannot conceyue you.

Glo. Sir, this yong Fellow mother could; whereupon she grew round womb'd, and had indeede (Sir) a Sonne for her Cradle, ere she had an husband for her bed. Do you smell a fault?

Kent. I cannot with the fault vndone, the issu[e of it, being fo proper.

Glo. But I haue a Sonne, Sir, by order of Law, some yeere elder then this; who, yet is no deeer in my account, though this Knaue came something fawcily to the world before he was fent for: yet was his Mother fayre, ther was good sport at his making, and the horfon must be acknowledg'd. Doe you know this Noble Gentleman, Edmond?

Edm. No, my Lord.

Glo. My Lord of Kent:
Remember him hereafter, as my Honourable Friend.

Edm. My services to your Lordship.

Kent. I muft loue you, and fue to know you better.

Edm. Sir, I shall study deferving.

Glo. He hath bin out nine yeare[s], and away he shall againe. The King is comming.

Enter King Lear, Cornwall, Albany, Gonerill, Regan, Cordelia, and attendants.

Lear. Attend the Lords of France & Burgundy, Glofter.

Glo. I shall, my Lord.

Exit.

Lear. Meane time we shall expresse our darker purpofe. Glue me the Map there. Know, that we haue diuided In three our Kingdome: and 'tis our fall intent, To shake all Cares and Busineffe from our Age, Conferring them on younger firenges, while we Vnburthen'd crawle toward death. Our Son of Cornwall, And you our no leffe loving Sonne of Albany,

We have this houre a constant will to publifh Our daughters feuerall Dowers, that future strife May be prevented now. The Princes, France & Burgundy, Great Riuals in our yongest daughters loue, Long in our Court, haue made their amorous foiourne, And heere are to be anwer'd. Tell me my daughters (Since now we will disuff vs both of Rule, Interest of Territory, Care's of State) Which of you shall we fay doth loue vs moft, That we, our largest bountie may extend Where Nature doth with merit challenge. Generill, Our eldeft borne, speake first.

Gen. Sir, I loue you more then word can weld y matter, Deerer then eye-fight, space, and libertie, Beyond what can be valed, rich or rare, No leffe then life, with grace, health, beauty, honor: As much as Childe ere lou'd, or Father found. A loue that makes breath poyre, and speech vnable, Beyond all manner of fo much I loue you.

Car. What faull Cordelia speake? Loue, and be silent. Lear. Of all thee bounds even from this Line, to this, With Shadowie Riuers, and with Champains rich'd With plenteous Riuers, and with wide-skirted Medes We make thee Lady. To thine and Albani's ifues Be this perpetuall. What fayes our second Daughter? Our deereft Regan, wife of Cornwall?

Reg. I am made of that felfe-mettle as my Sifer, And prize me at her worth. In my true heart, I finde the names my very deede of loue: Onely shee comes too short, that I professe My felfe an enemy to all other ioyes, Which the moft precious square of fenfe professes, And finde I am alone felicitate In youe deear Highneffe loue.

Car. Then poore Cordelia, And yet not fo, since I am sure my loue's More ponderous then my tongue.

Lear. To thee, and thine hereditarie euer, Remaine this ample third of our faire Kingdome, No leffe in space, validitie, and pleafure Then that conferr'd on Gonerill. Now our Ioy, Although our laft and leaff; to whole yong loue, The Vines of France, and Milke of Burgundie, Strive to be intereit. What can you fay, to draw A third, more opulent then your Sifters speake.

Car. Nothing my Lord.

Lear. Nothing?
Cor. Nothing.
Lear. Nothing will come of nothing, speake againe.
Cor. Vnhappy that I am, I cannot heave
My heart into my mouth: I loue your Maiestie
According to my bond, no more nor lesse.
Lear. How, how Cordelia? Mend your speech a little,
Least you may marre your Fortunes.
Cor. Good my Lord,
You haue begot me, bred me, lou’d me,
I returne those duties backe as are right fit,
Obey you, Loue you, and most Honour you.
Why haue my Sistars Husbands, if they say
They loue you all? Happily when I shall wed,
That Lord, whose hand must take my plight, shall carry
Hale me loue with him, hale me Care, and Dutie,
Sure I shall never marry like my Sistars.
Lear. But goes thy heart with this?
Cor. I my good Lord.
Lear. So young, and so vntrader?
Cor. So young my Lord, and true.
Lear. Let it be so, thy truth then be thy dowre:—
By the sacred radience of the Sunne,
The misteries of Heccat and the night:
By all the operation of the Orbes,
From whom we do exift, and cease to be,
Here I disclaim all my Paternall care,
Propinquity and property of blood,
And as a stranger to my heart and me,
Hold thee from this for ever. The barbarous Scythian,
Or he that makes his generation meffes
To gorge his appetite, flall to my bosome
Be as well neighbour’d, pitted, and releue’d,
As thou my sometime Daughter.
Kent. Good my Liege.
Lear. Peace Kent,
Come not betweene the Dragon and his wrath,
I lou’d her most, and thought to fet my rest
On her kind nurserie. Hence and avoid my sight:
So be my graue my peace, as here I glue
Her Fathers heart from her; call Fraser, who stirres?
Call Burgundy, Cornwall, and Alpine.
With my two Daughters Dowres, digest the third,
Let pride, which the cals plainneffe, marry her:
I doe inuenst you loynely with my power,
Preheminence, and all the large effects
That troope with Maiestie. Our selfe by Monthly course,
With reueration of an hundred Knights,
By you to be susain’d, shall our abode
Make with you by due turne, onely we shall retaine
The name, and all th’addition to a King: the Sway,
Reuenne, Execution of the rest,
Beloved Sonnes be yours, which to confirme,
This Coronet part betweene you.
Kent. Royall Lear,
Whom I haue ever honor’d as my King,
Lou’d as my Father, as my Master follow’d,
As my great Patron thought on in my praiers.
Lea. The bow is bent & drawne, make from the shaft.
Kent. Let it fall rather, though the forke invade
The region of my heart, be Kent vnmannerly,
When Lear is mad, what wouldst thou do old man?
Think’t thou that duty shall have dread to speake,
When power to flattery bowes?
To plainneffe honour’s bound,
When Maiestie falls to folly, reforue thy flate,
And in thy best consideration checke

This hideous raconfle, anfwere my life, my judgement:
Thy yongest Daughter do’s not loue thee leaft,
Nor are those empty hearted, whose lowe founds
Reuerbe no hollowneffe.
Lear. Kent, on thy life no more.
Kent. My life I neuer held but as pawne
To wage against thine enemies, nere feare to lose it,
Thy safety being motiuе.
Lear. Out of my sight.
Kent. See better Lear, and let me still remaine
The true blanke of thine ele.
Kent. Now by Apollo,
Lent. Now by Apollo, King
Thou sweare’st thy Gods in vaine.
Lear. O Vaffall! Mifearent.
Alb. Cor. Deare Sir forbeares.
Kent. Kill thy Phyffion, and thy fee bellow
Vpon the foule difafe, revoke thy guift,
Or whilfit I can vent clamour from my throte,
Ile tell thee thou doft euill.
Lea. Heare me recreant, on thine allegance heare me;
That thou haft fought to make vs breake our vows,
Which we durft never yet; and with stain’d pride,
To come betwixt our fentences, and our power,
Which, nor our nature, nor our place can bear;
Our potentie made good, take thy reward.
Five dayes we do allot thee for prouision,
To shield thee from difasters of the world,
And on the fixt to turne thy hated backe
Vpon our kingdom; if on the tenth day following,
Thy banifht truncke be found in our Dominions,
The moment is thy death, away. By Jupiter,
This shall not be reuol’d,
Kent. Fare thee well King, fith thus thou wilt appeare,
Freedome lues hence, and banifhment is here;
The Gods to their deere shelter take thee Maid,
That fufly think’st, and haft moft rightly said:
And your large fpeeches, may your deeds approue,
That good effects may fpring from words of loue:
Thus Kent, O Princes, bids you all adew,
Hee’l shape his old course, in a Country new.
Exit.

Flourish. Enter Glosfer with France, and Burgundy, Attendants.

Cor. Heere’s France and Burgundy, my Noble Lord.
Lear. My Lord of Bugunde,
We first adtreeffe toward you, who with this King
Hath riuald for our Daughter; what in the leaft
Will you require in present Dower with her,
Or ceafe you quest of Loue?
Bar. Moft Royall Maiestye,
I crave no more then hath your Highneffe offer’d,
Nor will you tender lesse?
Lear. Right Noble Burgundy,
When she was deare to vs, we did hold her fo,
But now her price is fallen; Sir, there she stands,
If ought within that little feeming substance,
Or all of it with our diplafeure piec’d,
And nothing more may fitly like your Grace,
Shee’s there, and she is yours.
Bar. I know no answere.
Lear. Will you with those infirmities she owes,
Unfriend, new adopted to our hate,
Dow’d with our curfe, and stranger’d with our oath,
Take her or, ineau her.

Bar. Par-
The Tragedie of King Lear.

Br. Pardon me Royall Sir,
Election makes not vp in such conditions.
Lear. Then leave her sit, for by the powre that made me,
I tell you all her wealth. For you great King,
I would not from your loue make such a stray,
To match you where I hate, therefore beseech you
T'aurt your liking a more worthier way,
Then on a wretch whom Nature is afham'd
Almoft t'acknowlege hers.
Fra. This is most strange,
That she whom euem but now, was your obiect,
The argument of your praife, balme of your age,
The best, the deereft,shoud in this trice of time
Commit a thing fo montrous, to difmantle
So many folds of fauoursure her offence
Must be of such vnnatural degree,
That monsters it: Or your fore-youtht affection
Fall into taint, which to beleue of her
Must be a faith that reafon without miracle
Should neuer plant in me.
Cor. I yet beseech your Maiestie,
If for I want that glib and oylie Art,
To speake and purpofe not, since what I will intend,
Ile do't before I speake, that you make knowne
It is no vicious blot, mutther, or foulenefe,
No vnchaste action or dishonoured step
That hath deftroyed mine of your Grace and fauour,
But euem for want of that, for which I am richer,
A fill folliciting eye, and such a tongue,
That I am glad I have not,though not to have it,
Hath loft me in your liking.
Lear. Better thou hadst it?
Not euene borne,then not th hau'e pleas'd me better.
Fra. Is it but this? A tardinifte in nature,
Which often leues the history vnspoke
That it intends to do : my Lord of Burgundy,
What faie you to the Lady? Loue's not loue
When it is mingled with regards,that stands
Alone from th'intire point, will you hau'e her?
She is herelfie a Dowrie.
Br. RoyallKing,
Glue but that portion which your felife propos'd,
And here I take Cordelia by the hand,
Dutcheffe of Burgundie.
Lear. Nothing, I haue frowne, I am firme.
Br. I am forry then you hau'e so loft a Father,
That you must loofe a husband.
Cor. Peace be with Burgundy,
Since that repect and Fortunes are his loue,
I hau'e not be his wife.
Fra. Faireft Cordelia, that art moft rich being poore,
Moft choyfe forfaken,and moft lou'd defpif'd,
Thee and thy vertues here I felze vpon,
Be it lawfull I take vp what's caft away.
Gods, Gods! 'Tis strange, that from their cold't neglect
My Loue shoud kindle to enam'ed respect.
Thy dowreleffe Daughter King, throwne to my chance,
Is Queene of vs, of ours,and our faire France:
Not all the Dukes of watreth Burgundy,
Can buy this vnpriz'd precious Maid of me.
Bid them farewell Cordelia, though vnkinde,
Thou looefet here a better where to finde.
Lear. Thou haft her France, let her be thine,for we Hau'e no such Daughter, nor shall euer fee
That face of hers againe, therfore be gone,
Without our Grace,our Loue,our Benizton:
$Fra. Bid farwell to your Sifters.
Cor. The Jewels of our Father, with was'd ele a
Cordelia leau'es you, I know you what you are,
And like a Sifter am most loth to call
Your faults as they are named, Loue well our Father
To your professed bofomes I commit him,
But yet alas,lood in his Grace,
I would prefer him to a better place,
So farwell to you both.
Regn. Prefcribe not vs our dutie.
Gen. Let your stydy
Be to content your Lord, who hath receu'ed you
At Fortunes almes you have obedience scant,
And well are worth the want that you haue wanted,
Cor. Time shall vnfold what pleighted cunning hides,
Who covers faults,at laft with shame derides:
Well may you prosper.
Fra. Come my faire Cordelia. Exit France and Cor.
Gen. Sifter, it is not little I haue to say,
Of what moft neerey appertaines to vs both,
I thinke our Father will hence to night. (with vs.
Reg. That's moft certaine, and with you next month
Gen. You fee how full of changes his age is, the obferuation we haue made of it hath beene little,jhe alwaies
Iou'd our Sifter moft,and with what poore judgement he Cath now caft her off, appears too grossely.
Reg. 'Tis the infirmity of his age,yet he hath euer but slanderly knowne himselfe.
Gen. The best and foundeft of his time hath bin but raff,then muft we looke from his age, to receiue not a lone the imperfections of long ingrained condition, but therewhilk the vnruely way-wardnesse, that infrime and cholerick yeares bring with them.
Reg. Such vnconfant starts are we like to haü'e from him, as this of Kent's banishment.
Gen. There is further complement of leave-taking betweene France and him, pray you let vs fit together, if our Father carry authority with such disposition as he beares, this laft furrander of his will but offend vs.
Reg. We shall further think of it.
Gen. We muft do something, and i'th'heate. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Bajlhard.

Bajl. Thou Nature art my Goddesse, to thy Law
My servictes are bound, wherefore should I
Stand in the plague of custome, and permit
The curiositie of Nations, to deprue me?
For that I am some twelue, or fourenne Moonshines
Lag of a Brother? Why Bajlhard? Wherefore bafe
When my Dimensions are as well compact,
My minde as generous, and my shape as true
As honeft Madams issue? Why brand they vs
With Bafe? With busenes Barfphide? Bafe, Bafe?
Who in the lustie health of Nature, take
More compition, and fierce qualitie,
Then doth within a dull flate tyred bed
Goe to th'treating a whole tribe of Pops
Got'tweene a sleepe, and wake? Well then,
Legitimate Edgar, I must hau'e your land,
Our Fathers loue, is to the Bajlhard Edmond,
As to th'legitimate : fine word : Legitimate.
Well, my Legitimate, if this Letter speed,
And my invention thrive, Edmond the base
Shall to the Legitimate: I grow, I prosper:
Now God, stand vp for Balfard.

Enter Gloucester.

Glo. Kent banish'd thus? and France in choler parted?
And the King gone to night? Prefcrib'd his powre,
Confin'd to exhibition? All this done
Wpon the gad? Edmond, how now? What newes?

Baft. So pleafe your Lordship, none.

Glo. Why fo earnefly feeke you to put vp y Letter?

Baft. I know no newes, my Lord.

Glo. What Paper were you reading?

Baft. Nothing my Lord.

Glo. No? what needed then that terrible dispatch of it into your Pocket? The quality of nothing, hath not such neede to hide it felfe. Let's fee: come, if it bee nothing,
I shall not neede Spectacles.

Baft. I beseech you, Sir, pardon mee; it is a Letter from my Brother, that I have not all ore-read; and for so much as I have perus'd, I finde it not fit for your ore-looking.

Glo. Give me the Letter, Sir.

Baft. I shall offend, either to detaine, or glue it:
The Contents, as in part I vnderstand them,
Are too much.

Glo. Let's fee, let's fee.

Baft. I hope for my Brothers lujaffication, hee wrote this but as an eyll, or taye of my Vertue.

Glo.reads. This police, and reuerence of Age, makes the world bitter to the bene of our times: keeps our Fortunes from us, till our oldness cannot rellish them. I begin to finde an idle and fund bondage, in the oppression of aged tyrannys, who prove not as it bath power, but as it is juffer'd. Come to me, that of this I may speake more. If our Father would sleepe till I wak'd him, you shou'd enjoy halfe ba Reuennew for ever, and liue the beloved of your Brother.

Edgar. Hum? Conspicacy! Sleepe till I wak' him, you should enjoy halfe ba Reuennew: my Sonne Edgar, had hee a hand to write this? A heart and braine to breede it in?
When came you to this? Who brought it?

Baft. It was not brought mee, my Lord; there's the running of it. I found it throwne in at the Caftement of my Cloffet.

Glo. You know the charactar to be your Brothers?

Baft. If the matter were good my Lord, I durt sware it were his: but in resepect of that, I wou'd thinke it were not.

Glo. It is his.

Baft. It is his hand, my Lord: but I hope his heart is not in the Contents.

Glo. Has he never before founded you in this busines?

Baft. Neuer my Lord. But I have heard him oft maintaine it to be fit, that Sonnes at perfect age, and Fathers declin'd, the Father should bee as Ward to the Son, and the Sonne manage his Reuennew.

Glo. O Villain, villain: his very opinion in the Letter,
Abhorred Villaine, vnnatural, defettet, brutish
Villaine; worse then brutish: Go sirrah, seeke him: Ile apprehend him. Abominable Villaine, where is he?

Baft. I do not well know my L. If it shall please you to suspend your indignation against my Brother, til you can derive from him better testimony of his intent, you shold run a certaine course: where, if you violently proceed agaunt him, mistaking his purpose, It would make a great gap in your owne Honor, and shakke in pices, the heart of his obedience. I dare pawne downe my life for him, that he hath writ this to feele my affecction to your Honor, & no other pretence of danger.

Glo. Thinke you fo?

Baft. If your Honor judge it meete, I will place you where you shall haue vs conferre of this, and by an Aure-ccular assurance haue your satisfaction, and that without any further delay, then this very Eveneing.

Glo. He cannot bee such a Monster. Edmond feeke him out: winde me into him, I pray you: frame the Bu-ifie after your owne wisdome. I would vntan my felfe, to be in a due resolution.

Baft. I will feeke him Sir, presently: convey the businesse as I shall find means, and acquaint you withall.

Glo. These late Eclipses in the Sun and Moone po-tend no good to vs: though the wisdome of Nature can reafon it thus, and thus, yet Nature finds it felfe foucre'd by the frequent effects. Loue coolers, friendship falls off, Brothers diuide. In Cities, mutinies; in Countries, discord; in Pallaces, Treafon; and the Bond crack'd, 'twixt Sonne and Father. This Villaine of mine comes vnder the prediction; there's Son against Father, the King fals from by as of Nature, there's Father againft Childlde. We have feene the beft of our time. Machinations, hollowneffe, treacherie, and all ruinous disorderes follow vs diuictly to our Graues. Find out this Villain Edmond, it shall lo-thee nothing, do it carefully: and the Noble & true-harted Kent banish'd; his offence, homely, 'Tis strange. Exit Baft.

Baft. This is the excellent foppery of the world, that when we are sicke in fortune, often the surfets of our own beauhour, we make guilty of our disasters, the Sun, the Moone, and Stares, as if we were villains on neccefitie, Foolies by heavenly compulion, Knaues, Theuces, and Treachers by Sphercial predominance. Drunkards, Ly-ars, and Adulterers by an infir'd obedience of Planetary influence; and all that we are eull in, by a diuine thrufning on. An admirable euasion of Whore-mafter-man, to lay his Goathip disposition on the charge of a Starre,
My father compounded with my mother vnder the Da-gons tittle, and my Nature was vnder Vrfa Maior, to that it followes, I am rough and Leacherous. I shound haue bin that I am, had the maidenleft Starre in the FIr-mament twinkled on my battardizing.

Enter Edgar.

Pat: he comes like the Catafrophe of the old Comedie: my Cue is villanous Melancholly, with a fighe like Tom O'Bedlam. —— O these Eclipses do portend these diusions. Fa, Sol, La, Me.

Edg. How now Brother Edmond, what serius contemplation are you in?

Baft. I am thinking Brother of a predicion I read this other day, what should follow these Eclipses.

Edg. Do you boifie your felle with that?

Baft. I promifie you, the effects he writes of, succede vnhappily.

When lawd you my Father left?

Edg. The night gone by.

Baft. Spake you with him?

Edg. I, two hours together.

Baft. Parted you in good termes? Found you no difpleasure in him, by word, nor countenance?

Edg. None at all,

Baft. Benthink your felse wherein you may have offended him: and at my entreaty forbeare his presence, vntill
some little time hath qualified the heat of his displeasure, which at this instant fo rageth in him, that with the mi-chief
chief of your person, it would scarcely alay.

Edg. Some Villain hath done me wrong.

Edm. That's my feare, I pray you have a continent forbearance till the speed of his rage goes flavor: and as I say, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fitly bring you to heare my Lord speake: pray ye goe, there's my key: if you do firre abroad, goe arm'd.

Edg. Arm'd, Brother?

Edm. Brother, I aduice you to the best, I am no honest man, if thee be any good meaning toward you: I have told you what I have feene, and heard: But faintly, Nothing like the image, and horror of it, pray you away.

Edg. Shall I heare from you anon? Exit.

Edm. I do SERUE you in this businesse: A Credulous Father, and a Brother Noble, Whose nature is so farre from doing harms, That he suspects none: on whose foolish honestie My pratfles ride easie: I fee the businesse. Let me, if not by birth, have lands by wit, All with me's meete, that I can fashion fit. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Generill, and Serviard.

Gen. Did my Father strike my Gentleman for chiding of his Foole?

Ste. I Madam.

Gen. By day and night, he wrongs me, every howre He flithes into one groffe crime, or other, That fets vs all at odds: Ile not endure it; His Knights grow riotous, and himselfe vpbraided vs On evry trife. When he returns from hunting, I will not speake with him, say I am sicke, If you come flacke of former services, You shall do well, the fault of it Ile answer.

Ste. He's comming Madam, I hear him.

Gen. Put on what weary negligence you please, You and your Fellowes: I'de have it come to question; If he disfaile it, let him to my Sister, Whose mind and mine I know in that are one, Remember what I have saide.

Ste. Well Madam.

Gen. And let his Knights have colder looks among you: what grows of it no matter, aduise your fellowes so, Ile write straignt to my Sister to hold my course: prepare for dinner.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Kent.

Kent. If but as will I other accents borrow, That can my speech defuald, my good intent May carry through it felle to this full tiffue For which I rate'd my likenesse. Now banish Kent, If thou canst secure whom thou dost fland condemn'd, So may it come, thy Master whom thou lou'st, Shall find thee full of labours.

Hermes within. Enter Lear and Attendants.

Lear. Let me not stay a loot for dinner, go get it readily, and set it down, what art thou?

Kent. A man Sir.

Lear. What dost thou profess? What wouldst thou with vs?

Kent. I do profess to be no less than I seem, to serve him truly that will put me in truelt, to love him that is honest, to concure with him that is wife and faire little, to fear judgement, to fight when I cannot choose, and to eate no fish.

Lear. What art thou?

Kent. A very honest heartfelt Fellow, and as poore as the King.

Lear. If thou be't as poore for a subieqt, as he's for a King, thou art poore enough. What wouldst thou?

Kent. Service.

Lear. Who wouldst thou serue?

Kent. You.

Lear. Do'll thou know me fellow?

Kent. No Sir, but you haue that in your countenance, which I would faile call Master.

Lear. What's that?

Kent. Authority.

Lear. What services canst thou do? Kent. I can keepe honest counselle, ride, run, marre a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plaine message bluntly: that which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualified in, and the best of me, is Dilligence.

Lear. How old art thou?

Kent. Not so young Sir to lose a woman for fingering, nor so old to dote on her for any thing. I haue yeares on my backe forty eight.

Lear. Follow me, thou shalt serue me, if I like thee not, after dinner, I will not part from thee yet. Dinner be, dinner, where's my knave? my Foole? Go you and call my Foole hither. You—you Sirrah, where's my Daughter?

Exit Steward.

Ste. So please you —— Exit.

Lear. What faies the Fellow there? Call the Cot-pole backe: wher's my Foole? Ho, I thinkke the world's asleepe, how now? Where's that Mungrell?

Knigh. He faies my Lord, your Daughters is not well. Lear. Why came not the flauqe backe to me when I call'd him?

Knigh. Sir, he answer'd me in the roundest manner, he would not.

Lear. He would not?

Knigh. My Lord, I know not what the matter is, but to my judgement your Highness is not entertain'd with that Ceremonious affέction as you were wont, thers a great abatement of kindnesse appears as well in the generall dependants, as in the Duke himselfe also, and your Daughter.

Lear. Ha! Saist thou so?

Knigh. I beseech you pardon me my Lord, if I bee mistaken, for my duty cannot be silent, when I thinkke your Highness wrong'd.

Lear. Thou but rememberst me of mine owne Conception, I have percurued a most faint neglig of late, which I have rather blamed as mine owne jealous curiosite, then as a very pretence and purpose of vnkindnesse; I will looke further into't: but where's my Foole? I haue not seen him this two daies.

Knigh. Since my young Ladies going into France Sir,
Sir, the Foole hath much pined away.

Lear. No more of that, I have noted it well, goe you and tell my Daughter, I would speake with her. Goe you call hither my Foole; Oh you Sir, you, come you hither Sir, who am I Sir?

Enter Steward.

Ste. My Ladies Father.

Lear. My Ladies Father? my Lords knaue, you whor-son dog, you slauie, you curre.

Ste. I am none of thefe my Lord, I befeech your pardon.

Lear. Do you bandy lookes with me, you Rascall?

Ste. Ile not be strickn my Lord.

Kent. Nor trippe neither, you base Foot-ball plaier.

Lear. I thanke thee fellow.

Thou sawst me, and Ile loue thee.

Kent. Come fir, arife, away, Ile teach you differences: away, away, if you will measure your lubbers length a-gaine, tarry, but away, goe too, have you wildefome, so.

Lear. Now my friendly knaue, I thanke thee, there's earneft of thy feruice.

Enter Foole.

Foole. Let me hire him too, here's my Coxcombe.

Lear. How now my pretty knaue, how doft thou?

Foole. Sirrah, you were beft take my Coxcombe.

Lear. Why my Boy?

Foole. Why? for taking ones part that is out of fauour, nay, & thou canst not flume as the wind fits, thou't catch colde shortly, there take my Coxcombe; why this fellow ha's banish'd two on's Daughters, and did the third a blemiff against his will, if thou follow him, thou must needs ware my Coxcombe. How now Nuncle? would I had two Coxcombes and two Daughters.

Lear. Why my Boy?

Foole. If I gueue them all my liuing, I'll keepe my Coxcombs my felfe, there's mine, beg another of thy Daughters.

Lear. Take heed Sirrah, the whip.

Foole. Truth's a dog muff to kennell, hee must bee whipt out, when the Lady Brach may stand by'th'fire and flanke.

Lear. A peffilent gall to me.

Foole. Sirha, Ile teach thee a speech.

Lear. Do.

Foole. Marke it Nuncle; Haue more then thou howeft, Speake leffe then thou knoweft, Lend leffe then thou oweft, Ride more then thou goeff, Learne more then thou troweft, Set leffe then thou troweft; Leave thy drinke and thy where, And keepe in a dore, And thou shalt have more, Then two tens to a fcore.

Kent. This is nothing Foole.

Foole. Then 'tis like the breath of a vnfeed Lawyer, you gueue me nothing for't, can you make no vfe of nothing Nuncle?

Lear. Why no Boy, Nothing can be made out of nothing.

Foole. Prythee tell him, so much the rent of his land comes to, he will not beleue a Foole.

Lear. A bitter Foole.

Foole. Do'ft thou know the difference my Boy, betweene a bitter Foole, and a sweet one.

Lear. No Lad, teach me.

Foole. Nuncle, giue me an egge, and ile giue thee two Crownes.

Lear. What two Crownes shall they be?

Foole. Why after I haue cut the egge i'th'middle and eate vp the meate, the two Crownes of the egge: when thou cloueft thy Crownes i'th'middle, and gau'ft away both parts, thou boarft this line Aile on thy backe o're the durt, thou had'ft little wit in thy hald crowne, when thou gau'lt thy golden one away; if I speake like my felte in this, let him be whipt that firft finds it fo.

Fooles had nere leffe grace in a yeere,

For wilfemen are growne fopiff,

And know not how their wits to weare,

Their manners are fo aph.

Le. When were you wont to be fo full of Songs sirrah?

Foole. I have vied it Nuncle, ere since thou mad'ft thy Daughters thy Mothers, for when thou gau'ft them the rod, and put't downe thine owne breeches, then they for faine joy did wepe,

And I for forrow foun't

That such a King shou'd play bo-peepe,

And goe the Foole among.

Pry'thy Nuncle keepe a Schoolemafter that can teach thy Foole to lie, I would faine learn to lie.

Lear. And you lie sirrah, we'll have you whipt.

Foole. I manuell what kin thou and thy daughters are, they'll haue me whipt for speaking true: thou'lt haue me whipt for lying, and sometimes I am whipt for holding my peace. I had rather be any kind o'thing then a foil, and yet I would not be thee Nuncle, thou haft pared thy wit o'both fides, and left nothing i'th'middle; heere comes one o'th'parings.

Enter Garnirill.

Lear. How now Daughter? what makes that Frontlet on? You are too much of late i'th'crowne.

Foole. Thou waft a pretty fellow when thou hadft no need to care for her frowning, now thou art an O without a figure, I am better then thou art now, I am a Foole, thou art nothing. Yes forsooth I will hold my tongue, so your face bids me, though you fay nothing.

Mum, mum, he that keepes nor cruft, nor crum, Weary of all, shall want fome. That's a heal'd Pefcod.

Gen. Not only Sir this, your all-lycenc'd Foole, But other of your influent reitue

Do hourely Carpe and Quarril, breaking forth
In ranke, and (not to be endur'd') riots Sir,
I had thought by making this well knowne vnto you,
To haue found a fale redreffe, but now grow fearefull
By what your felte too late haue spoke and done,
That you protect this courfe, and put it on
By your allowance, which if you should, the fault
Would not scape cenure, nor the redreffes feepes,
Which in the tender of a wholefome weale,
Might in their working do you that offence,
Which els were shame, that then neccessifie
Will call di'dreet proceeding.

Foole. For you know Nuncle, the Hedge-Sparrow fed the Cuckoo to long, that it's had it head bit off by it young, fo out went the Candle, and we were left darklings.

Lear. Are you our Daughter? (dome

Gen. I would you would make vfe of your good wife-
(Whereof I know you are fraught,) and put away
These disposi'tions, which of late transport you
From what you rightly are.

Foole. May
The Tragedie of King Lear.

Fool. May not an Asse know, when the Cart draws the Horse?

Whoop lugge I love thee.

Lear. Do's any here know me?

This is not Lear:

Do's Lear walke thus? Speake thus? Where are his eies?

Either his Notion weakness, his Differnings

Are lethargied. Ha! Waking? 'Tis not so?

Who is it that can tell me who I am?

Fool. Lear's shadow.

Lear. Your name, faire Gentlemewoman?

Gen. This admiration Sir, is much o'th'fault.

Of other your new pranks. I do beseech you

To vnderstand my purposes aright:

As you are Old, and Reuerend, should be Wise.

Here do you keepe a hundred Knights and Squires,

Men so disorder'd, so debased, and bold,

That this our Court infected with their manners,

Shews like a riotous Inne; Epicurism and Lust

Makes it more like a Tauerne, or a Brothell,

Then a grac'd Pallace. The flame it selfe doth speake

For infant remedy. Be then defir'd

By her, that else will take the thing the begges,

A little to disquity your Traine,

And the remanders that shall still depend,

To be such men as may befor your Age,

Which know themselfes, and you.

Lear. Darkneffe, and Diuels.

Saddle my horseyes: call my Traine together.

Degenerate Bard, Ie not trouble thee;

Yet hane I left a daughter.

Gen. You strike my people, and your disorder'd rable, make Servants of their Betteres.

Enter Albany.

Lear. Woe, that too late repents:

Is it your will, speake Sir? Prepare my Horseyes.

Ingratitude! thou Marble-hearted Fiend,

More hideous when thou shew'st thee in a Child,

Then the Sea-monster.

Alb. Pray Sir be patient.

Lear. Deceited Kite, thou lyest.

My Trainers are men of choice, and rarest parts,

That all particulars of dudd stoow,

And in the most exact regard, support

The worships of their name. O most small fault,

How vygly did't thou in Cordelia shew?

Which like an Engine, wretch my frame of Nature

From the first place: drew from my heart all love,

And added to the gall. O Lear, Lear, Lear!

Beate at this gate that let thy folly in,

And thy deere judgment out. Go, go, my people.

Alb. My Lord, I am guiltieffe, as I am ignorant

Of what hath mowed you.

Lear. It may be fo, my Lord.

Heare Nature, heare deere Goddefe, heare:

Suspend thy purpos, if thou didst intend

To make this Creature fruitful:

Into her Wombe conuey fertility,

Drie vp in her the Organs of increas,

And from her derogate body, neuer spring

A Babe to honor her. If the must teeme,

Create her childe of Spieene, that it may live

And be a thwart disfatur'd torment to her.

Let it flame wrinkles in her brow of youth,

With cadent Teares fret Channels in her cheekes,

Turne all her Mothers paines, and benefits

To laughter, and contempt: That she may feele,

How sharper then a Serpents tooth it is,

To have a thanklesse Childie. Away, away.

Alb. Now Gods that we adore,

Whereof comes this?

Gen. Neuer affild your selfe to know more of it:

But let his disposition have that scope

As dotage giues it.

Enter Lear.

Lear. What fiftie of my Followers at a clap?

Within a fortnight?

Alb. What's the matter, Sir?

Lear. Ile tell thee:

Life and death, I am allham'd

That thou haft power to shake my manhood thus,

That these hot teares, which brake from me perforne

Should make thee worth them.

Blasfes and Fogges vpon thee:

Th'vntented woundings of a Fathers curfe

Pierce euerie fenfe about thee. Old fond eyes,

Beweewe this caufe againe, Ie plucke ye out,

And caft you with the waters that you looie

To temper Clay. Ha? Let it be fo.

I haue another daughter,

Who I am fure is kinde and comfortable:

When she shall heare this of thee, with her nailes

She'll flea thy Woluhs vilage. Thou shalt finde,

That Ie refume the shape which thou doft thinkte

I haue cast off for euer.

Gen. Do you marke that?

Alb. I cannot be fo partiall Gonerill,

To the great loue I bear you.

Gen. Pray you content.

What Ofwald, hoa?

You Sir, more Knaue then Fool, after your Master.

Fool. Nunkle Lear, Nunkle Lear,

Tarry, take the Foolie with thee:

A Fox, when one has caught her,

And fuch a Daughter,

Should fure to the Slaughter,

If my Cap would buy a Halter,

So the Foolie followes after.

Gen. This man hath had good Counsell,

A hundred Knights?

'Tis politike, and safe to let him keepe

At point a hundred Knights: yes, that on euerie dreame,

Each bus, each fancie, each complaint, dislike,

He may enguird his dotage with their powsres,

And hold our liues in mercy. Ofwald, I say.

Alb. Well, you may feeare too farre.

Gen. Safer then truft too farre;

Let me till take away the harms I feeare,

Not fearre till be taken. I know his heart,

What he hath vter'd I haue writ my Sifter:

If the sufaine him, and his hundred Knights

When I haue shew'd th'vntnetted.

Enter Steward.

How now Ofwald?

What haue you writ that Letter to my Sifter?

Stew. I Madam.

Gen. Take you some company, and away to horfe,

Informe her full of my particular feare,

And thereto addt suche reasons of your owne,

As may compact it more. Get you gone,
The Tragedy of King Lear.

And hasten your returns; no, no, my Lord,
This milky gentleness, and course of yours
Though I condemn not, yet vnder pardon
Your are much more at task for want of wifedome,
Then prais'd for harmesfull milneffe.

Alb. How farte your eyes may pierce I cannot tell;
Striving to better, oft we marre what's well.

Gen. Nay then —
Alb. Well, well, the'uent.

Enter Lear, Kent, Gentleman, and Fools.

Lear. Go you before to Gloster with these Letters; acquaint my Daughter no further with any thing you know, then comes from her demand out of the Letter, if your Dilligence be not speedy, I shall be there afore you.

Kent. I will not sleepe, my Lord, till I haue delievered your Letter.

Exit

Fool. Then I prithee be merry, thy wit shall not go flip-flod.

Lear. Ha, ha, ha.

Fool. Shalt fee thy other Daughter will vfe thee kind ly, for though she's as like this, as a Crabbe's like an Apple,yet I can tell what I can tell.

Lear. What can't tell Boy?

Fool. She will taste as like this as, a Crabbe do's to a Crab : thou can't tell why one nofe stands i'th'middle on's face?

Lear. No.

Fool. Why to keepe ones eyes of either side's nofe, that what a man cannot smell out, he may spy into.

Lear. I did her wrong.

Fool. Can't tell how an Oyster makes his shell?

Lear. No.

Fool. Nor I neither; but I can tell why a Snaile ha's a house.

Lear. Why?

Fool. Why to put's head in, not to give it away to his daughters, and leave his horns without a cafe.

Lear. I will forget my Nature, so kind a Father? Be my Horses ready?

Fool. Thy Affes are gone about 'em; the reason why the feuen Starres are no mo then fructs, is a pretty reason.

Lear. Because they are not eight.

Fool. Yes indeed, thou would'st make a good Fools.

Lear. To talk'g againe perfecce, Monfer Ingratitude!

Fool. If thou wert my Fools Nunckle, Ild haue thee beaten for being old before thy time.

Lear. How's that?

Fool. Thou shouldst not haue bin old, till thou hadft bin wife.

Lear. O let me not be mad, not mad sweet Heaven : keepe me in temper, I would not be mad. How now are the Horfes ready?

Gent. Ready my Lord.

Lear. Come Boy.

Fool. She that's a Maid now, & laughs at my departure,
Shall not be a Maid long, vnlesse things be cut shorter.

Exeunt

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Bafard, and Curan, seurally.

Baf. Save thee Curan.

Cur. And your Sir, I haue bin
With your Father, and given him notice
That the Duke of Cornwall, and Regan his Duchess
Will be here with him this night.

Baf. How comes that?

Cur. Nay I know not, you haue heard of the newes a-broad, I meane the whiper'd ones, for they are yet but ear-e-killing arguments.

Baf. Not I : pray you what are they?

Cur. Haue you heard of no likely Warres toward
'Twixt the Dukes of Cornwall, and Albany?

Baf. Not a word.

Cur. You may do then in time,
Fare you well Sir.

Baf. The Duke be here to night ? The better beft,
This weaves it selfe perfecce into my businesse,
My Father hath fet guard to take my Brother,
And I have one thing of a queazie queation
Which I must act, Brefeneffe, and Fortune worke.

Enter Edgar.

Brother, a word, diffend; Brother I say,
My Father watches: O Sir, fly this place,
Intelligence is gluen where you are hid;
You have now the good advantage of the night,
Have you not spoken 'gainst the Duke of Cornwall?
Hee's comming hither, now 'tis 'night, 'tis' hate;
And Regan with him, haue you nothing fay'd
Vpon his partie 'gainst the Duke of Albany?

Adieu your felke.

Edg. I am sure on't, not a word.

Baf. I hear my Father comming, pardon me:
In cunning, I must draw my Sword vpon you:
Draw, seeme to defend your selfe,
Now quit you well.

Yeald, come before my Father, light hoa, here,
Fly Brother, Torches, Torches, fo farewell.

Exit Edgar.

Some blood drawne on me, would beget opinion
Of my more fierce endeauour. I haue fene drunkards
Do more then this in sport; Father, Father,
Stop, flap, no helpe?

Enter Gloster, and Servants with Torches.

Glo. Now Edmund, where's the villaines?

'Baf. Here flod he in the dark, his sharp Sword out,
Mumbling of wicked charmes, confuering the Moore
To stand auspicious Miftris.

Glo. But where is he?

'Baf. Looke Sir, I bleed.

Glo. Where is the villaines, Edmund?

'Baf. Fleed this way Sir, when by no meanes he could.

Glo. Pursue him, ho: go after. By no meanes, what?

'Baf. Persuade me to the murther of your Lordship, But
But that I told him the reuenging Gods,
'Gainst Pariciles did all the thunder bend,
Spoke with how manifold, and strong a Bond
The Child was bound toth' Father; Sir in fine,
Seeing how lothly opposite I stood
To his vnnatural purpole, in fell motion
With his prepared Sword, he charges home
My vnprouided body, latch'd mine arme;
And when he saw my best armur'd spirits
Bold in the quarrels right, rouz'd to th'encounter,
Or whether gazed by the noyse I made,
Full fodiainely he fled.

Glo. Let him fly farre:
Not in this Land shali he remaine vncaught
And found: dispatch, the Noble Duke my Master,
My worthy Arch and Patron comes to night,
By his authoritie I will proclaime it,
That he which finds him shali deserve our thankes,
Bringing the murderous Coward to the stake:
He that conceals him death.

Baf. When I diffwaded him from his intent,
And found him pight to doe it, with curt speech
I threaten'd to discover him; he replied,
Thou vnposing Balfart, dost thou thinke,
If I would stand against thee, would the reposall
Of any truft, vertue, or worth in thee
Make thy words faith'd? No, what should I deny,
As this I would, though thou didst produce
My very Character I'd turne it all
To thy suggestion, plot, and damned practive:
And thou must make a dullard of the world,
If they not thought the profits of my death
Were very pregnant and potentall spirits
To make thee feele it.

Glo. O strange and faifned Villaine,
Would he deny his Letter, said he?
Harke, the Dukes Trumpets, I know not wher he comes;
All Ports Ie barre, the villaine shali not scape,
The Duke must grant me that: besides, his picture
I will send farre and nere, that all the kingdom
May have due note of him, and of my land,
(Loyall and naturall Boy) Ie worke the meanes
To make thee capable.

Enter Cornwal, Regan, and Attendants.

Carn. How now my Noble friend, since I came hither
(Which I can call but now,) I have heard strangeaffe.
Reg. If it be true, all vengeance comes too short
Which can pursuie th'offender; how doth my Lord?
Glo. O Madam, my old heart is crack'd, it's crack'd.
Reg. What, did my Fathers Godsfonne feeke your life?
He whom my Father nam'd, your Edgair?
Glo. O Lady, Lady, shame would have it hid.
Reg. Was he not companion with the riotous Knights
That tended upon my Father?
Glo. I know not Madam, 'tis too bad, too bad.
Baf. Yes Madam, he was of that confornt.
Reg. No maruaile then, though he were ill affected,
'Tis they have put him on the old mans death,
To have the expense and waft of his Revenues:
I have this present evening from my Sister
Been well informed of them, and with such cautions,
That if they come to foulorne at my house,
Ie not be there.

Car. Nor I, affurre thee Regan;

Edmund, I heare that you have thewme yout Father
A Child-like Office.

Baf. It was my duty Sir.
Glo. He did bewray his practive, and receiu'd
This hurt you fece, striving to apprehend him.

Car. Is he pursu'd?

Glo. I my good Lord.
Car. If he be taken, he shall never more
Be fear'd of doing harme, make your owne purpole,
How in my strength you please for you Edmund,
Whole vertue and obedience doth this infant
So much commend it selfe, you shall be ours,
Nature's of such deepe truth, we shall much need:
You we shal feele on.

Baf. I shall ferue you Sir truely, how ever else.
Glo. For him I thanke your Grace.
Car. You know not why we came to visit you?
Reg. Thus out of feaon, threddring darke ey'd night,
Occations Noble Gloster of some prize,
Wherein we must haue vie of your aduice.
Our Father he hath writ, so hath our Sister,
Of differences, which I beft thought it fit
To anfwere from our home: the feuerall Messengers
From hence attend dispatch, our good old Friend,
Lay comforts to your bofome, and beffow
Your needless counsfale to our busineses,
Which craves the instant vie.

Glo. I ferue you Madam,
Your Graces are right welcome.  Exeunt. Flourish.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Kent, and Seward feuerally.

Sew. Good dawning to the Friend, art of this house?
Kent. T.
Sew. Where may we fet our horfes?
Kent. I thymyre.
Sew. Prytheee, if thou lou'nt me, tell me.
Kent. I loue thee not.
Sew. Why then I care not for thee.
Kent. If I had thee in Lipsbury Pinfield, I would make thee care for me.
Sew. Why do'th thou vfe me thus? I know thee not.
Kent. Fellow I know thee.
Sew. What do'lt thou know me for?
Kent. A Knave, a Rascal, an eater of broken meats, a eafe, proud, shallow, beggarly, three-faited hundred pound, filthy woode-d-flicking knowe, a Lilly-livered, action-taking, whoreon glafs-gazing super-lievicable finicall Roguer, one Truncke-inheriting flawe, one that would't be a Baud in way of good servuce, and art noththing but the composition of a Knave, Beggar, Coward, Pandar, and the Sonne and Heire of a Mungrill Bitch,
one whom I will beate into cloumous whining, if thou deny't the least lifiable of thy addition.

Sew. Why, what a monftrous Fellow art thou, thus to raile on one, that is neither knowne of thee, nor knowes thee?

Kent. What a brazan-fie'd Varlet thou, to deny thou knowest me? Is it two days since I tript vp thy heeles, and beate thee before the King? Draw you rogue, for for though it be night, yet the Moone shines, Ie make a fop oth' Moonshine ofyou, you whorefon Culleyly
Barber-monger, draw.

Ste. Away, I have nothing to do with thee.
Kent. Draw you Rafcall, you come with Letters againft the King, and take Vaniti the puppets part, againft the Royaltie of her Father : draw you Rogue, or Ile fo carbonado your thanks, draw you Rafcall, come your wales.

Ste. Helpe, ho, murther, helpe.
Kent. Strike you flau: fland rogue, fland you next flau, strike.

Ste. Helpe hoa, murther, murther.

Enter Baflard, Cornwall, Regan, Glover, Servants.

Kent. With you goodman Boy, if you pleafe, come,
Ile flesh ye, come on yong Mafter.
Glo. Weapons? Armes? what's the matter here?
Cor. Kpeepe peace vpon your liues, he dies that strikes again, what is the matter?
Reg. The Meffengers from our Sifter, and the King?
Cor. What is your difference, speake?
Ste. I am fcarce in breath my Lord.
Kent. No Marsuell, you have fo beflid your valour, you cowardly Rafcall,nature dicaimes in theea Taylors made thee.
Cor. Thou art a strange fellow, a Taylor make a man?
Kent. A Taylor Sir, a Stone-cutter, or a Painter, could not have made him fo ill, though they bin but two years oth trade.
Cor. Speake yet, how grew your quarrell?
Ste. This ancient Ruffian Sir, whole life I have fpard at fute of his gray-beard.
Kent. Thou whoren Zed, thou vnneceffary letter:
your Lord, if you will give me leaue, I will tread this vn-boulted villain into morter, and daube the wall of a Takes with him. Spare my gray-beard, you wastale?
Cor. Peace farewell,
You beafly knaue, know you no reuerence?
Kent. Yes Sir, but anger hath a priuiledge.
Cor. Why art thou angrie?
Kent. That fuch a flau as this should weare a Sword,
Who weares no honefthy fuch smilling rogues as thefe,
Like Rats oft bite the holy cordis swaine,
Which are t'intrine, t'vnlofe : smooth every paflion
That in the natures of their Lords reball,
Being oile to fire, fnow to the colder moode
Revenge, affire, and turne their Halcon beakes
With every gall, and vary of their Mafter,
Knowing a light (like dogges) but following:
A plaque vpon your Epilepticke vilage,
Smoile you my specheese, as I were a Foole?
Goofe,if I had you vpon Sarum Plaine,
I'd drive you cackling home to Camelot.

Cor. What art thou mad old Fellow?
Glof. How fell you out, fay that?
Kent. No conrades hold more antipathy,
Then f, and fuch a knaue.

Cor. Why do'ft thou call him Knaua?
What is his fault?
Kent. His countenance like me not.
Cor. No more periance do's mine, nor his, nor hers.
Kent. Sir, tis my occupation to be plaine,
I haue teene better faces in my time,
Glue you good morrow.

Glo. The Duke’s too blame in this,
’Twill be ill taken.

Kent. Good King, that must approve the common saw,
Thou out of Heauens benediction com’st
To the warme Sun.
Approach thou Beacon to this vnder Globe,
That by thy comfortable Beaumes I may
Peruse this Letter. Nothing almost sees miracles
But miferie. I know ’ts from Cordelia,
Who hath most fortunately beene inform’d
Of my obscured course. And shall finde time
From this enormous State, seeking to give Lostes their remedies. All weary and o’re-watch’d,
Take vantage haueie eyes, not to behold
This shamefull lodging. Fortune goodnight,
Smile once more, turne thy wheel.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. I heard my felfe proclaim’d,
And by the happy hollow of a Tree,
Elseap’d the hunt. No Port is free, no place
That guard, and most vnfall vigilance
Do’s not attend my taking. Whiles I may scape
I will prefume myfelfe: and am bethought
To take the bafeft, and moft pooreft shape
That ever penury in contempt of man,
Brought neere to beaft; my face 1e grime with filth,
Blanket my loines, elfe all my haires in knots,
And with prefented nakednoffe out-face
The Windes, and perfecutions of the skie;
The Country gues me prooffe, and president
Of Bedlam beggers, who with roaring voices,
Strike in their num’d and mortifed Armes,
Pins, Wodden-prickes, Nayles, Sprigs of Rosemarie:
And with this horrible obiect, from low Farmes,
Poore pelting Villages, Sheeps-Coates, and Milles,
Sometimes with Lunaticke bands, sometime with Praiers
Inforce their charitie: poore Tarlygod, poore Tom,
That’s something yet: Edgar I nothing am.

Enter Lear, Foole, and Gentleman.

Lear. ’Tis a strange that they shou’d so depart from home,
And not fend backe my Meffengers.

Gent. As I learn’d,
The night before, there was no purpoce in them
Of this remoue.

Kent. Hailie to thee Noble Master.

Lear. Ha! Mak’st thou this flame ah by pastime?

Kent. No my Lord.

Foole. Hah, ha, he weares Cruell Garters Horfes are tide by the heads, Dogges and Beares by’th’necke, Monkies by’th’loynes, and Men by’th’legs: when a man ouerluftie at legs, then he weares wodden nether-stocks.

Lear. What’s he,
That hath so much thy place misdeoke
To fet thee heere?

Kent. It is both he and fhe,
Your Son, and Daughter.

Lear. No.

Kent. Yes.

Lear. No I say.

Kent. I fay yea.

Lear. By Jupiter I fwear no.

Kent. By Iuuu, I fwear I.

Lear. They durft not do’t:
They could not, would not do’t: ’tis worse then mutter,
To do vpun reftect fuch violent outrage:
Refolute me with all modest hate, which way
Thou might’t deferue, or they impofo this ufage,
Comming from vs.

Kent. My Lord, when at their home
I did commend your Highneffe Letters to them,
Ere I was rifen from the place, that flewed
My duty kneeling, came there a reeking Poufe,
Stew’d in his hate, halfe breathleffe, painting forth
From Generall his Miaffra, felutions;
Delier’d Letters fpight of intermifion,
Which prefently they read; on tho’ contents
They fummon’d vp their meinyc, ftraight tooke Horfe,
Commanded me to follow, and attend
The leifure of their anfwer, gave me cold lookes,
And meeting heere the other Meffenger,
Whofe welcome I percei’d had poiffon’d mine,
Being the very fellow which of late
Displaid fow wifely againft your Highneffe,
Hauing more man then wit about me, drew;
He rais’d the house, with loud and coward cries,
Your Sonne and Daughter found this trepaffie worth
The fame which howe it fuffers.

Foole. Winters not gon yet, if the wil’d Geefe fly that Fathers that weare rags, do make their Children blind,
But Fathers that beare bags, fhall fee their children kind.
Fortune that araint whore, nere turns the key toth’ poore.
But for all this thou fhalt haue as many Dolors for thy Daughters, as thou can’t tell in a yare.

Lear. Oh how this Mother fweels vp toward my heart!
Hisrorica paffos, downe thou climbing forrow,
Thy Elements below where is this Daughter?

Kent. Wirh the Earle Sir, here within.

Lear. Follow me not, stay here.

Gen. Made you no more offence,
But what you fpeak of?

Kent. None:
How chance the the King comes with fo small a number?

Foole. And thou hadft beene fet ith’Stockes for this question, thould’r well defuer’d it.

Kent. Why Foole?

Foole. Wee’l fet thee to schooles to an Ant, to teach thee ther’o labouring ith’ winter. All that follow their noyes, are led by their eyes, but blinde men, and there’s not a nofe among twenty, but can smell him that’s finking;
let go thy hold, when a greatwheele runs downe a hill, leaff it breake thy necke with following. But the great one that goes vpward, let him drawe thee after:
when a wifeman glues thee better counfell glue me mine
againe, I would hauie none but knaues follow it, since a Foole gives it.

That Sir, which fereues and theekeets for gaine,
And folo wees but for forme;
Will packe, when it begins to raine,
And leve thee in the fiorre,
But I will tarry, the Foole will stay,
And let the wifeman flie:
The knaue turns Foole that runs away,
The Foole no knaue perdie.

Enter Lear, and Glosier.

Kent. Where learn’d you this Foole?

Foole. Not ith’Stocks Foole.

Lear.
for though it be night,yet the Moone shines, Ie make a top oth' Moonshine of you, you whoreon Callyenly

Barber-monger,drawing.

What is his fault?

Kent. His countenance like me not.

Cor. No more perchance do's mine, nor his,nor hers.

Kent. Sire, 'tis my occupation to be plaine,

I haue feene better faces in my time,
Glue you good morrow.

Gloucester. The Duke's too blame in this,
'Twill be ill taken.

Kent. Good King, that must approve the common law,
Thou out of Heauens benediction com'rt
To the warme Sun.

Approach thou Beacon to this vnder Globe,
That by thy comfortable Beames I may

Lear. What's he,
That hath so much thy place mißtooke
To fet thee here?

Kent. It is both he and she,
Your Son, and Daughter.

Lear. No.

Kent. Yes.

Lear. No I say.

Kent. I say yea.

Lear. By Jupiter I sweare no.
Lear. Deny to speake with me?
They are fickle, they are weary, They haue trouw'd all the night? meere fetches, The images of rest and flying off. Fetch me a better answer.

Glo. My deere Lord, You know the fiery quality of the Duke, How vremouable and fit he is In his owne course.

Glo. Well my good Lord, I have inform'd them so.Lear. Inform'd them? Do'th thou vnderstand me man.

Glo. I my good Lord.

Lear. The King would speake with Cornwall, The deere Father
Would with his Daughter speake, commands, tend, fer-
Are they inform'd of this? My breath and blood: (vnce, Fiery? The fiery Duke, tell the hot Duke that
No, but not yet, may be he is not well,
Infirmity doth still neglect all office, Whereeto our health is bound, we are not our felues, When Nature being oppressed, commands the mind To fittest with the body, Ile forbear, And am fallen out with my more headier will, To take the indispos'd and fickly fit,
For the found man. Death on my fiate: wherefore Should he fite here? This is a perwades me, That that remotion of the Duke and her Is prudifie only. Give me my Servant forth; Goe tell the Duke, and his wife, I'll speake with them: Now, presently: bid them come forth and heare me, Or at their Chamber doore Ile beate the Drum, Till it crie sleepe to death.

Glo. I would have all well betwixt you.Exit.

Lear. Oh me my heart! My rifting heart! But downe.

Fedr. Cry to it Nanckle, as the Cockney did to the Ecles, when he put em 'th' Paffe alue, the knap 'em o'th' coxcombs with a flicke, and cryed downe wantons, downe; 'twas her Brother, that in pure kindnesse to his Horfe buttered his Hay.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, Gloster, Servants.

Lear. Good morrow to you both.

Corn. Haille to your Grace.Kent bett ret at liberty.

Reg. I am glad to fee your Highnesse.

Lear. Regan, I thinke your are, I know what reason Ihaue to think so, if thou should'ft not be glad, I would divorce me from thy Mother Tombes, Seulplishing an Adultrefe. O are you free?

Some other time for that. Beloved Regan,
Thy Sifters naught: oh Regan, the hath tied Sharpe-tooth'd vnkindnesse, like a vulture here, I can scarce speake to thee, thou't not beleue With how deprau'd a quality. Oh Regan.

Reg. I pray you Sir, take patience, I haue hope You leffe know how to value her defect, Then fhe to fcent her dutie.

Lear. Say? How is that?

Reg. I cannot thinke my Sifter in the leaff Would falle her Obligation. If Sir perchance She haue reftained the Rots of your Followres, 'Tis on fuch ground, and to fuch wholesome end, As cleere her from all blame.

Lear. My curfes on her.

Reg. O Sir you are old, Nature in you flands on the very Verge Of his confine; you should be rul'd, and led By fome diñer, that difcernes your flate Better then you your felle: therefore I pray you, That to our Sifter, you do make returne, Say you have wrong'd her.

Lear. Askhe her forgiuenefie?
Do you but marke how this becomes the house? Deere daughter, I confesse that I am old;
Age is vneceffarie: on my knees I begge,
That you'll vouchsafe me Raymond, Bed, and Food.

Reg. Good Sir, no more: these are vnftightly trickes; Returne you to my Sifter.

Lear. Neuer Regan:
She hath abated me of halfe my Traine; Look'd blacke vpon me, fleroke me with her Tongue Moft Serpent-like, vpon the very Heart.
All the fior'd Vengeances of Heauen, fall On her ingratefull top: strike her yong bones You taking Ayres, with Lamentifie.

Corn. Eye fit, fie.

Lat. You nimble Lightnings, dart your blinding flames Into her fcornefull eye: Infetl her Beauty, You Fen-fuck'd Foggles, drawne by the powfull Sunne, To fall, and blifter.

Reg. O the bleft Gods!
So will you with on me, when the raff moode is on.

Lear. No Regan, thou fhalter neuer have my curfe:
Thy tender-hefted Nature shall not giue Thee o're to hardnesse: Her eyes are fierce, but thine Do comfort, and not burne. 'Tis not in thee To grudge my pleasures, to cut off my Traine, To bandy haffy words, to fcnt my fizes, And in conclusion, to oppole the bolt Against my comming in. Thou better know'ft The Offices of Nature, bond of Childhood, Effects of Curyfie, dues of Gratitude:
Thy halfe o'th'Kingdome haft thou not forgot, Wherein I thee endow'd.

Reg. Good Sir, to'th'purpofe.

Lear. Who put my man i'th'Stockes?

Enter Steward.

Corn. What Trumpet's that?
Reg. I know't, my Sifters: this approves her Letter, That the would foone be heere. Is your Lady come?

Lear. This is a Slaue, whole eafie borrowed pride Dwells in the fickly grace of her he follows, Out Variet, from my fight.

Corn. What means your Grace?

Enter Cornewall.

Lear. Who flockt my Servant? Regan, I haue good hope Thou did't not know on't.

Who comes here? O Heauens!
If you doe loue old men; if your sweet fway Allow Obedience; if you your felues are old, Make it your caufe: Send downe, and take my part. Art not afham'd to looke vpon this Beard? O Regan, will you take her by the hand?

Gen. Why not by'th'hand Sir? How haue I offended? All's not offence that indiñeration findes, And dotage termes fo.

Lear. O fides, you are too tough! Will you yet hold?
How came my man i'th'Stockes?

Corn. I fet him there, Sir: but his owne Diforders

The Tragedie of King Lear.
The Tragedie of King Lear.

Deferu’d much leffe advancememt.
Lear. You? Did you?
Reg. I pray you Father being weake, feme fo.
If till the expiration of your Moneth
You will return to fowrourne with my Sister,
Difmissing halfe your traine, come then to me,
I am now from home, and out of that prouicion
Which shall be needfull for your entertainment.
Lear. Returne to her? and fifty men difmis’d?
No, rather I abufe all rooffes, and chufe
To wage against the emmity oth’yare,
To be a Comrade with the Wolfe, and Owle,
Neeceflities sharpe pincon. Returne with her?
Why the hot-blooded Flame, that dowerliffe tooke
Our yongeft borne, I could as well be brought To knee his Throne, and Squire-like penfon beg,
To kepee base life a foothe returne with her?
Perfwade me rather to be flue and sump’ter
To this dexted groome.
Gen. At your choice Sir.
Lear. I prythee Daughter do not make me mad,
I will not trouble thee my Child;farewel:
Weel no more meete, no more fee one another.
But yet thou art my fleth, my blood, my Daughter,
Or rather a difafe that’s in my fleth,
Which I muft needs call mine. Thou art a Byle,
A plague for, or imbofTed Carbulence
In my corrupted blood. But Ile not chide thee,
Let fame come when it will, I do not call it,
I do not bid the Thunder-bearer fhoote,
Nor tell tales of thee to high-judging Jove,
Mend when thou can’t, be better at thy leisur,
I can be patient, I can ftay with Regan,
I and my hundred Knights.
Reg. Not altogether fo,
I look’d not for you yet, nor am prouided
For your fit welcome, glee eare Sir to my Sifter,
For thofe that mingle reafon with your paffion,
Muft be content to thinke you old, and fo,
But the knowes what the doe’s.
Lear. Is this well spoken?
Reg. I dare auouch it Sir, what fifty Followers?
Is it not well? What fhould you need of more?
Yea, or fo many? Sith that both charge and danger,
Speake gainft fo great a number? How in one houfe
Should many people, under two commands
Hold amity? ’Tis hard, almost imppofible.
Gen. Why muft not you my Lord, receive attendence
From thofe that she calls Servants, or from mine?
Reg. Why not my Lord?
If then they chanc’d to fackle ye,
We could comptrroll them, if you will come to me,
(For now I fpe a danger) I entreate you
To bring but flue and twentie, to no more
Will I gue fpace or notice.
Lear. I gue you all.
Reg. And in good time you gue it.
Lear. Made you my Guardians, my Depositaries,
But kept a refleration to be followed
With fuch a number? What, muft I come to you
With flue and twentie? Regan, fayd you fo?
Reg. And speake’t againe my Lord, no more with me.
Lear. Thofe wicked Creatures yet do look wel fano’d
When others are more wicked, not being the worft
Stands in fome ranke of praffe, Ile go with thee,
Thy flue yet doth double flue and twentie,
And thou art twice her Loue.
Gen. Heare me my Lord;
What need you flue and twenty? Ten? Or flue?
To follow in a houfe, where twice fo many
Have a command to tend you?
Reg. What need one?
Lear. O reafon not the need: our bafeft Beggers
Are in the pooreft thing fuperfluous,
Allow not Nature, more then Nature needs:
Mans life is cheaper as Beaffes. Thou art a Lady;
If onely to go warme were gourgeous,
Why Nature needs not what thou gourgeous wear’ft,
Which fcarcely keeps thee warme, but for true need;
You Heauens, give me that patience, patience I need,
You fee me heere (you Gods) a poore old man,
As full of griefe as age, wretched in both,
If it be you that flares these Daughters hearts
Against their Father, foole me not fo much,
To beare it tamely’touch me with Noble anger,
And let not womens weapons, water drops,
Staine my mans cheeckes. No you vn naturall Hags,
I will have fuch reuenges on you both,
That all the world fhall——— I will do fuch things,
What they are yet, I know not, but they shalbe
The terrors of the earth? you thinke Ile weepwe,
No, Ile not wepe, I have full caufe of weeping,
Storme and Tempeft.
But this heart fhall break into a hundred thoufand flaws
Or er Ile wepe; O Foole, I fhall go mad.
Exeunt.
Corm. Let vs withdraw, ’twill be a Storme.
Reg. This house is little, the old man ands people,
Cannot be well beftow’d.
Gen. ’Tis his owne blame hath put himfelfe from reft,
And muft needs taffe his folly.
Reg. For his particular, Ile receive him gladly,
But not one follower.
Gen. So am I purpof’d.
Where is my Lord of Glofter?
Enter Glofter.
Corm. Followed the old man forth, he is return’d.
Glo. The King is in high rage.
Corm. Whether is he going?
Glo. He cala to Horfe, but will I know not whether.
Corm. ’Tis beft to gue him way, he leads himfelfe.
Gen. My Lord, entreate him by no meanes to stay.
Glo. Alacke the night comes on, and the high windes
Do forely ruffle, for many Miles about
There’s feare a Bufh.
Reg. O Sir, to wilfull men,
The injuries that they themfellues procure,
Mufi be their Schoole-Maters: that vp your doores,
He is attended with a desperate traine,
And what they may incende him too, being apt,
’To haue his care aboud, wifdomes bids feare.
Car. Shut vp your doores my Lord, ’tis a wil’d night,
My Regan counsells well; come out other’wise. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Storme Hill. Enter Kent, and a Gentleman feverally.
Kent. Who’s there befides foule weather?
Gen. One minded like the weather, moft vnquietly.
So old, and white as this. O, ho! 'tis foule.
Fool. He that has a house to put's head in, has a good
Head-peece:
The Codpiece that will house, before the head has any;
The Head, and he shall Lowfe: so Beggers marry many.
The man y makes his Toe, what he his Hart hold mak,
Shall of a Corne cry woe, and turns his sleepe to wake.
For there was never yet faire woman, but shee made mouthes in a glasse.

Enter Kent.

Lear. No, I will be the pattern of all patience,
I will say nothing.
Kent. Who's there?
Fool. Marry here's Grace, and a Codpiece, that's a
Witman, and a Foole.
Kent. Alas Sir are you here? Things that lone night,
Lowe not such nights as these: The wrathfull Skies
Gallow the very wanderers of the darke
And make them keepe their Courses: Since I was man,
Such sheets of Fire, such burfs of horrid Thunder,
Such groanes of roaring Winde, and Raine, I never Remember to haue heard. Mans Nature cannot carry Th'afliction, nor the feare.

Lear. Let the great Godes
That keepe this dreadful padder o're our heads,
Finde out their enemies now. Tremble thou Wretch,
That haft within thee undivulged Crimes
Wavnymph of Justice. Hide thee, thou Bloudy hand;
Thou Periur'd, and thou Simular of Vertue
That art Inceffuous. Catiffe, to peeces shoke
That vnder couer, and conuenient seeming
Ha's praftis'd on mans life. Clofe pent-vp guilts,
Riue your concealing Continents, and cry
Thefe dreadful Summonses grace. I am a man,
More finn'd against, then finning.
Kent. Alacke, bare-headed!
Gracious my Lord, hard by heere is a Houell,
Some friendship will it lend you 'gainst the Tempest:
Repose you there, while I to this hard houfe,
( More harder then the fones whereof 'tis rais'd,
Which euen but now, demanding after you,
Deny'd me to come in) returne, and force
Their scantred curteffe.

Lear. My wits begin to turne.
Come on my boy. How doft my boy? Art cold?
I am cold my selfe. Where is this flame, my Fellow?
The Art of our Necellities is strange,
And can make vile things precious.Come, your Houell:
Poore Foole, and Knaue, I have one part in my heart
That's forry yet for thee.
Fool. He that has and a little-tyne wit,
With heigh-ho, the Winde and the Raine,
Muft make content with his Fortunes fit,
Though the Raine it raineth every day.

Le. True Boy: Come bring vs to this Houell. Exit. Fool.

Fool. This is a brave night to coole a Curtizan:
Ile speake a Prophesie ere I go:
When Priests are more in word, then matter;
When Brewers marre their Malt with water;
When Nobles are their Taylors Tutors,
No Heretiques burn'd, but wenches Sutors;
When every Cafe in Lawe, is right;
No Squire in debt, nor no poore Knight;
When Slanders do not live in Tongues;
Nor Cut-purfs come not to throngs;
When Vlurers tell their Gold 1' th'Field,
And, Baudes, and whores, do Churches build,
Then shall the Realme of Albion, come to great confusion:
Then comes the time, who liues to see't,
That going halfe vs'd with feet. (time.
This prophecie Merlin shall make, for I liue before his

Scena Tertia.

Enter Gloucester, and Edmund.

Glo. Alacke, alacke Edmund, I like not this vnnatural dealing; when I defired their levele that I might pity him, they tooke from me the vfe of mine owne house, charg'd me on paine of perpetuall displeasure, neither of speake of him, entreat for him, or any way suftaine him.

Bpf. Moft saue and vnnatural.

Glo. Go too; say you nothing. There is diuision betwene the Dukes, and a worlde matter then that: I haue received a Letter this night, 'tis dangerous to be spoken, I haue lock'd the Letter in my Cloffet, these injuries the King now beares, will be reuenged home; ther is part of a Power already footeed, we muft incline to the King, I will looke him, and priuily relieve him; goe you and maintaine talke with the Duke, that my charity be not of him perceiued: If he askes me, for I am ill, and gone to bed, if I die for it, (as no leffe is threaten'd me) the King my old Mafter muft be relieued. There is strange things toward Edmund, pray you be careful. Exit.

Bpf. This Cartefie forbid thee, shal the Duke Infantly know, and of that Letter too;
This seemes a faire deferuing, and muft draw me
That which my Father looefean leffe then all,
The younger rites, when the old doth fall. Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Lear, Kent, and Poole.

Kent. Here is the place my Lord, good my Lord enter,
The tirrany of the open night's too rough
For Nature to endure. Storme still Lear. Let me alone.

Kent. Good my Lord enter heree.

Lear. Wilt breake my heart?
Kent. I had rather breake mine owne,
Good my Lord enter.

Lear. Thou think'st 'tis much that this contentious
Inuades vs vs to the skino 'tis to thee,
(Storme)
But where the greater malady is first,
The leffer is scarce felt. Thou'dft shun a Bearre,
But if they flight lay toward the roaring Sea,
Thou'dft meete the Bearre i' th' mouth, when the mind's
The bodies delicate: the tempet in my mind, free,
Doth from my fences take all feeling else,
Sawe what beates there, Filliill ingratiate,
Is it not as this mouth should teare this hand
For lifting food too' t But I will punish home;
No, I will wepe no more; in such a night,

To shut me out? Poure on, I will endure:
In such a night as this? O Regan, Gonerill,
Your old kind Father, whose ranke heart gauw all,
O that way madneffe lies, let me thun that:
No more of that.

Kent. Good my Lord enter here.

Lear. Prythee goe in thy felle, fekke thine owne eafe,
This tempeft will not give me leave to ponder
On things that would hurt me more, but Ie goe in,
In Boy, go firth. You houfes feuere,
Nay get thee in; I le, pray, and then Ie flepe.
Poore naked wretches, where fo ere you are
That bide the pelting of this pittileffe storme,
How shall your Houfie-felle heads, and vnfed sides,
Your lop'd, and window'd ragg'dnesse defend you
From feaons such as these? O I haue tane
Too little care of this: Take Phyficke, Pompe,
Expoe thy felle to feele what wretches feele,
That thou maift shake the superfluex to them,
And shew the Heauen more luft.

Enter Edgar, and Poole.

Edg. Fathom, and halfe, Fathom and halfe; poore Tom.
Poole. Come not in hereee Nuncle, here's a spirit, helpe me, helpe me.
Kent. Gie me thy hand, who's there?
Poole. A spiritie, a spiritie, he sayes his name's poore Tom.
Kent. What art thou that dost grumble there i'th storm? Come forth.

Edg. Away, the foule Fiend follows me, through the sharpe Hauthorne blow the windes. Humh, goe to thy bed and warne thee.

Lear. Did'thou gie all to thy Daughters? And art thou come to this?
Edgar. Who giues any thing to poore Tom? Whom the foule fiend hath led though Fire, and through Flame, through Sword, and Whirl-Poole, o're Bog, and Quagmire, that hath laid Knives under his Pillow, and Haltiers in his Pue, let Ras-bane by his Porridge, made him Proud of heart, to ride on a Bay trotting Horie, oure foure incht Bridges, to courte his owne shadow for a Traitor. Blifie thy five Wits, Tom's a cold. O do, de, do, de, do de, blifie thee from Whirl-Windes, Starre-blaffing, and taiking, do poore Tom some charite, whom the foule Fiend vexes. There could I haue him now, and there, and there ag ai ne, and there. Storme still.

Lear. Ha's his Daughters brought him to this passe?
Could'th thou faue nothing? Would'th thou gie 'em all?
Poole. Nay, he referu'd a Blanket, elie we had bin all sham'd.

Lea. Now all the plagues that in the pendulous ayre
Hang fated o're mens faults, light on thy Daughters.
Kent. He hath no Daughters Sir.

Lear. Death Traitor, nothing could have gub'd To fuch a lowneffe, but his vnkind Daughters. (Nature
Is it the fashion, that discarded Fathers,
Should haue thus little mercy on their fieles:
Judicious punishment, twas this fieles begot
Those Pelican Daughters.

Edg. Pillock fat on Pillock hill, alow, alow, too, too.

Poole. This cold night will turne vs all to Foole's, and Madmen.

Edgar. Take heed o'thou Fiend, obey thy Parents, keepe thy words iustice, sweare not, commit not, with mans sworne Spoufe ; let not thy Sweet-heart on proud array. Tom's a cold.

Lear. What haft thou bin?

Edg. A Seruingman? Proud in heart, and minde; that cur'd my haire, wore Gloues in my cap; fer'd the Luft of my Miftris heart, and did the oyle of darkenesse with her. Swore as many Oathes, as I spake words, & broke them in the sweet face of Heaven. One, that leapt in the contriving of Luft, and wak'd to doe it. Wine lou'd I dereely, Dice dereely; and in Woman, out-Paramour'd the Turke. Falfe of heart, light of eare, bloody of hand; Hog in sloth, Foxe in stealth, Wolfe in greedinesse, Dog in madness, Lyon in prey. Let not the creaking of flokes,Nor the ruffling of Silkes, betray thy poor heart to woman. Keep thy foote out of Brothels, thy hand out of Plackets, thy pen from Lenders Bookes, and defye the foule Fiend. Still through the Hauthorne blowes the cold winde: Szes feem, mun, nonny, Dol in my Boy, Boy & Boy; let him trot by.

Storme still.

Lear. Thou wert better in a Graue, then to answere with thy vncour'd body, this extremity of the Skies. Is man no more then this? Consider him wel. Thou owf't the Worme no Silke ; the Beast, no Hide; The Sheep, no Wool; the Cat, no perfume. Ha? Here's three on's are so sophisticated. Thou art the thing it selfe; vnaccommodated man, is no more but such a poor, bare, forked A-nimall as thou art. Off, off you Lendings: Come, vn-button heere.

Enter Gloucester, with a Torch.

Foot. Prythee Nuncle be contented, 'tis a naughtie night to swimme in. Now a little fire in a wildle Field, were like an old Letchers heart, a small spark, all the rest on's body, cold: Looke, heere comes a walking fire.

Edg. This is the foule Flibbertigibbet; hee begins at Curfew, and walkes at first Cocke: Hee gives the Web and the Pin, fquints the eye, and makes the Hare-lippe; Mildewes the white Wheate, and hurts the poore Creature of earth.

Swithin footed thrice the old, He met the Night-Mare, and her nine-fold; Bid her a-light, and her truth-pitch; And aroyn thee Witch, aroyn thee.

Kent. How fares your Grace?

Lear. What's he?

Kent. Who's there? What is't that you seeke?

Glu. What are you there? Your Names?

Edg. Poore Tom, that eates the swimming Frog, the Toad, the Tod-pole, the wall-Neut, and the water: that in the furie of his heart, when the foule Fiend rages, eats Cow-dung for Sallets; itswallows the old Rat, and the ditch-Dogge; drinks the green Mantle of the standing Poole: who is whipt from Tything to Tything, and flockt, pinufht, and imprifht: who hath thre' Suutes to his backe, five shirts to his body: But Mice, and Rats, and Suck small Deare, Haue in Tom's food, for feuen longe yeare: Beware my Follower. Peace Smulkin, peace thou Fiend.

Glu. What, hath your Grace no better company?

Edg. The Prince of Darkenesse is a Gentleman. Made he's call'd, and Made.

Glu. Our flesh and blood, my Lord, is growne so vilde, that it doth hate what gets it.

Edg. Poore Tom's a cold.

Glu. Go in with me; my duty cannot suffer

T'obey in all your daughters hard commands:
Though their Injunction be to barre my doores,
And let this Tyrannous night take hold vpon you,
Yet haue I ventured to come seeke you out,
And bring you where both fire, and food is ready.

Lear. First let me talle with this Philosopher,
What is the caufe of Thunder?

Kent. Good my Lord take his offer,
Go into th'house.

Lear. Ile talke a word with this famed learned Theban:
What is your judy?

Edg. How to preuent the Fiend, and to kill Vermine.

Lear. Let me aske you one word in priuate.

Kent. Importune him once more to go my Lord,
His wits begin t'vnfitte.

Glu. Canst thou blame him?

Stormes fill.

His Daughters seeke his death: Ah, that good Kent,
He faid it would be thus: poore banish'd man:
Thou sayest the King growes mad, Ile tell thee Friend
I am almoft mad my selfe. I had a Sonne,
Now out-law'd from my blood: he bought my life
But lately: very late: I lou'd him (Friend)
No Father his Sonne deerer: true to tell thee,
The greefe hath craz'd my wits. What a night's this?
I do befeech your Grace.

Lear. O cry you mercy, Sir:
Noble Philosopher, your company.

Edg. Tom's a cold.

Glu. In fellow there, into th'Houe; keep thee warm.

Lear. Come, let's in all.

Kent. This way, my Lord.

Lear. With him;
I will keepe still with my Philosopher.

Kent. Good my Lord, footh him:
Let him take the Fellow.

Glu. Take him you on.

Kent. Sirra, come on: go along with vs.

Lear. Come, good Athenian.

Glu. No words, no words, hush.

Edg. Childe Rowland to the darke Tower came,
His word was still, fi, fo, and fumme,
I smell the blood of a Britifh man.

Exeunt

Scena Quinta.

Enter Cornwall, and Edmund.

Corn. I will haue my reuenge, ere I depart his house.

Baft. How my Lord, I may be censured, that Nature thus gius way to Loyalty, somethings feares mee to think of.

Corn. I now perceiue, it was not altogether your Brothers euill Diposition made him seeke his death: but a pronouncing merit fet a-worke by a reprouable badnesse in himselfe.

Baft. How malicious is my fortune, that I must repent to be luft? This is the Letter which hee spake of; which approveth him an intelligent partie to the advantage of France. O Heauens that this Treason were not; or not I the detector.

Corn. Go with me to the Dutchefe.

Baft. If the matter of this Paper be certain, you have mighty buinesse in hand.
The Tragedie of King Lear.

The Tragedie of King Lear.

Corn. True or falle, it hath made thee Earle of Gloucester: feeke out where thy Father is; that hee may bee ready for our apprehension.

Bag. If I finde him comforting the King, it will stiffe his fulpition more fully. I will peruse in my course of Loyalty, though the conflict be fore betwixt that, and my blood.

Corn. I will lay true on thee: and thou shalt finde a deere Father in my loue.

Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Kent, and Gloucester.

Glo. Heere is better then the open ayre, take it thankfully: I will pece out the comfort with what addition I can: I will not be long from you.

Exit Kent. All the powre of his wits, haue given way to his impatience: the Gods reward your kindnesse.

Enter Lear, Edgar, and Poole.

Edg. Fraterreto calls me, and tells me Nero is an Angler in the Lake of Darknesse: pray Innocent, and beware the foule Fiend.

Poole. Prythee Nunkle tell me, whether a madman be a Gentleman, or a Yeoman.

Lear. A King, a King.

Poole. No, he’s a Yeoman, that ha’s a Gentleman to his Sonne: for hee’s a mad Yeoman that sees his Sonne a Gentleman before him.

Lear. To have a thousand with red burning spits Come hazing in von ‘em.

Edg. Bleffe thy fue wits.

Kent. O pitty: Sir, where is the patience now That you fo oft haue boaste to retaine?

Edg. My teares begin to take his part so much, They marre my counterfecting.

Lear. The little dogges, and all; Trey, Blanch, and Sweet-heart: fee, they barke at me.

Edg. Tom, will throw his head at them: Auaunt you Curses, be thy mouth or blacke or white: Tooth that yoylons if it bite: Maffiffe, Grey-hound, Mongrill, Grim, Hound or Spaniell, Brache, or Hym: Or Bobtailie tight, or Trouble tait, Tom will make him wepe and waile, For with throwing thus my head; Dogs leapt the hatch, and all are fled.

Do, de, de, de: see, Come, march to Wakes and Fayres, And Market Townes: poore Tom thy horne is drye.

Lear. Then let them Anatomize Regan: See what breeds about her heart. Is there any caufe in Nature that make thefle hard-hearts. You fir, I entertaine for one of my hundred: only, I do not like the fashon of your garments. You will fay they are Perian; but let them bee chang’d.

Enter Gloucester.

Kent. Now good my Lord, lye heere, and rest awhile. Lear. Make no noife, make no noife, draw the Curtains: fo, fo, we’ll go to Supper i’th’morning.

Poole. And Ile go to bed at noone. Glo. Come hither Friend: Where is the King my Mafter?

Kent. Here Sir, but trouble him not, his wits are gon.

Scena Septima.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, Gonerill, Bagstaff, and Servants.

Corn. Poole speedily to my Lord your husband, shew him this Letter, the Army of France is landed: feeke out the Traitor Gloufter.

Reg. Hang him instantly.

Gen. Pluck out his eyes.

Corn. Leave him to my displeasure. Edmund, keepe you our Sifter company: the reuenges wee are bound to take vppon your Traitorous Father, are not fit for your beholding. Advise the Duke where you are going, to a most feflituate preparation: we are bound to the like. Our Poltes shall be fwiift, and intelligen betwixt vs. Farewell deere Sifter, farewell my Lord of Gloufter.

Enter Steward.

How now? Where’s the King? Srew. My Lord of Gloufter hath consuey’d him hence Some fiiue or fix and thirty of his Knights Hot Quefrifats after him, met him at gate, Who, with some other of the Lords, dependants, Are gone with him toward Douer, where they boast To haue well armed Friends.

Corn. Get horfes for your Miftris.

Gen. Farewell sweet Lord, and Sifter.

Exit. Corn. Edmund farewell: go seek the Traitor Gloufter, Pinnion him like a Theefe, bring him before vs: Though well we may not paife vppon his life Without the forme of Justice: yet our power Shall do a cur’tie to our wrath, which men May blame, but not comproll.

Enter Gloucester, and Servants.

Whos there? the Traitor?

Reg. Ingrateful Fox, ’tis he.

Corn. Binde faft his coryk armes.

Glo. What means your Graces?

Who are your Friends confider you are my Ghetta:

Do me no foule play, Friends.

Corn. Binde him I say.

Glo. Vnmercifull Lady, as you are, I’me none.

Corn. To this Chaire binde him,

Villaine, thou shalt finde.

Glo. By the kinde Gods, ’tis most ignobly done To plecke me by the Beard.

Reg. So white, and such a Traitor?

Glo. Naughtie Ladie,

These haires which thou doft rauffh from my chin Will quiccken and acceu thee. I am your Hoft, With Robbers hands, my hospitable favours

You
You should not ruffle thus. What will you do?
Corn. Come Sir.
What Letters had you late from France?
Reg. Be simple answer'd, for we know the truth.
Corn. And what confederacie have you with the Traitors, late footed in the Kingdom?
Reg. To whomse hands
You have sent the Lunaticke King : Speake.
Glov. I have a Letter ghostsingly set downe
Which came from one that's of a newtrall heart,
And not from one oppos'd.
Corn. Canning.
Reg. And falfe.
Corn. Where haft thou sent the King?
Glov. To Douer.
Reg. Whereto Douer? Let him answer that.
Glov. I am tyed to'th'Stake,
And I must fland the Courfe.
Reg. Whereunto Douer?
Glov. Because I would not see thy cruelle Nailes
Plucke out his poor old eyes : nor thy fierce Sifer,
In his Anointed fleth, flikke boarish phangs,
The Sea, with fuch a florne as his bare head,
In Hell-blacke-night Indur'd, would haue buoy'd vp
And quench'd the Stelled fires:
Yet poor old heart, he holpe the Heauens to raine.
If Wolues had at thy Gate howl'd that florne time,
Thou shoul'dt have fad, good Porter turne the Key:
All Cruels else subscribe : but I shall fee
The winged Vengeance ouertake such Children.
Corn. See'th shalt thou newer,Fellowes hold ? Chaire,
Vpon these eyes of thine, Ile fet my foote.
Glov. He that will thinke to live, till he be old,
Give me fome helpe.——O cruel! O you Gods.
Reg. One fide will mocke another : Th'other too.
Corn. If you fee vengeance.
Seru. Hold your hand, my Lord:
I have feuer'd you euer since I was a Childe:
But better fervice haue I never done you,
Then now to bid you hold.
Reg. How now, you dogge?
Ser. If you did weare a beard vpon your chin,
I'd shake it on this quarrel. What do you mean?
Corn. My Villaine?
Seru. Nay then come on, and take the chance of anger.
Reg. Glue me thy Sword. A pezant fland vp thus.
Kills him.
Ser. Oh I am flaine : my Lord,you have one eye left
To fee fome miffchefe on him. Oh.
Corn. Left it fee more, preuent it; Out vilde gelly:
Where is thy luft now?
Glov. All darke and comfortleffe?
Where's my Sonne Edmund?
Edmund, enkindle all the flarke of Nature
To quit this horrid acte.
Reg. Out treacherous Villaine,
Thou call'st on him, that hates thee. It was he
That made the ouverture of thy Treafons to vs:
Who is too good to pitty thee.
Glov. O my Follies ! then edgar was abus'd,
Kinde Gods, forgive me that,and prosper him.
Reg. Go thruft him out at gates, and let him smell
His way to Douer.
How is't my Lord? How looke you?

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Edgar.
Edg. Yet better thus, and knowne to be contempt'd,
Then still contempt'd and flatter'd, to be worft:
The loweft, and moft delected thing of Fortune,
Stands still in eperance, lies not in feare:
The lamentable change is from the beft,
The worft returns to laughter. Welcome then,
Thou vafubflantiall ayre that I embrace:
The Wretch that thou haft blowne vnto the worft,
Owes nothing to thy blasts.

Enter Glouffer, and an Oldman.
But who comes here? My Father poorly led World, World, O world!
But that thy strange mutations make vs hate thee,
Life would not yeeld to age.
Oldm. O my good Lord, I haue bene your Tenant,
And your Fathers Tenant, threfe fourrefoye yeares.
Glov. Away, get thee away : good Friend be gone,
Thy comforts can do me no good at all,
Thee, they may hurt.
Oldm. You cannot see your way.
Glov. I haue no way, and therefore want no eyes:
I fumbled when I faw. Full oft 'tis feene,
Our meanes secure, and our meere defects
Prove our Commodities. Oh deere Sonne Edgar,
The food of thy abused Fathers wrath:
Might I but liue to fee thee in my touch,
I'd fay I had eyes againe.
Oldm. How now? who's there?
Edg. O Gods! Who is't can fay I am at the worft?
I am worfe then ere I was.
Old. 'Tis poore mad Tom.
Edg. And worfe I may be yet: the worft is not,
So long as we can fay this is the worft.
Oldm. Fellow, where goeft?
Glov. Is it a Beggar-man?
Oldm. Madman, and beggar too.
Glov. He has some reafon, elfe he could not beg.
I'th'laften nights florne, I fuch a fellow faw;
Which made me thinke a Man, a Worme. My Sonne
Came then into my minde, and yet my minde
Was then scarce Friends with him.
I haue heard more fince:
As Flies to wanton Boyes, are we to th'Gods,
They kill vs for their fport.
Edg. How shou'd this be?
Bad is the Trade that mutt play Foose to forrow,
Ang'ring it felfe, and others. Bleffe thee Master.
Glov. Is that the naked Fellow?
Oldm. I, my Lord.
Glov. Get thee away : If for my fake
Thou wilt ore-take vs hence a mile or twaine
I'th'way toward Douer, do it for ancient love,
And bring some courer for this naked Soule,
Which Ile intreate to leade me.
Old. Alacke sir, he is mad.
The Tragedie of King Lear.

Glu. 'Tis the times plague, When Madmen leade the blinde: Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure: Above the rest, be gone.
Oldm. Ile bring him the best Parrell that I have Come on't, what will. Exit.

Glu. Come hither fellow. Edg. And yet I must: Bleeffe thy sweete eyes, they bleede. Glou. Know'lt thou the way to Douer? Edg. Both style, and gate; Horleway, and foot-path: poore Tom hath bin carr'd out of his good wits. Bleeffe thee good mans sonne, from the foule Fiend. Glou. Here take this purfe, y whom the heau'n's plagues Have humbled to all strokes: that I am wretched Makes thee the happier: Heauen's deale fo fill : Let the superfluous, and Luft-dieted man, That flau's your ordinance, that will not see Because he do's not feele, feele your powre quickly: So disdraction should vnado excess, And each man have enough. Doft thou know Douer? Edg. 1 Matter. Glou. There is a Cliffe, whose high and bending head Lookes fearfully in the confined Deepe: Bring me but to the very brimme of it, And Ile repaire the miferf thou do'lt beare With something rich about me: from that place, I hall no leading neede.

Edg. Give me thy arme; Poore Tom shall leade thee.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Generil, Boffard, and Steward.

Gen. Welcome my Lord.I meruell our mild husband Not met vs on the way. Now, where's your Matter? Stew. Madam within, but neuer man fo chang'd: I told him of the Army that was Landed: He fmail'd at it. I told him you were comming, His anwser was, the worfe. Of Gloufter Treachery, And of the Loyall Service of his Sonne When I inform'd him, then he call'd me Sot, And told me I had turn'd the wrong fide out: What moft he should diflike, feemes pleafant to him; What like, offenufe.

Gen. Then ball ye go no further. It is the Cowish terror of his spirit That dares not undertake: Hee'll not feele wrongs Which tye him to an anwser: our wives on the way May proue effects. Backe Edmund to my Brother, Haften his Mufters, and conduet his powres. I muft change names at home, and glue the Diftaffe Into my Husbands hands. This truffle Seruant Shall paffe betwenee vs: ere long you are like to hear (If you dare venture in your owne behalfe) A Mistrefles command. Weare this; fpare speech, Decline your head. This kiffe, if it durft speake Would fretch thy Spirits vp into the ayre: Conceiue, and fare thee well.

Boft. Yours, in the ranke of death.
Gen. My moft deere Glofter.

Oh, the difference of man, and man, To thee a Womans feruices are due, My Poole vfurpes my body.
Stew. Madam, here come's my Lord.
Enter Albany.

Gen. I haue beene worth the whistle.
Alb. Oh Gloufter, You are not worth the duft which the rude winde Blows in your face.
Gen. Milke-Liuer'd man, That beart' a cheeke for blowes, a head for wrongs, Who haft not in thy browes an eye-difcerning Thine Honor, from thy suffering.
Alb. See thy felie diuell: Proper deformitie feemes not in the Fiend So horrid as in woman.
Gen. Oh vaine Poole.
Enter a Maffenger.

Mef. Oh my good Lord, the Duke of Carnwals dead, Slaine by his Seruant, going to put out The other eye of Gloufter.
Alb. Gloufters eyes.
Mef. A Seruant that he bred, thrill'd with remorfe, Oppos'd against the act: bending his Sword To his great Matter, who, threat-enrag'd Flew on him, and among't them fell'd him dead, But not without that harmefull stroke, which Since Hath pluckt him after.

Alb. This fhwes you are aboue You fulfices, that thefe our neather crimes So speedily can venge. But (O poore Gloufter) Loft he his other eye?
Mef. Both, both, my Lord.
This Letter Madam, craues a speedy anwser :
'Tis from your Sifter.
Gen. One way I like this well, But being widnow, and my Gloufter with her, May all the building in my fancie plucke Upon my hatefull life. Another way The Newes is not fo tart. He read, and anwser.
Alb. Where was his Sonne, When they did take his eyes?
Mef. Come with my Lady hither.
Alb. He is not here.
Mef. No my good Lord, I met him backe againe.
Alb. Knowes he the wickedneffe?
Mef. I my good Lord: twas he inform'd against him And quit the house on purpofe, that their punishment Might haue the freer courfe.
Alb. Gloufter, I lye
To thanke thee for the loue thou shew'dst the King, And to reuenge thine eyes. Come hither Friend, Tell me what more thou know't.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter with Drum and Colours, Cordelia, Gentlemen, and Souliuers.

Cor. Alacke, 'tis he: why he was met eu'n now As mad as the next Sea, finging alow, Crown'd with ranke Fenitar, and furrow weades, With Hardokes, Hemlocke, Nettles, Cuckoo flowres,
Darnell
Enter Regan, and Steward.

Reg. But are my Brothers Powres set forth?
Stew. I Madam.

Reg. Himself in person there?
Stew. Madam with much ado:
Your Sister is the better Souldier.

Reg. Lord Edmund spake not with your Lord at home?
Stew. No Madam.

Reg. What might import my Sisters Letter to him?
Stew. I know not, Lady.

Reg. Faith he is poofed hence on serious matter:
It was great ignorance, Gloufiers eyes being out
To let him live. Where he arrives, he mouses
All hearts against vs: Edmund, I think is gone
In pitty of his misery, to dispatch
His nighted life: Moreouer to defcry
The strength o'th'Enemy.

Stew. I must needs after him, Madam, with my Letter.

Reg. Our troops set forth to morrow, stay with vs:
The ways are dangerous.

Stew. I may not Madam:
My Lady charg'd my dutie in this busines.

Reg. Why should the write to Edmund?
Might not you transport her purpofes by word? Belike,
Some things, I know not what. Ile loue thee much
Let me vnfeale the Letter.

Stew. Madam, I had rather ——

Reg. I know your Lady do's not loue her Husband,
I am sure of that: and at her late being here,
She gave strange Ellads, and moft speaking looke
To Noble Edmund. I know you are of her boforme.

Stew. I, Madam?
Shake patiently my great affliction off:
If I could bear it longer, and not fall
To quarrell with your great beneficent wiles,
My snuffe, and loathed part of Nature should Burne it selfe out. If Edgar live, O bless him:
Now Fellow, fare thee well.

Edg. Gone Sir, farewell:
And yet I know not how conceit may rob
The Treasury of life, when life it selfe
Yeelds to the Theft. Had he bin where he thought,
By this had thought bin past. Alieve, or dead?
Hoa, you Sir: Friend, hear you Sir, speake:
Thus might he peace indeed; yet he reuies.
What are you Sir?

Glu. Awaie and let me dye.

Edg. Had't thou beene ought
But Goezmore, Feathers, Ayre,
(So many fathome downe precipitating)
Thou'dst think'd like an Egge: but thou do'tt breath:
Hast heauen substance, bleed't not, speake't, art found,
Ten Mafts at each, make not the altitude
Which thou haft perpendicularly fell,
Thy life's a Myracle. Speake yet againe,
Glu. But haue I falsne, or no?

Edg. From the dread Sonnet of this Chalkie Bourne
Looke vp a height, the thrill-gord' Larke so farre
Cannot be feene, or heard: Do but looke vp.
Glu. Alacke, I haue no eyes:
Is wretchednesse depli'd, that benefit
To end it selfe by death? 'Twas yet some comfort,
When milery could beguile the Tyranne rage,
And frustrate his proud will.

Glu. Give me your arme.

Vp, fo : How is't? Feele you your Legges? You stand,
Glu. Too well, too well.

Edg. This is above all strangesesse,
Upn the crowne o'th'Clippe. What thing was that
Which parted from you?

Glu. A poore unfortunat Beggar.

Edg. As I stood heere belowe, me thought his eyes
Were two full Monoes: he had a thousand Nose,
Hornes would't, and waue like the enraged Sea:
It was some Fiende: Therefore thou happy Father,
Thinke that the clearest Gods, who make them Honors
Of mens Impoffibilities, haue preferred thee.

Glu. I do remember now; henceforth Ile beare
Affiliation, till it do cry out it selfe
Enough, enough, and dye. That thing you speake of,
I tooke it for a man : often'twould say
The Fiend, the Fiend, he led me to that place.

Edgar. Beare free and patient thoughts.

Enter Lear.

But who comes heere?
The faier fenfe will ne're accommodate
His Mafter thus.

Lear. No, they cannot touch me for crying. I am the King himselfe.

Edg. O thou side-piercing fight!

Lear. Nature's aboue Art, in that respect. Th'ers your Preife-money. That fellow handles his bow, like a Crow-keeper : draw mee a, Cloathiers yard. Looke, looke, a Mouse : peace, peace, this peece of toasted Cheefe will do'tt. There's my Gauntlet, Ile prowe it on a Gyant.
Bring vp the browne Billes. O well flowne Bird : I'th clout, I'th clout : Hewgh. Glue the word.

Edg. Sweet Mariorum.
The Tragedie of King Lear.

The bountie, and the benizone of Heauen
To boot, and boot.

Enter Steward.

Stew. A proclaim'd prize : most happie
That cycellfe head of thine, was first fram'd fleth
To raise my fortunes. Thou old, vnhappy Traitor,
Breefely thy fefe remember : the Sword is out
That must deftroy thee.

Glu. Now let thy friendly hand
Put strength enough too't.

Stew. Wherefore, bold Pezant,
Dar't thou support a publifh'd Traitor? Hence,
Leaft that th'infecution of his fortune take
Like hold on thee. Let go his arme.
Edg. Chill not let go Zir,
Without vurther caution.

Stew. Let go Slaue, or thou dy'rt.

Edg. Good Gentleman goe your gate, and let poore volke passe ; and 'chud ha' bin swaggard out of my life,
'twould not ha'bin so long as 'tis, by a vortnight. Nay, come not neere th'old man : keepe out che voy'rc, or ice
try whither your Confard, or my Ballow be the harder;
chill be plaine with you.

Stew. Out Daunghill.

Edg. Chill picke your teeth Zir : come, no matter vor your foynes.

Stew. Slaue thou ha't finde me?Villain, take my purfe ;
If euer thou wilt thrieve, bury my bodie,
And glue the Letters which thou find'ft about me,
To Edmund Earl of Gloufter: feeke him out
Vpon the English party. Oh vntimely death, death.
Edg. I know thee well. A fortureable Villaine,
As duteous to the vices of thy Miftris,
As badneffe would defire.

Glu. What, is he dead?

Edg. Sit you downe Father : reft you.
Let's fee thefe Pockets ; the Letters that he speaks of
May be my Friends : hee's dead ; I am onely forry
He had no other Deathman. Let vs fee :
Leaue gentle waxe, and manners : blame vs not
To know our enemies minides, we rip their hearts,
Their Papers is more lawfull.

Rade the Letter.

Let our reciprocall owes be remembred. You haue manie opportunities to cut him off ; if your will want not, time and place will be fruitfully offer'd. There is nothing done. If bee returns the Conqueror, then am I the Prifoner, and bid my Gaole, from the lootted warmth whereof, deliver me, and supply
the place for your Labour.

Your (Wife, fo I would say) affec[tio]-nate Servant. Gonerill.

Oh indinguish'd space of Womans will,
A plot upon her vertuous Husbands life,
And the exchange my Brother : heere, in the sands
Thee Ile rake vp, the pothe vnflanchifi'd
Of martherous Letchers : and in the mature time,
With this vragious paper strike the fight
Of the death-praft'd Duke : for him 'tis well,
That of thy death, and busineffe, I can tell.

Glu. The King is mad :
How stiffe is my vile fenfe
That I stand vp, and have ingeneous feeling
Of my huge Sorrowes? Better I were distract,
So shoud my thoughts be feuer'd from my greefes,

Drum asfarre off.

And woes, by wrong imaginations loofe

The
The knowledge of themselues.

Edg. Give me your hand:
Farre off methinks I heare the beaten Drumme.
Come Father, Ile beftow you with a Friend. Exeunt.

Scena Septima.

Enter Cordelia, Kent, and Gentleman.

Cor. O thou good Kent,
How shall I live and worke
To match thy goodnesse?
My life will be too short,
And euerie meafure faile me.

Kent. To be acknowledg'd Madam is ore-pal'd,
All my reports go with the mofted truth,
Nor more, nor clipt, but fo.

Cor. Be better futed,
These weedes are memories of those worfer hours:
I prythee put them off.

Kent. Pardon deere Madam,
Yet to be knowne fhortsens my made intent,
My boone I make it, that you know me not,
Till time, and I, thinkes meet.

Cor. Then be't fo my good Lord;
How do's the King?

Gent. Madam sleepeas fill.
Cor. O you kind Gods!
Cure this great breach in his abused Nature,
Th'vnun'd and iarring fenfes, O winde vp,
Of this childe-changed Father.

Gent. So pleafe your Maiefty,
That we may wake the King, he hath fleep long?
Cor. Be gouern'd by your knowledge, and proceede
I'th'fway of your owne will: is he array'd?

Enter Lear in a chair carried by Servants

Gent. I Madam: in the heaunefle of sleep,
We put freth garments on him.
Be by good Madam when we do awake him,
I doubt of his Temperance.

Cor. O my deere Father, refturation hang
Thy medicine on my lippes, and let this kife
Remove thofe violent harmes, that my two Sifters
Hauie in thy Reuerence made.

Kent. Kind and deere Princesse.

Cor. Had you not bin their Father, these white flakes
Did challenge pity of them. Was this a face
To be oppos'd againft the iarring winde?
Mine Enemies dogge, though he had bit me,
Should hauie fhould that night againft my fire,
And was't thou faie (poore Father)
To houell thee with Swineand Rogues forlorne,
In foart, and mufty fhaw? Alack, alacke,
'Tis wonder that thy life and wits, at once
Had not concludef all. He whyke,spake to him.

Gen. Madam do you, 'tis fitteft.

Cor. How does my Royall Lord?
How faires your Maiefty?

Lear. You do me wrong to take me out 'th'grave,
Thou art a Soule in bliffe, but I am bound

Vpon a wheele of fire, that mine owne teares
Do fcal'd,like molten Lead.

Cor. Sir, do you know me?

Lear. You are a spirit I know, where did you dye?

Cor. Still, fill, farre wide.

Gen. He's Scarfe awake,
Let him alone a while.

Lear. Where haue I bin?
Where am I? Fair day light?
I am mightily abus'd; I should eu'n dye with pity
To fee another thus. 'I know not what at faie:
I will not fwear thofe are my hands: let's fee,
I feele this pin pricke, would I were affur'd
Of my condition.

Cor. O looke vpon me Sir,
And hold your hand in beneficition o're me,
You must not kneele.

Lear. Pray do not mocke me;
I am a very foolish fond old man,
Fourescore and vpward,
Not an hour more, nor leffe:
And to deale plainly,
I feare I am not in my perfect mind.
Me thinkes I should know you, and know this man,
Yet I am doubtfull: For I am mainly ignorant
What place this isand all the skill I haue
Remembers not thofe garments: nor I know not Where I did lodge laft night. Do not laugh at me,
For (as I am a man) I thinke this Lady
To be my childe Cordelia.

Cor. And fo I am: I am.

Lear. Be your teares wet?
Yes faith: I pray wepe not,
If you haue poelyn for me, I will drinke it:
I know you do not loue me, for your Sifters
Haue (as I do remember) done me wrong.
You have fome caufe, they have not.

Cor. No caufe, no caufe.

Lear. Am I in France?
Kent. In your owne kingdome Sir.

Lear. Do not aibufl me.

Gent. Be comforted good Madam, the great rage
You fee is kill'd in him:defire him to go in,
Trouble him no more till further settling.

Cor. Wilt pleafe your Highnesse walke?

Lear. You must beare with me:
Pray you now forget, and forgue,
I am old and foollifh. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter with Drumme and Colours, Edmund, Regan.
Gentlemen, and Souldiers.

Bafli. Know of the Duke if his laft pu'pose hold,
On whether he is adu's'd by ought
To change the courfc, he's full of alteration,
And felfereprouing, bring his conftant pleafure.

Reg. Our Sifters man is certainly mifcarried.

Bafli. 'Tis to be doubted Madam.

Reg. Now sweet Lord,
The Tragedie of King Lear.

You know the goodness I intend upon you:
Tell me but truly, but then speak the truth,
Do you not love my Sifter?
Bass. In honour'd Love.
Reg. But have you never found my Brothers way,
To the fore-fended place?
Bass. No by mine honour, Madam.
Reg. I never shall endure her, deere my Lord
Be not familiar with her.
Bass. Fear not, she and the Duke her husband.

Enter with Drum and Colours, Albany, Gonerill, Soldiers.

Alb. Our very loving Sitter, well be-met:
Sir, this I heard, the King is come to his Daughter
With others, whom the rigour of our State
For'd to cry out.
Regan. Why is this reafond?
Goneril. Combine together 'gainst the Enemie:
For these demetick and particular broiles,
Are not the question here.
Alb. Let's then determine with th'ancient of warre
On our proceeding.
Reg. Sitter you'll go with us?
Gon. No.
Reg. 'Tis most convenient, pray go with us.
Gon. Oh ho, I know the Riddle, I will goe.

Exeunt both the Armies.

Enter Edgar.
Edg. If ere your Grace had speech with man so poore,
Heare me one word.
Alb. Ile overtake you, speake.
Edg. Before you fight the Battale, ope this Letter:
If you have vict'ry, let the Trumpet sound
For him that brought it: wretched though I seeme,
I can produce a Champion, that will prove
What is awouched there. If you miscarry,
Your bauneffe of the world hath so an end,
And machination ceases. Fortune loves you.
Alb. Stay till I have read the Letter.
Edg. I was forbid it:
When time shall ferue, let but the Herald cry,
And Ile appear again.
Alb. Why fare thee well, I will o're-looke thy piper.

Enter Edmund.

Bass. The Enemy's in view, draw vp your powers,
Heere is the gueffe of their true strengthe and Forces,
By diligent dillcuoure, but your haft
Is now wrapt on you.
Alb. We will greet the time.

Edg. To both these Sitters hauie I sworne my love:
Each jealous of the other, as the sting
Are of the Adder. Which of them shall I take?
Both? One? Or neither? Neither can be enjoy'd
If both remaine alius: To take the Widow,
Exasperates, makes mad her Sitter Gonerill,
And hardly shall I carry out my fide,
Her husband being alius. Now then, we'll vfe
His countenance for the Battale, which being done,
Let her who would be rid of him, deute
His speedy taking off. As for the mercie
Which he intends to Lear and to Cordelia,
The Battale done, and they within our power,
Shall never se his pardon: for my flate,
Stands on me to defend, not to debate.

Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Alarum wit bin. Enter with Drumme and Colours, Lear, Cordelia, and Souldiers, over the Stage, and Exeunt.

Enter Edgar, and Gloster.

Edg. Hearer Father, take the shadoe of this Tree
For your good hoist: pray that the right may trie:
If ever I returne to you againe,
Ile bring you comfort.
Glo. Grace go with you Sir.

Exeunt.

Alarum and Retreat within.

Enter Edgar.

Edgar. Away old man, glue me thy hand, away:
King Lear hath loit, he and his Daughter tane,
Give me thy hand : Come on.
Glo. No further Sir, a man may rot euon heere.
Edg. What in ill thoughts againe?
Men mutt endure
Their going hence, euon as their comming hither,
Ripeness is all come on.
Glo. And that's true too.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter in conquest with Drum and Colours, Edmund, Lear, and Cordelia, as prisoners, Souldiers, Captaine.

Bass. Some Officers take them away; good guard,
Vastill their greaeter pleasures first be knowne
That are to censure them.
Cor. We are not the first,
Who with beft meaning have incurrel'd the worfe:
For thee oppreffed King I am call'd downe,
My selfe could els eftowne falle Fortunes frowne.
Shall we not fee these Daughters, and these Sitters?
Lear. No, no, no, no: come let's away to prifon,
We two alone will finge like Birds i'th'Cage:
When thou doft afke me fbleffing, Ile kneele downe
And afke of thee furgeoneffe: So we'll lie
And pray, and finge, and tell old tales, and laugh
At gidded Butterflies: and heere (poore Rogues)
Talk of Court newes, and we'll talke with them too,
Who loofe, and who wins; who's in, who's out;
And take vp'n the mystery of things,
As if we were Gods fipes: And we'll weare out
In a wall'd prifon, packs and fefts of great ones,
That ebe and flow by th'Moone.
Bass. Take them away.
Lear. Vpon fuch sacrifice my Cordelia,
The Gods themrefelves throw Incenfe.
Haue I caught thee?
He that parts vs, shall bring a Brand from Heauen,
And fire vs hence, like Foxes with fire eyes,
The good yeares shall deoure them, fleth and fell,
The Tragedie of King Lear.

Ere they shall make vs wepe?
Weele see e'm flaru’d first: come.

-BAU. Come hither Captaine, hearke.
Take thou this note, go follow them to prifon,
One Rep I have advanc’d thee, if thou do’st
As this infructs thee, thou doft make thy way
To Noble Fortunes: know thou this, that men
Are as the time is; to be tender minded
Do’s not become a Sword, thy great imployment
Will not beare question either fay thou’dt o’er.
Or thrive by other meanes.

-CAPT. I’l doe my Lord.

-BAU. About it and write happy, when thy haft done,
Marke I say faintly, and carry it fo
As I have fet it down.

exit Captaine.

Flourish. Enter Albany, Gonersill, Regan, Soldiers.

Alb. Sir, you haue shew’d to day your valiant firaine
And Fortune led you well; you have the Captuies
Who were the opposites of this dayes firifes:
I do require them of you to vfe them,
As we shall find their merites, and our safety
May equally determine.

BAU. Sir, I thought it fit,
To send the old and miferable King to some retention,
Whole age had Charmes in it, whose Title more
To plucke the common boosome on his fide,
And turn our imperft Laurences in our eies
Which do command them. With him I fent the Queen:
My reafon all the fame, and they are ready
To morrow, or at further space, I’l appeare
Where you shall hold your Seffion.

Alb. Sir, by your patience,
I hold you but a subiect of this Warre,
Not as a Brother.

Reg. That’s as we lift to grace him.
Methinks our pleafure might haue bin demanded
Erre you had fpoke fo farre. He led our Powers,
Bore the Commiſtion of my place and perfon,
The which immediatly may well stand vp,
And call it felle your Brother.

Gen. Not fo hot:
In his owne grace he doth exalt himfelfe,
More then in your addition.

Reg. In my rights,
By me inueded, he compeares the beft.

Alb. That were the moft, if he fhould haue you.
Reg. Lefters do oft proue Prophets.

Gen. Hola, hola,
That eye that told you fo, look’d but a squint.

Rega. Lady I am not well, elfe I should anfwer
From a full flowing flomack. General,
Take thou my Souldiers, prifoners, patrimony,
Difpoke of them, of me, the walls is thine:
Witness the world, that I create thee here
My Lord, and Matter.

Gen. Meane you to enjoy him?

Alb. The let alone lies not in your good will.

-Baft. Nor in thine Lord.

Alb. Halfe-blud ed fellow, ye’s.

Reg. Let the Drum strike, and proue my title thine.

Alb. Stay yet, heare reaſon: Edmund d, I arreft thee
On capittall Trafon; and in thy arreft,
This gilded Serpent: for your claime faire Sifthers,
I bare it in the intercet of my wife,

'Tis he is sub-contract’d to this Lord,
And I her husband contradicter your Banes.
If you will marry, make your loues to me,
My Lady is befpeke.

Gen. An enterlude.

Alb. Thou art armed Glofter,
Let the Trumpet found:
If none appeare to proue upon thy perfon,
Thy heynous, manifeft, and many Treasons,
There is my pledge: Ie make it on thy heart
Ere I taste bread, thou art in nothing leffe
Then I have heere proclaim’d thee.

Reg. Sicke, O sicke.

Gen. If not, Ie nere truft medicine.

-BAU. There’s my exchange, what in the world he’s
That names me Traitor, villain-like he lies,
Call by the Trumpet: he that dares approach;
On him, on you, who not, I will maintaine
My truth and honor firmly.

Enter a Herald.

Truft to thy fingle vertue, for thy Souldiers
All leuiad in my name, haue in my name
Tooke their discharge.

Regan. My fickneffe growes vpon me.

Alb. She is not well, conuey her to my Tent.
Come hither Herald, let the Trumper found,
And read out this.

Herald reads.

I if any man of qualitie or degree, within the lift of the Army, will maintaine vpon Edmund, Ejposed Earle of Glofter, that he is a manifald Traitor, let him appeare by the third found of the Trumpet: e he bold in his defence.

Exit Trumpet.

Her. Again.

Trumpet answers within.

Alb. Aske him his purpofes, why he appeares
Vpon this Cal2 o’th Trumpet.

Her. What are you?
Your name, your quality, and why you anfwer
This preffent Summons?

Edg. Know my name is loft
By Treasons tooth: bare-cgnawne, and Canker-bit,
Yet am I Noble as the Aduerfary
I come to cope.

Alb. Which is that Aduerfary?

Edg. What’s he that Speakes for Edmund Earle of Glo-

-BAU. Himfelfe, what likt thou to him ?

Edg. Draw thy Sword,

That if my Speech offend a Noble heart,
Thy arme may do thee Justice, heere is mine:
Behold it is my privilage,
The pruifie of mine Honours,
My oath, and my profession. I proteft,
Maugre thy ftrength, place, youth, and eminence,
Defpite thy victor-Sword, and fire new Fortune,
Thy valor, and thy heart, thou art a Traitor:
Falle to thy Gods, thy Brother, and thy Father,
Confpriant gainft this high illuftrious Prince,
And from th’eextremely vpward of thy head,
To the difcent and dunt below thy footes,

A most Toad-pocket Traitour. Say thou no, This Sword, this arme, and my bell spirits are bent To prove upon thy heart, whereeto I speake, Thou lyest.

'Baft. In widowsome I should ask thy name, But since thy out-side looks so faire and Warlike, And that thy tongue in some law of breathing breathes, What safe, and nicely I might well delay, By rule of Knight-hood, I dilate and spurne: Backe do I toffe these Treasons to thy head, With the hell-hated Lynce, or-welme thy heart, Which for they yet glance by, and fearfully bruife, This Sword of mine shall give them infant way, Where they shall rest for ever. Trumpets speake.

Gen. This is prafticie Glorier,
By th'law of Warre, thou walt not bound to answer An vnknowne oppolite; thou art not vanquished, But cozed, and be gild.

Alb. Shut your mouth Dame, Or with this paper shall I stop it: hold Sir, Thou worfe then any name, reade thine owne euille : No treading Lady, I perceu you know it.

Gen. Say if I do, the I awers are mine not thine, Who can ariaigne me for't? Exit.

Alb. Most monftrous ! O, know'th thou this paper?

Baft. Aske me not what I know.

Alb. Go after her, she's desperate, goure her.

Baft. What you haue charg'd me with,
That haue I done, And more, much more, the time will bring it out. 'Tis past, and so am I : But what art thou That haft this Fortune on me? If thou'tr Noble, I do forgive thee.

Edg. Let's exchange charity; I am no lefe in blood then thou art Edmond, If more, the more th'haft wrong'd me. My name is Edgar and thy Fathers Sonne, The Gods are juft, and of our pleafant vices Make instruments to plague vs : The darke and vizious place where thee he got, Cott him his eyes.

Baft. Th'haft spoken right,'tis true, The Wheele is come full circle, I am herehe.

Alb. Me thought thy very gate did prophetic A Royall Noblenesse: I must embrace thee, Let sorrow fliume my heart, if euer I Did hate thee, or thy Father.

Edg. Worthy Prince I know't.

Alb. Where have you hid your selfe ?

How have you knowne the miferies of your Father?

Edg. By nurfing them my Lord. Lift a briefe tale, And when 'tis told, O that my heart would burn.

The bloody proclamation to escape That follow'd me so neere(O our lives sweetneffe, That we the pains of death would hourely dye, Rather then die at once) taught me to shift Into a mad-mans rage, t'assume a fumble That very Dogges defi'd, and in this habit Met I my Father with his bleeding Rings, Their precious Stones new loft: became his guide, Led him, begg'd for him, fau'd him from dispaire. Neuer(O fault)resue'd I my selfe vnto him, Vntill some halfe houre paft when I was arm'd, Not sure, though hoping of this good succeffe, I ask'd hisbleffing,and from first to last-Told him our pilgrimage. But his flaw'd heart (Alacke too weake the conflict to support) Twixt two extremes of passion, joy and greefe, Burnt limplying.

Baft. This speech of yours hath mou'd me, And shall perchance do good, but speake you on, You looke as you had something more to say. Alb. If there be more, more wofull, hold it in, For I am almost ready to dissole, Hearing of this.

Enter a Gentleman.

Gen. Helpe, helpe : O helpe,
Edg. What kinde of helpe?

Alb. Speake man.

Edg. What means this bloody Knife?

Gen. 'Tis hot, it smoke's, it came even from the heart of—O she's dead.

Gen. Your Lady Sir,your Lady; and her Sitter
By her is poyfon'd: she confesse's it.

Baft. I was contracted to them both, all three Now marry in an instant.

Edg. Here comes Kent.

Enter Kent.

Alb. Produce the bodies, be they alive or dead;
Gonerill and Regan bodiessbrought out.

This judgement of the Heauens that makes vs tremble. Touches vs not with pitty: O, is this he?
The time will not allow the complement Which very manners vrges.

Kent. I am come To bid my King and Master aye good night. Is he not here?

Alb. Great thing of vs forgot, Speake Edmund, where's the King? and where's Cordelia? Seest thou this obiect Kent?

Kent. Alacke, why thus?

Baft. Yet Edmund was belou'd: The one the other poison'd for my fake, And after flew herelfe.

Alb. Even fo toouer their faces.

Baft. I pant for life : some good I meane to do Delight of mine owne Nature. Quickly fend, (Be briefe in it) to' th'Caftle, for my Writ Is on the life of Lear, and on Cordelia: Nay, fend in time.

Alb. Run, run, O run.

Edg. To who my Lord? Who ha's the Office? Send thy token of repreuue.

Baft. Well thought on, take my Sword, Give it the Captaine.

Edg. Haft thee for thy life.

Baft. He hath Commiffion from thy Wife and me, To hang Cordelia in the prifon, and To lay the blame upon her owne dispaire, That she for did her selfe.

Alb. The Gods defend her,beare him hence awhile.

Enter Lear with Cordelia in his armes.

Lear. Howle, howle, howle: O your are men of stones, Had I your tongues and eyes, I'd vfe them so, That Heauens vault should crack : she's gone for euer. I know when one is dead, and when one liues, She's dead as earth: Lend me a Looking-glaffe,
If that her breath will mist or stable the stone,
Why then she lies.
Kent. Is this the promis’d end?
Edg. Or image of that horror.
Alb. Fall and cease.
Lear. This feather flies, she lies: if it be so,
It is a chance which do’s redeem all sorrowes
That ever I have felt.
Kent. O my good Master.
Lear. Prythee away.
Edg. ’Tis Noble Kent your Friend.
Lear. A plague upon you Murderers, Traitors all,
I might haue fa’d her, now she’s gone for ever:
Cordelia, Cordelia, say a little. Ha:
What is’t thou faid? Her voice was ever soft,
Gentle, and low, an excellent thing in woman.
I kill’d the Slave that was a hanging thee.
Gent. ’Tis true (my Lords) he did.
Lear. Did I not fellow?
I haue seene the day, with my good biting Faulchion
I would haue made him skip: I am old now,
And these same croffes spoile me. Who are you?
Mine eyes are not o’th’best, Ile tell you straight.
Kent. If Fortune brag of two, she lou’d and hated,
One of them we behold.
Lear. This is a dull fight, are you not Kent?
Kent. The same: your Seruant Kent,
Where is your Seruant Calus?
Lear. He’s a good fellow, I can tell you that,
He’ll strike and quickly too, he’s dead and rotten.
Kent. No my good Lord, I am the very man.
Lear. Ile fee that straight.
Kent. That from your first of difference and decay,
Haue follow’d your sad steps.
Lear. Your are welcome hither.
Kent. Nor no man else.
All’s cheerliffe, darke, and deadly,
Your eldest Daughters haue fore-done themselues,
And desperately are dead
Lear. I fo I thinke.
Alb. He knowes not what he faies, and vaine is it

That we present vs to him.

Enter a Messenger.

Edg. Very bootleffe.
M. Edmund is dead my Lord.
Alb. That’s but a trifle heere:
You Lords and Noble Friends, know our intent,
What comfort to this great decay may come,
Shall be appli’d. For vs we will regine,
During the life of this old Maiesty
To him our absolute power, you to your rights,
With boote, and fuch addition as your Honours
Hauing more then merited. All Friends shall Talke the wages of their vertue, and all Foes
The cup of their deferings: O fee, fee.
Lear. And my poore Foole is hang’d: no, no, no life?
Why should a Dog, a Horfe, a Rat haue life,
And thou no breath at all? Thou’lt come no more,
Neuer, neuer, neuer, neuer, neuer.
Pray you vndo this Button. Thanke you Sir,
Do you fee this? Looke on her? Looke her lips,
Looke there, looke there.

Edg. He faints, my Lord, my Lord.
Kent. Break heart, I prythee break.
Edg. Looke vp my Lord.
Kent. Vex not his ghost, O let him passe, he hates him,
That would vpon the wracke of this tough world
Stretch him out longer.
Edg. He is gon indeed.
Kent. The wonder is, he hath endur’d so long,
He but vforpht his life.
Alb. Beare them from hence, our present busineffe
Is generallye wo: Friends of my soule, you twaine,
Rule in this Realme, and the gor’d flate sustaine.
Kent. I haue a journey Sir, shortly to go,
My Mafter calls me, I must not faie no.
Edg. The weight of this sad time we must obey,
Spreake what we feele, not what we ought to say:
The eldest hath borne moff, we that are yong,
Shall not fee so much, nor live so long.

Exeunt with a dead March.

FINIS.

We cannot all be Mafter, nor all Mafter.

Iago. Why? Wherefore ask you this?
Your heart is burnt, you have lost half your soule
Even now, now, very now, an old blacke Ram
Is tapping your white Ewe. Arife, Arife,
Awake the sitting Citizens with the Bell,
Or else the devil will make a Grand-fire of you.

Arife I say.

_Bra._ What, haue you loft your wits?
_Rod._ Moft reverend Signior, do you know my voice?
_Bra._ Not I: what are you?
_Rod._ My name is Rodorigo.
_Bra._ The worfer welcome:
I haue charg'd thee not to haunt about my doores:
In honest plainenesse thou haft heard me say,
My Daughter is not for thee. And now in madnesse
(Being full of Supper, and diftempering draughtes)
Upon malitious knauerie, doth thou come
To falt my quiet.

_Rod._ Sir,Sir,Sir.
_Bra._ But thou muft needs be sure,
My spirits and my place haue in their power
To make this bitter to thee.

_Rod._ Patience good Sir.
_Bra._ What tell'st thou me of Robbing?
This is Venice: my house is not a Grange.

_Rod._ Most graue Brabantio,
In simple and pure soule, I come to you.

_La._ Sir: you are one of those that will not ferue God,
If the devil bid you. Because we come to do you servile,
And you thinke we are Ruffians, you haue your Daughter
couer'd with a Barbary horse, you haue your Nephewes neigh to you,
You haue Courfiers for Cozens: and Gennets for Graumies.

_Bra._ What profane wretch art thou?

_La._ I am one Sir, that comes to tell you, your Daughter and the Moore, are making the Beait with two backs.

_Bra._ Thou art a Villaine.

_La._ You are a Senator.

_Bra._ This thou haft anfwere. I know thee Rodorigo.

_Rod._ Sir, I will anfwere any thing. But I befeech you
If't be your pleasure, and moft wise confent,
(As partly and partly as you faire Daughter,
At this odde Euen and dull watch o'th'night
Transported with no worfe nor better guard,
But with a knaue of common hire, a Gunderlier,
To the groffe clafpes of a Lafticulous Moore:
If this be knowne to you, and your Allowance,
We then have done you bold, and fauie wrongs.
But if you know not this, my Manners tell me,
We have your rogue rebuke. Do not beleue
That from the fenc of all Civilitie,
I thus would play and triphe with your Reuerence.
Your Daughter (if you haue not given her leave)
I fay againe, hath made a groffe reuole,
Tying her Duke, Beaufte, Witt, and Fortunes
In an extravagant, and wheeling Stranger,
Of here, and every where: fraught fatisfe your felfe.
If she be in her Chamber, or your house,
Let offe on me the juftice of the State.
For thus deluding you.

_Bra._ Strike on the Tinder, hoa:
Giu me a Taper: call vp all my people,
This Accident is not unlike my dreame,
Beliefe of it opprefes me alreadie.
Light, I fay, light.

_Lag._ Farewell: for I muft leave you.
It feme not meete, nor wholefome to my place

To be produc'd, (as if I fly, I fhall,) Again't the Moore. For I do know the State,
(How euer this may gull him with some checke)
Cannot with fatisfe cafe him. For he's embarke'd
With fuch loud reafon to the Cyprus Warres,
(Which even now flands in Aef) that for their soules
Another of his Fadome, they have none,
To lead their Bifiniere. In which regard,
Though I do hate him as I do hell apines,
Yet, for neceffity of prefent life,
I muft show out a Flag, and figne of Loue,
(Which is indeed but figne) that you fhal surely find him
Lead to the Sagitary the raifed Search:
And there will I be with him. So farewell,

Enter Brabantio, with Servants and Torches.

_Bra._ It is too true an euill. Gone she is,
And what's to come of my defpifed time,
Is naught but bitterneffe. Now Rodorigo,
Where didft thou fee her? (Oh vnhappie Girle)
With the Moore fai't thou? (Who would be a Father?)
How didft thou know 'twas she? (Oh she deceaves me Palt thought:) what faid she to you? Get moe Tapers:
Raffe all my Kindred. Are they married thinke you?

_Rod._ Truely I thinke they are.

_Bra._ Oh Haueuen: how got the out?
Oh treafion of the blood.
Fathers, from hence truft not your Daughters minds
By what you fee them aef. Is there not Charmes,
By which the property of Youth, and Maidhood
May be abus'd? Have you not read Rodorigo,
Of fome fuch thing?

_Rod._ Yes Sir: I have indeed.

_Bra._ Call vp my Brother: oh would you had had her.
Some one way, fome another. Do you know
Where we may apprehend her, and the Moore?

_Rod._ I thinke I can difcouer him, if you pleafe
To get good Guard, and go along with me.

_Bra._ Pray you lead on. At every houfe Ie call,
(I may command at moft) get Weapons (hoa)
And raife fome fpecial Officers of might:
On good Rodorigo, I will deferve your paines.

Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello, Iago, Attendants, with Torches.

_Ia._ Though in the trade of Warre I haue flaine men,
Yet do I hold it very Stuffe o'th'confidence
To do no contriu'd Murder: I lacke Iniquitie
Sometime to do me Seruice. Nine, or ten times
I had thought I haue yerkt him here vnder the Ribbes.
Othello. 'Tis better as it is.

_Ia._ Nay but he prated,
And Spoke fuch fcrunny, and provoking terms
Against your Honor, that with the little godlineffe I have
I did full hard forbeare him. But I pray you Sir,
Are you fay married? Be affur'd of this,
That the Magnifico is much belo'd,
And hath in his effect a voice potentail
As double as the Dukes: He will divorce you.
Or put vpon you, what refraint or greuance,
The Law (with all his might, to enforce it on)
Will glue him Cable.

Oth. Let him do his spight;
My Services, which I have done the Signorie
Shall out-tongue his Complaints, 'Tis yet to know,
Which when I know, that boating is an Honour,
I shall promulgate. I fetch my life and being,
From Men of Royall Seige. And my demerites
May speake (vnbonnetted) to as proud a Fortune
As this that I have reach'd, (For know Iago,
But that I lace the gentle Dejdemona,
I would not my vnhoufed free condition
Put into Circumfcription, and Confine,
For the Seas worth. But looke, what Lights come yond?

Enter Caffio, with Torches.

Iago. Those are the raiied Father, and his Friends:
You were best go in.

Oth. Not I: I must be found.
My Parts, my Title, and my perfect Soule
Shall manifold me rightly. Is it they?

Iago. By lanus, I think no.
Oth. The Servants of the Dukes?
And my Lieutenant?
The goodneffe of the Night upon you (Friends)
What is the Newes?

Caffio. The Duke do's greet you (Generall)
And he requires your harte, Poff-harte appearance,
Enen on the infant.

Othello. What is the matter, thinke you?

Caffio. Something from Cyprus, as I may diuine:
It is a buifeneffe of some heate. The Gallies
Have fent a dozen frequent Meffengers
This very night, at one anothers heele:
And many of the Confuls, rais'd and met,
Are at the Dukes already. You have bin hotly call'd for,
When being not at your Lodging to be found,
The Senate hath fent about three feueral Ouets,
To search you out.

Oth. 'Tis well I am found by you:
I will but fpend a word here in the house,
And goe with you.

Caffio. Auncient, what makes he heere?

Iago. Faith, he to night hath boarded a Land Carra'd,
If it prove lawfull prize, he's made for ever.

Caffio. I do not vnderfand.

Iago. He's married.

Caffio. To who?

Iago. Marry to———Come Captaine, will you go?

Oth. Have with you.

Caffio. Here come anoither Troope to feke for you.

Enter Brabantio, Rodrigo, with Officers, and Torches.

Iago. It is Brabantio:General he adua'd,
He comes to bad intent.

Othello. Holla, stand there.

Rod. Signior, it is the Moore.

Bra. Downe with him, Theefe.

Iago. You, Rodrigo, come Sir, I am for you.

Oth. Keeepe vp your bright Swords, for thedew will ruft them. Good Signior, you shallmmore command with yeares, then with your Weapons.

Bra. Oh thou foule Theefe,
Where haft thou flow'd my Daughter?
Damn'd as thou art, thou haft enchantd her

For Ile referre me to all things of fense,
(If she in Chains of Magick were not bound)
Whether a Maid, so tender, Faire, and Happie,
So oppofite to Marriage, that she shoud
The wealthy curled Dearel ing of our Nation,
Would euer haue (t'encurre a generall mocke)
Run from her Guardageto the footie before,
Of fuch a thing as thou: to feare, not to delight?
Judge me the world, if'tis not groffe in fene,
That thou haft praftis'd on her with foule Charmes,
Abus'd her delicate Youth, with Drugs or Minerals,
That weakens Motion. Ile haue't diputed on,
'Tis probable, and palpable to thinking;
I therefore apprehend and do attach thee,
For an abuer of the World, a prafticer
Of Arts inhibited, and out of warrant;
Lay hold vpon him, if he do refrift
Subdue him, at his peril.

Oth. Hold your hands
Both you of my inicling, and the reft.
Were it my Cue to fight, I shoud haue knowne it
Without a Prompter. Whether will you that I goe
To anfwere this your charge?

Bra. To Prifon, till fit time
Of La w, and course of direct Session
Call thce to anwier.

Oth. How may the Duke be therewith fati'd,
Whole Meffengers are heere about my fide,
Vpon fome prefent buifonne of the State,
To bring me to him.

Officer. 'Tis true moft worthy Signior,
The Dukes in Counfell, and your Noble felfe,
I am fure is fent for.

Bra. How? The Duke in Counfell?
In this time of the night? Bring him away;
Mine's not an idle Caufe. The Duke himfelfe,
Or any of my Brothers of the State,
Cannot but feele this wrong, as 'twere their owne:
For if fuch Actions may haue paffage free,
Bond-flaues, and Pagans shall our Statefmen be.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Duke, Senators, and Officers.

Duke. There's no composition in this Newes,
That gives them Credite.

1. Sen. Indeed, they are disproportionately
My Letters say, a Hundred and feuen Gallies.

Duke. And mine a Hundred fortie.

2. Sena. And mine two Hundred:
But though they jump not on a fuft accompt,
(As in thefe Cafes where the ayme reports,
'Tis oft with difference)yet do they all confirme
A Turkish Fleeze, and bearing vp to Cyprus.

Duke. Nay, it is poiffible enough to judgement:
I do not fo fecure me in the Error,
But the maine Article I do approue
In fearfull fene.

Enter Saylor.

Officer. A
And you of her; the bloody Book of Law,
You shall your felle read, in the bitter letter,
After your own feme: yea, though your proper Son
Stood in your Adton.

Bra. Humbly I thank your Grace,
Here is the man; this Moore, whom now it feemes
Your speciall Mandate, for the State affaires
Hath hithe brought.

All. We are verieorry fort.

Duke. What in your owne part,can you fay to this?

Bra. Nothing, but this is fo.

Oth. Most Potent, Graue, and Reueren'd Signiors,
My very Noble, and approvd good Mafter,
That I haue tane away this old mans Daughter,
It is moft true: true I haue married her;
The verie head, and front of my offending,
Hath this extent; no more. Rude am I,in my speeche,
And little blef'd with the foft phrase of Peace;
For since thefe Armes of mine, had feuen yeares pith,
Till now,fone nine Moones wafted, they haue vs'd
Their deerest action, in the Tented Field:
And little of this great world can I speake,
More then pertaines to Feats of Broyles, and Battleale,
And therefore little shall I grace my caufe,
In speaking for my felle. Yet, (by your gratious patience)
I will a round vn-varnish'd u Tale deliuer,
Of my whole courfe of Loe.
What Drugges, what Charmes,
What Coniuration, and what mighty Magickie,
(For fuch proceeding I am charg'd withall)
I won his Daughter.

Bra. A Maiden,neuer bold:
Of Spirit fo still, and quiet,that her Motion
Bludh'd at her felle, and fhe, in fipht of Nature,
Of Yeares, of Country, Credite, every thing
To fall in Loeue, with what the fear'd do looke on;
It is a judgement main'd, and most imperfect.
That will confeffe Perfection fo could erre
Againft all rules of Nature, and muft be drieuen
To find out praftices of cunning hell.
Why this should be. I therefore vouch again,
That with fome Mixtures, powrfule o're the blood,
Or with fome Dram,(coniur'd to this effeft)
He wtought vp on her.
To vouch this, is no prooffe,
Without more wider, and more ouer Teft
Then thefe thin habitts, and poore likely-hoods
Of moderne feeming, do prefer againft him.

Sen. But Othello, speake,
Did you, by indirec't, and forced courfe
Sublue, and poylon this yong Maides affections?
Or came it by request, and fuch faire question
As foule, to foule affordefeth?

Othel. I do belfee you,
Send for the Lady to the Sagitary.
And let her speake of me before her Father;
If you do finde me foule, in herreport,
The Truft, the Office, I do hold of you,
Not onely take away, but let your Sentence
Euen fall upon my life.

Oth. Aunciant,conduft them:
You beft know the place.
And tell he come, as truely as to heaven,
I do confedere the vices of my blood,
So iuftly to your Grace cares, Ile præsent
How
The Tragedie of Othello

How I did thriue in this faire Ladies loue,
And she in mine.

Duke. Say it Othello.

Oth. Her Father lou'd me oft invited me:
Still question'd me the Storie of my life,
From yeare to yeare: the Batalla, Sieges, Fortune,
That I have past.

I ran ye through, even from my boyish daies,
Toch'very momont that he bad me tell it.

Wherein I spoke of most disadraught chances:
Of mourning Accidents by Flood and Field,
Of haire-breath icept's t'illuminate deadly breas;
Of being taken by the Inflent Foe,
And fold to bluary. Of my redemption thence,
And portance in my Trauerlours hifroie.

Wherein of Antars vaft, and Defarts idle,
Rough Quarries, Rocks, Hills, whose head touch heauen,
It was my hint to speake. Such was my Procede,
And of the Canibals that each others eate,
The Antrepogone, and men whose heads
Grew beneath their shoulders. These things to heare,
Would IDefdemona serioufly incline:
But till the house Affaires would draw her hence:
Which euer as she could with hate dispatch,
She'd come againe, and with a greedie care
Deououre vp my difcourfe. Which I obseruing,
Tooke once a pliant houre, and found good meanes
To draw from her a prayer of eareft heart,
That I would all my Pilgrimage dilate,
Whereof by parcels she had something heard,
But not indifcutiously: I did confent,
And often did beguiue her of her teares,
When I did speake of some di/greous stroke
That my youth fuffer'd: My Storie being done,
She gaue me for my paines a world of kiffes:
She fwore in faith 'twas strange: 'twas paffing strange,
'Twas pittifull: 'twas wondrous pittifull.
She wish'd she had not heard it:yet the wish'd
That Heauen had made her such a man. She thanke'd me,
And bad me, if I had a Friend that lou'd her,
I thould but teach him how to tell my Story,
And that would wooe her. Upon this hint I speake,
She lou'd me for the dangers I had past,
And I tou'd her, that she did pity them.
This onely is the witch-craft I laue va'd.
Here comes the Ladie: Let her witnefe it.

Enter Defdemona, Iago, Attendants.

Duke. I thinkne this tale would win my Daughter too,
Good Brabantius, take vp this mangled matter at the belft:
Men do thier broken Weapons rather vfe,
Then their bare hands.

Bra. I pray you heare her speake?
If she confesse that she was halfe the wooer,
Destrucion on my head, if my bad blame
Light on the man. Come hither gentle Misfris,
Do you perceue in all this Noble Companie,
Where mort you owe obedience?

Def. My Noble Father,
I do perceue heere a divided dutie,
To you I am bound for life, and education:
My life and education both do learn me,
How to reapee you. You are the Lord of duty,
I am bitherto your Daughter. But heere's my Husband;
And so much dutie, as my Mother shew'd

To you, preferring you before her Father:
So much I challenge, that I may professe
Due to the Moore my Lord.

Bra. God be with you: I haue done.
Please it your Grace, on to the State Affaires;
I had rather to adopt a Child, then get it.
Come hither Moore:
I here do giue thee that with all my heart,
Which but thou haft already, with all my heart
I would keepe from thee. For your fake (Iewell)
I am glad at soule, I haue no other Child,
For thy escape would teache me Tiranie.
To hang clogges on them, I haue done my Lord.

Duke. Let me speake like your selfe:
And lay a Sentence,
Which as a grieff, or step may helpe these Louers.
When remedies are past, the griefes are ended
By feeing the worft, which late on hopes depended.
To mourne a Mischeefe that is past and gon,
Is the next way to draw new mishcife on.
What cannot be prefern'd, when Fortune takes:
Patience, her Inury a mock'ry makes.
The rob'd that smiles, feales something from the Thife,
He robs himfelfe, that spends a bootlefle griefe.

Bra. So let the Turke of Cyprus vs beguile,
We leafe it not fo long as we can smile:
He bears the Sentence well, that nothing heares,
But the free comfort which from thence he heares.
But he bears both the Sentence, and the forrow,
That to pay grieue, muft of poore Patience borrow.
These Sentences, to Sugar, or to Gall,
Being strong on both sides, are Equiuocall.
But words are words, I neuer yet did heare;
That the bruized heart was pierc'd through the eares.
I humbly beseech you proceed to th'Affaires of State.

Duke. The Turke with a most mighty Preparation makes for Cyprus: Othello, the Fortitude of the place is briet knowne to you. And though we have there a Substitute of most allowed fufficiencie; yet opinion, a more fouveraigne Mihi's of Effeets, throws a more fafer voice on you: you must therefore be content to flubber
the glaffe of your new Fortunes, with this more fubborne, and boyfrious expedition.

Oth. The Tirant Cuftome, most Graue Senatos,
Hath made the fainty and Steele Coach of Warre
My thrice-driuen bed of Downe. I do aognize
A Naturall and prompt Alacartie,
I finde in hardneffe: and do vndertake
This prefent Warres againft the Ottalmites.
Moft humbly therefore bending to your State,
I craue fit dipollition for my Wife,
Due reference of Place, and Exhibition,
With fuch Accomodation and bafort
As leuels with her breeding.

Duke. Why at her Fathers?
Bra. I will not haue it fo.

Oth. Nor I.

Def. Nor would I there recide,
To put my Father in impatien thoughts
By being in his eye. Mofl Graious Duke,
To my vnfolding, lend your prosperous ear,
And let me finde a Charter in your voice
'Taffift my ampleness.

Duke. What would you Defdemona?

Def. That I loue the Moore, to liue with him,
My downe-right violence, and formes of Fortunes,
May trumpet to the world. My heart's subdu'd
Even to the very quality of my Lord;
I saw Otello's vantage in his mind,
And to his Honours and his valiant parts,
Did I my foule and Fortunes conacrate.
So that (deere Lords) I be left behind
A Moth of Peace, and he go to the Warre,
The Rites for why I loue him, are bereft me;
And I a heauie interim shall support
By his deere abfence. Let me go with him.

Oth. Let her haue your voice.
Vouch with me Hauean, I therefore beg it not
To pleafe the pallate of my Appetite:
Nor to comply with heat the yong affects
In my defunct, and proper satisfaction.
But to be free, and bounteous to her minde:
And Hauean defend your good foules, that you think
I will your seruous and great busynesse scant
When she is with me. No, when light wing'd Toyes
Of feather'd Captie,feele with wanton dulneffe
My speculatue, and offic'd Instrument:
That my Disports corrupt, and taint my busynesse:
Let Houfe-wiues make a Skillet of my Helme,
And all indigne, and base aduerfities,
Make head againft my Effimation.

Duke. Be it as you shall privately determine,
Either for her flay, or going: th'Affaire cries haft:
And speed muft anwer it.

Sen. You muft away to night.

Oth. With all my heart.

Duke. At nine i'th'morning, here we'll meete againe.

Otello, leave some Officer behind
And heall our Comission bring to you:
And such things else of quality and respect
As doth import you.

Oth. So pleafe your Grace, my Ancient,
A man he is of honeftie and tru't:
To his conueyance I affigne my wife,
With what else needful, your good Grace shall think
To be sent after me.

Duke. Let it be so:
Get your right to every one. And Noble Signior,
If Vertue, with height, and Bravery lacke,
Your Son-in-law is fairer more Faire then Blacke.

Sen. Adieu braue Moore, vs Defdemona well.

Bra. Looke to her (Moore) if thou haft eies to see:
She ha's deceiu'd her Father, and may thee.

Oth. My life upon her faith. Honest Iago,
My Defdemona muft I leave to thee:
I prythee thy wife attend on her,
And bring them after in the best advantage.
Come Defdemona, I haue but an hour
Of Loue, of wordly matter, and direcition
To spend with thee. We muft obey the the time. Exit.

Red. Iago.

Iago. What faith thou Noble heart?
Red. What will I do, think'd thou?

Iago. Why go to bed and fleape.

Red. I will incontinently drowne my felfe.

Iago. If thou dost, I shall neuere loose thee after. Why thou fility Gentleman?

Red. It is filityneffe to liue, when to liue is torment:
and then haue we a prescription to dye, when death is our Phyfion.

Iago. Oh villanous: I haue look'd vpon the world for foure times feuen yeares, and fince I could distinguifh betwixt a Benefit, and an Injuriue: I neuer found man that knew how to use himfelfe. Ere I would fay, I would drown my felfe for the loue of a Gyney Hen, I would change my Humanity with a Baboone.

Red. What fhould I do? I confeffe it is my shame to be fo fond, but it is not in my vertue to amend it.

Iago. Vertue? A figge, 'tis in our felues that we are thus, or thus. Our Bodies are our Gardens, to the which, our Wills are Gardeners. So that if we will plant Net-
tels, or fowe Lettice: Set Hifope, and weede vp Time:
Supply it with one gender of Hearbes, or diuert it with many; either to haue it terrill with idlenesse, or manured with Industry, why the power, and Corrigable au-tority of this lies in our Wills. If the braine of our luies had not one Scale of Reafon, to pooze another of Senfuallitie, the blood, and bafeneffe of our Natures would conduc't vs to moft preprouifous Conclufions. But we have Reafon to coule our raging Motions, our carnall Stings, or abhitted Lufts: whereof I take this, that you call Loue, to be a Seaf, or Syen.

Red. It cannot be,

Iago. It is meere a Luft of the blood, and a permiffion of the will. Come, be a man: drown thy felfe? Drown Cats, and blind Puppies. I haue profèct me thy Friend, and I confefte me knit to thy defieruing, with Cables of perduvable toughneffe. I could never better fee the thee then now. Put Money in thy purfe: follow thou the Warres, defeate thy fauvour, with an vfurp'd Beard. I fay put Money in thy purfe. It cannot be long that Defdemona fhould continue her loue to the Moore. Put Money in thy purfe nor he his to her. It was a violent Commencement in her, and thou falt fee an anfwerable Sequefration, put but Money in thy purfe. These Mores are changeable in their wills: fill thy purfe with Money.
The Food that to him now is as lufious as Locuits, Shalbe to him shortly, as bitter as Colouquitida. She muft change for youth: when the is fated with his body she will find the errors of her choice. Therefore, put Mooney in thy purfe. If thou wilt needs damne thy felfe, do it a more delicate way then drowning. Make all the Money thou canft: If Sanétmonie, and a fraile voice, betwixt an erring Barbarian, and fuper-fible Venetian be not too hard for my wife, and all the 'Trible of hell, thou falt enjoy her: therefore make Money: a pox of drowning thy felfe, it is clean out of the way. Seeke thou rather to be hang'd in Compaffing thy ioy, then to be drown'd, and go without her.

Red. Wilt thou be fai't to my hopes, if I depend on the iuffe?

Iago. Thou art fure of me: Go make Money: I haue told thee often, and I re-tell thee againe, and againe,
I hate the Moore. My caufe is hearted; thine hath no leffe reafon. Let vs be conjunclue in our reuenge, against him. If thou canft Cuckold him, thou doft thy felfe a pleaure, me a fport. There are many Euenets in the Wombe of Time, which wilbe delivered. Trauerfe, go, prouide thy Money. We will have more of this to morrow. Adieu.

Red. Where shall we meete i'th'morning?

Iago. At my Lodging.

Red. Ile be with thee betimes.

Iago. Go too, farewel. Do you hear Rodorigo?

Red. Ile fell all my Land.

Exit.

Iago. Thus do I euer make my Foole, my purfe:
For I mine owne gain'd knowledge should prophanne
If I would time expend with such Snpe,
Enter Secundus. Scena Prima.

Mon. What from the Cape, can you difcerne at Sea?

1 Gent. Nothing at all, it is a high wrought Flood:
I cannot 'twixt the Heauen, and the Maine,
Defcry a Saile.

Mon. Me thinks, the wind hath spoke aloud at Land,
A fuller blast ne're shooke our Battlements:
If it hath ruffian fo upon the Sea,
What ribbes of Oake, when Mountains melt on them,
Can hold the Mortsles. What shall we heare of this?

2 A Segregation of the Turkish Fleet:
For do but fland upon the Foaming Shore,
The chidden Billow seemes to pelt the Clouds,
The winde-shak'd-Surge, with high & monftrous Maine
Seemes to caft water on the burning Beare,
And quench the Guards of th'euer-fixed Pole:
I neuer did like mollelation view
On the enchafed Flood.

Mon. If that the Turkish Fleete
Be not enhelter'd, and embay'd, they are drown'd,
It is imposible to beare it out.

Enter a Gentleman.

3 Newes Ladders: our warres are done:
The desperate Tempeft hath fo bang'd the Turkes,
That their deignement halts. A Noble ship of Venice,
Hath seene a greewe wracke and fufferance
On moft part of their Fleet.

Mon. How? Is this true?

3 The Ship is heere put in: A Verennessa, Michael Caffio
Lieutenant to the warlike Moore, Othello,
Is come on Shore: the Moore himselfe at Sea,
And is in full Commision heere for Cyprus.

Mon. I am glad on't:
'Tis a worthy Gouernour.

3 But this fame Caffio, though he speake of comfort,
Touching the Turkish loffe, yet he looks sadly,
And pray the Moore be safe: for they were parted
With fowle and violent Tempeft.

Mon. Pray Heauens be he:

For I haue seru'd him, and the man commands
Like a full Soldier. Let's to the Sea-fide (hoa)
As well to see the Veffell that's come in,
As to throw-out our eyes for brave Othello,
Euen till we make the Maine, and th'Eriall blew,
An indiftinct regard.

Gent. Come, let's do so;
For every Minute is expedience
Of more Arruiance.

Enter Caffio.

Caffio. Thanks you, the valiant of the warlike Ile,
That so approoue the Moore: Oh let the Heauens
Glie him defence against the Elements,
For I haue loft him on a dangerous Sea.

Mon. Is he well ship'd?

Caffio. His Barke is stoutly Timber'd, and his Pylot
Of verie expert, and approou’d Allowance;
Therefore my hope's (not forfettet to death)
Stand in bold Cure.

Within. A Saile, a Saile, a Saile.

Caffio. What noise?

Gent. The Towne is empty; on the brow o'th'Sea
Stand rances of People, and they cry, a Saile.

Caffio. My hopes do shape him for the Gouernor.

Gent. They do difcharge their Shot of Courtesie,
Our Friends, at leaft.

Caffio. I pray you Sir, go forth,
And giae vs truth who 'tis that is arriu'd.

Gent. I shall.

Exit.

Mon. But good Lieutenant, is your Generall wi'd?

Caffio. Moft fortunately: he hath archieued a Maid
That paragon's description, and wilde Fame:
One that excels the quirkes of Blazoning pens,
And in th'effentiall Vexture of Creation,
Do's tyre the Ingeniuer.

Enter Gentleman.

How now? Who ha's put in?

Gent. 'Tis one Lago, Auncient to the Generall.

Caffio. His ha's moft faufurable, and happy speeed:
Tempefts themfelues, high Seas, and howling winds,
The gutter'd-Rockes, and Congregated Sands,
Traitors enfeep'd, to encloge the guilteſfe Keele,
As hauing fence of Beautie, do omit
Their mortall Natures, letting go safely by The Divine Desdemona.

Mon. What is the?

Caffio. She that I speake of:

Our great Captains Captaine,
Left in the conduct of the bold Lago,
Whose footing heere anticipates our thoughts,
A Senignts speed, Great love, Othello guard,
And swell his Saile with thine owne powerfull breath,
That he may bleffe this Bay with his tall Ship,
Make loues quicke pants in Desdemonas Arms,
Gue renew'd fire to our extincted Spirits.

Enter Desdemona, Lago, Roderigo, and Aemilia.

Oh behold,
The Riches of the Ship is come on Shore:
You men of Cyprus, let her haue your knees.
Haile to the Ladie: and the grace of Heauen,
Before, behinde thee, and on euery hand
Enwheele thee round.

Def. I thanke you, Valiant Caffio,
What tydings can you tell of my Lord?

Caffio.
Oth. He is not yet arriv'd, nor know I ought
But that he's well, and will be shortly here.

Def. Oh, but I fear:

How long you company?

Caffo. The great Contention of Sea, and Skies
Parted our fellowship. But hearken, a Saile.

Witkin. A Saile, a Saile.

Gent. They give this greeting to the Cittadell:
This likewise is a Friend.

Caffo. See for the News:

Good Ancient, you are welcome. Welcome Mistris:
Let it not gaule your patience (good Iago)
That I extend my Manners. 'Tis my breeding,
That gives me this bold shew of Curtefye.

Iago. Sir, would she give you somuch of her lippes,
As of her tongue she oft bestowed on me,
You would have enough.

Def. Alas: she has no speech.

Iago. Infaith too much:
I finde it still, when I have leave to sleepe.

Marry before your Ladyship, I grant,
She puts her tongue a little in her heart,
And chides with thinking.

Emil. You have small cause to say so.

Def. Oh, fie upon thee, Slanderer.

Iago. Nay, it is true: or else I am a Turke,
You rife to play, and go to bed to worke.

Emil. You shall not write my praife.

Iago. No, let me not.

Dejde. What would write of me, if thou shouldst praife me?

Iago. Oh, gentle Lady, do not put me too,
For I am nothing, if not Critical.

Def. Come on, alway.

There's one gone to the Harbour?

Iago. I Madam.

Def. I am not merry: but I do beguile
The thing I am, by seeming otherwise.
Come, how would thou praife me?

Iago. I am about it, but indeed my inention comes from my pate, as Birdlyme do's from Freeze, it pluckes out Braine and all. But my Mufe labours, and thus she is deliu'd.

If she be faire, and wise faireness, and wit,
The ones for wife, the other refet it.

Def. Well prais'd:

How if she be Blacke and Witty?

Iago. If she be blacke, and thereto have a wit,
She'll find a white, that shall her blackness fit.

Def. Worse, and worse.

Emil. How if Faire, and Foolifh?

Iago. She never yet was foolish that was faire,
For even her folly helpt her to an beare.

Dejde. These are old fond Paradoxes, to make Fools laugh 'tis'th'Alchofue. What miserable praife haft thou for her that's Foulc, and Foolifh.

Iago. There's none so foule and foolish thereunto,
But do's foule pranks, which faire, and wife-ones do.

Dejde. Oh hateful ignorance: thou prai'eft the worst beft. But what praife couldst thou befoffe on a defering woman indeed? One, that in the autherity of her merit, did lustly put on the vouch of very malice

it.

Iago. She that was euer faire, and never proud,

Had Tongue at will, and yet was never loud:

Neuer lackt' Gold, and yet went never gay,

Fled from her wifh, and yet said now I may.
She that being angred, her reuenge being nie,

Bad her wrong flay, and her diffidu: will she:
That in wisdome neuer was jo fraile,

To change the Cods-head for the Solomons tale:

She that could think, and neur disclose her mind,

See Sutors following, and not looks behind:

She was a wight, (if ever such wightes were)

Def. To do what?

Iago. To fuckle Fools, and chronicle small Beere.

Dejde. Oh moft lame and impotent conclusion. Do not learne of him Emilia, though he be thy husband.

How say you (Caffio) is he not a moft prophane, and liberal Councilor?

Caffio. He speakes home (Madam) you may rellish him more in the Soullier, than in the Scholler.

Iago. He takes her by the palme: I, well said, whiper.
With as little a web as this, will I enfrage as great a Fly as Caffio. I smile upon her, do: I will give thee in thine owne Courtship. You say true, 'tis so indeed.
If such tricks as these stripe you out of your Lieutenan-trie, it had bene better you had not kid'd your three fngers fo oft, which now agane you are moft apt to play the Sir in. Very good: we'll kid'd, and excellent Curtie: 'tis so indeed. Yet agane, your fngers to your lippes? Would they were Clutter-pipes for your fake.

The Moore I know his Trumpet.

Caffio, 'Tis truely fo.

Def. Let's meete him, and recieve him.

Caffio. Loe, where he comes.

Enter Othello, and Attendants.

Oth. Q, my faire Warriour.

Def. My deere Othello.

Oth. It givens me wonder great, as my content

To fee you heere before me.

Oh my Soules joy:
If after every Tempeft, come such Calmes,
May the windeas blow, till they have waken'd death:
And let the labouring Barke clime hills of Seas

Olympos high: and duck againe as low,

As hell's from Heauen. If it were now to dye,

'Twere now to be moft happy. For I care,

My Soule hath her content to absolote,

That not another comfort like to this,

Succeedes in vnknowne Fate.

Def. The Heauens forbid
But that our Loues
And Comforts should encreafe
Even as our dayes do grow.

Oth. Amen to that (Sweet Powers)

I cannot speake enough of this content,
It stoppes me heere: it is too much of joy.
And this, and this the greatest discordes be

That ere our hearts shall make.

Iago. Oh you are well tun'd now: But Ie set downe the pegges that make this Musicke, as honest as I am.

Otbe.
Defdemona. Exit.

Iago. Sir, he's rafh, and very sodaine in Choller: and happily may strike at you, prouoke him that he may: for even out of that will I caufe thefe of Cyprus to Mutiny. Whole qualification chalk come into no true tafe a-gaine, but by the diplanting of Caffio. So shall you have a shorter journey to your desires, by the meanes I shall then have to preferre them. And the impediment most profitably removed, without the which there were no expectation of our prosperitie.

Rodo. I will do this, if you can bring it to any opportunity.

Iago. I warrant thee. Meete me by and by at the Cittadell. I muft fetch his Neccesaries a Shore. Farewell.

Iago. That Caffio loves her, I do well beleev't.
That she loves him, 'tis apt, and of great Credite.
The Moore (howbeit that I endure him not) Is of a confiant, louing, Noble Nature,
And I dare thinke, he'll proove to Defdemona
A moft deere husband. Now I do love her too,
Not out of absolute Lufl, (though peraduenture I fland accomptant for as great a fin)
But partely led to dyet my Reveune,
For that I do fuppref the luftie Moore
Hath leaped into my Seat. The thought whereof,
Doth (like a poiyfonous Mineral) graw my Inwardes:
And nothing can, or fhall content my Soule
Till I am eu'en with him, wife, for wift.
Or faying fo, yet that I put the Moore,
At leaft into a lelouzie fo ftrong
That judgement cannot cure. Which thing to do,
If this poore Trafh of Venice, whom I trace
For his quickke hunting, fland the putting on,
Ile haue our Michael Caffio on the hip,
Abufe him to the Moore, in the right garbe
(For I fear Caffio with my Night-Cape too)
Make the Moore thanke me, loue me, and reward me,
For making him egregiously an Afle,
And prafticing vpon his peace, and quiet,
Euen to madneffe. 'Tis heere: but yet confus'd,
Knauries plaine face, is neuer feene, till vs'd.

Exit.
Enter Otello, Desdemona, Caffo, and Attendants.

Otho. Good Michael, looke you to the guard to night.

Let's teach our selves that Honourable stop,
Not to out-sport discretion.

Caff. Iago, hath direction what to do.
But notwithstanding with my personall eye
Will I looko't.

Otho. Iago, is most honest:

Michael, goodnight. To morrow with your earliest,
Let me haue speech with you. Come my deere Loue,
The purchase made, the fruits are to enuie,
That profit's yet to come 'tweene me and you.

Goodnight.

Enter Iago.

Caff. Welcome Iago: we must to the Watch.

Iago. Not this houre Lieutenant: 'tis not yet ten o'th'Clocke. Our Generall caft vs thus earely for the love of his Desdemona: Who, let vs not therefore blame; he hath not yet made wanton the night with her: and she is sport for love.

Caff. She's a most exquisite Lady.

Iago. And Ile warrant her, full of Game.

Caff. Indeed she's a most fresh and delicate creature.

Iago. What an eye she had's? Methinks it founds a parley to prouocation.

Caff. An imitating eye:

And yet she thinks right modest.

Iago. And when she speakes,

Is it not an Alarm to Loue?

Caff. She is indeed perfection.

Iago. Well: happineffe to their Sheetes. Come Lieutenant, I haue a swope of Wine, and heere without are a brace of Cyprus Gallants, that shall faine haue a measure to the health of blacke Otello.

Caff. Not to night, good Iago, I have very poore, and vnhappie Braines for drinking. I could well with Curtifesse would inuent some other Cufome of entertainment.

Iago. Oh, they are our Friends: but one Cup, Ile drinke for you.

Caff. I haue drunkne but one Cup to night, and that was crafty qualified too: and behold what inuocation it makes heere. I am infortune in the infirmity, and dare not taske my weakenesse with any more.

Iago. What man? 'Tis a night of Reuels, the Gallants defire it.

Caff. Where are they?

Iago. Here, at the doore: I pray you call them in.

Caff. Ile do't, but it dislikes me.

Exit Iago.

Iago. If I can fatten but one Cup vpon him
With that which he hath drunkne to night already,
He'll be as full of Quarrell, and offence
As my yong Miftis dogge.

Now my fickle Poole Rodrigo,
Whom Loue hath turn'd almost the wrong side out,
To Desdemona hath to night Carrodes'd.

Potations, pottle-deepe, and he's to watch.

Three elfe of Cyprus, Noble swelling Spirits,
(That hold their Honours in a wary defiance,
The very Elements of this Warlike Ile),
Haue I to night flutter'd with flowing Cups,
And they watch too.

Now 'mongst this Flocke of drunkards
Am I put to our Caffo in some Action
That may offend the Ile. But here they come.

Enter Caffo, Montano, and Gentlemen.

If Consequence do but approve my dreame,
My Boarie fails freely, both with wind and streame.

Caff. Fore heauen, they haue given me a rowe already.

Mont. Good-faith a little one: not paft a pint, as I am a Souldier.

Iago. Some Wine hoa.

And let me the Cannakin clinke, clinke:

And let me the Cannakin clinke.

A Souldiers a man: Oh, mans life's but a span,

Why then let a Souldier drinke.

Some Wine Boys.

Caff. Fore Heauen: an excellent Song.

Iago. I learn'd it in England: where indee they are most potent in Potting. Your Dane, you Germaine, and your swag-belly'd Hollander, (drinke hoa) are nothing to your Englisht.

Caffo. Is your Englishmen so exquisite in his drinking?

Iago. Why, he drinks you with facillity, your Dane dead drunkne. He sweates not to overthrow your Almaine. He giues your Hollander a vomit, ere the next Pottle can be fill'd.

Caff. To the health of our Generall.

Mont. I am for it Lieutenant: and Ile do you juifice.

King Stephen was as a worthy Peere,
His Breeches cob him but a Crowne,
He held them Six pence all to deere,
With that be caft 't the Tailor Loune:
He was a wight of high Renowne,
And thou art but of low degree:
'Tis Pride that pulls the Country downe,
And take thy awl'd Cloake about thee.

Some Wine hoa.

Caffo. Why this is a more exquisite Song then the other.

Iago. Will you heart again?

Caff. No: for I hold him to be vnworthy of his Place, that do's those things. Well: hean'ms above all: and there be foules must be fauned, and there be foules must not be fauned.

Iago. It's true, good Lieutenant.

Caff. For mine owne part, no offence to the Generall, nor any man of qualitie: I hope to be fauned.

Iago. And fo do I too Lieutenant.

Caffo. I (but by your leave) not before me. The Lieutenant is to be fauned before the Ancient. Let's haue no more of this: let's to our Affaires. Forgive vs our finnes: Gentlemen let's tocke to our businesse. Do not thinke Gentlemen, I am drunke: this is my Ancient, this is my right hand, and this is my left. I am not drunke now: I can stand well enough, and I speake well enough.

Gent. Excellent well.

Caff. Why very well then: you must not thinke then, that I am drunke.

Exit Montano. To the Platforme (Maffren) come, let's fet the Watch.

Iago. You see this Fellow, that is gone before,
He's a Souldier, fit to stand by Caffar,
And giue direction. And do but fee his vice,
'Tis to his vertue, a luff Equinox,
The one as long as th'oother. 'Tis pittie of him: I fear the truth Othello puts him in, On some odd time of his infortune Will shake this Island.

Mont. But is he often thus?

Iago. 'Tis evermore his prologue to his sleepe, He'll watch the Horologe a double Set, If Drink he rocke not his Cradle.

Mont. It were well The Generall were put in mind of it: Perhaps he sees it not, or his good nature Prizes the vertue that appears in Caffio, And lookes not on his cuills: is not this true?

Iago. How now Rodorigo?

I pray you after the Lieutenant, go.

Mont. And 'tis great pitty, that the Noble Moore Should hazard such a Place, as his owne Second With one of an infranch Infortune, It were an honest Action, to lay fo To the Moore.

Iago. Not I, for this faire Island, I do loue Caffio well: and would do much To cure him of this cuill, But hearke, what noise? Enter Caffio pursuing Rodorigo.

Caffio. You Rogues: you Rafcall.

Mont. What's the matter Lieutenant?

Iago. A Knaue teach me my dutie? Ile beate the Knaue into a Twiggen-Bottle.

Rod. Beate me?

Caffio. Doft thou prate, Rogue?

Mont. Nay, good Lieutenant:

I pray you Sir, hold your hand.

Caffio. Let me go(Sir)

Or Ie knocke you ou're the Mazard.

Caffio. Come, come: you're drunken.

Iago. Away I fay: go out and cry a Mutinie.

Nay good Lieutenant: Ahas Gentlemen:

Who's that which rings the Bell? Diabolo, hoa: The Towne will rife. Fie, fie Lieutenant, You'll be afham'd for ever.

Enter Othello, and Attendants.

Oth. What is the matter here?

Mon. I bleed still, I am hurt to th'death. He dies.

Oth. Hold for your lives.

Oth. Why how now hoa? From whence ariseth this? Are we turn'd Turkes? and to our felues do that Which Heauen hath forbid the Otamittes.

For Christian shame, put by this barbarous Brawle: He that defines next, to carue for his owne rage, Holds his foule light: He dies upon his Motion. Silence that treadfull Bell, it frightes the Ile, From her propriety. What is the matter, Masters? Honest Iago, that lookes dead with greening, Speake: who began this? On thy loue I charge thee?

Iago. I do not know: Friends all, but now, euens now. In Quarrer, and in termes like Bride, and Groome Deuelling them for Bed: and then, but now:

(As if some Planet had vntwitted men)

Swords out, and tilting one at others breastes,
In opposition bloody. I cannot speake
Any beigning to this peevish oddes.
And would, in Action glorious, I had loft
Thohe legges, that brought me to a part of it.

Oth. How comes it (Michael) you are thus forgot?
Caffio. I pray you pardon me, I cannot speake.

Oth. Worthy Montano, you were wont to be ciuill: The grauite, and fillineffe of your youth The world hath noted. And your name is great In mothes of wisdome Cenfure. What's the matter That you vnlace your reputation thus, And fpend your rich opinion, for the name Of a night-brawler? Give me anwser to it.

Mon. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger,
Your Officer Iago, can informe you,
While I spare speech which something now offends me.
Of all that I do know, nor know I ought
By me, that's fai'd, or done amiffe this night,
Vnleffe felte-charitie be sometimes a vice,
And to defend our felues, it be a finne
When violence afaisles vs.

Oth. Now by Heuen,
My blood begins my fater Guides to rule,
And passion(having my bell judgement called)
Affiates to lead the way. If I once fir,
Or do but lift this Arme, the beft of you
Shall finke in my rebuke. Give me to know
How this foule Rout began: Who fet it on,
And he that is approu'd in this offence,
Though he had twinn'd with me, both at a birth,
Shall loose me. What in a Towne of warre,
Yet wide, the peoples hearts brim-full of fear,
To Manage priuate, and dometick Quarrell?
In night, and on the Court and Guard of fafety?
'Tis monstrous: Iago, who began't?

Mon. If partially Affin'd, or league in office,
Thou do tell more, or leffe then Truth,
Thou art no Souller.

Iago. Touch me not so neere,
I had rather haue this tongue cut from my mouth,
Then it should do offence to Michael Caffio.
Yet I perfwade my felte, to speake the truth
Shall nothing wrong him. This it is Generall:
Montano and my felse being in speach,
There comes a Fellow, crying out for helpe,
And Caffio following him with determin'd Sword
To execute vpon him. Sir, this Gentleman,
Steppes in to Caffio, and entreats his paufe:
My felse, the crying Fellow did purfue,
Left by hisc lamenour (as it to fell out)
The Towne might fall in fright. He,(swift of foote)
Out-ran my purpofe; and I return'd then rather
For that I heard the clinke, and fall of Swords,
And Caffio high in oath: Which till to night
I nere might fail before. When I came backe
(For this was briefe) I found them clofe together
At blow, and thurf, euens as againe they were
When you your felte did part them.
More of this matter cannot I report,
But Men are Men: The beft sometines forget,
Though Caffio did some little wrong to him,
As men in rage ftriike thofe that with them beft,
Yet furly Caffio, I beleue receiv'd
From him that fled, fome strange Indignitie,
Which patience could not paffe.
Our thinke, and I loue thee,

Enter Desdemona attended.

Looke if my gentle Loue be not rais'd vp:
Ile make thee an example.

Def. What is the matter (Deere?)

Otbe. All's well, Sweeting:
Come away to bed. Sir for your hurts,
My leffe will be your Surgeon. Lead him off:

Iago, looke with care about the Towne,
And silence those whom this vil'd brawl distracted.
Co me Desdemona, 'tis the Soldiers life,

To haue their Balmy flumbers wake'd with strife. Exit. Iago.

What are you hurt Lieutenant?

Caf. I paft all Surgery.

Iago. Marry Heaven forbid.

Iago. As I am an honest man I had thought you had receiv'd some bodily wound; there is more fencen in that then in Reputation. Reputation is an idle, and most faile impostion: oft got without merit, and lost without defending. You have loft no Reputation at all, vnlesse you repute your felse such a loofer. Whate man, there are more wayes to recover the Generall againe. You are but now cast in his mode,(a punishment more in policie, then in malice ) even fo as one would beate his offenecelesse dogge, ro affright an Imperious Lyon. Sue to him againe, and he's yours.

Caf. I will rather fuee to be despis'd, then to deceiue fo good a Commander, with fo flight, fo drunken, and fo indifferet an Officer. Drunkne? And Spake Parrat? And intelligible? Swagger? Swear? And discourse Futilian with ones owne shadow? Oh thou invisible spirit of Wine, if thou haue not name to be knowne by, let vs call thee the Dineel. Iago.

What was he that you follow'd with your Sword? What had he done to you?

Caf. I know not.

Iago. Is't possible?

Caf. I remember a maffe of things, but nothing distinctly: a Quarrell, but nothing wherefore. Oh, that men should put an Enemy in their mouthes, to sleepe away their Braines ? that we should with loy, pleasance, reuell and applafe, transforme our felues into Beafs.

Iago. Why? But you are now well enough: how came you thus recover'd?

Caf. It hath pleas'd the diuell drunkenesse, to give place to the diuell wrath, one vnpерfectнe бешье, shewes another to make me frankly despie my felse.

Iago. Come, you are too seuer a Moraller. As the Time, the Place, & the Condition of this Country stands I could hartly with this had not befallen: but since it is, as it is, mend it for your owne good.

Caf. I will ask him for my Place againe, he shall tell me, I am a drunckard: had I as many mouthes as Hydra, such an answer would fllope them all. To be now a fensible man, by and by a Fool, and preffently a Beatt. Oh irrange! Every inordinate cup is vnblefs'd, and the Ingre- dient is a diuell.

Iago. Come, come : good wine, is a good familiar Creature, if it be well vs'd: exclaime no more againt it. And good Lieutenant, I thinke, you thinke I loue you.

Cafio. I haue well approv'd it, Sir. I drunke?

Iago. You, or any man living, may be drunke at a time man. I tell you what you shall do: Our General's Wife, is now the Generall. I may say so, in this reffept, for that he hath devouted, and giuen vp himselfe to the Contemplation, marke: and deuouement of her parts and Graces. Confesse your felse freely to her: Impor-tune her helpe to put you in your place againe. She is of fo free, fo kinde, fo apt, fo blessed a disposition, she holds it a vice in her goodnesse, not to do more then she is requir'd. This broken loynt betweene you, and her husband, entreat her to splinter. And my Fortunes against any lay worth naming, this cracke of your Loue, shall grow stronger, then it was before.

Cafio. You advise me well.

Iago. I protest in the sincerite of Loue, and honest kindnesse.

Cafio. I thinke it freely : and betimes in the morn-ings, I will beseech the vertuous Desdemona to vndertake for me: I am depeare of my Fortunes if they check me.

Iago. You are in the right: good night Lieutenant, I muft to the Watch.

Cafio. Good night, honest Iago.

Iago. And what's he then, That faies I play the Villaine? When this aduise is free I glue, and honest, Proball to thinking, and indeed the courfe To win the Moore againe.

For 'tis most easie
Th'inclyning Desdemona to subdue
In any honest Suite. She's fram'd as fruitefull As the free Elements. And then for her To win the Moore, were to renowne his Baptifime, All Seales, and Symbols of redeemed fin: His Soule is fo enfefer'd to her Loue,
That she may make, vnmake, do what the lift, Even as her Appetite shall play the God, With his weake Function. How am I then a Villaine, To Counsel Caffio to this parallell courfe, Direcly to his good? Diunitie of hell, When diuels will the blackest finnes put on, They do fugget at first with heavenly fhewes, As I do now. For whils this honest Foole Piles Desdemona, to repair his Fortune, Aud the for him,pleades strongly to the Moore, Ie powre this perfellence into his eare :
That she repeales him, for her bodies Luft ' And by how much the friues to do him good, She shall vndo her Credite with the Moore, So will I turne her vertue into pitch, And out of her owne goodnesse make the Net, That shall en-maft them all.

How now Rodrigo?

Enter Rodrigo.

Rodrigo. I do follow here in the Chace, not like a Hound that hunts, but one that files vp the Cree. My Money is almost spent; I have bin to night exceedingly well Cudgell'd: And I thinke the issue
Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Caffio, Musitians, and Clowne.

Caffio. Masters, play here, I will content your paines, something that's briefe: and bid Goodmorrow General.

Clo. Why Masters, have you your Instruments bin in Naples, that they speake I' th' Noise there?

Muf. How Sir? how?

Clo. Are these I pray you, with these Instruments?

Muf. I marry are they Sir.

Clo. Oh, they hang a tale.

Muf. Whereby hangs a tale, Sir?

Clow. Marry Sir, by many a winde Instrument that I know. But Masters, here's mony for you: and the generall so likes your Musicke, that he defires you for loues sake to make no more noise with it.

Muf. Well Sir, we will not.

Clo. If you have any Musicke that may not be heard, too't againe. But (as they say) to heare Musicke, the generall do's not greatly care.

Muf. We have none such, Sir.

Clow. Then put vp your Pipes in your bagge, for Ile away. Go, vanish into ayre away.

Exit Mus.

Caffio. Doth thou heare me, mine honest Friend?

Clo. No, I heare not your honest Friend: I heare you.

Caffio. Prythee keepe vp thy Quillets, there's a poore piece of Gold for thee: if the Gentlewoman that attends the generall be stirring, tell her, there's one Caffio entertains her a little favoure of Speech. Wilt thou do this?

Clo. She is stirring Sir: if she the will stirre hither, I shall seeme to notice vnto her.

Exit Clo.

Enter Iago.

In happy time, Iago.

Iago. You haue not bin a-bed then?

Caffio. Why no: the day had broke before we parted.

I haue made bold (Iago) to send in to your wife:

My fuite to her is, that she will to vertuous Desdemona Procure me some acceffe.

Iago. Ile send her to you prefentely:

And Ile desife a meane to draw the Moore

Out of the way, that your converse and busines

May be more free.

Exit

Caffio. I humbly thanke you for't. I neuer knew

A Florentine more kinde, and honest.

Enter Aemilda.

Aem. Goodmorning (good Lieutenant) I am forrie

For your displeasure; but all will fure be well.

The generall and his wife are talking of it,

And the speakes for you flattering. The Moore replies,

That he yous is of great Fame in Cyprus,

And great Affinity: and that in wholesome Wisedome

He might not but refuse you. But he protefts he loues you

And needs no other Suitor, but his likings

To bring you in againe.

Caffio. Yet I beseech you,

If you thinke fit, or that it may be done,

Give me advantage of some breve Discourse

With Desdemona alone.

Aem. Pray you come in:

I will beforow where you shall haue time

To speake your bosome freely.

Caffio. I am much bound to you.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello, Iago, and Gentlemen.

Oth. These Letters giue (Iago) to the Pylot,

And by him do my duties to the Senate:

That done, I will be walking on the Workes,

Repair there to mee.

Iago. Well, my good Lord, Ile do't.

Oth. This Fortification (Gentlemen) shall we see't?

Gent. Well waite vpon your Lordshipp.

Exeunt

Scena Tertia.

Enter Desdemona, Caffio, and Aemilda.

Def. Be thou affir'd (good Caffio) I will do

All my abilities in thy behalfe.

Aem. Good Madam do:

I warrant it greeues my Husband,

As if the caufe were his.

Def. Oh that's an honest Fellow, Do not doubt Caffio

But I will have my Lord, and you againe

As friendly as you were.

Caffio. Bounteous Madam,

What euer shall become of Michael Caffio,

He's never any thing but your true Servant.

Def. I know't: I thanke you: you do loue my Lord:

You haue knowne him long, and be you well affir'd

He shall in strangenesse stand no farther off,

Then in a politike distance.

Caffio. I, but Lady,

That policie may either laft so long,

Or feede vpon fuch nice and waterfide diet,

Or breede it felle so out of Circumstances,

That I being abente, and my place suply'd,

My Generall will forget my Loue, and Service.

Def. Do not doubt that: before Aemilda here,
Enter Otello, and Iago.

_Exeunt._ Madam, heere comes my Lord. Caffio. Madam, Ile take my leave. Def. Why stay, and hear me speake. Caffio. Madam, not now: I am very ill at ease, What for mine owne purpos. Def. Well, do your discretion. _Exit Caffio._ Iago. Hah! I like not that. Otbel. What doft thou say? Iago. Nothing my Lord; or if—I know not what. Otbel. Was not that Caffio parted from my wife? Iago. Caffio my Lord! No sure, I cannot thinke it. That he would steale away so guilty-like, Seeing your comming. Otbel. I do beleue 'twas he, Def. How now my Lord? I haue bin talking with a Sultor heere, A man that languishes in your displeasure. Otbel. Who is't you mean? Def. Who is your Lieutenant Caffio? Good my Lord, If I have any grace, or power to move you, His present reconciliation take, For if he be not one, that truly loves you, That erres in Ignorance, and not in Cunning, I have no judgemen in an honest face. I prythee call him backe. Otbel. Went he hence now? Def. I sooth; fo humbled, That he hath left part of his greefe with mee. To suffer with him. Good Loue, call him backe. Otbel. Not now (sweet Dejulias) some other time. Def. But shal'le be shortly. Otbel. The sooner (sweet) for you. Def. Shal'l he be to night; at Supper? Otbel. No, not to night. Def. To morrow Dinner then? Otbel. I shall not dine at home: I meete the Captaines at the Cittadel. Def. Why then to morrow night, on Tuesday morne, On Tuesday noone, or night; on Wensday Morn. I prythee name the time, but let it not Exceed three daies. Infault hee's penitent: And yet his Treipafe, in our common reason (Saue that they say the warres must make example) Out of her beft, is not amoff a fault Tenure a private checke. When shall he come? Tell me Otello. I wonder in my Soule. What you would ask me, that I should deny, Or stand fo mam'ring on? What? Michael Caffio, That came a woing with you? and so many a time (When I haue spoke of you dispreasingly) Hath tane your part, to have so much to do To bring him in? Trust me, I could do much. Otbel. Prythee no more: Let him come when he will: I will deny thee nothing. Def. Why, this is not a Boone:
The Tragedie of Othello

The worke of words.

Iago. Good my Lord pardon me,
Though I am bound to every Acte of dutie,
I am not bound to that: All Sliaues are free:
Vtter my Thoughts? Why say, they are vild, and false?
As where's that Palace, whereinto foule things
Sometimes intrude not? Who ha's that breadth so pure,
Wherein vncleanely Apprehensions
Keepe Leetes, and Law-dayes, and in Sessions fit
With meditations full?

Oth. Thou do'st confpire against thy Friend (Iago)
If thou but think'ft him wrong'd, and mak'ft his care
A stranger to thy Thoughts.

Iago. I do beseech you,
Though I perchance am vicious in my gueffe
(As I confesse it is my Natures plague
To spy into Abuses, and of my jealousy
Shapes faults that are not) that your wifedome
From one, that so imperfectly conceits,
Would take no notice, nor build your felle a trouble
Out of his scattering, and vnfore observance:
It were not for your quiet, nor your good,
Nor for my Manhood, Honeftry, and Wifedome,
To let you know my thoughts.

Oth. What doth thou name?

Iago. Good name in Man, & woman (deere my Lord)
Is the immediate Jewell of their Soules;
Who flealeth my purfe, flealeth traff:
'Tis something, nothing;
'Twars mine, 'tis his, and has bin flue to thousands:
But he that flitches from me my good Name,
Robes me of that, which not enriches him,
And makes me poore indeed.

Oth. I le know thy Thoughts.

Iago. You cannot, if my heart were in your hand,
Nor shall not, whilft 'tis in my cutdofie.

Oth. Ha?

Iago. Oh, beware my Lord, of jealoufie,
It is the green-ey'd Monster, which doth mocke
The meate it feeds on. That Cuckold lives in bliffe,
Who certaine of his Fate, loues not his wronger:
But oh, what damned minutes tels he ore,
Who dotes, yet doubts? Suspects, yet foundly loues?

Oth. O miserie.

Iago. Poore, and Content, is rich, and rich enough,
But Riches findelesse, is as poore as Winter,
To him that euer fears he shall be poore:
Good Hauean, the Soules of all my Tribe defend
From Jealoufie.

Oth. Why? why is this?

Think'ft thou, I'd make a Life of Jealoufie;
To follow still the changes of the Moone
With fresh suspition? No: to be once in doubt,
Is to be refolvd: Exchange me for a Goat,
When I shall turne the businesse of my Soule
To such exufficiate, and blow'd Surmifles,
Matching thy inference. 'Tis not to make me Jealous,
To say my wife is faire, feeds well, loues company,
Is free of Speech, Sings, Plays, and Dances:
Where Vertue is, there are more vertuous,
Nor from mine owne weake merites, will I draw
The smallest feare, or doubt of her reuolt,
For she had eyes, and chose me. No Iago,
I le see before I doubt; when I doubt, prove;
And on the proofe, there is no more but this,
Away at once with Loue, or Jealoufie.

Iago. I am glad of this: For now I shall have reason
To shew the Loue and Duty that I bear thee
With franker spirit. Therefore (as I am bound)
Receive it from me. I speake not yet of proofe:
Looke to your wife, obserue her well with Caius
Weare your eyes, thus: not Jealous, nor Secure:
I would not haue your free, and Noble Nature,
Out of felfe-Bountye, be abus'd: Looke too't:
I know our Country dispoſition well:
In Venice, they do let Haueen fee the pranes
They dare not shew their Husbands.
Their beft Conſcience,
Is not to leave't undone, but kept vnknowne.

Oth. Doth thou fy so?

Iago. She did deceuie her Father, marrying you,
And when she feem'd to shake, and feare your lookes,
She lou'd them moft.

Oth. And so she did.

Iago. Why go too then:
Shee that fo young could glue out fuch a Seeming
To feele her Fathers eyes vp, clofe as Oake,
He thought 'twas Witchcraft.
But I am much too blame:
I humbly do beseech you of your pardon
For too much loving you.

Oth. I am bound to thee for ever.

Iago. I fee this hath a little daftd your Spirits:

Oth. Not a lot, not a lot.

Iago. Truft me, I feare it has:
I hope you will confider what is spoke
Comes from your Loue.
But I do fee y'are mou'd:
I am to pray you, not to straine my speech
To groffer ifues, nor to larger reach,
Then to Sufficion.

Oth. I will not.

Iago. Should you do fo (my Lord)
My speech should fall into such vilde successe,
Which my 'Thoughts sym'd not.
Caius my worthy Friend:
My Lord, I fee y'are mou'd.

Oth. No, not much mou'd:
I do not thinke but Deſdalem's honett.

Iago. Long live the fo;
And long live you to thinke fo.

Oth. And yet how Nature erring from it felle.

Iago. I, there's the point:
As (to be bold with you)
Not to affect many propofed Matches
Of her owne Clime, Complexion, and Degree,
Whereeto we fee in all things, Nature tends:
Foh, one may finel in fuch, a will moft ranke,
Foule difpofitions, Thoughts vnnatural.
But (pardon me) I do not in opinion
Difinfolly speake of her, though I may feare
Her will, recouling to her better judgement,
May fal to match you with her Country formes,
And happily repent.

Oth. Farewell, farewell:
If more thou doft percieue, let me know more:
Set on thy wife to obferue.

Leave me Iago.

Iago. My Lord, I take my leave.

Othel. Why did I marry?

This honett Creature (doubtlesse)
Sees, and knowes more, much more then he vnfolds.

Iago
Lago. My Lord, I would I might intreat your Honor To fear this thing no farther: Leave it to time, Although 'tis fit that Caffio have his Place; For sure he fills it vp with great Ability; Yet if you please, to him off a-while: You shall by that perceive him, and his meanes: Note if your Lady straine his Entertainment With any strong, or vehement importunitie, Much will be seene in that: In the meantime, Let me be thought too busie in my feares, (As worthy caufe I have to fear I am) And hold her free, I do beseech your Honor. Oth. Fear not my gouernment. Lago. I once more take my leave. Exit. Oth. This Fellow's of exceeding honesty, And knows all Quantities with a learn'd Spirit Of humane dealings. If I do proove her Haggard, Though that her Jefles were my deere heart-stringes, I'd whittle her off, and let her downe the winde To pray at Fortune. Haply, for I am blacke, And have not those soft parts of Conseruation That Chamberers have: Or for I am declin'd Into the vale of yeares (yet that's not much) She's gone. I am abus'd, and my releefe Must be to loathe her. Oh Curfe of Marriage! That we can call these delicate Creatures ours, And not their Appetites? I had rather be a Toad, And live upon the vapour of a Dungeon, Then keepe a corner in the thing I love For others vses. Yet 'tis the plague to Great-ones, Prerogatiu'red are they left then the Base, 'Tis deffiny vnhandable, like death: Euen then, this forked plague is Fated to vs, When we do quicken. Looke where she comes:

Enter Desdemona and Emilia.

If she be false, Heauen mock'd it false: Ile not beleue't. Def. How now, my deere Othello? Your dinner, and the generous Ilanders By you inuited, do attend your presence. Oth. I am too blame. Def. Why do you speake so faintly? Are you not well? Oth. I have a paine vpon my Forehead, heere. Def. Why that's with watching, 'twill way again. Let me but binde it hard, within this houre It will be well. Oth. Your Napkin is too little: Let it alone: Come, Ile go in with you. Exit. Def. I am very forry that you are not well. Emilia. I am glad I haue found this Napkin: This was her firt remembrance from the Moore, My wayward Husband hath a hundred times Wool'd me to steele it. But she fo loues the Token, (For he conu'rd her, she should euer keepe it) That she refers it euermore about her, To kiffe, and talke too. Ile haue the worke tane out, And giu't Lago: what he will do with it Heauen knows, not I: I nothing, but to pleae his Fantacie.

Enter Lago.

Lago. You have a thing for me? It is a common thing——

Emilia. Ha? Lago. To have a foolish wife. Emilia. Oh, is that all? What will you give me now For that fane Handkerchief. Lago. What Handkerchiefe? Emilia. What Handkerchiefe? Why that the Moore firft gae to Desdemona, That which so often you did bid me steele. Lago. Haft staine it from her? Emilia. No: but the let it drop by negligence, And to th'advantage, I being heere, took't vp:

Looke, heere 'tis.

Lago. A good wench, give it me. Emilia. What will you do with't, that you haue bene fo earnest to haue me fliech it? Lago. Why, what is that to you? Emilia. If it be not for some purpose of import, Giu't me againe. Poore Lady, shee'l run mad When she shall lacke it. Lago. Be not acknowne on't:

I haue vfe for it. Go, leaue me. Exit Emilia. I will in Caffio's Lodging looke this Napkin, And let him finde it. Trifles light as ayre, Are to the jealous, confirmations strong, As proofs of holy Writ. This may do something. The Moore already changes with my poyfon: Dangerous conceites, are in their Natures poysons, Which at the firft are scarce found to diflafte: But with a little ake vpon the blood, Burne like the Mines of Sulphure. I did fay fo. Enter Othello. Looke where he comes: Not Poppy, nor Mandragora, Nor all the drowsie Syrrups of the world Shall euer medicine thee to that sweete sleepe Which thou owd'lt yesterday. Oth. Ha, ha, falfe to mee? Lago. Why how now General? No more of that. Oth. Auant, be gone: Thou haft fet me on the Racket; I swere 'tis better to be much abus'd, Then but to know'lt a little. Lago. How now, my Lord? Oth. What fense had I, in her ftole hours of Luft? I faw't not, thought it not: it harm'd not me: I flept the next night well, fed well, was free, and merrie. I found not Caffio's kifes on her Lippes: He that is rob'd, not wanting what is roline, Let him not know't, and he's not rob'd at all. Lago. I am forry to heare this? Oth. I had bene happy, if the generall Campe, I Pyoners and all, had taffe'd her sweet Body, So I had nothing knoune. Oh now, for euer Farewell the Tranquill minde; farewell Content; Farewell the plumed Troopes, and the bigge Warres, That makes Ambition, Vertue! Oh farewell; Farewell the neiging Steed, and the thrill Trumpe, The Spirit-firing Drum, th'Eare-piercing Fife, The Royall Banner, and all Qualitie, Pride, Pompe, and Circumfance of glorious Warre: And O you mortall Engines, whole rude thrautes Th'immortall Ioues dread Clamours, counterfeit, Farewell: Othello's Occupation's gone. Lago. Is't poffible, my Lord? Oth. Villaine, heare thou prove my Loeue a Whore; Be sure of it: Give me the Occular proove,
Or by the worth of mine eternall Soule,
Thou hadst bin better haue bin borne a Dog
Then anfwer my wak’d wrath.

_Iago._ 1st come to this?

_Oth._ Make me to fee’t: or (at the leaft) fo proue it,
That the probation beare no Hindge, nor Loope,
To hang a doubt on: Or woe vpon thy life.

_Iago._ My Noble Lord,

_Oth._ If thou doft fland her, and torture me,
Neuer praye more: Abandon all remorfe
On Horrors head, Horrors accumula: Do deeds to make Heauen weep, all Earth amaz’d;
For nothing canft thou to damnation add;
Greateft then that.

_Iago._ O Grace! O Heauen forgive me!
Are you a Man? Have you a Soule? or Senfe?
God buy you: take mine Office. Oh wretched Foole,
That lou’t to make thine Honeyfey, a Vice!
Oh monftrous world! Take note, take note (O World)
To be direft and honeft, is not fate.
I thanke you for this profit, and from hence
Ile loue no Friend, fith Loue breeds fuch offence.

_Oth._ Nay fray: thou shoul’d be honeft.

_Iago._ Ie should be wife; for Honofey’s a Foole,
And loofes that it workes for.

_Oth._ By the World,
I thinke my Wife be honeft, and thinke she is not:
I think that thou art luft, and thinke thou art not:
Ile haue fome profes. My name that was as freth
As _Dians_ Vifage, is now begrim’d and blacke
As mine owne face. If there be Cords, or Kniewes,
Poyfon, or Fire, or fuffocating streames,
Ile not induce it. Would I were fatis fied.

_Iago._ I fee you are eaten vp with Faffion:
I do repent me, that I put it to you.
You would be satisfied?

_Oth._ Would! Nay, and I will.

_Iago._ And may: but how? How fatisfis’d, my Lord?
Would you the super-vifion groffely gape on?
Behold her top’d?

_Oth._ Death, and damnation. Oh!

_Iago._ It were a tedious difficulty, I thinke,
To bring them to that Propfeft: Damne them then,
If euer mortall eyes do fe thern boulfer
More then their owne. What then? How then?
What fhall I fay? Where’s Satisfaction?
It is impoffible you should fee this,
Were they as prime as Goates, as hot as Monkeys,
As falt as Wolues in pride, and Fooles as groffe
As Ignorance, made drunke. But yet, I fay,
If imputation, and ftrong circumftances,
Which leade direftly to the doore of Truth,
Will give you satisfaction, you might haue’t.

_Oth._ Give me a living reafon she’s diſloyall.

_Iago._ I do not like the Office.
But fith I am entred in this caufe fo farre
(Prick’d too’t by foolifh Honofey, and Loue)
I will go on. I lay with _Caffio_ lately,
And being troubled with a raging tooth,
I could not feepe. There are a kind of men,
So loofe of Soule, that in their feepes will mutter
Their Affayes: one of this kinde is _Caffio:_
In feepes I heard him fay, sweet _Desdemona,_
Let vs be wary, let vs hide our Loues,
And then (Sir) would he griepe, and wring my hand:
Cry, oh sweet Creature: then kiffe me hard,
As if he plucked vp kiffes by the roots,
That grew vpon my lippes, laid his Leg ore my Thigh,
And figh, and kiffe, and then cry cursed Fate,
That gauze thee to the Moore.

_Oth._ O monftrous! monftrous!

_Iago._ Nay, this was but his Dreame.

_Oth._ But this denoted a fore-gone conclufion,
’Tis a fhre’d doubt, though it be but a Dreame.

_Iago._ And this may helpe to thicken other proffes,
That do demonfrate thinly,
Ie teare her all to peeces.

_Iago._ Nay yet be wife: yet we fee nothing done,
She may be honeft yet: Tell me but this,
Hauue you not fometimes feene a Handkercheif
Spotted with Strawberries, in your wiues hand?

_Oth._ I gaue her fuch a one: ’twas my firft gift.

_Iago._ I know not that: but fuch a Handkercheif
(I am fure it was your wiuas) did I to day
See _Caffio_ wipe his Beard with.

_Oth._ If it be that.

_Iago._ If it be that, or any, it was hers.
It speaks againft her with the other proffes.

_Oth._ That the Slaue had forty thoufand liues:
One is too poore, too weake for my reuenge.
Now do I fee ’tis true. Looke heere _Iago_,
All my fond loue thus do I blow to Heauen. ’Tis gone.
Arie blacke vengeance, from the hollow hell,
Yeeld vp (O Loue) thy Crowne, and hearted Throne
To tyrannous Hate. Swell bofome with thy fraught,
For ’tis of Afiickes tongues.

_Iago._ Yet be content.

_Oth._ Oh blood, blood, blood.

_Iago._ Patience I fay: your minde may change.

_Oth._ Neuer _Iago_. Like to the Ponticke Sea,
Whole Icie Current, and compulfive courfe,
Ner’ keepes retyring edbe, but keepes due on
To the Propontitce, and the Hellepont:
Euen to my bloody thoughts, with violent pace
Shall ner’ looke backe, ner’ ebe to humble Loue,
Till that a capalbe, and wide Reuenge
Swallow them vp. Now by yond Marble Heauen,
In the due reuerence of a Sacred vow,
I heere engage my words.

_Iago._ Do not rife yet:
Witneffe you euer-burning Lights aboue,
You Elements, that clip vs round about,
Witneffe that heere _Iago_ doth giue vp
The execution of his wit, hands, heart,
To wrong’d _Othello’s_ Seruice. Let him command:
And to obey shall be in me remorfe,
What bloody buſineſfe euer.

_Oth._ I greet thy loue,
Not with vaine thanks, but with acceptance bounteous,
And will vpon the infant put thee too’t.
Within theſe three dayes let me heare thee fay,
That _Caffio’s_ not alie.

_Iago._ My Friend is dead:
’Tis done at your Request.
But let her live.

_Oth._ Damne her leuede Minx:
O damne her, damne her.
Come go with me a-part, I will withdraw
To furnifh me with some swift means of death
For the faire Diuell.
Now art thou my Lieutenant.

_Iago._ I am your owne for euer.

_Exeunt._

_Scena._ 816
Scena Quarta.

Enter Desdemona, Emissia, and Clown.

"Def. Do you know Sirrah, where Lieutenant Cassio lies?"

"Clown. I dare not say he lies any where."

"Def. Why man?"

"Cl. He's a Soldier, and for me to say a Souldier lies, 'tis flagging."

"Def. Go too : where lodges he?"

"Cl. To tell you where he lodges, is to tel you where I lie."

"Def. Can any thing be made of this?"

"Cl. I know not where he lodges, and for mee to deceive a lodgling, and say he lies here, or he lies there, were to lye in mine owne throat."

"Def. Can you enquire him out? and be edified by report?"

"Cl. I will Catechize the world for him, that is, make Questions, and by them answer."

"Def. Seeke him, bidde him come hither : tell him, I have mou'd my Lord on his behalf, and hope all will be well.

"Cl. To do this, is within the compass of mans Wit, and therefore I will attempt the doing it."

Exit Cl."

Def. Where should I loufe the Handkerchiefe, Emissia?"

"Emiss. I know not Madam."

"Def. Beleeue me, I had rather haue loft my purse Full of Cruzadoes. And but my Noble Moore Is true of minde, and made of no such baseneffe, As Iealous Creatures are, it were enough To put him to ill-thinking."

"Emiss. Is he not Iealous?"

"Def. Who, he? I thinke the Sun where he was borne, Drew all such hurnors from him."

"Emiss. Louke where he comes."

Enter Otello.

"Def. I will not loufe him now, till Cassio be called to him. How is't with you, my Lord?"

"Orb. Well my good Lady. Oh hardnes to dissemble!"

"Def. How do you, Desdemona?"

"Orb. Well, my good Lord."

"Def. Glue me your hand."

This hand is moist, my Lady.

"Def. It hath felt no age, nor knowne no sorrow."

"Orb. This argues fruitfulness, and liberal heart: Hot, hat, and moylt! This hand of yours requires A fequester from Liberty : Fasting, and Prayer, Much Catisfaction, Exercize deouet, For heere's a yong, and sweating Diuell heere That commonly rebels: 'Tis a good hand, A franke one.

"Def. You may (indeed) say fo:'"

"For 'twas that hand that gave away my heart."

"Orb. A liberal hand. The hearts of old, gaue hands: But our new Heraldry is hands, not hearts."

"Def. I cannot speake of this:"

Come, now your promife.

"Orb. What promife, Chucke?"

"Def. I haue lent to bid Cassio come speake with you."

"Orb. I haue a fait and forry Rhewme offends me:"

Lend me thy Handkerchiefe.

Def. Heere my Lord."

"Orb. That which I gave you."

"Def. I haue it not about me."

"Orb. Not?"

"Def. No indeed, my Lord."

"Orb. That's a fault: That Handkerchiefe Did an Egyptian to my Mother gue:

She was a Charmer, and could almost read The thoughts of people. She told her, while she kept it, 'T would make her Amiable, and subdue my Father Intirely to her loue: But if she loft it, Or made a Guift of it, my Fathers eye Should hold her loathed, and his Spirits should hunt After new Fancies. She dying, gave it me, And bid me (when my Fate would haue me Wiu'd) To glue it her. I did to; and take heede on't, Make it a Darling, like your precious eye: To loofe't, or glue't away, were such perdition, As nothing els could match."

"Def. Is't possible?"

"Orb. 'Tis true: There's Magicke in the web of it:

A Sybil that had numbred in the world
The Sun to course, two hundred compasses,
In her Prophetick furie fow'd the Workes:
The Wormes were hallowed, that did breede the Silke, And it was dye in Mummeys, which the Skillfull

Confer'd of Maidens hearts."

"Def. Indeed? Is't true?"

"Orb. Moft verable, therefore looke tooo wel."

"Def. Then would to Heauen, that I had never eene't?"

"Orb. Ha? wherefore?"

"Def. Why do you speake so startingly, and raf?"

"Orb. Is't los't? Is't gon? Speak, is't out o'th'way?"

"Def. Bleffe vs.

"Orb. Say you?

"Def. It is not los't: but what and if it were?

"Orb. How?"

"Def. I say it is not los't."

"Orb. Fetch't, let me fee't."

"Def. Why fo I can: but I will not now: This is a tricke to put me from my faire, Pray you let Cassio be receiued againe."

"Orb. Fetch me the Handkerchiefe, My minde mi-fglues."

"Def. Come, come: you'll never meete a more sufficient man."

"Orb. The Handkerchiefe."

"Def. A man that all his time

Hath founded his good Fortunes on your loue; Shar'd dangers with you."

"Orb. The Handkerchiefe."

"Def. Inoffloth, you are too blame."

"Orb. Away."

"Emiss. Is not this man Iealous?"

"Def. I neuer law this before.

Sure, there's some wonder in this Handkerchikfe, I am moit vnhappy in the losse of it."

"Emiss. 'Tis not a yeare or two Iewes vs a man: They are all but Stomackes, and we all but Food, They eate vs hungerly, and when they are full They belch vs."

Enter Iago, and Cassio.

Looke you, Cassio and my Husband."

"Iago. There is no other way: 'tis the moit doo't: And loe the happinesse: go, and importune her."

Def.
The Tragedie of Othello

Def. How now (good Caffio) what’s the newes with you?

Caffio. Madam, my former suite, I do beseech you, That by your vertuous meanes, I may againe Exeit, and be a member of his loue, Whom I, with all the Office of my heart Entirely honour, I would not be delayed. If my offence, be of such mortall kinde, That nor my Service past, nor present Sorrowes, Nor purpos’d merit in futurity, Can ranforme me into his loue againe, But to know so, must be my benefit: So shall I cloath me in a forc’d content, And shat my selfe vp in some other course To Fortunes Almes.

Def. Alas (thrice-gentle Caffio) My Advocation is not now in Tune; My Lord, is not my Lord; nor shoul I know him, Were he in Favour, as in Humour alter’d. So helpe me every spirit sanctified, As I have spoken for you all my best, And stood within the blanke of his displeasure For my free speech. You must awhile be patient: What I can do, I will: and more I will Then for my selfe, I dare. Let that suffice you.

Iago. Is my Lord angry?

Cass. He went hence but now: And certainly in strange vnquietnesse.

Iago. Can he be angry? I have seene the Cannon When it hath blowne his Ranks into the Ayre, And like the Diuell from his very Arme Puff’t his owne Brother: And is he angry? Something of moment then: I will go meet him, There’s matter in’t indeed, if he be angry. Exit

Def. I prythe do so. Something fure of State, Either from Venice, or some vnhand’t prachie Made demonstrable heere in Cyprus, to him, Hath pul’d his cleare Spirit: and in such cafes, Mens Nature strength, with inferiour things, Though great ones are their object, ‘Tis even so. For let our finger ake, and it endues Our other healthfull members, euen to a sense Of paine. Nay, we must thinke men are not Gods, Nor of them looke for such obseruance As fits the Bridall. Behold me much, Emilia, I was (vnhandome Warrior, as I am) Arraigning his vnkindnesse with my foule: But now I finde, I had suborn’d the Witneffe, And he’s Indited falsely.

Emilia. Pray heauen it bee State matters, as you thinke, and no Conception, Nor no leaues Toy, concerning you. Exit

Iago. Alas the day, I neuer gave him causie. Emilia. But leaual foules will not be answer’d so; They are not euer leaual for the causie, But leaual, for they’re leaual. It is a Monster Begot vp on it selfe, borne on it selfe.

Def. I will go fecke him. Caffio, walke heere about: If I doe finde him fit, Ie moue your suite, And fecke to effect it to my vtermolt.

Cass. I humbly thanke your Ladyship.

Enter Bianca.

Bian. ‘Saue you (Friend Caffio.)

Caffio. What make you from home? How is’t with you, my most faire Bianca? Indeed (sweet Loue) I was comming to your house.

Bian. And I was going to your Lodging, Caffio. What keepes a weeke away? Seven days, and Nights? Eight score hours? And Louers abento howres More tedious then the Diall, eight score times? Oh weare reck’n.ing.

Caffio. Pardon me, Bianca: I haue this while with leaden thoughts beene preft, But I shall in a more continuat time Strike off this score of absience. Sweet Bianca Take me this worke out.

Bianca. Oh Caffio, whence came this? This is some Token from a newer Friend, To the felt-Absence: now I feele a Caufe: Is’t come to this? Well, well.

Caffio. Go too, woman: Throw your vile geffes in the Diuels teeth, From whence you haue them. You are leaual now, That this is from some Mitris, some remembrance; No, in good troth Bianca.

Bian. Why, who’s is it?

Caffio. I know not neither: I found it in my Chamber, I like the worke well; Ere it be demanded (As like enough it will) I would have it coppied: Take it, and doo’t, and leave me for this time.

Bian. Leave you? Wherefore?

Caffio. I do attend heere on the Generall, And thinke it no addition, nor my wish To haue him mee woman’d.

Bian. Why, I pay you?

Caffio. Not that I loue you not.

Bian. But that you do not loue me. I pray you bring me on the way a little, And say, if I shall fee you foone at night?

Caffio. ‘Tis but a little way that I can bring you, For I attend heere: But Ie fee you foone.

Bian. ‘Tis very good: I must be circumfanc’d.

Exit omnes.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Othello, and Iago.

Iago. Will you thinke so?

Oth. Thinke so, Iago?

Iago. What, to kisse in priuate?

Oth. An vnauthoriz’d kisse?

Iago. Or to be naked with her Friend in bed, An houre, or more, not meaning any harme? Oth. Naked in bed (Iago) and not meane harme? It is hypocrifie against the Diuell: They that meane vertuously, and yet do so, The Diuell their vertue temptes, and they tempt Heauen.

Iago. If they do nothing, ’tis a Veniall slip: But if I gue my wife a Handkerchiefe.

Oth. What then?

Iago. Why then ’tis hers (my Lord) and being hers, She may (I thinke) befo’t on any man.

Oth. She is Protechtere of her honor too: May the gue that?
the Moor of Venice.

Iago. Her honor is an Essence that's not seene, They have it very oft, that haue it not.

But for the Handkerchief.

Otho. By heaven, I would most gladly have forgot it:
Thou saidst (oh, it comes ore my memorie, As doth the Rauen o're the infectous house: Boading to all) he had my Handkerchief.

Iago. 1: what of that?

Otho. That's not so good now.

Iago. What if I had said, I had seen him do you wrong?

Or heard him say (as Knaues be such abroad, Who hauing by their owne importunate suit, Or voluntary doation of some Miftris, Convinced or supply'd them, cannot chuse But they must blae.)

Otho. Hath he said any thing?

Iago. He hath (my Lord) but be you well affir'd,
No more then he'se vn-sware.

Otho. What hath he said?

Iago. Why, that he did: I know not what he did.

Otho. What? What?

Iago. Lye, Otho. With her?

Otho. Lye with her? lye on her? We say lye on her, when they be lye-her. Lye with her: that's fulsome: Handkerchief: Confessions: Handkerchief. To confess, and he hang'd for his labour. Firth, to be hang'd, and then to confess: I tremble at it. Nature would not inueft her selfe in such shadowing passion, without some Infruption. It is not words that shakes me thus, (pish) Nofes, Eares, and Lippes: is't possible. Confesse? Handkerchief? O diuell.

Falls in a Trance.

Iago. Workes on, My Medicine workes. Thus credulous Fools are caught, And many worthy, and chaft Dames eu'en thus, (All guitleffe) meetre reproch: what hoa? My Lord?

My Lord, I say: Otello.

Enter Caffio.

How now Caffio?

Cass. What's the matter?

Iago. My Lord is faine into an Epilepsie, This is his second Fit: he had one yesterday.

Cass. Rub him about the Temples.

Iago. The Lethargie must haue his quyet course: If not, he foames at mouth: and by and by Breakes out to faugue madneffe. Looke, he flirres: Do you withdraw your selfe a little while, He will recover straight: when he is gone, I would on great occasion, speake with you. How is it General? Have you not hurt your head? Otho. Doft thou mooke me?

Iago. I mooke you not, by Heauen: Would you would beare your Fortune like a Man.

Otho. A Horned man's a Monfier, and a Beaff.

Iago. Ther's many a Beaff then in a populous City, And many a ciull Monfier.

Otho. Did he confeffe it?

Iago. Good Sir, be a man: Thinke every bearded fellow that's but yoak'd May draw with you. There's Millions now aliue, That nightly lye in those vnproper beds, Which they dare feware peculier. Your cafe is better. Oh, 'tis the fipt of hell, the Fiends Arch-mock, To lip a wanton in a fecure Cowch; And to suppofe herchaft. No, let me know, And knowing what I am, I know what the fhallbe. Otho. Oh, thou art wise, 'tis certaine.

Iago. Stand you a while apart, Confine your felfe but in a patient Lift, Whilf't you were heere, o're-whelmed with your grieue (A fpassion moft refulting fuch a man) Caffio came hither. I flipt him away, And layd good fcutes vpon your Extasie, Bad him anon returne: and heere speake with me, The which he promis'd. Do but encaue your felfe, And marke the Friers, the Cybes, and notable Scornes That dwell in euery Region of his face. For I will make him tell the Tale anew:
Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and when He hath, and is againe to cope your wife, I say, but marke his geftere: marry Patience, Or I shall fay y'are all in all in Spieene, And nothing of a man.

Otho. Do'th thou heare, Iago, I will be found moft cunning in my Patience: But (do'th thou heare) moft bloody.

Iago. That's not amiffe, But yet keepe time in all: will you withdraw?
Now will I queftion Caffio of Bianca,
A Hufwife, that by felling her defires
Buies her felfe Bread, and Cloath. It is a Creature
That dotes on Caffio, (as 'tis the Strumpets plague
To be-guil'd many, and be-guil'd by one)
He, when he heares of her, cannot refraine
From the excesse of Laughter. Heere he comes.

Enter Caffio.

As he shall smile, Otello shall go mad:
And his vnbookid Ielouide muft conferue
Poor Caffio's ifmes, fgetures, and light behaviours
Quite in the wrong. How do you Lieutenant?

Caffio. The worfer, that you gue me the addition, Whole want eu'en killes me.

Iago. Ply Desdemona well, and you are sure on't:
Now, if this Suit lay in Bianca's dowre,
How quickly should you speed?

Caffio. Alas poore Caflfio.

Otho. Looke how he laughe already.

Iago. I neuer knew woman loue man fo.

Caffio. Alas poore Rogue, I thynke indeed she loues me.

Otho. Now he denies it faintly: and laughe it out.

Iago. Do you heare Caffio?

Otho. Now he importunes him
To tell it o're: go too, well fald, well fald.

Iago. She gues it out, that youshall marry her.

Do you intend it?

Caffio. Ha, ha, ha.

Otho. Do ye triumph, Romaine? do you triumph?

Some Charitie to my wif, do not thinke it
So vnwholefome. Ha, ha, ha.

Otho. So, so, fo, fo: they laugh, that winnes.

Iago. Why the cry goes, that you marry her.

Cassio. Prythee lay true.

Iago. I am a very Villaine elfe.
Otho. Haue you leart'd me? Weli.

Cassio. This is the Monkeys owne guing out:
She is perfwaded I will marry her
Out of her owne loue & flattery, not out of my promife.
Enter Bianca.

Cajf. 'Tis such another Fitchew; marry a perfum'd one?
What do you mean by this haunting of me?

Bian. Let the diuell, and his dam haunt you: what did you mean by that fame Handkercheifee, you gave me euen now? I was a fine Foole to take it: I must take out the worke? A likely piece of worke, that you should find it in your Chamber: and know not who left it there. This is some Minxes token, & I must take out the worke?

Enter Lodowice, Desdemona, and Attendants.

Othe. Excellent good: What Trumpet is that fame?

Lago. I warrant something from Venice, "Tis Lodowice, this, or a Letter from the Duke.

See, your wife's with him.

Lodo. Save you worthy Generall.

Othe. With all my heart Sir.

Othe. I kiffe the Instrument of their pleasures.

Def. And what's the newes, good cozen Lodowice?

Lago. I am very glad to see you Signior:

Welcome to Cyprus.

Lodo. I thanke you: how do's Lieutenant Cajffio?

Lago. Lives Sir,

Def. Cozen, there's faire betwenee him, & my Lord, An vnkind breach: but you shall make all well.

Othe. Are you sure of that?

Def. My Lord?

Othe. This faile you not to do, as you will——

Lodo. He did not call: he's busy in the paper,

Is there declension twixt my Lord, and Cajffio?

Def. A most vnhappy one: I would do much

T'attire them, for the loue I bear to Cajffio.

Othe. Fire, and brimestone.

Def. My Lord,

Othe. Are you wife?

Def. What is he angrie?

Lodo. May be his Letter mou'd him.

For as I thinke, they do command him home,

Deputing Cajffio in his Governement.

Def. Troft me, I am glad on't.

Othe. Indeed?

Def. My Lord?

Othe. I am glad to fee you mad.

Def. Why, sweete Othello?

Othe. Duell.

Def. I have not defer'd this.

Lodo. My Lord, this would not be beleeu'd in Venice,

Though I should swear I faw't: 'Tis very much,

Make her amends: the weepes.

Othe. Oh diuell, diuell:

If that the Earth could teeme with womans teares,

Def. I will not play to offend you.

Euen the bed she hath contaminated.

Othe. Good good:

The Iustice of it pleases: very good.

Lago. And for Cajffio, let me be his vndertaker:

You shall heare more by midnight.
the Moore of Venice.

331

Oth. Miftris.
*Def. My Lord.
Oth. What would you with her, Sir?
Lod. Who I, my Lord?
Oth. I, you did wish, that I would make her turne: Sir, she can turne, and turne : and yet go on And turne againe. And she can wepe,Sir, wepe. And she's obedient : as you say obedient. Very obedient: proceed you in your teares. Concerning this Sir, (oh well-painted passion) I am commanded home: get you away : Ile send for you anon. Sir I obey the Mandate, And will returne to Venice. Hence, auant : Caffo shall haue my Place. And Sir, to night I do entreat, that we may fup together. You are welcome Sir to Cyprus.
Goates, and Monkeys. Exit.
Lod. Is this the Noble Moore, whom our full Senate Call all in all sufficient? Is this the Nature Whom Passiou could not shake? Whose fold vertue The fact of Accident, nor dart of Chance Could neither graze, nor pierce?
Iago. He is much chang'd.
Lod. Are his wits safe? Is he not light of Braine?
Iago. He's that he is : I may not breath my censure. What he might be if what he might, he is not, I would to heauen he were.
Lod. What? Strike his wife?
Iago. 'Faith that was not so well : yet would I knew That froke would prove the worst.
Lod. Is it his vf?
Or did the Letters, worke vpon his blood,
And new create his fault?
Iago. Alas, alas: It is not honestie in me to speake
What I haue seene, and knowne. You shall obserue him,
And his owne courtes will deonte him fo,
That I may faue my speech : do but go after
And marke how he continueth.
Lod. I am forry that I am deceiu'd in him. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello, and Emilia.

Oth. You have seene nothing then?
*Emil. Nor eu'er heard : nor eu'er did susect.
Oth. Yes, you have seene Caffo, and the together.
*Emil. But then I saw no harme : and then I heard,
Each syllable that breath made vp betweene them.
Oth. What? Did they never whisper?
*Emil. Neuer my Lord.
Oth. Nor send you out o'th'way?
*Emil. Neuer.
Oth. To fetch her Fan, her Gloues, her Mask, nor no-
*Emil. Neuer my Lord, (thing?)
Oth. That's strange.
*Emil. I durft(my Lord)to wager, she is honest: Lay downe my Soule at flanke : If you thinke other,
Remoue your thought. It doth abuse your bosome:
If any wretch haue put this in your head,
Let Heauen requit it with the Serpents curfe,
For if she be not honest, chaite, and true,
There's no man happy. The pureft of their Wifes
In foule as Slaender.
Oth. Bid her come hither: go, Exit Emilia.
She faies enough: yet she's a simple Baud
That cannot lay as much. This is a subtile Whore:
A Clofet Lockeand Key of Villanous Secrets,
And yet the'le kneele, and pray: I haue seene her do't.

Enter Delfdena, and Emilia.

Def. My Lord, what is your will?
Oth. Pray you Chucke come hither.
Def. What is your pleasoure?
Oth. Let me fee your eyes: looke in my face.
Def. What horrible Fancie's this?
Oth. Some of your Function mistris:
Leave Procrants alone, and that the doore:
Cough, or cry hemy; if any bod ycome:
Your Mystery, your Mystery: May dispatch. Exit Emili.
Def. Vpon my knee, what doth your speech import?
I vnderstand a Fury in your words.
Oth. Why? What art thou?
Def. Your wife my Lord: your true and loyall wife.
Othello. Come sware it: damne thy selfe, leaft being like one of Heauen, the diuells themselues should scare to cease thee. Therefore be double damn'd: sware thou art honest.
Def. Heauen doth truly know it.
Oth. Heauen truly knowes, that thou art false as hell.
Def. To whom my Lord?
With whom? How am I false?
Oth. Ah Delfdena, away, away, away.
Def. Alas the heay day: why do you weepe?
Am I the motiue of these tears my Lord?
If happily you my Father do supleet,
An Infrument of this your calling backe,
Lay not your blame on me: if you have loft him,
I have loft him too.
Oth. Had it please Heauen,
To try me with Affliction, had they rain'd
All kind of Sores, and Shames on my bare-head:
Steep'd me in pouerity to the very lippes,
Guen to Captuitle, me, and my virtuous hopes,
I should have found in some place of my Soule
A drop of patience. But alas, to make me
The fixed Figure for the time of Scorne,
To point his bow, and mowing finger at.
Yet could I beare that too, wel, very wel; But there where I haue garner'd vp my heart,
Where either I muft lye, or beare no life,
The Fontaine from the which my currant runnes,
Or else dryes vp: to be dierced thence,
Or keepe it as a Cetereffe, for foule Toades
To knott and gender in. Turne thy complexion there:
Patience, thou young and Rofe-lip'd Cherubin,
I heere looke grim as hell.
Def. I hope my Noble Lord esteemes me honest.
Oth. O I, as Sommer Flyes are in the Shambles,
That quicken even with blowing. Oh thou weed:
Who art so louely faire, and smelleth so sweete,
That the Senfe akes at thee,
Would thou had'ft never bin borne.
Def. Alas, what ignorant fin haue I committed?
Oth. Was this faire Paper? This most goodly Book
Made to write Whore vpon? What committed,

v v 2 Com
The Tragedie of Othello

Committed? Oh, thou publicke Commoner,
I shou'd make very Forges of my cheekes,
That would to Cynkers burne vp Moodefife,
Did I but speake thy deedes. What committed?
Heauen flippes the Nofe at it, and the Moone winks:
The baudy winde that kiffe all it meetes,
Is hush'd within the hollow Myne of Earth
And will not heare'. What committed?
Def. By Heauen you do me wrong.
Oth. Are not you a Strumpet?
Def. No, as I am a Chriflian.
If to preferre this vefwell for my Lord,
From any other foule vnlawfull touch
Be not to be a Strumpet, I am none.
Oth. What, not a Whore?
Def. No, as I shall be fail'd.
Oth. Is't poiffible?
Def. Oh Heauen forgive vs.
Oth. I cry you mercie then.
I tooke you for that cunning Whore of Venice,
That married with Othello. You Miftiris,
Enter eEmilia.
That have the office oppofite to Saint Peter,
And keeps the gate of hell. You know me.
We haue done our courfe: there's money for your paines:
I pray you turne the key, and keep our confaule. Exit.
Æmil. Alas, what do's this Gentleman conceive?
How do you Madam? how do you my good Lady?
Def. Faith, halfe a sleepe.
Æmil. Good Madam,
What's the manner with my Lord?
Def. With who?
Æmil. Why, with my Lord, Madam?
Def. Who is thy Lord?
Æmil. He that is yours,weet Lady.
Def. I have none: do not talke to me,Æmilia,
I cannot weepe: nor anweres haue I none,
But what should go by water. Pray thee to night,
Lay on my bed, my wedding fletcher, remember,
And call thy husband hither.
Æmil. Heere's a change indeed. Exit.
Def. 'Tis meete I shou'd be vs'd so: very meete.
How haue I bin behau'd,that he might thicke
The small'rt opinion on my left mifvfe?
Enter Iago, and eÆmilia.
Iago. What is your pleafure Madam?
How is't with you?
Def. I cannot tell: thofe that do teach yong Babes
Do it with gentle meanes, and Cafe taskes.
He might haue chid me fo: for in good faith
I am a Child to chiding.
Iago. What is the matter Lady?
Æmil. Alas(Iago)my Lord hath so bewhor'd her,
Throwe fuch diligift, and heavy termes upon her
That true hearts cannot bear it.
Def. Am I that name, Iago?
Iago. What name,(faire Lady)?
Def. Such as the faid my Lord did fay I was.
Æmil. He call'd her whom: a Beggar in his drinke:
Could not haue laid fuch termes upon his Cajlet.
Iago. Why did he fo?
Def. I do not know: I am sure I am none fuch.
Iago. Do not weepe, do not weepe: alas the day.
Æmil. Hath the forfooke fo many Noble Matches?
Her Father? And her Country? And her Friends?
To be call'd Whore? Would it not make one weep?
Def. It is my wretched Fortune.
Iago. Befrew him for't;
How comes this Tricke vpon him?
Def. Nay, Heauen doth know.
Æmil. I will be hang'd,if some eternall Villaine,
Some bufie and infinuating Rogue,
Some coggling,cozening Slaine, to get some Office,
Haue not deu'd this Slander: I will be hang'd elfe.
Iago. Fie, there is no fuch man: it is impoffible.
Def. If any fuch there be, Heauen pardon him.
Æmil. A halter pardon him:
And ad hell gnaw his bones.
Why should he call her Whore?
Who keeps her companie?
What Place? What Time?
What Forme? What liklyhood?
The Moore's abus'd by some moft villainous Knaue,
Some bafe notorious Knaue, some fcurry Fellow.
Oh Heauens, that fuch companions thou'dt vnfold,
And put in every honeft hand a whip
To laifi the Raifcalls naked through the world,
Euen from the East to th'Wett.
Iago. Speake with me no more.
Æmil. Oh fie vpon them: fome fuch Squire he was
That turn'd your wit, the feamy-fide without,
And made you to fufpeft me with the Moore.
Iago. You are a Foole: go too.
Def. Alas Iago,
What shall I do to win my Lord againe?
Good Friend, go to him: for by this light of Heauen,
I know not how I loft him. Heere I kneele:
If ere my will did trepafe' gainft his Loue,
Either in difcourfe of thought, or actuall deed,
Or that mine Eyes, mine Eares, or any Sence
Delighted them: or any other Forme,
Or that I do not yet, and euer did,
And euer will,(though he do shake me off
To beggerly diuorcement) Loue him dearely,
Comfort forfware me. Vnkindneffe may do much,
And his vnkindneffe may defeat my life,
But neuer taynt my Loue. I cannot fay Whore,
It do's abhorre me now I speake the word,
To do the Act, that might the addition earne,
Not the worlds Maffe of vanitie could makeme.
Iago. I pray you be content: 'tis but his humoure:
The buineffe of the State do's him ofence.
Def. If'twere no other.
Iago. It is but fo, I warrant,
Hearke how thefe Infruments fummon to fupper :
The Meffengers of Venice fiales the meare,
Go in, and weepe not: all things shall be well.

Excut Defdemona and Æmilia.
Enter Roderigo.

How now Roderigo?
Rod. I do not finde
That thou deal'st luftly with me.
Iago. What in the contrarie?
Roder. Every day thou daftes me with fome deffe Iago, and rather, as it feemes to me now, keeff from me all conuenience, then fupplie me with the leaft advantage of hope: I will indeed no longer endure it. Nor am I yet perfuaded to put vp in peace, what already I have foolifly fuffered.
Iago. Will you heare me Roderigo?
Roder. 1
I have heard too much: and your words and performances are no kin together.

I charge you most solemnly.

With naught but truth: I have wafted my selfe out of my meanes. The Jewels youe have had from me to deliver Desdemona, would halfe haue corrupted a Votarist. You haue told me the heath recei'd them, and return'd me expectations and comforts of soidaine respect, and acquaintance, but I finde none.

Well, go to: very well.

Rod. Very well, go too: I cannot go too, (man) nor tis not very well. Nay I think it is scurvy; and begin to finde my selfe foipt in it.

Very well.

I tell you, tis not very well: I will make my selfe knowne to Desdemona. If she will returne me my Jewels, I will give ouer my Suit, and repent my vnlawfull solicitation. If not, affure your selfe, I will seek satisfaction of you.

You haue said now.

I: and said nothing but what I protest intendement of doing.

Why, now I see there's mettle in thee: and even from this iniant do build on thee a better opinion then ever before: give me thy hand Rod. Thou haft taken against me a most unjust exception: but yet I protest I have dealt most directly in thy affairs.

It hath not appeard.

I grant indeed it hath not appeard: and your fumption is not without wit and judgement. But Rod. if thou haft that in thee indeed, which I haue greater reason to beleue now then euer (I meane purpose, Courage, and Valour) this night shew it. If thou the next night following enjoy not Desdemona, take me from this world with Treacherie, and devote Engine for my life.

Well: what is it? Is it within, reason and com parte?

Sir, there is especiall Commission come from Venice to depute Caffio in Otelllos place.

Is that true? Why then Otello and Desdemona returne againe to Venice.

Oh no: he goes into Mauritania and taketh away with him the faire Desdemona, vnlesse his a bode be lingred here by some accident. Wherein none can be so determinate, as the remouing of Caffio.

How do you mean remouing him?

Why, by making him vnapcable of Otello's place: knocking out his braines.

And that you would have me to do.

I: if you dare do your selfe a profit, and a right. He fups to night with a Harlotry: and thither will I go to him. He knowes not yet of his Honourable Fortune, if you will watch his going thence (which I will fashion to fall out betweene twelve and one) you may take him at your pleasure. I will be neere to second your Attempt, and he shall fall betweene vs. Come, stand not amaz'd at it, but go along with me: I will shew you such a necifitie in his death, that you shall thinke your selfe bound to put it on him. It is now high supper time: and the night growes to waff.

About it.

I will heare further reason for this.

And you thilbe satisf'd. Exeunt.

Enter Othello, Lodovico, Desdemona, Emilia, and Attendants.

Lod. I do beseech you Sir, trouble your selfe no further. Oth. Oh pardon me: 'twill do me good to walke.

Lodovico. Madam, good night: I humbly thank you your Ladyship.

Def. Your Honour is most welcome.

Oth. Will you walke Sir? Oh Desdemona.

Def. My Lord.

Othello. Get you to bed on th'instant, I will be return'd forthwith: dismisse your Attendant there: look't be done. Exit.

Def. I will my Lord.

Aem. How goes it now? He looks gentler then he did.

Def. He faies he will returne incontinent, and hath commanded me to go to bed, and bid me to dismisse you.

Emilia. Dismisse me?

Def. It was his bidding: therefore good Emilia, Glue me my nightly wearing, and adieu.

We must not now displease him.

Emilia. I, would you had never seene him.

Def. So would not I: my loue doth fo approve him, That eueen his stubborneffe, his checks, his brownes, (Prythee vn-pin me) haue grace and fauour.

Emilia. I haue, laid thofe Sheetes you bad me on the bed.

Def. All's one: good Father, how foolish are our minds? If I do die before, prythee throw'd me in one of these fame Sheetes.

Emilia. Come, come: you talke.

Def. My Mother had a Maid call'd Barbaris, She was in loue: and he the lou'd proud'd mad, And did forfake her. She had a Song of Willough, An old thing 'twas: but it express'd her Fortune, And she dy'd finging it. That Song to night, Will not go from my mind: I haue much to do, But to go hang my head all at one fide

And sining it like poore Brabaries: prythee dispatch.

Emilia. Shall I go fetch your Night-gowne?

Def. No, vn-pin me here,

This Lodowice is a proper man.

Emilia. A very handsome man.

Def. He speaks well.

Emilia. I know a Lady in Venice would haue walk'd barefoot to Palestyne for a touch of his nether lip.

Def. The poore Soul! fat singing, by a Stealamour tree.

Sing all a greene Willough:

Her band on her before her head on her knee,

Sing Willough, Willough, Willough.

The freshest Streames ran by her, and murmur'd her noanes

Sing Willough, &c.

Her faste tears fell from her, and fastned the fones,

Sing Willough, &c. (Lay by thee)

Willough, Willough. (Prythee high thee: he's come anon)

Sing all a greene Willough my selfe be your Garland.

Let no body blame him, he's none I approve.

(Nay that's not next. Harke, who is't that knocks?

Emilia. It's the wind.

Def. I call'd my Loue falsc Loue: but what said be then?

Sing Willough, &c.

If I count me women, you're coush with mo men.
The Tragedie of Othello

So get thee gone, good night: mine eyes do itch:
Doth that base weeping?

\textit{æmil.} Tis neyther heere, nor there.

\textit{def.} I haue heard it saide fo. O thefe Men, these men!
Do'th thou in confcience think(e tell me \textit{æmilia})
That there be women do abufe their husbands
In such gauche kinde?

\textit{æmil.} There be some such, no question.

\textit{def.} Would'th thou do such a deed for all the world?

\textit{æmil.} Why, would not you?

\textit{def.} No, by this Heauenly light.

\textit{æmil.} Nor I neither, by this Heauenly light:
I might doo't as well i'th'darke.

\textit{def.} Would'th thou do such a deed for all the world?

\textit{æmil.} The world's a huge thing:
It is a great price, for a small vice.

\textit{def.} In troth, I thinke thou would'nt.

\textit{æmil.} In troth I thinke I shoul'd, and vndoo't when
I had done. Marry, I would not doe such a thing for a loynt Ring, nor for meares of Lawne, nor for Gownes, Petticoats, nor Caps, nor any pettty exhibition. But for all the whole world: why, who would not make her husbands Cuckold, to make him a Monarch? I should venure Purgatory for't.

\textit{def.} Bedrew me, if I would do such a wrong
For the whole world.

\textit{æmil.} Why, the wrong is but a wrong i'th'world; and having the world for your labour, 'tis a wrong in your owne world, and you might quickly make it right.

\textit{def.} I do not thinke there is any such woman.

\textit{æmil.} Yes, a dozen ; and as many to'th'vantage, as wouldbre the world they paid for.
But I do thinke it is their Husbands faults
If Wives do fall: (Say, that they flacke their duties, And powre our Treasures into forrage laps;
Or else breake out in peeuish Jealoufies, Throwing reftraint upon vs: Or lay they strike vs, Or (cant our former hauing in desfitgh)
Why we haue galles: and though we haue some Grace, Yet haue we some Reuenge. Let Husbands know,
Their wives haue fenfe like them: They see, and smell,
And haue their PATals both for stweet, and fowre,
As Husbands haue. What is it that they do,
When they change vs for others? Is it Sport?
I thinke it is: and doth Affeclion breed it?
I thinke it doth. Is't Fraillty that thus erre's
It is fo too. And haue not we Affeclions?
Defires for Sport? and Fraillty, as men haue?
Then let them vs be well: else let them know,
The illes we do, their illes infruct vs fo.

\textit{def.} Good night, good night:
Heaune me fuch yfes fend,
Not to picke bad, from bad; but by bad, mend. \textit{Exeunt}

\textit{æÆnus Quintus. Scena Prima.}

\textit{Enter Iago, and Rodorigo.}

\textit{Iago.} Heere, stand' behind this Barke,
Straight will he come:
Weare thy good Rapier bare, and put it home:
Quicke,quicke, feare nothing; Ile be at thy Elbow,
It makes vs, or it marres vs, thinke on that,
And fixe moft firme thy Resolution.

\textit{Rod.} Be neere at hand, I may mifcarry in't.

\textit{Iago.} Heere, at thy hand: Be bold, & take thy fland.

\textit{Rod.} I haue no great deuotion to the deed,
And yet he hath gien me satisfying Reafons:
'Tis but a man gone. Forth my Sword: he dies.

\textit{Iago.} I haue rub'd this yong Quat almoit to the fene,
And he growes angry. Now, whether he kill \textit{Caffio,}
Or \textit{Caffio} him, or each do kill the other,
Every way makes my gaine. Lieue Rodorigo,
He calles me to a refitution large
Of Gold, and Jewels, that I bob'd from him,
As Guifts to \textit{Defdemona.}
It muft not be: If \textit{Caffio} do remaine,
He hath a dayly beauty in his life,
That makes me vgy: and besides, the Moore
May vnfold me to him: there fland I in much peril:
No, he muft dye. But fo, I heard him comming.

\textit{Enter Caffio.}

\textit{Rod.} I know his gate, 'tis he: Villaine thou dyet.

\textit{Caff.} That thruft had beene mine enemy indeed,
But that my Coute is better then thou know'rt:
I will make profe of thine.

\textit{Rod.} Oh, I am faine.

\textit{Caffio.} I am may'd for euer:
Helpe hoa: Murthor, murthor.

\textit{Enter Othello.}

\textit{Oth.} The voyce of \textit{Caffio, Iago} keeps his word.

\textit{Rod.} O Villaine that I am.

\textit{Oth.} It is euen fo.

\textit{Caff.} Oh helpe hoa: Light, a Surgeon.

\textit{Oth.} 'Tis he: O braue \textit{Iago}, honeft, and iuift,
That haft fuch Noble fenfe of thy Friends wrong,
Thou teacheft me. Minion, your deere eyes dead,
And your vnbleft Fate highes: Strumpet I come:
For of my heart, thofe Charmes thine Eyes, are blotted.
Thy Bed luft-flain'd, flall with Lufts blood bee spotted.

\textit{Exit Othello.}

\textit{Enter Lodovico and Gratiano.}

\textit{Caff.} What ha? no Watch? No pauffage?

Murthor, Murthor.

\textit{Gra.} 'Tis fome mischance, the voyce is very direfull.

\textit{Caff.} Oh helpe.

\textit{Lodo.} Hearke.

\textit{Rod.} Oh wretched Villaine.

\textit{Lodo.} Two or three groane. 'Tis heavy night;
These may be counterfeits: Let's think't vnfafe
To come into the cry, without more helpe.

\textit{Rod.} Nobody come: then flall I bleed to death.

\textit{Enter Iago.}

\textit{Lodo.} Hearke.

\textit{Gra.} Here's one comes in his shirt, with Light, and Weapons.

\textit{Iago.} Who's there?

Who's noyfe is this that cries on murther?

\textit{Lodo.} We do not know.

\textit{Iago.} Do not you heare a cry?

\textit{Caff.} Heere, heere: for heauen fake helpe me.

\textit{Iago.} What's the matter?

\textit{Gra.} This is Othello's Ancient, as I take it.

\textit{Lodo.} The fame indeede, a very valiant Fellow.

\textit{Iago.} What are you heere, that cry fo greuouely?

\textit{Caff.} Iago? Oh I am fpoil'd, vndone by Villaines:
Give me some helpe.

\textit{Iago.} O mee, Lieutenant!

What Villaines have done this?

\textit{Caff.} I thinke that one of them is heereabout,
The Moor of Venice.

And cannot make away.

Iago. Oh treacherous Villaines:
What are you there? Come in, and give some helpe.
Rod. O helpe me there.
Cafl. That's one of them.
Iago. Oh murd'rous Slave! O Villaine!
Rod. O dam'nd Iago! O inhumane Dogge!
Iago. Kill men I'th'darke?

Where be these bloody Theeeue's?
How silente is this Towne? Hoa, murther, murther.
What may you be? Are you of good, or euill?
Lod. As you shall prove vs, proue vs.
Iago. Signior Lodovico?
Lod. He Sir.
Iago. I cry you mercy: here's Caffio hurt by Villaines.
Gra. Caffio?
Iago. How is't Brother?
Cafl. My Legge is cut in two.
Iago. Marry heauen forbid:
Light Gentlemen, Ile binde it with my shirt.

Enter Bianca.

Bian. What is the matter hoa? Who is't that cry'd?
Iago. Who is't that cry'd?
Bian. Oh my deere Caffio,
My sweet Caffio? Oh Caffio, Caffio, Caffio.
Iago. O notable Strumpet. Caffio, may you supesct
Who they should be, that haue thus mangled you?
Cafl. No.
Gra. I am sorry to finde you thus;
I haue beene to feeke you.
Iago. Lend me a Garter. So: Oh for a Chaire
To beare him ealisy hence.
Bian. Alas he faints. Oh Caffio, Caffio, Caffio,
Iago. Gentlemen all, I do supesct this Trash
To be a party in this Injurie.
Patience awhile, good Caffio. Come, come;
Lend me a Light: know we this face, or no?
Alas my Friend, and my deere Countryman
Rodrigo, No: Yes sure: Yes, 'tis Rodrigo.
Gra. What, of Venice?
Iago. Even be Sir? Did you know him?
Gra. Know him? I.
Iago. Signior Gratiano? I cry your gentle pardon:
These bloody accidents must excuse my Manners,
That so neglectedy you.
Gra. I am glad to fee you.
Gra. Rodrigo?
Iago. He, he, 'tis he:
Oh that's well said, the Chaire.
Some good man bearde him carefully from hence,
He fetch the Generall's Surgeon. For you Mistris,
Sawe you your labour. He that lies flaine heere (Caffio)
Was my deere friend. What mallice was betweene you?

Caf. None in the world: nor do I know the man?

Stay you good Gentlemen. Looke you pale, Mistris?
Do you perceiue the gathneffe of her eye?
Nay, if you stare, we shall haue more anon.
Behold her well: 1 pray you looke upon her:
Do you see Gentlemen? Nay, guiltineffe will speake
Though tongues were out of vife.
Emil. Alas, what is the matter?

What is the matter, Husband?
Cafl. Caffio hath heere bin set on in the darke
By Rodrigo, and Fellowes that are esp'd:

He's almost flaine, and Rodrigo quite dead.
Emil. Alas good Gentleman: alas good Caffio.
Iago. This is the fruits of whoring. Prythe Emilia,
Go know of Caffio where he fupt to night.
What, do you shakke at that?
Bian. He fupt at my house, but I therefore shakke not.
Iago. O did he so? I charge you go with me.
Emil. Oh fie upon thee Strumpet.
Bian. I am no Strumpet, but of life as honest,
As you that thus abuse me.
Emil. As I? Fie upon thee.
Iago. Kinde Gentlemen:
Let's go see poore Caffio dreft.
Come Mistris, you must tel's another Tale.
Emilia, run you to the Cittadell,
And tell my Lord and Lady, what hath happ'd:
Will you go on afore? This is the night
That either makes me, or foredoes me quight.

Excut

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello, and Desdemona in her bed.

Oth. It is the Caufe, it is the Caufe (my Soule)
Let me not name it to you, you chaife Starres,
It is the Caufe. Yet Ile not shed her blood,
Nor scarre that whiter skin of hers, then Snow,
And smooth as Monumentall Alablater:
Yet sheh must dye, else thee'll betray more men:
Put out the Light, and then put out the Light:
If I quench thee, thou flattering Miniater,
I can againe thy former light restore,
Should I repent me. But once put out thy Light,
Thou cunning't Pattern of excelling Nature,
I know not where is that Promethean heate
That can thy Light re-Lume,
When I have pluck'd thy Rofe,
I cannot give it vitall growth againe,
It needs must wither. Hee smel thee on the Tree.
Oh Balmy breath, that dof almoft perfwade
Justice to breake her Sword. One more, one more:
Be thus when thou art dead, and I will kill thee,
And loue thee after. One more, and that's the laft.
So sweet, was ne're fo fatall. I muft wepe,
But they are cruell Teares: This forrow's heavenly,
It strikes, where it doth loue. She wakes.

Def. Who's there? Othello?
Oth. I Desdemona.

Def. Will you come to bed, my Lord?
Oth. Haue you pray'd to night, 'Desdemona?
Def. I my Lord.
Oth. If you bethinke your selfe of any Crime
Vnreconcil'd as yet to Heauen, and Grace,
Solicite for it straigte.

Def. Alacke, my Lord,
What may you meane by that?
Oth. Well, do it, and be breefe, I will walke by:
I would not kill thy vnprepared Spirit,
No, Heauens fore-fend) I would not kill thy Soule.

Def. Taleke you of killing?
Oth. I do,
Def. Then Heauen haue mercy on mee.
The Tragedie of Othello

Oth. Amen, with all my heart.
Def. If you say, I hope you will not kill me.
Oth. Humh.
"Def. And yet I fear you : for you're fatall then
When your eyes rowle so.
Why I should feare, I know not,
Since guilteinfe I know not : But yet I feele I fear.
Oth. Thinke on thy finnes.
"Def. They are Loues I bear to you.
Oth. I, and for that thou dy't.
"Def. That death's vnnatural, that kills for lustng.
Alas, why gnaw you fo your nether-lip?
Some bloody passion shakes your very Frame :
These are portents: but yet I hope, I hope,
They do not point on me.
Oth. Peace, and be still.
"Def. I will so : What's the matter?
Oth. That Handkerchiefe
Which I fo lou'd, and gaue thee, thou gaul't to Caflfio.
"Def. No by my Life, and Soule : fend for the man,
And ask him.
Oth. Sweet Soule, take heed, take heed of Periury,
Thou art on thy death-bed.
"Def. I, but not yet to dye.
Oth. Proudly.
Therefore confede thee freely of thy finne:
For to deny each Article with Oath,
Cannot remoue, nor choke the strong Conception
That I do done withall. Thou art to dye.
"Def. O Heauen have mercy on me.
Oth. I say, Amen.
"Def. And have you mercy too. I never did
Offend you in my life : neuer lou'd Caflfio,
But with fuch generall warrantie of Heauen,
As I might love. I neuer gaue him Token.
Oth. By Heauen I faw my Handkerchiefe in's hand.
O periu'd woman, thou do'lt flone my heart,
And makes me call, what I intend to do,
A Murther, which I thought a Sacrifice.
I faw the Handkerchiefe.
"Def. He found it then :
I neuer gaue him it : Send, for him hither :
Let him confede a truth.
Oth. He hath confed.
"Def. What, my Lord?
Oth. That he hath vs'd thee.
"Def. How? vnlawfully?
Oth. I.
"Def. He will not fay fo.
Oth. No : his mouth is stopp'd :
Honest Luys hath 'tane order for't.
"Def. Oh, my feare interprets. What is he dead?
Oth. Had all his haires bin liues, my great Reuenge
Had flamacke for them all.
"Def. Alas, he is betray'd, and I vndone.
Oth. Out Strumpet: weep'lt thou for him to my face?
"Def. O banish me, my Lord, but kill me not.
Oth. Downe Strumpet.
"Def. Kill me to morrow, let me liue to night.
Oth. Nay, if you ftriu.e.
"Def. But halfe an houre.
Oth. Being done, there is no pawfe.
"Def. But while I fay one prayer.
Oth. It is too late.
Smothers ber.
"Emil. My Lord, my Lord? What hoa ?!
Emil. Villany, villany, villany:
I thinke wpon't, I thinke: I smel't; O Villany:
I thought so then: Ile kill my saile for greefe.
O villany! villany!

Iago. What, are you mad?
I charge you get you home.

Emil. Good Gentlemen, let me have leave to speake:
'Tis proper I obey him; but not now:
Perchance Iago, I will ne're go home.

Otb. Oh, oh, oh.

Emil. Nay, lay thee downe, and roare:
For thou hast kill'd the sweeteft innocent,
That ere did lift vp eye.

Otb. Oh she was fowle!
I scarce did know you Vnkle, there lies your Neece,
Whose breath (indeed) these hands haue newly stopp'd:
I know this afe shewes horrible and grim.

Gro. Poore Defdemon:
I am glad thy Father's dead,
Thy Match was mortall to him: and pure greefe
Shore his old thred in twaine. Did he live now,
This fight would make him do a desperate turne:
Yea, curfe his better Angell from his fide,
And fall to Reprobance.

Otb. 'Tis pitifull! but yet Iago knowes
That she with Caffio, hath the Act of thame,
A thousand times committed. Caffio confed it,
And she did gratifie his amorous works
With that Recognizance and pledge of Loue
Which I firt gaue her: I faw it in his hand:
It was a Handkerchief, an Antique Token
My Father gaue my Mother.

Emil. Oh Haueen! oh heausely Powres!
Iago. Come, hold your peace.

Emil. 'Twill out, 'twill out. I peace?

Emil. No, I will speake as liberall as the North;
Let Haueen, and Men, and Duels, let them all,
All, all, crie thame against me, yet Ile speake.

Iago. Be wife, and get you home.

Emil. I will not.

Gro. Fye, your Sword wpon a Woman.

Emil. Oh thou dull Moore,
That Handkerchief thou speake't of
I found by Fortune, and did gue my Husband:
For often, with a solemne earneftnefe,
(More then indeed belong'd to fuch a Trife)
He begg'd of me, to fleaste.'

Iago. Villanous Whore.

Emil. She gie it Caffio? No, alas I found it,
And I did giu't my Husband.

Iago. Filth, thou lyeft.

Emil. By Haueen I do not, I do not Gentlemen:
Oh mur'drous Coxcombe, what should fuch a Foole
Do with fo good a wife?

Otb. Are there no fones in Haueen,
But what feres for the Thunder?

Precious Villaine.

Gro. The woman falles:
Sure he hath kill'd his Wife.

Emil. I, I: oh lay me by my Miftris fide.

Gro. He's gone, but his wife's kill'd.

Men. 'Tis a notorious Villain: take you this weapon
Which I haue recover'd from the Moore:
Come guard the doore without, let him not pafe,
But kill him rather. Ile after that fame villaine,
For 'tis a damned Saue.

Exit.

Otb.
The Tragedie of Othello

Oth. I am not valiant neither:
But every Punic whisper gets my Sword,
But why should honor out-live honesty?

Let it go all.

Emil. What did thy Song boad Lady?

Heare, canst thou hear me? I will play the Swan,
And dye in Muficke: Willough, Willough, Willough.

Moore, she was chaste: She lou’d thee, cruel Moore,
So come my Soule to blisse, as I speake true:
So speaking as I think, alas, I dye.

Oth. I have another weapon in this Chamber,
It was a Sword of Spaine, the Ice brookes temper:
Oh heere it is: Vnkle I must come forth.

Fra. If thou attempt it, it will coft thee deere;
Thou haft no weapon, and perfere must suffer.

Oth. Looke in vpone me then, and speake with me,
Or naked as I am I will affault thee.

Fra. What is the matter?

Othel. Behold, I haue a weapon:
A better neuer did it felpe uftaine
Vpon a Soldiers Thigh. I haue feene the day,
That with this little Arme, and this good Sword,
I haue made my way through more impediments
Then twenty times your frop. But (oh vaie boath)
Who can toll his Fate? 'Tis not fo now.
Be not afraid, though you do fee me weapon’d:
Heere is my journyes end, heere is my but
And verie Sea-marke of my vmtost Saile.

Do you go backe difmisad? 'Tis a loft hear:
Man but a Ruth against Othello’s breft,
And he retires. Where shoul Othello go?

Now: how doft thou looke now? Oh ill-Starr’d wench,
Pale as thy Smocke: when we shall mette at compt,
This looke of thine will hurle my Soule from Heauen,
And Fiends will snatch at it. Cold, cold, my Girle?
Even like thy Chaffity. O cursed, cursed Saue!
Whip me ye Dutels,

From the pestilence of this Heauenly fight:
Blow me about in winges, roaft me in Sulphure,
Wafh me in freepe-downe gulfes of Liuid fire.
Oh Desdemion’l dead Desdemon: dead. Oh, oh!

Enter Lodovico, Caffio, Mantonio, and Iago, with Officers.

Lod. Where is this rafh, and moft vnfortunate man?

Oth. That’s he that was Othello: heere I am.

Lod. Where is that Viper?

Bring the Villaine forth.

Oth. I look down towards his feet; but that’s a Fable,
If that thou bee’t a Dutell, I cannot kill thee.

Lod. Wrench his Sword from him.

Iago. I bleed Sir, but not kill’d.

Oth. I am not sorry neither, I’d haue thee live:
For in my fente, ’tis happinesse to die.

Lod. Oh thou Othello, that was once fo good,
Falne in the pracliffe of a cursed Saue,
What shall be faide to thee.

Oth. Why any thing:
An honourable Murderer, if you will:
For nought I did in hate, but all in Honour.

Lod. This wretch hath part confent his Villany:
Did you and he confent in Caffio’s death.

Oth. I.

Caff. Deere Generall, I neuer gaue you caufe.

Oth. I do beleue it, and I aske your pardon:
Will you, I pray, demand that demy-Duell,

Why he hath thus enfnar’d my Soule and Body.

Lod. Demand me nothing: what you know, you know:
From this time forth, I neuer will speake word.

Lod. What! not to pray?

Caffio. Torments will ope your lips.

Oth. Well, thou doft beft.

Lod. Sir,
You shall vnderstand what hath befallen,
(Which, as I thinkke, you know not) heere is a Letter
Found in the pocket of the flowe Rodorige,
And heere another, the one of them imports
The death of Caffio, to be vndertooke
By Rodorige.

Oth. O Villaine!

Caffio. Moft Heathenish, and moft groffe.

Lod. Now, heere’s another discontenented paper
Found in his pocket too: and this it feemes
Rodorige meant t’haue fet this damned villaine:
But that (belike) Iago in the interim
Came in, and fatiﬁ’d him.

Oth. Oh thou pernicious Calife!

Lod. How came you (Caffio) by that Handskerchief
That was my wifes?

Caffio. I found it in my Chamber:
And he himselfe confett it but eu’n now,
That there he dropt it for a speciall purpose,
Which wrought to his deffe.

Othel. O Foole, foole, foole!

Caffio. There is beﬁdes, in Rodorige’s Letter,
How he vpbraides Iago, that he made him
Braye me vpon the Watch: whereon it came
That I was caft: and eu’n now he fpake
(After long seeming dead) Iago hurt him,
Iago fet him on.

Lod. You must forfaie this roome, and go with vs:
Your Power, and your Command is taken off,
And Caffio rules in Cyprus. For this Saue,
If there be any cunning Crueltie,
That can torment him much, and hold him long,
It shall be his. You shall cloze Prisoner refi
Till that the Nature of your fault be knowne
To the Venetian State. Come, bring away.

Oth. Soft you; a word or two before you goe:
I haue done the State some feruice, and they know’t: No more of that. I pray you in your Letters,
When you shall thefe vnluckie deeds relate,
Speake of me, as I am. Nothing extenuate,
Nor fet downe ought in malice.
Then muft you speake,
Of one that lou’d not wisely, but too well:
Of one, not eaily Jealous, but being wrought,
Perplexed in the extreame: Of one, whose hand
(Like the base Judean) shee threw a Pearle away,
Richer then all his Tribe: Of one, whose subdu’d Eyes,
Albeit vn-vfed to the melting mood.

Drags teares as fas as the Arabian Trees
Their Medicinable gumme. Set you downe this:
And say beﬁdes, that in Aleppo once,
Where a malignant, and a Turbond-Turke
Beate a Venetian, and traduc’d the State,
I tooke by th’throat the circumcised Dogge,
And smote him, thus.

Lod. Oh bloody period.

Caffio. All that is spoke, is marr’d.

Oth. I kif thee, ere I kill’d thee: No way but this,
Killing my falte, to dye vpon a kiffe.

Dyes

Caffio.

The Moore of Venice.

Caf. This did I feare, but thought he had no weapon:
For he was great of heart.
Led. Oh Spartan Dogge:
More fell then Anguiff, Hunger, or the Sea:
Looke on the Tragicke Loading of this bed:
This is thy worke:
The Objecf poyfons Sight,
Let it be hid. Gratiano, keepe the house,
And feize upon the Fortunes of the Moore,
For they succeede on you. To you, Lord Gouernor,
Remaines th eCenfure of this hellifh villaine:
The Time, the Place, the Torture, oh inforce it:
My selfe will straight aboard, and to the State,
This heauie Act, with heauie heart relate. Exeunt.

FINIS.

The Names of the Actors.

( : • : )

Thello, the Moore.
Brabantio, Father to Desdemona.
Caffio, an Honourable Lieutenant.
Iago, a Villaine.
Rodorigo, a gull'd Gentleman.
Duke of Venice.

Senators.
Montano, Gouernour of Cyprus.
Gentlemen of Cyprus.
Lodouisco, and Gratiano, two Noble Venetians.
Sailors.
Clowns.

Desdemona, Wife to Othello.
Æmilia, Wife to Iago.
Bianca, a Curtezan.
Enter Demetrius and Philo.

Philo.

Ay, but this doage of our Generals
Or-flowes the measure: those his goodly eyes
That o're the Files and Mutteres of the Warre,
Hau eau low'd like plated Mars:
Now bend, now turne
The Office and Deuotion of their view
Vpon a Tawny Front. His Captaines heart,
Which in the scuffles of great Fights hath burn't
The Buckles on his breaf, reneges all temper,
And is become the Bellowes and the Fan
to coole a Gypsis Luft.

Flourish. Enter Anthony, Cleopatra her Ladies, the Traine, with Enuchs fanning her.
Looke where they come:
Take but good note, and you shall fee in him
(The triple Pillar of the world) transform'd
Into a Strumpets Foole. Behold and fee.
Cleo. If it be Loue indeed, tell me how much.
Ant. There's beggery in the loue that can be reckon'd
Cleo. Ile fet a bourse how farre to be belou'd.
Ant. Then muft thou needs finde out new Heauen, new Earth.

Enter a Messenger.

Msf. Newes (my good Lord) from Rome.
Ant. Grates me, the summe.
Cleo. Nay heare them Anthony.
Fulvia perchance is angry: Or who knowses,
If the scarf-bearded Caesar haue not fent
His powerfull Mandate to you. Do this, or this;
Take in that Kingdom, and Infranchife that:
Perform't, or else we damne thee.
Ant. How, my Loue?
Cleo. Perchance? Nay, and moft like:
You muft not stay heere longer, your diffimifion
Is come from Caesar, therefore heare it Anthony.
Where's Fulvia? Proceed? (Cesars I would fay) both?
Call in the Messengers: As I am Egyptians Queene,
Thou blufheft Anthony, and that blood of thine
Is Caefars homager: elle fo thy checke payes shame,
When yeel-tongu'd Fulvia scolds. The Messengers.
Ant. Let Rome in Tyber melt, and the wide Arch
Of the raing'd Empire fall: Heere is my space,
Kingdomes are clay: Our dungie earth alike
Feeds Beast as Man: the Nobleneffe of life
Is to do thus; when fuch a mutuall paire,
And fuch a twaine can don't, in which I binde
One paine of punishment, the world to weete
We stand vp Peereleffe.

Cleo. Excellent falhod:
Why did he marry Fulvia, and not loue her?
Ile feeme the Foole I am not. Anthony will be himselfe.
Ant. But flitt'd by Cleopatra.

Now for the loue of Loue, and her soft hours,
Let's not confound the time with Conference hard;
There's not a minute of our lives should stretch
Without some pleafure now. What sport to night?
Cleo. Hearre the Ambaffadors.
Ant. Fye wrangling Queene:
Whom evey thing becomes, to chide, to laugh,
To weepe: who evey passion fully fritues
To make it felfe (in Thee)faire, and admir'd
No Messenger but thine, and all alone, to night
We'll wander through the streets, and note
The qualities of people. Come my Queene,
Laft night you did defire it. Speake not to vs.

Exeunt with the Traine.

Dem. Is Caesar with Antonius priz'd do flight?
Philo. Sir sometime when he is not Anthony,
He comes too short of that great Property
Which fill should go with Anthony.
Dem. I am full forry, that hee approves the common
Lyar, who thus speaks of him at Rome: but I will hope
Of better deeds to morrow. Reft you happy.

Exeunt

Enter Endeburas, Lamprius, a Southlayer, Rannius, Lucillius, Charmian, Iudas, Mardian the Eunuch, and Alexas.

Char. L. Alexas, sweet Alexas, moft any thing Alexas, almost moft abolute Alexas, where's the Soothfayer that you prais'd fo toth'Queene? Oh that I knewe this Husband, which you fay, muft change his Hornes with Garlands.

Alex. Soothfayer.

Soth. Your will?

Char. Is this the Man? Is't you fir that know things?

Soth. In Natures infinite booke of Secrecie, a little I can read,

Alex. Shew him your hand.

Enob. Bring in the Banket quickly: Wine enough,

Cleopa
Anthony and Cleopatra.

Cleopatra's health to drinke.
Char. Good sir, give me good Fortune.
Sooth. I make not, but foresee.
Char. Pray then, foresee me one.
Sooth. You shall be yet farre fainier then you are.
Char. He meanes in fleth.
Iras. No, you shall paint when you are old.
Char. Wrinkles forbid.
Alex. Vex not his prudence, be attentive.
Char. Huh.
Sooth. You shall be more belouing, then beloued.
Char. I had rather heate my Luer with drinking.
Alex. Nay, heare him.
Char. Good now some excellent Fortune : Let me be married to three Kings in a forenoon, and Widdow them all ; Let me haue a Childe at fifty, to whom Herode of Iewry may do Homage. Finde me to marrie me with Octavius Caesar, and companion mee with my Miftris.
Sooth. You shall out-live the Lady whom you ferue.
Char. Oh excellent, I loue long life better then Figs. Sooth. You have feene and prouded a fairer for- tune, then that which is to approach.
Char. Then belike my Children shall haue no names: Prythee how many Boyes and Wenches mutt I haue.
Sooth. If euer of your wishes had a wombe, & fore- tell every with, a Million.
Char. oat Foole, I forgie thee for a Witch.
Alex. You thinke none but your fcheets are priue to your wishes.
Char. Nay come, tell Iras hers.
Alex. We'll know all our Fortunes.
Eno. Mine, and most of our Fortunes to night, shall be drunkne to bed.
Iras. There's a Palme presages Chaffity, if nothing els.
Char. E'ne as the o're-flowing Nylus prefigeth Fa- mine.
Iras. Go you wilde Bedfellow, you cannot Sootthay.
Char. Nay, if an oly Palme bee not a fruitfull Prog- nofication, I cannot forgue mine ear. Prythee tel her but a worke day Fortune.
Sooth. Your Fortunes are alike.
Iras. But how, but how, give me particulars.
Sooth. I haue faid.
Iras. Am I not an inch of Fortune better then she?
Char. Well, if you were but an inch of fortune better then I : where would you choose it.
Iras. Not in my Husbands nofe.
Char. Our worfer thoughts Haueens mend.
Alex. Come, his Fortune, his Fortune. Oh let him mary a woman that cannot go, sweet Isis, I beeffe thee, and let her dye too, and glue him a worfe, and let worfe follow worfe, till the worfe of all follow him laughing to his graue, fifty-fold a Cuckold. Good Isis hear me this Prayer, though thou denie me a matter of more weight: good Isis I beeffe thee.
Iras. Amen,deere Godleefe, heare that prayer of the people. For, as it is a heart-breaking to fee a handfome man loose-Wili'd, fo it is a deadly forrow, to beholde a foule Knaue vncoocked : Therefore deere Isis keep de- corum, and Fortune him accordingly.
Char. Amen.
Alex. Lo now, if it lay in their hands to make mee a Cuckold, they would make themfellues Whores, but they'd don't. Enter Cleopatra.
Ench. Huh, heere comes Anthony.

Char. Not he, the Queene.
Cleo. Saue you, my Lord.
Eno. No Lady.
Cleo. Was he not heere?
Char. No Madam.
Cleo. He was difpos'd to mirth, but on the sodaine
A Romane thought hath strooke him.
Enobarbus ?
Eno. Madam.
Cleo. Seeke him,and bring him hither: wher's Alexius ?
Alex. Heere at your feruice.
My Lord approaches.

Enter Anthony, with a Messenger.
Cleo. We will not looke vpon him :
Go with vs.
Meffen. Fulvia thy Wife,
Firt came into the Field.
Ant. Against my Brother Lucius ?
Meffen. 1 : but boone that Warre had end,
And the times flate
Made friends of them, ioynting their force 'gainst Caesar,
Whofe better iffue in the warre from Italy,
Vpon the fift encounter drave them.
Ant. Well, what worfeit.
Meff. The Nature of bad newes infects the Teller.
Ant. When it concerns the Foole or Coward : On.
Things that are paft, are done, with me. 'Tis thus,
Who tells me true, though in his Tale lye death,
I heare him as he flatter'd.
Meff. Labenus (this is fife-newes)
Hath with his Parthian Force
Extended Aphia : from Eurphates his conquering
Banner fhooke, from Syria to Lydia,
And to Ionia, whilft—–
Ant. Anthony thou would'ft say.
Meff. Oh my Lord,
Ant. Speake to me home,
Mince not the general tongue, name
Cleopatra as she is call'd in Rome :
Raife thou in Fulvia's phrase, and taunt my faults
With fuch full Licenfe, as both Truth and Malice
Haue power to vter. Oh then we bring forth weedes,
When our quicke windes lye still, and our illes told vs
Is as our earing : fare thee well'atwhile.
Meff. At your Noble pleafure. Exit Messenger.
Enter another Messenger.
Ant. From Scion how the newes ? Speaketh there.
1. Meff. The man from Scion,
Is there fuch an one ?
2. Meff. He fayes vpon your will.
Ant. Let him appear :
These ftrong Egyptian Fetters I muft breake,
Or loose my felie in dotage.

Enter another Messenger with a Letter.

What are you?
3. Meff. Fulvia thy wife is dead.
Ant. Where dyed the.
Meff. In Scion, her length of fickneffe,
With what elle more ferior,
Importeth thee to know, this bearers.
Ant. Forbear me
There's a great Spirit gone, thus did I defire it:
What our contempts doth often hurle from vs,
We with it ours againe. The present pleasure,
By resolution bowing, does become
The oppose of it selfe : she's good being gon,
The hand could plucke her backe, that shou'd her on.
I must from this enchanting Queene breake off,
Ten thousand harmes, more then the iles I know
My idlenesse doth hatch.

Enter Erobarbus.

How now Erobarbus.

Eno. What's your pleasure, Sir ?

Antb. I must with haste from hence.

Eno. Why then we kill all our Women. We see how mortall an vnkindnesse is to them, if they suffer our departure death's the word.

Ant. I must be gone.

Eno. Vnder a compelling an occasion, let women die.
It was pitty to call them away for nothing, though betweene them and a great cause, they should be esteemed nothing. Cleopatra catching but the leafe noyse of this, dies infantly: I haue seene her dyes twenty times vpon farre poorer moment: I do think there is mettle in death, which commits some lounge acte vpon her, she hath such a celerity in dying.

Ant. She is cunning paft mans thought.

Eno. Alacke Sir no, her passions are made of nothing but the finest part of pure Loue. We cannot call her winds and waters, fighes and teares: They are greater stormes and Tempefts then Almanackes can report. This cannot be cunning in her; if it be, she makes a howre of Raine
as well as Loue.

Ant. Would I had neuer seene her.

Eno. Oh but if thou hast then left vnseene a wonderful peece of worke, which not to haue seene blest withall, would have difcredited your Trauail.

Ant. Pulbis is dead.

Eno. Sir.

Antb. Pulbis is dead.

Eno. Pulbis?

Ant. Dead.

Eno. Why sir, giue the Gods a thankfull Sacrifice ;
when it pleafeth their Deities to take the wife of a man from him, it shews to man the Tailors of the earth: comforting therein, that when olde Robes are worn out, there are members to make new. If there were no more Women but Pulbis, then had you indeed a cut, and the cafe to be lamented: This greene is crown'd with Confolation, your old Smocke brings forth a new Petticoate, and indeed the teares liue in an Onion, that should water
this forrow.

Ant. The buffeene she hath broached in the State,
Cannot endure my absence.

Eno. And the buffeene you haue brouched'd heare cannot be without you, especially that of Cleopatra's, which wholly depends on your abode.

Ant. No more light Anwers:

Let our Officers
Haue notice what we purpose. I shall breake
The caufe of our Expendence to the Queene,
And get her loue to part. For not alone
The death of Pulbis, with more vrgent touches
Do strongly speake to vs : but the Letters too
Of many our contriuing Friends in Rome,
Petition vs at home. Sexus Pompeius
Haue giuen the dare to Cæsar, and commands
The Empire of the Sea. Our slippery people,
Whole Loue is newer link'd to the defuerer,

Till his deferts are paft, begin to throw
Pompey the great, and all his Dignities
Vpon his Sonne, who high in Name and Power,
Higher then both in Blood and Life, flande vp
For the maine Souldier. Whose quality going on,
The fides o'th world may danger. Much is breeding,
Which like the Couriers heare, hath yet but life,
And not a Serpents poyfon. Say our pleasure,
To fuch whole places vnder vs, require
Our quicke remoue from hence.

Enob. I shall doo't.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Alexias, and Iras.

Cleo. Where is he ?

Char. I did not see him since.

Cleo. See where he is,

Whose with him, what he does :
I did not fend you. If you finde him sad,
Say I am dauncing : if in Myrth, report
That I am sodaine sicke. Quicke, and returne.

Char. Madam, me thinkes if you did louse him deelyr,
You do not hold the method, to enforce
The like from him.

Cleo. What should I do, I do not ?

Ch. In each thing giue him way, croffe him in nothing.
Cleo. Thou teachest like a foollette way to lose him.
Char. Tempt him not fo too farre. I with forbeare,
In time we hate that which we often feare.

Enter Antony.

But heere comes Antony.

Cleo. I am sicke, and fullen.

Ant. I am forry to giue breathing to my purpose.

Cleo. Help me away deere Charmian, I shall fall,
It cannot be thus long, the fides of Nature
Will not fufaine it.

Ant. Now my deere Queene.

Cleo. Pray you fland farther from mee.

Ant. What's the matter ?

Cleo. I know by that fame eye ther's fome good news.

What fayes the married woman you may goe ?
Would she had neuer giuen you leaue to come.
Let her not fay "tis I that kepe you heere,
I haue no power vpon you : Hears you are.

Ant. The Gods neuer know.

Cleo. Oh neuer was there Queene
So mightilly betrayed : yet at the ftill
I faw the Treafons planted.

Ant. Cleopatra.

Cleo. Why should I thinke you can be mine, & true (Though you in sweareing shake the Throaned Gods)
Who haue bene False to Pulbis ?
Riotous madneffe,
To be entangled with thofe mouth-made vowels,
Which breake themfelves in sweareing.

Ant. Mofte sweet Queene.

Cleo. Nay pray you leexe no colour for your going,
But bid farewell, and goo :
When you ftay, ftaying,
Then was the time for words : No going then,
Eternity was in our Lippes, and Eyes.
Bliffe in our browses bent : none our parts fo poore,
But was a race of Heauen. They are fo still,
Or thou the greatest Souldier of the world,
Art turn'd the greatest Lyar.

Ant. How now Lady ?

Cleo.
Anthony and Cleopatra.

Cleo. I would I had thy inches, thou should'st know
There were a heart in Egypt.

Ant. Hear me Queene:
The strong necessity of Time, commands
Our Surreyles a-while: but my full heart
Remains in vse with you. Our Izaly,
Shines o're with cuill Swords; Sextus Pompeius
Makes his approaches to the Port of Rome,
Equality of two Domestickie powers,
Breed scrupulous faction: The hated groove to strenth
Are newly grove to Loue: The condemn'd Pompey,
Rich in his Fathers Honor, creeps apace
Into the hearts of such, as have not thirved
Upon the present state, whose Numbers threaten,
And quietneffe growing fickle of reft, would purge
By any desperate change: My more particular,
And that which most with you should safe my going,
Is Fulusia death.

Cleo. Though age from folly could not give me freedom
It does from childifhneffe. Can Fulusia dye?

Ant. She's dead my Queene.

Looke heere, and at thy Soueraine legifure read
The Garboyles the awak'd: at the last, beft,
See when, and where thee die.

Cleo. O moft falle Loue!
Where be the Sacred Violles thou should'ft fill
With forrowfull water? Now I fee, I fee
In Fulusia death, how mine receuil'd shall be.

Ant. Quarel no more: but bee prepar'd to know
The purpoifes I beare: which are, or ceafe,
As you shall give th'advice. By the fire
That quickens Nylus flime, I go from hence
Thy Souldier, Searuat, making Peace or Warre,
As thou affects.

Cleo. Cut my Lace, Charming come,
But let it be, I am quickly ill, and well,
So Anthony loues.

Ant. My precious Queene forbeare,
And give true evidence to his Loue, which flands
An honourable Triall.

Cleo. So Fulusia told me.

I prythee turne aside, and wepe for her,
Then bid adiew to me, and say the tears
Belong to Egypt. Good now, play one Scene
Of excellent diffembling, and let it looke
Like perfected Honor.

Ant. You'll heat my blood no more?

Cleo. You can do better yet: but this is meetly.

Ant. Now by Sword.

Cleo. And Target. Still he mends.
But this is not the bent. Looke prythee Charming,
How this Hercules Roman do's become
The carriage of his chafe.

Ant. Ile leave you Lady.

Cleo. Courteous Lord, one word:
Sir, you and I must part, but that's not it:
Sir, you and I have lou'd, but there's not it:
That you know well, something it is I would:
Oh, my Oblusion is a very Anthony,
And I am all forgotten.

Ant. But that your Royalty
Holds Idlenesse your fubiec't, I should take you
For Idlenesse it fellc.

Cleo. 'Tis sweating Labour,
To bear such Idlenesse to neere the heart
As Cleopatra this. But Sir, forgive me,

Since my becommings kill me, when they do not
Eye well to you. Your Honor calles you hence,
Therefore be deafe to my wrapp't Folly,
And all the Gods go with you. Upon your Sword
Sit Lawrell vict'ry, and smooth successe
Be strew'd before your feet.

Ant. Let vs go.

Come: Our separafio abides and flies,
That thou recyling heere, goes yet with mee:
And I hence fleeting, heere remaine with thee.

Away.

Exit.

Enter Otho vna reading a Letter, Lepidus, and their Traine.

Ces. You may fee Lepidus, and henceforth know,
It is not Cefar's Naturall vice, to hate
One great Competitor. From Alexandria
This is the newes: He fishes, drinkes, and waits
The Lamps of night in reuell: Is not more manlike
Then Cleopatra: nor the Queene of Ptolomy
More Womanly then he. Hardy gaue audience
Or vouchsafe to thinke he had Partners. You
Shall finde there a man, who is th'abtraftes of all faults,
That all men follow.

Lep. I must not thinke
There are, euels snow to darken all his goodneffe:
His faults in him, feme as the Spots of Heauen,
More ferie by nights Blackneffe; Hereditarie,
Rather then purchafe: what he cannot change,
Then what he choofes.

Ces. You are too indulgent. Let's grant it is not
Amiffe to tumble on the bed of Ptolomy,
To giue a Kingdom for a Mirth, to fit
And keepe the turne of Tipling with a Sliae,
To relea the streets at noone, and hand the Buffet
With knaues that finels of Iweate: Say this becomes him
(As his compofure must be rare indeed,
Whom these things cannot blemish) yet must Anthony
No way excuse his foyles, when we do beare
So great weight in his lightneffe. If he fill'd
His vacancie with his Voluptuousneffe,
Full surfets, and the drinffe of his bones,
Call on him for't. But to confound fuch time,
That drummes him from his sport, and speaks as lowd
As his owne State, and ours, 'tis to be chid:
As we rate Boyes, who being manure in knowledge,
Pawne their experience to their preffent pleafure,
And fo rebell to judgement.

Enter a Miftfenger.

Lep. Heere's more newes.

Mel. Thy biddings have bene done, & euerie hour
Moft Noble Cefar, fhalt thou have report
How 'tis abroad. Pompey is strong at Sea,
And it appears, he is belou'd of those
That only have feared Cefar: to the Ports
The discontentes repair, and mens reports
Give him much wrong'd.

Ces. I shou'd have knowne no leffe,
It hath bin taught vs from the primall flate
That he which is was wifht, vntil he were:
And the ebb'd man,
Ne're lou'd, till ne're worth loue,
Comes fear'd, by being lack'd. This common bodie,
Like to a Vagabond Flagge vpon the Strame
Goes too, and backe, lacking the varying tyde

The Tragedy of

To rot it selfe with motion.

_Mej. Cæsar_ I bring thee word,

_Menacrates_ and _Menas_ famous Pyrates

Makes the Sea ferue them, which they eare and wound
With keele of every kinde. Many hot inrodes
They make in Italy, the Borders Maritime
Lacke blood to thinke on't, and flush youth revolt,
No Vextell can peepe forth: but 'tis as soone
Taken as soone: for _Pompeyes_ name strikes more
Then could his Warre refuted.

_Cæsar. Antony_,

Leave thy lascivious Vaffailes. When thou once
Was beaten from _Medena_, where thou flew't?
_Hirfus, and Paufa_ Confults, at thy heele
Did Famine follow, whom thou f ought'ft against,
(Though daintily brought vp) with patience more
Then Sauages could fuffer. Thou didst drinke
The tale of Horfes, and the gilded Puddle
Which Beafs would cough at. Thy pallat the did daine
The rougheft Berry, on the rudeft Hedge.
Yes, like the Stagge, when Snow the Paffure fheets,
The barks of _Trees_ thou brow'st. On the Alpes,
It is reported thou didft eate strange fhees,
Which fome did dye to looke on: And all this
(It wounds thine Honor that I fpeak it now)
Was borne fo like a Soldier, that thy cheeke
So much as lank'd not.

_Lept._ 'Tis pitty of him.

_Cæf._ Let his fhames quickly
Drue him to Rome, 'tis time we twaine
Did thew our felues i'th'Field, and to that end
Assemble me immediate counfell, _Pompey_
Thrives in oure Idleneffe.

_Lept._ To morrow _Cæfar_,
I shall be furnifht to informe you rightly
Both what by Sea and Land I can be able
To front this present time.

_Cæf._ Til which encounter, it is my bufines too. Farwell.

_Lept._ Farwell my Lord, what you fhall know mean time
Of ftrifes abroad, I shall befeech you Sir
To let me be partaker.

_Cæfar._ Doubt not fir, I knew it for my Bond. _Excunt_

Enter _Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras_, & _Mardian_.

_Cleo._ Charmian.

_Char._ Madam.

_Cleo._ Ha, ha, I have you to drinke Mandragorw.

_Char._ Why Madam?

_Cleo._ That I might sleepe out this great gap of time:

_My Antony_ is away.

_Char._ You thinke of him too much.

_Cleo._ O 'ts Treafon.

_Char._ Madam, I truth not fo.

_Cleo._ Thou, Eunuch _Mardian_?

_Mar._ What's your Highneffe pleasure?

_Cleo._ Not now to heare thee finge. I take no pleafure
In ought an Eunuch ha's: 'Tis well for thee,
That being vnfeem'd, thy freer thoughts
May not flye forth of Egypt. Haft thou Affections?

_Mar._ Yes gracious Madam.

_Cleo._ Indeed?

_Mar._ Not in deed Madam, for I can do nothing
But what in deede is honest to be done:
Yet haue I fierce Affections, and thinke
What Venus did with Mars.

_Cleo._ Oh Charmian:

Where thinke't thou he is now? Stands he, or fits he?

Or does he walke? Or is he on his Horfe?

Oh happy horfe to beare the weight of _Antony_!

Do brauely Horfe, for wo'th thou whom thou moueft,
The demy _Atlas_ of this Earth, the Arme
And Burganet of men. Hee's speaking now,
Or murmuring, where's my Serpent of old Nyle,
(For fo he calls me:) Now I feaie my felfe
With moft deffice payfon. Thinke on me
That am with Phebus amorous pinches blacke,
And wrinkled deep in time. Broad-fronted _Cæfar_,
When thou was't herebe above the ground, I was
A morcell for a Monarke: and great _Pompey_
Would fland and make his eyes grow in my brow,
There would he anchor his _Apeæt_, and dye
With looking on his life.

_Enter Alexas from Cæsar.

_Alex._ Soueraigne of Egypt, haile.

_Cleo._ How much vnlike art thou _Markæ_ _Antony_?
Yet comming from him, that great Med'cine hath
With his Tir'd gilded thee. What
How goes it with my braue _Markæ_ _Antonie_?

_Alex._ Laft thing he did (deere Qu eue)
He kift the laft of many doubled kinnes
This Orient Pearle. His speech ftickes in my heart.

_Cleo._ Mine eare must pluckle it thence.

_Alex._ Good Friend, quoth he:

Say the firme Roman to great Egypt sends
This treASURE of an Oyster: at whole ftoke
To mend the petty prefent, I will peece
Her opulent Throne, with Kingdomes. All the East,
(Say thou) fhall call her _Miftis_. So he nodded,
And feoberly did mount an Arme-gaunt Steede,
Who neigh'd fo blye, that what I would haue fpoke,
Was beafly dumbe by him.

_Cleo._ What was he fad, or merry?

_Alex._ Like to the time o' the year, between the extremes
Of hot and cold, he was nor fad nor merrie.

_Cleo._ Oh well diuided diuifion: Note him,
Note him good _Charmian_, 'tis the man; but note him
He was not fad, for he would thine on thofe
That make their lookes by his. He was not merrie,
Which feem'd to tell them, his remembrance lay
In Egypt with his loy, but betwenee both.
Oh heavenely mingle! Bee't thou fad, or merrie,
The violence of either thee becomes,
So do's it no mans elfe. Met'th thou my Poets?

_Alex._ I Madam, twenty feuerall Messengers.

Why do you fend fo thick?

_Cleo._ Who's borne that day, when I fend to _Antonie_,
Shall dye a Begger. Inke and paper _Charmian_
Welcome my good _Alexas_. Did I _Charmian_, eer love _Cæsar_ fo?

_Char._ Oh that braue _Cæfar_!

_Cleo._ Be choak'd with fuch another Emphafis,
Say the braue _Antony_.

_Char._ The valiant _Cæsar_.

_Cleo._ By _Ifts_, I will gue thee bloody teeths,
If thou with _Cæfar_ Parago nagnicke:
My man of men.

_Char._ By your moft gracious pardon,

I fing but after you.

_Cleo._ My _Sallad_ dayes,

When I was greene in judgement, cold in blood,
To fay, as I faide then. But come, away,
Get me Inke and Paper,
Enter Enobarbus and Lepidus.

Lep. Good Enobarbus, 'tis a worthy deed,
And shall become you well, to intreat your Captaine
To soft and gentle speech.

Emb. I shall intreat him
To answer like himselfe : if Cesar move him,
Let Anthony looke over Cefars head,
And speake as lowd as Mars. By Jupiter,
Were I the wearer of Antonius's Beard,
I would not have't to day.

Lep. 'Tis not a time for private flomaking.

Emb. Every time serues for the matter that is then borne in't.

Lep. But small to greater matters must glue way.

Emb. Not if the small come first.

Lep. Your speech is passion ; but pray you stirre
No Embers vp. Heere comes the Noble Anthony.

Enter Anthony and Pudentius.

Emb. And yonder Cesar.

Enter Cesar, Mecenas, and Agrippa.

Ant. If we compose well here, to Parthia :
Hearke Pudentius.

Cefar. I do not know Mecenas, aske Agrippa.

Lep. Noble Friends:
That which combin'd vs was moost great, and let not
A leaner action rend vs. What's amisse,
May it be gently heard. When we debate
Our triuall difference loud, we do commit
Murther in healing wounds. Then Noble Partners,
The rather for I earnestly befeech,
Touch you the lowest points with sweetest tearmes,
Nor curfynesse grow to'th matter.

Ant. 'Tis spoken well :
Were we before our Armies, and to fight,
I should do thus,

Flourib.

Cef. Welcome to Rome.

Ant. Thanke you.

Cef. Sit.

Ant. Sit fir.

Cef. Nay then.

Ant. I learne, you take things ill, which are not fo:
Or being,concerne you not.

Cef. I must be laugh'd at, if or for nothing, or a little, I Should lay my felse offended, and with you
Chiefely 'tis your pleasure. More laugh'd at, that I should Once name you derogately : when to found your name
It not concern'd me.

Ant. My being in Egypt Cesar, what was't to you?

Cef. No more then my reciding here at Rome
Might be to you in Egypt : yet if you there
Did pracliffe on my State,your being in Egypt
Might be my question.

Ant. How intende you, praRth'sd?

Cef. You may be pleas'd to catch at mine intent,
By what did heere befal me. Your Wife and Brother
Made warres vpon me, and their contestation
Was Theame for you, you were the word of warre.

Ant. You do mistake your busines, my Brother neuer
Did vrg'e me in his Act : I did inquire it,
And have my Learning from some true reports
That drew their swords with you, did he not rather Discredit my authority with yours,
And make the warres alike against my homacke,
Having alike your caufe. Of this, my Letters
Before did fatifie you. If you'll patch a quarrell,
As matter whole you have to make it with,
We shall remain in friendship, our conditions
So differing in their acts: Yet if I knew,
What Hoope should hold vs flaunch from edge to edge
Athy world: I would perfue it.

Agri. Glie me leave Cefar.
Cefar. Speake Agrippa.

Agri. Thou haft a Sifter by the Mothers side, admir'd Othavia! Great Mark Anthony is now a widower.
Cefar. Say not, say Agrippa; if Cleopatra heard you, your proofs were well defended of rathemefe.

Antb. I am not married Cefar: let me heere Agrippa further speake.

Agri. To hold you in perpetuall amtie,
To make you Brothers, and to knit your hearts
With an vn-flipping knot, take Anthony,
Othavia to his wife: whose beauty claims
No worfe a husband then the best of men: whole
Vertue, and whose generall graces, speake
That which none else can vter. By this marriage,
All little Jeoulousies which now seeme great,
And all great feares, which now import their dangers,
Would then be nothing. Truths would be tales,
Where now halfe tales be truths: her loue to both,
Would each to other, and all loues to both
Draw after her. Pardon what I have spoke,
For 'tis a studied not a present thought,
By duty ruminated.

Antb. Will Cefar speake?
Cefar. Not till he heares how Anthony is toucht,
With what is spoke already.

Antb. What power is in Agrippa,
If I would speake Agrippa, be it fo,
To make this good?
Cefar. The power of Cefar,
And his power, vnto Othavia.

Antb. May I nower
(To this good purpose, that fo fairely shewes)
Dreame of impediment: let me haue thy hand
Further this act of Grace: and from this howre,
The heart of Brothers gouerne in our Loues,
And fwayne our great Deuignes.

Cefar. There's my hand:
A Sifter I bequeath you, whom no Brother
Did euer loue fo deereely. Let her lye
To loyne our kingdomes, and our hearts, and nouer
Fille off our Loues again.

Ant. I did not think to draw my Sword 'gainft Pompey,
For he hath laid strange courtesies, and great
Of late vpon me. I must thanke him onely,
Leafe my remembrance, fuffer ill report:
At heele of that, defe him.

Lepi. Time cal's vpon's,
Of vs must Pompey presently be sought,
Or else he seekes out vs.

Antb. Where lies he?
Cefar. About the Mount-Mefena.

Antb. What is his strength by land?
Cefar. Great, and encreasing:
But by Sea he is an absolute Master.

Antb. So is the Fame,
Would we had spoke together. Haft we for it,
Yet ere we put our felues in Armes, dispath we
The businesse we have tale of.

Cefar. With most gladness,
And do inuite you to my Sisters view,
Whether straight I lead you.

Antb. Let vs Lepidus not lacke your company.

Lep. Noble Anthony, not sickneffe should detaine me.

FLOURISHS. Exit omnes.

Manet Enoberbus, Agrippa, Mecenas.

Mec. Welcome from Egypt Sir.

Eno. Halfe the heart of Cæsar, worthy Mecenas. My honourable Friend Agrippa.

Agri. Good Enoberbus.

Mec. We have caufe to be glad, that matters are so well digested: you said well by't in Egypt.

Enob. I Sir, we did sleepe day out of countenaunce: and made the night light with drinking.

Mec. Eight Wilde-Boares rodet whole at a breakfast: and but twelve peffons there. Is this true?

Eno. This was but as a Flye by an Eagles: we had much more monstrous matter of Feafe, which worthy defcribed notting.

Mecen as. She's a moft triumphant Lady, if report be fquare to her.

Enob. When the firft met Mark Anthony, the purft vp his heart vpon the Rier of Sidinis.

Agri. There the appear'd indeed: or my reporter deu'd well for her.

Eno. I will tell you,
The Barge she sat in, like a burnifh Throne
Burnt on the water: the Pooper was beaten Gold, Purple the Sailes: and so perfumed that
The Windes were Loue-sickes.

With them the Owers were Siluer,
Which to the tune of Flutes kept stroke, and made
The water which they beate, to follow faster;
As amorous of their strokes. For her owne perfon,
It beggar'd all defcription, she did lief
In her Paullion, cloth of Gold, of Tiffue,
O're-painting that Venus, where we fee
The fancie out-workes Nature. On each fide her,
Stood pretty Dimples Boyes, like smiling Cupids,
With diuers curious'd Fannes whose winde did fume,
To gloue the delicate cheeckes which they did coole,
And what they vndid.

Agri. Oh rare for Anthony.

Eno. Her Gentlewoman, like the Nereides,
So many Mer-maides tended her i'th'eyes,
And made their bends adorning, at the Helme.
A feeming Mer-maidie fteeres: The Silken Tackle,
Swell with the touches of thofe Flower-soft hands,
That yarely frame the office. From the Barge
A strange infinitely perfumes hits the fene
Of the adjacent Wharves. The City caft
Her people out vpon her: and Anthony
Enthron'd i'th'Market-place, did fit alone,
Whilting to'th'ayre: which but for vacancie,
Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too,
And made a gap in Nature.

Agri. Rare Egyptian.

Eno. Vpon her landing, Anthony sent to her,
Inuited her to Supper: she replied,
It should be better, he became her guest:
Which the entreated, our Courteous Anthony,
Whom nere the word of no woman hard speake,
Being barber'd ten times o're, goes to the Feaft;
And for his ordinary, pales his heart,
For what his eyes eate onely.

Agri. Royall Wench:

She made great Cæsar lay his Sword to bed,
He ploughed her, and the crop.

Eno. I faw her once
Hop forty Paces through the publicke fireete,
And having loft her breath, she spoke, and panted,
That she did make defect, perfection,
And breathleffe powre breath forth.

Mec. Now Anthony, must leave her vterly.

Eno. Neuer he will not:
Age cannot wither her, nor cutume ftaile
Her infinite variety: other women cloy
The appetites they feede, but she makes hungry,
Where mof't she satisfies. For wielded things
Become themfelues in her, that the holy Priefe
Blaffe her, when she is Rigiff.
And though I make this marriage for my peace,
I'th'East my pleasure lies. Oh come Ventigius.

Enter Ventigius.

You must to Parthia, your Commissions ready:
Follow me, and rescue't.

Exit

Enter Lepidus, Mecenas and Agrippa.

Lepidus. Trouble your souls no further: pray you haften your Generals after.

Agg. Sir, Mark Antony, will e're but kisse Othoia, and weele follow.

Lep. Till I shall see you in your Soulidres dress'd,
Which will become you both: Farewell.

Mec. We shall: as I conceive the journey, be at Mount before you Lepidus.

Lep. Your way is shorter, my purposes do draw me much about, you win two dayes vpone you.

Bett. Sir good fucceffe.

Lep. Farewell.

Exit

Enter Cleopater, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas.

Cleo. Give me some Musicke: Musicke, moody foode of vs that trade in Lour.

Omnes. The Musicke, hoa.

Enter Maridian the Eunuch.

Cleo. Let it alone, let's to Billards: come Charmian.

Char. My arme is sore, best play with Maridian.

Cleopa. As well a woman with an Eunuch plaid, as with a woman. Come you play with me Sir?

Mardi. As well as I can Madam.

Cleo. And when good will is shewed,
Thought'c com to short
The Actor may please pardon. Ile none now,
Glue me mine Angle, weele to th'River there
My Musicke playing farre off. I will betray
Tawny fine fitches, my bended hooke shall pierce
Their flamy iawes: and as I draw them vp,
Ile think them every one an Antony,
And fay, ah has'y are caught.

Char. 'Twas merry when you wagger'd on your Angling, when your dier did hang a falt fishe on his hooke which he with fermenfie draw vp.

Cleo. That time! Oh times:
I laught him out of patience: and that night
I laught him into patience, and next mornre.
ERE the ninth houre, I drunke him to his bed:
Then put my Tires and Mantles on him, whilst
I wore his Sword Philippian. Oh from Italie,

Enter a Messenger.

Ramme thou thy fruitesfull tidings in mine cares,
That long time haue bin barren.

Mef. Madam, Madam.

Cleo. Antony's dead,
If thou say so Villaine, thou kilst thy Miftris:
But well and free, if thou do yield him.

There is Gold, and heere
My bleeve valveines to kiffe: a hand that Kings
Haue lpt, and trembled killing.

Mef. First Madam, he is well.

Cleo. Why there's more Gold
But sirrah marke, we vfe
To say, the dead are well: bring it to that,
The Gold I give thee, will I melt and powr
Downe thy ill vittering throate.

Mef. Good Madam heare me.

Cleo. Well, go too I will:
But there's no goodnesse in thy face if Antony
Be free and healthfull: so tart a fauour
To trumpet such good tidings. I f not well,
Thou shoul'dt come like a Furie crown'd with Snakes,
Not like a formall man.

Mef. Wilt pleafe you heare me?

Cleo. I have a mind to stroke thee ere thou speak'ft:
Yet if thou say Antony lives, 'tis well,
Or friends with Caesar, or not Captive to him,
Ile set thee in a shaven of Gold, and halie
Rich Pearles upon thee.

Mef. Madam, he's well.

Cleo. Well fai'd.

Mef. And Friends with Caesar.

Cleo. Th'art an honest man.

Mef. Caesar, and he, are greater Friends then euers.

Cleo. Make thee a Fortune from me.

Mef. But yet Madam.

Cleo. I do not like but yet, it does aly
The good precedence, fie upon but yet,
But yet is as a laylor to bring fourth
Some monifrous Malefactor. Prythee Friend,
Powe out the packe of matter to mine ears,
The good and bad together: he's friends with Caesar,
In state of heal th thou fai'd, and thou fai'd free.

Mef. Free Madam, no: I made no such report,
He's bound vnto Othoia.

Cleo. For what good turne?

Mef. For the bef turne i'th'bed.

Cleo. I am pale Charmian.

Mef. Madam, he's married to Othoia.

Cleo. The most infectious Petitlence upon thee.

Strikes him downe.

Mef. Good Madam patience.

Cleo. What say you?

Hence horrible Villaine, or Ie spurne thine eyes
Like balls before me: Ile vnhaire thy head,
Smarting in lingring pickle.

Mef. Gratious Madam,
I that do bring the newes, made not the match.

Cleo. Say 'tis not fo, a Prouince I will gue thee,
And make thy Fortunes proud: the blow thou had'st
Shall make thy peace, for moving me to rage,
And I will boot thee with what guift befire
The modelle can begge.

Mef. He's married Madam.

Cleo. Rogue, thou haft li'd too long. Draw a knife.

Mef. Nay then he runnes
What meanes you Madam, I haue made no fault. Exit.

Char. Good Madam kepe your felfe within your felfe,
The man is innocent.

Cleo. Some Innocents began not the thunderbolt:
Melt Egypte into Nyle: and kindly creatures
Turne all to Serpents. Call the faigne againe,
Though I am mad, I will notbyte him: Call?

Char. He is afeard to come.

Cleo. I will not hurt him,
These hands do lacke Nobility, that they strike
A meaner then my felfe: since I my felfe
Haue gien my felfe to thefaite. Come hither Sir.

Enter the Messenger againe.

Though it be honest, it is never good
To bring bad newes: give to a gratulous Message

838
To scourge th’ingratitude, that desfrightfull Rome
Caft on my Noble Father.
Cesfar. Take your time.

Ant. Thou can’t not fear vs Pompey with thy sailes.
Weele speake with thee at Sea. And land thou know’ft
How much we do o’re-count thee.
Pom. At Land indeed
Thou doft ocreount me of my Fathers house:
But since the Cuckor buildes not for himselfe,
Remaine in’t as thou maifit.

Lep. Be pleas’d to tell vs,
(For this is from the present how you take)
The offers we have lent you.

Cesfar. There’s the point.

Ant. Which do not be entreated too,
But waigh what it is worth imbrac’d
Cesfar. And what may follow to try a larger Fortune.
Pom. You haue made me offer
Of Cicelle, Sardinia: and I muft
Rid all the Sea of Pirats. Then, to fend Measures of Wheate to Rome: this greed vp, on
To part with vnhaclt edges, and bare backe
Our Targes vn dinted.

Omnes. That’s our offer.
Pom. Know then I came before you heere,
A man prepar’d
To take this offer. But Markes Anthony,
Put me to some impatience: though I loafe
The praise of it by telling. You muft know,
When Cesfar and your Brother were at blowes,
Your Mother came to Cicelle, and did finde
Her welcome Friendly.

Ant. I have heard it Pompey,
And am well flu’ded for a liberal thanks,
Which I do owe you.
Pom. Let me haue your hand:
I did not thinke Sir, to haue met you heere,

Ant. The beds i’th’East are soft, and thanks to you,
That cal’d me timelier then my purpose hither:
For I haue gained by’t.

Cesfar. Since I saw you laft, ther’s a change vp you.
Pom. Well, I know not,
What counts harth Fortune caft’s vp on my face,
But in my bosome shall she never come,
To make my heart her vallasse.

Lep. Well met heere.
Pom. I hope fo Lepidus, thus we are agreed:
I craue our composion may be written
And feal’d betweene vs,

Cesfar. That’s the next to do.
Pom. Weele feast each other, ere we part, and lett’s
Draw lots who shall begin.

Ant. That will I Pompey.
Pompey. No Anthony take the lot: but firft or laft, your fine Egyptian cookerie shall haue the fame, I haue heard that Iulius Cesfar, grew fat with feasting there.

Antb. You haue heard much.
Pom. I haue faire meaning Sir.
Ant. And faire words to them.
Pom. Then fo much haue I heard,
And I haue heard Appoloborus carried
Eno. No more that: he did fo.
Pom. What I pray you?

Eno. A certaine Queene to Cesfar in a Matri.
Pom. I know thee now, how far’st thou Souldier?

Eno. Well, and well am I like to do, for I perceiue

Four
Four Feasts are toward.

Pom. Let me shake thy hand,
I neuer hated thee: I have seen thee fight,
When I have enuied thy behauiour.

Emob. Sir, I neuer lou'd you much, but I ha'prais'd ye,
When you haue well defera'd ten times as much,
As I haue faid you did.

Pom. Injoy thy plainneffe,
It nothing ill becomes thee:
Aboord my Gally, I inuite you all.

Will you leade Lords?

All. Shew's the way, Sir.

Men. Thy Father Pompey would ne're haue made this Treaty. You, and I have knowne fir.

Emob. At Sea, I think.

Men. We haue Sir.

Emob. You haue done well by water.

Men. And you by Land.

Emob. I will praife any man that will praife me, thogh it cannot be denied what I haue done by Land.

Men. Nor what I haue done by water.

Emob. Yes, some-thing you can deny for your owne safety: you haue bin a great Theefe by Sea.

Men. And you by Land.

Emob. There I deny my Land seruice: but glue mee your hand Menes, if our eyes had authority, heere they might take two Theuces kiling.

Men. All mens faces are true, whatfoeme their hands are.

Emob. But there is neuer a frayre Woman, ha's a true Face.

Men. No flander, they faile hearts.

Emob. We came hither to fight with you.

Men. For my part, I am sorry it is turn'd to a Drinking.
Pompey doth this day laugh away his Fortune.

Emob. If he do, sure he cannot weep' backe againe.

Men. Y'haue faid Sir, we look'd not for Mark Antony heere, pray you, is he married to Cleopatra?

Emob. Cefar's Siter is call'd Othavia.

Men. True Sir, she was the wife of Caius Marcellus.

Emob. But she is now the wife of Marcus Antonius.

Men. Pray ye're fir.

Emob. 'Tis true.

Men. Then is Cesar and he, for ever knit together.

Emob. If I were bound to Duine of this vanity, I wold not Propheze so.

Men. I think the policy of that purpose, made more in the Marriage, then the love of the parties.

Emob. I thinke so too. But you shall finde the hand that feemes to tye their friendship together, will bee
the very strangler of their Amity: Othavia is of a holy, cold, and still conversation.

Men. Who would not have his wife so?

Emob. Not he that himselfe is not so; which is Mark Antony; he will to his Egyptian dith, againe; then shall the sighes of Othavia blow the fire vp in Cesar, and (as I fald before) that which is the strength of their Amity, shall prooue the immediate Author of their variance. Antony will vfe his affection where it is. Hee married but his occasion heere.

Men. And thus it may be, Come Sir, will you aboard?
I haue a health for you.

Emob. I shal take it fir: we haue vs'd our Throats in Egypt.

Musicke played.

Enter two or three Servants with a Basket.

1 Heere they'll be men: some o'th'ir Plants are ill rooted already, the least wintes in'th'world will blow them downe.

2 Lepidus is high Conlord.

1 They have made him drinke Almes drinke.

2 As they pinch one another by the dispoision, hee cries out, no more; reconciles them to his entreatie, and himselfe to'th'drinke.

1 But it raises the greatest warre betweene him & his discretion.

2 Why this it is to have a name in great mens Fellowship: I had as line have a Reede that will doe me no feruce, as a Partizan I could not have.

1 To be call'd into a huge Sphere, and not to be seen to move in't, are the holes where eyes should bee, which pittfully disafer the cheeckes.

A Sennes founded.

Enter Cefar, Antony, Pompey, Lepidus, Agrippa, Mecenas, Emoburus, Menes, with other Captaines.

Ant. Thus do they Sir: they take the flow o'th'Nyle
By certaine scales i'th'Pyramid: they know
By'th'height, the lowneffe, or the mane: If deahr
Or Foizon follow. The higher Nilus swees,
The more it promisses as it enioes, the Seedman
Vpon the lyme and Ooze scatters his graine,
And shortly comes to Harueft.

Lep. Y'haue strange Serpents there?

Antb. I Lepidus.

Lep. Your Serpent of Egypt, is bred now of your mud by the operation of your Sun: fo is your Crocodile.

Ant. They are fo.

Pom. Sit, and some Wine: A health to Lepidus.

Lep. I am not so well as I should be:
But Ile ne're out.

Emob. Not till you have slept: I feare me you'll bee in till then.

Lep. Nay certainly, I haue heard the Ptolomies Pyra-mists are very goddy things: without contradiction I haue heard that.

Menes. Pompey, a word.

Pomp. Say in mine care, what is't.

Menes. Forsake thy feate I do beseech thee Captaine,
And heare me speake a word.

Pom. Forbear me till anon. Whiffers in'Eare.

This Wine for Lepidus.

Lep. What manner o'thing is your Crocodile?

Ant. It is shap'd fir like it selfe, and it is as broad as it hath breath; It is luft fo high as it is, and mooves with it owne organs. It luies by that which nourifheth it, and Elements once out of it, it Transmigrates.

Lep. What colour is it of?

Ant. Of it owne colour too.

Lep. 'Tis a strange Serpent.

Ant. 'Tis fo, and the tears of it are wet.

Caf. Will this description satisfie him?

Ant. With the Health that Pompey givs him, else he is a very Epicure.

Pomp. Go hang fir, hang: tell me of that? Away:
Do as I bid you. Where's this Cup I call'd for?

Men. If for the fake of Merit thou wilt heare mee,
Rife from thy flooe.

Pom. I thinke th'art mad: the matter?

Men. I have euery moment mov'd to thy Fortunes.

Pom. Thou hast rer'd me with much faith: what's defe to say? Be Jolly Lords.

Ansb. These Quicke-fands Lepidus,

Kepe off, them for you finke.

Men. Wilt thou be Lord of all the world?

Pom. What faight thou?

Men. Wilt thou be Lord of the whole world?

That's twice.

Pom. How should that be?

Men. But entertaine it, and though thou thinke me
poore, I am the man will give thee all the world.

Pom. Haft thou dranke well.

Men. No Pompey, I haue kept me from the cup,
Thou art if thou dar'lt be, the earthly Jove:
What ere the Ocean pales, or skie inclipped,
Is thine, if thou wilt ha't.

Pom. Shew me which way?

Men. These three World-sharers, these Competitors
Are in thy vessef. Let me cut the Cable,
And when we are put off, fall to their throates:
All there is thine.

Pom. Ah, this thou shoul'dt haue done,
And not haue spoke on't. In me 'tis villanie,
In thee, 't had bin good service: thou muft know,
'Tis not my profit that does lead mine Honour:
Mine Honour it, Repeat that ere thy tongue,
Hath so betrade thine acte. Being done vnknowne,
I shoul'd have found it afterwards well done,
But muft condemne it now: desist, and drinke.

Men. For this, Ile neuer follow
Thy paul'd Fortunes more,
Who seekes and will not take, when once 'tis offer'd,
Shall neuer finde it more.

Pom. This health to Lepidus.

Ant. Bearre him aforhe,
Ile pledge it for him Pompey.

Eno. Heere's to thee Menas.

Men. Enobarbus, welcome.

Pom. Fill till the cup be hid.

Eno. There's a strong Fellow Menas.

Men. Why?

Eno. A beares the third part of the world man: seeft not?

Men. The third part, then he is drunk: would it were all, that it might go on wheelers.

Eno. Drinke thou ere the Reees.

Men. Come.

Pom. This is not yet an Alexandrian Feast.

Ant. It ripen's towards it: strike the Vessefls hoa.

Heere's to Caesar.

Cæsar. I could well forbear't, it's monstrous labour when I waft my braine, and it grow fouler.

Ant. Be a Child o'th'ime.

Cæsar. Possesse it, Ile make answ'rer: but I had rather fast from all, four days, then drinke so much in one.

Enob. Ha my brave Emperour, shall we dance now the Egyptian Backenals, and celebrate our drinke?

Pom. Let's ha't good Souldier.

Ant. Come, let's all take hands,
Till that the conquering Wine hath flep't our senfe,
In soft and delicate Lethe.

Eno. All take hands:
Make battery to our cares with the loud Muficke,
The Tragedie of

Should my performance perih.
Rom. Thou haft Venitius that, without the which a Souldier and his Sword grants scarce distinction: thou wilt write to Antony.
Ven. Ile humbly signifie what in his name, That magical word of Warre we have effectuated, How with his Banners, and his well paid ranks, The nere-yet beaten Horfe of Parthia, We have laded out o'th'Field.
Rom. Where is he now?
Ven. He purposeth to Athens, whither with what haft The weight we must convey with's, will permit: We shall appear before him. On there, passe along.

Enter Agrippa at one doore, Enobarbus at another.
Agri. What are the Brothers parted?
Emo. They have dispute with Pompey, he is gone, The other three are Sealing. Ophelia weepes
To part from Rome: Cesar is fad, and Lepidus
Since Pompey's feast, as Menas laces, it troubled
With the Greene-Sickneffe.
Agri. 'Tis a Noble Lepidus.
Emo. A very fine one: oh, how he loves Cesar.
Agri. Nay but how deerely he adores Mark Antony.
Emo. Cesar why he's the loyester of men.
Ant. What's Antony, the God of Jupiter?
Emo. Spake you of Cesar? How, the non-parell?
Agri. Oh Antony, oh thou Arabian Bird!
Emo. Would you praise Cesar, say Cefariso no further.
Agri. Indeed he pried them both with excellent praises.
Emo. But he loves Cesar beft, yet he loves Antony:
Hoo, Hearts, Tongues, Figure,
Scribes, Bards, Poets, cannot Think speake, caft, write, fing, number: hoo,
His love to Antony. But as for Cesar,
Kneele downe, kneele downe, and wonder.
Agri. Both he loves.
Emo. They are his Shards, and he their Beetle, so:
This is to horror: Adieu, Noble Agrippa.
Agri. Good Fortune worthy Souldier, and farewell.

Enter Cesar, Antony, Lepidus, and Ophelia.
Anto. No further Sir.
Cesar. You take from me a great part of my selfe: Vfe me well in't. Sister, proue such a wife
As my thoughts make thee, and as my farthest Band Shall passe on thy approoche: most Noble Anthony,
Let not the piece of Vertue which is fet
Betwixt vs, as the Cyment of our loue
To keepe it builded, be the Ramme to batter
The Fortreffe of it:for better might we
Have loue without this meane, if on both parts
This be not cheriffit.
Ant. Make me not offended, in your diftrust.
Cesar. I haue said.
Ant. You shall not finde,
Though you be therein curious, the left caufe
For what you seeme to feare, fo the Gods keepe you,
And make the hearts of Romaines ferue your ends:
We will heere part.
Cesar. Farewell my dearer Sister, fare thee well,
The Elements be kind to thee, and make
Thy spirites all of comfort: fare thee well.
Oph. My Noble Brother.
Ant. The April's in her eyes, it is Loues spring,
And thefe the flowers to bring it on: be cheerfull.

Oph. Sir, looke well to my Husbands house: and—— Cesar. What Ophelia?
Oph. Ile tell you in your care.
Ant. Her tongue will not obey her heart, nor can
Her heart informe her tougue.
The Swannes downe feather
That flonds upon the Swell at the full of Tide:
And neither way inclines.
Emo. Will Cesar weep?
Agri. He ha's a cloud in's face.
Emo. He were the worse for that were he a Horfe, fo is he being alman.
Agri. Why Enobarbus:
When Anthony found Julius Caesar dead,
He cried almoft to roa ring: And he wept,
When at Philippis he found Brutus slain.
Emo. That yearindeed, he was troubled with a rheume,
What willingly he did confound, he will'd,
Beleeu't till I weep too.
Cesar. No sweet Ophelia,
You shall heare from me still: the time shall not
Out-go my thinking on you.
Ant. Come Sir, come,
Ile wrastle with you in my strengthe of loue,
Looke here I have you, thus I let you go,
And gue you to the Gods.
Ces. Adieu, be happy.
Lep. Let all the number of the Starres guie light
To thy faire way.
Cesar. Farewell, farewell.
Kisses Ophelia.
Ant. Farewell. Trumpets found. Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Ira, and Alexas.
Cleo. Where is the Fellow?
Alex. Halfafe afraid to come.
Cleo. Go too, go too: Come hither Sir.
Enter the Messinger as before.
Alex. Good Maifie: Hered of lury dare not looke upon you, but when you are well pleased.
Cleo. That Herods head, Ile haue: but how? When Anthony is gone, through whom I might command it:
Come thou here.
Mes. Most gratious Maiefie.
Cleo. Did'th thou behold Ophelia?
Mes. I dread Queene.
Cleo. Where?
Mes. Madam in Rome, I looke her in the face:
And saw her led betweene her Brother, and Mark Antony.
Cleo. Is she as tall as me?
Mes. She is not Madam.
Cleo. Didst hearhe her speake?
Is she thrill tongu'd or low?
Mes. Madam, I heard her speake, she is low voic'd.
Cleo. That's not so good: he cannot like her long.
Char. Like her? Oh Ija: it's impossible.
Char. I think she to Charmian, dull of tongue, & dwarfish
When Maiefie is in her gate, remember
If ere thou look'rt on Maiefie.
Mes. She creepsisher motion, & her stattion are as one:
She shewes a body, rather then a life,
A Statue, then a Breather.
Cleo. Is this certaine?
Mes. Or I haue no obseruance.
Cleo. Three in Egypt cannot make better note.
Cleo. He's very knowing, I do perceiue,
There's nothing in her yet.

The
The Fellow ha’s good judgement.
Char. Excellent.
Cleo. Gueffe at her yeares, I prythe.
Meff. Madam, she was a widdow.
Meff. And I do think she’s thirtie.
Ch. Bear’t thou her face in mind? Is’t long or round?
Meff. Round, even to faultiness.
Cleo. For the most part too, they are foolish that are so. Her hair what colour?
Meff. Browne Madam: and her forehead
As low as she would with it.
Cleo. There’s Gold for thee,
Thou muft not take my former sharpenesse ill,
I will employ thee backe againe: I finde thee
Moff fit for businesse. Go, make thee ready,
Our Letters are prepar’d.
Char. A proper man.
Cleo. Indeed he is so: I repent me much
That so I harried him. Why then think’s by him,
This Creature’s no fuch thing.
Char. Nothing Madam.
Cleo. The man hath seene some Maiesty, and should know.
Char. Hath he seene Maiestie? I’s elfe defend : and seruing you fo long.
Cleo. I haue one thing more to ask him yet good Charmian: but ‘tis no matter, thou shalt bring him to me where I will write, all may be well enough.
Char. I warrant you Madam.
Exeunt. Enter Anthony and Othoiauia.
Ant. Nay, nay Othoiauia, not onely that,
That were excusable, that and thousands more
Of fomblable import, but he hath wag’d
New Warres ’gainst Pompey. Made his will, and read it,
To publicke ear, spoke scantily of me,
When perforce he could not.
But pay me teares of Honour: cold and fickly
He ventured then moft narrow measure; lent me,
When the beft hint was given him: he not look’d,
Or did it from his teeth.
Othoiauia. Oh my good Lord,
Believe not all, or if you muft beleue,
Stomacke not all. A more vnhappy Lady,
If this deuillish chance, ne’re ftood betwenee.
Praying for both parts:
The good Gods will mocke me presently,
When I shall pray;Oh bleffe my Lord, and Husband,
Vndo that prayer, by crying out as loud,
Oh bleffe my Brother. Husband winne, winne Brother,
Prayes, and diftroyes the prayer, no midway
‘Twixt thefe extremes at all.
Ant. Gentie Othoiauia,
Let your beft loue draw to that point which feeks
Beft to preferve it: if I loose mine Honour,
I lose my selfe: better I were not yours
Then your fo branchlleffe. But as you requested,
Your selfe shall goe between’s, the humane time Lady,
Ie raife the preparation of a Warre
Shall flaine your Brother, make your fooneft haft,
So your defires are yours.
Oth. Thanks to my Lord,
The Ioue of power make me moft weake, moft weake,
You reconcile: Warres ’twixt you twaine would be,
As if the world should cleaue, and that flaine men
Should foade vp the Riff.

Anthony and Cleopatra.
The Tragedie of

That he his high Authority abus'd,
And did deferve his change: for what I have conquer'd,
I grant him part: but then in his Armenia,
And other of his conquer'd Kingdoms, I demand the like.

Mr. He'll neuer yeeld to that.
Cef. Nor must not then be yeelded to this.

Enter Ofelia with her Traine.
Oef. Halle Cæsar, and my L. halle moft deere Cæsar.
Cæfar. That ever I shoul call thee Cæf-away.
Oef. You have not call'd me so, nor have you caufè.
Cef. Why have you stolin upon vs thus? you come not Like Cæ[ercise] Sifer, 'The wife of Antony
Should have an Army for an Vfther, and
The neighes of Horfe to tell of her approach,
Long ere the did appeare. The trees by'th-way
Should have borne men, and expectation faidt,
Longing for what it had not. Nay, the duft
Should have ascended to the Roofe of Hauean,
Rais'd by your populous Troopes: But you are come
A Maker-tall to Rome, and have preventt
The o[ntation of our love; which left vn[ewne,]
Is often left vn[eul'd: we shoul have met you
By Sea, and Land, supplying every Stage
With an augmented greeting.

Oef. Good my Lord,
To come thus was I not conftrain'd, but did it
On my free-will. My Lord Mrake Antony,
Hearing that you prepar'd for Warre, acquainted
My greeu'd ear withall: whereon I begg'd
His pardon for returne.
Cef. Which foon he granted,
Being an abftracr'tweene his Luft, and him.
Oef. Do not fay so, my Lord.
Cef. I haue eyes upon you,
And his affaires come to me on the windwher is he now?
Oef. My Lord, in Athens.
Cæfar. No mo[e wroght Sifer, Cleopatra
Hath nodded him to her. He hath given his Empire
Vp to a Whore, who now are leuing
The Kings o'th'earth for Warre. He hath assembled,
Bocbus the King of Lybia, A[rchilau
Of Cappadocia, Phileadelphia King,
Of Paphlagonia: the Thracian King Adullus,
King Mannous of Arabia, King of Pont,
Herod of Lewyie, M[tiridates King
Of Comagae, Pol[mens and A[mmas,
The Kings of Mede, and Licoania,
With a more larger Lift of Scepters.
Oef. Aye me moft wretched,
That haue my heart partes betwixt two Friends,
That does affift each other. (breaking forth Cef.) Welcom hither: your Letters did with-holde our Till we percei'd both how you were wrong led,
And we in negligent danger: cheere your heart,
Be you not troubled with the time, which drives
O're your content, these strong necellities,
But let determin'd things to definie
Hold vn[eway'd their way. Welcome to Rome,
Nothing more deere to me: You are abu'd
Beyond the marke of thought: and the high Gods
To do you Juffice, makes his Minifters
Of vs, and thofe that loue you. Beft of comfort,
And ever welcom to vs.

Mr. Welcome deere Madam,
Each heart in Rome does loue and pity you,
One ly th'adulterous Antony, moft large
In his abominations, turnes you off,
And glues his potent Regiment to a Trull
That noyts it againft vs.
Oef. Is it fo fit?
Cæf. Moft certaine: Sifer welcome: pray you
Be ever knowne to patience. My dear'f Sifer.

Exeunt Enter Cleopatra, and Eoscharus.
Cle. I will be even with thee, doubt it not.
Eos. But why, why, why?
Cle. Thou haft forespake my being in these warres,
And fay't it not fo fit.

Eos. Well: I could reply: if we should ferue with Horfe and Mares together, the Horfe were meerly loft:
the Mares would beare a Solidour and his Horfe.

Cle. What is't you fay?

Eos. Your prefence needs moft pule Anthony,
Take from his heart, take from his Braine, from's time,
What should not then be fpar'd. He is already Traduc'd for Leuyt, and 'is faid in Rome,
That Phoebus an Eunuch, and your Maides
Mannage this warre.
Cle. Sinke Rome, and their tongues rot
That fpeake againft vs. A Charge we beare i' th'Warre,
And as the preffident of my Kingdome will Appeare there for a man. Speake not againft it,
I will not flay behinde.

Enter Antony and Camidius.
Eos. Nay I have done, here comes the Emperor.

Ant. Is it not strange Camidius,
That from Tarrentum, and Branduflum,
He could fo quickly cut the Ionian Sea,
And take in Troine. You haue heard on't (Sweet?)

Cle. Celerity is never more admir'd,
Then by the negligent.

Ant. A good rebuke,
Which might haue well becom'd the beft of men
To taunt at flackneffe. Camidius, wee
Will fight with him by Sea.

Cle. By Sea, what elfe?

Cam. Why will my Lord, do fo?

Ant. For that he dares vs too't.

Eos. So hath my Lord, dar'd him to fingle fight.
Cam. I, and to wage this Battell at Pharalfe,
Where Cæfar fought with Pompey. But thofe offers
Which ferue not for his vantage, he shak's off,
And fo {hould you.

Eos. Your Ships are not well mann'd,
Your Mariners are Militers, Reapers, people
Ingroft by swift Impreff. In Cæfars Fleete,
Are thofe, that often haue gainst Pompey fought,
Their fifpette are yare, yours heauy: no difgrace
Shall you for reufing him at Sea,
Being prepar'd for Land.

Ant. By Sea, by Sea.

Eos. Moft worthy Sir, you therein throw away
The abolute Soldiery you haue by Land,
Diftraft your Armie, which doth moft conftit
Of Warre-markt-Footmen, leuant
Of your owne renowned knowledge, quite fgnore
The way which promifes affurance, and Give vp your felue meerly to chance and hazard,
From firme Securitie.

Ant. He fight at Sea.

Cle.
Anthony and Cleopatra.

Cle. I have sixty Sailes, Caesar none better.

Ant. Our ouer-plus of shipping will we burne,
And with the rest full many, from th'head of Action
Beate th'approaching Caesar. But if we faile,
We then can doot at Land. Enter a Meffenger.

Thy Buisine?

Mef. The Newes is true, my Lord, he is defcried,
Caesar ha's taken Tveryne.

Ant. Can he be there in person? 'Tis impossible
Strange, that his power should be. Camidius,
Our nineteene Legions thou shalt hold by Land,
And our twelve thousand Horfe. Wee'lt to our Ship,
Away my Tho't. Enter a Solliour.

How now worthy Soulciur.

Soul. Oh Noble Emperor, do not fight by Sea,
Trueft not to rotten planks: Do you miffoubt
This Sword, and thefe my Wounds; let th'Egyptians
And the Phoenicians go a ducking: wee
Haue vs't to conquer standing on the earth,
And fighting foot to foot.

Ant. Well, well, away. exit Ant. Cleo. & Enob.

Soul. By Hercules I thinke I am I' th'right.
Cam. Soulciur thou art: but his whole action growes
Not in the power on't: fo our Leaders leade,
And we are Womens men.

Soul. You keepe by Land the Legions and the Horfe whole, do you not?

Ven. Marcus Octavius, Marcus Iuflus,
Publius, and Celius, are for Sea:
But we keepe whole by Land. This speede of Cefars
Carries beyond beleefe.

Soul. While he was yet in Rome,
His power went out in fuch diuaffions,
As begulde all Spies.
Cam. Who's his Lieutenant, heare you?
Soul. They fay, one Tovrus.
Cam. Well, I know the man.

Enter a Meffenger.

Mef. The Emperor cais Camidius.
Cam. With Newes the times wit a Labour,
And throwes forth each minute, fome.

Enter Cefar with his Army, marching.

Cef. Towrus?

Tov. My Lord.

Cef. Strike not by Land,
Keepe whole, pronouke not Battale
Till we have done at Sea. Do not exceede
The Prefcript of this Scroule: Our fortune lyes
Vpon this lump.

Enter Anthony, and Evobarbus.

Ant. Set we our Squadrions on yond fide o'th'Hill,
In eye of Cefars battale, from which place
We may the number of the Ships behold,
And fo proceed accordingly.

Camidius.

Marebath with his Land Army one way over the flagge,
And Tovrus the Lieutenant of Cefar the other way:
After their going in, is heard the warfe of a Sea fight.

Allarum. Enter Enobarbus and Scarus.

Eno. Naught, naught, al naught, I can behold no longer:
Thatemad, the Egyptian Admirall,
With all their sixty fye, and turne the Rudders:

To fee't, mine eyes are blafhed.

Enter Scarus.

Scar. Gods, & Goddesfs, all the whol synod of them!

Eno. What's thy fpassion.

Scar. The greater Cantle of the world, is loft
With very ignorance, we have kift ayy
Kingdomes, and Proutences.

Eno. How appears the Fight?

Scar. On our fide, like the Token'd Pelifence,
Where death is fure. Yon ribaudred Nagge of Egypt,
(Whom Leproffe o're-take) I'll midift o'th'fight,
When vantage like a payre of Twinnes appeareth.
Both as the fame, or rather ours the elder;
(The Breeze vpon her) like a Cow in Inne,
Hofts Sailes, and flyes.

Eno. 'Tis that I beheld:
Mine eyes did fcken at the fight, and could not Indure a further view.

Scar. She once being loof.
The Noble ruine of her Magick, Anthony,
Claps on his Sea-wing, and (like a doting Mallard)
Leaues the Fight in height, flyes after her:
I neuer faw an Action of fuch fame:
Experience, Man-hood, Honor, ne're more,
Did violate fo it felfe.

Enob. Alackle, alackle.

Enter Camidius.

Cam. Our Fortune on the Sea is out of breath,
And finkes moft lamentably. Had our Generall
Bin what he knew himfelfe, it had gone well:
Oh his ha's given example for our flight,
Moft groffely by his owne.

Enob. I, are you thereabouts? Why then goodnight indeede.

Cam. Toward Peloponnefus are they fled.
Scar. 'Tis eafe too.

And there I will attend what further comes.
Camid. To Cefar will I render
My Legions and my Horfe, fexe Kings alreadie
Shew me the way of yeolding.

Eno. Ile yet follow
The wounded chance of Anthony, though my reafon
Sits in the winde againft me.

Enter Anthony with Attendants.

Ant. Hearke, the Land bids me tread no more vp'on,
It is afham'd to beare me. Friends, come lither,
I am fo lated in the world, that I
Have loft my way for ever. I have a shippe,
Laden with Gold, take that, divide it: fye,
And make your peace with Cefar.

Ant. I haue fleyd my felfe, and haue infructed cowards
To runne, and shew their shoulders. Friends be gone,
I haue my felfe resolvd vp'na courfe,
Which has no neede of you. Be gone,
My Treafure's in the Harbour. Take it: Oh,
I follow'd that I blufhe to looke vp'on,
My very haires do mutiny: for the white
Reproue the browne for rafhneffe, and they them
For feare, and dotinge. Friends be gone, you shall Have Letters from me to some Friends, that will Sweepe. Your way for you. Pray you looke not fad,
Nor make replyes of loathneffe, take the hint
Which my difpare proclames. Let them be left
Which leaves it felfe, to the Sea-fide ftraight way;
I will poftiffe you of that ship and Treafure.
The Tragedie of

Leave me, I pray a little: pray you now,
Nay do so: for indeed I have lost command,
Therefore I pray you, Ile fee you by and by. Sits downe

Enter Cleopatra led by Charmian and Eros.

Eros. Nay gentle Madam, to him, comfort him.

Cleo. Do moit deere Queene.

Char. Do, why, what ells?

Cleo. Let me sit downe: Oh Juno.

Ant. No, no, no, no, no.

Eros. See you heere, Sir?

Ant. Oh fie, fie, fie.

Char. Madam.

Ira. Madam, oh good Empresse.

Eros. Sir, fir.

Ant. Yes my Lord, yes; he at Philippi kept
His fword e’ne like a dancer, while I strooke
The leane and wrinkled Caffius, and ’twas I
That the mad Brutus ended: he alone
Dealt on Lietenantry, and no praife had
In the brane squares of Ware: yet now: no matter.

Cleo. Ah stand by.

Eros. The Queene my Lord, the Queene.

Ira. Go to him, Madam, speake to him,
Hee’s vnquelled with very shame.

Cleo. Well then, sustaine me: Oh.

Eros. Most Noble Sir arife, the Queene approaches,
Her head’s declin’d, and death will ceafe her, but
Your comfort makes the rescue.

Ant. I have offended Reputation,
A moit vnable fweruing.

Eros. Sir, the Queene.

Ant. Oh whether haft thou lead me Egypt, fee
How I conuey my shame, out of thine eyes,
By looking backe what I have left behind
Stroy’d in dif hono.

Cleo. Oh my Lord, my Lord,
Forgive me fearfull sayles, I little thought
You would haue followed.

Ant. Egypt, thou knew’st too well,
My heart was to thy Rudder tyed by th’th’frings,
And thou shou’dt fowre me after. O’r my spirit
The full fupremacie thou knew’st, and that Thy becke, might from the bidding of the Gods Command mee.

Cleo. Oh my pardon.

Ant. Now I muft
To the young man fend humble Treasies, dodge
And palter in the shifs of Iownes, who
With halfe the bulke o’t’world plaid as I pleas’d,
Making, and marring Fortunes. You did know
How much you were my Conqueror, and that My Sword, made weake by my affection, would Obeay it on all caufe.

Cleo. Pardon, pardon.

Ant. Fare noit a teare I fay, one of them rates
All that is wonne and loft: Give me a knife,
Even this repays me.

We fent our Schoolemaister, is a come backe?
Loue I am full of Lead: some Wise
Within there, and our Viands: Fortune knowes,
We fcorne her moft, when moft she offers blowes. Exeunt

Enter Cæsar, Agrippa, and Dollibello, with others.

Cæsar. Let him appeare that’s come from Anthony.
Know you him.
Anthony and Cleopatra.

Ant. To him againe, tell him he weares the Rose
Of youth vpon him : from which, the world should note
Something particular : His Colne, Ships, Legions,
May be a Cowards, whosee Ministres would preualle
Vnder the seruice of a Childe, as foone.
As i'th'Command of Cæsar. I dare him therefore
To lay his gay Comparisons a-part,
And anfwer me declin'd, Sword against Sword,
Our felues alone : Ile write it : Follow me.

Eno. Yes like enough : hye battell'd Cæsar will Vntate his happinnesse, and be Stag'd to'th'new Against a Sworder. I fee mens judgements are
A parcell of their Fortunes, and things outward
Do draw the inward quality after them
To suffer all alike, that he should dreame,
Knowing all meafures, the full Cæsar will Anfwer his emptinesse; Cæsar thou haft subdu'de
His judgement too.

Enter a Servant.

Ser. A Messenger from Cæsar.

Cleo. What no more Ceremony? See my Women,
Against the blowne Rose may they flop their noife,
That kneel'd vnto the Buds. Admit him fir.

Eno. Mine honesty, and I, beginne to square,
The Loyalty well held to Fools, does make
Our Faith meere folly; yet he that can endure
To follow with Allegeance a false Lord,
Does conquer him : Cæsar his Master conquer,
And earns a place i'th'Story.

Enter Thidias.

Cleo. Cæsars will.

Thid. Hear ye it apart.

Cleo. None but Friends : say boldly.

Thid. So haply are they Friends to Anthony.

Enob. He needs as many (Sir) as Cæsar ha's,
Or needs not vs. If Cæsar pleafe, our Matter
Will leape to be his Friend: For vs you know,
Who he is, we are, and that is Cæsars.

Thid. So. Thus then thou moft renoun'd, Cæsar intreats,
Not to confider in what cafe thou stand'st
Further then he is Cæsars.

Cleo. Go on, right Royall.

Thid. He knowes that you embrace not Anthony
As you did loue, but as you feared him.

Cleo. Oh.

Thid. The fcare's vpon your Honor, therefore he Does pity, as conftraine blemifhes,
Not as defuered.

Cleo. He is a God,
And knowes what is moft right. Mine Honour
Was not yeelded, but conquer'd meereely.

Eno. To be fure of that, I will ask Anthony.]

Sir, fir, thou art fo leacle
That we must leave thee to thy finking, for Thy defecte quit thee.

Thid. Shall I fay to Cæsar,
What you require of him; for he partly begges
To be defir'd to giue. It much would pleafe him,
That of his Fortunes you should make a flafe
To leaue vpon. But it would warme his fpirits
To heare from me you had left Anthony,
And put your felfe vnder his throwd, the vnuerfal Land-
Cleo. What's your name? (lord.

Thid. My name is Thidias.

Cleo. Moll kinde Meffenger,
Say to great Cæfar this in disputacion,
I kiffe his conqu'ring hand: Tell him, I am prompt
To lay my Crowne at's feete, and there to kneele.
Tell him, from his all-obeying breath, I heare
The doome of Egypt.

Thid. 'Tis your Noblest courfe:
Wifedome and Fortune combating together,
If that the former dare but what it can,
No chance may shake it. Give me grace to lay
My dutie on your hand.

Cleo. Your Cæsars Father oft,
(When he hath mus'd of taking kingdoms in)
Befow'd his lips on that unworthy place,
As it rain'd kiffe.

Enter Anthony and Enobarbus.

Ant. Favour? By loue that thunders. What art thou Thid. One that but performs
The bidding of the fullfet man, and worthifet
To have command obey'd.

Eno. You will be whipt.

Ant. Approach there: ah you Kite.Now Gods & diuels
Authority melts from me of late. When I cried hoa,
Like Boyes vnto a muffle, Kings would flart forth,
And cry, your will. Haue you no cares?
I am Anthony yet. Take hence this fack, and whip him.

Enter a Servant.

Eno. 'Tis better playing with a Lions whelpe,
Then with an old one dying.

Ant. Morrow and Carres,
Whip him: we't twenty of the greaftest Tributaries
That do acknowledge Cæsar, should I finde them
So fawcy with the hand of the heere, what's her name
Since the was Cleopatra? Whip him Fellowes,
Till like a Boy you fee him crinde his face,
And whine aloud for mercy. Take him hence.

Thid. Marks Anthony.

Ant. Tugge him away: being whipt
Bring him againe, the lacke of Cæsars hall
Bear vs an arrant to him. Exeunt with Thidius.
You were halfe blaffed ere I knew you: Ha?
Haue I my pillow left vnpreft in Rome,
Forborne the getting of a lawfull Race,
And by a Jem of women, to be abus'd
By one that lookes on Feeder's?

Cleo. Good my Lord.

Ant. You haue beene a boggeler euer,
But when we in our viciouſneffe grow hard
(Oh misery on') the wife Gods feele our eyes
In our owne filth, drop our cleare judgements, make vs
Adore our errors, laugh at's while we strut
To our confusion.

Cleo. Oh, is't come to this?

Ant. I found you as a Morfell, cold vpon
Dead Cæsars Trencher: Nay, you were a Fragment
Of Gneiu Pompeyes, befides what hotter hours
Vnregiftred in vulgar Fame, you have Luxuriously picke dout. For I am fure,
Though you can guesse what Temperance shoule be,
You know not what it is.

Cleo. Wherefore is this?

Ant. To let a Fellow that will take rewards,
And fay, God quit you, be familiar with
My play-fellow, your hand; this Kingij Seale,
And plibter of high hearts. O that I were Vpon the hill of Bifan, to out-roare
The honned Heard, for I haue fuaage cauf,
And to proclaime it ciuilly, were like

The Tragedie of

A halter'd necke, which do's the Hangman thankes,
For being yare about him. Is he whipt?

Enter a Servant with Thidias.

Ser. Soundly, my Lord.

Ant. Cried he? and bega'd a Pardon?

Ser. He did ask favour.

Ant. If that thy Father live, let him repent
Thou was't not made his daughter, and be thou forie
To follow Caesar in his Triumph, once
Thou haft bin whipt. For following him, henceforth
The white hand of a Lady Feauer thee,
Shake thou to looke on't. Get thee backe to Caesar,
Tell him thy entertainment: looke thou say
He makes me angry with him. For he leemes
Proud and diddinsfull, harping on what I am,
Not what he knew I was. He makes me angry,
And at this time moft easie 'tis to doo't:
When my good Starres, that were my former guides
Haue empy left their Orbes, and shot their Fires
Into th' Abisme of hell. If he mislike,
My speech, and what is done, tell him he has Hipparchus, my enfranchized Bondman, whom
He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture,
As he shall like to quit me. Vrge it thou:
Hence with thy stripes, be gone.

Cleo. Have you done yet?

Ant. Alacke our Terrene Moone is now Eclipst,
And it portends alone the fall of Anthony.

Cleo. I must fly his time?

Ant. To flatter Caesar, would you mingle eyes
With one that eyes his points?

Cleo. Not know me yet?

Ant. Cold-hearted toward me?

Cleo. Ah (Deere) if I be fo,
From my cold heart let Haueen ingender haile,
And poyson it in the fourfe, and the first stone
Drop in my necke: as it determines fo
Dissoule my life, the next Caefarian smile,
Till by degrees the memory of my wombe,
Together with my braue Egyptians all,
By the disfandering of this pelleted floorne,
Lye grauleffle, till the Flies and Gnats of Nyle
Haue buried them for prey.

Ant. I am satisfied:

Caesar lies downe in Alexandria, where
I will oppose his Fate. Our force by Land,
Hath Nobly held, our feuer'd Naaue too
Haue knit againe, and Flee, threatening most Sea-like.
Where haft thou bin my heart? Doft thou heare Lady?
If from the Field I shall returne once more
To kiffe these Lips, I will appeare in Blood
I, and my Sword, will earne our Chronicle,
There's hope in't yet.

Cleo. That's my braue Lord.

Ant. I will be trebble-linewed, hearted, breath'd,
And fight maliciously: for when mine hours
Were nice and lucky, men did rambome liues
Of me for lees: But now, Ie fet my teeth,
And send to danderesse all that flop me. Come,
Let's haue one other gawdy night: Call to me
All my fad Captaines, fill our Bowles once more:
Let's mocke the midnight Bell.

Cleo. It is my Birth-day,
I had thought t'haue held it poore. But since my Lord
Is Antony againe, I will be Cleopatra.

Ant. We will yet do well.

Cleo. Call all his Noble Captaines to my Lord.

Ant. Do fo, we'll speake to them,
And to night Ie force
The Wine pepee through their scarres.
Come on (my Queene).

There's fap in't yet. The next time I do fight
Ie make death love me: for I will contend
Even with his pelifent Sythe.

Exeunt.

Eno. Now hee'el out-flare the Lightning, to be furious
Is to be frighted out of feare, and in that moode
The Doue will pecke the Efridge; and I fee still
A diminution in our Captaines braine,
Refores his heart; when valour prays in reazon,
It eates the Sword it fights with: I will seeke
Some way to leave him.

Exeunt.

Enter Caesar, Agrippa, & Mecenas with his Army,
Caesar reading a Letter.

Caf. He calleth me Boy, and chides as he had power
To beate me out of Egypt. My Meffenger
He hath whipt with Rods, dares me to perfonal Combat.
Caesar to Antony: let the old Russian know,
I haue many other ways to dye: meane time
Laugh at his Challenge.

Mec. Caesar must thinke,
When one so great begins to rage, he's hunted
Euen to falling. Give him no breath, but now
Make boote of his dilraction: Neuer anger
Made good guard for it felphe.

Caf. Let our best heads know,
That to morrow, the laft of many Battailes
We meane to fight. Within our Files there are,
Of those that feru'd Mark Anthony but late,
Enough to fetch him in. See it done,
And Feast the Army, we haue store to doo't,
And they haue earn'd the waffe. Poore Antony.

Exeunt.

Enter Antony, Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Charmian,
Iara, Alexas, with others.

Ant. He will not fight with me, Demitian?

Eno. No?

Ant. Why should he not?

Eno. He thinks, being twenty times of better fortune,
He is twenty men to one.

Ant. To morrow Soldier,
By Sea and Land Ie fight: or I will lye,
Or bathe my dying Honor in the blood
Shall make it lyue againe. Woo't thou fight well.

Eno. Ie strike, and cry, Take all.

Ant. Well said, come on:
Call forth my Houfhold Servants, lets to night

Enter 3 or 4 Servitors.

Be bounteous at our Meale. Give me thy hand,
Thou haft bin rightly honest, fo haft thou,
Thou, and thou, and thou: you haue feru'd me well,
And Kings have beene your fellowes.

Cleo. What means this?

Eno. 'Tis one of those odde tricks which forow shoots
Out of the minde.

Ant. And thou art honest too:
I wish I could be made so many men,
And all of you clapt vp together, in
An Antony: that I might do you seruice,
So good as you have done.

Ommes.

848
Enter Anthony and Cleopatra, with others.

Ant. Eros, mine Armour Eros.
Cleo. Sleepe a little.
Ant. No my Chucke. Eros, come mine Armor Eros.
Enter Eros.

Come good Fellow, put thine Iron on,
If Fortune be not ours to day, it is Because we brake her. Come.

Cleo. Nay, Ile helpe too, Anthony.
What's this for? Ah let be, let be, thou art
The Armourner of my heart: Falfe, Falfe: This, this,
Sooth-law Ile helpe: Thus it mufit bee.
Ant. Well, well, we shall thrive now.
Seeft thou my good Fellow. Go, put on thy defences.
Eros. Briefely Sir.
Cleo. Is not this buckled well?
Ant. Rarely, rarely:
He that vn buckles this, till we do pleafe
To daft for our Repofe, shall heare a Storme.
Thou fumblest Eros, and my Queens a Squire
More tight at this, then thou: Dispatch. O Loue,
That thou couldft fee my Warres to day, and knew'ft
The Royall Occupation, thou shoul'dft fee
A Workeman in't.

Enter an Armed Soldier.

Good morrow to thee, welcome,
Thou look'ft like him that knowes a warlike Charge:
To bufiniffe that we loue, we rife betime,
And go too' with delight.
Soul. A thoufand Sir, early though't be, haue on their Riueted trim, and at the Port expect you.

Enter Captaines, and Soldiers.

Alex. The Morne is faire: Good morrow Generall.
Ant. 'Tis well bwayne Lads.

This Mornig, like the fpirit of a Youth
That meanes to be of note, begins betimes.
So, fo: Come give me that, this way, well-fed.
Fare thee well Dame, what ere becomes of me,
This is a Soldiers kiffe: rebuskeable,
And worthy Shamefull checke it were, to fand
On more Mechanick Complement, Ile leave thee.
Now like a man of Steele, you that will fight,
Follow me clofe, Ile bring you too't: Adieu.

Char. Please you retyre to your Chamber?
Cleo. Lead me:
He goes forth gallantly: That he and Cezar might Determine this great Warre in fingle fight;
Then Anthony; but now. Well on.

Enter Anthony, and Eros.

Eros. The Gods make this a happy day to Anthony.
Ant. Would thou, & thofe thy Scarvs had once preuaile
To make me fight at Land.
Eros. Had"ft thou done fo,
The Kings that have revolued, and the Soldier
That has this morning left thee, would have still Followed thy heels.
Ant. Who goes this morning?
Eros. Who? one euer neere thee, call for Enobarbus,
The Tragedie of

He shall not hear thee, or from Cæsar Campe,
Say I am none of thine.

_Ant._ What sayest thou?

_Sold._ Sir he is with Cæsar.

_Eres._ Sir, his Chefs and Treasure he has not with him.

_Ant._ Is he gone?

_Sold._ Moit certain.

_Ant._ Go Eres, fend his Treasure after, do it,
Detaine no lot I charge thee; write to him,
(I will subscribe) gentle adieu's, and greetings;
Say, that I will he newer finde more caufe
To change a Mafter. Oh my Fortunes have Corrupted honest men. Dispatch Enobarbus.

_Exit.

_Flourish._ Enter Agrippa, Cæsar, with Enobarbus, and Dollabella.

_Cæs._ Go forth Agrippa, and begin the fight:
Our will is Anthony be tooke alioe :
Make it so knome.

_Agro._ Cæsar, I shall.

_Cæsar._ The time of winterfall peace is neere:
Proue this a propitious day, the three nook'd world
Shall bear the Olyue freely.

_Enter a Messenger.

_Mes._ Anthony is come into the Field.

_Cæs._ Go charge Agrippa,
Plant thoe that have resolted in the Vant,
That Anthony may feeme to spend his Fury
Upon himselfe.

_Enob._ Alexas did reuolt, and went to Iewry on Affaires of Anthony, there did iffuate
Great Herod to incline himselfe to Cæsar,
And leave his Mafter Anthony. For this paines,
Cæsar hath hang'd him: Camindius and the reft
That fell away, have entertainment, but
No honourable trut: I have done lil,
Of which I do accufe my selfe to forely,
That I will joy no mote.

_Enter a Soldier of Cæsars.

_Sold._ Enobarbus, Anthony
Hath after thee fent all thy Treasure, with His Bounty ouer-plus. The Messenger
Came on my guard, and at thy Tent is now
Vloading of his Mules.

_Eno._ I glue it you.

_Sold._ Mocke not Enobarbus,
I tell you true: Belt you fa't the bringer
Out of the hoff, I must attend mine Office,
Or would have done't my selfe. Your Emperor
Continues still a love.

_Enob._ I am alone the Villaine of the earth,
And feele I am fo moft. Oh Anthony,
Thou Mine of Bounty, how would't thou haue payed
My better seruice, when my turpitude
Thou doft fo Crowne with Gold. This blowes my hart,
If twift thought breake it not: a twifter meane
Shall out strike thou, but thought will doot. I feel
I fight against thee: No I will go feeke
Some Ditch, wherein to dye: the foul'll beft fits
My latter part of life.

_Exit._

_Enobarbus._

_Alarum._ Drums and Trumpets.

_Enter Agrippa.

_Agro._ Retire, we have engag'd our felues too farre:
Cæsar himselfe's warke, and our oppreffion
Exceeds what we expected.

_Exit._

_Alarum._ Enter Anthony, and Scarrus wounded.

_Scar._ O my brave Emperors, this is fought indeed,
Had we done fo at first, we had drown'd them home
With cloath about their heads.

_Far off._

_Ant._ Thou bleed'st space.

_Scar._ I had a wound heere that was like a T,
But now 'tis made an H.

_Ant._ They do retyre.

_Scar._ We'll beat them into Bench-holes, I haue yet
Rooome for fix frothes more.

_Enter Eres.

_Eres._ They are beaten Sir, and our aduantage ferues
For a faire victory.

_Scar._ Let vs score their backes,
And snatch 'em vp, as we take Hares behindes,
'Tis sport to maull a Runner.

_Ant._ I will reward thee
Once for thy prightly comfort, and ten-fold
For thy good valour. Come thee on.

_Execut._

_Alarum._ Enter Anthony againe in a March.

_Scar._, with others.

_Ant._ We haue beate him to his Campe: Runne one
Before, & let the Queen know of our gueffs: to morrow
Before the Sun shall fee's, wee'll spill the blood
That ha's to day escap'd. I thanke you all,
For doughty handed are you, and haue fought
Not as you feru'd the Caufe, but as't had beene
Each mans like mine: you haue shewn all Hectors.
Enter the City, clip your Wyes, your Friends,
Tell them your feats, whilft they with joyfull tears
Wah the congealment from your woundes, and kilfe
The Honour'd-gaftes whole.

_Enter Cleopatra.

_Give me thy hand,
To this great Fairey, Ile commend thy afts,
Make her thanke's bleefe thee. Oh thou day o'th world,
Chaine mine arm'd necke, leape thou, Attyre and all
Through proofes of Harneffe to my heart, and there
Ride on the pants triumphing.

_Cleo._ Lord of Lords,
Oh infinite Vertue, comm'ft thou smilling from
The worlds great inare vnaught.

_Ant._ Mine Nightingale,
We haue beate them to their Beds.
What Gyre, though gray
Do somthing mingle with our yonger brown, yet ha we
A Braine that nourishes our Nerves, and can Get gole for gole of youth. Behold this man,
Commend vnlo his Lippes thy fauouring hand,
Kiffe it my Warriour: He hath fought to day,
As if a God in hate of Mankinde, had Destroyed in such a shape.

_Cleo._ Ile glue thee Friend
An Armour all of Gold : it was a Kings.

_Ant._ He has defer'd it, were it Carbunkled
Like holy Phæbus Carre. Glue me thy hand,
Through Alexandria make a lolly March,
Bare our hackt Targets, like the men that owe them.
Had our great Pallece the capacity
To Campe this hoff, we all would fup together,
And drinke Carowles to the next dayes Fate

Which
Enter a Centurie, and his Company, Enobarbus follows.

Cent. If we be not releau’d within this hour, We must returne to’th’Court of Guard : the night Is shyny, and they fay, we hall embatalla By’th’second houre i’th’Morne.

1. Watch. This laft day was a fhrewd one too’s. Enob. Oh beare me witneffe night.

2. What man is this ?

1 Stand cloe, and lift him.

Enob. Be witneffe to me (O thou bleffed Moone) When men rewolted shall vpon Record Beare hatefull memory : poore Enobarbus did Before thy face repent.

Cent. Enobarbus?

2 Peace : Hearke further.

Enob. Oh Soueraigne Miftris of true Melancholly, The poyfonous dampe of night difpunge vpon me, That Life, a very Rebell to my will, May hang no longer on me. Throw my heart Against the flipt and hardneffe of my fault, Which being dried with greffe, will breake to powder, And finish all foule thoughts. Oh Anthony, Nobler then my reuolt is Infamous, Forgive me in thine owne particular, But let the world ranke me in Register A Mafter leauer, and a fugitive : Oh Anthony! Oh Anthony!

1 Let’s speake to him.

Cent. Let’s hearre him, for the things he speakes May concerne Caesar.

2 Let’s do fo, but he sleepe.

Cent. Swoonds rather, for fo bad a Prayer as his Was neuer yet for sleepe.

1 Go we to him.

2 Awake fir, awake, speake to vs.

1 Hearre you fir ?

Cent. The hand of death hath raught him.

Druomes afarre off.

Hearke the Drummes demurely wake the sleepeers:
Let vs beare him to’th’Court of Guard : he is of note: Our house is fully out.

2 Come on then, he may recoouer yet.

Enter Anthony and Scarrus, with their Army.

Ant. Their preparation is to day by Sea, We pleafe them not by Land. Scarr. For both, my Lord.

Ant. I would they’d fight i’th’Fire, or i’th’Ayre, We’d fight there too. But this it is, our Foote Vpon the hilles adioying to the Citty Shall stay with vs. Order for Sea is giuen, They have put forth the Hauen:
Where their appointment we may beft diucover, And looke on their endeauoure.

Enter Caesar, and his Army.

Caes. But being charg’d, we will be fhy by Land, Which as I tak’t we shall, for his beft force Is forth to Man his Gallies. To the Vales, And hold our beft advantage.

Alarum afarre off, as at a Sea-fight.

Enter Anthony, and Scarrus.

Ant. Yet they are not loynd: Where you’d Pine does fland, I hall dioucer all. Ile bring thee word straight, how’reis like to go.

Scarr. Swallowes haue built In Cleopatra’s Salies their nets. The Auguries Say,they know not, they cannot tell, looke grimly, And dare not speake their knowledge. Anthony, Is valiant, and defeacted, and by ftarts His fretted Fortunes glue him hope and feare Of what he has, and has not.

Enter Anthony.

Ant. All is loft: This fowle Egyptian hath betrayed me:

My Fleeche hath yeelded to the Foe, and yonder They caft their Caps vp, and Carowfe together Like Friends long loft. Triple-turn’d Whore, ’tis thou Hast foold me to this Notice, and my heart Makes onely Warres on thee. Bid them all flye:
For when I am reveng’d vp my Charme, Ihaue done all. Bid them all flye, be gone. Oh Sunne, thy vertue hall I fee no more, Fortune, and Anthony part heere, even heere Do we shake hands? All come to this? The hearts That pannelled me at heelles, to whom I gaue Their wishes, do dif-Candie, melt: their sweets On blooming Cesar : And this Pine is barkt, That ouer-top them all. Betray’d I am. Oh this falle Soule of Egypt! this graue Charme, Whose eye beck’d forth my Wars, & cal’d them home: Whose Bofome was my Crownet, my chiefe end, Like a right Gypifie, hath at falt and loofe Beguill’d me, to the very heart of loffe.

What Eros, Eros?

Enter Cleopatra.

Ah, thou Spell! Auant.

Cleo. Why is my Lord enrag’d against his Loue?

Ant. Vanish, or I shall give thee thy defiring, And flemish Cefar’s Triumph. Let him take thee, And hoift thee vp to the fhouting Plebeians, Follow his Chariot, like the greateft spot Of all thy Sex. Most Monfter-like be fhewne For poor’d Diminuities, for Dolts, and let Patient Oftuus, plough thy vilage vp With her prepared nailes.

’Tis well th’art gone. If it be well to live. But better t’were — Thou fell’ft into my furie, for one death Might have prevented many. Eros, hoa!
The shirt of Neffeus is vpon me, teach me Aciide, thou mine Ancestor, thy rage. Let me lodge Licas on the hornes o’th’Moone, And with those hands that grafft the hauefief Club, Subdue my worthiefle felfe: The Witch hall die, To the young Roman Boy she hath fold me, and I fall Vnder this plot: She dyes for’t. Eros hoa!

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, Mardian.

Cleo. Helpe me my women: Oh hee’s more mad Then Telamon for his Shield, the Boare of the Heffally Was neuer fo imboft.

Char. To’th'Monument, there locke your felfe, And fend him word you are dead:

The
The Tragedie of

The Soule and Body rieu not more in parting,
Then greatnesse going off.

Cleo. To'th Monument:

Mardian, go tell him I haue slaine my selfe:
Say, that the last I spake was Anthony,
And word it (prythee) piticously. Hence Mardian,
And bring me how he takes my death to'th Monument.

Exeunt.

Enter Anthony, and Eros.

Ant. Eros, thou yet beholde'rt me?
Eros. I Noble Lord.

Ant. Sometime we see a cloud that's Dragonish,
A vapour somewhat, like a Beare, or Lyon,
A toward Cittadell, a pendent Rocke,
A forked Mountain, or blew Promontorie
With Trees vpon't that nodde vnto the world;
And mocke our eyes with Ayre.

Thou haft seene these Signes,
They beblacke Veipers Pageants.
Eros. I my Lord.

Ant. That which is now a Horfe, euyn with a thought
The Racke dillimes, and makes it indistinct
As water is in water.
Eros. It does my Lord.

Ant. My good Knaue Eros, now thy Captaine is Euen such a body: Heere I am Anthony,
Yet cannot hold this viuible shape (my Knaue)
I made these warres for Egypt, and the Queene,
Whole heart I thought I had, for she had mine:
Which whil't it was mine, had annex't vnto't
A Million moe, (now loft:) thee Eros has Packt Cards with Cefars, and faile plaide my Glory
Vnto an Enemies triumph.
Nay, wepe not gentle Eros, there is left vs
Our felues to end our felues.

Enter Mardian.

Oh thy vilde Lady, she has rob'd me of my Sword.
Mar. No Anthony,
My Miftris lou'd thee, and her Fortunes mingled
With thine intirely.

Ant. Hence sawy Eunuch peace, she hath betrayed me,
And shall dye the death.

Mar. Death of one person, can be paide but once,
And that he's discharg'd. What thou would'rt do
Is done vnto thy hand: the last the spake
Was Anthony, most Noble Anthony:
Then in the mild't a tearing grone did breake
The name of Anthony: it was divided
Betweene her heart, and lips: the rendred life
Thy name so buried in her.

Ant. Dead then?
Mar. Dead.

Ant. Vnarme Eros, the long dayes taske is done,
And we must sleepe: That thou depart'rt hence safe
Does pay thy labour richly: Go, exit Mardian.

Off, plucke off,
The leuen-fold shield of Ajax cannot keepe
The battery from my heart. Oh cleave my sides.
Heart, once be stronger then thy Continent,
Cracke thy fraile Cale. Apace Eros, apace;
No more a Soldier: bruiued pieces goe,
You have bin Nobly borne. From me awhile. exit Eros
I will o're-take the Clespatra, and Weepe for my pardon. So it must be, for now
All length is Torture: since the Torch is out,
Lye downe and stray no farther. Now all labour

Marres what it does: yea, very force entangles
It fell't with strength: Seale then, and all is done.

Eros? I come my Queene. Eros? Stay for me,
Where Soules do couch on Flowers, we'll hand in hand,
And with our frightly Port make the Ghostes gaze:
Dido, and her Aeneas shall want Troopes,
And all the haunt be ours. Come Eros, Eros.

Enter Eros.

Eros. What would my Lord?
Ant. Since Cleopatra dyed.
I haue liued in such dishonour, that the Gods
Detest my basenefe. I, that with my Sword,
Quarter'd the World, and o're greene Neptunesbacke
With Ships, made Cities; condemne my selfe, to lacke
The Courage of a Woman, leffe Noble minde
Then the which by her death, our Cesar tells
I am Conqueror of my selfe. Thou art sworne Eros,
That when the exigent should come, which now
Is come indeed: When I should see behind me
Th'excellent prosecution of disgrace and horror,
That on my command, thou then would'lt kill me.
Don't, the time is come: Thou strik'ft not me,
'Tis Cefar thou defeat'rt. But colour in thy Checcke.

Eros. The Gods with-hold me,
Shall I do that which all the Parthian Darts,
(Though Enemy) loft ayme, and could not.

Ant. Eros,
Would'lt thou be window'd in great Rome, and see
Thy Mafter thus with pleasch Armes, bending downe
His corrigible necke, his face subdu'd
To penetratue flame; whil't the wheel'd seate
Of Fortune Cesar drawn before him, branded
His Bafeneffe that enflued.

Eros. I would not see't.

Ant. Come then: for with a wound I must be cur'd.
Draw that thy honest Sword, which thou haft wore
Most viefull for thy Country.

Eros. Oh sir, pardon me.

Ant. When I did make thee free, swor'ft y' not then
To do this when I bad thee? Do it at once,
Or thy precedent Serviues are all
But accidents vnpurpos'd. Draw, and come.

Eros. Turne from me then that Noble countenance,
Wherein the worship of the whole world les.

Ant. Loe thee.
Eros. My fword is drawn.

Ant. Then let it do at once
The thing why thou haft drawn it.

Eros. My deere Mafter,
My Captaine, and my Emperor. Let me pay
Before I strike this bloody stroke, Farwell.

Ant. 'Tis said man, and farewell.

Eros. Farewell great Cheife. Shall I strike now?

Ant. Now Eros.

Eros. Why there then:
Thus I do escape the sorrow of Antiones death.

Ant. Thrice-Nobler then my selfe,
Thou teacheft me: Oh valiant Eros, what
I should, and thou cou'dst not, my Queene and Eros
Have by their brave infruction got vpon me
A Noblenesse in Record. But I will be
A Bride-grome in my death, and run intoo't
As to a Lovers bed. Come then, and Eros,
Thy Mafter dies thy Scholler; to do thus
I learnt of thee. How, not dead? Not dead?
The Guard, how? Oh dispatch me.
Anthony and Cleopatra.

Enter a Guard.
1. Guard. What's the noise?
Ant. I have done my worke ill Friends: Oh make an end of what I have begun, 2. The Starre is faie.
1 And time is at his Period.
All. Alas, and woe.
Ant. Let him that loves me, strike me dead. 1 Not I.
2 Not I.
3 Not nor any.

Exeunt. Thy death and fortunes bid thy followers fly
This sword but shewne to Cæfar with this tydings, Shall enter me with him.

Enter Diomedes.

Dio. Where's Anthony?
Decr. There Diomed there.
Dir. Luies he: wilt thou not answer man?
Ant. Art thou there Diomed?
Dio. Draw thy sword, and give mee, Suffing strokes for death.
Diom. Moft abolute Lord:
My Miftifir Cleopatra sent me to thee.
Ant. When did thee fend thee?
Dio. Now my Lord.
Ant. Where is he? (scream)

Dio. Lookt in her Monument: she had a Prophecying
Of what hath come to passe: for when the saw
(Which Ier is shall be found) you did sufpeft
She had dipos'd with Cæfar, and that your rage
Would not be purg'd, the sent you word she was dead:
But fearing once it might work, hath sent
Me to proclaime the truth, and I am come.
I dread, too late.

Ant. Too late good Diomed: call my Guard I prythee.
Dio. What hoa: the Emperour Guard,
The Guard, what hoa? Come, your Lord calles.

Enter 4. or 5. of the Guard of Anthony.
Ant. Bear me good Friends where Cleopatra bides,
'Tis the latte feruice that I shall command you.
1 Woe, woe are we fir, you may not liue to weare
All your true Followers out.
All. Moft heauy day.
Ant. Nay good my Fellowes, do not pleaze sharp fate
To grace it with your forrowes. Bid that welcome
Which comes to punish vs, and we punish it
Seemimg to bear it lightly. Take me vp,
I haue led you oft, carry me now good Friends,
And haue my thankes for all.

Exit bearing. Anthony

Enter Cleopatra, and her Maides aloft, with Charmian & Iras.

Cleo. Oh Charmian, I will never goe from hence.
Char. Be comforted dere Madam.
Cleo. No, I will not:
All strange and terrible events are welcome,
But comforts we dispise; our fize of forrow
Proportion'd to our caufe, must be as great
As that which makes it.

Enter Diomed.

How now! is he dead?
Dir. His death's vpnom, but not dead.
Looke out o'th other fide your Monument,
His Guard haue brought him thither.

Enter Anthony, and the Guard.

Cleo. Oh Sunne,
Burne the great Sphere thou mou't in, darkling fland
The varying flore o'th world.O Anthony, Anthony, Anthony
Helpe Charmian, helpe Iras helpe: helpe Friends
Below, let's draw him bither.
Ant. Peace,
Not Cæfar Valour hath o'rethrown our Anthony,
But Antoni's hath Triumph't on it elfe.
Cleo. So it shou'd be,
That none but Anthony should conquer Anthony,
But woe 'tis fo.
Ant. I am dying Egypt, dying; onely
I heere importune death a-while, until
Of many thousand kiffes, the poore left
I lay vp on thy lippes.
Cleo. I dare not Deere,
Deere my Lord pardon: I dare not,
Leat I be taken: not th'Imperious fhew
Of the full—Fortun'd Cæfar, euer fhall
Be brooch'd with me, if Knife, Drugges, Serpents haue
Edge, fling, or operation. I am safe:
Your Wife Oeliaus, with her modest eyes,
And fift Conclufion, fhall acquire no Honour
Demuring vpon me: but come, come Anthony,
Helpe me my women, we muft draw thee vp:
Affift good Friends.
Ant. Oh quicke, or I am gone.
Cleo. Heere's Corpore indeed:
How heauy weighs my Lord?
Our strength is all gone into heauinesse,
That makes the weight. Had I great Juno's power,
The strong wing'd Mercury fhould fetch thee vp,
And let thee by louses fide. Yet come a little,
Wifhers were euer Foole. Oh come, come, come,
They haue Anthony aloft to Cleopatra.

And welcome, welcome. Dye when thou haft liu'd,
Quicken with kifing: had my lippes that power,
Thus would I weare them out.
All. A heauy fight.
Ant. I am dying Egypt, dying.
Give me Sone Wine, and let me speake a little.
Cleo. No, let me speake, and let me rayle so blee,
That the falfe Huwife Fortune, break her Wheele,
Prouok'd by my offence.

Ant. One word (Sweete Queene)
Of Cæfar feek ye your Honour, with your fafety. Oh.
Cleo. They do not go together.
Ant. Gentle hear me,
None about Cæfar truf, but Proculius.
Cleo. My Refolution, and my hands, I le truf,
None about Cæfar.

Ant. The miferable change now at my end, I
Lament nor forrow at: but pleaze your thoughts
In feeding them with those my former Fortunes
Wherein I liued. The greaet Prince o'th world,
The Nobleft: and do now not bafely dye,
Not Cowardly put off my Helmet to My Countreyman. A Roman, by a Roman Valiantly vanquish'd. Now my Spirit is going,
I can no more.
Cleo. Nobleft of men, woo't dye?
Haff thou no care of me, I'll abide
In this dull world, which in th'abience is
No better then a Style? Oh fee my women:
The Crowne o'th earth doth melt. My Lord?
Oh wither'd is the Garland of the Warre,
The Gods rebuke me, but it is Tydings
To wash the eyes of Kings.

Dol. And strange it is,
That Nature must compell vs to lament
Our most perlished deeds.

Mec. His taints and Honours, wag'd equal with him.

Dola. A Rarer spirit neuer
Did feere humanity; but you Gods will giue vs
Some faults to make vs men. Cefar is touch'd.

Mec. When such a spacious Mirror's let before him,
He needs must see him felle.

Cefar. Oh, Antony,
I have followed thee to this, but we do launch
Diseases in our Bodies. I must perforce
Have shewn to thee such a declining day,
Or looke on thine: we could not fait together,
In the whole world. But yet let me lament
With teares as Soueraigne as the blood of hearts,
That thou my Brother, my Competitor,
In top of all defigne; my Mate in Empire,
Friend and Companion in the front of Warre,
The Arme of mine owne Body, and the Heart
Where mine thoughts did kindle; that our Starres
Unreconcillable, should divide our equalnesse to this.
Hear me good Friends,
But I will tell you at some meetter Season,
The businesse of this man lookses out of him,
We'll hear him what he sayes.

Enter an Egyptian.

Whence are you?

Egyp. A poore Egyptian yet, the Queen my mistris
Confin'd in all, she has her Monument
Of thy intents, desires, instruction,
That she preparedly may frame her selfe
To th'way shee's forc'd too.

Cefar. Bid her hauue good heart,
She loone shall know of vs, by some of ours,
How honourable, and how kindly Wee
Determine for her. For Cefar cannot leave to be vengent
Egypt. So the Gods preferue thee.

Exit.

Cef. Come hither Ptolemeus. Go and fay
We purpose her no blame: give her what comforts
The quality of her passion shall require;
Left in her greatnesse, by some mortall stroke
She do defeate vs. For her life in Rome,
Would be eternall in our Triumph: Go,
And with your speedieth bring vs what she sayes,
And how you finde of her.

Pro. Cefar I shall.

Exit Ptolemeus.

Cef. Gallius, go you along: where's Dolabella, to sec cond Ptolemeus?

All. Dolabella.

Cef. Let him alone: for I remember now
How bee's imploied: he shall in time be ready.
Go with me to my Tent, where you shall see
How hardly I was drawne into this Warre,
How calm and gentle I proceeded still
In all my Writings. Go with me, and see
What I can shew in this.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Ira, and Mardian.

Cleo. My defolations does begin to make
A better life: 'tis paltry to be Cefar:
Not being Fortune, hee's but Fortunes knauze,
A minifter of her will: and it is great

To
To do that thing that ends all other deeds,
Which slackles accedents, and bolts vp change;
Which sleepe, and neuer pallates more the dung,
The beggers Nurfe, and Cefars,
    Enter Proculeus,
Pro. Cefar fends greeting to the Queene of Egypt,
And bids thee study on what faire demands
Thou mean't to haue him grant thee.
Cleo. What's thy name ?
Pro. My name is Proculeus .
Cleo. Anthony
Did tell me of you, bad me trueth you, but
I do not greestly care to be decei'd
That haue no vfe for trueth. If your Master
Would have a Queene his begger, you must tell him,
That Malefey to kepe decorum, muft;
No leffe begge then a Kingdom : If he pleafe
To gue me conquer'd Egypt for my Sonne,
He gives me so much of mine owne, as I
Will kneele to him with thanks.
Pro. Be of good cheere :
Y'are faine into a Princely hand, feare nothing,
Make your full reference freely to my Lord,
Who is fo full of Grace, that it flows ouer
On all that neede. Let me report to him
Your sweet dependacie, and youall finde
A Conqueror that will pray in ayde for kindnefe,
Where he for grace is kneel'd too.
Cleo. Pray you tell him,
I am his Forunes Vaffall, and I fend him
The Greatnefe he has got. I hourly learne
A Doctrine of Obedience, and would gladly
Looke him i'th Face.
Pro. This Ile report ( deere Lady )
Haue comfort, for I know your plight is pitt'd
Of him that caus'd it .
Pro. You fee how easily she may be surpriz'd : Guard her till Cefar come.
Iras. Royall Queene.
Char. Oh Cleopatra, thou art taken Queene.
Cleo. Quicke, quicke, good hands.
Pro. Hold worthy Lady, hold ;
Doe not your felfe fuch wrong, who are in this
Releu'd, but not betrayed.
Cleo. What of death too that rids our dogs of languifh
Pro. Cleopatra, do not abufe my Maffers bounty, by Th'vndoing of your felfe : Let the World fee
His Noblenefe well act't, which your death
Will neuer let come forth.
Cleo. Where art thou Death ?
Come hither come ; Come, come, and take a Queene
Worth many Babes and Beggers.
Pro. Oh temperance Lady.
Cleo. Sir, I will eate no meste, Ile not drinke fir,
If idle talke will once bee necessary
Ile not sleepe neither. This mortall houfe Ile ruine,
Do Cefar what he can. Know fir, that I
Will not waite pinnion'd at your Maffers Court,
Nor once be chaftic'd with the fober eye
Of dull Otho. Shall they hoyft me vp,
And fhw me to the flouthing Varlotarie
Of cenfuring Rome ? Rather a ditch in Egypt.
Be gentle graue vnto me, rather on Nulyus muddle
Lay me flanke-nak'd, and let the water-Flies
Blow me into abhorring ; rather make
My Countries high pyramids my Gibbet,
And hang me vp in Chaine.
Pro. You do extend
These thoughts of horror further then you shall Finde caufe in Cefar . Enter Dolabella.
Dol. Proculeus,
What thou haft done, thy Mafter Cefar knowes,
And he hath fent for thee : for the Queene,
Ie take her to my Guard.
Pro. So Dolabella,
It shall content me beft : Be gentle to her,
To Cefar I will fpake, what you shall pleafe,
If you'll impoy me to him . Exit Proculeus
Cleo. Say, I would dy.
Dol. Moft Noble Emprefs, you haue heard of me.
Cleo. I cannot tell.
Dol. Affuredly you know me.
Cleo. No matter fir, what I haue heard or knowne:
You laugh when Boyes or Women tell their Dreams,
Is't not your tricke ?
Dol. I underland not, Madam.
Cleo. I dreampt there was an Emperor Anthony.
Oh fuch another sleepe, that I might fee
But fuch another man.
Dol. If it might pleafe ye.
Cleo. His face was as the Heau'ns, and therein flucke
A Sunne and Moone, which kept their courfe, & lighted
The little o'th earth .
Dol. Moft Soueraigne Creature.
Cleo. His legs bras the Ocean, his rear'd arme
Crefted the world : His voyce was propertied
As all the tuned Spheres, and that to Friends:
But when he meant to quail, and shake the Orbe,
He was as ratling Thunder. For his Bounty,
There was no winter in't . An Anthony it was,
That grew the more by reaping : His delights
Were Dolphin-like, they fhw'd his backe aboue
The Element thy luid in : In his Liuer
Walk'd Crownes and Crownets: Realms & Islands were
As plates droppt from his pocket .
Dol. Cleopatra.
Cleo. Thinke you there was, or might be fuch a man
As this I dreampt of ?
Dol. Gentle Madam, no.
Cleo. You Lye vp to the hearing of the Gods :
But if there be, nor euer were one fuch
It's paft the fize of dreaming : Nature wants futte
To vie strange formes with fance, yet t'imagine
An Anthony were Natures peece, 'gainst Fance, Condemning shadowes quite.
Dol. Hear me, good Madam :
Your loffe is as your felfe, great ; and you bear it
As anfwering to the weight, would I might never Ore-take purfu'de faccele : But I do feele
By the reound of yours, a greefe that fuites
My very heart at roote .
Cleo. I thanke you fir :
Know you what Cefar means to do with me ?
Dol. I am loath to tell you what, I would you knew.
Cleo. Nay pray you fir.
Dol. Though he be Honourable.
Cleo. He'll leade me then in Triumph.
Dol. Madam he will, I know't.
Fleuris, Enter Proculeus, Cefar, Gallus, Mecnas, and others of his Trains.
All. Make way there Cefar.
The Tragedie of

Ces. Which is the Queen of Egypt.
Dol. It is the Emperor Madam.

Ces. fly, you shall not kneele:
I pray you rife, rife Egypt.
Cle. Sir, the Gods will haue it thus,
My Master and my Lord I must obey,
Ces. Take to you no hard thoughts,
The Record of what injuries you did vs,
Though written in our field, we shall remember
As things but done by chance.
Cle. Sole Sir oth'World,
I cannot proleft mine owne caufe so well
To make it cleare, but do confesse I haue
Bene laden with like frailties, which before
Haue often sham'd our Sex.

Ces. Cleopatra know,
We will extenuate rather then informe:
If you apply your selfe to our intents,
Which towards you are most gentle, you shall finde
A benefit in this change: but if you feek
To lay on me a Crueltie, by taking
Antonies courfe, you shall bereave your selfe
Of my good purpouses, and put your children
To that deftruction which Ie guard them from,
If thereon you reliev. Ie take my leave.
Cle. And may through all the world: tis yours, & we your Scutcheons, and your signes of Conquest shall Hang in what place you please. Here my good Lord.
Ces. You shal aduise me in all for Cleopatra.
Cle. This is the brefs:e of Money, Plate, & Jewels
I am pooffet of, 'tis exatly valeduc,
Not petty things admitted. Where's Seleucus?
Sele. Heree Madam.
Cle. This is my Treasurer, let him speake (my Lord)
Vpon his perill, that I haue referu'd
To my selfe nothing. Speake the truth Seleucus.
Sele. Madam, I had rather speake my lippes,
Then to my perill speake that which is not.
Cle. What haue I kept backe.
Sele. Enough to purchase what you have made known
Ces. Nay blusht not Cleopatra, I approue
Your Wifedome in the deede.

Cle. See Ces: Oh behold,
How pome is followed: Mine will now be yours,
And should we shift eftates, yours would be mine.
The ingratitude of this Seleucus, does
Even make me wilde. Oh Slate, of no more truft
Then love that's hyr'd? What goeoff thou backe, 'tis but Go backe I warrant thee: but lye catch thine eyes
Though they had wings. Slate, Soule-fife, Villain, Dog,
O rarey base!

Ces. Good Queene, let vs intreat you.

Cle. O Ces: what a woundyng shame is this,
That thou vouchsafing heere to visit me,
Doing the Honour of thy Lordlinesse
To one so meeke, that mine owne Seruant should Parcell the summe of my difgraces, by Addition of his Enuy. Say (good Ces)
That I some Lady triues have referu'd,
Immoment toyes, things of such Dignitie
As we geere moderne Friends withall, and say
Some Noble token I have kept apart
For Luiska and Ofelia, to induce
Their mediation, must I be vnfolded
With one that I haue bred: The Gods! it fmites me
Beneath the fall I haue. Prythee go hence,

Or I shall shew the Cynder of my spirits
Through th'ashes of my chance: Wer't thou a man,
Thou would't haue mercy on me.

Ces. Forbeare Seleucus.
Cle. Be it known, that we the greatest are mil-thought
For things that others do: and when we fall,
We answer others merits, in our name
Are therefore to be pitied.

Ces. Cleopatra.
Not what you have referu'd, nor what acknowledg'd
Put we 'troll of Conquest: till bee't yours,
Beflow it at your pleafure, and beleue
Ces. no Merchant, to make prize with you
Of things that Merchants fold. Therefore be cheerd,'d,
Make not your thoughts your prisons: No deere Queen,
For we intend fo to difpose you, as
Your felfe shall glue vs counfell: Feede, and sleepe:
Our care and pitty is fo much vpon you,
That we remaine your Friend, and fo adieu.

Cle. My Master, and my Lord.

Cle. Exeunt Ces. and his Traine.

Cle. He words our Gyrles, he words me,
That I should not be Noble to my felse.
But hearde thee Charmian.
Iras. Finifh good Lady, the bright day is done,
And we are for the darke.

Cle. Hye thee againe,
I haue spoke already, and it is prouided,
Go put it to the hafe.

Cle. Madam, I will,

Enter Dolabella.
Dol. Where's the Queene?
Cle. Behold fir.

Dol. Dolabella.

Dol. Madam, as thereto sworn, by your command
(Which my love makes Religion to obey)
I tell you this: Ces: through Syria
Intends his iourney, and within three days,
You with your Children will he send before,
Make your beft vfe of this. I haue perform'd
Your pleafure, and my promise.

Dol. Dolabella, I shall remaine your debtor.

Dol. I your Seruant:
Adieu good Queene, I must attend on Ces.

Cle. Farewell, and thankes.

Now Iras, what think it thou?
Thou, an Egyptian Puppet shall be shewne
In Rome aswell as I: Mechanicke Slate
With greaze Aprons, Rules, and Hammers shall Vplift vs to the view. In their thicke breathes,
Ranke of groffe dyet, shall we be encloewed,
And forc'd to drink their vapour.

Iras. The Gods forbid.

Cle. Nay, 'tis most certaine Iras: fawcie Lictors
Will catch at vs like Strumpets, and fcall Rimer
Ballads vs out a Tune. The quickie Comedians
Extemporally will ffrage vs, and perfent
Our Alexandrian Revels: Antony
Shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall fee
Some fiqueaking Cleopatra Boy my greatneffe
I'th'poore of a Whore.

Iras. O the good Gods!

Cle. Nay that's certaine.

Iras. He never see's? for I am sure mine Nailes
Are stronger then mine eyes.

Cle.
Anthony and Cleopatra.

367

Cleo. Why that's the way to foole their preparation,
And to conquer their most absurd intents. Enter Charmian.

Now Charmian. Shew me my Women like a Queene: Go fetch
My beft Attyres. I am againe for Citrus,
To meete Mark Antony. Sirra Iras, go
(Now Noble Charmian, wee'll dispatch indeede,) And when thou haft done this, car, Ile giue thee leave
To play till Doomefly: bring our Crowne, and all.
A noise within.

Wherefore's this noise? Enter a Guardsman.

Gardf. Heere is a rurall Fellow,
That will not be deny'd your Highness presence,
He brings you Figgex.

Cleo. Let him come in. Exit Guardsman.

What poore an Instrument
May do a Noble deeds: he brings me liberty:
My Resolution plac'd, and I have nothing
Of woman in me: Now from head to foote
I am Marble confiant: now the fleeting Moone
No Planet is of mine.

Enter Guardsman, and Clowne.

Guardf. This is the man.

Haft thou the pretty worme of Nylus there,
That kills and paines not?

Clew. Truly I haue him: but I would not be the partie that should defire you to touch him, for his bying is immortal: those that doe dye of it, doe fomde or neuer recouer.

Cleo. Rememberst thou any that have dyed on't?

Clew. Very many, men and women too. I heard of one of them no longer then yesterday, a very honest woman, but something gien to dye, as a woman should not do,
but in the way of honesty, how they dyed of the bying of it, what paine she felt: Truly, she makes a very good report o'th worme: but he that wil beleue all that they say, shall never be faueed by halfe that they do: but this is most fallable, the Worme's an odde Worme.

Cleo. Get thee hence, farewell.

Clew. I wiue you all joye of the Worme.

Cleo. Farewell.

Clew. You must thinke this (looke you), that the Worme will do his kinde.

Cleo. I, I, farewell.

Clew. Looke you, the Worme is not to bee trusted, but in the keeping of wise people: for indeede, there is no goodneffe in the Worme.

Cleo. Take thou no care, it shall be heeded.

Clew. Very good: giue it nothing I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding.

Cleo. Will it eate me?

Clew. You must not thinke I am fo simple, but I know the diuell himselfe will not eate a woman: I know, that a woman is a dish for the Gods, if the diuell dresse her not. But truly, these fame whorfon diuets doe the Gods great harme in their women: for in every tenne that they make, the diuets marre fiue.

Cleo. Well, get thee gone, farewell.

Clew. Yes fortho: I wish you joye o'th worme. Exit

Cleo. Glieue me my Robe, put on my Crowne, I haue Immortall longings in me. Now no more
The joyce of Egyptes Grape shall moylt this lip.
Yare, yare, good Iras; quicke: Me thinkeis I heare

Anthony call: I see him rowse himselfe
To praine my Noble Act. I heare him mock
The lucke of Cefar, which the Gods giue men
To execue their after wrath. Husband, I come:
Now to that name, my Courage proue my Title.
I am Fire, and Ayre; my other Elements
I giue to bafer life. So, haue you done?
Come then, and take the laft warmth of my Lippes.
Farewell kinde Charmian, Iras, long farewell.
Haue I the Afphone in my lippes? Doft fall?
If thou, and Naturre can fo gently part,
The stroke of death is as a Louers pinch,
Which hurs, and is defir'd. Doft thou lye still?
If thou vanihieth, thou tell'st it the world,
It is not worth leaue-taking.

Char. Diiflourth thickly cload, & Raine, that I may Fix
The Gods themselfes do weep.

Cleo. This proues me bafe:
If she first meete the Curled Anthony,
He'el make demand of her, and spend that kiffe
Which is my heaven to haue. Come thou mortal wretch,
With thy sharpe teeth this knot intrinicate,
Of life at once vnlye: Poore venomous Foole,
Be angry, and dispatch. Oh could'lt thou speake,
That I might heare thee call great Cesar Asse, vnpoliced.

Char. Oh Easterner Starre.

Cleo. Peace, peace:
Doft thou not fee my Baby at my breat,
That fictures the Nurse aleepe.

Char. O breake! O breake!

Cleo. As sweet as Balme, as soft as Ayre, as gentle.
O Anthony! Nay I will take thee too.

What should I fay——-

Dyes.

Char. In this wilde World! So fare thee well:
Now boaste thee Death, in thy poiffeion lies
A Laifie vnamparlell'd. Downie Windowes cloze,
And golden Phoebus, neuer be beheld
Of eyes againe fo Royall: your Crownes away,
Ile mend it, and then play—— Enter the Guard ruffling in, and Dolabella.

1 Guard. Where's the Queene?

Char. Speake softly, wake her not.

1 Cefar hath fent

Char. Too fow a Meiffenger.

Oh come at pace, dispatch, I partly feele thee.

1 Approach hoo,

All's not well: Cesar's beguiled.
2 There's Dolabella fent from Cesar: call him.

1 What worke is heere Charmian?

Is this well done?

Char. It is well done, and fitting for a Princeffe
Defended of fo many Royall Kings.
Ah Soul'dier. Charmian dies.

Enter Dolabella.

Dol. How goes it heere?

2 Guard. All dead.

Dol. Cefar, thy thoughts

Touch their effects in this: Thy felue art comming
To fee perform'd the dreaded Act which thou
So fowght't to hinder.

Enter Cefar and all his Traine, marching.

All. A way there, a way for Cefar.

3 Z.
The Tragedie of Anthony and Cleopatra.

Dol. Oh sir, you are too sure an Augurer:
That you did feare, is done.
Cæsar. Braueft at the laft,
She loued at our purpofes, and being Royall
Tooke her owne way: the manner of their deaths,
I do not fee them bleede.
Dol. Who was laft with them?
1. Guard. A simple Countryman, that brought hir Figs:
This was his Basket.
Cæsar. Poyfon'd then.
1. Guard. Oh Cæfar:
This Charman liu'd but now, the flood and spake:
I found her trimming vp the Diadem;
On her dead Miftris tremblingly the flood,
And on the sodeaine dropt.
Cæsar. Oh Noble weakennesse:
If they had swallow'd poyfon, 'twould appeare
By externall swelling: but she lookest like sleepe,
As she would catch another Anthony
In her strong toyle of Grace.

Dol. Heere on her breft,
There is a vent of Bloud, and something blowne,
The like is on her Arme.
1. Guard. This is an Afpickes traile,
And theye Figge-leaues haue flime vpon them, fuch
As th'Afpicke leaues vpon the Caues of Nyle.
Cæsar. Moft probable
That fo she dyed: for her Physitian tels mee
She hath purfu'de Conclufions infinite
Of eafe ways to dye. Take vp her bed,
And beare her Women from the Monument,
She shall be buried by her Anthony.
No Graue vpon the earth shall clip in it
A payre fo famous: high euentes as thefe
Strike thofe that make them: and their Story is No leffe in pity, then his Glory which Brought them to be lamented. Our Army shall
In solemnne shew, attend this Funerall,
And then to Rome. Come Dolabelia, fee
High Order, in this great Sollemnity. Exeunt omnes.

FINIS.
Enter two Gentlemen.

1. Gent.

Ou do not meet a man but Frownes.
Our bloods no more obey the Heauens
Then our Courtesys:
Still seeme, as do's the Kings.
2. Gent. But what's the matter?
1. His daughter, and the heire of kinckdome (whom
He purpos'd to his wifes sole Sonne, a Widdow
That late he married) hath referr'd her sselfe
Vnto a poore, but worthy Gentleman: She's wedded,
Her Husband banish'd; she imprison'd, all
Is outward sorrow, though I thinke the King
Be touch'd at very heart.
2. None but the King?
1. He that hath loft her too: so is the Queene,
That most defir'd the Match. But not a Courtier,
Although they wear their faces to the bent
Of the Kings lookes, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowle at.
2. And why so?
1. He that hath mis'd the Princeffe, is a thing
Too bad, for bad report: and he that hath her,
(I meane, that married her, alacke good man,
And therefore banish'd) is a Creature, fuch,
As to feeke through the Regions of the Earth
For one, his like; there would be something failing
In him, that should compare. I do not thinke,
So faire an Outward, and fuch flufhe Within Endowes a man, but hee.
2. You speake him faire.
1. I do extend him (Sir) within himselfe,
Crush him together, rather then vnfold
His meare deify.
2. What's his name, and Birth?
1. I cannot delue him to the roote: His Father
Was call'd Sicillius, who did loyne his Honor
Against the Romanes, with Caffidulan,
But had his Titles by Tenamitt, whom
He ferve'd with Glory, and admir'd Succeffe:
So gain'd the Sur-addition, Leonatus.
And had (besides this Gentleman in question)
Two other Sonnes, who in the Warses o'th' time
Dy'de with their Swords in hand. For which, their Father
Then old, and fond of yffe, tooke fuch forrow
That he quit Being: and his gentle Lady

Bigge of this Gentleman (our Theame) deceaft
As he was borne. The King he takes the Babe
To his proteCtion, cal's him Posthumus Leonatus,
Breedes him, and makes him of his Bed-chamber,
Puts to him all the Learnings that his time
Could make him the reciever of, which he tooke
As we do aye, fast as 'twas miniftred,
And in's Spring, became a Haruest: Liu'd in Court
(Which rare it is to do) most prais'd, most lou'd,
A fample to the youngete: to th'more Mature,
A glaffe that feated them: and to the grauer,
A Childe that guided Dotards. To his Misfiris,
(For whom he now is banish'd) her owne price
Proclaims how the efteeem'd him; and his Vertue
By her electio may be truly read, what kind of man he is.
2. I honor him, euen out of your report.
But pray you tell me, is the sole childe to'th'King?
1. His onely childe:
He had two Sonnes (if this be worth your hearing, Marke it) the eldest of them, at three yeares old
I'th'weathering clothes, the other from their Nurfery
Were rolne, and to this howre, no gheffe in knowledge
Which way they went.
2. How long is this ago?
1. Some twenty yeares.
2. That a Kings Children should be fo conuey'd,
So flackely guarded, and the fearch fo slow
That could not trace them.
1. Howfoere, 'tis strange,
Or that the negligence may well be laugh'd at:
Yet is it true Sir.
2. I do well belewe you.
1. We must forbear. Heere comes the Gentleman,
The Queene, and Princeffe.

Scena Secunda.

Enter the Queene, Posthumus, and Imogen.

Qg. No, be affur'd you shall not finde me(Daughter)
After the flander of moft Step-Mothers,
Euill-ey'd vnto you. You're my Prifoner, but
Your Gaoler shall deliever you the keyes
That locke vp your restraint. For you Poephilus,
So soone as I can win th'oFFended King,
I will be knowne your Advocate; marry yet
The fire of Rage is in him, and 'twere good
You lea.vn to his Sentence, with what patience
Your wisfome may informe you.
Poef. *Please your Highneffe,
I will from hence to day.
Qu. You know the perill:
Ile fetch a turne about the Garden, pittyng
The pangs of barr'd Affections, though the King
Hath charg'd you shoul'd not speake together.
Imo. O difsembling Curtefe! How fine this Tyrant
Can tickle where she wounds? My deereft Husband,
I somethings fear my Fathers wrath, but nothing
(Alwayes refer'd my holy duty) what
His rage can do on me. You muft be gone,
And I shall heere abide the houresly fhot
Of angry eyes: not comforted to liue,
But that there is this Iewell in the world,
That I may fee again.
Poef. My Queene, my Miftris:
O Lady, weep no more, leaft I glue caufe
To be suspected of more tendernesse
Then doth become a man. I will remainge
The loyall't husband, that did ere plight troth.
My residence in Rome, at one Florio's,
Who, to my Father was a Friend, to me
Knowne but by Letter; thither write (my Queene)
And with mine eyes, Ile drinke the words you fende,
Though Inke be made of Gall.
Enter Queene.
Qu. Be briefe, I pray you:
If the King come, I shall incurre, I know not
How much of his displeasure: yet Ile moue him
To walke this way: I neuer do him wrong,
But he do's buy my Inuries, to be Friends:
Payes deere for my offences.
Poef. Should we be taking leave
As long a terme as yet we haue to liue,
The loathneffe to depart, would grow: Adieu.
Imo. Nay, stay a little:
Were you but riding forth to ayre your felse,
Such parting were too petty. Looke heere (Loue)
This Diamond was my Mothers; take it (Heart)
But keepe it till you woo another Wife,
When Imogen is dead.
Poef. How, how? Another?
You gentle Gods, give me but this I haue,
And fare vp my embracements from a next,
With bonds of death. Remainge, remainge thou heere,
While fenfe can keepe it on: And sweeteft, faireft,
As I (my poore felse) did exchange for you
To your fo infinite lofie; fo in our trifles
I still winne of you. For my fake weare this,
It is a Manacle of Loue, Ile place it
Upon this fayret Prifoner.
Imo. O the Gods!
When shall we fee again?
Enter Cymbeline, and Lords.
Poef. Alacke, the King.
Cym. Thou bafeft thing, auoyd hence, from my fight:
If after this command thou fraught the Court
With thy vwhortheffe, thou dyelf. Away,
Thou'rt poifon to my blood.
Poef. The Gods protect you,
And bleffe the good Remainders of the Court:
I am gone.
Imo. There cannot be a pinch in death
More harpe then this is.
Cym. O diffoylall thing,
That should'ft repayre my youth, thou heap'ft
A yeares age on mee.
Imo. I bafeech you Sir,
Harme not your felse with your vexion,
I am feneffeffe of your Wrath; a Touch more rare
Subdles all pangs, all feares.
Cym. Paff Grace? O obedience?
Imo. Paff hope, and in difpaire, that way paff Grace.
Cym. That migh't haue had
The fole Sonne of my Queene.
Imo. O bleffed, that I might not: I chose an Eagle,
And did auoyd a Futtocke.
Cym. Thou took'ft a Begger, would'ft haue made my Throne, a Seat for benefce.
Imo. No, I rather added a Juftrife to it.
Cym. O thou vilde one!
Imo. Sir,
It is your fault that I haue lou'd Poephilus:
You bred him as my Play-fellow, and he is
A man, worth any woman: Ouer-buyes mee
Almost the fumme he payes.
Cym. What? art thou mad?
Imo. Almoft Sir: Heauen refotre me: would I were A Neat-heards Daughter, and my Leonatus
Our Neighbour-Shepheards Sonne.
Enter Queene.
Cym. Thou foolifh thing;
They were againe together: you haue done
Not after our command. Away with her,
And pen her vp.
Qu. Befeech your patience: Peace
Deere Lady daughter, peace. Sweet Soueraigne,
Leave vs to our felues, and make your felfe some comfort
Out of your beft aduice.
Cym. Nay, let her languifh
A drop of blood a day, and being aged
Dye of this Folly.
Enter Pidanio.
Qu. Fye, you muft gleue way:
Heere is your Servant. How now Sir? What newes?
Pifa. My Lord your Sonne, drew on my Malter.
Qu. Hah?
No harme I truft is done?
Pifa. There might haue beene,
But that my Mafter rather plaide, then fought,
And had no helpe of Anger: they were parted
By Gentlemen, at hand.
Qu. I am very glad on't.
Imo. Your Son's my Fathers friend, he takes his part
To draw upon an Exile. O braue Sir,
I would they were in Affrick both together,
My felse by with a Needle, that I might pricke
The goer backe. Why came you from your Mafter?
Pifa. On his command: he would not fiffer mee
To bring him to the Haueun: left thef Notes
Of what commands I shou'd be fubjeft too,
When pleas'd you to employ me.
Qu. This hath beene
Your faithfull Servant: I dare lay mine Honour
He will remainge so.
Pifa. I humbly thanke your Highneffe.
Qu.
Scena Tertia.

Enter Cloten, and two Lords.

1. Sir, I would advise you to shift a Shirt; the Violence of Adtion hath made you reek as a Sacrifice; where ayre comes out, ayre comes in: There's none abroad so wholesome as that you vent.

Clot. If my Shirt were bloody, then to shift it.

Haue I hurt him?

2 No faith: not so much as his patience.

1 Hurt him? His bodie's a passable Carcasse if he bee not hurt. It is a through-fare for Steele if it be not hurt.

2 His Steele was in debt, it went o'th'Backe-side the Towne.

Clot. The Villaine would not stand me.

2 No, but he fled forward still, toward your face.

1 Stand you? you haue Land enough of your owne: But he added to your hauing, gau that some ground.

2 As many Inches, as you have Oceans (Puppies.)

Clot. I would they had not come betwixt us.

2 So would I, till you had measur'd how long a Foole you were upon the ground.

And that shee should loue this Fellow, and refuze mee.

2 If it be a fin to make a true election,she is damn'd.

1 Sir, as I told you always: her Beauty & her Braine go not together. She's a good signe, but I have seen small reflection of her wit.

2 She thines not upon Foolies, least the reflection Should hurt her.

Clot. Come, Ile to my Chamber: would there had beene some hurt done.

2 I wth not fo, vnaile it had bin the fall of an Affe, which is no great hurt.

Clot. You'll go with vs?

1 Ile attend your Lordship.

Clot. Nay come, let's go together.

2 Well my Lord.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Imogen, and Pifanius.

Imo. I would thou grow'st unto the shores o'th'Hauen, And questioned'st every Saile: if he should write, And I not heue it, 'twere a Paper lost

As offer'd mercy is: What was the laft

That he spake to thee?

Pif. It was his Queen, his Queen.

Imo. Then wou'd his Handkerchief?

Pif. And kift it, Madam.

Imo. Senfeleffe Linmen, happier therein then I:
And that was all?

Pif. No Madam: for so long

As he could make me with his eye, or eare,

Diftinguished from others, he did keepe

The Decke, with Gloun, or Hat, or Handkerchief,

Still waving, as the fits and flirres of a mind

Could best express how low his Soule say'd on,

How swift his Ship.

Imo. Thou shoul'dt haue made him,

As little as a Crow, or leffe, ere left

To after-eye him.

Pif. Madam, fo I did.

Imo. I would haue broke mine eye-string's;

Crack'd them, but to looke upon, till the diminution Of space, had pointed him sharpe as my Needle:

Nay, followed him, till he had melted from

The flameclate of a Gnat, to aye, and then

Have turn'd mine eye, and wept. But good Pifanius,

When shall we hear from him.

Pif. Be affer'd Madam,

With his next vantage.

Imo. I did not take my leaue of him, but had

Most pretty things to say: Ere I could tell him

How I would thinkke on him at certaine houres,

Such thoughts, and fuch: Or I could make him sweare,

The Shees of Italy shou'd not betray

MINE Intereft, and his Honour: or haue charg'd him

At the first houre of Morn, at Noon, at Midnight,

T'encounter me with Orifons, for then

I am in Heauen for him: Or ere I could,

Gie him that parting kiffe, which I had fet

Betwixt two charming words, comes in my Father,

And like the Tyrannous breathing of the North,

Shakes all our buds from growing.

Enter a Lady.

La. The Queene (Madam)

Defires your Highnesse Company.

Imo. Tho'f things I bid you do, get them dispatch'd,

I will attend the Queene.

Pif. Madam, I thall.

Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Philario, Iacobino: a Frenchman, a Dutchman, and a Spaniard.

Iacob. Beleeue it Sir, I haue seene him in Britaine: he was then of a Creffent note, expected to prove so worthy, as since he hath beene allowed the name of. But I could then have look'd on him, without the help of Admiration, though the Catalogue of his endowments had bin tabled by his fide, and I to peruse him by Items.

Phil. You spake of him when he was leffe furnish'd, then now hee is, with that which makes him both without, and within.

French. I haue seene him in France: wee had very many there, could behold the Sunne, with as firme eyes as hee.

Iacob. This matter of marrying his Kings Daughter, wherein he must be weighed rather by her valew, then his owne, words him (I doubt not) a great deale from the matter.

French. And then his banishment.

Iacob. I, and the approbation of those that weep this lamentable diuorce vnder her colours, are wonderfully to to extend him, be it but to fortify her judgement, which else an eafe battery might lay flat, for taking a Beggar without lefe quality. But how comes it, he is to fiooerne with you? How creepes acquaintance?

Phil. His Father and I were Souldiers together, to whom I haue bin often bound for no lefe then my life.

Enter Pofthumus.

Here comes the Britaine. Let him be fo entertained a-mongst you, as fuites with Gentlemen of your knowing, to a Stranger of his quality. I befeech you all be better knowne to this Gentleman, whom I commend to you, as a Noble Friend of mine. How Worthy he is, I will leave to appeare hereafter, rather then story him in his owne hearing.

French. Sir, we haue knowne together in Orleans.

Poet. Since when, I haue bin debtor to you for courteys, which I will be euer to pay, and yet pay ftil.

French. Sir, you o're-rate my poore kindniffe, I was glad I did attone my Countryman and you; it had binne pitty you shoule haue beeene put together, with fo mortall a purpofe, as then each bore, vpon importance of fo flight and triall a nature.

Poet. By your pardon, Sir, I was then a young Traveller, rather than'd to go euuen with what I heare, then in my evry action to be guided by others experiences: but vpon my mended judgement (if I offend to fay it is mended) my Quarrell was not altogether flight.

French. Faith yes, to be put to the arbitrement of Swords, and by fuch two, that would by all likelhood have confounded one the other, or haue falne both.

Iacl. Can we with manners, ask what was the difference?

French. Safely, I thinke, 'twas a contention in publicke, which may (without contradiction) fuffer the report. It was much like an argument that fell out laft night, where each of vs fell in praiife of our Country-Miftrefles. This Gentleman, at that time vouching (and vpon warrant of bloody affirmation) his to be more Faire, Vertuous, Wife, Chaffe, Conflant, Qualified, and leffe attemptible then any, the rareft of our Ladies in France.

Iacl. That Lady is not now living; or this Gentleman opinion by this, wore out.

Poet. She holds her Vertue full, and I my mind.

Iacl. You muft not fo farre preferre her, 'fore ours of Italy.

Poet. Being fo farre prouek'd as I was in France: I would abate her nothing, though I profefse my felfe her Adorer, not her Friend.

Iacl. As faire, and as good: a kind of hand in hand comparifion, had beene too much too fare, and too good for any Lady in Britaine: if she went before others. I haue feene as that Diamond of yours out-lufers many I haue beheld, I could not beleeve she excelled many: but I have not feene the moft precious Diamond that is, nor you the Lady.

Poet. I praise'd her, as I ratned her: fo do I my Stone.

Iacl. What do you esteeme it at?

Poet. More then the world enoyes.

Iacl. Either your vnpaeton'd Miftirs is dead, or she's out-price'd by a trine.

Poet. You are mistaken: the one may be folde or given, or if there were wealth enough for the purchaftes, or merite for the guilt. The other is not a thing for fate, and onely the guilt of the Gods.

Iacl. Which the Gods have gien you?

Poet. Which by their Graces I will keepe.

Iacl. You may weare her in title yours; but you know strange Fowle light upon neighbouring Ponds. Your Ring may be folne too, so your brace of vnpriezeable Eftimations, the one is but fraille, and the other Cafeuil. A cunning Thiefs, or a (that way) accomplifh'd Courtieur, would hazard the winning both of firft and laft.

Poet. Your Italy contains none fo accomplifh'd a Courtieur to confine the Honour of my Miftir: if in the holding or loffe of that, you terme her fraille, I do noth-thing doubt you have fure of Those, notwithstanding I feare are not my Ring.

Phil. Let vs leave here, Gentlemen?

Poet. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy Signior I thanke him, makes no stranger of me, we are familiar at firft.

Iacl. With five times fo much concurration, I fould get ground of your faire Miftir; make her go backe, even to the yeilding, had I admittance, and opportunitie to friend.

Poet. No, no.

Iacl. I dare thereupon pawne the moyst of my E-fate, to your Ring, which in my opinion o're-values it something: but I make my wager rather against your Confidence, then her Reputation. And to barre your offence herein to, I durft attempt it againft any Lady in the world.

Poet. You are a great deale abus'd in too bold a perfwation, and I doubt not you fuitaine what y'are worthy of, by your Attempt.

Iacl. What's that?

Poet. A Repulfe though your Attempt (as you call it) deferve morea punishment too.

Pbi. Gentlemen enough of this, it came in too fodainely, let it dye as it was borne, and I pray you be better acquainted.

Iacl. Would I had put my E-fate, and my Neighbours on that approbation of what I have spoke,

Poet. What Lady would you chufe to affaiye?

Iacl. Yours, whom in confiantie you think flandes fo fafe. I will lay you ten thousands Duckets to your Ring, that commend me to the Court where your Lady is, with no more advantage then the opportunity of a fecond conference, and I will bring from thence, that Honor of her, which you imagine fo referu'd.

Poet. I will wage against your Gold, Gold to i t: My Ring I holde deere as my finger, 'tis part of it.

Iacl. You are a Friend, and there in the wifer: if you buy Ladies fiche at a Million a Dram, you cannot prefure it from tainting; but I fee you have some Religion in you, that you feare.

Poet. This is but a custome in your tongue: you beare a grauer purpoze I hope.

Iacl. I am the Mafter of my speachs, and would under-go what's spoken, I fwear.

Poet. Will you? I shall but lend my Diamond till your returne: let there be Covenants drawne between's. My Miftir exceeds in goodneffe, the huggage of your vnworthy thinking. I dare you to this match: heere's my Ring.

Phil. I will have it no lay.

Iacl. By the Gods it is one: if I bring you no sufficient testimony that I have enjoy'd the deereft bodily part of your Miftir: my ten thousand Duckets are your's; so fo is your Diamond too: if I come off, and leave her in such honour as you have truft in; Shee your Iewell, this your Iewell, and my Gold are yours: prouided, I have your commendation, for my more free entertainment.

Pofl. I embrace thee Conditions, let vs have Articles betwixt vs: one by one I fare you shall anfwere, if you make your voyage vpon her, and give me directly to underftand, you have preuauly'd, I am no further your Enemy, thee is not worth our debate. If thee remaine vnder-duc'd, you not making it appeare otherwise: for your ill opinion, and th'effault you have made to her charitie, you shall anfwere me with your Sword.

Iacb. Thy hand, a Covenant: wee will have these things set done by lawfull Counfell, and straight away for Britaine, leaff the Bargaine fhould catch colde, and ferue: I will fetch my Gold, and have our two Wagers recorded.

Exeunt

Scena Sexta.

Enter Queen, Ladies, and Cornelius.

Qu. Whilest yet the dew's on ground, Gather tho' Flowers, Make haife, Who ha's the note of them? Lady. I Madam. Queen. Dispatch. Exit Ladies.

Now Madam Doctor, haue you brought thofe drugges? Cor. Pleafe thy Highnes, I here they are, Madam: But I beftech your Grace, without offence (My Conſcience bids me:ke) wherefore you haue Commanded of me thofe most poſtious Compaunds, Which are the mouoers of a languishing death: But though flow, deadly.

Qu. I wonder, Doctor, Thou ask'd me such a Queſtion: Haue I not bene Thy Pupill long? Haft thou not learn'd me how To make Perfumes? Diftill? Preferve? Yea fo, That our great King himſelfe doth woo me off For my Confequences? Hauning thus farre proceeded, (Vnleffe thou thinke it me diuelfh) is not meete That I did amplifie my judgment in Other Conclusions? I will try the forces Of thofe thy Compounds, on fuch Creatures as We count not worth the hanging (but none humane) To try the vigour of them, and apply Allayments to their Ac, and by them gather Their feueral vertues, and effects. Cor. Your Highneffe Shall from this praféife, but make hard your heart: Beſides, the feeing thofe effects will be Both noſome, and infe]cuous.

Qu. O content thee.

Enter Pifanios.

Here comes a flattering Rafeil, vpon him Will I first worke: He's for his Mafter, And enemy to my Sonne. How now Pifanios? Doctor, your service for this time is ended, Take your owne way.

Cor. I do fufpect you, Madam, But you shall do no harne. Qu. Hearke thee, a word. Cor. I do not like her. She doth thinke she ha's Strange ling'ring poftions: I do know her spirit, And will not truft one of her malice, with A drudge of fuch damn'd Nature. Thofe she ha's, Will fupifie and dull the Senfe a-while, Which firft (perchance) thee're proue on Cats and Dogs, Then afterward vp higher: but there is No danger in what flew of death it makes, More then the locking vp the Spirits a time, To be more freth, renewing. She is fool'd With a moft falfe effe: and I, the truer, So to be falfe with her.

Qu. No further fervice, Doctor, Vntill I fend for thee. Cor. I humbly take my leve. Qu. Weepes the fhill (faift thou?) Dof thou thinke in time She will not quench, and let inftructions enter Where Foily now poetes? Do thou worke: When thou haft bring me word she loues my Sonne, Ile tell thee on the infant, thou art then As great as is thy Mafter: Greater, for His Fortunes all yee fpeecheffe, and his name Is at laft gape: Returne he cannot nor Continue where he is: To shift his being, Is to exchange one misery with another, And every day that comes, comes to decay A dayes worke in him. What haft thou expext To be depender on a thing that leanes? Who cannot be new built, nor ha's no Friends So much, as but to prop him? Thou tak'it vp Thou know'st not what: But take it for thy labour, It is a thing I made, which hath the King Flue times redeem'd from death. I do not know What is more Cordiall. Nay, I prythee take it, It is an earneft of a farther good That I meant to thee. Tell thy Miftris how The cafe fands with her: doo't, as from thy felfe; Think what a chance thou changeft on, but thinke Thou haft thy Miftris still, to boote, my Sonne, Who fhall take notice of thee. Ile moue the King To any shape of thy Preferment, fuch As thou'd defire: and then my felfe, I chefeely, That fet thee on to this defert, am bound To load thy merit richly. Call my women. Exit Pifa. Think on my words. A flye, and confant knawe, Not to be fhak'd: the Agent for his Mafter, And the Remembrancer of her, to hold The hand-faft to her Lord. I haue given him that, Which if he take, shall quite vnpeople her Of Leidgers for her Sweete: and which, the after Except the bend her honor, shall be affur'd To taste of too.

Enter Pifanios, and Ladies.

So, fo: Well done, well done: The Violets, Cowflifles, and the Prime-Frofs Beare to my Clofeft: Fare thee well, Pifanios. Think me on my words. Exit Qu. and Ladies. Pifa. And shall do: But when to my good Lord, I proue vntrue, Ile choake my felfe: there's all Ile do for you. Exit. Scena
Scena Septima.

Enter Imogen alone.

Imo. A Father cruel, and a Stepdame false,
A Foolish Suffer to a Wedded-Lady,
That hath her Husband banish'd: O, that Husband,
My supreme Crown of griefe, and those repeated
Vexations of it. Had I bin Theefe-stole,
As my two Brothers, happy: but most miserable
Is the defires that's glorious. Bleffed be those
How meane so ere, that haue their honest wills,
Which feafons comfort. Who may this be? Fye.

Enter Pifianio, and Iachimo.

Pifia. Madam, a Noble Gentleman of Rome,
Comes from my Lord with Letters.
Iach. Change you, Madam: The Worthy Leonatus is in safety,
And greetes your Highnesse dearly.
Imo. Thanks good Sir,
You're kindly welcome. Iach. All of her, that is out of doore, most rich:
If she be furnish'd with a mind fo rare
She is alone th'Arabian-Bird; and I Haue loft the wager. Boldneffe be my Friend:
Arme me Audacie from head to foote,
Orlike the Parthian I shall flying fight,
Rather direcly fly.
Imogen reads:
He is one of the Noblest, to whose kindnesses I am most infinitely tied. Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your trust.
Leonatus.
So farre I reade aloud.
But even the very middle of my heart Is warm'd by'th'ref, and take it thankfully.
You are as welcome('worthy Sir) as I Haue words to bid you, and shall finde it fo
In all that I can do.
Iach. Thanke's fairest Lady:
What are men mad? Hath Nature given them eyes
To see this vallous, Arch, and the rich Crop
Of Sea and Land, which can disingenuous 'twixt
The fire Orb es above, and the twain'd Stones
Upon the number'd Beach, and can we not Partition make with Spectacles so precious
Twigt faire, and foule?
Imo. What makes your admiration?
Iach. It cannot be i'th'eye: for Apes, and Monkeys
'Twigt two such She's, would chatter this way, and Contemne with mowes the other. Nor i'th'judgment:
For Idiots in this cafe of fauour, would Be wisely defined: Nor i'th'Appetite.
Sutterly to such naete Excellency, oppo'd
Should make defire vomit emptineffe,
Not fo allur'd, to fed.
Imo. What is the matter trow?
Iach. The Cloyed will:
That satiate yet vnfatisfi'd defire, that Tub
Both fill'd and running: Ruening firft the Lambe,
Longs after for the Garbage.
Imo. What, deere Sir,
Thus rap's you? Are you well?

Iach. Thanks Madam, well: Befeech you Sir, Defire my Man's abode, where I did leave him:
He's strange and pecuifi.
Pifia. I was going Sir,
To give him welcome.
Imo. Continues well my Lord?
His health beffeech you.
Iach. Well, Madam.
Imo. Is he difpos'd to mirth? I hope he is.
Iach. Exceeding pleafant: none a stranger there,
So merry, and so gamesome: he is call'd
The Britaine Reueller.
Imo. When he was heere
He did incline to faffness, and oft times
Not knowing why.
Iach. I neuer faw him fad.
There is a Frenchman his Companior, one
An eminent Monfieur, that it feemes much loues
A Gallian-Girle at home. He furnaces
The thicke fighes from him whiles the ily Britaine,
(Your Lord I meane) laughs from's free lungs; cries oh,
Can my fides hold, to think that man who knowes
By Hifory, Report, or his owne proof.
What woman is, yes what she cannot choose
But muft be: will's free houres languifh:
For affured bondage?
Imo. Will my Lord lay fo?
Iach. I Madam, with his eyes in flood; with laughter,
It is a Recreation to be by
And heare him mocke the Frenchman:
But Heauen's knowe some men are much too blame.
Imo. Not he I hope.
Iach. Not he?
But yet Heauen's bounty towards him, might
Be vu'd more thankfully. In himselfe 'tis much;
In you, which I account his beyond all Talents.
While I am bound to wonder, I am bound
To pitty too.
Imo. What do you pitty Sir?
Iach. Two Creatures heartly.
Imo. Am I one Sir?
You looke on me: what rack difcerne you in me
Deferves your pitty?
Iach. Lamentable: what
To hide me from the radiant Sun, and folace
I' th'Dungeon by a Snuffe.
Imo. I pray you Sir,
Deliver with more openneffe your anwieres
To my demands, Why do you pitty me?
Iach. That others do,
( I was about to fay) enjoy your —— but
It is an office of the Gods to venge it,
Not mine to speake on't.
Imo. You do feeme to know
Something of me, or what concerns me; pray you
Since doubting things go ill, often hurts more
Then to be lure they do. For Certainties
Either are palt remedies; or timely knowing,
The remedy then borne. Discouer to me
What both you fipur and flop.
Iach? Had I this checke
To barre my lips vp: this hand, whole touch,
(Whose evey touch) would force the Feelers foule
To 0'th'oth of loyalty. This obiect, which Takes prifoner the wild motion of mine eye,
Fiering it onely heere, fould I (damn'd then)

Slauer.
The Tragedy of Cymbeline.

Slauwer with lippes as common as the styrres That moon in the Capitol: Ioyn egripes, with hands Made hard with hourly filth (filthd as With labour) then by peeping in an eye Bafe and illalicious as the smocke light That's fed with fincking Tallow: it were fit That all the plagues of Hell should at one time Encounter such reuolt.

I. My Lord, I feare
Has forgot Britaine.

II. And himfelfe, not I
Inclin'd to this intelligence, pronounce
The Beggary of his change: but 'tis your Graces That from my muteft Conffence, to my tongue, Charms this report out.

I. Let me heare no more.

II. O dearer Soule: your Caufe doth strike my hart With pitty, that doth make me fickle. A Lady So faire, and fain'd to an Emperie Would make the great'ft King double, to be partner'd With Tomboyes hyr'd, with that felfe exhibition Which your owne Coffers yeld: with difeas'd ventures That play with all Infirmityes for Gold, Which rothevflenee can lend Nature. Such boyl'd fuffe As well might poyfon Poyfon. Be reueng'd, Or the that bore you, was no Queene, and you Recoyle from your great Stocke.

I. Reueng'd:
How shou'd I be reueng'd? If this be true, (As I have fuch a Heart, that both mine cares Muft not in hafte afufe) if it be true, How shou'd I be reueng'd?

II. Should he make me Line like 'Diana's Priet, betwixt cold sheets, Whiles he is varting variable Rampes In your deflight, vpon your purfe: reuenge it. I dedicate my felle to your sweet pleafure, More Noble then that runnagate to your bed, And will continue falt to your Affection, Still clofe, as fure.

I. What how, Pifianio?

II. Let me my fervice tender on your lippes.

I. Away. I do condemne mine cares, that haue So long attended thee. If thou wert Honourable Thou wou'dt haue told this tale for Vertue, not For such an end thou feek'ft, as bafe,as strange: Thou wroug't a Gentleman, who is as fure From thy report, as thou from Honor: and Solicites heere a Lady, that delightes Thee, and the Diuell alike. What how, Pifianio? The King my Father fhall be made acquainted Of thy Affault: if he fhall thinke it fit, A Lawye Stranger in his Court, to Mart As in a Romify Stew, and to expound His beaftly minde to vs; he hath a Court He little cares for, and a Daughter, who He not refpects at all. What how, Pifianio?

II. O happy Leonatus I may fay, The credit that thy Lady hath of thee Deferves thy truft, and thy moft perfect goodneffe Her affur'd credit, Blesfed lieu you long, A Lady to the worthiefi Sire, that euer Country call'd his; and you his Mitbris, onely For the moft worthieft fit. Give me your pardon, I haue spoke this to know if your Affiance Were deeply rooted, and fhall make your Lord,

That which he is, new o're: And he is one The truest manner'd: fuch a holy Witch, That he enchant Societies into him: Halfe all men hearts are his.

I. You make amends.

II. He fits 'mongst men, like a defended God; He hath a kinde of Honor fets him off, More then a mortall feeming. Be not angrie (Mech ftong Princeffe) that I haue adventur'd To try your taking of a falle report, which hath Honour'd with confirnation your great Judgement, In the election of a Sir, fo rare, Which you know, cannot erre. The loue I bear him, Made me to fan you thus, but the Gods made you (Unlike all others) fhaaffeullie. Pray your pardon.

I. All's well Sir: Take my powre in'th Court for yours.

II. Some dozen Romanes of vs, and your Lord (The beft Feather of our wing) have mingled summes To buy a Prefent for the Emperor:

I. Which I (the Faftor for the reft) haue done In France: 'tis Plate of rare dewe, and Jewels Of rich, and exquifie forma, their valewes great, And I am something curious, being strange To haue them in safe fowage: May it please you To take them in protection.

I. Willingly:

II. And pawnne mine Honor for their safety, fince My Lord hath interef in them, I will keepe them In my Bed-chamber.

I. They are in a Trunke

II. Attended by my men: I will make bold To fend them to you, onely for this night:

I. I muft abord to morrow.

II. O no, no.

I. Yes I befeech: or I shall fhort my word By length'nig my returme, From Gallia, I croft the Seas on purpofe, and on promise To fee your Grace.

I. I thanke you for your pains:

II. But not away to morrow.

I. I muft Madam,

II. Therefore I fhall befeech you, if you pleafe To greet your Lord with writing, doo't to night, I haue out-flood my time, which is material To th'tender of our Prefent.

I. I will write:

II. Send your Trunke to me, it fhall fafe be kept, And truely yeelded you: you're very welcome.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Clutter, and the two Lords.

Clot. Was there euer man had fuch lucke? when I kit the Jacke vpon an vp-caft, to be hit away? I had a hon- dred pound on't: and then a whorfon Jacke-an-Apes, must.
must take me vp for swearing, as if I borrowed mine
oathes of him, and might not spend them at my pleasure.
1. What got he by that? you have broke his pate with your Bowlie.
2. If his wit had bin like him that broke it: it would have run all out.
Clot. When a Gentleman is dispa’d to swear: it is not for any standers by to curtail his oathes. Ha?
2. No my Lord; nor crop the cares of them.
Clot. Whorson dog: I gave him satisfaction: would he had bin one of my Ranke.
2. To have smelt’d like a Foulle.
Clot. I am not vexed more at any thing in th’earth: a pox on’t. I had rather not be fo Noble as I am: they dare not fight with me, because of the Queenne my Mother: every Jacke-Slaue hath his belly full of Fighting, and I must go vp and downe like a Cock, that no body can match.
2. You are Cocke and Capon too, and you crow
Cock, with your combe on.
Clot. Sayeft thou?
2. It is not fit you Lordship shou’d undertake every Companione, when you give offence too.
Clot. No, I know that: but it is fit I should commit offence to my inferiors.
2. I, it is fit for your Lordship onely.
Clot. Why so I say.
1. Did you heere of a Stranger that’s come to Court night?
Clot. A Stranger, and I not know on’t?
2. He’s a strange Fellow himselfe, and knowes it not.
1. There’s an Italian come, and ‘tis thought one of Leonatus Friends.
Clot. Leonatus? A banish’d Rascall; and he’s another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this Stranger?
1. One of your Lordships Pages.
Clot. Is it fit I went to looke upon him? Is there no decoration in’t?
2. You cannot derogate my Lord.
Clot. Not easily I think.
2. You are a Foulle granted, therefore your Iffues being foolish do not derogate.
Clot. Come, Ile go see this Italian: what I have loft to day at Bowles, Ile winne to night of him. Come: go.
2. Ile attend your Lordship.
That such a craftie Diuell as is his Mother
Should yeild the world this Affe: A Woman, that Beares all downe with her Braine, and this her Sonne,
Cannot take two from twenty for his heart,
And leave eightenee. Alas poore Princeffe,
Thou diuine Imogen, what thou endure’st,
Betwixt a Father by thy Step-dame govern’d,
A Mother hourly couring plots: A Wooer,
More haitfull then the foule expilusion is
Of thy deere Husband. Then that horrid Aft
Of the duorace, heel mak the Heauens hold firme
The walls of thy deere Honours, Keep ye vnshak’d
That Temple thy faire mind, that thou maist stand
T’enioy thy banish’d Lord: and this great Land. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Imogen, in her Bed, and a Lady.
Imo. Who’s there? My woman: Helene?
La. Please you Madam.
Imo. What hour is it?

Lady. Almost midnight, Madam.
Imo. I have read three hours then:
Mine eyes are weake,
Fold downe the leafe where I have left: to bed.
Take not away the Taper, leave it burning:
And if thou canst awake by foure o’th’clock,
I prythee call me. Sleepe hath ceiz’d me wholly.
To your protection I commend me, Gods,
From Fayries, and the Tempers of the night,
Guard me befleeche yee.

Sleepes.

Ichinos from the Trunk.

Iach. The Crickets singing, and mans ore-labor’d senfe Repaires it selfe by rest: Our Tarquine thus
Did softly presse the Ruffes, ere he waken’d
The Chafftie he wounded. Cytberia,
How brauely thou becon’t thy Bedfreh Lilly,
And whiter then the Sheeetes: that I might touch,
But kiffe, one kiffe. Rubies vnparagon’d,
How deereely they do’t: ’Tis her breathing that Perfumes the Chamber thus: the Flame o’th’Taper
Bowes toward her, and would vnder-peep her lids.
To see the cloathed Lights, now Canopied
Vnder those windowes, White and Azure lac’d
With Blew of Heauens owne tinct. But my defigne.
To note the Chamber, I will write all downe,
Such, and such pictures: There the window, fuch
Th’adornment of her Bed; the Arras, Figures,
Why fuch, and such: and the Contents o’th’Story.
Ah, but some naturall notes about her Body,
Aboue ten thousand meaner Moueables
Would tettifie, t’enrich mine Inuentorie.
O sleepe, thou Ape of death, lye dull upon her,
And be her Sene but as a Monument,
Thus in a Chappell liyng. Come off, come off;
As flippery as the Gordian-knot was hard.
’Tis mine, and this will witnesse outwardly,
As strongly as the Confidence do’s within:
To th’madding of her Lord. On her left brest
A mole Cinque-spotte: Like the Crimon drops
I’th’bottome of a Cowflipple. Here’s a Voucher,
Stronger then euer Law could make; this Secret
Will force him thinke I have pick’d the lock, and tane
The trefasure of her Honour. No more: to what end?
Why should I write this downe, that’s riueted,
Screw’d to my memorie. She hath bin reading late,
The Tale of Tarues, heere the leaves his turn’d downe
Where Phiomole gave vp. I have enough,
To th’Truncke againe, and shut the spring of it.
Swift, swift, you Dragons of the night, that dawning
May beare the Rauens eye: I lodge in fear,
Though this a heauently Angell: hell is here.

Clockt strike

One, two, three: time, time.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Clotten, and Lords.

1. Your Lordship is the most patient man in loffe, the most coldeft that euer turn’d vp Ace.
Clot. It would make any man cold to loffe.
2. But not every man patient after the noble temper of your Lordship: You are most hot, and furious when you winne.

Clot.
Winning will put any man into courageous: if I could get this foolish Imogen, I should have Gold enough: it's almofit morning, is't not?

1 Day, my Lord.
Cloth. I would this Muficke would come: I am aduised to give her Mufick a mornings, they say it will penetrate.

Enter Muficians.

Come on, tune: If you can penetrate her with your fingering, fo: we'll try with tongue too: if none will do, let her remaine: but Ie neuer give o're. First, a very excellent good concocted thing; after a wonderful sweet aire, with admirable rich words to it, and then let her confider.

SONG.

Hearke, hearke, the Larke at Heauens gate sings,
and Phebus gins arife,
His Steeds to water at tbose Springs
on chalice'd Flowres that iese:
And winking Mary-buds begin to ope their Golden eyes
With every thing that pretty is, my Lady sweet arife:
Arife, arife.

So, get you gone: if this pen trate, I will consider your Mufick the better: if it do not, it is a voyce in her ears which Horfe-haires, and Calue-guts, nor the voyce of vnpanied Eunuch to boot, can neuer amed.

Enter Cymbaline, and Queene.

2 Heere comes the King.
Cloth. I am glad I was vp fo late, for that's the reason
I was vp fo early: he cannot choos but take this Service I have done, fatherly. Good morrow to your Maiefty, and to my gracious Mother.

CYM. Attend you here the doore of our stern daughter
Will she not forth?

Cloth. I have aflay'd her with Mufickes, but she vouch-safes no notice.

Cym. The Exile of her Minion is too new,
She hath not yet forgot him, some more time.
Mush wearie the print of his remembrance on't,
And then she's yours.

Py. You are moft bound to'th'King,
Who let's go by no vantages, that may
Preferve you to his daughter: Frame your selfe
To orderly solicite, and be friended
With aptness of the season: make denials
Encrase your Services: fo seeme, as if You were inspir'd to do those duties which
You tender to her: that you in all obey her,
Sawe when command to your diuision tends,
And therein you be friendes.

Maj. So like you (Sir) Ambassadors from Rome;
The one is Caia Luctus.

Cym. A worthy Fellow,
Albeit he comes on angry purpose now;
But that's no fault of his: we must receyve him
According to the Honor of his Sender,
And towards himselfe, his goodnesse fore-spent on vs
We must extend our notice: Our deere Sonne,
When you have gluem good morning to your Miftris,
Attend the Queene, and vs, we shall have neede
T'employ you towards this Romane.

Come our Queene.

Exeunt.

Cloth. If she be vp, Ile speake with her: if not Let her lye still, and dreame: by your leave hoa,
I know her women are about her: what

If I do line one of their hands, 'tis Gold
Which buyes admittance (oft it dore) yes, and makes Diana's Rangers falle themfelles, yeild vp
Their Deere to thil'and o'th'Stealer: and 'tis Gold
Which makes the True-man kill'd, and faues the Theefe:
Nay, sometime hangs both Theefe, and True-man: what Can it not do, and vndoo I will make
One of her women Lawyer to me, for
I yet not vnderstand the cafe my felfe.

By your leae.

Knockes.

Enter a Lady.

La. Who's there that knockes?

Cloth. A Gentleman.

La. No more.
Cloth. Yes, and a Gentlewomans Sonne.

La. That's more
Then some whole Taylors are as deere as yours,
Can iuftly booft of: what's your Lordships pleasure?

Cloth. Your Ladies perfon, is she ready?

La. I, to keepe her Chamber.
Cloth. There is Gold for you,
Sell me your good report.

La. How, my good name? or to report of you
What I shall thinke is good. The Princeffe.

Enter Imogen.

Cloth. Good morrow faireft, Sifter your sweet hand.

Imo. Good morrow Sir, you lay out too much paines
For purchaseing but trouble: the thankes I give,
Is telling you that I am poore of thankes,
And scarce can spare them.

Cloth. Still I fware I love you.

Imo. If you but faid fo, 'twere as deepe with me:
If you fware ftil, your recompence is ftil
That I regard it not.

Cloth. This is no answere.

Imo. But that you fhall not fay, I yeild being afent,
I would not fpeeke. I pray you fpare me, 'faith
I fhall vnfold equalr difcourtefe
To your beft kindueffe : one of your great knowing
Should learnne (being taught) forbearance.

To leave you in your madness, 'twere my fin,
I will not.

Imo. Folees are not mad Folkes.

Cloth. Do you call me Folee?

Imo. As I am mad, I do:
If you'll be patient, Ie no more be mad,
That cures vs both. I am much forry (Sir)!
You put me to forget a Ladies manners
By being fo verbal: and learnne now, for all,
That I which know my heart, do heere pronoune
By th'very truth of it, I care not for you,
And am fo neere the lacke of Charitie
To accufe my felfe, I hate you: which I had rather
You felt, then make't my boffe.

Cloth. You finne againft

Obedience, which you owe your Father, for
The Contraft you pretend with that base Wretch,
One, bred of Almes, and fodder'd with cold dishes,
With scrafs o'th'Court: It is no Contraft, none;
And though it be allowed in meaner parties
(Yet who then be more meane) to knit their foules
(On whom there is no more dependance
But Brats and Beggery) in felfe-fugur'd knot,
Yet you are curb'd from that enlargement, by

The
The Tragedy of Cymbeline.

The consequent oth' Crowne, and must not, foyle
The precious note of it; with a base Slaue,
A Hiding for a Lirorfe, a Squires Cloth,
A. Pantle, not so eminent.

Imo. Prophane Fellow:
Wert thou the Sonne of Jupiter, and no more,
But what thou art beside: thou wert' too base,
To be his Groome: thou wert' dignified enough
Even to the point of Ennie. If 'tware made
Comparative for your Vertues, to be fill'd
The vnder Hangman of his Kingdome; and hated
For being prefer'd so well.

Cloth. The South-Fog rot him.

Imo. He never can meete more mishance, then come
To be but nam'd of thee. His mean't Garment
That euer hath but clipt his body; is dearer
In my respect, then all the Heires aboue thee,
Were they all made such men: How now Pifanio?

Enter Pifanio.

Cloth. His Garments? Now the dullest.

Imo. To Dorothy my woman hie thee prefently.

Cloth. His Garment?

* Imo. I am delighted with a Foole,
Frighted, and angred worfe: Go bid my woman
Search for a Jewell, that too casually
Hath left mine Arme: it was thy Mafter. Shrew me
If I would loose it for a Reuenue,
Of any Kings in Europe. I do think,
I faw this morning: Confident I am.
Laft night 'twas on mine Arme; i kifs'd it,
I hope it be not gone, to tell my Lord
That I kiffe aught but he.

Pif. 'Twill not be loft.

Imo. I hope fo: go and search.

Cloth. You haue abus'd me:
His meanest Garment?

Imo. I, I gud to Sir,
If you will make 't an Action, call witnesse to't.

Cloth. I will enforse your Father.

Imo. Your Mother too:
She's my good Lady; and will conclude, I hope
But the worste of me. So I leave you Sir,
To th'worst of discontent.

Cloth. Ile bereueeng'd:

His mean't Garment? Well.

Hee'le grant the Tribute; send th' Arrerages,
Or looke vpon our Romania, whose remembrance
Is yet fresh in their griefe.

Poif. I do beleue
(Statif though I am none, nor like to be)
That this will proove a Warre; and you hall heare
The Legion now in Gallia, sooner landed
In our not-fearing-Britaine, than haue tydings
Of any penny Tribute paid. Our Coursymen
Are men more order'd, then when Idian Ceifar
Smil'd at their lacke of skill, but found their courage
Worthy his frowning at. Their discipline,
(No wing-led with their courages) will make knowne
To their Approvers, they are People, such
That mend vpon the world.

Enter Iackimo.

Pbi. See Iackimo.

Pofi. The swifter Harts, hate posed you by land;
And Windes of all the Corners kifs'd your Sails,
To make your vesell nimble.

Pbi. Welcome Sir.

Pofi. I hope the briefeneffe of your awnere, made
The speedinesse of your returne.

Is one of the fayreft that I haue look'd vpon
Pofi. And therewithall the behf, or let her beauty
Looke thorough a Casement to allure falle hearts,
And be falle with them.

Iackibo. Heere are Letters for you.

Pofi. Their tenure good I truft.

Iackibo. 'Tis very like.

Pofi. Was Caius Lucius in the Britaine Court,
When you were there?

Iackibo. He was expected then,
But not approach'd.

Pofi. All is well yet,
Sparkles this Stone as it was wont, or is't not Too dull for your good wearing?

Iackibo. If I haue loft it,
I should haue loft the worth of it in Gold,
Ile make a journey twice as farre, t'enjoy
A second night of fuch sweet shortneffe, which
Was mine in Britaine, for the Ring is wonne.

Pofi. The Stones too hard to come by.

Iackibo. Not a whit,
Your Lady being fo eafy.

Pofi. Make note Sir
Your loffe, your Sport: I hope you know that we Muft not continue Friends.

Iackib. Good Sir, we muft
If you keepe Couenant; had I not brought
The knowledige of your Midias home, I grant
We were to question farther; but I now
Profeffe my selfe the winner of her Honor,
Together with your Ring: and not the wronger
Of her, or you hauing proceeded but
By both your wills.

Pofi. If you can mak't apparent
That you haue tafted her in Bed; my hand,
And King is yours. If not, the foule opinion
You had oher pure Honour; gains, or loofes,
Your Sword or mine, or Masterliffe leaue both
To who shall finde them.

Iackibo. Sir, my Circumstances
Being fo near the True, I will make them,
Muff first induce you to beleue; whose strength
I will confirme wit h oth, which I doubt not

You'll
The Tragedie of Cymbeline.

You'll give me leave to spare, when you shall finde
You need it not.

Psfl. Proceed.

Iacb. First, her Bed-chamber
(Where I confesse I slept not, but professe
Had that was well worth watching) it was hang'd
With Tapifry of Silke, and Siluer, the Story
 Proud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman,
 And Sidon Iuell'd aboute the Bankes, or for
 The preffe of Boates, or Pride. A peece of Worke
 So bravely done, so rich, that it did fruite
 In Workemanship, and Value, which I wonder'd
 Could be so rarely, and exactly wrought
 Since the true life on't was —

Psfl. This is true :
And this you might have heard of heere, by me,
Or by some other.

Iacb. More particulars
Must justifie my knowledge.

Psfl. So they must,
Or doe your Honour injury.

Iacb. The Chimney
Is South the Chamber, and the Chimney-peece
Chaft Dian, bathing: neuer saw I figures
So likely to report themselues; the Cutter
Was an honest Nature dumbe, out-went her,
Motion, and Breath left out.

Psfl. This is a thing
Which you might from Relation likewise reape,
Being, as it is, much spoke of.

Iacb. The Roofe o'th Chamber,
With golden Cherubins is fretted. Her Andirons
(1 had forgot them) were two winking Cupids
Of Siluer, each on one foote standing, nicely
Depending on their Brands.

Psfl. This is her Honor:
Let it be granted you have seene all this (and praife
Be given to your remembrance) the description
Of what is in her Chamber, nothing faues
The wager you have laid.

Iacb. Then if you can
Be pale, I begge but leave to ayre this Jewell: See,
And now 'tis vp againe: it must be married
To that your Diamond, Ile keepe them.

Psfl. I sue —
Once more let me behold it: Is it that
Which I left with her?

Iacb. Sir (I thank thee) that
She stript it from her Arme: I fee her yet:
Her pretty Aelion, did out-fell her guift,
And yet enrich'd it too: she gaue it me,
And said, she priz'd it once.

Psfl. May be, the pluck'd it off
To send it me.

Iacb. She writes so to you? doth thee?

Psfl. O no, no, no, 'tis true. Heere, take this too,
It is a Basilisk vsnte mine eye,
Killes me to looke on't: Let there be no Honor,
Where there is Beauty: Truth, where semblance: Loue,
Where there's another man. The Vowes of Women,
Of no more bondage be, where they are made,
Then they are to their Vertues, which is nothing:
O, aboue measure faile.

Phil. Have patience Sir,
And take your Ring againe, 'tis not yet wonne:
It may be probable the loft it: or

Who knowes if one her women, being corrupted
Hath stolne it from her.

Psfl. Very true,
And so I hope he came by't: backe my Ring,
Render to me some corporall signe about her
More evidant then this: for this was stolne.

Iacb. By Jupiter, I had it from her Arme.

Psfl. Hearke you, he sweares: by Jupiter he sweares.
'Tis true, nay keepe the Ring: 'tis true: I am sure
She would not looke it: her Attendants are
All sworne, and honourable: they induc'd to feale it?
And by a Stranger? No, he hath enjoy'd her,
The Cognizance of her incontinencie.

Is this: the hath bought the name of Whore, thus deerly
There, take thy bye, and all the Fiends of Hell
Divide themselfes betweene you.

Phil. Sir, be patient:
This is not strong enough to beleue'd
Of one perfwaded well of.

Psfl. Neuer talke on't:
She hath bin colted by him.

Iacb. If you feeke
For further satisfying, vnder her Breast
(Where worthy her prifting) lies a Mole, right proud
Of that most delicate Lodging. By my life
I kill it, and it gaues me present hunger
To feede againe, though full. You do remember
This flaine upon her?

Psfl. I, and it doth confirme
Another flaine, as bigge as Hell can hold,
Were there no more but it.

Iacb. Will you hearre more?

Psfl. Spare your Arithmaticke,
Neuer count the Turnes: Once, and a Million.

Iacb. Ile be sworne.

Psfl. No swearing:
If you will sweare you have not done't, you lye,
And I will kill thee, if thou do't deny
That I made me Cackold.

Iacb. Ile deny nothing.

Psfl. O that I had her heere, to teare her Limbe-melea:
I will go there and doo't, I'th Court, before
Her Father. Ile do something.

Exeunt.

Enter Posthumus.

Psfl. Is there no way for Men to be, but Women
Must be halves-workers? We are all Baftards,
And that most venerable man, which I
Did call my Father, was, I know not where
When I was flainpt. Some Couner with his Tooles
Made me a counterfeit: yet my Mother feem'd
The Dian of that time: fo doth my Wife
The Non-pareil of this. Oh Vengeance, Vengeance!
Me of my lawfull pleasure the refrain'd,
And pray'd me oft forbearance: did I with
A peduncle fo Rolfe, the sweetest view on't
Might well have warm'd olde Saturne;
That I thought her
As Chaft, as vn-Sunn'd Snow. Oh, all the Diuels!
This yellow Iacbino in an houre, was't not?

Or
The Tragedy of Cymbeline.

Or leffe; at first? Perchance he spake not, but Like a full Acorn'd Boar, a Tarmen on,
Cry'd oh, and mounted; found no opposition
But what he look'd for, should oppose, and she Should from encounter guard. Could I finde out
The Womans part in me, for there's no motion
That tends to vice in man, but I affirme
It is the Womans part: be it Lying, note it,
The woman: Flattering, hers; Deceiving, hers:
Lust, and ranke thoughts, hers, hers: Reuenges hers:
Ambitions, Comotions, change of Frides, Distraine,
Nice-longing, Slanders, Mutability;
All Faults that name, nay, that Hell knowes,
Why hers, in part, or all: but rather all For even to Vice
They are not confiant, but are changing still;
One Vice, but of a minute old, for one
Not halfe so old as that. Ite write against them,
Detest them, curst them: yet 'tis greater Skill
In a true Hare, to pray they have their will:
The very Diuels cannot plague them better. Exit.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter in State, Cymbeline, Queen, Cloten, and Lords at one door, and atanother, Caius, Lucius, and Attendants.

Gym. Now say, what would Augustus Caesar with vs?
Luc. When Iulius Caesar (whole remembrance yet
Lies in mens eyes, and will to Eares and Tongues
Be Theame, and hearing euer) was in this Britain,
And Conquer'd it, Caffibalum thine Vnkle
(Famous in Cæfar prayses, no whit lesse
Then in his Feats deuering it) for him,
And his Succession, granted Rome a Tribute,
Yeere by yeere thousand pounds; which(by thee) lately
Is left vntender'd.
Qg. And to kill the meruelle,
Shall be fo euer.
Clot. There be many Cæfars,
Ere fuch another Iulius Britain's a world
By it selfe, and we will nothing pay
For wearing our owne Nofes.
Qg. That opportunity
Which then they had to take from's, to resume
We have againe. Remember Sir, my Liege,
The Kings your Ancelors, together with
The natural bravery of your life, which stands
As Neptunes Parke, ribb'd, and pal'd in
With Oakes vnscaleable, and roaring Waters,
With Sands that will not bear our Enemies Boates,
But lacke them vp to th' Top-malt. A kind of Conquest
Cæfar made here, but made not heere his bragge
Of Came, and Sow, and Ouer-came: with flame
(The first that euer touch'd him) he was carried
From off our Coaf, twice beaten: and his Shipping
(Poor ignorant Baules) on our terrible Seas
Like Egge-shels mou'd vp on their Surges, crack'd
As easly'gainst our Rockes. For joy whereof,
The fam'd Caffibalum, who was once at point
(Oh giglet Fortune) to make Cæfars Sword,
Made Laud-Towne with reloycing-Fires bright,
And Britaines sturt with Courage.

Clot. Come, there's no more Tribute to be paid: our Kingsdom is stronger then it was at that time: and (as I caid) there is no mou chuf Cæfars, other of them may have Crook'd Nofes, but to owne such Istrate Armes, none.
Gym. Son, let your Mother end.
Clot. We have yet many among vs, can griepe as hard as Caffibalum, I do not say I am one: but I have a hand.
Why Tribute? Why should we pay Tribute? If Cæfar can hide the Sun from vs with a Blanket, or put the Moon in his pocket, we will pay him Tribute for light: else Sir, no more Tribute, pray you now.
Gym. You must know,
Till the injurious Romans, did extort
This Tribute from us, we were free. Cæfars Ambition,
Which swell'd so much, that it did almost stretch
The sides o'th World, against all colour heree,
Did put the yoke vp'ns; which to shake off
Becomes a warlike people, whom we reckon
Our selves to be, we do. Say then to Cæfar,
Our Ancestor was that Malmunitus, which
Ordain'd our Lawes, whose vfe the Sword of Cæfar
Hath too much mangled: whose repaire, and franchise,
Shall (by the power we hold) be our good deed,
Tho Rome be therefor angry. Malmunitus made our lawes
Who was the first of Britaine, which did put His browes within a golden Crowne, and call'd
Himselfe a King.

Luc. I am sorry Cymbeline,
That I should pronounce Augustus Caesar
(Cæfar, that hath soe Kings his Servants, then
Thy (selfe Domellicke Officers) thine Enemy:
Receive it from me then. Warre, and Confusion
In Cæfars name pronounce 1' gainst thee: Looke
For fury, not to be refited. Thus deside,
I thanke thee for my selfe.

Gym. Thou art welcome Cains,
Thy Cæfar Knighted me: my youth I spent
Much vnder him; of him, I gather'd Honour,
Which he, to secke of me againe, perforce,
Behooues me keepe at vertence. I am perfect,
That the Pannonians and Dalmatians, for
Their Liberties are now in Armes: a Preident
Which not to reade, would shew the Britaines cold:
So Cæfar shall not finde them.

Luc. Let profe spake.
Clot. His Majestie biddes you welcome. Make paftime with vs, a day, or two, or longer: if you seek vs af-wards in other tearmes, you shall finde vs in our Saltwater-Girdle: if you beare vs out of it, it is yours: if you fall in the adventure, our Crowes shall fare the better for you: and there's an end.

Luc. So sir.
Gym. I know your Masters pleasure, and he mine:
All the Remaine, is welcome: Execunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Pijiano reading of a Letter.
Pij. How? of Adultery? Wherefore write you not
What Monsters her accufe? Leontius
Oh Master, what a strange infection

Is
Is false into thy care? What false Italian, (As paynous tongued, as handed) hast prevail'd On thy too ready hearing? Diabolay? No. She's punish'd for her Truth; and vndergoes More Goddesse-like, then Wife-like; such Afaulcs As would take in some Vertue. Oh my Matter, Thy mind to her, is now as lowe, as were Thy Fortunes. How? That I shoulth murther her, Vpon the Loue, and Truth, and Vowes; which I Haue made to thy command? I her? Her blood? If it be fo, to do good feruice, neuer Let me be counted feruiceable. How looke I, That I should seeme to lacke humanity, So much as this Fact comes to? Doot': The Letter. That I have sett her, by her owne command, Shall give thee opportunitie. Oh dam'd paper, Blacke as the Inke that's on thee: senfeleffe, baule, Art thou a Fondarie for this A? and look' St So Virgin-like without? Loe here she comes. Enter Imogen.

I am ignorant in what I am commanded. Imo. How now Pifianis? Pif. Madam, heere is a Letter from my Lord. Imo. Who, thy Lord? That is my Lord Leonatus? Oh,learn'd indeed were that Astronomer That knew the Starres, as I his Characters, Heel'd lay the Future open. to good Gods, Let what is here contrain'd, relifie of Loue, Of my Lords health, of his content: yet not That we two are afunder, let that grieve him; Some grieues are medicinable, that is one of them, For it doth physcie Loue, of his content, All but in that. Good Wax, thy leave: blet be You Bees that make these Lockes of counfaile. Louers, And men in dangerous Bonds pray not alike, Though Forseytour he cal in prifon, yet You clape young Cupids Tables: good Newes Gods.

If office, and your Fathers wrath (should be take me in his Dominion) could not be so cruel to me, as you: (ob the derelit of Creatures) you, I should not know you with your eyes. Take notice that I am in Cambria at Milford-Hauen: what your owne Loue, well out of this advise you follow. So he wishes you all happineffe, that remains lyall to bis Vow, and your increas in Loue. Leonatus Posthumus.

Oh for a Horfe with wings; Hear't thou Pifianis? He is at Milford-Hauen: Read, and tell me How far 'tis thither. If one of meane affaires May plod it in a weke, why may not I Glide thither in a day? Then true Pifianis, Who long't like me, to see thy Lord; who long't (Oh let me bate) but not like me; yet long't Not in a fainter kinde. Oh not like me: For mine's beyond, beyond: by, and speake thick (Loues Counsellor should fill the boles of hearing, To'th'smothering of the Senfe) how farre it is To this fame bleffed Milford. And by'th'way Tell me how Wales was made so happy, as | T'herit me a Hauen. But first of all, How wetmay feale from hence: and for the gap That we shall make in Time, from our hence-going, And our returne, to excue: but first, how ger hence. Why should excue be borne or ere begot? Wele talk of that hereafter. Prythee speake, How many store of Miles may we well rid Twixt hourre, and hourre? Pifj. One score twixt Sun, and Sun, Madam's enough for you: and too much too. Imo. Why, one that rode to's Execution Man, Could neuer go to flow: I have heard of Riding wagers, Where Horfes haue bin nimber than the Sands That run 1'Clocks behalfe. But this is Foolife, Go, bid my Woman faigne a Sickenesse, say She'll home to her Father; and prouide me presently A Riding Suit: No coftlier then would fit A Franklins Hufwife.

Pifaj. Madam, you're best consider. Imo. I see before me (Man) nor heere, nor heere; Nor what enues but haue a Fog in them That I cannot lookce through. Away, I prythee, Do as I bid thee: There's no more to say: Acceptible is none but Milford way.

Bes. A goodly day, not to keepe house with such, Whole Roofe's as lowe as ours: Sleepe Boyes, this gate Instructs you how t'adore the Heauens; and bowes you To a mornings holy office. The Gates of Monarches Are Arch'd so high, that Giants may let through And keepe their impious Turbonds on, without Good morrow to the Sun. Hail thou faire Heauen, We houe i'th'Rocke, yet vse thee not so hardly As prouder liuers do.

Gaid. Haile Heauen.

Arur. Haile Heauen.

Bela. Now for our Mountaine sport, vp to yond hill Your legges are yong: Ie tread these Flats. Consider, When you aboue perceiue me like a Crow, That it is Place, which jeffen's, and sets off, And you may then reuolve what Tales, I haue told you, Of Courts, of Princes; of the Tricks in Warre. This Seruice, is not Seruice; so being done, But being so allowed. To apprehend thus, Drawes vs a profit from all things we fee: And often to our comfort, shall we finde The tharded-Beele, in a safer hold Then is the full-wing'd Eagle. Ohe this life, Is Nobler, when attending for a check: Richer, then doing nothing for a Babes: Prouder, then rufing in vnpay'd-for Silke: Such gaine the Cap of him, that makes him fine, Yet keeps his Booke, wherein he had havel'd no life to ours.

Gal. Out of your proffes you speake:wise poore vnfedg'd Haue neuer wing'd from view o'th'neft; nor knowes not What Ayre's from home. Happily this life is best, (If quiet life be best) sweeter to you That have a harper knowne. Well correponding With your stiffe Age; but vnto vs, it is A Cell of Ignorance: travailing a bed, A Prifon, or a Debtor, that not dares To frilde a limit.

Arur. What should we speake of
When we are old as you? When we shall see The Raine and winde beate darke December? How In this our pinching Caeo, shall we dicourse

The
The freezing hours away? We have feene nothing:
We are beaftly; subtle as the Fox for prey,
Like wariſe as the Wolfe, for what we eate:
Our Valour is to chace what flies: Our Cage
We make a Quire, as doth the prinſon Bird,
Andſing our Bondage freely.

Bel. How you speak.
Did you but know the Cities Œurie,
And felt them knowingly: the Art o'th'Court,
As hard to leave, as kepee: whose top to clime
Is certain falling: or so flipp'ry, that
The feare's as bad as falling. The toyle o'th'Warre,
A paine that onely feemes to feele out danger
I'th' name of Fame, and Honor, which dyes I'th'search,
And hath as oft a fland'rous Epitaph,
As Record of faire Act. Nay, many times
DOTH ill deferve, by doing well: what's worke
Most curt'ſie at the Cenſure. Oh Boyes, this Storie
The World may reade in me: My bodie's mark'd
With Roman Swords; and my report, was once
First, with the beſt of Note. Cymbeline lou'd me,
And when a Souldier was the Theare, my name
Was not farre off: then was I a Tree
Whose boughs did bend with fruit. But in one night,
A Storme, or Robbery (call it what you will)
Shooke down my mellow hangings: nay my Leaues,
And left me bare to weather.

Gu. Vncertaine fauour.

Bel. My fault being nothing (as I haue told you oft)
But that two Villaines, whose falfe Oathes preuy'd I
Before my perfect Honor, swore to Cymbeline,
I was Confederate with the Romanes: fo
Followed my Banishment, and this twenty yeeres,
This Rocke, and these Demesnes, haue bene my World,
Where I haue luy'd at honest freecome, payed
More pious debts to Heauen, then in all
The fore-end of my time. But, vp to 'th'Mountains,
This is not Hunters Language; he that striketh
The Venion firſt, shall be the Lord o'th'Feaſt,
To him the other two Šhall minifie,
And we will feare no poyfon, which attends
In place of greater State:
He meete you in the Valleyes.

How hard it is to hide the sparkes of Nature?
These Boyes know little they are Sonnes to 'th'King,
Nor Cymbeline dreames that they are alive.
They think they are mine,
And though train'd vp thus meanely
I'th'Cauę, whereon the Bowe their thoughts do hit,
The Roofes of Palaces, and Nature prompts them
In amſle and lowe things, to Princes it, much
Beyond the tricke of others. This Paladour,

And thus I fet my foote on's necke, euens then
The Princely blood flowes in his Checke, he sweats,
Strains his yong Nerues, and puts himselfe in posture
That reads my words. The yonger Brother Countwill,
Once Aruragus, in as like a figure
Strikes life into my fpeech, and shewes much more
His owne conceyuing. Hearke, the Game is rows'd,
Oh Cymbeline, Heauen and my Conſcience knowes
Thou didst vniftly banifie me: whereon

At three, and two yeeres old, I flote these Babes, Thinking to barre thee of Succession, as
Thou refes me of my Lands. Euripide,

Hath cut her throat already? No, 'tis Slander,
Whole edge is sharper then the Sword, whose tongue
Out-venomes all the Wormes of Nyle, whose breath

Do his bidding, strike, Thou mayst be valliant in a better cause; But now thou feem'it a Coward.

Pijd. Hence vile Instrument, Thou shalt not damme my hand.

Imo. Why, I must dye: And if I do not by thy hand, thou art No Servant of thy Masters. Against Selfe-slaughter, There is a prohibition to Diuine, That cruens my weake hand: Come, heere's my heart: Something's a-foote: Soft, soft, weel'n no defence, Obdient as the Scabbard. Luc. So Sir: I defire of you
A Conduite over Land, to Milford-Hauen.
Madam, all joy befall your Grace, and you.

Cym. My Lords, you are appointed for that Office:
The due of Honor, in no point omit:
So farewell Noble Lucius.

Luc. Your hand, my Lord.

Clot. Reccive it friendly: but from this time forth
I weary it as your Enemy.

Luc. Sir, the Euent
Is yet to name the winner. Fare you well.

Cym. Leave not the worthy Lucius, good my Lords
Till he have croft the Seuern, Happines. Exit Lucius, &c

Qu. He goes hence frowning: but it honours vs
That we have given him caufe.

Clo. 'Tis all the better,
Your valiant Britaines have their wishes in it.

Cym. Lucius hath wrote already to the Emperor
How it goes here. It firs vs therefore ripely
Our Chariots, and our Horfemen be in readiness:
The Powres that he already hath in Gallia
Will fone be drewne to head, from whence he mues
His warre for Britaine.

Qu. 'Tis not sleepy businesse,
But muft be look'd too speedily, and strongly.

Cym. Our expecaption that it would be thus Hath made vs forward. But my gentle Queene,
Where is our Daughter? She hath not appear'd
Before the Roman, nor to vs hath tender'd
The duty of the day. She looke vs like
A thing more made of malice, then of duty,
We have noted it. Call her before vs, for
We have beene too flight in Sufferance.

Qu. Royall Sir,
Since the exile of Polichamus, moft retyr'd
Hath her life bin: the Cure whereof, my Lord,
'Tis time muft do. Befeech your Maiesty,
Forbear sharpe speeches to her. She's a Lady
So tender of rebukes, that words are stroke;
And ftrokes death to her.

Cym. Where is the Sir? How
Can her contempt be anwser'd?

May. Pleaue you Sir,
Her Chambers are all lock'd, and there's no anwser
That will be given to'th loud of noife, we make.

Qu. My Lord, when laft I went to vift her,
She pray'd me to excufe her keeping fole:
Whereeto contrain'd by her infrimite,
She should that dutie leave vnpaide to you
Which dayly she was bound to proffer: this
She wish'd me to make knowne: but our great Court
Made me too blame in memory.

Cym. Her doores lock'd?
Not feene of late? Grant Heauens, that which I Fear, proue faile.

Qu. Sonne, I say, follow the King.

Clo. That man of hers, Pifarno, her old Servant
I have not feene these two dayes.

Qu. Go, looke after:
Pifarno, thou that fland'ft fo for Polichamus,
He hath a Druge of mine: I pray, his abfence
Proceed by swallowing that. For he beleue
It is a thing moft precious. But for her,
Where is she gone? Happily daife hath fel'd her:
Or wing'd with fervour of her love, she's fowe;
To her defir'd Polichamus: gone she is,
To death, or to dilion, and my end
Can make good vie of either. Shee being downe,
I haue the placing of the Brittifh Crowne.

Enter Cloten.

How now, my Sonne?

Clo. 'Tis certaine shee is fled:
Go in and cheere the King, he rages, none
Dare come about him.

Qu. All the better: may
This night fore-fall him of the comming day. Exit Qu.

Come hitter: Ah you precious Pandar, Villaine,
Where is thy Lady? In a word, or elfe
Thou art straightsway with the Fiends.
Pif. Oh, good my Lord.
Clot. Where is thy Lady? Or, by Jupiter,
I will not aske againe. Clofe Villaine,
Ile have this Secret from thy heart, or rip
Thy heart to finde it. Is she with Posthumus?
From whose so many weightes of bafenelle, cannot
A dram of worth be drawne.
Pif. Alas, my Lord,
How can she be with him? When was the miss’d?
He is in Rome.
Clot. Where is the Sir? Come neerer:
No farther halting: satifie me home,
What is become of her?
Pif. Oh, my all-worthy Lord.
Clot. All-worthy Villaine,
Difcover where thy Misfits is, at once,
At the next word: no more of worthy Lord:
Spatke, or thy silence on the infant, is
Thy condemnation, and thy death.
Pif. Then Sir:
This Paper is the historie of my knowledge
Touching her flight.
Clot. Let’s fee’t: I will pursue her
Euen to Augustus Throne.
Pif. Or this, or perich. She’s farre enough, and what he learns by this,
May prove his trueill, not her danger.
Clot. Hum. Pif. Ile write to my Lord she’s dead: Oh Imogen,
Safe mayth thou wander, safe returne agen.
Clot. Sirra, is this Letter true?
Pif. Sir, as I thinke.
Clot. It is Posthumus hand, I know’t. Sirrah, if thou wouldst not be a Villain, but do me true service: vnder-go those Implyments wherein I should haue cause to vfe thee with a serious industry, that is, what villainy foere I bid thee do to perfomme it, directly and truly, I would thinke thee an honest man: thou shoul’d never want my meanes for thy releefe, nor my voyce for thy prefer-
ment.
Pif. Well, my good Lord.
Clot. Wilt thou ferue mee? For since patiently and constantly thou haft flucke to the bare Fortune of that Beggar Posthumus, thou canst not in the courfe of gratitude, but be a diligent follower of mine. Wilt thou ferue
mee?
Pif. Sir, I will.
Clot. Gieue mee thy hand, heere’s my purfe. Haft any of thy late Malters Garments in thy poftellion?
Pifan. I haue (my Lord) at my Lodging, the same Suite he wore, when he tooke leave of my Ladie & Mistrate.
Clot. The first service thou dost mee, fetch that Suite hither, let it be thy first seruice, go.
    Pif. I shall my Lord.
    Exit.
Clot. Meet thee at Milford-Hauen: (I forgot to aske him one thing, Ile remember anon:) euens there, thou villaine Posthumus will I kill thee. I would these Garments were come. She faide vpon a time (the bitterneffe of it, I now belch from my heart) that shee held the very Garment of Posthumus, in more respect, then my Noble and natural person; together with the adornment of my Qualities. With that Suite vpon my backe will I ra-uih her: first kill him, and in her eyes; there shall shee
my valour, which will then be a torment to him contempt.
He on the ground, my speech of infultment ended on his dead bodie, and when my Luff hath dinde (which, as I say, to vex her, I will execute in the Cloathes that the fo prais’d:) to the Court Ile knock her backe, foot her home againe. She hath defpis’d mee rejoycingly, and Ile be merry in my Reuenge.
    Enter Pifano.
Be thoe the Garments?
Pif. I, my Noble Lord.
Clot. How long is’t since thee went to Milford-Hauen?
Pif. She can scarce be there yet.
Clot. Bring this Apparrell to my Chamber, that is the second thing that I have commanded thee. The third is, that thou wilt be a voluntarie Mute to my defigne. Be but duteous, and true preferment shall tender it selle to thee. My Reuenge is now at Milford, would I had wings to follow it. Come, and be true.
    Exit
Pif. Thou bid’st me to my loffe : for true to thee,
Were to prove false, which I will never bee
To him that is most true. To Milford go,
And finde not her, whom thou pursueth. Flow, flow
You Heauenly blessings on her: This Fooles speede
Be croft with flownene; Labour be his meede.

But that my resolution helps me: Milford,
When from the Mountaine top, Pifano thow’st thee,
Thou wast within a kenne. Oh loue, I thinke
Foundations flye the wretched: fuch I meane,
Where they should be releu’d. Two Beggers told me,
I could not misfe my way. Will poore Folkes lye
That haue Afflictions on them, knowing ‘tis
A punishment, or Triall? Yes; no wonder,
When Rich-ones scarce tell true. To lapfe in Fulneffe
Is forer, then to lye.for Neede: and Falhoo0d
Is worfe in Kings, then Beggers. My deere Lord,
Thou art one o’th’late Ones: Now I thinke on thee,
My hunger’s gone; but even before, I was
At point to finke, for Food. But what is this?
Heere is a path too’t: ’tis some fauage hold:
I were bett not call; I dare not call: yet Famine
Ere cleaneth it o’re-throw Nature, makes it valiant.

But for the end it works too. Come, our stomackes

Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should Have dyed, had I not made it.

Bel. Whether bound ?

Imo. To Milford-Hauen.

Bel. What's your name?

Imo. Fidele Sir : I haue a Kinman, who
Is bound for Italy; he embark'd at Milford,
To whom being gone, amft spent with hunger,
I am falne in this offence.

Bel. Prythee (faire youth)
Thinke vs no Churiles : nor meafeur our good minde
By this rude place we live in. Well encounter'd,

Muft be fuppliant: the words of your Commiffion
Will tie you to the numbers, and the time
Of their dispatch.

Tri. We will difcharge our duty.

Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Cloten alone.

Clot. I am neere to th' place where they should meet,
If Pijanio haue mapp'd it trueely. How fit his Garments ferue me? Why should his Mitris who was made by him that
The Tragedie of Cymbeline.

that made the Taylor, not be fit too? The rather (saing reverence of the Word) for 'tis saide a Womans finnette comes by fits: therein I must play the Workman, I dare speake it to my felfe, for it is not Vainglorie for a man, and his Claffe, to confer in his owne Chamber I meane,
the Lines of my body are as well drainwe as his; no leffe young, more strong, not beneath him in Fortunes, beyond him in the advantadge of the time, aboue him in Birth, alike conuerfant in generall seruices, and more remarkable in finge oppositions; yet this imperfeuerant Thing loues him in my defpit. What Mortalitie is? Poefhauns, thy head (which now is growing vppon thy shoulders) shall within this houre be off, thy Miftris inforced, thy Garments cut to peeces before thy face: and all this done, furnue her home to her Father, who may (happily) be a little angry for my fo rough vlage: but my Mother hauing power of his teftineffe, shall turne all into my commendations. My Horfe is tyed vp fafe, out Sword, and to a fore purpofe: Fortune put them into my hand: This is the very description of their meeting place and the Fellow daret not deceue me. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, and Imogen from the Cauce.

Bel. You are not well: Remaine heere in the Cauce,
Wee'll come to you after Hunting.

Arui. Brother, stay heere:
Are we not Brothers?

Imo. So man and man should be,
But Clay and Clay, differs in dignitie,
Whole duft is both alike. I am very fickie,

Gui. Go you to Hunting, Ile abide with him.

Imo. So fickie I am not, yet I am not well:
But not fo Citizen a wanton, as
To feeme to dye, ere fickie: So pleafe you, leave me,
Sticke to your Journall course: the breach of Custome,
Is breach of all. I am ill, but your being by me
Cannot amend me. Society, is no comfort
To one not fociable: I am not very fickie,
Since I can reafon of it: pray you trust me heere,
Ile rob none but my felfe, and let me dye
Stealing fo poorely.

Gui. I loue thee: I haue spoke it,
How much the quantity, the weight as much,
As I do loue my Father.

Bel. What? How? how?

Arui. If it be finne to fay fo (Sir) I yoake mee
In my good Brothers fault: I know not why
I loue this youth, and I haue heard you fay,
Loue's reafon's, without reafon. The Beere at doore,
And a demand who is't shall dye, I'd say
My Father, not this youth.

Bel. Oh noble fraiine!
O worthineffe of Nature, breed of Greatneffe!
"Cowards father Cowards, & Bafe things Syre Bace;
"Nature hath Meale, and Brane; Contempt, and Grace.
I'me not their Father, yet who this shold bee,
Doth myracle it felfe, lou'd before mee.
'Tis the ninth houre o'th'Morne.

Arui. Brother, farewell.

Imo. I with ye sporte.

Arui. You health.———So please you Sir.

Imo. These are kinde Creatures.

Gods, what Iyes I have heard:
Our Courtiers say, all's falue, but at Court;
Experience, oh thou disproue't Report.
Th'emperious Seas breeds Monffers; for the Dift,
Poore Tributary Riuers, as sweet Fish:
I am ficke fill, heart-ficke; Phisio,
Ile now taffe of thy Drudge.

Gui. I could not thirre him:
He faid he was gentle, but vnfortunate;
Difhonestly afflicted, but yet honeft.

Arui. Thus did he auwer me: yet faid heererafter,
I might know more.

Bel. To'th'Field, to'th'Field:

Wee'll leave you for this time, go in, and reft.

Arui. Wee'll not be long away.

Bel. Pray be not ficke,
For you must be our Hufwife.

Imo. Well, or ill,
I am bound to you.

Bel. And shal't be euer.
This youth, how ere difreft, appears he hath had Good Anceftors.

Arui. How Angell-like he fings?

Gui. But his neate Cookerie?

Arui. He cut our Rootes in Charrafters,
And fawc't our Brothes, as Imo had bin ficke,
And he her Dieter.

Arui. Nobly he yoakes
A smiling, with a figh; as if the figh
Was that it was, for not being fuch a Smile:
The Smile, mocking the Sigh, that it would fuye
From fo diuine a Temple, to commix
With winde, that Sylors ralle at.

Gui. I do note,
That greefe and patience rooted in them both,
Mingle their fpurre together.

Arui. Grow patient,
And let the flinking-Elder (Greefe) yntwine
His perifhing roote, with the encreafing Vine.

Bel. It is great morning. Come away: Who's there?
Enter Cloten.

Clo. I cannot finde thofe Runnagates, that Villaine
Hath mock'd me, I am faint.

Bel. Thofe Runnagates?

Meanes he not vs? I partly know him, 'tis

Cloten, the Sonne o'th'Queene. I feeare some Ambush:
I faw him not thefe many yeares, and yet
I know 'tis he: We are held as Out-Lawes: Hence.

Gui. He is but one: you, and my Brother fearch
What Companies are neere: pray you away,
Let me alone with him.

Cloten. Soft, what are you
That fuye me thus? Some villaine-Mountainers?
I have heard of fuch. What Slaue art thou?

Gui. A thing.
More flauifh did I ne're, then anfwering
A Slaue without a knocke.

Cloten. Thou art a Robber,
A Law-breaker, a Villaine; yeeld thee Thefe.

Arui. To who? to thee? What art thou? Have not I
An arme as bigge as thine? A heart, as bigge:
Thy words I grant are bigger: for I weare not
My Dagger in my mouth. Say what thou art:

Why
The Tragedy of Cymbeline.

Why should ye yield to thee?

Cloth. Thou Valiant base,

Know'st me not by my Cloathes?

Guis. No, nor thy Taylor, Raffall:

Who is thy Grandfather? He made those cloathes,

Which (as I termes) make thee.

Cloth. Thou precious Varlet,

My Taylor made them not.

Guis. Hence then, and thanke

The man that gaine them thee. Thou art some Foole,

I am loath to bestre thee.

Cloth. Thou inurious Theife,

Heare but my name, and tremble.

Guis. What's thy name?

Cloth. Cloten, thou Valaine.

Guis. Cloten, thou double Valaine be thy name,

I cannot tremble at it, were it Toad, or Adder, Spider,

'Twould move me sooner.

Cloth. To thy further fear,

Nay, to thy meere Confusion, thou shalt know

I am Sonne to the Queene.

Guis. I am forry for't: not seeming

So worthy as thy Birth.

Cloth. Art not afraid?

Guis. Tho'f that I reverence, tho' I fear: the Wife:

At Foole's I laugh: not feare them.

Cloth. Dye the death:

When I have flowne thee with my proper hand,

Ile follow tho'f that even now fled hence:

And on the Gates of Ludo-Towne let your heads:

Yeeld Rufftike Mountaineer:

Fight and Exeunt.

Enter Belarius and Aruragus.

Bel. No Companie's abroad?

Ariu. None in the world: you did mistake him sure.

Bel. I cannot tell: Long is it since I saw him,

But Time hath nothing blurt'd tho'fe lines of Favour

Which then he wore: the satchets in his voice,

And burft of speaking were as his: I am absolute

'Twas very Cloten.

Ariu. In this place we left them;

I wish my Brother make good time with him,

You say he is fo fell.

Bel. Being scaree made vp,

I meane to man: he had not apprehension

Of roaring terrors: For defect of judgement

Is oft the caufe of Fear:

Enter Guiderius.

But see thy Brother.

Guis. This Cloten was a Foole, an empty purfe,

There was no money in't: Not Hercules

Could have knock'd out his Braines, for he had none:

Yet I not doing this, the Foole had borne

My head, as I do his.

Bel. What hast thou done?

Guis. I am perfect what: cut off one Clotens head,

Sonne to the Queene (after his owne report)

Who call'd me Traitor, Mountaineer, and foare.

With his owne single hand hee'd take vs in,

Displace our heads, where (thanks the Gods) they grow

And let them on Ludo-Towne.

Bel. We are all vndone.

Guis. Why, worthy Father, what hau'e we to looke,

But that hee swore to take, our Liones? the Law

Protects vs not, then why should we be tender,

To let an arrogant pece of flesh threat vs?

Play Judge, and Executioner, all himselfe?

For we do feare the Law. What company

Difcouer you abroad?

Bel. No single foule

Can we set eye on: but in all safe reason

He must have some Attendants. Though his Honor

Was nothing but mutation, I, and that

From one bad thing to worse: Not Frenzie,

Not absolute madneffe could fo faire have ra'ud

To bring him here: alone! although perhaps

It may be heard at Court, that fuch as we

Cau'e here, hunt here, are Out-lawes, and in time

May make some stronger head, the which he hearing,

(As it is like him) might breake out, and sweare

Heel'd fetch vs in, yet ist not probable

To come alone, either he fo vndertaking,

Or they so sufferinge: then on good ground we feare,

If we do feare this Body hath a tale

More perilous then the head.

Ariu. Let Ordinance

Come as the Gods fore-fay it: howsoere,

My Brother hath done well.

Bel. I had no mind

To hunt this day: The Boy Fideles fckenesse

Did make my way long forth.

Guis. With his owne Sword,

Which he did waue against my throat, I haue tane

His head from him: Ile throw't into the Creeke

Behind our Rocke, and let it to the Sea,

And tell the Ninnes, hee's the Queenes Sonne, Cloten,

That's all I reache.

Exit.'

Bel. I feare 'twill be reueng'd:

Would (Polidore) thou had't not done: though valour

Becomes thee well enough.

Ariu. Would I had done:

So the Reuenge alone purf'd me: Polidore

I loue thee brotherly, but enuy must

Thou haft robb'd me of this deed: I would Reuenges

That possible strength might meere, wold seek vs through

And put vs to our answer.

Bel. Well, 'tis done:

We'll hunt no more to day, nor fecke for danger |

Where there's no profit. I prythee to our Rocke,

You and Fidele play the Cookies: Ile stay

Till halfe Polidore returne, and bring him

To dinner presently.

Ariu. Poore filke Fidele.

Ile willingly to him, to gaine his colour,

I'll let a parifh of fuch Clotens blood,

And praise my felie for charity.

Exit.

Bel. Oh thou Goddesse,

Thou diuine Nature: thou thy felie thou blazon't

In these two Princely Boyes: they are as gentle

As Zephires blowing below the Violet,

Not waiggis his sweet head; and yet, as rough

(Their Royall Blood enchant'd) as the rud'ft winde,

That by the top doth take the Mountain Pine,

And make him floope to th'Vale. 'Tis wonder

That anuible intinct shoud frame them

To Royalty vnlearn'd, Honor vntaught,

Ciuitie not feene from other: valour

That wildly grows in them, but yeelds a crop

As if it had beene fow'd; yet still it's strange

What Clotens being heere to vs portends,

Or what his death will bring vs.

Enter Guiderius.

Guis. Where's my Brother?
I have sent Cloten Clot-pole downe the streame,
In Embassie to his Mother; his Bodie's hoffage
For his returne.

Solemn Musik.

Bel. My ingenuous Instrument,
(Hearke Poldore) it founds: but what occasion
Hath Cadwall now to give it motion? Hearke,
Gui. Is he at home?
Bel. He went hence euen now.
Gui. What does he meane?
Since death of my deare' Mother
It did not speake before. All solemne things
Should anwer solemne Accidents. The matter?
Triumphes for nothing, and lamenting Toyes,
Is solitie for Aifes, and greefe for Boyes.
Is Cadwall mad?

Enter Arurragus, with Imogen dead, hearing
"be in his Armes."

Bel. Looke, heere he comes,
And brings the dire occacion in his Armes,
Of what we blame him for.

Arui. The Bird is dead
That we have made fo much on. I had rather
Have skipt from fixteene yeares of Age, to sixty:
To haue turn'd my leaping time into a Croule,
Then haue fenne this.
Gui. O sweetest, faireft Lilly:
My Brother weares thee not the one halfe so well,
As when thou grew'ft thy selfe.

Bel. Oh Melancholly,
Who euer yet could found thy botome? Finde
The Ooze, to fhow what Covent thy sluggishe care  Might'ft eafieft harbour in. Thou bleffed man,  Ioue knowes what man thou might'ft haue made: but I,
Thou dyed'ft a most rare Boy, of Melancholly.
How found you him?

Arui. Starke, as you see:
Thus smiling, as some Fly had tickled flumber,
Not as deathes dart being laught at: his right Cheeke  Repofing on a Cushion.
Gui. Where?

Arui. O' the flores:
His armes thus leagu'd, I thought he slept, and put
My clayed Brogues from off my feate, whose rudeness  Answer'd my flaps too lowd.

Gui. Why, he but sleepe:
If he be gone, hee'll make his Graue, a Bed:
With female Faries will his Tombe be haunted,
And Wormes will not come to thee.

Arui. With faireft Flowers
Whill Sommer laifs, and I lute heere, Fidele,
Ile sweetness thy fad graue: thou shalt not lacke  The Flower that's like thy face. Pale-Primrofe, nor  The azur'd Hare-bell, like thy Veines: no, nor  The leafe of Egantine, whom not to flander,  Out-sweetned not thy breath: the Raddocke would  With Charitable bill (Oh bill fore flaming  Those rich-left-heyres, that let their Fathers lye  Without a Monument) bring thee all this,
Yes, and furr'd Mofs beside. When Flowres are none  To winter-ground thy Coarfe—

Gui. Prythee have done,
And do not play in Wench-like words with that  Which is fo serious. Let vs bury him,
And not protract with admiration, what  Is now due debt. To'th graue.

Arui. Say, where shall's lay him?

Gui. By good Euripile, our Mother.

Arui. Bee't fo:
And let vs (Poldore) though now our voyces  Haue got the mannifh cracke, fing him to the'ground  As once to our Mother: wie like note, and words,  Saue that Euripile, must be Fidele.

Gui. Cadwall,
I cannot fing: Ile weep, and word it with thee;
For Notes of sorrow, out of tune, are worfe  Then Priests, and Phanes that lye.

Arui. We'll speake it then.
Bel. Great greefs I fee med'cine the leffe: For Cloten
Is quite forgot. He was a Queenes Sonne, Boyes,
And though he came our Enemy, remember
He was paid for that: though meane, and mighty rotting  Together haue one duft, yet Reuereence
(That Angell of the world) doth make definction  Of place 'tweene high, and low. Our Foe was Princely,
And though you tooke his life, as being our Foe,
Yet bury him, as a Prince.

Gui. Pray you fetch him hither,
Tobrefes body is as good as Aux,
When nether are alie.

Arui. If you'll go fetch him,
We'll lay our Song the while: Brother begin.
Gui. Nay Cadwall, we must lay his head to the Eaft,
My Father hath a reafon for't.

Arui. 'Tis true.
Gui. Come on then, and remove him.

Arui. So, begin.

SONG.

Guid. Fear no more the beate o'th Sun,
Nor the furious Winters rage:
Thou by worldly task haft don,
Home art gou, and tame thy wages.
Golden Lads, and Girls all muft,
As Chimney-Sweepers come to duft.

Arui. Fear no more the frowne o'th Great,
Thou art past the Tirants brooks,
Care no more to cloath and eate,
To thee the Rede is as the Oakes:

The Scepter, Learning, Physicke muft,
All follow thu and come to duft.

Guid. Fear no more the Lightning flafts
Arui. Nor th' all-dreaded Thunderstone.

Guid. Fear not Slander, Courage refts,
Arui. Thou haft finifh'd lay and more.

Both. All Louers young, all Louers muft,
Configne to thee and come to duft.

Guid. No Exorcifor harme thee,

Arui. Nor no witch-craft charmere thee.

Guid. Ghost unlaid forbear thee.
Arui. Nothing ill come neere thee.

Both. Quiet confusion have,
And renowned be thy graue.

Enter Belarius with the body of Cloten.

Gui. We have done our obsequies:
Come lay him downe.

Bel. Heere's a few Flowres, but 'bout midnight more:
The herbes that haue on them cold dew o'th night  Are f'rewings fit't for Graues: upon their Faces.
You were as Flowres, now with'ther'd: even fo
Thefe Herbelets shall, which we upon you frewre.
Come on, away, apart upon our knees:
The ground that gau them firt, ha's them againe:
Their pleasures here are past, fo are their paine.

Exeunt.
The Tragedie of Cymbeline.

Imogen awakes.

Yes Sir, to Milford-Hauen, which is the way?
I thanke you: by yond built? pray how farre thether?
'Ods pittikins: can it be fixe mile yet?
I haue gone all night: Faith, Ile lye downe, and sleepe.
But soft: no Bedfellow? Oh Gods, and Goddefles!
Thefe Flowers are like the pleasures of the World;
This bloody man the care on't. I hope I dreame:
For fo I thought I was a Cavee-keeper,
And Cooke to honest Creatures. But 'tis not so:
'Twas but a bolt of nothing, not at nothing,
Which the Braine makes of Fumes. Our very eyes,
Are sometimes like our Judgements, blinde. Good faith
I tremble still with feare: but if there be
Yet left in Hauean, as small a drop of pittie
As a Wrens eye; fear'd Gods, a part of it.
The Dreame's heere still: euen when I wake it
Without me, as within me: not imagin'd, felt.
A headless man? The Garments of Pallas?
I know the shape of his Legge: this is his Hand:
His Foote Mercurialis: his martill Thigh
The brawnes of Hercules: but his Iouiall face—
Murther in heauen? How? 'tis gone. Pifanio,
All Curles madded Hecuba gaue the Grecians,
And mine to boot, be darted on thee: thou
Conspir'd with that Irregulous duell Cloten,
Hath heere cut off my Lord. To write, and read,
Be henceforth treacherous. Damn'd Pifanio,
Hath with his forged Letters (damn'd Pifanio)
From this moft braueft veilfull of the world
Stroke the maine top! Oh Pofhimmus, alas,
Where is thy head? where's that? Art me! where's that?
Pifanio might haue kill'd thee at the heart,
And left this head on. How should this be, Pifanio?
'Tis he, and Cloten: Malice, and Lucre in them
Hauz laid this Woe heere. Oh 'tis pregnant, pregnant!
The Drugg he gaue me, which hee said was precious
And Cordall to me, haue I not found it
Murd'rous toth'Senfes? That confirmes it home:
This is Pifanio's deede, and Cloten: Oh!
Glue colour to my pale cheeke with thy blood,
That we the horrorrier may feeme to thofe
Which chance to finde vs. Oh, my Lord! my Lord!

Enter Lucius, Captaines, and a Couchier.

Cap. To them, the Lections gaine Gallia
After your will, haue croft the Sea, attending
You heere at Milford-Hauen, with your Shippes:
They are heere in readiness.

Luc. But what from Rome?

Cap. The Senate hath fin'd ye the Confiners,
And Gentleman of Italy, moft willing Spirits,
That promife Noble Seruice: and they come
Vnder the Conduct of bold Iachimo,
Sycena's Brother.

Luc. When expect you them?

Cap. With the next benefit oth'winde.

Luc. This forwardnes
Makes our hopes faire. Command our present numbers
Be murther'd: bid the Captaines looke too't. Now Sir,
What haue you dream'd of late of this warres purpofe.

Sooth. Laft night, the very Gods how'd me a vision
(I fayd, and pray'd for thier Intelligence) thus:
I saw Ioues Bird, the Roman Eagle wing'd
From the fpungy South, to this part of the Weft,
There vanish'd in the Sun-beames, which portend
(Valiffe my finnes abufe my Diuination)

Succelte to th'Roman howt.

Luc. Dreame often fo,
And nouer faille. Soft how, what truncke is heere?
Without his top? The ruine speakes, that sometime
It was a worthy building. How? a Page?
Or dead, or sleeping on him? But dead rather:
For Nature doth abhorre to make his bed
With the defunct, or sleepe upon the dead.
Let's see the Boyes face.

Cap. Hee's alue my Lord.

Luc. Hee'lt then inquir'd vs of this body: Young one,
Inform vs of thy Fortunes, for it feemes
They craue to be demanded: who is this Thou mak'ft thy bloody Pillow? Or who was he
That (otherwife then noble Nature did)
Hath alter'd that good Picture? What's thy interest
In this sad wretche? How came't? Who is't?
What art thou?

Imo. I am nothing; or if not,
Nothing to be worse: This was my Master,
A very valiant Britaine, and a good,
That heere by Mountaineen Iyes flaine: Alas,
There is no more such Masters: I may wander
From East to Occident, cry out for Service,
Try many, all good: ferue truly: neuer
Finde such another Master.

Luc. 'Lacke, good youth:
Thou mou't no lefe with thy complaining, then
Thy Malifer in bleeding: say his name, good Friend.

Imo. Richard du Champ: If I do lye, and do
No harme by it, though the Gods heare, I hope
They'lt pardon it. Who is this Sir?

Luc. Thy name?

Imo. Fidelis Sir.

Luc. Thou doo'ft approve thy selfe the very fame:
Thy Name well fitts thy Faith; thy Faith, thy Name:
Wilt take thy chance with me? I will not fay
Thou shalt be so well master'd, but be sure
No lefe belou'd. The Romane Emperors Letters
Sent by a Confill to me, should not fooner
Then thine owne worth preferre thee: Go with me.

Imo. Ile follow Sir. But frift,and't pleafe the Gods,
Ile hide my Master from the Fies, as deepe
As thofe poore Pickaxes can digge: and when
With wild wood-leafes & weeds, I ha' fhou'd his grave
And on it faid a Century of prayers
(Such as I can) twice o're, Ile wepe, and sigh,
And leaving to his feruice, follow you,
So pleafe you entertaine mee.

Luc. I good youth,
And rather Father thee, then Master thee: My Friends,
The Boy hath taught vs many duties: Let vs
Find out the prettieft Dazled-Ploet we can,
And make him with our Pikes and Partizans
A Graue: Come, Arme him: Boy hee'f preferv'd
By thee, to vs, and hee fhall be intern'd
As Souldiers can. Be cheerefull: wipe thine eyes,
Some Falles are means the happier to arise.

Exeunt

Scena Tertia.

Enter Cymbeline,Lords, and Pifanio.

Cym. Againe: and hiringe me word how 'tis with her,
A Feauour with the absence of her Sonne;
The Tragedie of Cymbeline.

Bel. Sonnes,
Woe'll higher to the Mountaines, there secure vs.
To the Kings party there's no going : newsse
Of Closen death (we being not knowne, not mutter'd Among the Bands) may drive vs to a renders
Where we have liu'd; and so extort from's that
Which we have done, whose answere would be death
Drawne on with Torture.

Gui. This is (Sir)a doubt
In such a time, nothing becomming you,
Nor satisfying vs.

Arui. It is not likely,
That when they heare their Roman horses neigh,
Behold their quarter'd Fires; haue both their eyes
And cares so cloud importantly as now,
That they will wafte their time upon our note,
To know from whence we are.

Bel. Oh, I am knowne
Of many in the Army: Many yeeres
(Though Closen then but young) you fee, not wore him
From my remembrance. And besides, the King
Hath not deffer'd my Service, nor your Loues,
Who finde in my Exile, the want of Breeding;
The certainty of this heard life, aye hopeleffe
To have the courtefe your Cradle promis'd,
But to be fill hot Summers Tanlings, and
The thriving Slaues of Winter.

Gui. Then be fo,
Better to ceafe to be. Pray Sir, toth'Army:
I, and my Brother are not knowne; your felte
So out of thought, and thereto fo ore-growne,
Cannot be question'd.

Arui. By this Sunne that shines
Ile thither: What thing is't, that I never Did see man dye, scarce euer look'd on blood,
But that of Coward Hares, hot Goats, and Venifon?
Neuer befrid a Horfe faue one, that had
A Rider like my felte, who ne're were Rowell,
Nor Iron on his heele: I am afham'd
To looke vpon the holy Sunne, to haue
The benefit of his bleft Beame, remaining
So long a poore vnknowne.

Gui. By heauens Ile go,
If you will bleffe me Sir, and give me leave,
Ile take the better care ; but if you will not,
The hazard therefore due fall on me by
The hands of Romaines.

Arui. So say I, Amen.

Bel. No rea'on I (since of your liues you set)
So flight a valewation) should refere
My crack'd one to more care. Haue with you Boyes:
If in your Country warres you chance to dye,
That is my Bed too (Lads) and there Ile lye.
Lead,lead; the time feems long, their blood thinks scorn
Till it flye out, and thwew them Princes borne.

Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, & Aruiragus.

Gui. The noyse is round about vs.

Bel. Let vs from it.

Arui. What pleasure Sir, we finde in life, to locke it
From Action, and Adventurn.

Gui. Nay, what hope
Hauie we in hiding vs? This way the Romaines
Must, or for Britaines slay vs or redeem us
For barbarous and vnnatural Reuolts
During their vie, and slay vs after.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, & Aruiragus.

Gui. The noyse is round about vs.

Bel. Let vs from it.

Arui. What pleasure Sir, we finde in life, to locke it
From Action, and Adventurn.

Gui. Nay, what hope
Hauie we in hiding vs? This way the Romaines
Must, or for Britaines slay vs or redeem us
For barbarous and vnnatural Reuolts
During their vie, and slay vs after.

Scena Quarta.
The Tragedy of Cymbeline.

For wrying but a little? Oh Pisanio,
Every good Servant do's not all Commands:
No Bond, but to do iuft ones. Gods, if you Should have 'tane vengeance on my faults, I never Had liu'd to put on this: so had you faued
The noble Imogen, to repent, and strooke
Me (wretch) more worth your Vengeance. But alacke,
You snatch some hence for little faults; that's love
To have them fall no more; you some perfit
To second ill's with ill's, each elder worfe,
And make them dread it, to the doers thrift.
But Imogen is your owne, do your silent wills,
And make me bleft to obey. I am brought hither
Among th'Italian Gentry, and to fight
Against my Ladies Kingdome: 'Tis enough
That (Britaine) I have kill'd thy Miftirs: Peace,
Ie glue no wound to thee: therefore good Heauens,
Heare patiently my purpose. Ie difrobe me
Of these Italian weedes, and suite my felfe
As do's a Britaine Pezant: fo Ie fight
Against the part I come with: fo Ie dye
For thee (O Imogen) even for whom my life
Is every breath, a death: and thus vnknowne,
Pitied, nor hated, to the face of peril .
My felfe Ie dedicate. Let me make men know
More valour in me, then my habits how.
Gods, put the strength o' th' Leonati in me:
To shame the guize o' th'world, I will begin,
The fashion leffe without, and more within. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Lucius, Iachimo, and the Romane Army at one doore:
and the Britaine Army at another: Leonatus Poslibumus following like a poore Souldier. They march ouer, and goe out.
Then enter againe in Skirmefe Iachimo and Poslibumus:
be vanquisfetb and disfargetb Iachimo, and then leaves him.

Luc. The heauneffe and guilt within my bolome,
Takes off my manhood: I haue belyed a Lady,
The Princeffe of this Country; and the ayre on't
Reuengingly enfeebles me, or could this Carle,
A very drudge of Nature, haue subdu'd me
In my profession: Knighthoods, and Honors borne
As I weare mine) are titles but of ficorne.
If that thy Gentry (Britaine) goe before
This Lows, as he eexceeds our Lords, the oddes
Is, that we scarce are men, and you are Goddess. Exit.

Bel. Stand, and, we haue th'advantage of the ground,
The Lane is guarded: Nothing rovets vs, but
The villany of our feares.

Gui. Arui. Stand, and, and fight.

Enter Poslibumus, and seconds the Britaines. They Rescue
Cymbeline, and Exeunt.

Then enter Lucius, Iachimo, and Imogen.

Luc. Away boy from the Troopes, and faue thy felfe:
For friends kil friends, and the diforder's fuch
As warre were hood-wink'd.

Luc. "Tis their fresh supplies.

Luc. It is a day turn'd strangely: or betimes
Let's re-inforce, or fly.

Exeunt

Scena Tertia.

Enter Posthbmus, and a Britaine Lord.

Lor. Can't thou from where they made the stand?

Posth. I did,
Though you it seemes come from the Fliers?

Lor. I did.

Posth. No blame be to you Sir, for all was loft,
But that the Heauens sought: the King himfelfe
Of his wings deflitude, the Army broken,
And but the backes of Britaines fene; all flying
Through a ftrait Lane, the Enemy full-hearted,
Lolling the Tongue with fraught'ring: hauing worke
More plentiful, then Toolees to doo: stroooke downe
Some mortally, some slightly touch'd, some falling
Merely through feare, that the ftrait pffe was damn'd
With deadmen, hurt behinde, and Cowsards living
To dye with length'ned flame.

Lor. Where was this Lane?

Posth. Clofe by the batall, ditch'd, & wall'd with turph,
Which gau advantage to an ancient Soldiour
(An honest one I warrant) who defer'd
So long a breeding, as his white beard came to,
In doing this for's Country. Atхват the Lane,
He, with two striplings (Lads more like to run
The Country bafe, then to commit fuch slaughter,
With faces fit for Maskes, or rather fayer
Then thofe for prefervation cas'd, or thame)
Made good the paffage, cryed to thofe that fled.
Our Britaines hearts dye flying, not our men,
To darkneffe fteete foules that fley backwards; fland,
Or we are Romans, and will give you that
Like beafts, which you fhon beauiy, and may fave
But to looke backe in frowne: Stand, fland. Thofe three,
Three thoufand confident, in aet in many:
For three performers are the File, when all
The reft do nothing. With this word fland, fland,
Accomodated by the Place; more Charming
With their owne Noblenefe, which could haue turn'd
A Difaffe, to a Lance, guiled pale lookes;
Part fhaie, part spirit renew'd, that fome turn'd coward
But by example (Oh a finne in Warre, Damn'd in the firft beginners) gan to looke
The way that they did, and to grin like Lyons
Vpon the Pikes o'th' Hunters. Then beganne
A fpop l'th' Chafers: a Retyre: Anon
A Rowt, confusion thicke: forthwith they fley
Chickens, the way in which they loft Eagles: Slaues
The frides the Victors made: and now our Cowsards
Like Fragments in hard Voyages became
The life o'th'need: hauing found the backe doore open;
Of the vnguardred hearts: heauens, how they wound,
Some flaine before some dying; fome their Friends
Ore-borne i'th'former waue, ten chac'd by one,
Are now each one the flaughter-man of twenty:
Thofe that would dye, or ere reift, are grown
The mortal bugs o'th' Field.

Lor
Lord. This was strange chance:
A narrow Lane, an old man, and two Boys.
Post. Nay, do not wonder at it: you are made
Rather to wonder at the things you hear,
Then to worke any. Will you Rime vpon't,
And vent it for a Mock'rize? Heere is one:
"Two Boys, an Oldman (twice a Boy) a Lane,
"Prefer'd the Britaines, was the Romanes bane.

Lord. Nay, be not angry Sir.
Post. Lacke, to what end?
Who dares not stand his Poc, Ile be his Friend:
For if he'el do, as he is made to doo,
I know he'el quickly flye my friendship too.
You have put me into Rime.

Lord. Farewell, you are angry.
Exit.
Post. Still going? This is a Lord: Oh Noble minery
To be i'th'Field, and aske what newes of me:
To day, how many would haue given their Honours
To have fau'd their Carakasses? Tookke heele to doo't,
And yet dyed too. I, in mine owne wo char'md
Could not finde death, where I did heare him groane,
Nor feele him where he strooke. Being an vglie Monster,
"Tis strange he hides him in freth Cups, soft Beds,
Sweet words; or hath noe minifters then we
That draw his kniues i'th'War. Well I will finde him:
For being now a Faouurer to the Britaine,
No more a Britaine. I haue return'd againe
The part I came in. Fight I will no more,
But yeeld me to the verieft Hinde, that shall Once touch my shoulder. Great the slaughter is Heere made by th'Romane; great the Anfwer be Britaines must take. For me, my Ransome's death,
On eyther side I come to spend my breath;
Which neyther heere Ile keepe, nor beare athen,
But end it by some meanes for Imogen.

Enter two Captaines, and Soldiers.
1 Great Jupiter was prais'd, Lucius is taken,
Tis thought the old man, and his fonnas, were Angels.
2 There was a fourth man, in a filly habit,
That gaue th'Affront with them.
So 'tis reported:
But none of'em can be found. Stand, who's there?

Post. A Roman,
Who had not now beene drooping heere, if Seconds
Had anfwer'd him.
2 Lay hands on him: a Dogge,
A legge of Rome shall not returne to tell
What Crowes haue peckt them here: he brags his feruice
As if he were of note: bring him toth'King.

Enter Cymbeline, Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, Pisanio, and Romane Captains. The Captains prefent Pofhmumus to Cymbeline, who deliers him over to a Gaoler.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Pofhmumus, and Gaoler.
Gas. You shall not now be Rolone,
You haue lockes vpon you:
So grace, as you finde Pature.
2 Gas. I, or a Romaine.
Post. Moft welcome bondage; for thou art a way
(I think) to liberty; yet am I better.
Then one that's fickle o'th'Gows, since he had rather Groane fo in perpetuity, then be cur'd
By'th'ure Phyfitian, Death; who is the key
To vbarre these Lockes. My Confience, thou art fetter'd
More then my thanks, & wish'st you good Gods give me
The penitent Instrument to picke that Bolt,
Then free for ever. Is't enough I am forry?
So Children temporall Fathers do appeafe;
Gods are more full of mercy. Muft I repent,
I cannot do it better then in Gyues,
Defir'd, more then contrain'd, to satisifie
If of my Freedom 'tis the maine part, take
No stricler render of me, then my All.
I know you are more clement then vilde men,
Who of their broken Debtors take a third,
A fixt, a tenth, letting them thrive againe
On their abatement; that's not my defire.
For Imogens deere life, take mine, and though
'Tis not so deere, yet 'tis a life; you coynd it,
'Tweenee man, and man, they waige not ever flame:
Though light, take Peeces for the figures fake,
(You rather) mine being yours: and fo great Powres,
If you will take this Audit, take this life,
And cancelle these cold Bonds. Oh Imogen,
I leke to thee in silence.

Solemn Musicke. Enter (as in an Apparation) Sicilius Leonatus,
Father to Pofhmumus, an old man, attired like a warrier, leading in his band an ancient Martyr (his wife, & Mother to Pofhmumus) with Musicke before them. Then, after other Musick, follows the two young Leonati (Brothers to Pofhmumus) with wounds as they died in the wars.
They circle Pofhbumus round as he lies sleeping.

Scil. No more thou Thunder-Matter
Shew thy spight, on Mortall Flies:
With Mars fall out with Iuno childe, that thy Adulteries
Rates, and Reuenges.
Hath my poor Boy done ought but well,
The whole face I never law:
I dy'le whil'st in the Wombe he flaise, attending Natures Law.
Whose Father then (as men report, thou Orphanes Father art)
Thou should't haue bin, and sheelded him,
from this earth-vexing smart.
Math. Lucina lent not me her aye,
but tooke me in my Throws,
That from me was Pofhmumus ript, came crying 'mong'it his Foes.
A thing of pitty.
Scil. Great Nature like his Anceftrie, moulded the fluffe fo faire:
That he d' fer'd the praise o'th'World,
as great Sicilius heyre.
1 Bro. When once he was mature for man,
in Britaine where was hee
That could fland vp his parallell?
Or fruitfull obiect bee?
In eye of Imogen, that beft could deeme his dignitude.
Mz. With Marriage wherefore was he mockt to be exil'd, and thrown From Leonati State, and cast from her,
his decreet one:
Sweete Imogen?
Sr. Why did you suffer Iackimo, flight thing of Italy,
To
The Tragedy of Cymbeline.

To taint his Nobler hart & braine, with needlelee cloysly,
And to become the geeke and fcone o'th'others vilany?
2 Brs. For this, from fliller Seats we came,
our Parents, and vs twaine,
That flinking in our Countries cause,
fell bravely, and were flaine,
Our Fealty, & Tenantius right, with Honor to maintaine.
1 Br. Like hardiment Pofhumus hath to Cymbeline perform'd:
Then Jupiter, y' King of Gods, why haft thou thus adiourn'd
The Grace for his Merits due, being all to doers turn'd?
Sciil. Thy Criftall window ope; looke, looke out, no longer exercife
Vpon a valiant Race, thy harsh, and potent injuries:
Mort. Since(Jupiter) our Son is good,
take off his miseries.
Sciil. Pepe through thy Marble Manfion, helpe, or we poore Ghosts will cry
to'th'fhining Synod of the refl, against thy Deity.
Brothers. Helpe (Jupiter) or we appeale, and from thy justice fye.
Jupiter defends in Thunder and Lightning, fitting upon an Eagle: hee throwes a Thunder-bolt. The Ghostes fall on their knees.
Jupiter. No more you petty Spirits of Region low
Offend our hearing: hush. How dare you Ghostes
Accufe the Thunderer, whole Bolt (you know)
Sky-plant'd, batters all rebelling Coats.
Poore shadowes of Elizium, hence, and refm
Vpon your meer-withering bances of Flowres.
Be not with mortall accidents oppred,
No care of yours it is, you know 'tis ours.
Whom beft I love, I croffe; to make my guft
The more delay'd, delightel. Be content,
Your low-laide Sonne, our Godhead will vplift:
His Comforts thrue, his 'Trials well are fpent:
Our Iouiall Starr reign'd at his Birth, and in
Our Temple was he married: Rife,and fade,
He shall be Lord of Lady Imogen,
And happier much by his Affiction made.
This Tablet lay vpon his Brefl, wherein
Our pleafure, his full Fortune, dothe confine,
And fo away: no farther with your dinne
Exprefse Indifpence, leaft you firre vpp mine:
Mount Eagle, to my Palace Criftalline.

Sciil. He came in Thunder, his Celeftiall breath
Was fulphrous to fmmel; the holy Eagle
Stoop'd, as to foote vs: his Ascension is
More sweet then our bleft Fields: his Royall Bird
Prunes the immortall wing, and closes his Beake,
As when his God is pleas'd.
All. Thankes Jupiter.
Sir. The Marble Paumont cloyes, he is enter'd
His radiant Roofe: Away, and to be bleft
Let vs with care perfone his great behoef.
Vaniff. Psfl. Sleepe, thou haft bin a Grandfire, and begot
A Father to me; and thou haft created
A Mother, and two Brothers. But (oh fcone)
Gone, they went hence fo fcone as they were borne:
And fo I am awake. Poore Wretchtes, that depend
On Greatneffe, Favoure; Dreme as I have done,
Wake, and finde nothing. But (alas) I fwere:
Many Dreme not to finde, neither deferue,
And yet are sleepe'd in Favoures; fo am I
That haue this Golden chance, and know not why:
What Fayeries haunt this ground? A Book?Oh rare one,

Be not, as is our fangled world, a Garment
Nobler then that it coures. Let thy effects
So follow, to be moft vnlike our Courtiers,
As good, as promife.

Readet.
W hen as a Lyons whelpe, fhall to himselfe unkno(wn, without seeking fndes, and bee embrac'd by a piece of tender
Ayre: And when from a flately Cedar fshall be loft branches, which being dead many years, fshall after refumes, bee cpnto
the old Stockes, and ffreely grow, then fhall Pofhumus end his mifteries, Britaine be fortunate, and flourifh in Peace and Plentie.
'Tis fill a Drame: or else such ftuffe as Madmen
Tongue, and braine not: either both, or nothing,
Or fenlefelefe speaking, or a speaking fuch
As tenfe cannot fintte. Be what it is,
The ActIon of my life is like it, which I le keep
If but for fmpathy.

Enter Gado.
Gao. Come Sir, are you ready for death?
Gao. Hauing is the word, Sir, if you bee ready for that, you are well Cook'd.
Pofl. So if I prove a good repaft to the Spectators, the difh pays the shot.

Gao. A heavy reckoning for you Sir: But the comfort is you shall be called to no more payments, fear no more Tauerne Bills, which are often the fadneffe of parting, as the procuring of mirth: you come in fainft for want of meate, depart reeling with too much drinke: forrie that you have payed too much, and forry that you are payed too much: Purfe and Braine, both empty: the Brain the heauier, for being too light; the Purfe too light, being drawne of haueineffe. Oh, of this contradiction you shall now be quit: Oh the charity of a penny Cord, it fummes vp thousands in a trice: you haue no true Debitor, and Creditor but it: of what's paft, is, and to come, the dif-charge: your necke(Sir) is Pen,Booke, and Counters; fo
the Acquaintance follows.
Pofl. I am merrier to dye, then thou art to liue.
Gao. Indeed Sir, he that fleepes, feels not the Tooth-
Ache: but a man that were to fleepc your fleepc, and a Hangman to helpe him to bed, I think he would change places with his Officer: for, look you Sir, you know not which way you shall go.
Pofl. Yes indeed do I, fellow.
Gao. Your death has eyes in his head then: I have not feene him so pictur'd: you must either bee direcieed by some that take vpon them to know, or to take vpon your felfe that which I am sure you do not know: ior lumps the after-enquiry on your owne perill: and how you shall fpeed in your inournes end, I thinke you neuer returne to tell one.
Pofl. I tell thee, Fellow, there are none want eyes, to diretie them the way I am going, but fuch as winke, and will not vie them.
Gao. What an infinite mocke is this, that a man shold have the bext vfe of eyes, to fee the way of blindneffe: I am sure hanging's the way of winkeing.

Enter a Meffenger.
Mes. Knocke off his Manacles, bring your Prisoner to the King.
Pofl. Thou bring'ft good newes, I am call'd to bee made free.
Gao. Ile be hang'd then.
Pofl. Thou fhalt be then freer then a Goleruio bolts
for
for the dead.

Gas. Vnlesse a man would marry a Gallowes, & beget yong Gibbets, I neuer saw one so prone: yet on my Confidence, there are verier Knaues desire to liue, for all he be a Roman; and there be some of them too that dye against their wills: fo should I, if I were one. I would we were all of one minde, and one minde good: O there were defolation of Caclers and Galowles: I speake againft my present profit, but my wish hath a preferment in't.

Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Cymbeline, Bellarius, Guideriis, Aru-ragus, Pijanis, and Lords.

Cym. Stand by my side you, whom the Gods have made Priemeers of my Throne: woe is my heart, That the poore Souldier that fo richly fought, Whose ragges, tham'd gilded Armes, whose naked breft Stept before Targes of proofe, cannot be found: He shall be happy that can finde him, if
Our Grace can make him fo.

Bel. I never saw
Such Noble fury in so poore a Thing;
Such precious deeds, in one that promit nought
But beggery, and poore looks.

Cym. No tydings of him?
Fij. He hath bin search'd among the dead, & liuing;
But no trace of him.

Cym. To my Cornelius, I am
The heyre of his Reward, which I will add
To you (the Lurer, Heart, and Braine of Britaine)
By whom (I grant) the liues. 'Tis now the time
To ask of whence you are. Report it.

Bel. Sir,
In Cambria we are borne, and Gentlemen:
Further to boaste, were neyther true, nor modest,
Vnlesse I adde, we are honest.

Cym. Bow your knees:
Arie my Knights o'th'Battell, I create you
Companions to our perfon, and will fit you
With Dignities becoming your eftates.

Enter Cornelius and Ladies.

There's businesse in these faces: why so sadly
Greet you our Victo'ry? you looke like Romanes,
And not o'th'Court of Britaine.

Crm. Hayle great King,
To sworre your happinesse, I must report
The Queene is dead.

Cym. Who worre then a Phythian
Would this report become? But I consider,
By Med'cine life may be prolong'd, yet death
Will fase the Doctor too. How ended she?

Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life,
Which (being cruell to the world) concluded
Most cruell to her felie. What the convent,
I will report, so please you. These her Women
Can trip me, if I erre, who with wet checkes
Were present when she finisht.

Cym. Prythee say.
Cor. Firft, the convent the newer lou'd you: onely
Affectcd Greatnesse got by you: not you:
Married your Royalty, was wife to your place:

Cym. I haue surely seen him:
His fauour is familiar to me: Boy,
Thou haft look'd thy selfe into my grace,
And art mine owne. I know not why, wherefore,
To say, liue boy: ne're thanke thy Maiter, liue;
And aske of Cymbeline what Boone thou wilt,
Fitting my bounty, and thy flate, Ile give it:

Yea,
The Tragedy of Cymbeline.

Yea, thou dost demand a Prifoner
The Noblest tame.

I. I humbly thank ye your Highness.
L. I do not bid thee begge my life, good Lad,
And yet I know thou wilt.

I. No, no, alacke,
There’s other worke in hand : I see a thing
Bitter to me, as death : your life, good Master,
Mufh suffife for it felfe.

L. The Boy deftaines me,
He leaves me, fcornes me : brefly dye their joyes,
That place them on the truth of Gyris, and Boyes.
Why stands he fo perplex?

Gym. What wold’t hou Boy?
I loue thee more, and more : thinke more and more
What’s bett to ask. Know’ft hou thou look’ft on? speak
Wilt haue him live? Is he thy Kin? thy Friend?

I. He is a Roman, no more kin to me,
Then I to your Highnesse, who being born your vaffe
Am something neerer.

Gym. Whatere’er ye’ft him fo?
I. Ile tell you (Sir) in private, if you please
To give me hearing.

Gym. I, with all my heart,
And lend my best attention. What’s thy name?

I. Fidelle Sir.

Gym. Thou’rt my good youth : my Page
Ile be thy Master: walke with me : speake freely.

Bel. Is not this Boy reuiu’d from death?

Arul. One Sand another
Not more refulens that fweet Rosie Lad :
Who dyed, and was Fidelle : what thinke you?

Gym. The fame dead thing aliue.
Bel. Peace, peace, fee farther : he eyes vs not, forbear
Creatures may be alike : were’t he, I am sure
He would haue speake to vs.

Gui. But we fee him dead.

Bel. Be filent: let’s fee farther.

Pife. It is my Miftris:
Since she is liuing, let the time run on,
To good, or bad.

Gym. Come, f tand thou by our fide,
Make thy demand alow’d. Sir, ftep you forth,
Glue anfwer to this Boy, and do itfreely,
Or by our Greatnesse, and the grace of it
(Whofe, our Honour) bifter torture fhall
Winnow the truth from falhood. One speake to him.

I. My boone is, that this Gentleman may render
Of whom he had this Ring.

Poft. What’s that to him?

Gym. That Diamond upon your Finger, fay
How came it yours?

Iac. Thou’lt torture me to leaue vnfpoken, that
Which to be fpoke, would torture thee.

Gym. How? me?

Iac. I am glad to be conftrain’d to vttter that Which torments me to confccale. By Villany
I got this Ring :’twas Leonatus Jewell,
Whom thou did’ft banifh : and which more may greeue
As it doth me : a Noble Sir, ne ver li’d
(there,
Twixt sky and ground. Wilt thou heare more my Lord?

Gym. All that belongs to this.

Iac. That Paragon, thy daughter,
For whom my heart drops blood, and my faire spirits
Quaife to remember. Give me leaue, I faint.

I had rather thou fhould’t liue, while Nature will,
Then dye ere I heare more : ftrieue man, and speake.

Iac. Upon a time, vnhappy was the clocke
That fpooke the hoare: it was in Rome, accrue
The Manfon where :’twas at a Feaft, oh would
Our Viands had bin poyfon’d (or at leat
Tho’ which I heard to read:) the good Posthumus, (Whofe fhould I fay? he was too good to be
Where ill men were, and was the beft of all
Among’t the rar’ft of good ones) fitting fadly,
Hearing vs praffle our Louses of Italy
For Beauty, that made barren the fwell’d boate
Of him that beft could fpoke f: for Feature, lamng
The Shrine of Venus, or ftraight-pight Minerva,
Poffures, beyond brefhe Nature. For Condition,
A hop of all the qualities, that man
Louses woman for, besides that hooke of Wuing,
Faireneffe, which ftrikes the eye.

Gym. I ftand on fire. Come to the matter.

Iac. All too foon I fhall,
Vnleffe thou’lt greeue quickly. This Posthumus,
Most like a Noble Lord, in loue, and one
That had a Royall Louer, tooke his hint,
And (not displeafing whom we prai’d, therein
He was as calme as vertue) he began
His Miftris picture, which, by his tongue, being made,
And then a minde put’n, either our bragges
Were crack’d of Kitchen-Trulles, or his description
Proud’r vs vnfeaking Fottes.

Gym. Nay, nay, to’th purpofe,

Iac. Your daughters Chaffity, (there it begins)
He fpoke of her, as Dian had hot dreams,
And the lone, were cold : Whereat, I wretch
Made fcruple of his praife, and wadget with him
Peeces of Gold, (gainft this, which then he wore Vpon his honour’d finger) to attaine
In fuite the place of’s bed, and winne this Ring
By hers, and mine Adultery : he (true Knight)
No leffer of her Honour confident
Then I did truly finde her, fakes this Ring,
And would fo, had it beene a Carbuncle
Of Phoebus Wheele ; and might fo fafely, had it
Bin all the worth of’s Carre. Away to Britaine
Pofte I in this defigne : Well may you (Sir)
Remember me at Court, where I was taught
Of your chaffe Daughter, the wide difference
Twixt Amorous, and Villainous. Being thus quench’d
Of hope, not longing ; mine Italian braine,
Gan in your duller Britaine operare
Most vildely : for my vantage excellent.
And to be breefe, my practise fo preuy’d
That I return’d with fimalur profe enough,
To make the Noble Leonatus mad,
By wounding his beleefe in her Renowne,
With Tokens thus, and thus : auerring notes
Of Chamber-hanging, Pictures, this her Bracelet
(Oh cunning how I got) nay fome markes
Of secret on her perfon, that he could not
But thinke her bond of Chaflity quite crack’d,
I hauing ’tane the forfeit. Whereupon,
Me thinks I fee him now.

Poft. I fo thou do’o,

Italian Fiend. Aye me, moft credulous Foole,
Egregious murtherer, Theefe, any thing
That’s due to all the Villaines paff, in being
To come. Oh gue me Cord, or knife, or poyfon,
The Tragedie of Cymbeline.

Some virtuous Jutifer. Thou King, send out
For Torturers ingenious: it is I
That all that abhorred things o'th'earth amend
By being worse then they. I am Pofibamus,
That kill'd thy Daughter: Villain-like, I lye,
That caus'd a lether villain then my selle,
A sacrilegious Theefe to doo't. The Temple
Of Vertue was she; yea, and the her selle.
Spit, and throw thomes, cast more vpun me, fet
The dogges o'th'street to bay me: every villain
Be call'd Pofibamus Leonatus, and
Be villany leffe then 'twas. Oh Imogen!
My Queene, my life, my wife: oh Imogen,
Imogen, Imogen.

Imo. Peace my Lord, heare, heare.
Poff. Shall's have a play of this?
Thou scornd full Page, there lye thy part.
Pi. Oh Gentlemen, helpe,
Mine and your Miftris: Oh my Lord Pofibamus,
You're kill'd Imogen till now: helpe, helpe,
Mine honours Lady.

Cym. Does the world go round?
Poff. How comes these flaggers on mee?
Pi. Wake my Miftris.

Cym. If this be fo, the Gods do meane to strike me
To death, with mortall Ioy.

Pi. How fares my Miftris?

Imo. Oh get thee from my sight,
Thou gait me poyfon: dangerous Fellow hence,
Breath not where Princes are.

Cym. The tune of Imogen.

Pi. Lady, the Gods throw thones of sulphur on me, if
That box I gave you, was not thought by mee
A precious thing, I had it from the Queene.

Cym. New matter fell.

Im. It poyfon'd me.

Corn. Oh Gods!

I let out one thing which the Queene confest,
Which must approue thee honest: If Pofanio
Haue (said he) given his Miftris that Confeception
Which I gave him for Cordiall, he is feru'd,
As I would ferue a Rat.

Cym. What's this, Cornelius?

Corn. The Queene (Sir) very oft importun'd me to temper poyfons for her, fill pretending
The satisfaction of her knowledge, onely
In killing Creatures vile, as Cats and Dogges
Of no efteeme. I dreading, that her purpoe
Was of more danger, did compound for her
A certaine fluffe, which being tane, would cease
The prefent powre of life, but in short time,
All Offices of Nature, shou'd againe
Do their due Functions. Haue you tane of it?

Imo. Most lke I did, for I was dead.

Bel. My Boyes, there was our error.

Gui. This is sure Fidele.

Imo. Why did you throw your wedded Lady fro you?
Think you that you are von a Rocke, and now
Throw me againe.

Poff. Hang there like fruite, my soule,
Till the Tree dye.

Cym. How now, my Flesh? my Childe?
What, mak't thou me a durland in this Act?
Wilt thou not speake to me?

Imo. Your blessing, Sir.

Bel. Though you did love this youth, I blame ye not,

You had a motiue for't.

Cym. My teares that fall
Prove holy-water on thee; Imogen,
Thy Mothers dead.

Imo. I am sorry for't, my Lord.

Cym. Oh, she was naught; and long of her it was
That we meet heere to strangely: but her Sonne
Is gone, we know not how, nor where.

Pi. My Lord,

Now fear is from me, Ile speake trouth. Lord Cloten
Vpon my Ladies misfing, came to me
With his Sword drawne, faid at the mouth, and swore
If I discouer'd not which way she was gone,
It was my infant death. By accident,
I had a feigned Letter of my Masters
Then in my pocket, which directed him
To fecke her on the Mountains neere to Milford,
Where in a frenzie, in my Masters Garments
(Which he infirc'd from me) awaie he poftes
With vnchawe purpoe, and with oath to violate
My Ladies honor, what became of him,
I further know not.

Gui. Let me end the Story: I fled him there.

Cym. Marry, the Gods forefende.

I would not thy good deeds, shoud from my lips
Plucke a hard sentence: Fytheye valiant youth
Deny't again.

Gui. I have spoke it, and I did it.

Cym. He was a Prince.

Gui. A moft incomit one. The wrongs he did mee
Were nothing Prince-like; for he did prouoke me
With Language that would make me spurne the Sea,
If it could fo roare to me. I cut off's head,
And am right glad he is not fending heere
to tell this tale of mine.

Cym. I am forrow for thee:
By thine owne tongue thou art condemn'd, and must Endure our Law: Thou'rt dead,

Imo. That headleffe man I thought had bin my Lord

Cym. Banifie the Offender,
And take him from our presence.

Bel. Stay, Sir King.

This man is better then the man he flew,
As well defcended as thy selfe, and hath
More of thee meriteth, then a Band of Clotens
Had eu'er forre for. Let his Armes alone,
They were not borne for bondage.

Cym. Why old Soldier:
Wilt thou vnsee the worth thou art vnpayd for
By tafting of our wrath? How of defcent
As good as we?

Arui. In that he spake too farre.

Cym. And thou shalt dye for't.

Bel. We will dye all three,
But I will prooue that two one's are as good
As I have guen out him. My Sonnes, I must
For mine owne part, unfold a dangerous speech,
Though hapily well for you.

Arui. Your danger's ours.

Gui. And our good his.

Bel. Haue at it then, by leaue
Thou hadd't (great King) a Subiect, who Was call'd Belarius.

Cym. What of him? He is a banish't Traitor.

Bel. He it is, that hath
Assum'd this age: indeed a banish't man,
The Tragedy of Cymbeline.

I know not how a Traitor.

Cym. Take him hence, The whole world shall not faue him.

Bel. Not too hot;

First pay me for the Nursing of thy Sonnes, And let it be conficcate all, to foone As I have receu'd it.

Cym. Nursing of my Sonnes?

Bel. I am too blunt, and fawcy: here's my knee: Ere I arise, I will preffe my Sonnes, Then spare not the old Father. Mighty Sir, These two young Gentlemen that call me Father, And think they are my Sonnes, are none of mine, They are the yeffe of your Loynes, my Liege, And blood of your begetting.

Cym. How! my Iffue.

Bel. So sure as you, your Fathers: I (old Morgan) Am that Belarius, whom you sometime banished: Your plesaure was my neere offence, my punishement It felfe, and all my Treafor that I fuffered, Was all the harme I did. These gentle Princes (For fuch, and fo they are) these twenty years Have I train'd vp; those Arts they have, as I Could put into them. My breeding was (Sir) As your Highness knowes: Their Nurse Euriphius (Whom for the Theft I wedded) fpole these Children Upon my Banishment: I mou'd her too, Hauing receu'd the punishement before For that which I did then. Beaten for Loyalties, Excited me to Treafor. Their deere loffe, The more of you 'twas felt, the more it fphep' Vnto my end of healing them. But gracious Sir, Heere are your Sonnes againe, and I muft loffe Two of the sweete'rt Companions in the World. The beneficience of thefe courting Heauens Fall on their heads like dew, for they are worthe To in-lay Heauen with Starres.

Cym. Thou weep'st, and fpakeft:

The Service that you three have done, is more Unlike, then this thou tell'st. I loft my Children, If thefe be they, I know not how to with A payre of worther Sonnes.

Bel. Be pleas'd awhile;

This Gentleman, whom I call Polidore, Moft worthy Prince, as yours, is true Guiderius: This Gentleman, my Cadwall, Aruragius. Your yonger Princes Son, he Sir, was lapt In a most curious Mantle, wrought by th'hand Of his Queene Mother, which for more probacion I can with eafe produce.

Cym. Guiderius had

Vpon his necke a Mole, a fanguine Starre, It was a marke of wonder.

Bel. This is he,

Who hath vpon him still that natural flampe: It was wife Natures end, in the donation To be his evidence now.

Cym. Oh, what am I

A Mother to the byrth of three? Nere Mother Reloyc'd delivernce more: Bleff, pray you be, That after this strange flattering from your Orbes, You may reigne in them now: Oh Imogen, Thou haft loft by this a Kingdome.

Imo. No, my Lord:

I haue got two Worlds by't. Oh my gentil Brothers, Haue we thus met? Oh neuer fay hereafter But I am trueft speaker. You call'd me Brother When I was but your Sifter: I you Brothers, When we were fo indeed.

Cym. Did you ere meete?

Aru. I my good Lord.

Gu. And at firft meeting lou'd; Continu'd fo, vntil we thought he dyed.

Cym. O rare infuf't!

When shall I heare all through? This fierce abridgment, Hath to it Circumfantiall branches, which Distinction should be rich in. Where? how liu'd you? And when came you to ferve our Romane Captuie? How parted with your Brother? How firft met them? Why fled you from the Court? And whether thfe? And your three motuies to the Battallie? with I know not how much more shou'd be demanded, And all the other by-dependances From chance to chance? But nor the Time, nor Place Will ferve our long Interrogatories. See,

Psylphamus Anchors vpon Imogen: And the (like harmsleffe Lightning) throws her eye On him: her Brothers, Me: her Mater hitting Each obieft with a Joy: the Counter-change Is feuerally in all. Let's quit this ground, And fmoake the Temple with our Sacrifices. Thou art my Brother, fo wee'll hold thee euer.

Imo. You are my Father too, and did releeue me: To fee this gracious feaon.

Cym. All ore-lou'd

Save thfe in bonds, let them be joyfull too, For they shall taife our Comfort.

Imo. My good Mater, I will yet do you fervice.

Luc. Happy be you.

Cym. The forlorne Soul'dier, that no Nobly bought He would haue well becom'd this place, and grac'd The thankings of a King.

Psft. I am Sir

The Soul'dier that did company thfe three In poore befeeming: 'twas a fitment for The purpofe I then follow'd. That I was he, Spake Iacbimo, I had you downe, and might Haue made you finifh.

Iacb. I am downe againe:

But now my heauie Confidence finkes my knee, As then your force did. Take that life, beleech you Which I fo often owe: but your Ring firft, And here the Bracelet of the trueft Princeffe

That euer fwer'd her Faith.

Psft. Kneele not to me:

The powre that I haue on you,is to fpare you: The malice towards you, to forgiue you. Liue And deale with others better.

Cym. Nobly doomd':

W'e'll learn our Freeneffe of a Sonne-in-Law: Pardon's the word to all.

Aru. You holpe vs Sir,

As you did meane indeed to be our Brother, loy'd are we,that you are.

Psft. Your Seruant Princes.Good my Lord of Rome Call forth your Sooth-fayer: As I fleep, me thought Great Iupiter vpon his Eagle back'd.

Appeard to me, with other frpightly fhewes

Of mine owne Kindred. When I wak'd, I found This Labell on my bofome; whose containing Is fo from fense in hardneffe, that I can
The Tragedy of Cymbeline.

Make no Collection of it. Let him shew His skill in the construction.

Luc. Philarmonus.

Sooth. Here, my good Lord.

Luc. Read, and declare the meaning.

Reades.

When as a Lyons whelpes shall to himselfe unknown, without seeking finds, and bee embrac’d by a peace of tender Ayre: And when from a stately Cedar shall be loft branches, which being dead many yeares, shall after reuive, bee eyonted to the old Stocke, and fresely grow, then shall Peblhumus end his miseries, Britaine be fortunate, and flourishe in Peace and Plenty.

Thou Leonatus art the Lyons Whelpe,
The fit and apt Constructions of thy name Being Leonatus, doth import so much:
The peace of tender Ayre, thy vertuous Daughter,
Which we call Mollis Aer, and Mollis Aer
We terme it Mulier; which Mulier I diuine
Is this most confant Wife, who euen now Answering the Letter of the Oracle, Vnknowne to you vnforthed, were clipt about
With this molt tender Ayre.

Cym. This hath some feeming.

Sooth. The lofty Cedar, Royall Cymbeline
Perfonates thee: And thy loft Branches, point Thy two Sonnes forth: who by Belarius spolne
For many yeares thought dead, are now resu’d
To the Maiefticke Cedar ioyn’d; whose Issue
Promises Britaine, Peace and Plenty.

Cym. Well,

My Peace we will begin: And Caius Lucius,
Although the Victor, we submit to Cesar,
And to the Romane Empire: promising
To pay our wonted Tribute, from the which
We were diffwaded by our wicked Queene,
Whom heauens in Juflice both on her, and hers,
Have laid most heauy hand.

Sooth. The fingers of the Powres aboue, do tune
The harmony of this Peace: the Vifion
Which I made knowne to Lucius ere the stroke
Of yet this Scarfe-cold-Battale, at this infant
Is full accomplisht: For the Romaine Eagle
From South to Weft, on wing foaring aloft
Leffen’d her felfe, and in the Beames o’th’Sun
So vanisht; which fores-hew’d our Princely Eagle
Th’Imperiall Cesar, should againe vnite
His Faouer, with the Radiant Cymbeline,
Which shines here in the Weft.

Cym. Laud we the Gods,
And let our crooked Smoakes clime to their Nostrils
From our blest Altars. Publish we this Peace
To all our Subiechts. Set we forward: Let
A Roman, and a Britifh Enigne waue.
Friendly together: so through Ludis-Towe March,
And in the Temple of great Jupiter
Our Peace wee’l ratifie: Scale it with Feasts.
Set on there: Neuer was a Warre did ceafe
(Ere bloodie hands were wafht’d) with such a Peace.

Exeunt.

FINIS.

SHAKESPEARE.

NOW READY,
In one convenient small quarto volume, cloth, gilt edges, price 2l. 2s.

A REPRODUCTION, BY PHOTOGRAPHY,
OF THE CELEBRATED
Shakespeare Gallery,
(Boydell's celebrated "Shakespeare Gallery," published in 1804-5 at Sixty Guineas), CONSISTING OF NINETY-EIGHT PHOTOGRAPHS, FROM
Pictures by the most eminent English Historical Painters,
AND TEXT DESCRIPTIVE OF EACH SCENE.

"In casting one's eye over the list of names of the painters, whose illustrations to Shakespeare form the contents of the volume, it will be found to embrace those of almost all the great artists of the English school of the date of its original production. So, too, the list of engravers. The sculptors employed were Mr. Thos. Banks, R.A., and the Hon. Ann Seymour Damer. The merit of the collection consists in the great variety of style in which these imperishable dramas are illustrated by pictorial art; for it has never yet been the good fortune of any one painter to furnish a series of illustrations for all the plays in any way satisfactory. The letterpress consists of a description of the scene, and an extract of the passage which forms the subject of each individual illustration; the names of the painters and engravers are added. The photographs are cleverly executed, and the volume is elegantly got up. Altogether 'The Shakespeare Gallery' is just the book for the drawing-room table, now the poet and his works are engaging everybody's attention—pleasant to turn over, and sure to furnish interesting subjects for conversation."—Reader, April 23, 1864.
